Anna Lehr, Barbara Castleton and Hobart Henley in

PARENTAGE

A MESSAGE

Hobart Henley Production—Frank J. Seng—State Rights

DIRECTOR ..... Hobart Henley
AUTHORS ..... Martin G. Chandler and Hobart Henley
CAMERAMAN ..... H. Alderson Leach
AS A WHOLE ..... Most remarkable combination of entertainment values and advertising possibilities, dealing with big, vital home life problems, ever presented
STORY ..... Forceful, convincing and human; perfectly balanced with comedy, pathos and thought purpose; beautifully constructed and wholesome, big problems perfectly dealt with by suggestion which registers more powerfully than objectionable detail would DIRECTION ..... Exceptional in selection of types and keeping every moment human and convincing, with truly delightful contrast between laugh-compelling bits of comedy and pathos touches, that get a gulp and hit hard
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Excellent
LIGHTINGS ..... Very fine, without effects ever marring human note
CAMERA WORK ..... Splendid
STARS ..... Personalities that register very effectively and in perfectly human manner
SUPPORT ..... Most wonderfully human selection of types ever gathered in one film, with every part made absolutely natural and impressively convincing; children truly delightful
EXTERIORS ..... Excellent small-town atmosphere
INTERIORS ..... Fitted atmosphere perfectly; seemed real
DETAIL ..... Very fine in keeping atmosphere real
TIME ..... One hour and twenty minutes (7 parts)

THIS is the greatest film dealing with vital home life problems that has even been produced. I say this because I believe this story deals with a combination of big thoughts, more comprehensive than have ever been incorporated into one story before, and yet this production is delightfully entertaining, with moments that are exceptionally forceful as heart-touching pathos.

This is the sort of thing I have been praying and yelling for all through these months when I have had to sit through the hundreds and hundreds of ordinary surface-action melodramas of violence and sex complications that insult the intelligence of our millions of fans who don't want to see that old junk, but have to, because so few human films are made.

Here is a thought film which is played upon the faces of the characters, registering with unerring truth their thoughts, and it will make any member of any audience anywhere, think!

I cannot remember of ever having seen a production which from start to finish seemed so thoroughly human and convincing, wherein there was such a perfect balance of comedy relief to lighten the compelling pathos of the dramatic moments. It gets under your shirt! It compels attention! It's real!

Figured from the viewpoint of the great mass of film fans who are accustomed to pay from ten to fifty cents to see films day in and day out, I believe that this will register as one of the greatest productions that has been made to date. It comes at a most timely moment, because there is not a touch of cheap melodrama, there is nothing of the sex, vampire or the vicious willun, and, in addition to the fact that this is such a human little story beautifully played, it presents several messages of tremendous importance to every family, impressing these truths without preaching and without the exaggeration which might make them unconvincing or give the excuse to some that the instances were an exception rather than the rule. It is more powerful than any sermon could be.

I saw this production in the rough, before it was shown at the Rialto, and immediately pronounced it a very unusual and truly exceptional combination of entertainment and advertising values. I am indeed glad to confirm and commend the judgment of Frank J. Seng, one of our most intelligent exhibitors, who, with this production, marks his entrance into the State rights special field.

Mr. Seng is a very successful and very wealthy business man, in addition to his having conducted successfully the Village Theatre, in Wilmette, Ill., and consequently Mr. Seng had rather a keen insight into what would be a production that would appeal not only to exhibitors for its money-making value, but to the public as entertainment.

As shown at the Rialto private showing, with the music prepared by Managing Director Rothapfel, which will accompany the production when released afterwards, this was as near to being a perfectly constructed and balanced photoplay as I have ever seen. It is not a film of "big scenes," melodramatic moments, murders, fights, or spectacle, but a story of small-town life that holds from start to finish, gives many laughs and every once in a while slips in a kick that certainly has power back of it.

Primarily, this production deals with the question of the effect upon children caused by the influence of their parents. This is comprehensively handled, since it starts with prenatal influence, carries through the environment of the home and then into business, and finally into contrasting happy and unhappy homes.

There are several very big problems that are dealt with very intelligently. The first and most important, of course, is the problem of the influence of parents upon their children. The second is the question of eugenics, bringing in the problem of whether or not health certificates should be demanded before wedding licences are issued. Another big problem is that of whether a boy should be allowed to learn the truths of life from boys of the "shanty gang" type, or from his parents.

We are shown two families, who are labeled "Smith" and "Brown" in order that it may be understood that they are similar to millions of others, and we are shown the development of their lives from the time before two baby boys are born up to the marriage of the one boy to the girl they both love, while the other boy, in disgrace, leaves the town with his mother, who has had to bear the burden of his father's tyranny.

The effect of home training upon these boys is shown in their school life, and afterward we found the one boy with a constructive mind, and the other with a destructive mind.

There are more individual thoughts to be used in advertising, developed in the course of this story than have ever been placed together in one film. This production covers the points referred to in "Where Are My Children?", "Enlighten Thy Daughter," "Damaged Goods," and the successful play of Laurette Taylor, "The Harp o' Life," with some other thoughts, in a better way than those points were covered in any or all of these films, and it has been done without at any time becoming preachy or appearing to be propaganda.

Many film producers have attempted to make "thought" films. This is the first one which has ever been produced in such a manner as to make the thoughts effective without making the production disgusting, preachy or objectionable.

Anna Lehr, Barbara Castleton and Hobart Henley are the well-known stars who appear in this offering, and all do splendidly; but it must be said that there is not a single weak spot in the entire cast, this including every character that appears.

William Welsh and Bert Busby were splendid types of contrasting fathers. Hobart Henley and Gilbert Rooney were splendid contrasts as the children developed to manhood. Miss Castleton, as the girl loved by both, was very pleasing at all times and appeared very beautiful in some of her close-ups.

The biggest sympathy part was that of Miss Lehr, who appeared as the mother of the bad boy. Her characterization was one of the most effective I have ever seen on the screen, and I know it will remain in the minds of all who see it for a long, long time.

When we come to the children the credit must be divided between the youngsters and the director. Producer Henley, particularly, should be commended for having secured such wonderful results and having chosen such remarkable types. There is an unusual lot of kid stuff in this offering—as is fitting, since the title "Parentage" of course has to do with children—and never before in any film have I seen such delightful handling of children. The schoolroom bits are going to take any one back to the old days, and if the funny types of the freckle-faced boy, the little tow head and the various other youngsters do not get a laugh from your audience, there is something wrong with them. The bit where the bad boy shoots a paper wad and catches the teacher on the side of the face will get a yell anywhere, and the boy secretly eating an apple in school is a scream.

In passing, I want to mention the fact that Inez Marcel gave an exceptional characterization as the teacher.

There were a number of other delightful bits, such as the messenger boy, the old man who had befriended the partners, and, indeed, it is hard to remember them all for individual comment, because, as I said before, the types were simply wonderful. The fun in the old horse car registered fine types and will simply compel laughs.

The atmosphere was carried perfectly throughout the film, with nice detail between the time periods, and the bas-relief titles carrying the well-chosen quotations gave an additional dignity to the offering.

There was no superfluous continuity; there were enough close-ups so that every scene had a meaning, and there was no part of the action that didn't register some definite point, with all of it dovetailing perfectly. There is a surprise finish with a punch at the end where a baby's smiling face is shown, with the question, "Would you welcome one like this?" and then a real yell is registered when this same youngster is deprived for a second of its bottle of milk, only to have it restored, which brought a charmed expression. This big laugh will send any audience out in fine good humor, and it is followed by a quotation from Lyman Abbott which sums up the entire thought of the film very forcefully. I believe this quotation will get applause—and real applause! —anywhere. It is truly a great finish.

As to laughs, there are scores of them that are sure-fire. As to thoughts, every one which is presented is definitely put over—smoothly, yet with a punch. As to pathos, there are several bits which will certainly get a gulp anywhere, with one big sequence, where the tyrant father is dying while his heedless son is out making merry with some friends, that will register with a bang with any one. When handled with the music prepared by Mr. Rothapfel, this particular sequence is one of the most effective bits of pathos I have ever seen on the screen.

Producer Hobart Henley is deserving of particular credit for the manner in which he handled the big situation having to do with the medical examination. By a series of contrasting scenes between the home of the girl, where the mother of the girl was gossiping with friends, and a doctor's office, where the father was taking the wished-to-be son-in-law for examination, this situation was put over without the necessity of a title relating to the examination. It is particularly worthy of comment that all of the big thoughts in his film have been so handled that they will hit adults with telling force, while any child can see the whole film, enjoy thoroughly the kid stuff and the many comedy moments without ever thinking that there is anything about the film that they should not see.

The business conflict between the two boys hinges about a controversy which will appeal particularly in small towns, or to people who have ever been in a small town, since it has to do with a banker who controls the town and is himself controlled by his wife, who doesn't want a factory in the town because of the smoke and the rough element it might bring. That is a well-known situation in small towns in this country which has never before been touched in film stories.

In the cast were Mary Grey, Miss Alice Wilson, W. De Shields, Frank Goyette, Bennie Blake, Matty Roubert and Alois Alexander.

The Box-Office Angle.

"This is not a $2.00 picture—only spectacles really are—but it is, to my mind, the greatest value to be played at from ten to fifty cents that has ever been presented for film theatres, because it has such a comprehensible, direct, indisputable appeal to every class, from the highest to the lowest, because of the advertising values, and it has the additional inestimable value of being sure-fire entertainment for every class, from the lowest to the highest.

We have had many big films which would be great for certain classes of audiences, or in certain sections. This production will be sure-fire anywhere, and it has the greatest combination of advertising values ever gathered into similar film.

Pictures like "Where Are My Children?" and "Damaged Goods" made a lot of money, but to-day propaganda films that are preachy or tend in any way to show unnecessary objectionable or disgusting details are absolutely not wanted. There is a feeling throughout the country against vampires, "sex" stuff and films that are thought to be unclean.

Nevertheless, human nature has not changed in the past two years, and the public is as greatly interested, if not more so, to-day in the vital truths concerning eugenics, home life, parentage and the influence of parents upon children, than ever before. In this production, which presents these big problems in such a wholesome manner, you have a truly exceptional combination.

I have looked over the advertising matter prepared on this offering, and can tell you that it is the most comprehensive and most intelligently prepared from a sales value viewpoint of any I have ever seen. It has punch without losing the artistic class value, and every single bit of it contains a sales argument why Mr. Public—who, as they say out West, "goes by with one hand on his money and the other on his gun, daring Mr. Exhibitor to get him inside"—should see this particular film.

If you can't get capacity business on this, there is certainly something wrong with you! Certainly I would play this for a much longer run than ordinary, because if your audience doesn't rave over the boy who tries to eat the apple in school without teacher seeing him, and the score of other comedy bits, and doesn't talk about the manner in which the big problems have been registered, then your town is certainly a most unusual one. I would bank on this as a sure-fire clean-up.

While, as a matter of fact, we have an unusual condition in this production, in that, although the stars are very fine, they do not stand out—except possibly in the case of Miss Lehr, who has an exceptionally sympathetic part—above the other very perfectly cast and capably played parts; still I believe it will be worth money to you to advertise the fact that Anna Lehr has been starred in several Triangle productions; that Barbara Castleton is the star of "On Trial," and had the principal part opposite H. B. Warner in "God's Man"; and that Hobart Henley, who is the director and co-author, plays one of the principal parts.

You can't go wrong on this, unless you fail to use enough advertising matter. The greatest mistake you could make would be to think that the production will not need advertising. I can tell you that it won't after it has played one or two days, and it won't need much when you play it for a repeat—as you undoubtedly will—but for the first time around you must make use of the advertising matter prepared for you, if you expect to have your patrons understand that this is a production which is different, which is distinctively human and particularly entertaining.

I want to suggest that you be particularly careful to note the effect of this film upon your patrons, because in my judgment it is certainly a production that will stand not only one repeat, but two or three, in the course of a year. By all means book this for more than one day when you get it, because if there was ever a production that will stand a longer run, not only in the cities but in the smallest of small towns, this is it. Being a small-town story, dealing with human people, played in a convincing manner, it will register, if anything, more forcefully in a small town than it will in a city.

SYMPATHY VAMP CHARACTERIZATION IN WELL DONE MELO

Louise Glaum in

LOVE OR JUSTICE?

Kay Bee—Triangle

DIRECTOR..... Walter Edwards
AUTHOR..... Lambert Hillyer
CAMERAMAN..... Chester Lyons
AS A WHOLE....Appealing love-interest characterization study
STORY.....Nicely developed characterization melodrama; had several kicks in it
DIRECTION....Handled characterization and atmosphere perfectly, except excitement of crowd at trial
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very good; some excellent bits
LIGHTINGS....Many very artistic and effective; generally good
CAMERA WORK..... Good
STAR.....Distinctive personality; gave excellent characterization
SUPPORT...Splendid types, giving good characterizations
EXTERIORS.....Good; not unusual
INTERIORS..... Very good
DETAIL.....Good except crowd excitement at trial
TIME.....Fifty-three minutes (5 parts)

LOUISE GLAUM has a large following. She is a distinctive personality and has made most of her friends because of an ability to present a characterization of a girl of the underworld in such a manner as to win sympathy for the character. She has been fortunate in having several parts of this type, and here we find her again in such a role, putting over her scenes very effectively, with the final result that her scenes hit harder as love interest than do those of the ordinary heroine who has had no battle to fight before winning happiness.

This is a story of a lawyer who slipped and fell to the underworld, with Miss Glaum as the woman who decided to reform him. She succeeded in curing him of the dope habit, and then found that he was reaching for better things, which she felt herself unable to fit in with.

This brought her to a sacrifice, and she led him to believe that she was going back to the old life, so that he left her and took his chance in the world.

Then came a little melodrama, very nicely handled, which placed Miss Glaum, who had gone straight and tried to fight her own way, as a prisoner accused of murdering a detective because of circumstantial evidence which was very strong against her. Our lawyer hero had become the district attorney's most successful assistant, and it was up to him to secure a prosecution in the trial where the girl he had always loved was prisoner.

Learning that, should he fail to convict her, election would probably clear out the district attorney and all of his staff, Miss Glaum made a false confession, declaring herself guilty. The prosecutor-hero, however, trapped her into a mis-statement, refused to accept her confession, and a moment later the real murderer, who was conveniently in the courtroom (as they always are in the movies), was arrested, and we found hero and heroine starting life anew.

The underworld scenes, the handling of the party where Miss Glaum made her sacrifice by informing the hero that she had gone back to her old life, and the treatment of the bit of melodrama where the detective was murdered, all get over with a bang.

The story was big until it hit the trial scene. Miss Glaum had registered very effectively, and Charles Gunn, as the hero, was more than satisfactory. The trial scene went along very decently until the crowd began to become very much excited, and then they unfortunately gave so many short flashes of the crowd in an uproar that these killed the effect of the climax and caused the production to slump rather badly on the finish.

I believe that this type of story which shows a touch of the underworld but holds the sympathy with the unfortunate woman who determines to go straight, is a popular one. There is no unnecessary detail given to the underworld scenes, and the atmosphere is very good. As entertainment, this should rank as quite a bit bette than the average program release, because it has a pop ular star doing a very good characterization in an a mosphere that is rather distinctive.

In the cast were Jack Richardson, J. Barney Sherr Charles K. French and Dorcas Matthews.

The Box-Office Angle.

Except for the fact that this slumps just a bit durin the trial at the end, I would say that it is a splend dramatic offering. It has several real kicks in the tem of the dramatic scenes, with some sympathy touches th actually "get to you." Most any audience will consid it worth while, particularly if they happen to care f Louise Glaum, who, to my mind, has a much larger fo lowing than many people may think.

I'd suggest that you go after this rather hard, pror ising that it is good entertainment, and refer particular to several of Miss Glaum's successful productions, su as "Somewhere in France," "The Weaker Sex" and "Th Wolf Woman."

You might use lines like this in your advertisin "Would you give up the man you loved because you fe you were not good enough?" "Would you confess to murder you had not committed, to save the career the man you loved?" "How big a sacrifice would yo make for the man you loved?"

UNINTERESTING MIXTURE OF WRONGED GIRLS, MURDER AND WOE

Nance O'Neil in

THE FINAL PAYMENT

Fox Film

DIRECTOR	Frank Powell
AUTHOR	Frank Powell
CAMERAMAN	Davide Calcagni
AS A WHOLE	Morbid melo that doesn't entertain
STORY	Assortment of ruined girls, murderers, blown-up ships, etc.
DIRECTION	Rather good foreign atmosphere, but never made action human or real
PHOTOGRAPHY	Soft and artistic for sets and locations, but faces frequently not good
LIGHTINGS	Better for locations and sets than for faces
CAMERA WORK	Very artistic on long shots
STAR	Too tragic
SUPPORT	Good, but handicapped by meller
EXTERIORS	Some artistic shots; some ordinary
INTERIORS	Some rather good; others ordinary
DETAIL	For atmosphere, good
TIME	Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

THIS fails decidedly to register as entertaining, because it is a series of ruined girls, murders, plotting willuns, suffering heroines and other such morbid, wild melodramatic situations. There is no comedy relief, except where the audience may possibly laugh at some of the tragedy or the handling of some of the situations. Fox has waited quite some time to release this, and it would seem that this is another instance of getting rid of what is on the shelf, before going to open booking.

The story was laid in foreign atmosphere and the players were made to work with all the gestures which originally put foreign pictures on the bum in this country, and consequently I can't see the advantage of using quite so much correct detail from that particular angle.

The general photographic impression was rather pleasing, because most of the scenes had a soft, artistic effect which was very good. Unfortunately, the faces in many scenes were not well lighted, and we didn't have the best technique of close-ups and cutting and flashin with the result that the action never at any time reall impressed.

After all of the ordinary surface melodramatic situ tions we finished up with the willun being blown up his boat, which was set on fire by the shero, who had be dragging around through many scenes looking ve tragic because of her husband having been hanged for murder which the willun had committed and afterwa had acted on the jury in convicting the innocent ma Such things may happen, but the way they were handl here the average audience will want to laugh at the congruity of the willun calmly swinging all the oth jurors to his side so that the innocent husband could convicted and hanged.

There is too much of the morbid, drab, violent tragey about this to have the average audience consider it s pleasing entertainment.

Those who appeared in support of Miss O'Neil we Alfred Hickman, Clifford Bruce, Dorothy Bernard, L lie Austen and Jane Miller.

The Box-Office Angle.

If you have to take this because of a booking contra I believe you would be justified in putting it on the sh and digging up something which would prove entertai ing, because this combination of morbid melodrama tragedy is certainly not going to please the average a dience, and it would seem to me to be poor business force your fans to sit through productions which y know in advance will not entertain.

It looks to me as if the time has come when ev exhibitor must be careful as to what he plays, becau every time you wish one of these unsatisfactory progr "filums" on your audience, it is simply driving anot nail in your coffin and sending another hundred regul over to your competitor who is digging up the best can find, and figuring each day as important as other. It is a false idea of security to think that y can get away with what you used to get away with. T fans have reached the stage where they rather res being forced to look at films that, a year or more a they accepted because they hadn't seen so many of th as to make them absolutely tired of such stuff.

UNIMPRESSIVE SURFACE ACTION

Robert Warwick and Gail Kane in

THE FALSE FRIEND

Peerless—Brady—World

IRECTOR..... Harry Davenport
UTHOR.....Florence C. Bolles
AMERAMAN..... Philip Hatkin
S A WHOLE.....Surface-action melo started well, but soon dragged and died
TORY.....Old chessboard situations that didn't convince IRECTION.....Had some good lightings, but bad story construction; permitted overplaying and failed to make action convince HOTOGRAPHY....Generally good for sets, but failed to play for faces
IGHTINGS.....Some sets good, but not for faces
AMERA WORK..... Acceptable
TARS.....Registered as "acting" because of story and atmosphere; didn't seem real
UPPORT..... Generally overplayed
XTERIORS.....Acceptable; a few good shots
TERIORS.....Some well lighted; others ordinary
ETAIL.....Too much that was unnecessary
ME.....Sixty-seven minutes (5 parts)

STARTING off with some scenes of a football game at Columbia and a number of rather well-lighted interiors, this was rather interesting until they hit the story development, which made the action ordinary melodrama with the players doing the old utine acting that fails to seem real, thereby making e situations drag along from one to the other awaiting e climaxes, which have all been figured out in advance the audience.

This was the old stuff of two friends, with one fram- the other by first slandering him and then doping m, in order to win the girl, with the result that hero nt down to the depths while the willun married the rl.

Then, by a sudden shifting, we found hero, as a bum, elcomed with open arms at a lumber camp (for what ason no one could figure), and then in one title he as made the general manager of the camp.

Of course, the willun and his wife left immediately for vacation in a cabin near the lumber camp, and the wife ent out for a walk, was caught in a storm, and took fuge in hero's cabin. This was followed by other meet- gs, with the climax where hero and willun had the stomary battle—even going to the detail of the hands aching for the gun on the floor—and it all ended with e valet who had been sticking around all through the fering, waiting for the time when he could kill the illun, thereby leaving the hero and wife happy with- t either one having blood upon their hands.

There was nothing distinctive about any of the han- ing of these ordinary melodramatic situations, and hile there were a number of sets that were rather well ghted as sets, the lighting on the faces was not artistic really good.

In the scene where Miss Kane came to Mr. Warwick's bin to escape the storm, she rushed into the cabin companied by a bucket of water, which will probably t a laugh most anywhere. There were a number of ch crudities which marked the film as artificial and real.

We had a woman, early in the offering, who was al- ays shown in her boudoir about half dressed, she being ere to prove that the willun was a bad man and to ovide some one for the burglar to murder, who after- ard became a butler and valet, so that the willun would have him in his power. From the time this murder was pulled, and the murderer went home to find his wife dead, the picture was gone, becaues it had become cheap meller.

Many of the title decorations in this were truly awful! Some of the titles were poorly worded, but even those which were well worded were made ridiculous at times by the very inartistic decorations.

Mr. Warwick and Miss Kane didn't register humanly, and failed to impress, partly because of the story and atmosphere.

Earl Schenck as the willun was just a regular willun, except that in the scene where he struggled with the burglar his hair became mussed in such a manner as to get a laugh in the theatre.

Others who appeared were Pinna Nesbitt, E. J. Rollow, Jack Drumier and Louis Edgard.

The Box-Office Angle.

If the name of Robert Warwick and Gail Kane will pull you any business, you can figure this as just an ordinary melodrama that fails to make any impression other than that of "just filum," and it is up to you to use your own judgment as to the advisability of playing surface-action stuff which is decidedly meller in spots and which will never make your audiences enthuse.

To my mind, community audiences everywhere are sick and tired of these ordinary surface-action meller-drammers. When they can get melodrama that convinces because of the personalities and the convincing atmosphere, then it is all right. But these ordinary, unreal situations fail utterly to impress any more.

This fails to stir at any time, even though it is melodrama, and consequently I don't figure it as a picture that will start anything even in a house that likes action melodrama.

MELO THAT FAILS TO CONVINCE

THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS

are spent with exacting care in the making of your features. Enormous sums are expended for stories, directors, players, sets, locations, etc., to bring your production up to the high standard demanded today.

Do you realize 50 per cent. of your efforts and expense can be with inappropriate music?

DASHED AWAY

GEORGE W. BEYNON
offers you
MUSICAL INSURANCE

not only as a protection in the proper presentation of the picture but actually enhancing the Box-Office Value of Your Production.

BEYNON HAS ARRANGED
SCORES OF SCORES THAT SCORED

BEYNON'S ORCHESTRAL SETTINGS
ADD DOLLARS TO ANY PRODUCTION

"One Law For Both"—Now playing Lyric Theatre, N. Y. City
168 Paramount Releases — 3 Triangle Superfeatures

Before Presenting Your Next Feature

Phone	Write	Call
Murray Hill 9876		505 Fifth Ave, N. Y. C.

GEORGE W. BEYNON
SCORES THAT PUT THE PICTURE OVER

RATHER INCOHERENT MELO WITH FINE SNOW STUFF NEEDS EDITING

Doris Kenyon in

THE GREAT WHITE TRAIL

Wharton, Inc.—State Rights

DIRECTOR.....Leopold D. Wharton
AUTHOR.....Leopold D. Wharton
AS A WHOLE.....Had some fine snow stuff, but very much too long, with unwieldy story and draggy sequences
STORY.....Badly in need of editing; had very convenient spots and was too involved to be direct and forceful
DIRECTION....Registered some splendid atmosphere, but permitted incoherent development of plot, thereby lessening value of important scenes; repetition of good atmosphere touches marred their effectiveness
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent; many beautiful shots, but some scenes just good
LIGHTINGS.....Many very fine; generally good
CAMERA WORK.....Generally good
STAR.....Pleasing, but failed to register change in ages
SUPPORT.....Some good types, but much overplaying
EXTERIORS.....Many beautiful snow shots; others satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Many very good; some rather ordinary
DETAIL.....Too much of it; very convenient at times
TIME.....One hour and forty-five minutes (8 parts)

TO begin with, this was decidedly too long. It needs editing very, very badly, with almost every sequence suffering from unnecessary footage that naturally hinders the development and mars the effectiveness of the scenes that are important.

Entirely too much footage showing unnecessary detail was given to a sort of prologue, this footage all coming before the first of the snow stuff. When the story shifted to the Northwest, the best of the snow scenes were rendered less effective by unnecessary repetition.

There were some good spots in this, but the story as it stands has very convenient moments, with quite some melodrama and development which brings both the hero and the heroine into the old familiar "lost memory" situation.

When the hero got a bump on the head and lost his memory, he developed a beard which was a cross between a nihilist and Santa Claus, and so of course none of his friends knew him. The heroine had already lost her memory because of illness, but somehow when thirteen years elapsed after this illness she didn't appear to be any older than she was early in the story, when she was presented as a wife and the mother of a little baby.

If this were cut down to about 6,000 feet, or even 5500 feet, and allowed to remain in seven short parts, it would be a much more desirable picture, because the scenes that remained would be more effective and the story could be simplified so that it would register to much better advantage. Many of the titles also need attention, because, while some of them were good, many were decidedly burdensome and certainly not what speech titles would have been under the circumstances.

The story was based on a misunderstanding between husband and wife which resulted in a separation, with wife through illness losing her memory. Her child was conveniently adopted by a minister who had wanted to marry her.

Thirteen years later we found that the husband had been seeking her all this time, and then the story shifted to Alaska, with the wife-mother sailing as a nurse under another name, and the husband conveniently learning at the same time that she had taken this name, with the result that he followed her to Alaska. The minister who had adopted the child also went to Alaska.

On the great white trail the hero was bumped on the head, lost his memory and grew a beard. He and his wife met without knowing one another, and then the minister's mother died and the adopted daughter was sent for. The saloonkeeper-willun kidnapped the adopted daughter then bumped hero on the head again, with the result that he recovered his memory, and finally, after a very melodramatic session of chases in a dog sled, etc., we found hero and heroine and adopted daughter getting together for the finale. The minister died a martyr.

In many places, particularly in the melodramatic moments, the players were inclined to overact, and the general impression lacked the intimate human touch of reality chiefly because the scenes were registered at some distance from the camera, with the players registering their thoughts by gestures and movements of the body without a sufficient number of close-ups to put the important scenes over in a human manner such as can be accomplished by thought register as compared with action register.

There were some good comedy bits, but the effectiveness of this was injured by the fact that there was too much of it. For instance, we had a comedy character of a grocery boy which would have been good had it been confined to proper footage. Too much prominence is given to this character as handled at present.

Many of the snow scenes were exceptional. The composition was excellent and the scenes were truly beautiful. The incidents having to do with the terrors of the great white trail and the dog-chase bits were well handled, except that we have too much footage devoted to them at present. If they were cut to better advantage they would register very well.

In the supporting cast were Louise Hoteling, Edgar Davenport, Thomas Holding, Richard Stuart, Paul Gordon and Hans Robert.

The Box-Office Angle.

I understand that this is to be trimmed in footage and if this is done the offering should register as a good feature despite the convenience of the story and the melodramatic moments, because it has some very beautiful scenes and is presented in rather an unusual atmosphere. Certainly the snow stuff should register very well in the summertime. The production isn't what I would call a big feature, even after being reduced in footage and bettered as to titles, but it is better than the average program release by considerable and will get over as a very acceptable for a special if you make it clear that it is a melodrama of the great Alaskan snow regions.

There are many things technically that film folk will see wrong with this, but the general public will undoubtedly consider this rather a pleasing offering, providing it is reduced to proper footage.

Benjamin Chapin
Author and Director General
of the Lincoln Cycle Photoplays
The Benjamin Chapin Studios
and Executive Offices: Ridgefield Park, N. J.
Telephone 583 Hackensac

STORY THAT MISSES FIRE BADLY, POORLY PLAYED AND DIRECTED

Norma Talmadge in

POPPY

Norma Talmadge—Selznick-Pictures

DIRECTOR ..... Edward Jose
AUTHOR ..... Cynthia Stockley
ADAPTED BY ..... Ben Teal and John Ritter
CAMERAMAN ..... Ben Struckman locale of film, permitted much overplaying and didn't make action human or convincing
AS A WHOLE ..... Draggy, inartistic, with unconvincing action that became funny in spots
STORY ..... Missed intended spiritual suggestion and became ordinary unconvincing action
DIRECTION ..... Failed to make atmosphere convince as locale of film, permitted much overplaying and didn't make action human or convincing
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Frequently very poor; occasionally good, but general impression bad
LIGHTINGS ..... Occasionally good for sets, but generally bad for faces; not distinctive or truly artistic CAMERA WORK ..... Varied decidedly from good to poor
STAR ..... Very much handicapped
SUPPORT ..... Overplayed decidedly
EXTERIORS ..... Many very ordinary; failed to create proper atmosphere impression
INTERIORS ..... A few good; others ordinary
DETAIL ..... Too much that was unnecessary and plot incoherent
TIME ..... One hour and thirty-two minutes (8 parts)

APPARENTLY intended as a story which should be treated in such a manner as to effectively present the development of a young girl into a woman of the world, with the attention centered upon this character, we found that instead of characterization this offering was centered upon action, with the story decidedly incoherent because it was befuddled with much unnecessary detail, many attempts at atmosphere which failed, and oodles of overplaying which made the situations so mechanical that the average audience will lose interest in the entire production.

The photography varied in an appalling manner, with the print which I saw in the New York Theatre in terrible shape. The tints were bad, with many scenes untinted which should have carried tints, and scores of others both toned and tinted, with a result that was anything but artistic. Some of the scenes were too dark and some were too light, with light changes in the same set that were so noticeable that they jarred. The general impression as to the photography was certainly not that it was artistic. In many ways this may have been the fault of the printing, but it is impossible to present alibis to an audience when they are seeing a film in a theatre.

The story told of a little orphan who was badly treated in a South African home, with the result that she ran away and was adopted by a man who afterward married her, while she considered the ceremony to be one of guardianship.

She fell in love with a hero who was wandering in the woods in a trance caused by fever, and years later we found her in London with a baby, which was conveniently killed by a fall from a window, and then she afterward met the father of the child and he didn't know that he had ever had an affair with her.

The guardian-husband wanted to claim her, but she refused to be claimed, and then a girl who wanted to marry the hero tried to stir up some scandal; but we found that she had a past also, and so the husband permitted the divorce, and the hero and shero were happy.

Frederick Perry was the guardian-husband, Eugene O'Brien was the trance-pedestrian hero, and Jack Meredith was a friend of these two who figured in many scenes which were certainly unnecessary. Mr. Perry and Mr. Meredith acted upon any and all occasions, sometimes with much emphasis. They were decidedly camera-conscious at all times.

Eugene O'Brien didn't have many scenes, and in these he spent most of his time looking like a hero.

There were many titles that were pure, unadulterated gush, and several times they pulled poetry which reminded one of the "sweet spirits" stuff which you know.

The producer has failed to make his atmosphere convincing or even definitely interesting, and the development of the story is terribly draggy at times, with the result that the production wanders and drifts in such a manner as to absolutely become wearisome. The story was not well tied together, and because of this the important scenes failed to hold as they should, thereby making some of the overplaying become funny. The audience at the New York had a number of laughs over certain situations which were intended to be serious.

If this had been reduced in footage so that it would run about twenty-five minutes less, with the prints better and the tinting and toning handled in a more artistic manner, and the titles so worded as to hold the story together and get rid of the gush, this would probably prove a very satisfactory offering. In its present form it is sadly—indeed, very sadly—lacking in the essential elements needed to have it regarded as entertainment.

Miss Talmadge was very much handicapped, not only by the lightings which frequently showed her to very bad advantage, but because of the overplaying of some of the supporting cast and the poor photographic work.

The grouping of many of the scenes was bad, the general technique was not good, and although the average audience will not understand that it isn't Miss Talmadge's fault, they will know that the producer is responsible for many of the things which are wrong with the production.

The Box-Office Angle.

Norma Talmadge is rather a good bet at the box office, but this is a very poor production. You can undoubtedly do some business with it because of her following, but I would consider very seriously the advisability of playing a production like this, even though it will pull business.

There is one possible redeeming point which may make it possible for you to get this by. The story is so incoherent and so involved at times that it will wander along with a suggestion here and there of a thought underneath, that the average fan may look at it all and feel that somehow they have missed the intended suggestion, with the result that they will think it is their fault that they didn't appreciate the merits of the film.

However, this is rather a long chance to take, and I believe that if you can find something which is truly entertaining, you will be decidedly better off to play it, knowing it to be good even though you get a little less business, instead of grabbing what you can get on Miss Talmadge's reputation and sending your fans away with a feeling of dissatisfaction.

HAROLD LOCKWOOD
Yorke--Metro

Reports	% P. F.	% B.O.	Repeat
15 Ashes of Embers	87	83	6
15 The Quest of Life	58	72
14 Anton, the Terrible	46	45
14 The Lash	57	55
12 The Storm	78	64	1
18 The Intrigue	81	60	2
15 Her Father's Son	74	68	2
13 Witchcraft	53	54
13 The Kiss	74	68	2
14 The Rainbow Princess	81	82	3
14 Seventeen	84	72	2
12 Miss George Washington	94	94	9
15 The Heir to the Hoorah	82	69	5
15 The Soul of Kura San	80	71	1
11 A Son of Erin	78	72	2
10 Unprotected	53	55	1
9 Years of a Locust	46	49
10 The Plow Girl	75	59
7 The Yellow Pawn	61	57	1
8 Nanette of the Wilds	48	57	2
5 Martyrdom of Philip Strong	48	44	1
Coney Island Princess	64	64	1
The Kroad to Love	73	54	1
11 Oliver Twist	85	68	4
10 The Victoria Cross	46	53	1
12 The Traveling Salesman	76	58	3
15 The Right Direction	74	58	2
17 Snow White	96	95	10
12 Redeeming Love	59	55	1
14 The Slave Market	74	71
11 The Evil Eye	27	41	1
12 Great Expectations	75	52
12 Happiness of Three Women	73	58	1
10 Betty to the Rescue	41	43
12 A Girl Like That	50	45
11 Lost and Won	54	46
13 The Golden Fetter	49	54
13 His Sweetheart	82	50
12 The Wax Model	66	58
12 Each to His Kind	51	47
10 Her Own People	66	51
11 The American Consul	43	46
11 The Fortunes of Fifi	64	72	2
12 On Record	62	56	1
9 Winning of Sally Temple	42	46
10 Those Without Sin	53	54	1
9 Castles For Two	52	52	1
10 Out of the Wreck	51	46
8 Sapho	74	88	3
9 The Prison Without Walls	53	53
9 The Dummy	68	51
4 The Spirit of Romance	63	58
5 As Men Love	75	46
7 The Bottle Imp	76	68	1
3 The Bond Between	40	25
2 A School for Husbands	50	38	1
1 The Lonesome Chap	25	25
1 Sleeping Fires	40	40	1
2 The Tides of Barnegat	39	25
2 The Cost of Hatred	25	30

TRIANGLE

1691 Triangle	69.3	63.5	348
9 The Iron Strain	81	65	2
8 The Lamb	85	73	3
9 Old Heidelberg	72	63	1
10 The Coward	83	66	1
9 Martyrs of the Alamo	67	57	2
The Disciple	84	75	2
7 Matrimony	81	74	2
5 Sable Lorcha	64	53
6 The Golden Claw	61	72
9 Double Trouble	64	64	2
7 Aloha Oe	63	65	1
5 Lily and Rose	61	53
7 Jordan Is a Hard Road	58	54
6 Winged Idol	53	52
Penitents	28	32
11 The Edge of the Abyss	67	61
Submarine Pirate	85	78	1
5 Cross Currents	48	45
11 Between Men	72	70	1
14 Let Katy Do It	87	66	6
5 The Corner	56	47
5 The Missing Link	55	43	1
3 Beckoning Flame	65	48
9 The Wood Nymph	54	50	1
8 The Conqueror	71	70
9 Price of Power	55	51
10 The Green Swamp	80	78	1
12 Acquitted	69	51
6 D'Artagnan	59	54
18 His Picture in the Papers	90	75	5
13 Honor's Altar	77	67	2
14 Betty of Greystone	77	65	2
23 Peggy	94	91	15
7 Don Quixote	57	56
9 The Last Act	79	78	1
11 Daphne and the Pirate	71	57	1
18 Hell's Hinges	93	89	11
17 The Flying Torpedo	88	80
14 Bullets and Brown Eyes	85	75
14 Martha's Vindication	79	72	2
14 Moral Fabric	75	62	1
15 Hoodoo Ann	68	65	1
15 The Raiders	79	70
14 The Habit of Happiness	92	85	5
8 Waifs	70	50	1
8 Little Meena's Romance	64	60	1
17 The Aryan	50	80	6
9 Sold For Marriage	68	70	1
16 Stepping Stones	85	74	2
10 Sunshine Dad	36	40
9 Civilization's Child	68	64	1
12 Children in the House	79	64	2
10 Beggar of Cawnpore	58	49
17 The Good Bad-Man	89	81	4
12 The No-Good Guy	74	60	3
13 Susan Rocks the Boat	73	64
17 Not My Sister	82	79	4
16 Child of Paris Streets	63	62
20 The Primal Lure	81	76	6
8 Mr. Goode, the Samaritan	53	53
19 Market of Vain Desire	82	66	5
18 Going Straight	80	77	3
23 The Bugle Call	95	81	7
23 Reggie Mixes In	92	79	10
15 Sorrows of Love	66	71	1
18 An Innocent Magdalene	68	68	1
16 The Dividend	68	65	1
20 A Wild Girl of the Sierras	42	50
21 The Apostle of Vengeance	88	82	3
17 Casey at the Bat	44	49
25 The Phantom	84	71	7
27 Flirting with Fate	87	85	10
28 The Deserter	82	69	10
22 Little School Ma'am	72	65	2
24 The Eye of the Night	75	58	4
16 Stranded	64	56
25 The Captive God	68	69	2
21 The Half-Breed	70	75	2
20 The Payment	81	70	3
16 Marriage of Molly O	48	47
18 Honor Thy Name	88	72	4
20 The Devil's Needle	63	63	1
23 Shell 43!	91	69	6
25 Hell-to-Pay Austin	83	65	6
19 Lieut. Danny, U. S. A	68	64
14 Pillars of Society	56	55	1
19 Home	91	80	9
15 Gretchen the Greenhorn	63	62	1
18 The Patriot	77	78	5
20 The Social Secretary	90	73	7
14 The Thoroughbred	80	71	1
10 The Little Liar	67	56
16 The Wolf Woman	89	91	6
13 The Dawnmaker	53	77	2
15 Diane of the Follies	69	72	2
21 Manhattan Madness	94	91	11
17 Plain Jane	87	78	4
15 Old Folks at Home	85	68	2
14 The Jungle Child	57	58	1
13 The Rummy	68	51	1
17 The Return of Draw Egan	88	87	6
16 The Vagabond Prince	75	70	3
16 Somewhere in France	77	67	1
12 A Corner in Colleens	91	84	6
9 Sister of Six	71	61	2
16 Fifty-Fifty	90	83	6
4 War's Women	61	48
11 Atta Boy's Last Race	54	54
12 American Aristocracy	92	88	7
9 The Microscope Mystery	46	39
11 The Hon. Algy	78	69	2
13 Jim Grimsby's Boy	66	60	3
13 The Devil's Double	92	93	7
11 The Children Pay	73	63	3
10 Children of the Feud	55	53	1
8 The Criminal	49	45
7 The Gamble in Souls	76	72	3
12 The Wharf Rat	46	46
12 The Matrimaniac	94	95	5
14 The Sin Ye Do	94	84
11 The Heiress at Coffee Dan's	55	47	2
8 Three of Many	56	44
7 The House Built Upon Sand	79	66	3
6 Nina, the Flower Girl	39	39
8 Female of the Species	74	72	2
13 Truthful Tulliver	98	95	8
11 The Weaker Sex	87	83	4
6 The Little Yank	36	48	1
9 The Bride of Hate	76	72	4
9 The Iced Bullet	59	48
11 The Americano	99	97	8
7 Chicken Casey	73	51	1
9 Jim Bludso	65	40	1
10 The Crab	83	67	3
6 Girl of the Timber Claims	37	36
12 The Gun-Fighter	72	82	7
8 The Bad Boy	68	46
6 Princess of the Dark	26	34
3 Stage-Struck	38	40
6 The Last of the Ingrams	47	43
5 Blood Will Tell	67	67
2 A Love Sublime	23	23
4 The Little Brother	41	36	2
10 Back of the Man	92	81	3
5 Betsy's Burglar	60	59
7 The Square Deal Man	96	97	4
4 The Dark Road	63	69	1
1 A Daughter of the Poor	35	38
3 A Woman's Awakening	57	43
4 Her Father's Keeper	54	36
2 Her Official Fathers	33	28
1 Old-Fashioned Young Man	40	40
3 Sweetheart of the Doomed	80	60	3
1 Paddy O'Hara	40	25	1

WORLD

439 World	67.8	62.2	40
2 Hearts Afire	68	73
1 Daughter of the Sea	60	50
The Warning	55	48
4 The Little Dutch Girl	80	63
1 The Price of Her Silence	80	80
The Master of the House	65	53
1 The Dragon	60	30
1 The Price	80	65
1 Love's Cross Roads	55	50
1 Better Woman	75	65
1 By Whose Hand	60	55
1 Her Great Hour	60	40
1 When it Strikes Home	60	65
2 Circus Romance	65	55
1 Old Dutch	75	50
2 Ballet Girl	82	62
Marrying Money	79	63
1 Wishing Ring	64	60
2 The Dollar Mark	55	42
1 Gentleman from Mississippi	60	40
1 As Ye Sow	100	45
1 Stolen Voice	60	60
1 Face in the Moonlight	55	60
1 Women and Wine	60	40
2 Blue Grass	75	68
1 Fruits of Desire	40	50
1 Alias Jimmy Valentine	50	60
6 Trilby	61	69	1
1 Idols	40	40
2 Master Hand	55	80
3 Devil's Toy	57	73
Salvation Nell	60	47
Family Cupboard	50	57	1
4 Heart of Blue Ridge	84	73	1
1 Butterfly on Wheel	50	70
2 Hearts of Men	50	52
1 Body and Soul	40	45
1 The Ransom	63	43
4 The Labyrinth	66	65
3 Should a Wife Forgive?	90	90
2 The Senator	83	60
1 Hearts in Exile	90	90
1 His Wife's Good Name	25	20
1 The Chain Invisible	90	5
1 The Imposter	80	75
1 Sunday	95	30
1 As In a Looking Glass	60	40
1 Over Night	70	70
Sins of Society	76	65
7 Camille	86	79	3
3 The Rack	89	69

Reports	% P. P.	% B.O.	Repeat
1 Fine Feathers	70	40
1 The Clarion	60	75
1 Women in 47	76	80
4 Yellow Passport	82	85	1
3 The Price of Happiness	58	50
2 A Woman's Power	45	50
1 Cowardly Way	60	60
1 Passersby	60	60
1 Man and His Angel	62	45
1 Supreme Sacrifice	77	63
2 The Struggle	60	60
3 The Hand of Peril	75	67
4 Then I'll Come Back to You	83	73	1
4 The Reapers	75	65
2 The Shadow of Doubt	78	65
2 Social Highwaymen	75	48
3 Closed Road	87	81	1
7 The Feast of Life	61	73
7 Her Maternal Right	58	74
6 Sudden Riches	76	71
2 The Twin Triangle	83	45
6 Tangled Fates	57	63
3 Fate's Boomerang	42	53
1 His Brother's Wife	83	74	2
10 Perils of Divorce	61	63
13 La vie de Boheme	47	50
1 What Happened at 22	82	80
5 Crucial Test	59	58
7 The Weakness of Man	61	68
12 Sally in Our Alley	68	68
14 Paying the Price	70	70	1
12 Miss Petticoats	59	61
14 Woman's Way	75	74	4
13 The Summer Girl	56	57
12 Rail Rider	68	60
10 Husband and Wife	75	63	2
8 Almighty Dollar	76	72	1
11 Velvet Paw	73	66	1
8 Friday, the Thirteenth	72	70
11 Dark Silence	77	79	2
4 The Revolt	66	63
7 The Gilded Cage	75	70
6 Hidden Scar	77	67
8 The Scarlet Oath	60	62
7 Man Who Stood Still	71	63
8 The Heart of a Hero	59	49
3 Without a Soul	70	85
14 Bought and Paid for	92	91	9
10 The Madness of Helen	57	54
3 Men She Married	58	55
4 The Deep Purple	81	75
10 All Man	61	61	2
7 Broken Chains	50	43
11 The Rise of Susan	81	85	6
5 The World Against Him	48	48
8 Woman Alone	71	68	1
6 On Dangerous Ground	61	61
7 The Man Who Forgot	65	61	1
4 Marriage a la Carte	73	73	1
1 The Unpardonable Sin	40	55
5 The Bondage of Fear	65	63
8 Tillie Wakes Up	83	72	1
5 The Hungry Heart	86	78	2
5 The Square Deal	73	75
2 A Girl's Folly	73	83
3 The Red Woman	58	50
2 The Web of Desire	78	70
1 The Family Honor	60	60
1 The Dancer's Peril	80	80
1 The Social Leper	60	40
1 The Man's Woman	60	60
1 Darkest Russia	85	85
1 Forget-Me-Not	50	65

METRO

497 Metro	70.8	67.2	49
1 Her Reckoning	60	40
1 Satan Sanderson	70	70
1 Cowboy and Lady	80	80
1 Heart of a Painted Lady	85	75
1 High Road	80	80
3 Shooting of Dan McGraw	81	78
1 Middleman	90	80
1 My Best Girl	60	60
1 Right of Way	70	80
1 Second in Command	77	80
1 The Vampire	80	90
6 Soul of a Woman	93	80	1
2 Silent Voice	77	87

Reports	% P. P.	% B.O.	Repeat
1 An Enemy of Society	60	40
1 Song of Wage Slave	75	70
1 Emmy of Stork's Nest	80	60
2 Final Judgment	80	85
2 Pennington's Choice	92	90
4 Woman Pays	78	52
2 One Million Dollars	78	70
3 Barbara Frietchie	82	73
5 The Yellow Streak	85	64
3 House of Tears	80	65
4 Rosemary for Remembrance	73	68
3 Black Fear	73	57
5 What'll People Say?	80	84
4 The Turmoil	70	55
8 Lure of Heart's Desire	56	56
5 Her Debt of Honor	49	50
6 A Man and His Soul	83	83	2
3 The Upstart	68	72
3 Dimples	52	58
4 Corner in Cotton	64	58
5 The Price of Malice	66	65
6 The Soul Market	83	75	2
2 Blindness of Love	80	85	1
3 Lovely Mary	67	83
1 My Madonna	80	85
6 Her Great Price	80	68	1
8 The Wall Between	78	82	1
8 The Kiss of Hate	60	74
6 Half Million Bribe	69	49
8 Playing with Fire	78	75
11 The Come-Back	75	74	1
8 Snow Birds	80	77
8 A Million a Minute	72	84	1
4 The Spell of the Yukon	79	71
6 His Great Triumph	49	43
10 The Scarlet Woman	73	84	1
10 Dorian's Divorce	74	68
8 Masked Rider	69	68
6 Flower of No Man's Land	58	75
8 The Purple Lady	82	63
10 The Eternal Question	76	83	1
11 The Quitter	69	73
15 The River of Romance	87	76	7
8 The Child of Destiny	51	57
13 The Devil at His Elbow	64	61	1
14 God's Half Acre	71	62	1
14 The Weakness of Strength	68	54
11 The Pretender	80	72	1
7 The Upheaval	57	63
9 The Light of Happiness	67	61	1
10 Mister 44	88	93	4
8 The Wheel of the Law	77	66	1
10 The Dawn of Love	66	60
7 The Iron Woman	43	57
5 Life's Shadows	66	60
12 In the Diplomatic Service	67	83	4
8 The Brand of Cowardice	64	52
12 The Gates of Eden	68	51
11 Extravagance	69	82	3
9 The Wager	79	64
1 My Madonna	80	85
6 The Sunbeam	44	36
10 Big Tremaine	74	82	5
8 The Black Butterfly	70	79	4
7 The Stolen Triumph	51	49
6 Awakening of Helena Richie	63	64
8 Pidgin Island	66	71	1
10 Vanity	62	53
11 The White Raven	86	85	4
7 Wife by Proxy	45	41
7 Threads of Fate	39	38
9 Bridges Burned	43	63
7 The End of the Tour	41	41
5 One of Many	56	50
6 The Secret of Eve	30	63	1
7 The Promise	81	84	1
4 The Barricade	56	48
3 The Hidden Children	37	58
4 The Mortal Sin	64	60
3 The Waiting Soul	47	68	1
2 His Father's Son	73	78
1 The Power of Decision	60	70
1 A Magdalene of the Hills	75	75

FOX

626 Fox	72.9	70.0	85
1 Girl I Left Behind Me	0	25
1 St. Elmo	52	92
4 Fool There Was	82	80	3
2 Dr. Rameau	90	87	1

Reports	% P. P.	% B.O.	Repeat
2 Kreutzer Sonata	80	85
2 The Idler	55	65
2 Celebrated Scandal	70	70
2 Clemenceau Case	87	82	1
2 Walls of Jericho	40	35
1 Woman's Resurrection	80	45
2 Anna Kerinina	67	65
1 Life's Shop Window	55	57
2 The Nigger	100	70
4 The Gilded Fool	70	75
3 Devil's Daughter	77	95
4 Should a Mother Tell?	83	76
1 Wormwood	80	80
1 Lady Audley's Secret	90	75
1 Princess Romanoff	60	60
1 Valley of the Missing	50	40
1 Children of the Ghetto	75	40
1 Samson	80	50
1 The Thief	90	40
8 Two Orphans	84	86	1
2 The Song of Hate	92	82
7 Regeneration	77	72	4
5 Wonwerful Adventure	75	77
5 Sin	62	82
2 Little Gypsy	80	74
5 Soul of Broadway	83	78	1
2 The Family Stain	87	64
3 Carmen	82	83	2
3 Blindness of Devotion	56	53
4 Woman's Past	63	43
9 Broken Law	82	65	1
8 Galley Slave	76	75	1
3 Unfaithful Wife	73	61
3 Her Mother's Secret	73	57
3 A Soldier's Oath	82	70
5 Destruction	86	94	1
3 Green-Eyed Monster	53	74
3 Parisian Romance	65	61
2 Fourth Estate	80	68
6 Serpent	92	93	1
5 Ruling Passion	53	59
5 Merely Mary Ann	52	45
7 Fool's Revenge	45	49
9 Fighting Blood	74	69
4 The Witch	63	59
4 Marble Heart	41	60
10 Gold and the Woman	65	86	1
9 The Bondman	79	62	1
5 A Wife's Sacrifice	55	56
10 Blue Blood and Red	84	69
6 Slander	80	70
10 A Modern Thelma	59	49	1
9 Man of Sorrow	63	64	1
9 Blazing Love	70	68
11 The Eternal Sapho	84	87	4
12 Sins of Men	76	61	1
14 Battle of Hearts	63	61
10 The Spider and the Fly	67	72	1
11 Hypocrisy	76	68
10 A Woman's Honor	69	71
20 East Lynne	87	86	9
15 Ambition	71	67
18 Man From Bitter Roots	82	81	2
18 Caprice of the Mountains	68	64	1
15 Tortured Heart	71	67
21 The Beast	87	66	4
25 Under Two Flags	94	91	17
18 The End of the Trail	67	80
18 Sporting Blood	61	57	1
17 Little Miss Happiness	75	69	3
19 Daredevil Kate	78	78	3
13 Unwelcome Mother	65	68
13 Her Double Life	84	88	3
9 Where Love Leads	69	61
13 Fires of Conscience	64	70	1
11 The Straight Way	68	73
8 The Ragged Princess	77	70
13 The War Bride's Secret	76	58	3
10 Romeo and Juliet	87	86	4
5 Love and Hate	66	60
4 The Mischief-Maker	69	69	1
6 Jealousy	73	83
5 The Mediator	75	74	1
4 Sins of Parents	91	78	3
4 The Battle of Life	72	63
5 The Vixen	61	73
4 Love Thief	86	85
2 The Primitive Call	70	78
4 The Island of Desire	75	65	1
2 The Price of Silence	83	75
2 The Bitter Truth	83	80	1

Reports	% P. P.	% B.O.	Repeat
8 The Darling of Paris	66	73
2 One Touch of Sin	83	85
3 The New York Peacock	88	87
2 The Scarlet Letter	75	68
2 The Tiger Woman	80	80	1
3 Sister Against Sister	63	60
3 A Tale of Two Cities	93	88	2
1 Melting Millions	70	40
3 The Victim	64	62
3 Love's Law	17	27
2 The Blue Streak	60	50

MUTUAL

129 Mutual	72.3	70.6	14
1 Buzzard's Shadow	85	80
1 Death Lock	85	85
1 On the Night Stage	75	40
1 The Mating	80	70
1 Enoch Arden	100	100
1 Girl from His Town	65	70
1 Ghosts	80	65
1 Cup of Life	85	40
1 His Wife	70	25
1 House of Scandal	90	75
1 Infatuation	60	50
3 Miracle of Life	83	83	1
1 Inner Struggle	40	50
1 Mill of Floss	75	90
2 The Painted Soul	82	55
1 End of the Road	90	100
1 Father and Son	75	75
1 The Reward	80	50
2 Bird of Prey	85	87
2 Inspiration	70	100	1
2 As a Woman Sows	80	82
1 The Decoy	50	55
1 The Drifter	75	60
1 Life's Blind Alley	50	70
1 Silas Marner	100	100	1
3 The Craving	69	67
1 Law Unto Himself	40	50
1 Heart of Tara	75	75
1 According to Law	55	52
1 Overalls	75	90
2 My Partner	65	70
3 The Bruiser	78	65	1
1 Hidden Law	100	90	1
1 Love Liar	72	82	1
1 Revelations	50	50
1 The Net	90	100	1
1 The Haunted Manor	52	50
1 Feathertop	85	90
1 Lying Lips	60	70
1 Dust	80	86
1 Other People's Money	85	68
2 Isle of Love	80	85	1
4 Whispering Smith	59	67
6 Soul Mates	69	63
2 Wasted Years	76	81
2 Far from Madding Crowd	70	67
4 Medicine Bend	74	81
4 Highest Bid	64	60	1
2 Her American Prince	62	65
5 Doorsteps	65	60	1
2 House of Mirrors	77	75
1 Wall Street Tragedy	65	80
5 Youth's Endearing Charms	77	75	1
2 Strength, Donald Mackenzie	75	72
1 Million for Mary	90	90	1
5 Judith of the Cumberlands	68	63
2 A Welsh Singer	60	53
1 Man Who Would Not Die	85	75
1 The Wolf Man	50	50
1 The Painted Lie	40	35
2 Three Pals	73	71
2 Manager of the B. & A	63	70
6 The Pearl of Paradise	74	77	1
3 Dulcie's Adventure	89	82
1 Bluff	85	80
4 Faith	70	59
2 Miss Jackie of the Navy	93	85	1
2 A Dream or Two Ago	88	80
4 Innocence of Lizette	85	78
1 The Butterfly Girl	70	70
1 The House of Scandal	0	10
1 The Man From Oregon	95	75
1 The Girl From Rector's	40	40
1 The Greater Woman	60	60
1 Where Love Is	40	40
4 Gentle Intruder	71	74
1 Damaged Goods	40	100
1 Philip Holden—Waster	77	75
2 Redeemed	55	30
1 The Love Hermit	78	78
1 My Fighting Gentleman	35	35

MUTUAL-CHAPLIN

1 A Night in the Show	100	90	1
4 The Fireman	75	88
4 The Vagabond	55	88
5 The Floorwalker	97	100	2
8 One A. M.	63	81	1
15 The Count	88	85	8
9 The Pawnshop	70	72	2
3 Behind the Scenes	94	93	4
7 The Rink	96	90	6
7 Easy Street	97	100	7
3 The Cure	99	100	2

PATHE

131 Pathe	67.8	68.6	13
1 Last Volunteer	80	70
1 The Spender	80	80
3 At Bay	78	81
1 The Galloper	40	90
1 Closing Net	60	80
2 Nedra	55	45
1 Affair of Three Nations	75	80
5 The Beloved Vagabond	76	67
3 Greater Will	50	55
6 Excuse Me!	90	73	2
3 King's Game	56	62
6 Madame X	71	91	3
3 Love Trail	38	52
3 Hazel Kirk	60	55
1 Simon the Jester	60	35
6 New York	80	74	1
2 Precious Packet	67	65
4 Shrine of Happiness	78	72
6 Woman's Law	68	65
10 Big Jim Garrity	69	55	1
6 Girl with the Green Eyes	65	72
3 Matrimonial Martyr	63	73	1
7 Shadow of Her Past	34	81
4 The Fugitive	75	83
8 Little Mary Sunshine	90	78	1
1 Divorce and the Daughter	78	75
1 The World and the Woman	85	90
6 The Shine Girl	72	74
2 Fear of Poverty	65	95
2 The Test	60	48
3 Saint, Devil and Woman	44	57
3 Light That Failed	69	69	1
5 Shadows and Sunshine	94	75	2
2 Prudence, the Pirate	58	73
3 Arms and the Woman	70	53	1
3 The Challenge	73	65
4 Joy and the Dragon	79	73
2 The Romantic Journey	78	68
3 Her New York	78	60
4 Kick In	70	75
1 Sold at Auction	55	65
1 Modern Monte Cristo	70	65
1 Twin Kiddies	75	65
1 The Image Maker	55	60
1 Told at Twilight	85	75
2 Jeanne Dore	27	45
2 The Secret Love	38	40
2 Hop, the Devil's Brew	40	43
1 Undine	80	87	3
1 Wrong Door	75	68
1 Grip of Jealousy	75	85
2 Rupert of Hentzau	51	60
2 Strength of the Weak	76	75
1 The Yaqui	42	58
4 The Flirt	44	66
2 Tangled Hearts	44	36
2 John Needham's Double	54	59
2 The Great Problem	79	60
4 Gaylord Waring	51	50
5 Crippled Hand	58	69	1
3 Gilded Spider	46	64
1 Elusive Isabel	48	46
3 The Measure of a Man	63	65
2 Love Never Dies	65	48
4 Son of the Immortals	64	71
5 Eye of God	64	80	1
3 Bobbie of the Ballet	67	79
3 Evil Women Do	60	62

BLUEBIRD

213 Bluebird	62.1	62.0	18
9 Three Godfathers	68	74	1
15 Shoes	71	77	3
11 Broken Fetters	64	56	1
8 The Love Girl	63	64	1
6 The Grasp of Greed	71	76	1
8 The Silent Battle	78	84
8 Secret of the Swamp	71	56
7 Love's Lariat	65	64	1
7 Bettina Loved a Soldier	70	72
8 Wanted—A Home	71	73
3 The Chalice of Sorrow	72	65
7 Little Eve Edgarton	58	61	1
8 The Girl of Lost Lake	65	60
6 The Unattainable	51	48
12 Saving the Family Name	80	56	1
8 Behind the Lines	63	63
4 The Social Buccaneer	72	65
4 Gloriana	69	70
5 Stranger from Somewhere	68	63
4 The Price of Silence	88	86
2 The End of the Rainbow	63	48
6 The Honor of Mary Blake	58	58
1 The Right to be Happy	50	40
4 Black Orchids	75	78	1
2 Her Soul's Inspiration	55	39
3 God's Crucible	86	80	1
1 The Piper's Price	40	20
5 The Bugler of Algiers	80	69	1
3 The Sign of the Poppy	65	63
2 Mutiny	55	50
3 The Mysterious Mrs. M	73	47	1
1 The Reward of the Faithless	72	81
1 The Saintly Sinner	45	50
1 The Boy-Girl	50	60
1 Susan's Gentleman	50	55
1 The Clock	70	55
1 Hell Morgan's Girl	80	85
1 The Devil's Pay Day	71	75
1 Polly Redhead	30	50

UNIVERSAL

1 Little Brother of the Rich	60	68
1 Business is Business	50	65
1 Father and the Boys	20	30
1 The Frame-up	40	45
1 Judge Not	70	70
1 Long Chance	85	80
1 Man of Shame	50	55
1 My Old Dutch	20	55
1 Nature Man	95	60
1 Under Southern Skies	90	75
2 Langdon's Legacy	66	60
3 Love's Pilgrimage	62	53
2 College Orphan	70	63
1 Colorado	90	100
2 The Campbells Are Coming	84	83	1

RED FEATHER

72 Red Feather	64.9	60.2	8
1 It Happened in Honolulu	80	80
1 The Madcap	70	70
1 Soul Enslaved	60	50
1 Knight of the Range	80	4
2 Beckoning Trail	88	71
2 Man From Nowhere	75	90	1
3 The Path of Happiness	70	50
2 The Sphinx	50	50
2 Pool of Flame	70	75
1 Lords of High Decision	60	40
2 Black Sheep of the Family	60	63
2 Autumn	65	67
3 Her Bitter Cup	72	71
1 The Yoke of Gold	45	64
1 Heritage of Hate	90	85
1 Thrown to the Lions	60	20
3 Huntress of Men	49	55
3 The Youth of Fortune	69	63	1
2 What Love Can Do	50	80
3 Half a Rogue	78	60
1 Sons of Satan	60	40
2 Two Men of Sandy Bar	72	68
1 Folly of Desire	20	40
1 Brigadier Gerard	50	40
2 Romance of Billy Goat Hill	75	55
4 The Target	76	46

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
Whirlpool of Destiny	62	65
Narrow Path	82	60
Drugged Waters	57	52
If My Country Should Call.	58	[illegible]
Black Friday	60	62
The Place Beyond the Winds	66	55
The Isle of Life	50	43
The Mainspring	72	62
Morals of Hilda	80	80
Mixed Blood	70	55
The Child of Mystery	45	15
Polly Put the Kettle On	43	45
Fighting for Love	70	65
The Double Room Mystery	60	20
Heart Strings	65	40
Love Aflame	90	80
The Terror	70	60
The Devil's Bondwoman	40	20
Barriers of Society	40	20

GREATER VITAGRAPH

90 Greater Vitagraph	68.3	65.4	73
Battle Cry of Peace	95	80	4
The Juggernaut	74	75	2
Island of Regeneration	85	81	4
Sporting Duchess	40	30
Sins of the Mothers	87	87	1
Crooky	70	69	2
Playing Dead	75	75
Dust of Egypt	69	55	2
The Rights of Men	74	85
Turn of the Road	82	78
The Cave Man	74	60
Heights of Hazard	75	44
A Nation's Peril	86	76
The Man's Making	60	78
Price of Folly	95	95	2
The Great Divide	83	73	2
Souls in Bondage	100	80	1
Thou Art the Man	72	57
Green Stockings	87	[illegible]	2
Milady's Slipper	90	90
Island of Surprise	87	85
Gods of Fate	62	62
Night Out	80	76	1
The Crown Prince's Double	75	60
The Writing on the Wall	70	40
Kennedy Square	88	66	1
For a Woman's Fair Name	80	85
Hunted Woman	70	54	1
Hero of Submarine D-2	74	71
Dollars and the Woman	78	55	1
Supreme Temptation	60	60
The Two-Edged Sword	70	[illegible]
Vital Question	80	55
Flames of Johannis	40	40
Salvation Joan	78	59
God's Country and Woman	81	87	4
Love's Toll	60	80
The Law Decides	80	70	4
The Ne'er-Do-Well	94	94	6
Ordeal of Elizabeth	58	50
The Suspect	79	76	2
Lights of New York	70	78
The Destroyers	68	57	1
Redemption of Dave Darcey	90	80
Man Behind the Curtain	85	76
The Shop Girl	78	79	1
The Conflict	67	47
Fathers of Men	71	67
The Tarantula	83	74	3
The Daring of Diana	61	79
Hesper of the Mountains	57	64
The Light at Dusk	85	72	4
The Alibi	69	69
The Dawn of Freedom	0	50
Footlights of Fate	68	80
The Combat	82	84	1
The Kid	61	60
Phantom Fortunes	42	62
His Wife's Good Name	64	76
Through the Wall	79	63	1
The Chattel	72	83	3
Prince in a Pawnshop	64	67	1
The Blue Envelope Mystery	67	64
Firm of Girdlestone	35	45
The Last Man	82	81	1
The Devil's Prize	46	58
The Price of Fame	43	45
Dollars and the Law	53	75
The Enemy to the King	61	68	2
Rose of the South	76	66
Whom the Gods Destroy	59	73	3
Ninety and Nine	76	70	1
Indiscretion	46	61	1
A Man of Mystery	64	67	1
My Official Wife	91	84	3
The Glory of Yolanda	73	76	7
The Enemy	60	[illegible]
The Girl Philippa	70	79	2
The Courage of Silence	67	66	2
Money Magic	57	68
Blind Justice	59	55
Arsene Lupin	69	62
Intrigue	42	47
Kitty Mackay	48	58
Aladdin of Broadway	60	70	1
The Money Mill	50	48
Her Right to Live	52	60
Babette	85	85
The More Excellent Way	72	73	1
Apartment 29	55	60	1
Sally in a Hurry	50	50

KEYS

106 K. E. S. E.	69.6	66.3	22
The Bank	90	90	1
The Woman	60	75
Work	70	75
Thou Shalt Not Covet	78	55
Vultures of Society	80	60
Between Savages and Tigers	90	100
Quo Vadis	60	40
The Spendthrift	80	60
Officer 666	55	40
When Love is King	20	25
The Magic Skin	80	75
Woman Next Door	60	90
The Havoc	5	20
Sentimental Lady	65	40
The Scarlet Road	70	55
Destroying Angel	90	87
Money Masters	90	60
Commuters	85	60
Musty Suffer	80	90
Devil's Prayer Book	50	60
Children of Evil	70	65
Green Cloak.	70	60
The Spoilers	92	105
Graustark	88	90	4
The Slim Princess	77	94	1
The Rosary	80	55	1
A Texas Steer	72	88
House of Thousand Candles	40	30
The Raven	87	20
The Alster Case	75	60
Daughter of the City	60	70
Misleading Lady	73	50	1
Cycle of Fate	62	75
Carmen (Chaplin)	50	93
The Little Shepherd of Bargain Row	75	63
Sherlock Holmes	75	50
Into the Primitive	52	60
That Sort	70	45	1
Valiants of Virginia	85	75
The Prince Chap	51	53
The Return of Eve	75	73	2
The Country God Forgot	74	66
Chaplin Revue	63	79
The Innocence of Ruth	60	81
At Piney Ridge	60	60
The Heart of the Hills	63	60
The Prince of Graustark	83	84	1
The Cossack Whip	87	61
Message to Garcia	67	73
The Last Sentence	55	70
The Truant Soul	78	68	1
Little Shoes	82	82
Adventures of Buffalo Bill	65	100
Skinner's Dress Suit	100	93	3
The Law of the North	50	90
Royal Pauper	10	100
The Heart of Texas Ryan	75	75
Princess of Patches	50	100

ART DRAMAS

Whoso Taketh A Wife	90	90
Lash of Destiny	80	50
A God of Little Children	67	63
Infidelity	63	65
The Rainbow	68	66
Rosie O'Grady	82	80
Her Good Name	85	86

SELZNICK

The Common Law	83	90	5
Vera, the Medium	61	59	2
The Foolish Virgin	36	66	2
War Brides	75	58	8
Panthea	80	76	4
The Price She Paid	76	74	3
The Argyle Case	86	74	2
The Easiest Way	85	55

Mc CLURE

Pride	23	26
Envy	26	45
Passion	20	25
Greed	22	27

ARTCRAFT

Less Than the Dust	57	76
Pride of the Clan	70	71	7
A Poor Little Rich Girl	99	100	[illegible]
Broadway Jones	98	90	1
In Again—Out Again	90	100	1

SELIG SPEC.

The Crisis	70	58

FROHMAN

The Witching Hour	53	53	1
Jaffery	63	55

UNIV. SPEC.

Scandal.	80	72
Robinson Crusoe	65	70
20,000 Leagues Under Sea	63	98	[illegible]
Dumb Girl of Portici	48	[illegible]
Diana the Huntress	58	75	1
Where Are My Children?	79	84	2
Jewel	83	65
Idle Wives	54	89	4
The Eagle's Wings	82	77

FOX SPEC.

Neptune's Daughter	80	80	1
A Daughter of the Gods	70	50

METRO SPEC.

Romeo and Juliet	79	58	3

PARAMOUNT SPEC.

The Christian	81	78	1
Tess of the Storm Country	100	85	2
The Typhoon	88	78	1
The Eternal City	93	96	4

IVAN

Her Surrender	85	70
Her Husband's Wife	90	95
The Flower of Faith	50	25
Faded Flower	82	74	1

B. S. MOSS

The Power of Evil	87	70
One Day	85	80

SERIALS

Patria	84	77
Gloria's Romance	78	83
The Crimson Stain	61	65
Mysteries of Myra	82	84
The Yellow Menace	40	40
Liberty	88	92
Grip of Evil	73	67
Who's Guilty	78	78
The Iron Claw	93	92
The Diamond Runners	66	82
The Shielding Shadow	91	91
Secret of Submarine	73	79
Peg o' the Ring	50	59
Scarlet Runner	67	64
Lass of Lumber Lands	55	54
Girl and the Game	73	45
The Great Secret	35	45
Pearl of the Army	98	98
The Secret Kingdom	20	0

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

WILLIAM F. ALDRICH
FEATURE PRODUCER
Screen Club, 117 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG CORP.

BERT CARBER
TECHNICAL DIRECTOR
THANHOUSER SCREEN CLUB

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

HAL CLARENDON
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL

J. GORDON EDWARDS
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
PRODUCING
Clara Kimball Young Features

JACK HARVEY
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
Producer of
"PARENTAGE"

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
PRODUCING FEATURES
Ivan Film Corp.

LLOYD INGRAHAM
MANAGEMENT
GRIFFITH-FINE ARTS STUDIOS

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR
Frohman Amusement Corporation

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

HARLEY KNOLES
FEATURE DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

O. A. C. LUND

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE PRODUCER
B. A. Rolfe-Metro Pictures Corporation

EUGENE NOWLAND
PRODUCING FEATURES

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITAGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

FREDERIC SULLIVAN
DIRECTOR THANHOUSER
Screen Club

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
PRODUCING FEATURES
VITAGRAPH

JAMES VINCENT
PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

JAMES YOUNG

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Address—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM — A MAGAZINE — IN FACT A SERVICE INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS

WID'S

Always Independent Issued Every Thursday VOL. III. THURSDAY, JUNE 21, 1917. NO. 25 25 Cents a Copy $10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

The Program System is on the Run! Keep It Going!

THE Open Market is here. The program system is on the run and going fast. They admit it!

Certainly it is gratifying to me to realize that this condition which will be so decidedly beneficial to the exhibitor has arrived after the battle which I have helped to lead to get it.

You all remember the arguments I presented a year, and even two years ago, in favor of Open Market booking as against the contract system and naturally I am very much pleased to realize that the producers have finally recognized the fact that they must adjust their methods to the needs of the exhibitor, because if they don't give the exhibitor the best of it, they (the producers) will in the end get the worst of it.

Paramount has announced that they will book all of their stars independent beginning this fall; indications are that Metro and Fox will do the same, and I can tell you definitely that there is not a program company existent today that doesn't realize that the Open Market method of booking is the only sane, sensible means of catering to the better houses and the intelligent film fans.

I have talked with the bosses of the various big organizations on this matter and find that every one admits very freely the fact that the program system has had a kick in the ear.

Undoubtedly we will continue to have some companies making the productions which are to be marketed on the yearly contract basis, but these companies will be catering to the shooting-gallery exhibitor who hasn't sufficient confidence in his own judgment to try to run his house like a regular place of business, and consequently prefers to take what he can get from some feller who will provide him with so many features a year.

I said last year in my editorials hammering for the open market, that there would naturally be a period of time when conditions would be unsettled while the companies were readjusting their plans so that they could switch direct to Open Market booking. We are at this minute in the midst of that situation, with many artists and directors doing a lot of wondering as to just where they are because the producers have been cutting right and left and readjusting their producing organizations in order to be able to start fresh on the Open Market producing plan.

It will be a case of the survival of the fittest, but certainly those who can deliver will be able to get more for their services than ever before, while those who have been sneaking by under false pretenses will get the gate and find it hard to keep busy in the future.

Many very capable people will be out of work temporarily, but as soon as the producing companies readjust their plans, those who have made good or can make good will find no difficulty whatever in getting worth-while positions.

The most promising angle of the recent developments is the acceptance by several of the biggest producers of the fact that the director is of supreme importance.

I have been hammering that thought ever since I first started to write—three years ago—and one of my first editorials was on that particular issue. I find now that a number of producers are accepting my suggestion that the director should not only be given the necessary authority, but should not be hindered by incompetent material and should also be given an interest in the company which would provide him with a percentage of the profits of the productions which he makes.

Certainly there is no better way to give the director the proper incentive to make the best picture possible at the most reasonable figure without sacrificing quality for economy.

The system which has paid the director a salary has placed him in a position which made it desirable to him personally to make the best picture possible under the circumstances regardless of cost. If his negative was costing twenty-five thousand dollars and he thought he could make it better by the expenditure of another ten or fifteen thousand, he generally spent the additional sums if he could get them to spend. This additional expenditure might only increase the value of the production two or three thousand dollars, but that meant nothing in the life of the producer. It was up to him to make the best picture possible, and he wasn't concerned with the expense account except that he had the organization fighting him to make it as cheap as possible.

This situation has developed an antagonism between the director and the business office which could be entirely eliminated by placing the director in a position whereby he would be working as a partner on a percentage arrangement which would leave the question of whether or not his picture made good to decide what his net salary on the offering should be.

Under this sort of an arrangement the director would be glad to co-operate with the business office to make the picture as cheaply as possible without sacrificing the quality, and the business office would have much more confidence in the director's good intentions.

I believe that the future is clearly defined so far as producing is concerned. I think that we will have individual units specializing on a certain sort of production, with the director working on a percentage basis which gives him big returns if his picture prove a success, and small returns if it prove only an average offering.

One or two of our big successful men have worked on this basis in the past, but our supply of sure-fire directors has been limited. It is still limited, unfortunately, to an appallingly small number, but there are a great many more real directors in the business than the average executive knows about, because we are still in the unfortunate condition of having executives in charge who don't know what the other companies and individuals are doing.

Just a year ago I was hammering hard at you exhibitors, who are really the backbone of this tremendous industry, to get together and arrange things so that you could be protected and in a position to get the things that you should have. Quite a lot has been accomplished in the past year, but there is still much to be done.

I am reprinting here an editorial which I wrote just a year ago. It made some of you think then and it may help to get some more action now, since we have found that the past year has proven that points which most of the big producers laughed at at that time have since been accepted by them as gospel. Think it over and see to it that all the boys around you start their think-tanks to work on the same problem.

THE MARKET BASKET.

(From WID'S, Vol. II, No. 24; June 15, 1916)

Did you ever stop to figure out why there is such an institution as the market basket? If not, ask your wife, if you have one, and if you haven't one, ask some one else's wife.

The most important reason is that when the housekeeper fails to personally select what she wants or at least have the opportunity to look over what is in stock, she gets the worst of it quite frequently.

The market basket institution also enables her to find out about prices and quit paying whatever the bills call for.

I firmly believe that the exhibitors of this country are making a terrible mistake in allowing the institution of the Program method of releasing feature films to continue to exist.

I have yet to hear any one successfully defend the Program plan as against the Open Market booking plan from the exhibitor's viewpoint. It is certainly true that the Program plan is better for the manufacturer because the Program makes it possible for the manufacturer to shoot in a bad one now and then or a cheap one and then bolster it up by an occasional good one.

It is all very well to hear them talk about establishing standards and such "bull," but I believe any exhibitor in the country will agree with me that so far no concern has made good on that proposition.

Another argument for the Program plan is that the establishing of a trademark, which is to be used in connection with the advertising of films, is a good thing. I will grant that it is a good thing for the manufacturer, but I will not grant that it is a good thing for the exhibitor.

I insist that the public who go to films, know the individual stars, have their favorites, and also know the individual directors, and have their favorites. I insist that this public, at least the part of them who do any thinking whatever regarding what films they shall attend, pay much more attention to the stars, the individual stories and the directors than they do to the names of the companies presenting the films.

I believe in the Open Market method of booking films. I believe it is the only sensible and efficient manner of choosing attractions. I also believe in paying for each film what it is worth to you rather than paying a stated amount for so many films as they come—good, bad and indifferent.

I believe every exhibitor will agree that Marguerite Clark is a better box office attraction than some star (?) who has never been heard of. Why, then, should you pay the same for the picture featuring the unknown star that you pay for the Clark picture?

You can rest assured that any argument from the manufacturer about your getting the big ones at a low price in order to offset the little ones at the big price, is a bad argument for you. If it was a bad argument for the manufacturer he would change his policy and change it quick. Today he is the only man who can change that because you exhibitors have not as yet realized your power and for that reason you are still entirely at the mercy of the manufacturers.

I am very much in earnest about this question because I believe it is of tremendous importance and it seems to me to be really ridiculous that the most important branch of this tremendous industry should be as helpless as it is today.

If the exhibitors ever say that they want Open Market instead of the present good, bad and indifferent Program lottery, they will get it. But they must say it as an organized body or at least there must be an organized sentiment.

The Convention in Chicago will be an ideal place to talk over such important questions as this and I believe that every real exhibitor should make it his business to get there. If you have any objections to the present methods of the M. P. E. L. of A. do not sit home and fight with yourself about them, go to Chicago and find out whether you are right or wrong, and if you are right convince somebody else that you are right. Maybe you can convince the M. P. E. L. of A. Personally I believe very strongly in the M. P. E. L. of A., and I think every exhibitor in the country should belong. Not only should he belong, but he should take an active part in the organization's work.

MAKE MORE COMEDY FEATURES—WAR CONDITIONS DEMAND ENTERTAINMENT

Many big exhibitors from all over the country seem to agree with the thought which I have advanced, that producers be particularly careful at the present time to make their productions entertaining as well as box office attractions.

By entertaining I mean that there should be more films of a light comedy character, with a tendency toward the human element, rather than the wild melodrama or the heavy tragedy stuff.

With war conditions upsetting the country, it is really essential that we aim to give more opportunity for laughs. Any exhibitor will tell you that he can do three times as much business to-day with a comedy as he can with any other kind of production.

You producers who want to get the money should give this some very serious consideration.

FAST MELO AND WONDERFUL SUBMARINE STUFF WITH THRILLS AND GOOD TEMPO—A SPLENDID NOVELTY

Barbara Tennant and Chester Barnett in

THE SUBMARINE EYE

Williamson Bros.—Submarine Film Corp.—State Rights

PRODUCED UNDER SUPERVISION OF.....J. Ernest and George Williamson

DIRECTOR .....Winthrop Kelly
AUTHOR.....J. Ernest Williamson
CAMERAMAN .....Harold Sintzenich
AS A WHOLE.....Interesting, fast-moving melo with excellent undersea photography as distinctive novelty
STORY.....Nothing unusual except undersea periscope idea, which was very interesting, and introduced submarine photography logically
DIRECTION.....Surface melo had good swinging tempo, although quite some "acting"; thrills and undersea novelty effectively introduced
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Excellent, some spots a little muddy
LIGHTINGS .....Just good
CAMERA WORK.....Good; not distinctive
STARS .....Pleasing personalities
SUPPORT.....Good; sharks real thrillers
EXTERIORS.....Some interesting locations
INTERIORS.....Good; not unusual
DETAIL.....Many interesting bits; submarine stuff wonderful
TIME.....One hour and twenty-five minutes (7 parts)

THE first comparison that every one will make regarding this production is to think of it as contrasted with "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea." Certainly, as entertainment it is better than the "20,000 Leagues" film, and it would seem to me that with the submarine periscope thought in the title and the additional advertising angles, with the assurance that you can pronounce the melodramatic story interesting, it should pull more business than the picturization of the Jules Verne story. Because, some people—and, in fact, rather a surprisingly large percentage of people—had never heard of "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" as a novel.

In considering material for the screen it is vitally important that those who select have a comprehensive understanding of just how much the millions of screen fans know about literature and theatricals. For a rough guess we can figure that there are between sixty and seventy million regular film fans, and I am willing to bet that at least 50 per cent. of them are decidedly unfamiliar with literary classics or theatrical successes, particularly those which have been successful only in the large cities.

This production starts off with a little prologue registering how a treasure chest had been deposited on an island in the West Indies, and then we come to the present time and discover a young inventor who has perfected a contrivance whereby one can see under water, just as the submarine by the use of the periscope sees what is going on at the surface.

This young man having overheard a sailor tell of the West Indies treasure which he had tried to rescue, explained his invention, and an expedition set out to find the valuables. The millionaire's daughter, Barbara Tennant, who financed the young inventor after hearing his story, soon became interested in the young man.

Of course, there was the usual villain, and after arriving in the West Indies the plot developed to a situation where the diver who had been employed to descend for the treasure refused to go down for the chest, which had been located by means of the undersea periscope, because of sharks in the water. Hero volunteered to make the descent.

By the falling of the lid of the chest the hero's hands were caught as in a vise, and he was imprisoned at the bottom of the sea all through the night, while the frantic members of the party sent wireless calls for help, which brought a submarine racing to the rescue.

Finally the heroine thought of the black divers of the sponge fleet some miles away, and she raced in a fast motorboat to bring back the head of these men of the sponge fleet. There was an excellent tempo to th action showing the racing submarine, the returning launch and the struggling diver at the bottom of the sea. When the party bringing the black giant reached the yacht, the villain tried to dissuade the black man from entering the water, by showing him the sharks, but our black hero didn't hesitate. Down the pipe of the underwater periscope he went, hand over hand, with a long knife between his teeth.

On the way down and on the way up sharks came within two or three feet of him, and these scenes will certainly give any one a real thrill. However, the black man was undaunted and made his way to the diver, released him from the chest and made his rescue possible without any injury.

After all of the wild excitement about the recovering of the chest, we found on the finish that the man who had lost his life because of gold, in the years gone before, had left nothing but a diary in the chest, which told of his miserable downfall, and warned all young people against valuing wealth more than love. Of course, this was very satisfactory on the finish, because by now the two young people were very much in love and her old man had all the money they could spend, anyway.

Naturally the most important angle to consider on this production is the value of the submarine scenes. Surely they have been beautifully handled and are a decided novelty, with the action cut into the story in such form as to make it truly interesting all the way without seeming to have it forced into the story development.

From the very first submarine scene where we saw the gaudily striped fish that tried to sneak up close to the camera for a close-up, to the final scenes having to do with the rescue of the diver from the chest while the sharks hovered about, this portion of the film is truly interesting.

The surface scenes were not distinctive as to direction and atmosphere, but they were all satisfactorily done, and, combined with the submarine action, make this a feature that should get big money and please most anywhere.

Of course, the real feature of this offering is the submarine photography with the sharks providing the thrills.

Barbara Tennant, as the heroine, was very beautiful and registered with that same pleasing personality which made her a tremendous favorite when Eclair films stood at the top of the heap, a few years ago.

Chester Barnett was pleasing as the awkward, bashful young inventor, and the other members of the cast were very satisfactory, although they occasionally slipped in a bit of "acting."

In the cast were Eric Mayne, Charles Slattery, Edward Butler, Fred Radcliffe, Lindsay Hall, Lillian Cook and E. Hudson.

The Box Office Angle

This ought to get money anywhere if properly advertised, because the periscope is one of the livest issues of the present time and it is a great thing to be able to talk about an "inverted periscope." You can safely promise that the submarine scenes in this are not only beautifully photographed and wonderfully exciting at times, but that they are exceptionally educational as to presenting an intimate study of the flora of the ocean.

You will find that the advertising dwells upon the undersea periscope idea, and I want to suggest that you play up that and the submarine photography for all it is worth.

In many localities the "20,000 Leagues" picture failed to please because the story was very badly assembled and wandered much. You can definitely promise that this is a much more interesting production, that it has a story which holds together much better, and consequently that it will certainly please anywhere, even though "20,000 Leagues" missed fire.

Of course, it isn't advisable to admit to your patrons that the "20,000 Leagues" picture isn't good, but you can emphasize with much force the fact that this is much better than "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea."

FANTASTIC FARCE MIX UP EARNS SOME GOOD LAUGHS

Harold Lockwood in

THE HAUNTED PAJAMAS

Yorke—Metro

DIRECTOR	Fred J. Balshofer
AUTHOR	Francis Perry Elliott
SCENARIO BY	Fred J. Balshofer
CAMERAMAN	Tony Gaudio
AS A WHOLE	Far-fetched farce fantasy, but entertaining
STORY	Wild mix-up due to peculiar pajamas, which changed personalities who wore them
DIRECTION	Gave distinctive atmosphere and kept action interesting
PHOTOGRAPHY	Excellent
LIGHTINGS	Many very effective and artistic
CAMERA WORK	Splendid
STAR	Pleasing personality; matinee idol
SUPPORT	Good character and pleasing leading lady
EXTERIORS	Some very artistic; generally pleasing
INTERIORS	Very good
DETAIL	Muchly mixed, but interesting
TIME	Sixty-four minutes (5 parts)

ALTHOUGH some people may think that this is too badly mixed and entirely too far-fetched, I believe the average audience will accept it as a farce, enjoy it while it runs and declare when it is finished that it was rather an entertaining offering.

The plot had to do with a pair of silk pajamas which worked wonders, in that the character who put them on was transformed into some one else, with rather amazing results.

In one place this plot stepped pretty close to the edge, because we found a young man transformed into a girl who still carried the personality of the young man, with the result that she became very familiar with Mr. Lockwood in his own room. In some communities this will go great, and in others they may think it's a little bit too near the deadline.

The general atmosphere of the offering was excellent, there being many good lightings and much that was distinctive in the way of exteriors and classy composition.

Harold Lockwood has a pleasing personality, was given many close-ups in this and registered in a manner to more than satisfy the girls.

Carmel Myers, who appeared opposite Mr. Lockwood, was very pretty and more than interesting in the silk pajama scene.

Others who appeared were Ed Sedgwick, Paul Willis, Gordo Kino, Lester Cuneo, Harry de Roy and William de Vaull.

The Box Office Angle

Figured as farce comedy, I believe this will register very satisfactorily anywhere. There are a good many laughs, and while the action is decidedly mixed and twisted, the spirit of fun pervades to a sufficient extent as to justify much of the wildness.

I would make it very clear that this is a comedy and bill this with such lines as, "What would you do with a pair of silk pajamas capable of transforming a boy friend who put them on, into a girl? Suppose the next time a friend donned them he was transformed into the figure of a notorious murderer? See 'The Haunted Pajamas'—It's wild, but funny!"

THE EPITOME OF ARTISTIC TITLES

NASTY UNNECESSARY DETAIL IN MELO THAT PROVES NOTHING

WHO'S YOUR NEIGHBOR?

Master Drama Features, Inc.—State Rights

DIRECTOR.....S. Rankin Drew
AUTHOR.....Willard Mack
SCENARIO BY.....S. Rankin Drew
AS A WHOLE.....Kept woman and lured girl meller with much unnecessary detail of drunk parties in kept woman's apartment
DIRECTION.....Gave excellent tempo to final clash, but smut detail and unpleasantly complicated family situation gave production very bad taste
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good; some poor lighting on faces
LIGHTINGS.....Sometimes excellent; sometimes only fair
CAMERA WORK.....Good; although varied
STAR.....None
SUPPORT.....Father, kept woman and heroine very good; heroine's sweetheart awful
EXTERIORS.....Acceptable
INTERIORS.....Generally very good
DETAIL.....Much that was very suggestive and objectionable
TIME.....One hour and 20 minutes (7 parts)

IT seems a pity that just when everyone is realizing the fact that the exhibitors and the public are sick of sex melodramas, that a producer should present such a dirty mess as this; because it will undoubtedly be advertised heavily, with a lot of fuss made about it in an attempt to sell it, and as a consequence it will stir up more censorship agitation.

No one believes more thoroughly than I do in the fact that we should not have censorship. Nevertheless, we must face the situation squarely. We have censorship today in several States, and when producers offer this sort of a production as a special feature it stirs up the animals so that immediately they have more reasons for demanding that films be controlled.

The theme on which this is based is, that vice should be segregated. That problem is worthy of consideration and undoubtedly has much to commend it. The unfortunate angle is that the producer in presenting this offering has registered entirely too much detail of an objectionable nature which is not necessary from any angle, in order to prove the point he was trying to get over. We are shown entirely too much footage devoted to parties in the apartment of the kept woman, with several different scenes registering with much emphasis her methods of working on both her keeper and the friend she decided to play with while her keeper was away. It is these scenes which will cause the trouble. They will make most members of any audience feel that they have seen something repulsive. Some of your patrons may think it's great stuff while they are looking at it, but you will find that they will all condemn it most emphatically upon leaving the theatre. That's bad business!

Willard Mack in preparing his script has built up a convenient, far-fetched coincidence which gave as a finish a weird situation. Father and mother had separated. Father afterwards was keeping a woman in an apartment next to that of a woman who had been heading a reform movement to break up the segregated district. Father's son, who had been at college, came home and met a friend, who took him to the apartment of the woman being kept, who was cheating because she thought her keeper was going out of town.

Through the reform woman next door, the mistress had met the father's daughter, who had been living with her mother, earning a livelihood by sewing. The kept woman telephoned the daughter and asked her to come to do some sewing, which brought brother and sister together in this apartment, with the father missing his train and returning to the apartment—which has been done in so many hundreds of other "movie" plots—with the net result that when he arrived at the apartment we found him hurling the red woman across the room, to lie huddled in a heap, apparently dead, while he fought with the friend of his son, trying to kill him.

To make the plot even more complicated, the daughter who had been lured here was the sweetheart of the brother's friend. After much struggling for the friend, daughter stepped into the door and was shot. possession of the gun between the father and this Then everyone rushed in and the mess was uncovered.

Daughter came back to life, and then the kept woman came back to life, with the production ending when the reform woman next door discovered that her former neighbor was a member of the vice district.

They went a long way around Robin Hood's barn, with much objectionable and unnecessary detail, to attempt to prove a point in this. As a matter of fact, whether the vice district is segregated or not, I'd like to know how they are going to avoid having a wealthy man engage an apartment for a kept woman if he wants to do it. The producers have said nothing about having couples who want to rent apartments in the city show marriage licenses when they apply, and really it would seem to me that this whole production is shooting in the air at an argument which is centuries old, without having accomplished anything save showing a lot of unnecessary detail which is not good stuff for the screen, considering the present status of the censorship proposition.

This production dragged rather badly in many places during the first four or five reels, with Frank Morgan as Dudley Carlton, "acting" at all times. He was very, very camera-conscious, and consequently spoiled many scenes. Towards the finish he tried to be funny, with very sad results.

Anders Randolf, as the father, gave a very good performance, and Christine Mayo, as the kept woman, played her character well—as a matter of fact, entirely too well, since the detailed methods of improved vamping are hardly what should be presented on the screen as entertainment.

Evelyn Brent, as the daughter-sister-innocent-heroine, had an appealing face and was quite satisfactory.

The other members of the cast were acceptable. In the supporting cast were Wm. Sherwood, Gladys Fairbanks and Franklyn Hanna.

The Box Office Angle.

Personally, I certainly would advise you not to play this in a community house. The production may get some business in a transient patronage theatre, just the same as burlesque shows do business, but, to my mind, you are making a serious mistake if you put this sort of film into a fine theatre which has a reputation for playing worth-while productions. The day for off-color stuff is gone. If you don't know it, your public do! And the surest way to lose the bulk of your best patronage is to show smutty films.

This problem does not in any way concern small towns, and, as a matter of fact, I can't see that the author has done anything except show a condition that exists. He has presented no logical means for doing away with this condition, and I imagine there are many millionaires, owners of big apartment houses, who would pay well to know just how this condition can be met. As a matter of fact, the best apartment houses in the city do conduct investigations which makes impossible such situations as shown in this film, and, so far as the better residential sections are concerned, there is less of this than might be imagined.

The suggested inference that a law officially designating a segregated vice district would do away with this apartment house difficulty is certainly a false premise.

OLD WELL-KNOWN SITUATIONS LIFTED BY PLAYING AND TREATMENT

Edwin Arden in

THE IRON HEART

Astra—Pathe

DIRECTOR ..... George Fitzmaurice
AUTHOR ..... Ouida Bergere
CAMERAMAN ..... Arthur C. Miller
AS A WHOLE ..... Old melodramatic incidents made fairly interesting by treatment
STORY ..... "Governor's Lady" stuff with hard-hearted factory owner and son who stopped strike and saved dad
DIRECTION ..... Gave excellent sets, intimate characterizations; good lightings and action which lifted situations
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Generally very good; some bits excellent
LIGHTINGS ..... Generally good; a few very effective
CAMERA WORK ..... Very good
STAR ..... Had poise, authority and real suggestion of power
SUPPORT ..... Good
EXTERIORS ..... Good; not exceptional
INTERIORS ..... Very good; some sets excellent
DETAIL ..... Good, although convenient
TIME ..... Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

CONSIDERING the fact that this story is a decidedly old theme which has been used in a number of different productions, I believe Producer Fitzmaurice has made rather an entertaining film out of it by intelligent treatment in the matter of atmosphere provided, a nicely selected cast, good close-ups and action that registered rather convincingly despite the fact that it was very melodramatic in spots.

The story is the well-known plot about the hard-hearted successful business man who feels that his faithful wife is not a fit mate for him when he gets his millions, because she doesn't know how to fit in with his desired social position. This is the well-remembered plot of "The Governor's Lady," and has been used in varied forms in a number of films.

In addition to this idea, we had the son who refused to take father's orders regarding his desire to wed his dad's stenographer, with the result that he was disowned, and of course on the finish when father had separated from mother in order to take up with a wicked wampire social secretary, who wore L. & B. H. gowns, mother went to live with son, who was working in the mills and living happily with his wife and baby.

Father had a strike on his hands, and son stopped it. Then father's mill burned down at the psychological moment, a lot of "weekly" stuff being nicely cut in here, with son saving the day through a banker having noticed his pluck in stopping the strike, with the result that he offered his backing to the son to take hold of another property and give work immediately to all the workmen.

On the finish we had repentant father reunited with mother, while son and daughter-in-law stood alongside in the pew at church.

Had the treatment of this lacked any of the touches which Producer Fitzmaurice gave to it, I fear that it would have been pretty sad. As it stands, the average audience is going to groan a bit over the story, but certainly they will be interested in the action as played, and the personalities of Mr. Arden, Forrest Wynant and Helene Chadwick will lift it. Gertrude Berkeley as the mother, will register very well at first, although she flopped rather hard on the finish because she overplayed too much.

This was one of the best characterizations Mr. Arden has had on the screen, and the many close-ups gave his dominant personality plenty of opportunity to register effectively.

Mr. Wynant proved a very pleasing juvenile, having the necessary punch and pep to carry conviction.

Helene Chadwick is a pretty youngster who was very pleasing.

Lenore Harris was the wicked wampire who tempted the society-desiring Iron King. The friend who introduced Lenore was some "bear"!—which can go both ways, so far as costume is concerned.

The Box Office Angle

The fact that there are a number of excellent sets in this and the treatment given by Producer Fitzmaurice in providing plenty of close-ups of the very good cast tends to lift this out of the ordinary melodramatic rut, and I believe you can get by with it very satisfactorily where they have been accepting program releases.

This story is decidedly well known, and any of your regulars will have it guessed two or three reels in advance, but they have become rather hardened to this, through having had to put up with so much, and so they will accept this offering because of the sets, the lightings and personalities, without making much fuss.

In your advertising you might use some such lines as these: "Have you an Iron Heart? Do you appreciate the real things in life? Do you know what is truly worth while? Are you in search of money, power, position . . . or happiness?"

They pulled an Hawaiian dancer into this as the central figure in an entertainment in the millionaire's home, and she went through all the maneuvers in close-ups, which may register with some of those who have wondered what these cabaret acts are like. On the other hand, some of your more refined patrons may object a bit to this particular incident. If your regulars are somewhat finicky, I would look this part of the film over before the evening show.

HAROLD LOCKWOOD

Yorke--Metro

DELIGHTFUL HUMAN TOUCHES AND PLEASING PERSONALITIES

Ella Hall and Jack Conway in

THE LITTLE ORPHAN

Bluebird

DIRECTOR ..... Jack Conway
AUTHOR ..... H. O. Davis
SCENARIO BY ..... Elliott J. Clawson
CAMERAMAN ..... Edward Kull
AS A WHOLE ..... Delightfully entertaining
STORY ..... Human touches and good little twists, without meller or willun, make it pleasing DIRECTION ..... Perfect tempo, delightfully human touches, excellent atmosphere, distinctive angles, lightings and intelligent use of close-ups
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Very fine
LIGHTINGS ..... Distinctive; artistic
CAMERA WORK ..... Excellent
STARS ..... She, very pleasing, quaint personality; he, clean-cut, pleasing and impressive because of poise and repose
SUPPORT ..... Excellent, particularly Gertrude Aster
EXTERIORS ..... Well lighted and generally pleasing
INTERIORS ..... Excellent sets taken from effective angles
DETAIL ..... Many fine little touches
TIME ..... Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

CERTAINLY, here is pleasing entertainment, particularly for a community audience.

This is a human little story without a villain or melodrama, and most of the incidents have been enlarged and improved upon by the producer, through the introduction of delightful little human touches, good close-ups, etc.

The basic plot was decidedly similar to the well-known theme of "The Prince Chap," but there were several good twists to the story development, which provided a certain amount of suspense and kept the certainty of the intended finish somewhat in doubt.

Ella Hall has done many delightful things, and this is just another triumph for her, it being a particularly pleasing one because the atmosphere was distinctive as to settings and lightings, and Director Conway demonstrated that he certainly knows the value of close-ups and cutting for tempo.

We had a real surprise in seeing Mr. Conway himself in the part of the hero, and, so far as I could see, he looks like a real candidate for stellar honors. He knows how to handle a characterization without acting, he is a clean-cut chap with a likeable personality and he has poise and authority which makes it possible for him to easily dominate most of the scenes in which he appears.

Gertrude Aster, who also had a good part in "Polly Redhead," registered another success, and it would seem to me that this combination of Mr. Conway, Miss Aster and Miss Hall will make good anywhere. Miss Aster is a very beautiful girl and plays quietly and naturally.

The entire cast was well chosen as to types, and none of them were inclined to "act"—which to-day is a wonderful asset.

The story told of three bachelors who on a sudden impulse decided to do something for the immigrants from the war zone, and so they picked out three names, thinking they were getting three boys to care for.

It developed that one of their selection was a girl, the girl being Miss Hall, and they got a lot of comedy out of the fact that this young lady had brought with her, as excess baggage, a goat and a chicken.

After establishing the three young people in the homes of the three bachelors, we found Miss Hall taking exception to the desire of a young widow to marry her new-found "father." Figuring that he should have a worth-while wife, she wandered around looking over some of the ladies on the street, and Mr. Conway put over one bit—where Miss Hall stopped and sized up a lady's feet—that will get a sure-fire yell in any house, anywhere.

Miss Hall finally picked out Miss Aster as a good prospect because she insisted on the groceryman giving her full measure for her money. She approached Miss Aster and said she was "losted" and asked the lady to take her home, and then promptly proceeded to drag the rather bewildered benefactress to the home from which she was supposed to be "lost," where she planked her down in a chair, and brought in Mr. Conway to tell him that she had found a candidate for the position of wife that was worth while. This was a different bit and nicely handled.

There was a slight jar in the situation which showed us that Miss Aster, who for a short time was engaged to Mr. Conway, had been at one time engaged to one of the other bachelors, but we soon got over this, because they didn't pull any real willun and then they worked around to the situation where Mr. Conway realized that he was in love with Miss Hall, but felt that he was too old for her.

He ordered her to take a long trip with Miss Aster and her husband, but the little orphan, after starting away with her hero's friends, dropped off the train as it was starting and returned to Mr. Conway's cabin. These final scenes were beautifully treated as to tempo, and here is one clutch in five hundred that an audience will not walk out on, simply because it has been perfectly timed.

The little touch on the finish where Miss Hall informed Mr. Conway that she was taking no chances on his objecting, and had ordered the justice of the peace to come to marry them, will send an audience out in very good humor, because it is a delightful bit of comedy to top off a very pleasing little romance.

Those who appeared in support were Richard La Reno, Ernie Shields, George Webb, Chandler House, George Hupp and Gretchen Lederer.

The Box Office Angle

Figured as a program release, this is excellent.

You should do very well with this because Ella Hall has a large following and you can make a particular fuss about the fact that Jack Conway, who has been directing Miss Hall, appears in this picture with her, as the hero.

You can safely promise that the story is delightfully human, without a willun, and with many laughs.

At the present time I believe our film fans are more anxious to see entertaining productions than ever before. They want human stories that they can believe, with good laughs mixed in, much more than they do the drab dramas and the sex melodramas.

Benjamin Chapin
Author and Director General
of the Lincoln Cycle Photoplays
The Benjamin Chapin Studios
and Executive Offices: Ridgefield Park, N. J.
Telephone 583 Hackensack

ACCEPTABLE PROGRAM OFFERING SHOULD HAVE BEEN BETTER

Mary Miles Minter in

PERIWINKLE

American—Mutual

DIRECTOR ..... James Kirkwood
AUTHOR ..... William F. Payson
SCENARIO BY ..... Julian Louis Lamothe
AS A WHOLE ..... Fairly interesting atmosphere and pleasing star, but not registered to best advantage
STORY ..... City chap washed ashore, wins waif of village; only fairly interesting and frequently draggy
DIRECTION ..... Gave some good touches and many excellent long shots, but not enough close-ups and frequently composition was bad, with characters stiffly arranged
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Varied; never distinctive
LIGHTINGS ..... Some very good; others poor
CAMERA WORK ..... Lacked improved methods
STAR ..... Pleasing, but not enough close-ups
SUPPORT ..... Routine movie characters
EXTERIORS ..... Some beautiful seacoast shots
INTERIORS ..... Acceptable
DETAIL ..... A few slips
TIME ..... Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

WHILE the average patron may accept this as a good little movie, I am afraid that your more critical fans will feel that it falls short, principally because they do not get enough intimate close-ups of the charming little star, and partly because the story drags badly at times and is never tremendously interesting.

The plot is one of those girl-rescued-from-the-surf things wherein a city chap afterwards floats in from his yacht, being rescued and cared for by the heroine, with the result that he falls in love, sticks in the sea-coast town and finally decides to live the simple life under the guidance of this nature child, instead of being the wicked wun he had been in the past.

Producer Kirkwood has given us many beautiful and effective long shots, but his composition in the dramatic scenes was frequently bad, with the characters standing in stiffly grouped positions, which made the action stilted. There were not enough close-ups, and it was particularly noticeable that the general technique was not of the more improved style.

Miss Minter registered some good touches, but she was handicapped by the fact that she was kept too far from the camera the greater part of the time.

There were some bad errors in lighting, as, for instance, one place where a woman in an interior said, "It is almost dawn," and the light was streaming in through a window as if it were high noon. In another sequence some night photography and daytime photography conflicted badly.

Those who appeared in support of Miss Minter were George Fisher, Clarence Burton, Alan Forest, George Periolat, Ann Schaefer and George Ahearn.

The Box Office Angle

As a program release this will get over very satisfactorily. It is nothing more than just a good program offering.

I presume that Mary Miles Minter's name gets you money, since she has quite a following, and, because of this, you can safely book "Periwinkle," but I would not plug it too strong, because the story misses fire.

You might refer particularly to the beautiful sea-coast scenes, in your advertising, because most of the fans love these bits and will frequently excuse many shortcomnigs in a production in order to rave over the beauty of the seacoast locations.

FARCE MELO WITH FINE LIGHTINGS GOT VERY FEW LAUGHS

Viola Dana in

LADY BARNACLE

Rolfe—Metro

DIRECTOR ..... John H. Collins
AUTHOR ..... Edgar Franklin
SCENARIO BY ..... June Mathis
CAMERAMAN ..... John Arnold
AS A WHOLE ..... Un-funny farce with a few good spots
STORY ..... Pasha's daughter chasing Boston boob; far-fetched farce
DIRECTION ..... Had some beautiful exteriors, but more un-funny attempts at farce than earned laughs
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Generally excellent for sets and locations
LIGHTINGS ..... Many fine for sets, but poor for faces
CAMERA WORK ..... Good
STAR ..... Ordinary
SUPPORT ..... Ordinary
EXTERIORS ..... Many pretty Florida locations
INTERIORS ..... Good
DETAIL ..... Took advantage of farce license
TIME ..... Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

THIS was supposed to be funny, but frequently was "sad."

The plot had to do with a Boston boob who met, by accident, the daughter of a Turkish Pasha, who wanted a man.

The girl stole the magic ruby and followed her chosen one to America by secreting herself on the boat, with complications after they reached this country, through the Boston boob having a fiancee here.

On the finish the servants of the father of the runaway girl arrived to do violence to the Boston boob and his friends, if they didn't return the lost beauty, and then we found her wandering in with a young gink from her home land, who had been going to college in this country, so that he would be on hand to claim the female on the finish.

There were very, very few laughs in this, although there were a number of places where audiences will laugh "at" it—instead of "with" it.

Considered technically, Producer Collins has picked out some good locations down in Florida and has frequently lighted his exteriors and interiors so as to get a splendid effect, although the faces of the characters were not always lighted to advantage.

None of the players made a favorable impression.

In the cast were Augustus Phillips, Nellie Grant, Gerald Griffin, Robert Walker, Harry Leone, Marie Adell, William B. Davidson, Ricca Allen, Harry Linson, Henry Hallam and Fred Jones.

The Box Office Angle

If you are playing ordinary program stuff and figure that your audiences are willing to stand for a sick one once in a while, this may get by because it is offered as a farce and some people may laugh at it, thereby leaving the impression in the minds of those who don't like it that they are superior to such productions, but that they have to be shown in order to please those who have no finer sense of discrimination.

If you cater to intelligent community audiences who know good stuff when they see it, I'd try to get something a little more worth-while. This is an attempt at farce which fails to be funny and has no redeeming originality of theme.

You know what Viola Dana is worth in your community. She has failed to make any impression with me in this. The entire cast seemed to be just so many routine movie characters.

ORDINARY MOVIE WITH NOTORIOUS STAR—DRAGGY—LACKS CLASS

Evelyn Nesbit and Russell Thaw in

REDEMPTION

Julius Steger Production—State Rights

DIRECTORS.....Julius Steger and Joseph A. Golden AUTHOR.....John Stanton
CAMERAMAN.....John Urie
AS A WHOLE.....Movie with many bad titles, making attempt to gain sympathy for star
STORY.....Muddled persecuted, wronged mother with children's love reconciling parents eventually; seemed twisted at times
DIRECTION.....Quite ordinary as to general atmosphere and handling, never impressive
PTOTOGRAPHY.....Just good; sometimes poor
LIGHTINGS.....Varied decidedly
CAMERA WORK.....Ordinary
STARS.....A little better than others in cast, but not good
SUPPORT.....Quite actory at times; never impressive
EXTERIORS.....Ordinary
INTERIORS.....Some good; others poor
DETAIL.....Acceptable
TIME.....One hour and 25 minutes (7 parts)

IN this portduction an attempt has been made to twist a story which appears to have been made without that thought in mind, into a justification of Evelyn Nesbit's errors in life. There is naturally a possibility of doing some business with this film because of the notoriety of the star and the fact that Harry Thaw's child appears in it, but surely the film itself will never arouse any enthusiasm and will probably send any audience out feeling rather as if they have been put through an experience of sight-seeing.

Miss Nesbit screened rather well at times and occasionally her work was quite superior to that of the other members of the cast, chiefly because she had repose. It is possible that Miss Nesbit properly directed could do very well as a screen actress, but unfortunately her drawing power would always be based upon her past reputation, and this is made doubly certain by the fact that this offering is presented as a story of her life. In a way, by the use of many titles which sometimes didn't seem to belong to the action as it registered on the screen, this suggests some of the high spots in her career and attempts to pull sympathy for her, but I fear that the average audience after seeing it will not change their impression very much regarding her.

In other words, this is an instance where you can probably do some business on the strength of having a notorious star that may pull the curious, and the production may be very good for one time around, but, as a film to register as good entertainment, it never arrives.

Throughout the production we have titles which are pitiful in their attempt to stir emotions, the effect of most of them being to make the audience laugh or groan. The action is decidedly lacking in comedy relief, being too much along one strain, and as a consequence becomes very draggy at times. Many of the titles were direct appeals to the gallery, and, to my mind, they will miss fire because the average film fan is much more intelligent than the gallery god who in the old days cheered the melodramatic speeches of the blood-and-thunder stuff.

The general atmosphere of this was not distinctive, and, in fact, was frequently rather cheap.

The Box Office Angle.

If you have a community house catering to intelligent patrons, I hardly believe that this is a good production for you. It will not make good on its own merits and, to my mind, it is not advisable to play a film like this in a first-class house, simply on the strength of the star's notoriety.

If you are so situated that it is a question of just getting the money one time around, then you can undoubtedly do business with this if you advertise it properly. The question becomes entirely one of policy.

While the story dwells very decidedly upon the thought of Evelyn Nesbit having been careless in her youth, etc., there are no incidents that offend because of being too rough, and, as a matter of fact, the production itself is quite harmless, were it not for the fact that it is presented as an appeal for sympathy for Miss Nesbit.

IT IS IMPORTANT

To both Producer and Exhibitor to have a Musical Setting that Fits the Picture.

GEORGE W. BEYNON
505 Fifth Ave., New York City
Specializes in arranging scores that PUT THE PICTURE OVER

PRODUCERS! It will pay you to make inquiry about Beynon's Orchestral Scores before presenting your next production.

EXHIBITORS! You can obtain Beynon's Orchestral Settings for all features on a moderate rental basis. Same scores as used in many New York Theatres.

Tear Out and Mail

Date.....	Date.....
Geo. W. Beynon, 505 Fifth Ave., New York City.	Geo. W. Beynon, 505 Fifth Ave., New York City.
Please quote price for arranging Special Orchestral Setting for	Please quote rental price for Orchestral Setting for ..... (State title of feature)
Producer's Name ..... Address ..... City ..... State	Exhibitor's Name ..... Address ..... City ..... State .....

PLEASING LIGHT COMEDY WITH CLEVER STAR AND GOOD TOUCHES

Bessie Barriscale in

A HATER OF MEN

Kay Bee—Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Charles Miller
AUTHOR.....C. Gardner Sullivan
CAMERAMAN.....Clyde de Vinna
ART DIRECTOR.....Robert A. Brunton
AS A WHOLE.....Delightful light comedy; will entertain generally
STORY....Comedy stuff based on bachelor girl philosophy
DIRECTION.....Registered many little bits with nice touches and kept it moving smoothly
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very good; some beautiful bits
LIGHTINGS.....Star beautifully lighted; generally good
CAMERA WORK.....Very good
STAR.....Very pleasing personality
SUPPORT.....Good
EXTERIORS.....Good
INTERIORS.....Generally very good
DETAIL.....Good
TIME.....Fifty-four minutes (5 parts)

THIS is a little light comedy offering that has some good fun and a rather interesting story development centered chiefly around the philosophy of a girl who decided that all men were wrong, with the result that she tried being a bachelor girl, only to find that the attitude of her men friends was not the same, and so on the finish she gladly welcomed the boy she had originally turned down.

C. Gardner Sullivan is certainly a clever boy at handling such stories as this, and there were many titles that can be counted on as sure-fire, which helped certain situations very decidedly.

Miss Barriscale has a pleasing personality and she was certainly beautifully lighted.

While this is little more than an entertaining farce, I believe the average fan will enjoy it ten times more than they would a melodrama, and, after all, the chief thought is to provide entertainment, because that's what the folks who pay their money are looking for, particularly in the summertime.

This starts off with some business having to do with a divorce suit scandal, so that it gets under way with a swing, and then it is held up nicely by a distinctive, classy atmosphere right through to the finish, where they pull a bit of comedy that is rather overdrawn, but nevertheless will get by.

It all had to do with the old bachelor friend who brought the boy and girl together by smuggling the youth into the girl's apartment and hiding him behind a screen until the girl had 'fessed up that her attempt to be happy as a bachelor girl had failed.

Charles K. French was the bachelor friend, and Jack Gilbert the boy.

The Box Office Angle.

If Bessie Barriscale pulls you business—and she should, because this little lady has a pleasing personality—I would say that this is a very good bet as a program release. It is offered as comedy and is kept in that light, kidding vein all the way, with titles that keep the element of humor uppermost at all times. Most any audience should enjoy it.

I would go after this with such lines as the following: "Why should a girl marry? Do you know? Bessie Barriscale found out in 'A Hater of Men.'" "Would you like to be a bachelor girl? See Bessie Barriscale in 'A Hater of Men.'" "Are bachelor girls really happy? See Bessie Barrscale in 'A Hater of Men.'"

IMPOSSIBLE FOOLING BLIND HERO PLOT HANDICAPPING STAR

Ethel Clayton in

THE STOLEN PARADISE

Peerless—World

DIRECTOR.....Harley Knoles
AUTHOR.....Frances Marion
CAMERAMAN.....Arthur Edeson
AS A WHOLE.....Impossible story fairly done, handicapping clever star
STORY.....Wild notions of fooling blind man into marrying wrong woman, with incidents failing at all times to impress
DIRECTION.....Had curse of movies on it, with masquerade ball and fire done in routine fashion and most of scenes played without necessary intimacy to make them convince PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied decidedly from good to poor; frequently very fuzzy, lacking definition
LIGHTINGS.....Sometimes good for sets, but poor for faces; occasionally good
CAMERA WORK.....Varied decidedly
STAR.....Made her scenes pleasing, but very badly handicapped
SUPPORT.....Ordinary
EXTERIORS.....Ordinary
INTERIORS.....Acceptable, with some ordinary
DETAIL.....Didn't convince
TIME.....Sixty-six minutes (5 parts)

THIS is an unconvincing surface-action melodrama that moves in weary fashion through rather impossible situations which never impress, without at any time registering as truly human or really entertaining. Through most of the footage it dragged and dragged, so that the average patron seeking real entertainment will be very much inclined to walk out.

The story is based on a situation where a young author met two girls in a casual way, became ill, and then received many attentions from one of them, with a misunderstanding which led him to believe that they came from the other.

A masquerade ball was then pulled—in order to provide a "big" set, I suppose—and we found a bum chemist on the floor below having an explosion, which set fire to the building, and there was much chasing to and fro by extras, while the flame torches worked on the sidelines.

Our hero was blinded in the fire, and then the girl who loved him and had given him the attention while ill, visited him at the hospital, pretending to be the other girl. A title had said that the other girl didn't want to go to the hospital because it "nauseated" her. Oh, boy!

Anyway, for the purpose of the plot, we found hero eventually marrying the girl who loved him, thinking that she was the other girl. Years passed, and a child was born, and then came the good old stand-by, the operation which restored his eyesight.

Of course, hero was quite shocked—as he naturally would be—and somewhat peeved over the fact that he had married one woman, thinking he'd married the other. Meanwhile, the other girl had married a wealthy gink and had lived in Montana—so the title said. But now she returned so as to get mixed up in the plot again, and we found her vamping around with the sight-restored hero, with the result that he decided to leave his "false-pretenses" wife flat on the lot and play with the lady whom he thoguht he'd married while blind.

The hubby of the lady from Montana got rather peeved, however, when he saw her in a restaurant with the author—who, of course, was now successful, as all authors in the movies become—and he kicked up a little stir.

In passing I want to inquire if it is customary for females who are trifling with other ladies' husbands to lunch with them where their own hubbies may blow in?

At all events, this drifted along until they pulled the good old studio situation, with husband rushing to the studio to catch his wife with the other man, and heroine learning of it in time to beat him there, so that she could take the guilty one's place and convince the enraged avenger that he was all wrong. Despite the age of this situation, it was the best incident in the story, because Miss Clayton handled it beautifully and the producer gave us enough close-ups to get these scenes over.

The net result of this clash was that the lady from Montana went back West with hubby, he thinking that she had been trying to test his love by making him jealous, while Miss Clayton, our heroine, sent the guy who had been blind when he married her away for a year, to prove that he could stick that long without trifling with others.

This was very flat, very slow, unimpressive and lacking the human note from start to finish. It was an awful handicap to Miss Clayton, who has a very pleasing perosnality and is one of our most capable screen actresses.

Many of the titles were very, very bad, and the incidents were not well hung together. Too frequently we found scenes played with the characters badly grouped and too few close-ups used. There was decidedly too much of a tendency towards having the characters work to the camera.

In the cast were Pinna Nesbitt, Edward Langford, Lew Hart, Robert Forsyth, Frank Norcross, George Cowl, Edward Reed, Edwin Roe, Ivan Dobble and George Macquarrie.

The Box Office Angle.

If your audiences are intelligent—and I think a very large percentage of the film fans today are—they will certainly consider this a very shallow, impossible surface-action story.

Miss Clayton has a very large following, but she has been given many bad productions in recent months, and because of that you may have difficulty in getting real business with her now.

If your fans seem willing to put up with the ordinary program releases, this is no worse than many that have gone before, but it is very, very far from being good. The name means nothing at the box office, and you must figure this entirely on the point of whether or not Miss Clayton's following has been sidetracked by the unconvincing, surface-action stories which have been wished upon her in the past year.

WEAK, OBVIOUS STORY IN DISTINCTIVE ATMOSPHERE

Fannie Ward in

HER STRANGE WEDDING

Lasky—Paramount

DIRECTOR	George Melford
AUTHOR	George Middleton
SCENARIO BY	Charles Maigne
CAMERAMAN	Percy Hilburn
AS A WHOLE	Unreal, unconvincing, obvious plot presented in distinctive atmosphere
STORY	Lacked human note; was very obvious and obligingly convenient
DIRECTION	Provided beautiful exteriors and artistic lightings, but didn't make situations ring true
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally excellent
LIGHTINGS	Many very beautiful and artistic
CAMERA WORK	Excellent
STAR	Very beautiful in many close-ups and generally pleasing, but acted occasionally
SUPPORT	Just good; occasionally "acted" and missed human, convincing note
EXTERIORS	Many beautiful shots; unusually artistic
INTERIORS	Excellent; nicely lighted
DETAIL	Some bad spots in story
TIME	Fifty-seven minutes (5 parts)

TRULY, this was a "strange wedding." It is even more remarkable that such a story as this should be accepted by the Lasky Company for production. Most any ordinary boob among the film fans will have it guessed many reels in advance, and in order to make sure that no one is going to be misled the author has planted early in the story the fact that the weak younger brother, who marries Miss Ward, has a bum heart, so that we know he is going to cash in at the right moment, thereby leaving older brother hero as the logical successor to his position of hubby.

Producer Melford has dressed up this very ordinary obvious plot in a distinctive atmosphere, by providing many exceptionally artistic exterior shots and some classy interiors, with excellent lightings throughout. All of this atmosphere, however, is not sufficient to get this production over. There was a day when Lasky films stood out above all the others, even with bad stories, because of their artistic atmosphere, but in the past year the public has found that other companies know how to provide artistic atmosphere, so that to-day they don't give full credit where a production carries atmosphere but has no story strength.

The plot of this, told briefly, dwelt upon a situation where younger brother suddenly landed home for a visit, with the result that he quickly won the girl older brother had loved but had failed to ask to marry him. A detective from the former employers of younger brother, trailed him and demanded something to square an embezzlement of a thousand dollars, and as a consequence the boy who was to be married that day stole a diamond bracelet from one of the guests, to slip to the detective in order to avoid being arrested.

Older brother loomed up as the weak brother was about to pass the bracelet to the detective and ordered the detective out of the plot, with instructions that he would make good the embezzlement.

Then came the wedding, with the ceremony interrupted as the bride and groom were facing the minister, by the guest rushing in to announce that her bracelet was stolen. To my mind, this was all wrong! Any guest would have waited until after the ceremony, before announcing her loss, or at least would have told some one about it without rushing wildly into the middle of the room where the ceremony was being performed. This missed fire badly because it didn't convince as natural.

The thief-groom had planted the bracelet in his suit-case and had been so absent-minded as to leave this suit-case in the bride's room, where she found it when she was about to retire, with the result that she bawled him out beautifully and made him sleep alone on the couch.

The next morning older brother was called in and the bracelet returned, but the wife agreed to give the youngster another chance, saying that she would go on the honeymoon but wouldn't be his wife until he proved himself worthy. Older brother hero had meanwhile found the folder telling of the trip to Hawaii, and he caught the same boat, and from that time on we knew that it was only a question of footage until the weak-hearted hubby would pull the death-struggle stuff, leaving hero and heroine happy. They ran quite some footage before they got to this, and pulled a fight between the two brothers, but eventually came to the clutch.

We had some beautiful sea-coast locations, supposed to be in Hawaii, and certainly the atmosphere all the way was excellent, but the lightings and locations can't save such awful stories as this with the average fan to-day.

Miss Ward was very pleasing, wore some beautiful clothes and photographed to wonderful advantage in many of her close-ups. In one or two situations she "acted" a bit, but the general impression was very pleasing.

Jack Dean registered as rather camera-conscious in his early scenes, but as the story developed his work became more pleasing, and toward the finish was very satisfactory.

Tom Forman, as the weak brother, was acceptable.

Billy Elmer was the detective, and made this bit very good.

The Box Office Angle

Because of the excellent atmosphere and the beautiful locations, this is better than some of the recent Fannie Ward productions, although it suffers seriously from the obvious, unconvincing plot.

If Fannie Ward gets you business you can probably play this and get it by because of the handling, although you can be very sure that no one will ever rave over it or consider it an excellent picture. They are too critical these days on story points to accept this as a good film.

In order to stir up some interest, you might use some such lines as this: "What would you do if, on your wedding night, you found that your husband had stolen a diamond bracelet from one of the wedding guests? See 'Her Strange Wedding.'"

ENTERTAINING HUMAN CHARACTER IN INTERESTING WILD ADVENTURES

Bryant Washburn in

FILLING HIS OWN SHOES

Essanay—K-E-S-E.

DIRECTOR	Harry Beaumont
AUTHOR	Henry C. Rowland
SCENARIO BY	Harry Beaumont
AS A WHOLE	Impossible adventure story made very human by little touches
STORY	Shoe clerk to war hero, afterwards become heir to millionaire Turk—some plot!
DIRECTION	Made it almost convincing by scores of little human bits that are sure-fire anywhere
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally excellent
LIGHTINGS	Generally good; a few bits too uniform
CAMERA WORK	Very good
STAR	Delightful in registering little human touches
SUPPORT	Very good
EXTERIORS	Not many, but very satisfactory
INTERIORS	Quite satisfactory; a few very good
DETAIL	Unusual because of story, but satisfactory
TIME	Sixty minutes (5 parts)

ALTHOUGH this story is far from "Skinner's Dress Suit" as to plot, Bryant Washburn registers another personal hit because of the little human touches injected into the characterization, by his work and the touches provided by Producer Harry Beaumont.

The story was pretty wild, having to do with a shoe clerk in a Paris store who met a wealthy young lady, who afterwards turned him down when she learned that he was fitting shoes, with the result that he got mad, beat up his boss, who had double-crossed him, and then just fell into the arms of an English lord, who was going to the front as a Red Cross surgeon, with the result that he landed there, saved a millionaire Turk in a skirmish with outposts, which incident ended when he was handed the fortune of two millions and a half from the old Turk in addition to the guardianship of three beautiful dames.

One of these girls was some bird! She was the girl who played Roxana—I think her name is Virginia Vall. Believe me, that young lady is going to be heard from because she put over a few little scenes that were "big." She has those naughty half-closed eyes that are real vampirish and yet carry sympathy, and certainly she has all the poise and repose of a finished star.

The plot thickened when Mr. Washburn became possessed of these three beautiful dames, particularly when Roxana, this tiger beauty, persisted in telling him every time she bumped into him that she loved him.

Meanwhile the English lord wanted to marry Roxana and our new millionaire had rushed off to Constantinople to tell him that he was crazy for wanting to marry a tigress who had no social position, etc., etc. We then found Friend Roxana trying to kill Mr. Washburn's real girl because he seemed to like her. This real girl was the daughter of the president of the shoe company our hero had formerly worked for, and she had been his inspiration to do something better than trying on shoes.

They registered a lot of excellent titles in this, many of them being good for laughs, with others splendid as speech titles. There were a number of little bits of philosophy which will get over, and they managed to get a laugh during the battle scene, by having our former shoe clerk bump into a guy with a long muff on his face who had, early in the film, bought a pair of shoes of our hero in the Paris store. On the battlefield Washburn told him he would send him where they didn't wear shoes.

They missed one excellent opportunity in this when they failed to pull a good scene between our hero and the wealthy snob who had turned him down so flatly when he returned from Turkey, possessed of the millions and the three beautiful dames. This would have been a wonderful opportunity for some good stuff, but for some reason they hurdled right over it with a title which restered this girl and her aunt as having been hired as haperones for the three wards of Mr. Washburn. This arred very badly, because it seemed that his chief purose in trying to be some one, was to make this snob vant to know him, and here they were all of a sudden vith her working for him, without any scene to register vhat happened when he came home and said he was a illionaire.

Mr. Washburn made a particular hit in the Skinner ictures doing a certain sort of bashful, awkward hero. Ie registered many good touches in this which sugested Skinner, and in many ways the character was the ame type, although the wild adventures in this story vere decidedly different from the little human incidents vhich entered into the life of our friend Skinner.

Hazel Daly, who appeared with Mr. Washburn in the Skinner series, was also the heroine in this, and her work vas very pleasing.

The other members of the cast were quite satisfactory. They were Lydia Dalzell, Roderick La Rock, Julien Barton, Helen R. Ferguson, Alice Hawley, Arthur Metcalfe and Louise Long.

The Box Office Angle

I believe that you can figure this as a very good bet. To be sure that your patrons will understand what sort of a production this is, I would explain carefully that Mr. Washburn appears in a character similar to that of Skinner, who gets mixed up in adventures that are much wilder than anything Skinner ever dreamed of. That should interest all those who have enjoyed the first two Skinner pictures, and it is a good, honest description of the production, because, despite the wildness of the plot, the character is kept very human.

You might play this offering up in this manner: "Can you imagine Bryant Washburn, who appeared in 'Skinner's Dress Suit,' in a character similar to that of Skinner, being converted from a shoe clerk into the millionaire heir of a Turkish Pasha, who also bequeathed to him three beautiful girls from his harem? See 'Filling His Own Shoes.'"

VERY INTERESTING MYSTERY MELO SHOULD GO BIG

Barbara Castleton in

ON TRIAL

Essanay

(First National Exhibitors Circuit)

DIRECTOR ..... James Young
ADAPTED FROM THE PLAY BY ..... Elmer Reizenstein
SCENARIO BY ..... James Young
AS A WHOLE ..... Murder mystery kept interesting by dissolve cut-back development
STORY ..... Decidedly complicated because of construction, but develops excellent suspense; lacks sufficient comedy relief to keep suspense from breaking with many DIRECTION ..... Permitted some overplaying, but this justified by meller situations; held interest and gave very satisfactory atmosphere; close-ups and dissolve technique very good
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Generally very good
LIGHTINGS ..... Many effective; all satisfactory
CAMERA WORK ..... Excellent; dissolves blended nicely
SUPPORT ..... Well chosen; overplaying excused because of situations
EXTERIORS ..... Satisfactory
INTERIORS ..... Good
DETAIL ..... Good
TIME ..... Sixty-eight minutes (5 parts)

WHEN this play first registered as a big success in New York it was commented on everywhere as a remarkable example of dramatic construction, since the author had taken the film cut-back idea and applied it to the stage. On the screen we get much of the same suspense which marked the play, although in many of the scenes the situations fall somewhat short of the power they held on the stage, because of the absence of the impressive lines in the play.

Considered as a whole, however, this is an excellent melodrama, carrying an interesting story that holds from start to finish because the fast-moving development compels attention. There were a good many places where the actors "acted" quite a bit more than was necessary, but the average audience will not note this particularly, because the scenes are of such a character as to make the acting harmonize somewhat.

The story has to do with a murder case which develops out of a situation where a business man learned that the wife of his friend was a girl who had been taken by him years before, when she was just a youngster, to a country hotel over night, under the delusion that she was to be married the next morning.

The willun forced the wife to come to his home, which brought a misunderstanding with her husband when he discovered that she had been there, and all of these points when brought out at the trial made some very attention-compelling situations.

At the end a secretary, who had not been suspected, was forced to a confession through being caught in a lie in testimony he had given.

Many of the lightings in this were very good, and the tempo of the trial scenes moved at a speed which made it necessary to watch the screen very carefully at all times in order to follow the story.

The many dissolves and cut-backs may make this dramatic construction somewhat confusing to some patrons, but considered on the whole I'd say that this will register as a very satisfactory melodrama—one which is really pleasing—and we all know that there are few enough melodramas that actually register as satisfactory.

In the supporting cast were Patrick Calhoun, James Young, Sydney Ainsworth, John Cossar, Little Mary MacAlister and Corinne Uzzell.

The Box Office Angle

Because of the success of this play—it having had a two years' run in New York—you should be able to do good business with it. It is a mystery melo with quite some acting, but I believe it will register as very satisfactory because it follows the play very carefully and you will hardly find any of your fans criticising the construction.

By way of arousing interest I would say that this very successful play was the first occasion where an author took the screen technique to apply to the stage, with the consequence that this was particularly well adapted for presentation in the films.

You can safely play up Barbara Castleton as having appeared opposite H. B. Warner in "God's Man," and as one of the stars of "Parentage." Emphasize in all of your billing, however, that this is a picturization of the stage success.

MILE-A-MINUTE MELLER OF OLD STORY—TOO FAST TO IMPRESS

Allen J. Holubar in

THE FIELD OF HONOR

Butterfly—Universal

DIRECTOR.....Allen J. Holubar
AUTHOR.....Brand Whitlock
SCENARIO BY.....Elliott J. Clawson
CAMERAMAN.....Roy H. Klaffki
AS A WHOLE....Bing-bang speed meller with action and acting
STORY.....Well-known coward situation with lover who protected coward husband's name
DIRECTION....Gave many smoke-befuddled battle scenes, tempo bad, and permitted overplaying, director doing much of it himself
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent
LIGHTINGS.....Some very fine; many too uniform
CAMERA WORK.....Good, except lightings
STAR.....Actory
SUPPORT.....They "acted," too
EXTERIORS.....Some good locations
INTERIORS.....Good
DETAIL.....Good, although illogical at times
TIME.....Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

THIS thing ran a mile a minute from start to finish, with the dramatic sequences and incidents which should have registered as pathos, cut at the same tempo as the battle stuff. As a consequence it became just a lightning-like series of short flashes that failed utterly to impress as real.

The story was the time-honored situation of the girl who chose one of two lovers, this choosing being put over in the same hurried manner as everything else seemed to be about this film, with both men going into the Civil War, where one proved a hero, and the other a coward.

Hero returned to the coward's wife and explained how brave her husband had been and how he had died leading the charge. When the widow was about ready to marry hero, the coward husband loomed up again, having crawled from the battlefield, wounded by a shot in the back when he tried to run away.

Of course, on the finish he had to shoot himself in order to allow hero and shero to get together—which they did very promptly—with the wife seeming to have no regrets whatever. As a matter of fact, she was hardly suffering in the least from the shock of the harrowing incidents of the evening.

There was an awful lot of battle stuff in this, with smoke-pots galore working all over the landscape, and hero seated upon a prancing charger, directing the movements of his gallant troops. If this junk had not been done 8,063 times it might get over. But to-day a lot of battle stuff doesn't mean anything unless it is made human by the intimacy which Griffith gave his battle scenes, through the introduction of characters who were plunged into the midst of the fighting.

The chief fault with this was that all of the sequences and incidents were cut at the same speed as the battle stuff. It moved too fast to permit it ever getting a grip on you, and there were so many two- and three-foot flashes that it seemed like Keystone Komedy cutting at times.

In the supporting cast were Millard K. Wilson, Louise Lovely, Sidney Dean, Helen Wright and Frank MacQuarrie.

The Box Office Angle

Possibly this surface-action melodrama with a lot of ordinary "movie" people acting muchly can be gotten by in some communities, but, unless I am mistaken in my judgment as to the intelligence of the average community audience, this will fail to make a very favorable impression. There was too much speed, too much of the shallow surface melodrama and too little that registered as truly human. Since the story is a very well-known Civil War plot, with the usual footage of smoke-covered battlefields, I can't figure that there is anything distinctive for you to advertise.

From the money-getting angle, I don't "see" this. Louise Lovely is hardly a box office bet, and I wouldn't consider Allen Holubar a name capable of pulling business. The title of this doesn't mean anything in particular—despite the fact that Goldwyn has announced a production by the same name.

Mid-Northwest Trade Journal

AMUSEMENTS

Four Thousand Theaters in Eight Live States
Established 1914. Published Weekly.

Thomas J. Hamlin, Managing Editor.

T. E. Mortensen, Business Manager.

Lumber Exchange, Minneapolis, Minn.

A Binder

for WID'S

$1.50 Prepaid Everywhere

ONLY

TWO WEEKS

MORE

AND WE'LL MEET IN CHICAGO

M. P. EX. LEAGUE OF AM.
N. A. OF M. P. ADV. INC.
N. A. OF M. P. INDUSTRY
F-I-L-M CLUBS OF AM.
THE SOCIETY OF M. P. ENGINEERS

WILL ALL MEET IN THE COLISEUM
JULY 14-22

FOR SPACE APPLY TO

LUDWIG SCHINDLER

Manager, Seventh National Convention and Exposition,

1416 Masonic Temple,

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

WILLIAM F. ALDRICH
FEATURE PRODUCER
Screen Club, 117 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG CORP.

BERT CARBER
TECHNICAL DIRECTOR
THANHOUSER SCREEN CLUB

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

HAL CLARENDON
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL

J. GORDON EDWARDS
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
PRODUCING
Clara Kimball Young Features

JACK HARVEY
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
Producer of
"PARENTAGE"

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
PRODUCING FEATURES
Ivan Film Corp.

LLOYD INGRAHAM
MANAGEMENT
GRIFFITH-FINE ARTS STUDIOS

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR
Frohman Amusement Corporation

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

HARLEY KNOLES
FEATURE DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

O. A. C. LUND

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE PRODUCER
B. A. Rolfe-Metro Pictures Corporation

EUGENE NOWLAND
PRODUCING FEATURES

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITAGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

FREDERIC SULLIVAN
DIRECTOR THANHOUSER
Screen Club

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
PRODUCING FEATURES
VITAGRAPH

JAMES VINCENT
PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

JAMES YOUNG

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Address—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM

A MAGAZINE—IN FACT A SERVICE

WID'S

INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS

Always Independent Issued Every Thursday VOL. III. THURSDAY, JUNE 28, 1917. NO. 26 25 Cents a Copy $10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

THE ROLL OF HONOR!!

These features have at least five reports, and all have a combined average for Pleased Patrons and Box Office of 80 per cent or more.

In the case of several Features having the same percentage, we have placed the one with the higher percentage of repeats first.

Reports	Features	Company	% P. P.	% B. O.	Repeats
7	Birth of a Nation	Griffith	100	100	6
7	Easy Street	Mutual-Chap.	97	100	7
5	The Floorwalker	Mutual-Chap.	97	100	2
14	The Americano	Triangle	99	97	11
7	The Rink	Mutual-Chap.	96	99	6
9	The Square Deal Man	Triangle	97	98	5
9	A Poor Little Rich Girl	Artcraft	96	97	7
14	Truthful Tulliver	Triangle	98	95	9
5	The Goose-Girl	Paramount	95	95	4
35	Hulda From Holland	Paramount	95	94	23
18	Snow-White	Paramount	94	95	10
13	Miss George Washington	Paramount	94	94	10
8	The Ne'er Do Well	Lesser-Special	94	94	6
5	Skinner's Dress Suit	K. E. S. E.	96	91	4
16	The Matrimaniac	Triangle	93	94	8
26	Under Two Flags	Fox	94	92	17
10	The Cure	Mutual-Chap.	93	93	5
5	Cinderella	Paramount	88	98	2
23	Peggy	Triangle	94	91	15
10	Still Waters	Paramount	95	91	6
13	The Devil's Double	Triangle	92	93	7
23	Manhattan Madness	Triangle	94	91	12
6	The Serpent	Fox	92	93	1
10	The Iron Claw	Serial	92	93
19	Rags	Paramount	91	93	5
15	Bought and Paid For	World	91	91	10
18	Hell's Hinges	Triangle	93	89	11
8	Shielding Shadow	Serial	91	91
14	American Aristocracy	Triangle	92	89	8
10	Mister Forty-Four	Metro	88	93	4
7	Behind the Screen	Mutual-Chap.	89	91	5
9	Prince and the Pauper	Paramount	92	88	4
5	Destruction	Fox	86	94	1
9	Out of the Drifts	Paramount	90	89	3
5	Graustark	K. E. S. E.	88	90	4
17	The Sin Ye Do	Triangle	93	84	10
14	The Habit of Happiness	Triangle	92	85	5
18	The Wolf Woman	Triangle	87	90	6
6	The Desert Man	Triangle	88	89
25	Little Lady Eileen	Paramount	87	89	10
19	Rreturn of Draw Egan	Triangle	89	87	7
5	Green Stockings	Vitagraph	87	88	2
12	The Battle Cry of Peace	Vitagraph	95	80	4
22	An Apostle of Vengeance	Triangle	88	87	4
18	The Cheat	Paramount	94	80	12
16	The Count	Mutual-Chap.	88	86	8
5	The Girl of Yesterday	Paramount	88	86	2
23	Silks and Satins	Paramount	85	88	16
23	The Bugle Call	Triangle	94	80	8
20	East Lynne	Fox	87	86	9
25	Reggies Mixes In	Triangle	93	80	11
10	Romeo and Juliet	Fox	87	86	4
29	Flirting with Fate	Triangle	87	86	11
15	The Common Law	Selznick	83	90	5
6	Seven Sisters	Paramount	87	86	1
6	The Soul of a Woman	Metro	93	80	1
10	The Old Homestead	Paramount	88	84	7
10	Wild Flower	Paramount	90	82	6
8	My Official Wife	Vitagraph	90	82	4
13	Back of the Man	Triangle	91	81	5
5	Tess of the Storm Country	Para.-Spec.	88	84	2
18	Fifty-Fifty	Triangle	89	83	6
12	Poor Litle Peppina	Paramount	87	84	6
9	God's Country and Woman	Vitagraph	84	87	4
22	Home	Triangle	91	80	9
11	The Eternal Sapho	Fox	84	87	4
11	The White Raven	Metro	86	85	4
12	The Weaker Sex	Triangle	88	83	1
6	Dawn of a To-morrow	Paramount	83	88	1
9	Molly Make-Believe	Paramount	87	83	5
13	Corner in Colleens	Triangle	84	82	6
6	Shadows and Sunshine	Pathe	93	77	3
8	Two Orphans	Fox	84	86	3
15	Her Double Life	Fox	86	84	4
8	The Hungry Heart	World	87	83	2
17	The Good-Bad Man	Triangle	89	81	4
5	Dulcie's Adventure	Mutual	88	82	1
7	The Eternal City	Para.-Spec.	93	76	4
7	Bella Donna	Paramount	92	77	4
5	The Innocence of Lizette	Mutual	87	82
17	The Flying Torpedo	Triangle	58	80	5
8	Helena of the North	Paramount	87	81	2
7	Madame Butterfly	Paramount	80	86	1
8	Little Mary Sunshine	Pathe	90	78	1
5	The Pinch Hitter	Triangle	99	69
11	Patria	Serial	86	82
7	Undine	Bluebird	80	81	5
16	Ashes of Embers	Paramount	84	84	5
7	Island of Regeneration	Vitagraph	85	81	4
6	Mice and Men	Paramount	84	82	3
6	A Man and His Soul	Metro	83	83	3
6	Pretty Sister Jose	Paramount	84	82	4
6	Chimmie Fadden	Paramount	91	75	1
16	The Combat	Vitagraph	82	81	1
7	Camile	World	86	79	3
18	His Picture in the Papers	Triangle	90	75	5
11	Carmen	Paramount	82	83	5
19	Plain Jane	Triangle	88	77	5
5	David Harem	Paramount	87	78	1
5	The Little Girl Next Door	Essanay-Spec.	77	87	3
5	Chimmie Fadden Out West	Paramount	88	76	2
22	The Social Secretary	Triangle	90	74	3
9	The Promise	Metro	81	83	2
5	The Virginian	Paramount	85	79	1
5	Prince of Graustark	K. E. S. E.	84	80	1
5	What Will People Say?	Metro	80	84
8	A Gentleman from Indiana	Paramount	86	78
15	A River of Romance	Metro	87	76	7
6	Excuse Me	Pathe	90	73	3
12	Trail of the Lonesome Pine	Paramount	75	88	3
8	Where Are My Children?	Universal-Spec.	79	84	2
18	Man from Bitter Roots	Fox	82	81	1
11	The Last Man	Vitagraph	82	81
6	Kindling	Paramount	81	82
12	The Rise of Susan	World	79	83	6
6	Madame X	Pathe	71	90	3
5	The Yellow Passport	World	82	80	2
5	Alice In Wonderland	Eskay-Harris	76	86	1
8	The Silent Battle	Bluebird	78	84
15	The Gun Fighter	Triangle	76	85	10
6	The Libertine	Mammouth	83	78	4
5	The Soul of Broadway	Fox	83	78	1
14	The Disciple	Triangle	85	76	3
16	Gloria's Romance	Serial	78	83
5	Man from Mexico	Paramount	90	70	2
14	Bullets and Brown Eyes	Triangle	85	75	3
8	The Wall Between	Metro	78	82	1

SPY MYSTERY MELO IS INTERESTING, BUT HAS TOUCHY COMPLICATION

William Desmond in

PAWS OF THE BEAR

Kay Bee—Triangle

DIRECTOR ..... Reginald Barker
AUTHOR ..... J. G. Hawks
CAMERAMAN ..... Robert Newhard
AS A WHOLE ..... Interesting spy-mystery stuff, although American helping German rather bad with war on STORY ..... Very slender, being for most part war hokum with spies dodging one another and much searching
DIRECTION ..... Gave splendid war atmosphere at first, but shipboard searching and melo finish dragged at times
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Generally good; not exceptional
LIGHTINGS ..... Good! not many effects
CAMERA WORK ..... Generally good
STAR ..... Quite satisfactory; not much to do but pose
SUPPORT ..... Satisfactory
EXTERIORS ..... Good atmosphere
INTERIORS ..... Good; although staterooms on boat quite elaborately furnished
DETAIL ..... Generally good; although American opposing Russian, helping German bad stuff
TIME ..... Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

FIGURED as a mystery suspense story with much action and a lot of spy stuff which had elements of both comedy and melodrama, this will register generally as interesting, although it has one very bad situation, in that throughout the story we find an American playing against two Russian spies who are trying to secure some papers carried by a German spy.

With this country at war with Germany, I fear that it is a mistake to show an American assisting a German, even though at the finish the title says that the papers were not hostile to Russia.

It would seem that this picture was produced before war was declared, which is undoubtedly the reason for the arrangement of the characetrs. Since the German spy was plainly a German, it would have been very difficult to have made him anything else, and the only thing which could have been done—which, to my mind, would have helped decidedly—would have been for the American to have turned the papers over to the German on the finish with the explanation that he had advised the government as to their contents, with the result that the German was captured immediately afterwards with the papers in his possession. This could have been done without making any change whatever in the picture, except to show one scene of the German arrested on the finish, with a few titles changed. By doing this the American's actions would have registered as though he were an American Secret Service man working under cover, who simply kept the Russian spies from getting the papers for personal reasons, since he knew that he would be able to protect their interests by turning them over to this country.

There were some bad coincidences in this. For instance, one of the Russian spies—the girl—had been saved by the young American, only to bump into him on the boat afterwards as the friend of the German, and this friendship between the German and the American was pulled as another terrible coincidence. There was possibly a little too much searching of the American's stateroom on the ship, and surely they had very elaborate beds in both of these staterooms.

The early part of the story started off with a lot of war atmosphere, which was particularly well handled, there being much blowing up of buildings, etc., which looked as if they were using some footage of the destruction of the "Civilization" sets, which, since then, have probably been shot into a good many other releases, taken from different angles. The Ince Studios get credit for all this, however, because there is no noticeable duplication, although the average wise fan will probably recall having seen similar stuff in other Ince pictures.

The bit of the escape, where Bob McKim as the Russian spy dropped a torpedo from an airplane so that it annihilated an entire firing squad, which was about to shoot the hero and heroine, was very well done. I saw Mr. McKim doing this very same torpedo stunt in another William Desmond production—"Paddy O'Hara"—but then it is quite probable that the average fan will not recall this.

Most of the action was centered around Mr. Desmond, Mr. McKim and Clara Williams, who was the girl working as the Russian spy with McKim. All were very satisfactory.

Others in the cast were Charles K. French and Wallace Worseley.

The Box Office Angle

It is a question which you must decide as to how much William Desmond's name is worth at your box office, and it is quite possible that you can help his pulling power by registering the fact that Robert McKim and Clara Williams appear in this with him.

The chances are that the title itself will not mean much to your average fan, and so I would amplify the title in my advertising by stating that this is an interesting mystery melodrama having to do with the adventures of two members of the Russian Secret Service attempting to intercept dispatches being brought to this country. If you will play up the Secret Service spy stuff you may do some business with this, and the production as it stands holds the interest well enough to have it register as a very satisfactory program offering.

Were it not for the German-spy-American mix-up, this would be a splendid offering. Because of that angle there may be some criticism of the production, but I believe you can safely play it most anywhere without arousing any real antagonism which might in any way effect the business on the picture or bring severe criticism upon you for playing it.

There are several thrills in this, among them being the early war scenes, with the explosions, and the melodramatic finish where they pulled the good old stuff of men jumping from one automobile into another, with one auto driving along the railroad tracks to catch an express train so that the occupant might climb to the rear of the observation car of the flying "limited."

INDEPENDENT PRODUCERS:
Before Presenting Your Next Production Have
GEORGE W. BEYNON
505 Fifth Avenue, New York City.
Arrange An Orchestral Setting
THAT WILL PUT THE PICTURE OVER.

EXCEPTIONALLY PLEASING HUMAN TREATMENT OF SIMPLE PLOT

Charles Ray in

THE CLODHOPPER

Kay Bee—Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Victor L. Schertzinger
AUTHOR.....Monte M. Katterjohn
CAMERAMAN.....Paul E. Eagler
AS A WHOLE....Exceptionally human, delightful comedy and pathos contrasts beautifully developed
STORY.....Elementary situations made big by treatment
DIRECTION.....Gave convincing atmosphere and very human little touches
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good; not distinctive or artistic LIGHTINGS.....Quite acceptable; little attempt for effects
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR.....Wonderfully human characterization
SUPPORT.....Very good types
EXTERIORS....Well chosen; good small town atmosphere
INTERIORS.....Very good
DETAIL.....Some great bits
TIME.....Sixty-seven minutes (5 parts)

I BELIEVE this will ring true and register as excellent entertainment anywhere.

It is an elementary story idea which is based on situations which have been handled before in many films, but the producer and star have made it exceptionally distinctive by treatment which kept every bit of action absolutely convincing and very human.

It is unnecessary to tell you how good Charlie Ray is when you hand him one of those farmer-boy characters in which he appears as a bashful rube at first, afterwards developing into the quaint young man of the world with the touch of the hayseed in some of his actions.

While several of these situations have been used many times, they were made to seem new by the remarkably effective treatment which presented them in a distinctive atmosphere.

The story, briefly, told of a young farmer lad whose father was hard to the extent of refusing him new clothes and ordering him to work on the 4th of July. The mother secretly ordered a suit of clothes from a mail order house and worked in the fields on the holiday, so that the boy might go to the celebration with his sweetheart.

Because of the clash over this breaking of the household rules, the son went away to the city, where he wandered into a theatre to apply for a position as janitor, only to be picked up immediately by the manager who was rehearsing a new musical show. He ordered Charlie to dance, because, as the manager said, "You may be kidding me, but you look like the real thing."

The farmer boy did a few rube steps and was immediately signed with the show, with the result that, while it was necessary to push him on the stage in order to get over his stage fright, he was the "hit" of the production.

They then pulled the good old stuff of father's bank being in trouble, while the newspapers proclaimed that son was getting ten thousand a week as a dancer, and son came home to rescue father, at the request of his sweetheart and mother.

While this is old stuff, it was very well done and logically developed through the newspaper insert of the press agent's yarn about the ten thousand a week serving as a help in stemming the tide of unrest which was causing the depositors to sweep all the cash from father's bank.

The charmed manager, who had made such a success with his new find, had given Charlie a bonus check of five thousand dollars, and he came home with five thousand dollars in one-dollar bills, which, of course, looked like a million to the small-town pubic.

They finished off with the announcement that Charlie had married his sweetheart the night before in New York.

The one thing which will recommend this to anyone is the fact that it is absolutely human from start to finish, with many little touches which mix comedy and pathos.

The early scenes having to do with the boy's desire for new clothes and his pride in the mail order suit will register with a bang, and I can guarantee to you that the average community audience will consider this exceptionally pleasing entertainment. The rehearsal scenes and the bit where Ray is engaged were about as well done as anything of the sort I have ever seen. It was a bad situation made to seem absolutely logical by the ability of the star and the treatment of the director.

Others who appeared were Margery Wilson, Charles K. French, Lydia Knott and Thomas Guise.

The Box Office Angle.

After "The Pinch Hitter" and many other Ray successes that have succeeded, I would think that you should be lined up to do real business with this young man. You can safely guarantee that this is a sure-fire human comedy drama that will please everybody.

You might work on this by such lines as the following: "Did you ever order a suit by mail? See the one Charlie Ray gets in 'The Clodhopper.'" "Do you know how some dancing stars are discovered? See Charlie Ray in 'The Clodhopper.'"

I would be careful to refer to Mr. Ray's work in such pictures as "The Coward," "The Pinch Hitter," and others with which you have had unusual success, because, while you may remember this young man perfectly, others may connect him better by having their attention called to some productions in which he previously appeared.

Go to this with advertising, and get the business it merits.

THE EPITOME OF ARTISTIC TITLES

TERRIBLE MELLER MESS APPARENTLY OF ANCIENT VINTAGE

Mabel Trunnelle and Robert Conness in

THE GHOST OF OLD MORRO

Edison—K-E-S-E

DIRECTOR ..... Richard Ridgely
AUTHOR ..... James Oppenheim
CAMERAMAN ..... George W. Lane
AS A WHOLE ..... Awful movie meller of ancient type
STORY ..... Blood-and-thunder mess that finished with tragedy
DIRECTION ..... Very old school; permitted much "acting"
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Varied decidedly; frequently bad
LIGHTINGS ..... Generally ordinary; never distinctive CAMERA WORK ..... Occasionally good, clean stuff, but no attempt at vignetting or effects
STARS ..... Acted all over the place
SUPPORT ..... Even worse
EXTERIORS ..... A few splendid shots
INTERIORS ..... Ordinary
DETAIL ..... Very "meller"
TIME ..... Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

UNLESS I am a very bad guesser, this was made some years ago and has just been unloaded. If this isn't the case, Producer Ridgely should spend about six months looking at pictures to to find out what is being done in the way of production to-day.

The story was the wild-eyed blood-and-thunder meller with murders and what not, the detail touches including the cutting out of one man's tongue, with the finish showing the heroine cast from the wall of old Castle Morro, onto the rocks below, with the hero and the old hag doing a Keystone struggle on top of the wall, which ended in both falling to their death on the rocks.

All through this every one acted all over the place—and then some! The old hag was particularly bad, with many wild gestures and much throwing of the arms high in the air to rave.

I can't feel that even in a transient house where blood-and-thunder is enjoyed, that this will be accepted as even good "movie" stuff, because the entire treatment is so much like what we used to see many years ago that I refuse to consider any class of fans so far behind the times as to think this worth while.

There was nothing about the production to suggest that it had been made recently, so that I can't help but guess that it is an old-timer that has just been dug up.

In the cast were Helen Strickland, Bigelow Cooper, Nellie Grant and Herbert Prior.

The Box Office Angle

Stay away from this!

It's all wrong for any house where your fans know anything about what a picture should be. It might be interesting if played with plenty of advertising to tell them they will appreciate modern pictures more if they will look over this production, which has been made as pictures used to be a few years ago. If the producers had put a humorist on the job and filled this full of comedy burlesque titles, they could have made it very funny. But evidently those responsible for shifting this into the market do not understand that film fans to-day are intelligent enough to kick when this sort of thing is wished on to them.

It is certainly unfair to the average exhibitor, who has to pick sight unseen, to shove such an awful mess as this onto him, and it is just this sort of thing which has made the open booking method of distribution the only feasible means of protecting the reputation of a theatre.

RIDICULOUS ATTEMPT TO MAKE "NAUGHTY" FRENCH FARCE

Alice Brady in

THE DIVORCE GAME

Peerless—World

DIRECTOR ..... Travers Vale
ADAPTED FROM ..... Leo Ditrichstein's "Mlle. Fifi"
CAMERAMAN ..... Philip Hatkin
AS A WHOLE ..... Laborious attempt at French comedy
STORY ..... Naughty situations failed to be funny
DIRECTION ..... Poor technique in lightings and grouping, with all characters acting so that they missed fire
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Ordinary; sometimes poor
LIGHTINGS ..... Generally ordinary; occasionally good for sets; generally poor for faces
CAMERA WORK ..... Ordinary
STAR ..... Badly handicapped
SUPPORT ..... Tried to be "French"
EXTERIORS ..... Ordinary
INTERIORS ..... Lacked distinction
DETAIL ..... A bit "naughty" at times
TIME ..... Sixty-six minutes (5 parts)

CERTAINLY no audience will ever consider this real entertainment.

It is an attempt to make a French comedy with several naughty situations and many actors trying to prove that they are playing French characters by making stagey French gestures, with the net result that the whole offering just drags along to a finish without ever striking a human note.

The plot—if it can be called one—has to do with the difficulties of a young couple who try to get money from the bride's mother by faking a divorce, because the mother had so arranged things that her money could not be used by the bride as long as she was married to the young Frenchman.

There were many mix-ups in which several characters figured, with some of the scenes dangerously near the "naughty, naughty" stage, this being emphasized by the fact that the characters frequently referred to the naughtiness of the situations.

Just to prove that it was a real devilish (?) offering, they also used "devil" and "damn" several times in the titles.

On the finish they pulled a duel, with the wife rushing in to stop the combat, and the actress, who had been the other woman, arrived at the same time to straighten matters out. It was rather a question as to how the actress knew where the duel was being fought, since the letter informing her of it simply stated that her sweetheart was to meet a man on "the field of honor." I wonder if they had a sign board up labeled "This is the Field of Honor," with other guide-posts pointing the way to it?

The lighting all through this was rather ordinary, with little or no attempt to get the best results on the faces of the characters. This was particularly noticeable as to Miss Brady, who sometimes was shown to disadvantage. There were many scenes played for much footage from the same angle, which became very tiresome, and much of the grouping was decidedly poor.

Miss Brady did her best to carry some of the scenes by appearing vivacious, but her artificial character killed the effectiveness of her work.

John Bowers tried hard to register with the handicap of instructions which had apparently ordered him to be very Frenchy, and Arthur Ashley was unintentionally funny many times because of his attempts to create French atmosphere by his gestures.

Others who appeared were Kate Lester, Joseph Herbert, John Drumier and Marie Lavarre.

The Box Office Angle.

I fear that most any audience after looking this over will come out with a decidedly ingrown disposition—as farce it fails to be funny, and certainly it never qualifies as anything else. There is nothing as pathetic as un-funny farce, and that's about all this is—except for the naughty touch, which will not appeal to the average audience.

It was apparent that they had spent enough money on this to have made a good picture, so that the failure to secure results must rest with the story and direction. In one place they registered the situation of an automobile being abandoned in front of a train so that it could be wrecked, and it was truly sad the way they handled this, because there was nothing approaching a thrill in the car being struck by the train, and it only seemed a wanton waste of money, even though the car was only damaged to the extent of forty or fifty dollars. This scene accomplished nothing from any viewpoint.

If your fans are intelligent and discriminating, I would certainly dodge this, because it never gets anywhere. It is just a lot of scenes tied together with a very few laughs, which are for the most part registered because of some bit of rough stuff which will not appeal to the best of your patrons. Even an audience which ordinarily accepts program offerings will probably vote thumbs down on this.

As a sample of some of the "naughty" spots in this, they pulled one title which will certainly register as a "bad boy." The young husband and wife were pretending to be separated, and the boy's father, who was an old roue, was talking to the girl's mother. Mother said: "Your son has a sweetheart, who visits him three times a week." Father replied: "Ah, my capable son! . . . He is surely a chip of the old block!" Rough stuff! —and being French doesn't excuse it!

ORDINARY MOVIE OF LOVERS' MIXUP LACKS SYMPATHY TOUCH

Sessue Hayakawa and Vivian Martin in

FORBIDDEN PATHS

Lasky—Paramount

DIRECTOR.....Robert T. Thornby
AUTHOR.....Eve Unsell
SCENARIO BY..Beatrice C. De Mille and Leighton Osmun
CAMERAMAN.....James C. Van Trees
AS A WHOLE.....Lovers' mix-up that never impressed
STORY.....Failed to register effectively at any time
DIRECTION.....Permitted some overplaying and much unnecessary continuity, which marred effectiveness of whole
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent; occasionally poor
LIGHTINGS.....Many very effective bits
CAMERA WORK.....Generally excellent; occasionally off
STARS.....Pleasing; worked hard to make situations impressive
SUPPORT.....Rather actory
EXTERIORS.....Some very good; others ordinary
INTERIORS.....Very good
DETAIL.....Good
TIME.....Fifty-nine minutes (5 parts)

THIS was only a movie, because it lacked the human note which would make it convincing, and consequently worth while. The players seemed to be acting, rather than presenting human characters, and as a result the incidents failed to impress. An average audience will watch this through without ever taking it very seriously.

The story centered about Miss Martin as the heroine, who was loved by a Jap, who had been befriended by her father, and by a young American who had gone to Mexico and foolishly married an adventuress there.

After much footage showing that the young American repented his slip, and that the Jap loved our shero, we found the finish at hand with the Jap taking the hero's wife out in a launch, which he scuttled in deep water so that she would not interfere further with the possible happiness of the shero and the American.

Some one may have doped it out that this would be a different sort of situation and a "great idea" for a story, but, to my mind, this sort of thing fails absolutely to provide what the average film fan wants. We have a very unsympathetic character in the hero, who has been not only a fool, but something of a cad, having shero turned over to him by the other hero, who kills himself to do it. Since the Jap was never a logical candidate to marry the American girl, I believe it was a mistake to cast him for a part which was supposed to gain sympathy.

Miss Martin had very little to do all through the picture, save stick around and wait for the finale. Certainly, that isn't giving her a fair chance!

There were some very good lightings, and the photography was generally excellent, but occasionally we had a bit which was decidedly off. There were one or two scenes where Miss Martin and Hayakawa stood in a launch at the dock, which looked as if they had been duped. It was either this, or the printing was terrible —because these scenes varied decidedly with others in the same sequence.

The repose of Hayakawa helped somewhat in many of the situations, but the very decided overplaying of Carmen Phillips, as the vampire wife, killed the possibility of any of her scenes registering as convincing or human.

Tom Forman was satisfactory, but little more; Miss Martin was badly handicapped.

Others who appeared were James Neill and Paul Weigle.

The Box Office Angle

I am afraid that this will hardly satisfy your fans. It wanders around for a long time without ever getting anywhere in particular, and the characterizations have been drawn without the proper regard for the necessary sympathy to make them register with an audience. There was also a noticeable lack of anything approaching comedy relief, with the result that this became rather tiresome, since it dragged along in the same strain from start to finish.

The well-known Lasky lightings give a certain amount of distinction to the production, but the weakness of the story and the acting of some of the characters more than offset this merit.

STAR'S PERSONALITY AND PEP MAKE THIS ACCEPTABLE

Jackie Saunders in

A BIT OF KINDLING

Balboa—Mutual

DIRECTOR ..... Sherwood Macdonald
AUTHOR ..... Douglas Bronston
CAMERAMAN ..... William Beckway
AS A WHOLE..... Star helped "Little Rags heroine" story which had a touch of romance
STORY..... Slender, but provided some human bits
DIRECTION..... Registered many pleasing little touches
PHOTOGRAPHY..... Generally just good; occasionally very artistic LIGHTINGS..... A few fine bits; generally ordinary
CAMERA WORK..... Varied from fine to fair
STAR..... Pleasing personality, with pep and appeal
SUPPORT ..... Acceptable
EXTERIORS..... Some very fine; others ordinary
INTERIORS ..... Good
DETAIL.... Rather convenient, but some nice little touches
TIME..... Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

THIS is not an elaborate offering, but, figured as a program release, it will probably register as very satisfactory with the average fan, because it is confined for the most part to an exposition of Jackie Saunders' personality, with plenty of opportunity for her to dash around and do cute things. Miss Saunders has pep and a freshness which suggest youth and the fullness of life, and throughout the offering she holds the sympathy, registering many nice little appealing bits that will certainly "get" most any one.

The story tells of one of our well-known "rags" heroines who lived in store boxes and was quite able to take care of herself, sometimes feeling sufficiently capable as to attempt to take care of other people.

After having butted into a little mix-up where the hero was being kicked in the ear by some roughnecks, she was tossed into a box car with the hero, who had been robbed, in a stunned condition, and the next morning they awoke to find themselves far from home.

This little adventure sort of appealed to hero, who took a job on the railroad as section hand, and failed to communicate with his friends. Later heroine blew in, and our ragged shero pulled the sacrifice stuff and wandered into the world, with the result that she was adopted by a very wealthy man, who sent her to a boarding-school, and all the usual junk.

Eventually, of course, hero came to the benefactor's home on business, and they pulled the clutch just about the time the old, white-haired benefactor was getting ready to ask Miss Saunders to marry him.

They had quite a little dog stuff in this, and a lot of little human touches that will register generally, so that, while the story itself fails to impress as anything except a skeleton upon which to hang the cute bits of business, still I believe the production will be considered satisfactory entertainment.

In the cast were Arthur Shirley, J. P. Wade, Edward Jobson, Charles Dudley, Ethel Ritchey and H. C. Russell.

The Box Office Angle

Of course, you should know just how good Jackie Saunders is in your community as a box office bet, and I've a hunch that, if you haven't given this much thought, it is worthy of consideration, because she knows how to register little touches that are sure-fire audience stuff, and I believe that she is rather a well-liked young lady.

This is little more than just a "good" program offering, but at least there is no wild melodrama, and it is rather entertaining in spots.

VERY POOR MOUNTED POLICE MELO WITH BAD SLIPS

Jack Gardner in

LAND OF LONG SHADOWS

Essanay—K-E-S-E

DIRECTOR..... W. S. Van Dyke
AUTHOR..... W. S. Van Dyke
AS A WHOLE..... Draggy, poorly handled Mounted Police melo
STORY..... Lacked incident and has been done many times
DIRECTION..... Poor grouping, bad handling of one important situation, with poor tempo throughout PHOTOGRAPHY..... Varied decidedly; generally very ordinary
LIGHTINGS..... Poor
CAMERA WORK..... Poor, with a few good spots
STAR..... Camera-conscious; acted too much
SUPPORT..... Amateurish
EXTERIORS..... A few good shots; camp scenes poor
INTERIORS..... Ordinary; poorly lighted
DETAIL..... Poor; bad errors
TIME..... Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

MANY years ago Oscar Lund made Northwest Mounted Police stuff much better than this in two or three reels for American Eclair.

This started off with footage that dragged and dragged, introducing hero, heroine and the Mounted Police officer in a camp which never at any time convinced as a real camp.

There was an old drunk who was wished into many of these scenes, who became very tiresome, and after much footage they worked around to the hero's escape after shooting a man in defense of the shero, with hero and shero living in the mountains far away, where the "Mounted" who had pursued him was obligingly transferred so that he could recognize hero and start after him again.

This all led up to a scene in the hero's cabin where the Mounted officer was taken after being injured in a fall, and we had a truly funny attempt at light effects where shero was to signal to hero by removing the shade from the side of the lamp, and then putting it back. Since the willun—or rather the Mounted officer, who was only a willun as the law made him such—stood between this lamp and the window many times, which would have had the same effect as the shade, I would like to know how the hero was to get the signal properly. At all events, he finally "got" it and came to the cabin, where he obligingly went back to the good old junk of agreeing to fight a duel with the officer to see whether he should live or not. They will persist in doing this duel thing instead of plugging a guy full of lead—as any human would do under similar conditions.

Of course, it finished up with the hero successful after the battle, although they brought in the good old friend, knife on the floor with hands reaching for it in many close-ups, etc. At the end hero and his wife were happy in the cabin, while the Mounted officer was chased out into the night, where the wolves ate him up.

If this were cut down to about one reel it would be fairly good, although even editing would not fix up the bad lighting in the cabin, where the lamp was supposed to be used for signaling purposes. I might mention that during the struggle this lamp was overturned and extinguished, and yet the cabin was just as light as ever. That is in accordance with "movies" of many years ago. It won't do today!

Jack Gardner as the hero tried hard to be pleasing, but the mere fact that he "tried" so hard was a handicap, because he acted too much and was very camera-conscious.

Ruth King, the heroine, was decidedly amateurish, and consequently very ineffective.

Carl Stockdale and C. J. Lionel also appeared.

The Box Office Angle.

I can't see this as entertainment, because it wanders too long between situations, with nothing but ordinary melodrama when they do have a clash. There are too many glaring errors in direction to have the average intelligent audience consider it worthy of commendation.

I would say that you should pass this over, because Jack Gardner's name means nothing in the young life of your fans, and the production does not justify your trying to get them in and make 'em like it.

There are a few good shots of snow exteriors, but not enough to in any way offset the many bad spots in the production.

I'd advise that you forget this and dig up something more human and more entertaining.

WILD MELLER WITH SOME BEAUTY SPOTS NEVER IMPRESSES

Jack Mulhall in

THE FLAME OF YOUTH

Butterfly—Universal

DIRECTOR	Elmer Clifton
AUTHOR	Willis Woods
SCENARIO BY	Karl Coolidge
AS A WHOLE	Wild bing-bang meller with some beauty spots
STORY	Dime-novel junk
DIRECTION	Picked beautiful locations, but played wild blood-an'-thunder in them
PHOTOGRAPHY	Some beautiful shots, but much ordinary stuff
LIGHTINGS	Occasionally very beautiful; generally poor
CAMERA WORK	Varied most decidedly
STAR	Routine movie juvenile
SUPPORT	An assortment of willuns and a couple of sheroes
EXTERIORS	Many beautiful seacoast shots
INTERIORS	Generally very ordinary
DETAIL	Quite meller
TIME	Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

THEY went to the trouble of taking some players to the Catalina Islands to shoot a lot of very beautiful locations in this, but the action was blood-and-thunder, wild-eyed meller that never at any time had a chance, and the net result is that most any ordinary film fan will feel pretty sore about this weird combination. Most anyone will appreciate the beauty of the seacoast shots, but those who will rave over this stuff in the most enthusiastic terms will be the very ones to condemn most emphatically the wild-eyed action.

The story is one of those things about the no-account son who is sent by father to look over some property, where he finds a brood of willuns who have to be battled with. It is the good old story of the young man sent to the logging camp, except that in this instance they changed from a logging camp to an opal mine on an island.

They started hero off with an heiress friend in the city, and then bumped him into a shero who needed to be rescued from willuns on the island, and as a consequence the hero brought Shero No. 2 home to father, as his bride.

On the finish they pulled a newspaper insert which was very good, the double iris of the action coming through the paper, being an effective bit.

They caught some very beautiful lightings in shooting the seacoast scenes, and a few of these they played across the board, getting all they could out of the same shot by chasing one character after another through the location, with some of them coming back and forth to battle, so that the "shot" could be held on the screen as long as possible.

Jack Mulhall as a juvenile is satisfactory, but the action was too wild for him to register as anything more than satisfactory.

There was a fine assortment of movie willuns, none of whom made any personal impression. The sheroes were satisfactory—nothing more.

Included in the cast were Ann Kronan, Donna Moon, Hayward Mack, Alfred Allen, Ed Brady, Fred Montague, Burton Law, Percy Challenger, Harry Morris and Harry Mann.

The Box Office Angle.

This is a very spotty production of wild action galore, with beautiful seacoast exteriors sprinkled in here and there, in such a manner that they almost jarred, because of their beauty being suddenly planted in what was otherwise a very poorly produced production. There were a few flashes of night stuff taken in the city, which were good, but the producer varied his quality so, from the ordinary studio sets to the good exteriors, that it almost seemed as if one man had made the exteriors and another the interiors.

In a house where they have been accepting Butterflies this may get over, because you can certainly promise action, and the beauty spots may impress sufficiently to offset much of the unfavorable criticism. An intelligent community audience will not be pleased with this because it is too wild.

Benjamin Chapin

Author and Director General of the Lincoln Cycle Photoplays

The Benjamin Chapin Studios and Executive Offices: Ridgefield Park, N. J.
Telephone 583 Hackensack

DELIGHTFUL COMBINATION OF PEP AND BURLESQUE ROMANCE

Mae Murray in

AT FIRST SIGHT

Famous Players—Paramount

DIRECTOR	Robert Z. Leonard
AUTHOR	George Middleton
CAMERAMAN	Charles Rosher
AS A WHOLE	Has punch, pep and many laughs
STORY	Farce meller with delightful light touch of burlesque
DIRECTION	Gave swinging tempo to meller and mixed in laughs with nice touches
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally very good; occasionally excellent
LIGHTINGS	Many very artistic and effective
CAMERA WORK	Very good
STAR	Pleasing combination of pep in action and dreamy romance in repose
SUPPORT	Well chosen types
EXTERIORS	Good small-town locations
INTERIORS	Very good
DETAIL	Some very good touches
TIME	Fifty-nine minutes (5 parts)

THIS is a great bet for light entertainment, and I believe there is nothing more desirable at the present time.

The story of this is a simple little melodramatic farce idea that has been very well handled, both from the production viewpoint and from the angle of characterizations.

Miss Murray is presented as a romantic small-town miss who dreams dreams of a great author, who, all of a sudden, comes to her town to write another of his mushy love stories. She introduced herself and drove him to the house he had rented, afterwards forcing her presence upon him until he began to notice her.

There was a light touch to the titles which helped the story development, and for the main incidents they gave us a splendid melodramatic escape from the wedding, with heroine demanding of hero that he protect her, which naturally brought interesting developments.

On the finish they had a fast-running elopement and chase, with everybody happy after father and mother learned that the young man who had kidnapped their daughter was such a famous personage.

The rube "constabule" and his assistant provided a few laughs, and several little touches registered by the housekeeper will go over big. There was one title in particular, where the housekeeper suggested the name for the new story, which will give you an idea as to the tone of all the captions. She said, "Why not call it 'Parted at the Altar, or Saved from Satan'?"

The general atmosphere of this was rather distinctive, and the action was lifted by many good bits of lighting, which helped make the offering as a whole seem a little above the average program release as to treatment.

Miss Murray will win any audience by her quick shifting from the pep of the impulsive little heiress to the romantic dreaming of the small-town girl who "just loved" those novels.

Sam T. Hardy as the author had a great many excellent scenes, and he played them perfectly.

Others who appeared were Jules Rancourt, Julia Bruns, W. T. Carlton, Edward Sturgis, Nellie Lindroth and William Butler.

The Box Office Angle

This should be a splendid bet wherever you are playing Paramount stuff, because you should be able to do some business with Mae Murray by calling attention to her having appeared in "The Plow Girl," "The Mormon Maid," "The Primrose Ring" and other Lasky offerings.

You can promise that this is an entertaining melodramatic farce that provides much action and many laughs. That combination will appeal quite generally at the present time. Ask them, "Do you believe in love at first sight?" "Do you know how some popular novels are written ?" "Would you marry a man who had made you the heroine of a novel?"

ANCIENT "RESEMBLANCE" PLOT HELPED BY LIGHTINGS

Florence La Badie in

THE WOMAN IN WHITE

Thanhouser—Pathe

DIRECTOR	Ernest C. Warde
AUTHOR	Wilkie Collins
SCENARIO BY	Lloyd Lonergan
CAMERAMAN	William M. Zollinger
AS A WHOLE	Resemblance mystery melo helped decidedly by lightings
STORY	Never really convinced, but was rather interesting
DIRECTION	Gave considerable action and some distinctive atmosphere, but didn't make incidents register as real
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally good
LIGHTINGS	Many particularly effective
CAMERA WORK	Good
STAR	Good; not exceptional
SUPPORT	Good
EXTERIORS	Just good
INTERIORS	Frequently helped by lightings
DETAIL	Acceptable, although unconvincnig
TIME	Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

AS a novel this is rather well known—or at least the name is—and because of that the production will have a certain amount of weight, even though the story as screened fails to convince or impress as real at any time.

The average audience will consider this quite worth while and better than the average program release for the one reason that the producer has used many trick lightings, which give an atmosphere of distinction to what would otherwise have been an ordinary mystery melo of the old well-known "remarkable resemblance" type.

The plot centers around the attempt of the willun to gain control of his wife's estate through placing her in an asylum under the name of the woman she resembled, who had been buried as the wife. Film fans have seen so many of these "remarkable resemblance" stories that they aren't very strong for them any more. Such a central thought in a story makes it almost impossible for the average fan to consider the incidents as real life.

Miss La Badie was quite satisfactory in the two parts, but neither the star nor any of the cast registered personalities sufficiently magnetic to lift the scenes out of the ordinary mystery melo rut.

Many times the titles jarred very badly, because they didn't jibe with the action. There was entirely too much reference made to the influence of "Fate" upon the lives of the characters.

In the cast were Richard R. Neill, Gertrude Dallas, Arthur Bower and Wayne Arey.

The Box Office Angle.

If you have been playing program releases this should get by satisfactorily, because the lightings give it a touch of distinction not found in the ordinary program offerings. The mystery of the situations arouses a certain amount of interest, and, while the production is a long way from being an exceptional film, it is one that will probably be classed as good, or at least acceptable, by the average patron.

VERY ORDINARY MOVIE LACKING INCIDENT—NEVER IMPRESSES

House Peters in

THE HEIR OF THE AGES

Pallas—Paramount

DIRECTOR	Edward J. Le Saint
AUTHOR	William Addison Lathrop
CAMERAMAN	Allan N. Davey
AS A WHOLE	Routine movie
STORY	Combination of Stone Age and modern times, with apparent ending and not much incident
DIRECTION	Failed to lift ordinary story out of rut
PHOTOGRAPHY	Just good
LIGHTINGS	Some very good; many ordinary
CAMERA WORK	Varied
STAR	Repressed-emotion-hero stuff
SUPPORT	Ordinary; girl quite camera conscious
EXTERIORS	Some good; some ordinary
INTERIORS	Not unusual
DETAIL	Acceptable
TIME	Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

BY showing a prologue of the Stone Age period, the author of this made it very clear to just what was going to happen in the modern story which followed. Neither incident carried anything that would seem to have justified the choice of this for a five-reel production.

House Peters was presented as one of those repressed-emotion-elder-brother heroes who made sacrifices to save a weaker young brother and turned the girl he loved over to him, only to win the girl in the end when brother was removed from the running.

In the modern story we had the well-known situation of Mr. Peters going to the vampire's room to rescue brother from her clutches, with the girl they both loved, trailing, so that hero had to appear to be the vampire's friend, in order that weaker brother could be kept in good standing with shero.

They then pulled a fire right away, and we had Mr. Peters rescuing the goil from the burning building, while the flame torches worked on all sides. This sort of thing might have gone over as a good film a few years ago, when most anything got by in the movies, but I don't consider it a production that should be foisted upon intelligent communities, where the fans expect really worth while offerings in the really worth while theatres.

This is just ordinary junk, fairly done, without any distinctive merit to lift it out of the rut. Mr. Peters worked hard being a sacrificing hero, with Eugene Pallette as a weak brother.

Nina Byron was very camera-conscious. Adele Farrington as the dance-hall vamp was a bit rough at times, but true to character. Henry Barrows and John Burton made up the remainder of the cast.

The Box Office Angle

I cannot figure that this is a good bet for any of you boys who have discriminating patrons attending a community house where they get together and talk over the merits of productions.

If you are catering to transient business, it may sneak by all right, but the story is a "weak sister," and there is nothing about the production that saves it. It is just "filum."

ORDINARY TREATMENT OF WEAK STORY THAT NEVER HITS

Antonio Moreno and Belle Bruce in

A SON OF THE HILLS

Vitagraph

DIRECTOR	Harry Davenport
AUTHOR	Harriet T. Comstock
SCENARIO BY	Joseph Franklin Poland
AS A WHOLE	Slow movie, lacking interesting incident
STORY	Not big from either characterization, atmosphere or action viewpoint
DIRECTION	Only fair; bad groupings and poor development of incident
PHOTOGRAPHY	Just good; not distinctive
LIGHTINGS	Lacked artistic beauty; generally very ordinary
CAMERA WORK	Ordinary
STARS	Handicapped by routine movie parts
SUPPORT	Very ordinary
EXTERIORS	Some rather good small-town locations, but not photographed to register artistically
INTERIORS	A few good; generally ordinary
DETAIL	Too much that meant nothing
TIME	Sixty-four minutes (5 parts)

THIS is presented as a picturization of a popular novel, but I fear that the average patron after seeing the offering will wonder why the novel was ever popular. The story wanders along with very little interesting incident and nothing distinctive as to characterization.

The producer has used a number of small-town locations, but he has failed to take them in such a manner as to give an artistic touch to the atmosphere, and in many places the presence of outsiders in the range of the camera marked the offering as rather amateurish.

Tony Moreno has a very pleasing personality and is generally able to do much towards saving a production, but in this instance he was so badly handicapped by the action provided that he failed to lift the characterization out of the rut.

Belle Bruce was acceptable, but didn't arouse any enthusiasm.

Others in the cast were Robert Gaillard, Julia Swayne Gordon, Florence Radinoff and William Balfour.

The Box Office Angle.

This story of how a poor boy wanted to get an education, and "just happened" to wander into the home of a man who was waiting for someone to befriend, doesn't possess the "ring true" touch that makes for real success with audiences who like human stories. The production is a very ordinary picturization of the sort of routine novelists' junk which can be sold in popular-novel form because of the air of romance built around it, although the story never really provides anything truly interesting in actual incidents dealt with.

I would suggest that you forget this, because it lacks class as to atmosphere, has no real characterization, an is without the human touch which can do so much fo this sort of story.

This is a "movie"—that's all—and the regular fan will not continue to pay out good money to see "jus movies." If you don't know this, you'd better commenc to investigate.

STARTED GREAT, BUT STORY SLUMPED—ATMOSPHERE EXCELLENT

Miriam Cooper in

THE SILENT LIE

Fox Film

DIRECTOR	Raoul A. Walsh
AUTHOR	Larry Evans
CAMERAMAN	Dal Clawson
AS A WHOLE	Excellent atmosphere and started wonderfully, but meller at end let it down
STORY	Had too many characters wandering in when wanted, which kept it from being convincing and impressive
DIRECTION	Gave excellent atmosphere and some good tempo, but slumped at finish
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally excellent, with many fine exterior shots, but occasionally poor lighting on faces
LIGHTINGS	Some excellent dance-hall stuff, with beautiful snow exteriors; but occasionally, towards end, lighted sets well and missed faces
CAMERA WORK	Generally very fine
STAR	Appealing, sympathetic personality
SUPPORT	Good types; well handled, although overplayed occasionally
EXTERIORS	Some very beautiful snow stuff
INTERIORS	Fine atmosphere
DETAIL	Very good
TIME	Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

STARTING off with some excellent dance-hall atmosphere and some beautiful exterior snow scenes, this production moved at a good speed, with many worth-while dramatic moments, for about three reels. About that time, however, characters began to drift in when needed, in a most nonchalantly convenient manner, and as a consequence the story began to slip and lose its convincing power, so that it slumped badly towards the finish.

There was plenty of action right up to the end, but when melodrama slips once, it is gone, so far as the average audience is concerned, and unless they feel that the characters are doing natural, human things all th way, the value of the dramatic scenes is seriously marred

Miriam Cooper, as the central figure of this, was quit pleasing, because she has a sympathetic, appealing per sonality that fitted nicely with the character of the hero ine, who was the persecuted daughter of a willunou dance-hall proprietor.

Producer Walsh gave us some excellent atmosphere i the first scenes and put over several clashes in the dance hall, as well as a few bits having to do with the fathe forcing his daughter to work with the other girls, whic scenes were so intelligently handled as to be trul impressive.

Unfortunately, the story failed to maintain the earl pace, and soon became quite ordinary as to incident de velopment, and this caused it to die away, despite th fact that we had excellent atmosphere to the end, wit exteriors nicely handled.

There were some scenes taken in a blizzard whic were decidedly effective, they being, in fact, as we handled as anything of this sort I have ever seen.

In the supporting cast were Ralph Lewis, Charle Clary, Howard Davies, Henry C. Barrows, Billy Eagl Shirt and Monroe Salisbury.

The Box Office Angle

The fact that this was produced by Raoul A. Walsh who made "The Honor System," may make it possibl for you to do some business with the production, an even though the melodrama missed fire at the end, yc can safely figure that the atmosphere is sufficiently di tinctive to lift this above the class of the ordinary pr gram release. Producer Walsh has really taken rath ordinary melodrama and made it comparatively impre sive by his treatment.

You might make Miriam Cooper's name of value at th box office by referring to the fact that she had a prom nent part in both "The Birth of a Nation" and "Th Honor System."

The very end of this is quite slow, there being to much footage after they got to the clutch. They shoul have quit as soon as the willun was disposed of. Tha ended the story.

WID'S Reaches 5,000 Exhibitors o the Better Theatres

We Want Reports from ALL OF YOU!

PLEASING LITTLE HUMAN BITS MAKE THIS ENTERTAINING

Rupert Julian and Ruth Clifford in

A KENTUCKY CINDERELLA

Bluebird

DIRECTOR	Rupert Julian
AUTHOR	F. Hopkinson Smith
SCENARIO BY	Elliott J. Clawson
CAMERAMAN	Steve Rounds
AS A WHOLE	Little touches and treatment made slender story entertaining
STORY	Had few situations, but provided pleasing atmosphere and good characters
DIRECTION	Registered many good comedy bits and some good human touches
PHOTOGRAPHY	Excellent
LIGHTINGS	Distinctive; excellent backlighting in exteriors
CAMERA WORK	Splendid
STARS	Mr. Julian splendid characterization; she rather camera conscious
SUPPORT	Good characters
EXTERIORS	Distinctive and artistic
INTERIORS	Very good
DETAIL	Many fine little touches
TIME	Sixty-six minutes (5 parts)

WHILE the story of this is decidedly slender, I believe the production will register as splendid entertainment most anywhere, because it provides a bit of romance with much comedy and scores of little touches that will register principally because they hit as human.

Little Zoe Rae, who appears as a little pickaninny girl, and Lucretia Harris, as Aunty Chlorindy, the colored mammy, earned more laughs than anyone else, and held up the production very decidedly.

Ruth Clifford was satisfactory, except that she frequently appeared to be camera-conscious, which marred her work somewhat.

The photography was excellent, with some truly beautiful exterior shots taken about some wonderfully pretty estates, which planted the atmosphere of luxurious Kentucky homes. Practically all of these exteriors were lighted with distinctive backlighting, which gave the entire offering an added touch of artistry that lifted the production decidedly.

There was nothing much to the story, it having to do principally with a young girl who was sent to her uncle in Kentucky, where she was made unwelcome by the uncle's second wife. Of course, we eventually found her triumphant, because the hero fell in love with her instead of the daughter of uncle's second wife, but the production gained its chief value from the many little comedy bits in which Zoe Rae as the pickaninny and other little colored children appeared.

There was an added bit of comedy nicely registered by the character of Toulumne John, played by Director Julian himself, and we had a little romance between this character and the wealthy widow, played by Gretchen Lederer.

Others in the cast were Harry Carter, Myrtle Reeves, Aurora Pratt, Eddie Polo, Emory Johnson and Frank Lanning.

The Box Office Angle.

You can safely promise that this is a very artistically produced little romantic comedy, and I'd suggest that you emphasize particularly the cute little pickaninnies, who will certainly make anyone laugh.

The plot idea is very old, and it is only the treatment of the director in providing little human touches, and the good dialect titles, which earned laughs, that save this from being just a beautiful bit of photography. The name sounds fairly good, and I would play upon it with the statement that it is exceptionally artistic and has comedy bits that will register with anyone.

UNCONVINCING PLOT AND AWFUL VAMP HANDICAPS JUVENILES

Gladys Hulette in

THE CIGARETTE GIRL

Astra—Pathe

DIRECTOR	William Parke
AUTHOR	Philip Bartholomae
AS A WHOLE	Fairly interesting action, but unconvincing story that didn't register
STORY	Fanciful marriage-to-save-fortune plot with blackmail trimmings
DIRECTION	Gave some good lightings and occasionally good treatment, but never made action convince and permitted some bad overplaying
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally very good, but occasionally hazy and lacking definition
LIGHTINGS	Generally quite effective, but occasionally poor
CAMERA WORK	Varied
STAR	Pleasing ingenue
SUPPORT	Acceptable; although acted at times
EXTERIORS	Acceptable
INTERIORS	Generally good
DETAIL	Didn't convince
TIME	Fifty-nine minutes (5 parts)

WHEN you get a plot which centers about a young millionaire marrying a cigarette girl from a restaurant, for a month, on the advice of his lawyer, so that a vamp can't collect blackmail, you immediately have a handicap, because that sort of thing must be remarkably well handled to make it convince.

Miss Hulette, Mr. Parke, Jr., and Warner Oland handled their work quite satisfactorily, but Florence Hamilton, the young wife of the willun (Mr. Oland), was permitted to act all over the place, with the result that she killed any possibility of this getting over as sure-enough happenings.

Miss Hulette was the cigarette girl in the restaurant, and Miss Hamilton was playing for young Mr. Parke's coin, with the intention of working with her willunous hubby so that they could sue for alienation of affections after the young millionaire had been properly compromised.

The lawyer of the wealthy kid recommended the marriage for a month at a salary of five thousand dollars, which put things in such shape that whenever the millionaire wanted coin he had to come to his temporary wife for it. She suspected that he was slipping the checks to the juvenile vamp, and so held out on him, and then a friend of her swiped a blank check which she had signed, and put her in bad, until she forced him to return the coin.

Of course, the cigarette girl and the millionaire got together for a sure-enough marriage at the finish.

I believe it is a mistake to put Miss Hulette in this sort of thing, because the story never convinces for a moment. She had one or two productions which were rather successful because they were quite human and convinced. They stayed away from melodrama.

The youthfulness of the vamp marred the action, and it seems a mistake to play Miss Hulette and Mr. Parke, Jr., in grown-up parts. They should be kept in kid stuff.

The Box Office Angle

I am afraid that those who fell in love with Miss Hulette's work in her first one or two production, such as "Prudence, the Pirate" and "The Shine Girl," will feel that they are now picking stories which aren't suited to this young lady. This is particularly true when her new-found hubby, young Mr. Parke, is always played opposite her—because while these youngsters do very well on the screen, they should not be presented in "grown-up" stories.

If you have been playing just ordinary program stuff, they may accept this despite the decidedly unconvincing incidents and the overplaying of the juvenile vamp, but surely I would not make any claims as to this being anything but an ordinary movie.

QUESTIONABLE MORAL IN DREAM MELO THAT DRAGS AT TIMES

Harry T. Morey and Alice Joyce in

THE QUESTION

Vitagraph

DIRECTOR.....Perry N. Vekroff
AUTHOR.....Lawrence T. McCloskey
CAMERAMAN.....Arthur T. Quinn
AS A WHOLE.....Morality problem with melo ending, alibied by dream
STORY.....Occasionally near the border, and decidedly too much along one strain, registering questionable moral DIRECTION.....Had some good scenes, but much that missed fire, and some situations and incidents that were quite ordinary
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good, but needed tinting
LIGHTINGS.....Some good; many too uniform
CAMERA WORK.....Varied
STARS.....Good, but lacked situations
SUPPORT.....Generally good; minister father awful
EXTERIORS.....Some would be fine if tinted; others ordinary
INTERIORS.....Just good; not distinctive
DETAIL.....Awful newspaper insert; other slips; tinting terrible
TIME.....Sixty-seven minutes (5 parts)

IT is a handicap in criticizing a story to have the director resort to dream alibi on the finish, because any sort of weird thing might happen in a dream.

In this instance we found a young man sworn to remain single in order that he might complete a formula, with his sweetheart agreeing to live with him without marrying him, in order that they might be happy and he still keep his word.

The girl's father, a minister, was shown to have been disgraced by her action, and on the finish they pulled a little melodrama with the lover and a willun who had offered to marry the girl, mixing it up even to the extent of the good old struggle for possession of the gun which had fallen to the floor.

We found on the finish that it had all been a dream and that the young people were to be happy without having to disgrace the family.

The title of this is "The Question." To my mind, the question is, "What was it all aimed to prove, and what did it prove?"

Ed. Davis as the minister father was awful! He acted all over the place and ruined a number of scenes which might have been very satisfactory, except for his presence. In one place he donned a felt hat which certainly did not look like the sort of headgear a minister would wear. It may be that ministers do wear such hats, and I presume that many of them do, but the point is that ministers don't, and consequently it will jar.

They had one awful newspaper insert telling about the disgrace to father, because the headlines went on to say that there was a sensation in the church and that the pastor faced dismissal if his daughter continued to defy the conventions. Believe me, newspapers don't print anything of that sort if the big blow-up in the church has not actually happened. They would be beautiful boobs to cut loose with such scandal when there was nothing authentic to work on. As a matter of fact, there could be little more disgrace to father after the publication of such story in a newspaper.

Some of the photography was very good, and some of it was ordinary. Either the sample print was the one I saw, or else the laboratory force had gone mad. There were sequences where two people were phoning, and certain of these scenes would be tinted amber, while the other would be black and white. Similar discrepancies in coloring appeared all through the film, and a great many scenes which had been beautifully backlighted were horribly printed and shown without any tint whatever—which is almost criminal, since exterior backlighting always needs a golden tint to make it truly effective. If this was a sample print, the producers should be condemned for showing the film in such form, because a majority of the reviewers have no conception of tinting and printing and other technical points, and as a consequence they would receive a very unfavorable impression, which is unfair to a production.

Others who appeared were Charles Kent, Gladden James, Amy Remley and Mr. Wangaman.

The Box Office Angle

The worst spot in this was the work of the minister father, but for an average audience this may be accepted as a good program offering because of the presence of Mr. Morey and Miss Joyce. The story is one of the ring-around-the-rosie things that never gets anywhere, but the average fan may never sit back to consider this, and while you can rest assured that they will never rave over it, surely it has a chance to be accepted.

If you are playing routine program stuff, I would let this come through without any noise, and take a chance on it sliding over quietly.

The names of Harry Morey and Alice Joyce should pull some business, and many of their admirers may think the film good, just because these stars are in it. The story runs pretty close to the narrow edge, so far as morality is concerned, and if you have a community which is particular, I would consider the thought carefully before booking.

If you skip it on moral grounds, you'll not be missing anything.

STAR'S CHARACTERIZATION MAKES THIS HOLD RIGHT WELL

George Beban in

A ROADSIDE IMPRESARIO

Pallas—Paramount

DIRECTOR ..... Donald Crisp
AUTHOR ..... George Beban
CAMERAMAN ..... Faxon M. Dean
AS A WHOLE ..... Beban lifts blackmail melo by his characterization
STORY ..... Has "Music Master"-"Lost Daughter" touch, with blackmail incident providing action
DIRECTION ..... Centered attention on characterization of star; atmosphere varied from fine to fair
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Some excellent; some poor
LIGHTINGS ..... Varied from artistic to poor
CAMERA WORK ..... Varied; not enough close-ups
STAR ..... Exceptionally appealing characterization
SUPPORT ..... Some good types
EXTERIORS ..... Some very beautiful; others ordinary
INTERIORS ..... Some excellent; some only fair
DETAIL ..... Acceptable; had convenient spots
TIME ..... Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

GEORGE BEBAN can make most any offering quite worth while. He is undoubtedly one of the most entertaining artists on the screen, because he always keeps his characterizations human.

In this story Mr. Beban was handicapped with a lot action getting down to the plot in hand, and the eatment failed to register the desired pathos where he scovered his long-lost daughter. This was partly due the direction, the lack of close-ups and faulty cutting. A blackmailing incident was introduced to provide me action, and the manner in which Mr. Beban was ade the central figure, able to rescue the hero through his getting the necessary documents while he was acting as dish cleaner in a restaurant, was rather well handled, although it was painfully convenient.

The scene where Mr. Beban stood off the attack of several men, threatening them with a meat cleaver, was good, because Mr. Beban knows how to make such scenes convincing.

Julia Faye never registered effectively, this being partly due to lack of good close-ups.

Harrison Ford, as the hero, was very pleasing, principally because of his repose and poise.

Others in the cast were Harry De Vere, Fred Huntley, Adele Farrington and W. A. Carroll.

The Box Office Angle.

In some sections Mr. Beban is very, very popular, and in others he is not getting money for the exhibitors. This may be due to the manner in which his productions are being exploited, because, personally, I consider him a wonderful entertainer. If you have been getting money with his stuff you can safely promise that he gives a very pleasing characterization in this, but I wouldn't go too strong on the praise for the production itself.

I would make a lot of noise about Mr. Beban and his pet bear, because he has some great stuff with this bear and gets the picture started with some nice human comedy that goes a long way towards giving a satisfying feeling, even after the pathetic bits have slumped somewhat.

Call attention to the recent Beban productions, such as "The Marcellini Millions," and mention his success of a year ago—"The Alien"—because some people may remember the names of the films even better than they do that of Mr. Beban.

I believe that if you will go after the more discriminating fans, you will find it comparatively easy to build a Beban following.

VERY ORDINARY MOVIE WITH MANY "PATRIOTIC" TITLES

Ethel Barrymore in

THE GREATEST POWER

Rolfe—Metro

DIRECTOR ..... Edwin Carewe
AUTHOR ..... Louis R. Wolheim
SCENARIO BY ..... Albert Shelby Le Vino
CAMERAMAN ..... Arthur Martinelli
AS A WHOLE ..... Much footage about explosive formula, loaded with titles appealing for patriotic applause
STORY ..... Wandered and wandered without a situation, until ordinary melo finish
DIRECTION ..... Failed in footage to make room for titles in manner that will probably be accepted
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Acceptable; not distinctive LIGHTINGS ..... Occasionally good, but generally hazy or poor on faces
CAMERA WORK ..... Varied
STAR ..... Little to do; did it fairly well
SUPPORT ..... Ordinary
INTERIORS ..... Acceptable
DETAIL ..... Movie stuff
TIME ..... Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

QUITE apparently this has been produced to catch the war spirit and pull applause from those inclined to give vent to their patriotism by noisy demonstration. The entire story was hinged about our good old friend, the inventor hero who had discovered the most powerful explosive in the world, with the well-known spy who wanted it for his emperor, and the heroine loved by both men. This thing has done service 394 times, at least.

There was an absolute dearth of incident building around this plot, and we simply marked time and read titles up to the finish, where the willun tried to overpower the hero and then appeal to him as a subject of the emperor to give up the formula. This, of course, provided opportunity for such titles as "Damn your emperor! . . . This is my country!" and the usual hokum of death struggle between the two.

Of course the Secret Service men rushed in and arrested the spy, and the hero and Miss Barrymore were happy ever after.

At the very first, they made it plain that this was a story about war, and they brought in a reference to Betsy Ross and registered many titles which were apparently made to stir up applause from the gallery.

As a production, considered technically, this is rotten! As a film that may please because of the patriotic titles, it moves along remarkably well, considering the ancient vintage of the story material.

Miss Barrymore had very little to do, and she did it, as usual, with a limited amount of emotional expression. Others who appeared were William B. Davidson, William Black, Fred C. Truesdell, Rudolph de Cordova, Cecil Owen, Harry S. Northrup, Frank Currier, Redfield Clark and W. M. Armstrong.

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

WILLIAM F. ALDRICH
FEATURE PRODUCER
Screen Club, 117 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG CORP.

BERT CARBER
TECHNICAL DIRECTOR
THANHOUSER SCREEN CLUB

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

HAL CLARENDON
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL

J. GORDON EDWARDS
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
PRODUCING
Clara Kimball Young Features

JACK HARVEY
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
Producer of
"PARENTAGE"

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
PRODUCING FEATURES
Ivan Film Corp.

LLOYD INGRAHAM
MANAGEMENT
GRIFFITH-FINE ARTS STUDIOS

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR
Frohman Amusement Corporation

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

HARLEY KNOLES
FEATURE DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

O. A. C. LUND

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE PRODUCER
B. A. Rolfe-Metro Pictures Corporation

EUGENE NOWLAND
PRODUCING FEATURES

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITAGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

FREDERIC SULLIVAN
DIRECTOR THANHOUSER
Screen Club

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
PRODUCING FEATURES
VITAGRAPH

JAMES VINCENT
PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

JAMES YOUNG

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Address—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM A MAGAZINE—IN FACT A SERVICE
THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM
WID'S
INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS

Always Independent Issued Every Thursday VOL. III. THURSDAY, JULY 5, 1917. NO. 27 25 Cents a Copy $10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

IMPORTANT!!!

Wire or Write Your Congressman or Senator Tonight---It's Your Duty

In talking with Harry Crandall, live wire exhibitor of Washington, D. C., when I was down in the President's home town the other day, I found that he felt the same as I have regarding the tax measure which has been before Congress. For the present it has been killed in committee, but we are not safe until it has been definitely omitted from the bill when that passes the House and Senate.

Here is your duty—and, by heck, if any one of you boys is too darn lazy to do this much, you should be taxed to such an extent that you will be forced to lock up your doors within a month!

Sit down tonight and send either a telegram or a letter to both your congressman and your senator, and thank him in enthusiastic terms for HIS having assisted in killing the tax on motion picture theatres, which would have legislated you out of business.

Now, get that clearly! You are to THANK YOUR congressman and YOUR senator for what he has done. Don't worry about whether he has done anything or not—you thank him! That registers with him in emphatic terms the fact that this situation was critical, and that you are appreciative of the fact that the bill has been killed.

Now, this is no little matter. It is a vital issue of dollars and cents! Don't depend upon the other fellow to do it—You do it! If every one of you fellows does his duty and takes it upon himself to suggest to a few friends that they do likewise, we're never going to hear anything more about this tax on theatres.

If you fellows fail to register an appreciation of what has been done, the senators and congressmen are very liable to go into session with the feeling that you exhibitors don't care what is done.

Write them tonight and THANK them for what THEY have done in stopping this drastic tax which would have placed the burden upon the poor man's amusement and probably so burdened you that you would have had to close up, which would have left the poor people without entertainment in this time of war.

Do it tonight! Don't depend on the other feller, and make it your business to tell at least five other exhibitors to do likewise. There is a reason!

EXCEPTIONALLY FORCEFUL DRAMA REGISTERING TREMENDOUS THOUGH WITH SWINGING ACTION AND VERY HUMAN CHARACTERIZATIONS. HITS HARD AND IMPRESSES.

George Loane Tucker's Production of

I BELIEVE

Tucker Production—Cosmofotofilm—Harry A. Sherman

(State Rights)

DIRECTOR.....George Loane Tucker
AUTHOR.....George Loane Tucker
CAMERAMAN.....Ernest Palmer
AS A WHOLE.....Exceptionally forceful presentation of tremendous thought, made convincing and kept interesting by treatment
STORY.....Better than a thousand sermons against atheism
DIRECTION.....Gave compelling power to dramatic action, with swinging tempo in important sequences, and convincing power to moments of pathos; made points hit hard by scenes that stirred
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent; some beautiful sunset bits
LIGHTINGS.....Very good, with little attempt for effects
CAMERA WORK.....Very good
ACTING.....Excellent; some exceptional types
EXTERIORS.....Excellent atmosphere
INTERIORS.....Very good
DETAIL.....Many good touches; generally excellent
TIME.....One hour and 30 minutes (8 parts)

THIS is one of the most forceful dramatic productions that has ever been presented on the screen. It will cause a lot of talk in any community, and certainly it hammers home a thought against atheism more forcibly than a thousand ministers could in as many sermons.

This film is to the screen what Billy Sunday is to the pulpit. Some people may fuss a little over the fact that the producer "hits you in the eye" to make you come to a full realization of the thought which he is presenting, but, nevertheless, the very strength of this drama rests in its virile, almost brutal force.

To be sure, this is a tremendous subject. Producer Tucker has presented it intelligently, forcefully and with a keen understanding of the necessity of a well balanced dramatic groundwork upon which to hang his thoughts. The offering is interesting from start to finish, is compelling at times because of the swinging tempo of the action, and, even though it becomes real red-blooded melodrama at times, it always convinces, because the producer has recognized the value of that very successful element—introducing the audience to his characters with sufficient intimacy that they see the thoughts being presented through their eyes. It was this that made Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" such a great spectacle. The audience was introduced to characters and then saw those characters plunged into a war, with the result that they saw the war through the eyes of these characters.

"I Believe" listens like a great title! Certainly it will arouse interest, and intelligent exploitation will make it a sure-fire money-getter.

The story opens with a celebrated atheist preaching in London with great success. He had taken the city by storm because of his preachments, which seemed to many to be unanswerable.

In the slums of London we found this great atheist opposed by a minister and his son, who conducted riv meetings. There was a clash between the two fa tions, and then the tide was turned by the accident death of the leader of the workmen who had be attending the atheist meetings, this change in sentime coming because the atheist's secretary refused to con to the dying man's bedside.

In a riot which followed the change of heart on t part of the workmen, both the atheist and the ministe son were injured. They were taken to the atheist home, and in his laboratory the minister's son w shocked by an electrical current, and killed. The s entist-atheist then revived this young man and sent hi out into the world, apparently his normal self.

We soon found, however, that this young man h been restored so far as physical appearance could l determined, but he was a man without a soul. T very brutality of the man was evinced upon sever occasions, coming to a climax when he had sunk the depths because no one would be his friend.

With this realization and with a mob in pursuit h ran to the home of the man who had given him lif and protested against his having been restored to phys cal existence without a soul.

Helpless to do anything to change conditions, the sc entist and the young man both prayed to God, ar with apparent success. It was at this point that bo were aroused from what we found to have been the dream. The powerful effect of these dramatic imagi ings had changed the atheist's un-belief into belief, ar so the picture closed.

The tremendous influence of this free thinker w nicely suggested by the hundreds of people used the production, and the dramatic scenes worked up a tremendous climax when we found the scientist ar his soul-less victim praying for relief, with the stree thronged with people who were at the same time pra ing that this fiendish example of the power of t free thinker should be made into a real man.

Of course, this is a tremendous subject to approac Producer Tucker deserves exceptional credit for t masterly manner in which he has handled this offerin in that he has kept it interesting, powerful drama re istering big thoughts without ever becoming pu preachment. Any audience anywhere will be interest from start to finish in the action, there is plenty good comedy relief and the swinging tempo of the dr matic moments is such as to stir an average audienc in a manner that will make them remember the pr duction for a long time.

The cast was excellent. Edna Flugrath, as the li tle cockney heroine, gave a splendid characterizatio and Milton Rossmer, as the young minister, gave a ma terly portrayal of his dual part, since he had to chang his characterization entirely for the dream portion o the story.

Edward O'Neill, as Thomas Gedge, the great fre thinker, was a splendid type and had exceptional powe because of his repose and authority.

Mr. Tucker displayed exceptional ability in choosin the types for his other characters, many of them bein faces that will never be forgotten.

The production was made in London, so that few o the players are known personally on this side. Ther was nothing about the offering, however, that makes i "foreign" from the viewpoint of this country—that is foreign from the angle of the exhibitor who says he doesn't like foreign productions

In the cast were Charles Rock, Barbara Everest, Hubert Willis, Frank Stanmore, Hayford Hobbs, Kenelm Foss, Lewis Gilbert, Minna Gray, Bertram Bingleigh, Janet Ross, Louise Manning, Philip Hewland, Arthur Walcott, Dorothy Tree, Douglas Munro, Phyllis Broughton and James Reardon.

The Box Office Angle.

If you will exploit this as it should be handled, I believe you can do an exceptional business. Certainly it is a production that will cause an unusual amount of talk, with resultant big business.

The eight reels are drama from start to finish, and yet there are big thoughts back of the action, which are hammered home with power that is undeniable, although the producer has kept from preaching by intelligent treatment.

This production is based upon a religious thought, and yet nowhere should there be any objection to it because of this. First of all, it is drama, and, as I said before, it bears about the same relation to the screen that Billy Sunday does to the pulpit—which should mean to any one that it is a big box office attraction.

Because of the peculiar combination of thought and drama found in this subject, it should be very carefully exploited. Use plenty of advertising space and make enough noise that it will become the central topic of conversation in your community. You will find after it opens, if you play it for more than one day, that the business should build—because the film is powerful enough to cause plenty of favorable comment.

Despite the stirring qualities of some of the dramatic sequences, there is nothing about the offering to offend, and it should certainly receive the commendation of all the clean-minded folk in your community. If your people favor Billy Sunday's methods, they should greet this production with open arms—and then some!

WINNING COMBINATION PEP, FUN AND THRILLS.—GET IT.

Douglas Fairbanks in

WILD AND WOOLLY

Fairbanks—Artcraft

DIRECTOR	John Emerson
AUTHOR	Horace B. Carpenter
SCENARIO BY	Anita Loos
CAMERAMAN	Victor Fleming
TECHNICAL DIRECTOR	Eric von Stroheim
AS A WHOLE	Sure-fire combination of speed, fun, action and thrills
STORY	Whimsical Easterner nut on West hero as center of burlesque melo
DIRECTION	Kept action full of pep and provided both thrills and fun
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally very good; little attempt for effects
LIGHTINGS	Quite satisfactory; although not particularly artistic
CAMERA WORK	Excellent; many fine angle shots
STAR	Whirlwind combination of speed and fun
SUPPORT	Some excellent types
EXTERIORS	Good atmosphere
INTERIORS	Very good, transformation of interiors being nicely handled
DETAIL	Many good touches
TIME	Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

THIS is one of the best Fairbanks fun films we have had yet.

It starts off with an odd "nut" character of a railroad president's son who lives in New York and dreams of the wild and woolly West, which he little realizes has grown up to such an extent that Fords have replaced the bucking bronchos.

We found a Western committee seeking a concession from Doug's father, with the result that Doug was sent to Arizona to investigate, father having a secret hunch that the trip would cure him of his "nut" notions.

Out West the natives decided that they must "kid" the boy along and show him the sort of town he expected to find and entertain him with scenes of the West as it was in the early 80's. They arranged a lot of fake melodrama with which to greet the nutty youth upon his arrival.

Doug loomed up with a trunkful of revolvers, saddles, cartridge belts, etc., and a good-sized kit bag full of ammunition. He landed in the midst of much real excitement, planned by the natives, and then in the midst of all this fake meller the sure-enough willun pulled an honest-to-goodness hold-up, instead of the fake one which had been planned.

At the same time the willun's Indians kidnapped the shero, and we found the natives much perturbed over the fact that they were unable to do anything, since everybody's bullets were blanks, this having been arranged to keep the wild Easterner from doing any real damage.

Finally, after some of his tried-and-true athletic stunts, Doug worked his way to his sure-enough ammunition supply, and then he proved that he was an honest-to-Jerry hero by going out and cleaning up with the bold, bad bandits, rescuing the shero and bringing the Injuns into camp.

Any audience that doesn't have a wonderful time with this, is all wrong. The story idea was there for Fairbanks, and the producer and Anita Loos, the clever title writer, worked in enough of the sure-fire hokum to make certain the success of this offering.

Doug was in his glory, because the character made him a comedy nut, doing stunts which to him were very serious, while to the audience and other characters they were very funny.

Eileen Percy, the girl in the case, was quite satisfactory as an ingenue, although she had little to do except stand and wait for Doug to rescue her upon occasions. Some of her close-ups were rather pretty.

Sam De Grasse was the willun—and Sam knows how to be a real willun.

There were some good types among the other characters in the Western town.

The Box Office Angle

Go to it and get the money on this!

Make a lot of noise about this being one of Doug's best productions, because it presents him as an Eastern nut with funny ideas of the West, landing in the midst of much faked excitement, only to prove that he was a real hero, after all.

You can tell them that it is an ideal Fairbanks character which provides plenty of opportunity for the things he does best, and you can promise that he does them well. This should be a clean-up for any one, anywhere.

FARCE HOKUM MAKES ELEMENTARY PLOT RATHER ENTERTAINING

Olive Thomas in

MADCAP MADGE

Kay Bee—Triangle

DIRECTOR	Raymond B. West
AUTHOR	Russell E. Smith
CAMERAMAN	Charles Stumar
AS A WHOLE	Light comedy hokum earns some laughs
STORY	Elementary, ancient, convenient farce situations
DIRECTION	Played for laughs all the way and gathered quite a lot; general atmosphere very good
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally good; some excellent bits
LIGHTINGS	Occasionally excellent; generally just good
CAMERA WORK	Good
STAR	Pleasing ingenue
SUPPORT	Good; not remarkable
EXTERIORS	Rather good
INTERIORS	Classy atmosphere
DETAIL	Played for laughs
TIME	Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

THIS plot was a very ordinary bunch of farce situations taken from the old convenient catalog formulas based on the mother who wanted to marry daughter to a title, and father who was in financial difficulty, with older sister, who was to marry the title, picking out the wrong man without knowing it, while the younger sister, who was the harem-scarem comedy kid, accidentally picked out the man who could save father from financial ruin.

Certainly, there should be no medals pinned on any one for this as a plot, but the director has simply proceeded to make his picture, playing for laughs all the way, without giving a thought to worrying over the ancient vintage of the situations.

They had all the good old hokum of the pajama party at boarding school, the masquerade dance with several guests in similar costumes, etc., and since Producer West provided rather a pleasing atmosphere so far as sets and locations were concerned, I believe that the average fan will consider this quite satisfactory as light entertainment.

In the pajama party stuff they introduced a young heifer, and here and in many other places through the production we had excellent titles. While the heifer was being entertained by the girls in pajamas they cut to a flash of an old cow in the barn, with the title, "Where is my wandering boy tonight?" During the masked ball they shot Miss Thomas into the gathering on roller skates, which provided a lot of Keystone Komedy stuff that got laughs. Since that was what the producer seemed to be after, he must be given credit for having done the only thing possible with the material at hand.

Miss Thomas is rather pretty, looks a bit devilish in a close-up, and registers very satisfactorily as an ingenue in this sort of light-comedy, wild-Indian part.

The Box Office Angle.

I believe that comedies are decidedly in demand at the present time, and while the plot of this is very ancient, they got considerable fun out of the old-time situations by handling, and I think the average patron will accept this as worth while, even though they don't rave over it afterwards. It should be classed as just a "good" program offering.

The audience who sat in when I saw this got a lot of laughs and a few yells, which is proof of the fact that they got some enjoyment out of it, even though they might afterwards figure that it wasn't of much consequence.

Since Olive Thomas is absolutely unknown so far as your fans are concerned, I would bill her as a famous beauty from the Ziegfield Follies. That will be an interesting atmosphere to put around her, which should help to get some business.

I would emphasize particularly the fact that this is built for laughs and advertise it as a "light comedy."

ORDINARY MOVIE MELLER WITH MIXED SYMPATHIES HAS AD ANGLES

Mary Fuller and Charles Richman in

THE PUBLIC BE DAMNED

Public Rights Film—State Rights

DIRECTOR	Stanner E. V. Taylor
AUTHOR	Stanner E. V. Taylor
AS A WHOLE	Movie melo played for appeal on timely subject
STORY	Ordinary movie situations, with unsympathetic hero and crooked-politics elements
DIRECTION	Old-school technique; too many exits and entrances; was action rather than drama
PHOTOGRAPHY	Ordinary
LIGHTINGS	A few good; generally only fair
CAMERA WORK	Not enough close-ups; too much shooting from same angle
STARS	Handicapped by melo; failed to impress
SUPPORT	Rather ordniary
EXTERIORS	Just acceptable
INTERIORS	Not distinctive
DETAIL	Never impressive
TIME	Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

EXCEPT for the fact that this has to do with the food-control reform, there is nothing about this to mark it as anything but an ordinary movie meller. The food-reform element is handled from rather peculiar angles, since we found the hero among the farmers, starting an organization, but promptly selling them out. The head of the food trust was twisted into a sympathetic hero who reforms and saves the heroine from becoming the tool of crooked politicians, who intended to double-cross her by making her believe that she was getting a good bill passed, only to have one put through with a joker in it.

In other words, they gave us three characters to start with—a hero, a heroine and a willun—and then they twisted the hero into a weak, unsympathetic character, and afterwards trying to build him back into a hero. The heroine was made the tool of crooked politicians, and the willun was brought into the climax as a sympathetic hero. The plot had such a mixture of sympathy that I doubt very much if it can possibly impress anywhere.

Had this subject been treated intelligently, with the characters made real and the incidents handled with the proper balance of human moments, I believe the result would have been a very big subject.

Unfortunately, we found that the offering has been played as melodrama and the atmosphere and the characterizations both lack the dignity needed to make such an important propaganda production worthy of serious consideration.

When a producer attempts to register a thought and then swings into melodrama which becomes funny to the extent of causing an audience to laugh at most of the situations and titles, then the whole film misses fire. That is just what has happened in this instance.

This film was apparently made for the Paramount program and afterwards switched into a State rights proposition, possibly because the food-control question is a national issue at the present moment.

I believe the story was rather an unfortunate choice, however, since the author has twisted his characters about in rather an odd fashion, and as a consequence he fails to bring his line of reasoning to any direct issue. According to his plot, the food control would have been impossible except for the fact that the head of the trust turned hero.

Mary Fuller and Charles Richman appeared as the reforming heroine and the head of the food trust, respectively, without making either character exceptional.

Chester Barnett, as the weak-kneed husband of Miss Fuller, was kicked around all over the lot, first by his wife, then by the farmers, and afterwards by some thugs who had to do this to keep hubby out of the plot for a certain length of time. He only got into the running again on the finish, when he rushed before the legislature with the copy of the bill which proved the trick that was being attempted.

Others in the cast were Joe Smiley and Russell Bassett.

The Box Office Angle.

It is possible that you can get some money with this because of the title and the fact that the food control problem is a live issue at the present moment. The film is not good, but, on the other hand, it isn't so bad as to make it impossible. It provides an advertising angle, and while your fans will probably laugh at it more than they will feel any sympathy with it, the chances are that they will come out and pass you by without sticking a knife in you.

The action is terribly slow at times, and some of the titles are awful. But, nevertheless, if you can get it cheap—and you should—it will serve as a chance to grab some money on a flyer.

Whatever you do, don't promise that it is a "great" film. Just talk about the fact that it deals with the food-control situation.

STARTED FINE, BUT SOON SLUMPED INTO ORDINARY MELLER

Mary MacLaren in

THE PLOW WOMAN

Bluebird

DIRECTOR	Charles Swickard
AUTHOR	Eleanor Gates
SCENARIO BY	J. Grubb Alexander
CAMERAMAN	Harry Maguire
AS A WHOLE	Started right well, but finished as wild-eyed meller
STORY	Lacked sympathetic romance and had too much action meller
DIRECTION	Failed to keep human element in evidence for last half of production
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied from fine to fair
LIGHTINGS	Many excellent; others just ordinary
CAMERA WORK	Varied decidedly
STAR	Pleasing personality; has poise and repose
SUPPORT	Satisfactory, except father's beard
EXTERIORS	Some very fine shots; others ordinary
INTERIORS	Just good
DETAIL	Satisfactory
TIME	Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

THIS started off with some good characterization bits and gave promise of being an excellent offering. Unfortunately, however, the story and characterizations never got anywhere, there being a lack of heart interest and romance and no real hero or heroine development, the last half of the film being swung into a lot of wild melodrama that failed utterly to impress favorably.

The first part of the offering was devoted to a prologue in which Miss MacLaren played the mother, and Clara Horton played the daughter, which was played by Miss MacLaren in the later development of the story.

Little Clara Horton was one of the big favorites many years ago in the old Eclair days, and her work in this gave evidence of the fact that her screen training has not been in vain. She is a very clever youngster.

The character of the father was decidedly brutal, but would have been very impressive as a menacing force had it not been for the fact that his beard was awful. This make-up was satisfactory in the long shots, but when he was brought into a close-up he was funny enough to bring a laugh, which naturally weakened the impression made.

In the story proper Miss MacLaren was an older sister, and we found the hero marrying a younger sister secretly, with the result that the wife had to be brought home from boarding school with her child. Father pulled a bit of wild anger and started to drive both the girls from the house, but was struck by lightning, it being an odd thing that he was paralyzed on one side by this stroke, while the girls, who were only two feet away, were not even stunned by the bolt.

They then pulled the good old Kay-Bee Broncho frontier junk, with Indians on the warpath and houses being burned in the attack. There was much riding back and forth, until finally the halfbreed, who had been the menacing willun, saved Miss MacLaren and the baby from the attacking Indians until the boys of the fort could ride up to the rescue. This was the good old stuff which may be good in some sections, although I have a hunch that most of your intelligent fans don't appreciate this sort of melo any more. I believe that they look at it and accept it, but do not consider it real entertainment.

The chief lack of this story and production was the absence of any love story carried through to a proper development. Our hero was not much in evidence, and our heroine, Miss MacLaren, had no romance whatever, except that she had wanted to marry the man who had picked her sister instead.

Others who appeared were Harry C. De More, Marie Hazelton, Kingsley Benedict, Hector V. Sarno and L. C. Shumway.

The Box Office Angle.

It is possible that this sort of wild-eyed melodrama may register as satisfactory in some communities, but to my mind it misses fire, because the human element is cast aside to give way to action meller. If you have been playing ordinary program releases this may sneak by. It will do little more, because it fails to get under the skin and convince.

There is no particular angle to advertise this on, unless you play up the thought "Are you considerate of your children and their welfare?" The entire story is centered about a brutal father who has no regard for his women folk and hates both his daughters because they were not boys. You might say: "Have you ever known a man who disliked his daughter because she was not a boy? See 'The Plow Woman.'"

IMPOSSIBLE AND VERY UNSYMPATHETIC PLOT MADE FAIRLY INTERESTING

Wilfred Lucas and Elda Miller in

HER EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR

Eastern Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Albert Parker
SUPERVISED BY.....Allan Dwan
AUTHOR.....Robert Shirley
CAMERAMAN.....Roy Vaughn
AS A WHOLE.....Interesting in a way, but impossible story with very unsympathetic hero
STORY.....Registered impossible politics, with hero a traitor saved by trick of his sweetheart
DIRECTION.....Registered some good individual scenes and made action fairly convincing, but badly handicapped by story situations
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good; never distinctive LIGHTINGS.....Ordinary; generally too uniform; no attempt for effects CAMERA WORK.....Good straight stuff; not distinctive STARS.....Good, although playing impossible parts
SUPPORT.....Some good types
EXTERIORS.....Acceptable; not unusual
INTERIORS.....Good
DETAIL.....Very improbable
TIME.....Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

THEY presented in this story a situation where a hero had just been elected governor, with a sweetheart heroine who refused to marry him because success had changed his ideals. Then they pulled a lot of impossible politics which brought the heroine in a campaign against the governor, which resulted in an election which put her over as lieutenant-governor, with all of her ticket elected except the one man she had been fighting—her sweetheart, the governor. How this could be accomplished was not explained, because there could be no explanation—it couldn't be done!

We then found hero, who had vetoed a child-labor bill upon demand of his political boss, becoming a traitor to his country by preparing to antagonize the enlistment act. This is certainly treading on thin ice, considering the present situation, and, from my viewpoint, it was absolutely all wrong!

The last part of the story hinged about the trick of the sweetheart lieutenant governor to get the hero governor across the State line for a luncheon, while she sneaked back into the State and signed the military appropriation bill. We then saw hero returning, very much peeved over having been tricked, and they finished it off with a clutch where he admitted that he had been near to becoming a traitor, and thanked her for having saved him.

This entire story makes the hero not only an awful boob, but a very unsympathetic character, who is a traitor to his country in time of war. The impossible convenience of having his sweetheart made lieutenant governor for purposes of the plot will never convince anybody, and on the whole I fear that this is going to leave rather a bad taste in the mouths of most fans. It is a case of monkeying with the buzz-saw, and certainly is a dangerous bit of tomfoolery.

Elda Miller was a splendid choice for the character of the suffragist who became lieutenant governor after a reform campaign, although she made a few false starts in some of the scenes, showing she is not yet "camera-broke."

Wilfred Lucas did his best to keep the character of the governor human, but he was battling against awful odds.

There were a few little interesting touches that helped a bit, but from my viewpoint the production is all wrong on account of the story situations. I'd say that it isn't the sort of thing to play if you can possibly sidestep it.

There were a few details, other than the impossible election situation, which were bad, as, for instance, all of the newspaper inserts—and several were used—were noticeably pasted, with every paper using the same sort of type. These inserts were all double column when flashed on the screen, and yet when the governor was seen carrying these inserts in his hand they were all single column.

In the supporting cast were Joseph Kilgour, Regan Hughston, Walter Walker, Edith Speare and Albert Perry.

The Box Office Angle.

I would be afraid of this because of the unsympathetic hero-traitor part. The story is built around an impossible situation which has been devised simply for the purpose of making a story, and it never for a moment has a chance to convince. An audience which is willing to overlook the hero's peculiar conduct may find this fairly interesting, but the ending is obvious all the way, and certainly the production is not of sufficient merit to justify your worrying over missing it, while it has disadvantages enough to make it worth your while to look for something else.

The title tells the finish of the story from the very first, so that there is no suspense provided at any time.

Author and Adaptor of Recognized Successes.

EVE UNSELL

(FAMOUS PLAYERS—LASKY CORP.)

Man from Mexico (Honor).
Wildflower (Honor Roll).
Dawn of Tomorrow (Honor).
The Morals of Marcus.
The Warning.
The Ransom (Author).
The Reapers (Author).
The Senator.
The Second Command.

Coming Releases.

Forbidden Paths (Author).
Crystal-Gazer (Co-Author).
Fortunes of Fifi.
Tides of Barnegat.
The Honorable Friend.
The Dummy.

Coming Releases.

The Long Trail.
The Brother of Beppo.
At First Sight.
Barbary Sheep.
The Honeymoon, etc.

OLD REBELLIOUS DAUGHTER CITY TEMPTER THEME HELPED BY HANDLING

Dorothy Phillips in

FIRES OF REBELLION

Bluebird

DIRECTOR.....Ida May Park
AUTHOR.....Ida May Park
CAMERAMAN.....King D. Gray
AS A WHOLE....Old stuff made fairly good by treatment
STORY.....“Why girls leave home” bromide, with too much city-temper detail, and hero to rescue on finish
DIRECTION.....Gave intimate touch to treatment, but story lacked situations, causing action to slump frequently
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good, with fine and fair spots
LIGHTINGS.....Some excellent; others ordinary
CAMERA WORK.....Varied
STAR..Pleasing personality; made ancient situations hold
SUPPORT.....Very good; Lon Chaney a bit too “willunous”
EXTERIORS.....Acceptable
INTERIORS.....Some good atmosphere touches
DETAIL.....Many good bits
TIME.....Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

WHILE this is the old “Why Girls Leave Home” story, with all the sordid details of poverty life, with a drunkard father and the well-known innocent heroine resenting the city tempters advances, only to be rescued at the eleventh hour by hero, we found that the producer and the cast have lifted it by their treatment of the scenes, the individual work of the cast having been emphasized by the intelligent use of close-ups.

Because the story is so well known, with practically no surprises in any of its development, there were times when the interest slumped decidedly. The producer gave us good detail in the early scenes, which were supposed to justify shero's departure for the city, but everyone will have it all figured out that she is to be tempted and refuse to fall, with hero arriving at the moment when she is about to give up; so that, despite the fact that the producer has handled this part of the story very nicely, it fails to impress.

One of the best scenes in the entire production was the bit where the hero arrived at Miss Phillips' room in the city and first discovered that she had been living in very cheap quarters, and then came upon the boxes which had contained clothing, which clearly told that she had donned an expensive outfit before leaving. They gave the landlady of this rooming house a couple of good titles at this point. One, where she had come in to Miss Phillips with something to eat, saying that she couldn't let her starve, since if she were to starve she never would get the rent. The other was when the hero inquired as to where Miss Phillips had gone, and the landlady said that she had gone away in a taxicab, and that the girls who went away in taxicabs never came back.

Lon Chaney, who did the city tempter part, was a bit too “wicked” in his characterization, there being a tendency on his part to keep a leer on his face at all times.

William Stowell was pleasing as the hero. The other members of the cast were quite satisfactory. They were Richard La Reno, Ed Brady, Golda Madden, Belle Bennett and Alice May Youst.

The Box Office Angle.

Dorothy Phillips has had several rather pleasing productions in the past few months, and I should think she is possessed of a good following all over the country by now.

There is certainly nothing new about the story, but the characterizations and the treatment of the director make it fairly interesting, so that you will probably find that your fans will accept it as a very satisfactory program production.

You might bill this as a film proving the danger of an inexperienced girl attempting to make her way alone in a big city.

There seemed to be an unusual number of underwear and nightgown scenes in this, many of which were unnecessary. It is possible that some of your patrons might be a little finicky about such things, although they never went too far with any of these bits.

If your fans are sharks on demanding something new in the way of stories, be careful on this production. It has no new twists whatever.

HUMAN BITS MAKE ANCIENT PLOT SEEM QUITE PLEASING

Gail Kane in

THE UPPER CRUST

American—Mutual

DIRECTOR.....Rollin S. Sturgeon
AUTHOR.....Charles Sherman
AS A WHOLE....Entertaining little story that will please
STORY.....Housekeeper masquerading-as-mistress, has romance-with-employer's-son situation
DIRECTION....Kept them from “acting”; gave good little human bits
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very good; not exceptional
LIGHTINGS.....Good; didn't play for faces enough
CAMERA WORK.....Good; not distinctive
STAR.....Most pleasing part she has had on screen
SUPPORT.....Boy very good; others satisfactory
EXTERIORS.....Good for atmosphere; not particularly artistic
INTERIORS.....Good
DETAIL.....Several good little touches
TIME.....Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

WHILE this is an old story idea with nothing truly big about any part of the production, I believe that the average audience will enjoy it thoroughly and consider it very pleasing as a program offering.

Gail Kane has one of the best parts, if not the most pleasing, she has ever been given to portray on the screen. She is presented as a wholesome Irish girl who is employed as housekeeper for a widow at her summer home.

She found that the villagers all thought she was the mistress, who was a widow they had never seen, and Miss Kane decided to take a chance and masquerade a bit to enjoy the surroundings of wealth for a few weeks at least.

The son of her employer wandered into the action, and of course we had a little romance between the two, with Miss Kane “employing” the boy as her chauffeur, he all the time knowing who she was.

A wealthy neighbor tried to marry Miss Kane, and, despite the fact that she had learned to love her new "chauffeur," she seriously considered marrying the millionaire neighbor for financial reasons.

The man whose name the son had taken, then loomed up, with the result that son was suspected of being a forger. This brought the girl to his rescue when she thought he was in trouble. She found she couldn't marry the millionaire, because she loved the boy too much. This, of course, was followed by a quick finale wherein the boy's mother arrived to explain who the boy was.

The greater portion of this offering is taken up with little romantic comedy scenes between Miss Kane and the boy. They have some fun with a balky horse, and there are many bits which most any audience will enjoy where the housekeeper plays mistress to her "chauffeur," who the audience know to be her employer's son.

Miss Kane was very pretty in this, and since she had a part that carried sympathy, instead of the part of an adventuress, I believe she will gain more friends from this one picture than from a dozen of the sort she has had in the past.

Robert MacLean as the son was excellent, since he played with a quiet reserve, which made his scenes register as real. The producer kept the cast from "acting" most of the time, and this helped decidedly.

The general atmosphere was very satisfactory, wit a few good shots, but it was not distinctively artisti Frequently a few more close-ups or better lightings c the faces would have helped.

In the cast were Edward Peil, Eugenie Forde and J Holmes.

The Box Office Angle

I'd figure that this should go much better than th average Mutual. It is a pleasing little human sto that carries sympathy and comedy, and the plot is he down to earth sufficiently to keep it from being mel drama.

If you have been playing Mutuals as they come, y can afford to make quite a little fuss over this, promi ing that they will enjoy Miss Kane's work as the bea tiful Irish housekeeper who took a chance at playir "wealthy widow" for a few weeks.

You might say in your advertising, "You have se Gail Kane many times as the beautiful adventures See her in 'The Upper Crust' as a wholesome Iris American lass who played the 'fine lady' when oppo tunity presented itself." You might arouse interest advertising along this line: "Do you think you cou tell a housekeeper from her mistress at a glance? Thi it over and see 'The Upper Crust.'"

IRISH ROMANTIC COMEDY HAS ENOUGH LAUGHS TO GET IT BY

Bessie Barriscale in

BORROWED PLUMAGE

Kay Bee—Triangle

DIRECTOR	Raymond B. West
AUTHOR	J. G. Hawks
CAMERAMAN	Charles Stumar
AS A WHOLE	Interesting Irish costume comedy
STORY	Never convinced, but interesting and provided laughs
DIRECTION	Gave distinctive atmosphere, class and good comedy
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally excellent
LIGHTINGS	Some very fine; generally good
CAMERA WORK	Very good
STAR	Pleasing personality as impish kitchen maid
SUPPORT	Good; not exceptional
EXTERIORS	Some very good shots; others ordinary
INTERIORS	Very good
DETAIL	Excellent atmosphere
TIME	Fifty-nine minutes (5 parts)

CONSIDERING the fact that present-day conditions make romantic comedy desirable, I would say that this should be a very successful offering, because it gives many laughs in an atmosphere sufficiently distinctive to have the production register as something above the average ordinary "movie."

Miss Barriscale, as a hoyden Irish kitchen maid of the period when John Paul Jones held sway on the seas, kept things moving by her wild escapades, and, as a matter of fact, there was nothing to the plot except a series of incidents in which she played for laughs.

We were shown the American commander approaching Ireland, with the Irish nobility fleeing from the "pirate," while soldiers came to the castle to protect it. Miss Barriscale, a kitchen maid, stayed behind and posed as the mistress of the castle when the troops arrived, and our hero was sent from the American ship to reconnoiter, he of course being an old sweetheart of Miss Barriscale, who had gone to the colonies some years before.

The British officers discovered that this Irish swee heart was an American, by asking him to drink a toa of death to John Paul Jones, and then they were gon to shoot him at sunrise (you notice they always gi time for somebody to bring a rescue party by dati these executions at dawn), so that Miss Barriscale si naled for a rescuing party, which came ashore a saved the Irish hero and his madcap sweetheart aft a battle with the British.

The incident of Miss Barriscale sending a signal the American vessel, provided an opportunity for h to wear a soldier uniform with tight-fitting trousers, that the story as constructed gave her the old-tim trio of costumes—rags, silks and a boy outfit.

Producer Raymond West gave us some excellent a mosphere in the interior sets, and some good exter shots, so that the general tone of the offering w very satisfactory. The story is decidedly light, ho ever, and you can only figure it as a romantic comed with emphasis on the comedy.

Those who appeared in support of Miss Barrisca were Arthur Maude, Dorcas Matthews, J. Barn Sherry, Wallace Worseley and Tod Burns.

The Box Office Angle.

This is only a "movie," as to conviction, but the ma comedy incidents give it almost a Keystone touch many places, and these wild bits of comedy tied up wi the Irish dialect titles make it almost certain that th average audience will consider this rather good ente tainment.

If Bessie Barriscale is a favorite in your communi —and I believe she is rather well liked generally—y can probably do very well with this. What it lacks story it makes up in action and fun. You needn worry over it being a costume production, because I a quite sure that your fans will not complain about th costume element when so much comedy has been i jected into the action. Several Keystone types hav been used in many places, they being played in goo little incidents of their own at times, so as to kee the comedy element uppermost all the way.

Emphasize the fact that this is Irish, that it is comedy, and get the romance part in gently. Don't l them get the impression that it is a costume drama melodrama.

UNCONVINCING RESEMBLANCE MIXED MORALS PLOT—FAIRLY INTERESTING

Carlyle Blackwell, June Elvidge and Frank Mills in

THE PRICE OF PRIDE

Peerless—World

DIRECTOR ..... Harley Knoles
AUTHOR ..... Milton Nobles
CAMERAMAN ..... Arthur Edeson
AS A WHOLE ..... Unconvincing "resemblance" plot which had rather odd moral mix-up and convenient coincidences, helped by treatment
STORY ..... Never convinces and frequently things happen very obligingly; convenient, with rather complicated father-trying-two-sons situation
DIRECTION ..... Kept players from overacting and made many individual scenes good; was fearfully handicapped by story
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Generally good, although varied from fine to only fair at times
LIGHTINGS ..... Some excellent; others just ordinary CAMERA WORK ..... Varied; too many shots from same angle
STARS ..... June Elvidge excellent; Blackwell good as bad boy, acceptable as good boy; Mills satisfactory
SUPPORT ..... Acceptable
EXTERIORS ..... A few very fine; others just good
INTERIORS ..... Acceptable, although some had too much furniture
DETAIL ..... Situations quite convenient and not nicely dovetailed, but atmosphere satisfactory
TIME ..... Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

THIS has the serious handicap of being one of those "resemblance" stories which are seldom, if ever, convincing. They made the resemblance fairly logical by having the same father for both boys, but, unfortunately, the father failed to get a divorce from his first wife, and so the second son was illegitimate, which left a rather bad taste, this being followed by just a suggestion of this illegitimate son starting to make love to his own mother when he found her as the mistress of a gambling hall. They didn't go very far with the details, however, so that this angle will not be objectionable to those who resent the introduction of such elements into a story.

The production started off with a prologue in which they introduced some of the well-known pajama-party hokum, and then we came to the quarrel between happy husband and wife because of the vampirish Miss Elvidge.

Hubby went West and Miss Elvidge was right on the job, insisting upon becoming his mistress, so that soon we found them with a child. His son by his first wife grew up in a title which jumped twenty years, and we found Mr. Blackwell playing both parts. Detail to properly bridge over the lapse of twenty years was not in evidence here.

From this time on the story failed to convince, because the situations were entirely too convenient. There were several errors in the plot development, such as the scene where Mr. Blackwell met his "double," and although he mentioned the likeness, neither man stopped to inquire of the other how this happened.

Afterwards we found the good boy's financee coming West, with the bad boy holding up the train, which resulted in her getting off at the good boy's town and refusing to speak to him. I'd like to know why she didn't go back home, and why she stayed in this rough Western town when she felt that her sweetheart was "all wrong." Of course, the scenarioist decided to forget when she was needed again in the trial scene, when both mothers of the boys were on hand also.

Just to make it a bit harder, they brought in the father as judge at the trial, it being stated in a title that a United States District Court judge from Montana had been called into the case.

The bad boy eased things off by dying on the finish, after having confessed that he was guilty of the hold-up, instead of the good boy, who had been accused.

In many of the individual scenes the director lifted this by intelligent handling, there being some good close-ups and a few excellent exterior shots. The handicap of the story made it impossible to register this as a truly worth-while production, except for those who are willing to take melodrama as it comes without worrying about the consistency of the story.

Carlyle Blackwell handled the character of the bad boy rather well and was satisfactory as the good boy, who had little to do but stand around as such and look wise.

June Elvidge gave a very good characterization throughout, refraining from overacting, although she had a number of rather important emotional scenes.

Frank Mills as the father of both boys was very satisfactory.

George MacQuarrie was a good "heavy," and the other members of the cast were satisfactory.

Among those who appeared were Evelyn Greeley, Charles Charles and Pinna Nesbit.

The Box Office Angle.

If your patrons are willing to accept unconvincing melodramas just because the action is fairly interesting, this will go over very nicely. Your intelligent fans who demand good stories, will consider it ordinary junk.

If Carlyle Blackwell pulls you any business, and the names of Miss Elvidge and Mr. Mills help at the box office, you will probaby be justified in booking this and taking a chance on it getting by without serious criticism.

You might arouse some interest by saying, "If you were called upon as judge to preside at the trial of your son, for whose weaknesses you were responsible, what would you do? See 'The Price of Pride.'"

REVIEW OF "ALADDIN'S OTHER LAMP," Rolfe-Metro—Page 431.

CRANE WILBUR
Exclusive Management
MABEL CONDON EXCHANGE
LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

INDEPENDENT PRODUCERS:
Before Presenting Your Next Production Have
GEORGE W. BEYNON
505 Fifth Avenue, New York City.
Arrange An Orchestral Setting
THAT WILL PUT THE PICTURE OVER.

TABULATED PERCENTAGE REPORTS FROM EXHIBITORS

THE BATTING AVERAGES

These are the averages of the companies having 200 reports or more.

Reports		% P. P.	% B. O.	Repeat
626	Fox	72.9	70.0	85
497	Metro	79.8	67.2	49
390	Greater Vitagraph	68.3	65.4	73
1691	Triangle	69.3	63.5	348
439	World	78.9	62.2	40
1930	Paramount	68.3	62.7	326
213	Bluebird	62.1	62.0	18

THE NUMBER BEFORE THE NAME OF THE FEATURE INDICATES THE NUMBER OF REPORTS RECEIVED AND TABULATED ON THAT FILM.

THE FIRST COLUMN CARRIES THE PERCENTAGE OF PLEASED PATRONS.

THE SECOND COLUMN SHOWS THE BOX OFFICE PERCENTAGE.

FIGURES IN THE THIRD COLUMN INDICATE THAT MANY REPORTED THE FILM WORTH A RETURN DATE.

All reports in this percentage tabulation have been marked on this scale:

EXCEPTIONAL	100%
EXCELLENT	80%
GOOD	60%
FAIR	40%
POOR	20%
BAD	0%

Reports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
	PARAMOUNT
1930	Paramount	68.3	62.7	326
3	In Bishop's Carriage	84	93
1	The Lost Paradise	50	45
5	The Virginian	85	79	1
1	Such a Little Queen	80	80	1
2	Where Trail Divides	100	100	1
10	Wildflower	90	82	6
1	The County Chairman	80	80
1	What's His Name	75	100
3	Behind the Scenes	92	84
6	Man from Mexico	90	70	1
1	Circus Man	84	85
1	Rose of the Rancho	87	80
4	The Bargain	85	86	3
1	Ghost Breakers	60	60
4	The Crucible	94	92	1
4	The Sign of the Cross	89	91
1	Cameo Kirby	50	65
5	Cinderella	85	98	2
1	The Million	70	90
3	Girl of the Golden West	93	87	2
2	The Dancing Girl	71	68
3	The Italian	77	62	1
1	No Laughing Matter	90	85
1	Morals of Marcus	60	50
3	The Goose Girl	95	95	4
1	After Five	82	80
1	Mistress Nell	85	95
1	Buckshot John	90	90
3	Her Triumph	60	74	1
3	The Warrens of Virginia	70	71	1
1	Country Boy	95	80
5	David Harem	87	78	1
1	A Gentleman of Leisure	80	70
2	The Caprices of Kitty	63	70
1	Love Route	60	60
1	Sunshine Molly	40	20
1	The Governor's Lady	97	85
3	Gretna Green	100	100	2
3	Are You a Mason?	78	84
1	Pretty Mrs. Smith	65	90
1	The Unafraid	50	75
1	When We Were 21	75	63
4	Snobs	64	52
5	Captain Courtesy	84	66	1
3	Captive	82	67
2	Niobe	75	55	1
3	Help Wanted	90	75
5	The Woman	86	59	1
5	House of Lost Court	82	54	3
1	Fanchon the Cricket	86	89	2
3	Betty in Search of Thrill	83	87
5	Stolen Goods	78	75
2	Wild-Goose Chase	80	55	1
6	Pretty Sister Jose	84	82	2
5	Jim the Penman	64	65
16	The Dawn of a To-morrow	83	88	1
5	Arab	18	18	2
1	Clarissa	75	80
2	The Dictator	45	45
5	Wild Olive	82	69
6	Chimmy Fadden	91	75	1
3	Little Pal	79	85
4	Rugmaker's Daughter	40	50
2	The Clue	74	88
6	Kindling	81	82
1	The Running Fight	60	70
3	The Fighting Hope	77	80
5	Kilmeny	75	73
6	Seven Sisters	87	86	1
3	Puppet Crown	83	85
19	Rags	91	93	5
2	Sold	83	72
6	The Secret Orchid	79	74
5	Nearly a Lady	65	75
6	The Marriage of Kitty	76	64
3	Poor Schmaltz	63	37
8	Helene of the North	87	81	2
3	The Majesty of the Law	56	60
3	Heart of Jennifer	43	45
2	Incorrigible Dukane	75	55
4	Esmeralda	89	89	2
2	The Case of Becky	65	65
1	Out of Darkness	60	40
1	Peer Gynt	12	100
4	The Explorers	72	61
4	'Twas Ever Thus	53	68
2	Voice in the Fog	75	67
6	Fatal Card	65	59
4	Zaza	91	67	2
5	The Girl of Yesterday	88	86	2
7	White Pearl	71	75
4	Blackbirds	57	58
7	Chorus Lady	73	68
6	The Secret Sin	69	74	1
7	Yankee Girl	52	57
6	Masqueraders	56	56
11	Carmen	52	53	3
10	Still Waters	95	91	6
7	Madame Butterfly	10	11	1
7	Mummy and Humming Bird	64	44
7	Bella Donna	92	77	4
3	Armstrong's Wife	79	65
3	Chimmie Fadden Out West	11	14	1
8	A Gentleman From Indiana	86	75
9	The Prince and the Pauper	92	88	4
10	Mr. Grex from Monte Carlo	84	69	1
3	Jane	75	51
9	The Unknown	76	67	1
18	The Cheat	94	80	12
9	The Reform Candidate	80	54	1
2	The Immigrant	73	62
10	The Old Homestead	88	84	7
3	Lydia Gilmore	22	41	2
10	Temptation	82	77	2
8	The Foundling	77	74	2
5	Tongues of Men	82	58	1
6	Mice and Men	84	82	3
6	The Golden Chance	50	68	2
1	My Lady Incog	40	40
4	Ragamuffins	77	57
4	Call of Cumberlands	77	72
6	The Spider	87	68	1
9	Pudd'n Head Wilson	83	80	4
8	Tennessee's Pardner	85	88
7	Madame Le Presidente	21	48
8	Nearly King	53	53	1
12	Trail of Lonesome Pine	75	88	3
7	Fell in Love with Wife	56	52	1
7	Blacklist	41	34	1
9	Out of the Drifts	90	89	3
5	Diplomacy	11	56	1
12	Poor Little Peppina	87	84	6
15	To Have and To Hold	75	72	4
11	Ben Blair	72	65
9	For the Defense	68	66	1
6	The Code of Marcia Gray	70	66	2
7	Lost Bridegroom	70	61	1
7	The Saleslady	75	66	1
13	Audrey	75	74	3
8	The Sowers	65	60
10	The Heart of Paula	72	57	1
10	The Race	70	64
7	The Eternal Grind	71	82	3
8	The Love Mask	59	53	2
9	Molly Make-Believe	87	83	5
7	The Red Widow	62	55	2
12	The Heart of Nora Flynn	72	60	4
7	The Moment Before	50	65	1
12	David Garrick	68	46	2
8	The Innocent Lie	54	51
15	Maria Rosa	79	78	4
12	Alien Souls	69	67	1
13	The Feud Girl	60	56
16	Pasquale	78	53	3
16	Sweet Kitty Bellairs	72	62	2
20	Saints and Sinners	51	49
18	Thousand-Dollar Husband	69	62	4
22	A Gutter Magdalene	62	54	1
10	Evil Thereof	44	44
15	The Making of Maddalena	63	57	3
23	Silks and Satins	85	88	16
14	Destiny's Toy	60	51
19	The Clown	79	54	3
20	Susie Snowflakes	69	59	2
16	The World's Great Snare	73	78	4
19	The American Beauty	61	61	3
22	The Dupe	64	64	1
22	The Smugglers	53	50	1
26	The Selfish Woman	72	69	6
29	Davy Crockett	67	62
28	The Dream Girl	69	64	2
28	Under Cover	79	75	5
27	International Marriage	55	51	1
27	Common Ground	64	64	1
35	Hulda from Holland	95	94	23
30	House of Golden Windows	73	64	3
22	A Woman in the Case	72	72	3
25	Little Lady Eileen	87	89	10
22	The Stronger Love	53	52
21	Public Opinion	82	72	6
20	Rolling Stones	67	62	2
21	The Honorable Friend	65	62	1
18	Victory of Conscience	59	60	3
19	Each Pearl a Tear	74	72	2
20	The Parson of Panamint	77	68	3
13	The Big Sister	47	58
12	The Reward of Patience	66	54
13	The House of Lies	76	68	1
13	The Daughter of MacGregor	55	46

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
16 Ashes of Embers	84	84	6
15 The Quest of Life	58	72
14 Anton, the Terrible	46	45
15 The Lash	59	56
12 The Storm	78	64	1
18 The Intrigue	81	60	2
15 Her Father's Son	74	68	2
13 Witchcraft	53	54
13 The Kiss	74	68	2
15 The Rainbow Princess	84	72	3
14 Seventeen	84	72	2
13 Miss George Washington	94	94	10
15 The Heir to the Hoorah	82	69	5
16 The Soul of Kura San	80	71	1
11 A Son of Erin	78	72	2
10 Unprotected	53	55	1
10 The Years of the Locust	49	51
10 The Plow Girl	75	59
7 The Yellow Pawn	61	57	1
9 Nanette of the Wilds	50	57	2
6 Martyrdom of Philip Strong	48	47	1
10 The Coney Island Princess	62	63	1
10 The Road to Love	72	59	1
14 Oliver Twist	85	69	6
12 The Victoria Cross	43	55	1
13 The Traveling Salesman	76	57	3
16 The Right Direction	74	60	2
18 Snow White	94	95	10
13 The Redeeming Love	60	56	1
16 The Slave Market	71	70	5
16 The Evil Eye	27	41	1
14 Great Expectations	76	54	1
13 Happiness of Three Women	74	60	1
12 Betty to the Rescue	44	47
13 A Girl Like That	51	46
14 Lost and Won	58	50
17 The Golden Fetter	51	55
17 His Sweetheart	84	58	2
16 The Wax Model	68	59
17 Each to His Kind	61	59
14 Her Own People	75	51
16 The American Consul	53	51	1
10 The Black Wolf	34	40
15 Fortunes of Fifi	64	75	2
17 On Record	63	57	2
14 Winning of Sally Temple	38	48
14 Those Without Sin	51	51	1
11 Castles for Two	48	46	1
11 Out of the Wreck	54	48
10 Sapho	71	81	3
9 The Prison Without Walls	53	53
9 The Dummy	68	51
5 The Spirit of Romance	55	50
5 As Men Love	75	46
7 The Bottle Imp	76	68	1
4 The Bond Between	46	31
5 School for Husbands	42	38	1
4 The Lonesome Chap	34	39
5 Sleeping Fires	61	63	1
6 The Tides of Barnegat	40	34
6 The Cost of Hatred	43	36
5 The Valentine Girl	79	76
1 Unconquered	10	15
5 The Girl at Home	45	39
3 Heart's Desire	22	22
3 Sacrifice	34	50
3 The Primrose Ring	25	25
4 The Silent Partner	25	29
2 The Marcellini Millions	10	13
2 The Highway of Hope	23	23
2 Her Better Self	50	55
2 The Undying Flame	33	25
1 Freckles	75	50

TRIANGLE

1691 Triangle	69.3	63.5	348
9 The Iron Strain	81	65	2
8 The Lamb	85	78	3
3 Old Heidelberg	72	83	1
10 The Coward	83	66	1
9 Martyrs of the Alamo	67	57	2
14 The Disciple	85	76	2
7 Matrimony	81	74	2
5 Sable Lorcha	64	53
6 The Golden Claw	61	72
9 Double Trouble	64	64	2
7 Aloha Oe	63	65	1
5 Lily and Rose	61	53
7 Jordan is a Hard Road	58	54
8 Winged Idol	53	52
8 Penitents	33	37
11 The Edge of the Abyss	67	61
8 Submarine Pirate	55	75	1
5 Cross Currents	48	45
11 Between Men	72	70	1
14 Let Katy Do It	87	66	6
5 The Corner	56	47
5 The Missing Link	55	43	1
3 Beckoning Flame	65	48
9 The Wood Nymph	54	50	1
8 The Conqueror	71	70
9 Price of Power	55	51
10 The Green Swamp	80	78	1
12 Acquitted	69	51
6 D'Artagnan	59	54
18 His Picture in the Papers	90	75	5
13 Honor's Altar	77	67	2
14 Betty of Greystone	77	65	2
23 Peggy	94	91	15
7 Don Quixote	57	56
9 The Last Act	79	78	1
11 Daphne and the Pirate	71	57	1
18 Hell's Hinges	93	89	11
17 The Flying Torpedo	88	80	8
14 Bullets and Brown Eyes	85	75	3
14 Martha's Vindication	79	72	2
14 Moral Fabric	75	62	1
15 Hoodoo Ann	68	65	1
15 The Raiders	79	70
14 The Habit of Happiness	92	85	5
8 Waifs	70	58	1
8 Little Meena's Romance	64	60	1
17 The Aryan	59	80	4
10 Sold for Marriage	71	72	1
16 Stepping Stones	85	74	2
10 Sunshine Dad	36	46
9 Civilzation's Child	68	64	1
12 Children in the House	79	64	2
11 The Beggar of Cawnpore	61	49
17 The Good Bad-Man	89	81	4
12 The No-Good Guy	74	60	3
15 Susan Rocks the Boat	70	63
19 Not My Sister	75	76	4
12 Child of Paris Streets	76	64
21 The Primal Lure	82	74	7
8 Mr. Goode, the Samaritan	53	53
20 The Market of Vain Desire	79	64	5
20 Going Straight	76	78	3
25 The Bugle Call	94	80	8
25 Reggie Mixes In	93	80	11
16 The Sorrows of Love	66	69	1
20 An Innocent Magdalene	71	71	2
18 The Dividend	70	68	1
21 The Wild Girl of Sierras	45	53
22 An Apostle of Vengeance	88	87	4
18 Casey at the Bat	44	48
26 The Phantom	84	71	7
29 Flirting with Fate	87	86	11
30 The Deserter	85	68	11
24 The Little Schoolma'am	74	66	2
26 The Eye of the Night	74	58	5
18 Stranded	61	51
27 The Captive God	65	70	2
23 The Halfbreed	72	74	2
22 The Payment	81	70	3
18 The Marriage of Molly O	48	47
22 Honor Thy Name	86	72	4
22 The Devil's Needle	64	64	1
28 Shell 43	88	69	6
26 Hell-to-Pay Austin	83	66	6
20 Lieut. Danny, U. S. A	69	67	1
16 Pillars of Society	59	56	1
22 Home	91	80	9
16 Gretchen the Greenhorn	64	62	2
20 The Patriot	78	79	4
22 The Social Secretary	90	74	8
17 The Thoroughbred	82	72	1
11 The Little Liar	69	57
18 The Wolf Woman	87	90	6
15 The Dawnmaker	59	78	3
17 Diane of the Follies	71	74	2
23 Manhattan Madness	94	91	12
19 Plain Jane	88	77	5
17 Old Folks at Home	83	66	2
16 The Jungle Child	62	63	1
14 The Rummy	68	52	1
19 The Return of Draw Egan	89	87	7
18 The Vagabond Prince	76	72	3
17 Somewhere in France	77	68	1
13 A Corner in Colleens	88	82	6
11 Sister of Six	70	64	2
18 Fifty-Fifty	89	83	6
4 War's Women	61	48
11 Atta Boy's Last Race	54	54
14 American Aristocracy	92	89	8
9 The Microscope Mystery	46	39
11 The Hon. Algy	78	69	2
13 Jim Grimsby's Boy	66	60	3
13 The Devil's Double	92	93	7
11 The Children Pay	73	63	3
12 Children of the Feud	55	52	1
8 The Criminal	49	45
9 The Gamble in Souls	72	68	3
15 The Wharf Rat	54	55
16 The Matrimaniac	93	94	8
17 The Sin Ye Do	93	84	10
13 The Heiress at Coffee Dan's	60	53	2
10 Three of Many	62	53
7 The House Built Upon Sand	79	66	3
7 Nina, the Flower Girl	45	45
9 The Female of the Species	76	74	2
14 Truthful Tulliver	98	95	9
12 The Weaker Sex	88	83	4
7 The Little Yank	40	52	1
10 The Bride of Hate	78	74	4
11 The Iced Bullet	62	53
14 The Americano	99	97	11
10 Chicken Casey	75	56	1
13 Jim Bludso	64	42	1
14 The Crab	83	70	5
10 Girl of the Timberclaims	37	34
15 The Gunfighter	76	85	10
11 The Bad Boy	72	50	2
9 Princess of the Dark	36	42
5 Stage-Struck	35	32
9 The Last of the Ingrams	46	41
7 Blood Will Tell	65	62
3 Love Sublime	42	35
6 The Little Brother	48	36	2
5 Back of the Man	91	81	5
9 Betsy's Burglar	59	55
9 The Square Deal Man	97	98	5
6 The Dark Road	62	53	1
1 A Daughter of the Poor	35	38
5 Woman's Awakening	62	50
6 Her Father's Keeper	47	34
6 Her Official Fathers	46	43
7 Old-Fashioned Young Man	44	46
5 Sweetheart of the Doomed	79	68	3
5 Paddy O'Hara	54	47	1
6 The Desert Man	88	89
5 Cheerful Givers	32	30
5 The Pinch Hitter	99	69
4 Hands Up!	28	25
4 The Snarl	40	49
1 Might and the Man	20	20
3 Happiness	63	40
2 The Man Who Made Good	20	20
2 Wild Winship's Widow	65	58
3 Souls Triumphant	40	34
2 Millionaire Vagrant	73	65
1 Wold Lowry	90	95

WORLD

439 World	67.8	62.2	40
9 Hearts Afire	68	73
1 Daughter of the Sea	60	50
3 The Warning	33	48
4 The Little Dutch Girl	80	63
1 The Price of Her Silence	80	90
2 The Master of the House	85	85
1 The Dragon	60	30
1 The Price	50	65
1 Love's Cross Roads	85	80
1 Better Woman	75	65
1 By Whose Hand	60	55
1 Her Great Hour	60	40
1 When it Strikes Home	40	45
3 Circus Romance	45	55
1 Old Dutch	75	50
2 Ballet Girl	40	40
3 Marrying Money	70	65
1 Wishing Ring	60	60
3 The Dollar Mark	55	42
1 Gentleman from Mississippi	60	60
1 As Ye Sow	100	45
1 Stolen Voice	30	30
1 Face in the Moonlight	50	60
1 Women and Wine	30	30
2 Blue Grass	75	68

Reports	P.P.	B.O.	Repeat
1 Fruits of Desire	40	50
1 Alias Jimmy Valentine	80	60
6 Trilby	81	69	1
1 Idols	40	40
2 Master Hand	86	80
3 Devil's Toy	57	73
3 Salvation Nell	60	47
3 Family Cupboard	50	57	1
4 Heart of Blue Ridge	84	73	1
1 Butterfly on Wheel	80	70
2 Hearts of Men	80	52
1 Body and Soul	40	45
2 The Ransom	63	43
4 The Labyrinth	66	65
3 Should a Wife Forgive?	90	90
2 The Senator	83	60
1 Hearts in Exile	90	90
1 His Wife's Good Name	25	20
1 The Chain Invisible	90	5
1 The Imposter	80	75
1 Sunday	95	30
1 As In a Looking Glass	60	40
1 Over Night	70	70
3 Sins of Society	76	65
7 Camille	86	79	3
3 The Rack	89	69
1 Fine Feathers	70	40
1 The Clarion	60	75
3 The Woman in 47	74	80
5 The Yellow Passport	82	80	2
3 The Price of Happiness	58	50
2 A Woman's Power	45	50
1 Cowardly Way	60	60
1 Passersby	60	60
3 Man and His Angel	62	45
3 Supreme Sacrifice	77	63
2 The Struggle	60	60
3 The Hand of Peril	75	67
4 Then I'll Come Back to You	83	73	1
4 The Reapers	76	65
2 The Shadow of Doubt	78	65
2 Social Highwaymen	75	48
3 Closed Road	87	81	1
7 The Feast of Life	61	73
7 Her Maternal Right	58	74
6 Sudden Riches	76	71
2 The Twin Triangle	83	45
6 Tangled Fates	57	63
3 Fate's Boomerang	42	53
5 His Brother's Wife	83	74	1
10 Perils of Divorce	61	63
13 La vie de Boheme	47	50
1 What Happened at 22	82	80
5 Crucial Test	59	58
7 The Weakness of Man	61	68
12 Sally in Our Alley	68	68
14 Paying the Price	70	70	1
12 Miss Petticoats	59	61
14 Woman's Way	75	74	4
13 The Summer Girl	56	57
12 Rail Rider	68	60
10 Husband and Wife	75	63	2
8 Almighty Dollar	76	72	1
13 The Velvet Paw	74	69	1
1 Friday, the Thirteenth	72	70
11 Dark Silence	77	79	2
4 The Revolt	66	63
7 The Gilded Cage	75	70
6 Hidden Scar	77	67
1 The Scarlet Oath	60	62
7 Man Who Stood Still	71	63
8 The Heart of a Hero	59	49
3 Without a Soul	70	85
15 Bought and Paid For	93	91	10
10 The Madness of Helen	57	54
6 Men She Married	58	55
4 The Deep Purple	81	75
11 All Man	59	63	2
7 Broken Chains	50	43
12 The Rise of Susan	79	83	6
6 The World Against Him	52	43
9 Woman Alone	69	65	1
7 On Dangerous Ground	65	71
7 The Man Who Forgot	65	61	1
4 Marriage a la Carte	73	73	1
1 The Unpardonable Sin	40	55
5 The Bondage of Fear	65	63
8 Tillie Wakes Up	79	78	1
8 The Hungry Heart	87	83	2
6 The Square Deal	76	76
3 A Girl's Folly	65	75
3 The Red Woman	58	50
3 Web of Desire	82	75	1
2 The Family Honor	59	60
3 The Dancer's Peril	85	85	1
2 The Social Leper	65	55
2 Man's Woman	68	70
1 Darkest Russia	85	85
3 Forget-Me-Not	58	60
1 The Bludgeon	87	80
1 As Man Made Her	60	60
1 The Page Mystery	35	65
1 Yankee Pluck	85	50
1 Moral Courage	75	80
2 Mothers of France	58	53

METRO

497 Metro	70.8	67.2	49
1 Her Reckoning	60	40
1 Satan Sanderson	70	70
1 Cowboy and Lady	80	55
1 Heart of a Painted Lady	85	75
1 High Road	80	80
3 Shooting of Dan McGraw	81	78
1 Middleman	90	80
1 My Best Girl	60	60
1 Right of Way	70	85
2 Second in Command	77	80
1 The Vampire	80	90
6 Soul of a Woman	93	80	1
2 Silent Voice	77	87
1 An Enemy of Society	60	40
2 Song of Wage Slave	75	70
1 Emmy of Stork's Nest	80	60
2 Final Judgment	80	85
2 Pennington's Choice	92	90
4 Woman Pays	78	52
2 One Million Dollars	78	70
3 Barbara Frietchie	82	73
5 The Yellow Streak	85	64
3 House of Tears	80	65
4 Rosemary for Remembrance	73	68
3 Black Fear	73	57
5 What'll People Say?	80	54
4 The Turmoil	70	55
8 Lure of Heart's Desire	56	56
5 Her Debt of Honor	49	50
6 A Man and His Soul	83	83	2
3 The Upstart	68	72
3 Dimples	52	58
4 Corner in Cotton	64	58
5 The Price of Malice	66	65
6 The Soul Market	83	75	2
2 Blindness of Love	80	85	1
3 Lovely Mary	67	83
1 My Madonna	80	85
6 Her Great Price	80	68	1
8 The Wall Between	78	82	1
5 The Kiss of Hate	60	74
6 Half Million Bribe	69	49
8 Playing with Fire	78	75
11 The Come-Back	75	74	1
8 Snow Birds	80	77
8 A Million a Minute	72	84	1
4 The Spell of the Yukon	79	71
6 His Great Triumph	49	43
10 The Scarlet Woman	73	84	1
10 Dorian's Divorce	74	68
8 Masked Rider	69	68
6 Flower of No Man's Land	58	75
8 The Purple Lady	82	63
10 The Eternal Question	76	83	1
11 The Quitter	69	73
15 The River of Romance	87	76	7
8 The Child of Destiny	51	57
13 The Devil at His Elbow	64	61	1
14 God's Half Acre	71	62	1
14 The Weakness of Strength	68	54
11 The Pretender	80	72	1
7 The Upheaval	57	63
9 The Light of Happiness	67	61	1
10 Mister 44	88	93	4
8 The Wheel of the Law	77	66	1
10 The Dawn of Love	66	60
7 The Iron Woman	43	57
5 Life's Shadows	66	60
12 In the Diplomatic Service	67	83	4
8 The Brand of Cowardice	64	52
12 The Gates of Eden	68	51
11 Extravagance	69	82	3
10 The Waker	78	64
1 My Madonna	80	85
6 The Sunbeam	44	36
10 Big Tremaine	74	82
8 The Black Butterfly	70	79
7 The Stolen Triumph	54	49
6 Awakening of Helena Richie	63	64
9 Pidgin Island	69	73
10 Vanity	62	53
11 The White Raven	86	85
7 Wife by Proxy	45	41
7 Threads of Fate	39	38
9 Bridges Burned	43	63
7 The End of the Tour	41	41
7 One of Many	64	56
7 The Secret of Eve	34	67
9 The Promise	81	83
6 The Barricade	58	57
5 Hidden Children	39	60
8 The Mortal Sin	54	56
6 The Waiting Soul	47	58
4 His Father's Son	61	61
3 The Power of Decision	48	45
4 A Magdalene of the Hills	38	38
2 God's Law and Man's	35	30

FOX

626 Fox	72.9	70.0
1 Girl I Left Behind Me	0	25
2 St. Elmo	52	92
4 Fool There Was	82	96
2 Dr. Rameau	90	87
2 Kreutzer Sonata	90	85
2 The Idler	55	65
2 Celebrated Scandal	70	70
2 Clemenceau Case	87	81
2 Walls of Jericho	40	35
1 Woman's Resurrection	80	45
2 Anna Kerinina	67	65
2 Life's Shop Window	35	57
2 The Nigger	100	70
4 The Gilded Fool	70	75
3 Devil's Daughter	77	95
4 Should a Mother Tell?	83	76
1 Wormwood	80	80
1 Lady Audley's Secret	90	75
1 Princess Romanoff	60	60
1 Valley of the Missing	50	40
1 Children of the Ghetto	75	40
1 Samson	80	50
1 The Thief	90	40
8 Two Orphans	84	86
2 The Song of Hate	92	82
7 Regeneration	77	72
5 Wonderful Adventure	75	77
5 Sin	62	82
2 Little Gypsy	80	74
5 Soul of Broadway	83	78
2 The Family Stain	87	64
3 Carmen	82	83
3 Blindness of Devotion	56	53
4 Woman's Past	63	43
9 Broken Law	82	65
8 Galley Slave	76	75
3 Unfaithful Wife	73	61
3 Her Mother's Secret	73	57
3 A Soldier's Oath	82	70
5 Destruction	86	94
3 Green-Eyed Monster	53	74
3 Parisian Romance	65	61
2 Fourth Estate	80	68
6 Serpent	92	93
5 Ruling Passion	53	59
5 Merely Mary Ann	52	45
7 Fool's Revenge	45	49
9 Fighting Blood	74	69
4 The Witch	63	59
4 Marble Heart	41	60
10 Gold and the Woman	65	86
9 The Bondman	79	62
5 A Wife's Sacrifice	55	56
11 Blue Blood and Red	84	71
6 Slander	80	70
10 A Modern Thelma	59	49
9 Man of Sorrow	63	64
9 Blazing Love	70	68
11 The Eternal Sapho	84	87
12 Sins of Men	76	61
14 Battle of Hearts	63	61
10 The Spider and the Fly	67	72

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
1 Hypocrisy	76	81
0 A Woman's Honor	69	71
0 East Lynne	87	86
5 Ambition	71	67
8 Man From Bitter Roots	82	81	2
9 Caprice of the Mountains	70	67	1
5 Tortured Heart	71	67
1 The Beast	87	66	6
6 Under Two Flags	94	92	17
9 The End of the Trail	66	79
9 Sporting Blood	62	57	1
8 Little Miss Happiness	75	68	3
9 Daredevil Kate	74	78	3
4 The Unwelcome Mother	63	66
5 Her Double Life	86	84	4
9 Where Love Leads	69	61
3 Fires of Conscience	64	70	1
1 The Straight Way	68	73
8 The Ragged Princess	77	70
3 The War Bride's Secret	76	58
0 Romeo and Juliet	87	86	4
5 Love and Hate	66	60
4 The Mischief-Maker	69	69	1
6 Jealousy	73	83
5 The Mediator	75	74	1
4 Sins of Parents	91	78	3
4 The Battle of Life	72	63
9 5 The Vixen	61	73
4 Love Thief	86	85
3 The Primitive Call	63	65
4 The Island of Desire	75	65	1
2 The Price of Silence	83	75
2 The Bitter Truth	83	80	1
8 The Darling of Paris	66	73
3 One Touch of Sin	62	73
3 The New York Peacock	88	87
3 The Scarlet Letter	80	75	1
2 The Tiger Woman	80	80	1
3 Sister Against Sister	63	60
4 A Tale of Two Cities	95	89	3
3 Melting Millions	70	40
3 The Victim	64	62
3 Love's Law	17	27
3 The Blue Streak	53	58
1 High Finance	80	50

MUTUAL

29 Mutual	72.3	70.6	14

1 Buzzard's Shadow	85	80
1 Death Lock	88	85
1 On the Night Stage	75	40
1 The Mating	80	70
1 Enoch Arden	100	100
1 Girl from His Town	65	70
1 Ghosts	80	65
1 Cup of Life	85	40
1 His Wife	70	25
1 House of Scandal	90	75
1 Infatuation	60	50
1 Miracle of Life	83	83	1
1 Inner Struggle	40	20
1 Mill of Floss	75	50
2 The Painted Soul	82	85
1 End of the Road	90	100
1 Father and Son	75	75
1 The Reward	80	50
2 Bird of Prey	85	87
2 Inspiration	70	100	1
2 As a Woman Sows	80	81
1 The Decoy	50	55
1 The Drifter	75	60
1 Life's Blind Alley	50	75
1 Silas Marner	100	100	1
3 The Craving	69	67
1 Law Unto Himself	40	50
1 Heart of Tara	75	75
1 According to Law	65	52
1 Overalls	75	80
3 My Partner	72	70
3 The Bruiser	78	65	1
1 Hidden Law	100	90	1
3 Love Liar	72	81	1
1 Revelations	50	50
1 The Net	90	100	1
1 The Haunted Manor	52	58
2 Feathertop	90	90
1 Lying Lips	60	70
1 Dust	80	80
1 Other People's Money	85	68
2 Isle of Love	80	85	1

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
4 Whispering Smith	59	67
6 Soul Mates	69	63
2 Wasted Years	76	81
2 Far from Madding Crowd	70	67
4 Medicine Bend	74	81
4 Highest Bid	64	66	1
3 Her American Prince	70	67
5 Doorsteps	65	60	1
2 House of Mirrors	77	75
1 Wall Street Tragedy	65	80
6 Youth's Endearing Charm	77	74	1
2 Strength, Donald Mackenzie	75	72
1 Million for Mary	90	90	1
5 Judith of the Cumberlands	68	68
2 A Welsh Singer	60	53
1 Man Who Would Not Die	85	75
1 The Wolf Man	50	50
1 The Painted Lie	40	35
2 Three Pals	73	71
3 Manager of the B. & A	63	70
7 The Pearl of Paradise	69	75	1
5 Dulcie's Adventure	88	82	1
1 Bluff	85	80
7 Faith	74	65
3 Miss Jackie of the Navy	95	90	1
2 A Dream or Two Ago	88	80
5 The Innocence of Lizette	87	82
3 The Butterfly Girl	72	80
1 The House of Scandal	0	10
1 The Man From Oregon	95	75
1 The Girl From Rector's	40	40
2 The Greater Woman	55	75
3 Where Love Is	52	48
5 The Gentle Intruder	77	79
1 Damaged Goods	40	100
2 Philip Holden—Waster	59	48
2 Redeemed	55	30
1 The Love Hermit	78	78
4 My Fighting Gentleman	60	44
1 The Twinkler	100	90
1 East is East	90	90
1 Immediate Lee	90	82	1
1 Beloved Rogues	95	90
2 The Painted Lie	50	68
2 Motherhood	38	55
2 Sunny Jane	58	55
2 The Devil's Assistant	60	70
1 High Play	25	25
1 The Single Code	20	20
1 The Death	20	20

MUTUAL-CHAPLIN

1 A Night in the Show	100	90	1
4 The Fireman	75	88
4 The Vagabond	55	88
5 The Floorwalker	97	100	2
8 One A. M.	63	81	1
16 The Count	88	86	8
10 The Pawnshop	73	74	2
7 Behind the Screen	89	91	5
7 The Rink	96	99
7 Easy Street	97	100	7
10 The Cure	93	93	5

PATHE

131 Pathe	67.8	68.6	13

1 Last Volunteer	80	80
1 The Spender	80	80
3 At Bay	78	81
1 The Galloper	40	90
1 Closing Net	60	80
2 Nedra	55	45
1 Affair of Three Nations	75	80
3 The Beloved Vagabond	76	67
2 Greater Will	50	55
6 Excuse Me!	90	73	2
3 King's Game	56	62
6 Madame X	71	91	2
3 Love Trail	38	52
3 Hazel Kirk	60	55
1 Simon the Jester	60	55
1 New York	80	74	1
2 Precious Packet	67	65
4 Shrine of Happiness	78	72
6 Woman's Law	68	65
10 Big Jim Garrity	69	55	1
6 Girl with the Green Eyes	65	72
3 Matrimonial Martyr	63	73	1
7 Shadow of Her Past	34	81
4 The Fugitive	75	63

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
8 Little Mary Sunshine	90	78	1
1 Divorce and the Daughter	78	75
1 The World and the Woman	85	90
6 The Shine Girl	72	74
2 Fear of Poverty	65	95
2 The Test	60	48
3 Saint, Devil and Woman	44	57
3 Light That Failed	69	69	1
6 Shadows and Sunshine	93	77	2
3 Prudence the Pirate	65	78
3 Arms and the Woman	70	53	1
3 The Challenge	73	65
5 Joy and the Dragon	75	66
2 The Romantic Journey	78	68
4 Her New York	81	62	1
5 Kick In	76	74
1 Sold at Auction	55	65
1 Modern Monte Cristo	70	65
1 The Hidden Valley	95	90
1 Twin Kiddies	75	65
2 The Image Maker	48	40
1 Told at Twilight	85	75
1 Maybiossom	10	85

BLUEBIRD

213 Bluebird	62.1	62.0	18

2 Jeanne Dore	27	45
2 The Secret Love	38	40
2 Hop, the Devil's Brew	40	43
1 Undine	80	87	3
1 Wrong Door	75	90
1 Grip of Jealousy	75	85
2 Rupert of Hentzau	51	60
2 Strength of the Weak	76	75
1 The Yaqui	42	58
4 The Flirt	44	66
2 Tangled Hearts	44	36
2 John Needham's Double	54	59
2 The Great Problem	79	66
4 Gaylord Waring	51	50
5 Crippled Hand	58	69	1
3 Gilded Spider	46	64
1 Elusive Isabel	48	46
3 The Measure of a Man	63	65
2 Love Never Dies	65	48
4 Son of the Immortals	64	71
5 Eye of God	64	80	1
3 Bobbie of the Ballet	67	79
3 Evil Women Do	60	62
9 Three Godfathers	68	74	1
15 Shoes	71	77	3
11 Broken Fetters	64	56	1
8 The Love Girl	63	64	1
6 The Grasp of Greed	71	76	1
8 The Silent Battle	78	84
8 Secret of the Swamp	71	56	2
7 Love's Lariat	65	64	1
7 Bettina Loved a Soldier	70	72
8 Wanted—A Home	71	73
3 The Chalice of Sorrow	72	65
7 Little Eve Edgarton	58	61	1
8 The Girl of Lost Lake	65	60
6 The Unattainable	51	48
12 Saving the Family Name	80	56	1
8 Behind the Lines	63	63
4 The Social Buccaneer	72	65
4 Gloriana	69	70
5 Stranger from Somewhere	68	63
4 The Price of Silence	88	86
2 The End of the Rainbow	63	48
6 The Honor of Mary Blake	58	58
1 The Right to be Happy	50	40
4 Black Orchids	75	78	1
2 Her Soul's Inspiration	55	39
4 God's Crucible	88	84	2
1 The Piper's Price	80	20
5 The Bugler of Algiers	80	69	1
3 The Sign of the Poppy	65	63
4 Mutiny	60	54
4 The Mysterious Mrs. M	70	50	1
1 The Reward of the Faithless	72	81
1 The Saintly Sinner	45	50
1 The Boy-Girl	50	60
1 Susan's Gentleman	50	55
2 The Clock	75	68
3 Hell Morgan's Girl	88	88
1 The Devil's Pay Day	71	75
2 Polly Redhead	55	75
1 A Jewel in Pawn	80	80
1 Girl with the Checkered Coat	80	80

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
UNIVERSAL
1 Little Brother of the Rich..	60	68
1 Business is Business.....	50	45
1 Father and the Boys.....	20	30
1 The Frame-up	40	45
1 Judge Not	70	70
1 Long Chance	85	80
1 Man of Shame.....	50	55
1 My Old Dutch.....	20	35
1 Nature Man	95	60
1 Under Southern Skies.....	80	75
2 Langdon's Legacy	66	60
3 Love's Pilgrimage	62	53
2 College Orphan	70	63
1 Colorado	90	100
2 The Campbells Are Coming.	54	83	1
RED FEATHER
72 Red Feather 64.9		60.2	2
1 It Happened in Honolulu...	80	80
1 The Madcap	70	70
1 Soul Enslaved.	60	80
1 Knight of the Range.....	80	4
2 Beckoning Trail	88	71
1 Man From Nowhere.....	75	90	1
3 The Path of Happiness.....	70	50
2 The Sphinx	50	50
2 Pool of Flame	70	75
1 Lords of High Decision....	60	40
2 Black Sheep of the Family	60	63
2 Autuma	65	67
1 Her Bitter Cup.....	72	71
1 The Yoke of Gold.....	45	64
1 Heritage of Hate.....	90	85
1 Thrown to the Lions.....	60	20
3 Huntress of Men.....	49	55
3 The Youth of Fortune.....	69	63	1
2 What Love Can Do.....	50	50
3 Half a Rogue.....	75	60
1 Sons of Satan	60	40
2 Two Men of Sandy Bar.....	72	68
1 Folly of Desire	20	40
1 Brigadier Gerard	50	45
2 Romance of Billy Goat Hill.	75	55
4 The Target	76	46
4 Whirlpool of Destiny	67	65
2 Narrow Path	55	60
2 Drugged Waters	57	53
3 If My Country Should Call.	58	61
2 Black Friday	60	62
3 The Place Beyond the Winds	66	55
3 The Isle of Life.....	50	43
3 The Mainspring	72	62
1 Morals of Hilda.....	80	80
2 Mixed Blood	70	55
1 The Child of Mystery.....	45	15
3 Polly Put the Kettle On....	45	57
5 Fighting for Love.....	69	65
2 The Double Room Mystery.	55	35
2 Heart Strings	70	60
2 Love Aflame	78	80
1 The Terror	70	60
1 The Devil's Bondwoman....	40	20
1 Barriers of Society.....	40	20
1 Me and Me Pal.....	85	70
1 The Girl and the Crisis....	75	70
1 The Scarlet Crystal	60	75
1 The Girl Who Lost.....	50	70
1 The Gates of Doom.....	60	70
GREATER VITAGRAPH
2106 Greater Vitagraph 68.3		65.4	73
13 Battle Cry of Peace.....	95	50	4
6 The Juggernaut	74	75	3
7 Island of Regeneration....	85	81	4
1 Sporting Duchess	40	30
8 Sins of the Mothers.....	87	87	1
3 Crooky	70	40	3
1 Playing Dead	75	75
4 Dust of Egypt	69	55	2
2 The Rights of Men.....	74	85
3 Turn of the Road.....	82	78
3 The Cave Man	74	60
3 Heights of Hazard	75	44
2 A Nation's Peril	86	76
1 The Man's Making.....	60	78
2 Price of Folly	95	95	2
6 The Great Divide.....	83	73	2
1 Souls in Bondage.....	100	80	1
1 Thou Art the Man.....	72	57
3 Green Stockings	87	85	2
1 Milady's Slipper	90	90
1 Island of Surprise.....	87	85
3 Gods of Fate	62	62
3 Night Out	80	70	1
1 The Crown Prince's Double	75	60
2 The Writing on the Wall..	70	40
4 Kennedy Square	85	60	1
1 For a Woman's Fair Name	80	85
3 Hunted Woman	74	84	1
4 Hero of Submarine D-2....	74	71
4 Dollars and the Woman....	79	60
1 Supreme Temptation	60	60
5 Two-Edged Sword	76	53
2 Vital Question	80	85
1 Flames of Johannis	40	40
7 Salvation Joan	75	59
9 God's Country and Woman.	81	87	4
1 Love's Toll	60	80
9 The Law Decides.....	80	70	4
3 The Ne'er-Do-Well	94	94	4
4 Ordeal of Elizabeth.....	55	50
9 The Suspect	79	76	2
3 Lights of New York.....	70	78
7 The Destroyers	68	57	1
2 Redemption of Dave Darcey	90	80
4 Man Behind the Curtain....	85	76
3 The Shop Girl.....	78	79	1
3 The Conflict	57	47
7 Fathers of Men.....	71	67
10 The Tarantula	83	74	3
15 The Daring of Diana.....	61	75
4 Hesper of the Mountains...	57	61
11 The Light at Dusk.....	85	72	4
8 The Alibi	69	69
1 The Dawn of Freedom.....	0	30
4 Footlights of Fate.....	80	80
16 The Combat	82	84	1
5 The Kid	60	57
2 Phantom Fortunes	42	42
5 His Wife's Good Name.....	64	76
11 Through the Wall.....	79	63	1
14 The Chattel	72	83	3
1 Prince in a Pawnshop.....	64	67	1
8 The Blue Envelope Mystery.	55	59
3 Flame of Girdlestone.....	55	45
11 The Last Man.....	82	81	1
6 The Devil's Prize	49	62
8 The Price of Fame.....	43	45
6 Dollar and the Law.....	52	73
8 An Enemy to the King.....	61	67	2
8 Rose of the South.....	74	62
9 Whom the Gods Destroy...	59	73	3
6 Ninety and Nine.....	76	70	1
5 Indiscretion	53	61	1
7 Man of Mystery.....	66	60	1
8 My Official Wife	90	82	4
8 The Glory of Yolanda.....	73	75	3
2 The Enemy	80	70	1
10 The Girl Phillipa.....	69	76	2
7 The Courage of Silence.....	69	68	2
6 Money Magic	57	68
4 Blind Justice	59	55
8 Arsene Lupin	65	59
3 Intrigue	42	47
7 Kitty Mackay	55	56	1
5 Aladdin From Broadway....	60	71	1
3 The Money Mill	51	48
4 Her Right to Live.....	49	55
3 Babette	70	70
5 The More Excellent Way....	63	64	1
2 Apartment 29	55	60	1
1 Sally in a Hurry.....	50	50
1 The Cowardly Way	78	60
2 Her Secret	40	40
1 The Hawk	90	100
3 Captain of Grey Horse Troop	57	57
2 The Sixteenth Wife	33	55
1 Clover's Rebellion	100	100
1 The Soul Master	30	25
KEYS
106 K. E. S. E. 69.6		66.3	22
1 The Bank	90	90	1
1 The Woman	60	75
1 Work	75	75
3 Thou Shalt Not Covet.....	78	55
1 Vultures of Society.....	10	60
1 Between Savages and Tigers	90	100
1 Quo Vadis	60	40
1 The Spendthrift	10	60
1 Officer 666	25	40
1 When Love is King.....	70	75
1 The Magic Skin.....	80	75
1 Woman Next Door.....	60	60
1 The Havoc	5	20
1 Sentimental Lady	65	40
2 The Scarlet Road.....	70	60
2 Destroying Angel	90	87
1 Money Masters	90	60
1 Commuters	85	60
1 Musty Suffer	80	60
1 Devil's Prayer Book	80	60
1 Children of Evil	70	60
1 Green Cloak.	70	60
2 The Spoilers	97	95
5 Graustark	88	90
2 The Slim Princess.....	77	80
3 The Rosary	60	55
2 A Texas Steer.....	72	65
1 House of Thousand Candles	40	30
2 The Raven	87	20
2 The Alster Case.....	75	60
2 Daughter of the City.....	60	70
3 Misleading Lady	73	50
2 Cycle of Fate	62	75
3 Carmen (Chaplin)	50	93
3 The Little Shepherd of Bargain Row	75	63
1 Sherlock Holmes	75	50
3 Into the Primitive	52	60
3 That Sort	70	45
4 Valiants of Virginia	85	75
5 The Prince Chap	51	53
3 The Return of Eve.....	75	73
9 Country God Forgot.....	75	67
4 Chaplin Revue	83	79
1 The Innocence of Ruth.....	60	81
1 At Piney Ridge.....	60	60
2 The Heart of the Hills.....	63	60
5 Prince of Graustark.....	84	80
6 The Cossack's Whip	86	67
3 Message to Garcia.....	67	73
2 The Last Sentence.....	55	70
4 The Truant Soul.....	69	76
3 Little Shoes	82	82
2 Adventures of Buffalo Bill..	45	78
5 Skinner's Dress Suit.....	96	91
1 The Law of the North.....	50	90
1 Royal Pauper	50	100
3 The Heart of Texas Ryan..	59	68
1 Princess of Patches	50	100
1 The Master Passion	80	100
1 Burning the Candle.....	80	55
1 Skinner's Bubble	100	100
1 The Danger Trail	10	90
1 The Trufflers	40	100
1 The Saint's Adventure.....	60	50
PARAMOUNT SPEC.
5 The Christian	81	78
5 Tess of Storm Country.....	88	84
2 The Typhoon	85	78
7 The Eternal City.....	97	96
SERIALS
11 Patria	86	82
16 Gloria's Romance	78	83
3 The Crimson Stain.....	61	65
4 Mysteries of Myra	81	84
2 The Yellow Menace.....	40	40
4 Liberty	91	94
3 Grip of Evil	73	67
3 Who's Guilty	78	78
10 The Iron Claw.....	93	92
3 The Diamond Runners.....	66	82
8 The Shielding Shadow	91	91
4 Secret of Submarine.....	73	73
4 Peg o' the Ring.....	50	59
3 Scarlet Runner	67	64
5 The Lass of Lumberlands..	59	60
1 Girl and the Game.....	73	45
4 The Great Secret	56	65
3 Pearl of the Army	91	93
1 The Secret Kingdom.....	20	5
1 The Voice on the Wire.....	98	80
1 The Purple Mask	85	80

GOOD IDEA BECAME TIRESOME BECAUSE SHY ON IMAGINATION

Viola Dana in

ALADDIN'S OTHER LAMP

Rolfe—Metro

DIRECTOR.....John H. Collins
AUTHOR.....Willard Mack
SCENARIO BY.....June Mathis
CAMERAMAN.....John Arnold
AS A WHOLE.....Good idea became tiresome because of repetition and failure to hit imaginative high spots
STORY.....Fanciful stuff which promised well but failed to become fanciful enough
DIRECTION.....Played star very strong, but failed to build sufficient atmosphere around her
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Sometimes very good, but frequently ordinary
LIGHTINGS.....A few excellent; generally ordinary CAMERA WORK.....Dissolves very good, but most of it not distinctive STAR.....Very pleasing, although did same pouting stuff a bit too much
SUPPORT.....Good; not exceptional
EXTERIORS.....Good fishing town atmosphere
INTERIORS.....Some good; others lacked distinctive class
TIME.....Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

THEY started this off with a lot of hokum which gave Miss Dana a chance to do little comedy character bits that were quite pleasing and then they pulled an excellent idea in the form of a sort of burlesque on "Aladdin's Lamp."

This promised very well, but soon we found that the author and director had failed to realize on the possibilities of the idea, and, as a consequence, the production was rather disappointing. We had too much of the same sort of action without the imaginative possibilities and the central thought being fully developed.

Miss Dana was played into many close-ups, and in some of these she was very pretty. Unfortunately, they kept her doing the same sort of thing too much, and the result was that this repitition, tacked on top of the slowing up of the plot, made the action rather tiresome in the last half.

The story had to do with a boarding house slavey who wanted to be somebody and the dream which she had about an old lamp which she rescued from a junk shop, being Aladdin's Lamp.

Her dream came from a yarn told by an old friend, and then on the finish, after she was disappointed in the lamp's failure to bring riches, we found that it contained the proofs of her identity as an heiress. This is the old plot idea of the fortune stowed away in the rocking chair, which was kicked all over the place, only in this they added the "Aladdin's Lamp" dream. Had the Aladdin element been developed to the full possibilities of the burlesque idea, this could have been made into an excellent comedy. As it is, there are many spots where it slumps very badly.

Most of the action was apparently planned and played to give Miss Dana a chance to do cute things, and in some of these she was very effective. If your fans are partial to her, they may consider this an entertaining little offering, although I think even the most enthusiastic will get a bit tired towards the end. Most of them will have the discovery of the mother through means of the lamp, figured out many reels before it happens, so that there is little suspense to the story.

In the supporting cast were Robert Walker, Henry Hallan, Ed Elkas, Augustus Phillips, Ricca Allen, Nellie Grant and Louis B. Foley.

The Box Office Angle.

In case Miss Dana gets you money, you can very safely play this, because the whole thing is a light comedy romance that should get by with most any one and may please many exceedingly.

I wouldn't promise that it is an exceptional offering, because it isn't. But the light vein of comedy that runs throughout will undoubtedly give more satisfaction than the ordinary movie meller, so that for hot weather your fans may think this is a good film.

By way of stirring up interest, you might use lines like this: "What would you do with Aladdin's Lamp? Think it over! Supposing you found Aladdin's Lamp in a junk shop today, what would you ask for? Think it over!"

HAROLD LOCKWOOD

Yorke--Metro

Benjamin Chapin

Author and Director General of the Lincoln Cycle Photoplays

The Benjamin Chapin Studios and Executive Offices: Ridgefield Park, N. J. Telephone 583 Hackensack

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
ART DRAMAS
1 Whoso Taketh A Wife	90	90
2 The Lash of Destiny	60	45
3 A God of Little Children	67	63
2 Infidelity	63	65
2 The Great Secret	35	45
2 The Rainbow	68	66
1 Rosie O'Grady	82	80
1 Her Good Name	85	86
SELZNICK
15 The Common Law	83	90	5
6 Vera, the Medium	61	59	2
8 The Foolish Virgin	36	66	2
17 War Brides	76	52	9
8 Panthea	81	76	4
9 The Price She Paid	71	70	3
4 The Argyle Case	86	74	2
2 The Easiest Way	92	78
Mc CLURE
5 Pride	34	37
5 Envy	37	52
4 Passion	15	19
5 Greed	31	34
4 Sloth	13	13
4 Wrath	13	15
4 The Seventh Sin	5	13
ARTCRAFT
17 Less Than the Dust	56	72	5
18 The Pride of the Clan	73	74
9 The Poor Litle Rich Girl	96	97	7
4 Broadway Jones	99	95	1
3 In Again—Out Again	83	92	1
1 Romance of the Redwoods	60	60
6 The Butcher Boy	66	73	1
UNIV. SPEC.
1 Scandal	80	72
1 Robinson Crusoe	65	70
8 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea	65	86	4
9 Dumb Girl of Portici	48	62
2 Diana the Huntress	58	75	1
8 Where Are My Children?	79	84	2
2 Jewel	83	65
1 God's Law	40	40
4 The Eagle's Wings	82	77
8 Idle Wives	57	88	4
2 Neptune's Daughter	61	60	1
IVAN
1 Her Surrender	85	70
2 Her Husband's Wife	90	95
2 The Flower of Faith	50	25
2 Faded Flower	82	74	1

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

WILLIAM F. ALDRICH
FEATURE PRODUCER
Screen Club, 117 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG CORP.

BERT CARBER
TECHNICAL DIRECTOR
THANHOUSER SCREEN CLUB

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

HAL CLARENDON
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL

J. GORDON EDWARDS
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
PRODUCING
Clara Kimball Young Features

JACK HARVEY
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
Producer of
"PARENTAGE"

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
PRODUCING FEATURES
Ivan Film Corp.

LLOYD INGRAHAM
MANAGEMENT
GRIFFITH-FINE ARTS STUDIOS

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR
Frohman Amusement Corporation

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

HARLEY KNOLES
FEATURE DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

O. A. C. LUND

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE PRODUCER
B. A. Rolfe-Metro Pictures Corporation

EUGENE NOWLAND
PRODUCING FEATURES

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITAGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

FREDERIC SULLIVAN
DIRECTOR THANHOUSER
Screen Club

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
PRODUCING FEATURES
VITAGRAPH

JAMES VINCENT
PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

JAMES YOUNG

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adapter of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Address—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM — A MAGAZINE — IN FACT A SERVICE

WID'S

INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS

Always Independent Issued Every Thursday VOL. III. THURSDAY, JULY 12, 1917. NO. 28 25 Cents a Copy $10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

An Appreciation That I Appreciate!

Many friends ask me why I wear such a funny tie. Their smiling face generally sobers when I tell them, "In memory of Elbert Hubbard."

Elbert Hubbard was a wonderful man. He inspired millions. He made men think. For years I read the "Philistine." In fact, I don't believe I missed a number until the Master Hand was stilled in the Lusitania horror.

I saw red for a time when I read of Hubbard's death, and for days I searched the papers silently, with sinking heart, for news that he had been rescued. That was a truly big personal black mark which I chalked up against Bill Kaiser. I had never met Hubbard, but he was my friend.

Many of you fellows possibly never heard of "The Fra." Well, that evens up the fact that many Fra readers had never heard of "Wid's." But, say, ever since the first issue of Elbert Hubbard's "Fra" I have been one of the regulars. It's good stuff, boys; it hits!

"The Fra" has been continued since Mr. Hubbard's death by "The Roycrofters," under the editorship of Felix Shay, for years one of the Master's ablest lieutenants.

I have had many wonderful letters from you boys on the firing line who try to please your patrons, and many inspiring letters from producers, directors and players who have appreciated the fact that I have been sincerely trying, sometimes at personal sacrifice, to do you all some good, personally, and at the same time help the industry to better things.

Now comes an outsider and says, "Well done!" They say what they think up in East Aurora, N. Y.—and—well, what "Felix" said about yours truly was quite some.

Appreciation from a gang who are sure-enough fire eaters when occasion demands, is gratifying —and then some.

Give this the once-over.

THE FRA

WID'S WEEKLY

IN the month, I give the brief and inglorious once-over to, say, some 300 periodic publications; not counting a daily squint at sundry newspapers. Then there are half a dozen I read: The Literary Digest, Reedy's Mirror, Collier's Editorials, Pearson's, La Follette's, The Masses. Lately, another, Wid's Weekly. This selection betokens my appreciation of Honest Writers.

Unless you are a Moving-Picture Producer, a Movie Actor, or the owner of a Picture Theatre, you probably have never heard of Wid Gunning or His Weekly, "the Bradstreet of Filmdom"! If you patronize the Movies and find yourself pleased, his work you do know. Even though you fail to recognize it. Wid Gunning, more than any other man, is the constructive force in American Filmdom.

Wid's Weekly is about half the over-all size of The Saturday Evening Post, sixteen pages and cover, and sells for $10.00 a year. Especially to Movie-Theatre Managers. "In form a Magazine, in fact a Service!" Before a film is offered for sale, Wid Gunning, personally, reviews the "Feature," and writes into His Weekly exactly what he thinks of it and why.

These are sample Wid reviews:

Wilfred Lucas and Lillian Gish in
SOULS TRIUMPHANT
Fine Arts—Triangle

Director.....John B. O'Brien
Author.....Mary H. O'Connor
As a Whole.....Ordinary surface "vamp" and righteous wife routine stuff
Story.....Never impressed and didn't deserve footage
Direction.....Atmosphere rather cheap; action missed fire
Photography.....Ordinary
Lightings....Generally too uniform; not distinctive
Camera Work.....Only fair
Stars.....Worked hard, but badly handicapped
Support.....Very ordinary
Exteriors.....Lacked distinction
Interiors.....Ordinary
Detail.....Acceptable, although convenient
Time.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

Jack Pickford and Louise Huff in
FRECKLES
Lasky—Paramount

Director.....Marshall A. Neilan
Author.....Gene Stratton Porter
Scenario by.....Marian Fairfax
Cameraman.....Walter Stradling

As a Whole....Rather obvious story made distinctive by producer's treatment
Story.....Fairly interesting, with sympathy touches; but very obvious and rather mechanical and convenient
Direction.....By artistic lightings and excellent locations made atmosphere distinctive and gave action additional power through treatment
Photography....Generally excellent; many very beautiful bits
Lightings.....Some truly artistic; generally good
Camera Work..... Very good
Stars .....Pleasing youngsters
Support..... Good
Exteriors.....Well chosen; some very beautiful; all good
Interiors.....Good; some nice lightings
Detail.....Several nice touches
Time..... Fifty-eight min. (5 parts)

Following this sketchy summary, Wid gives his reasons concisely; justifies his opinions, which are distinguished for a fair and open attitude. He is serving the Movie-Theatre Managers, and, through an improvement of their Offerings, the Public. So he criticizes, but he is not a Critic. A Critic would rather say something smart than tell the Truth! Wid never destroys Another's reputation simply to build his Own! At least that's his fame in the "Profesh," and Actors and Actresses are the most sensitive people on earth. They know the full value, in heartaches and tears and smiles, of honest criticism and praise.

Some months ago, in The Fra, I gave my unexpurgated opinion of "De Movies." Dozens of Actors and Theatre-Managers mailed me copies of Wid's Weekly. "Here's the boy trying to do just what you say ought to be done. Why not get behind him?" Of course, I wrote to Wid Gunning and ate crow and foreswore allegiance.

To prove his magnanimity he put me on his very small and select Free List, much to my profit.

Since Wid let me in behind the Movie Scenes, and talked Success and Failure with me frankly through constructive criticisms, and explained the Whys and Wherefores, the Slip-ups, and the Successes, he's humanized the Movies for me. Unless I watch out, I'll be a "Fan"!

THERE are other Trade Magazines for Moving Theatre Manager, but Wid's accepts no advertising—and refuses subsidies. His $10-a-year Subscription-Price gives him Economic Freedom, which is the backbone of Independence! D. W. Griffith, Mary Pickford, Cecil De Mille of Lasky's, Douglas Fairbanks, Bill Hart—all the Top-Notchers in Moviedom have endorsed Wid and Wid's.

"Why are there so many Rotten films?" I asked Wid. "Why do the Theatres buy them?"

This has been the condition.

There are just twenty distributing cities in America. Unless a Small-Town Manager chooses to spend carfare, and a good deal of his time, he never sees the Picture he buys, in advance. He must take the Producer's Salesman's description as fact. The business of a Film Salesman is to sell Films. I guess so! Bad business No. 1.

Bad business No. 2. For years Film Theatres had to contract for a certain "Brand" of Films by the year. This contract brought good, bad and rotten films. No one Company, or set of Actors, produce sure shots exclusively. The Theatre-Managers were not permitted to buy in the open market.

The first condition Wid's criticisms wiped out; the Theatre-Managers followed his judgment as to what is desirable. Eighty per cent of the Managers of the best Movie-Theatres in America subscribe to Wid's.

His two-year fight for an Open Market, and "standardization" of Stars rather than Brands, has met with the approval of the Big Producer. The Open Market is here!

Wid told the Big Producers: "You can't handicap the Film Industry of the World with contracts that force bad films on Theatre-Managers—and the Public! You challenge reaction! You dare failure!"

¶They saw the light!

Inside the Business, Wid has worked another reform; namely, concentrated responsibility. He demanded the Director be made responsible for the production of a film; over the Boss, over the Author, over the Actor! Divided authority always means failure, ultimately. Divided authority produces only quarrels successfully. So now the Director is "it," and he gets the praise and the blame inside the Works!

The Actors and Actresses depend on Wid for deserved appreciation of Good Work well done. His is the test of merit. Exploitation of an Actor or an Actress does not influence his judgment. Not at all, at all. This they know. So the word goes 'round the Studio, "Wid will get it if it isn't right!"

Wid Gunning has reviewed 10,000 Reels in the past two years, personally. He knows all the "fine points" of all the Directors, the methods of all the Film-Manufacturers. He is generous and open in this knowledge. When he picks up a new trick in photography or lighting or what not, he passes it along. You'd think the managers would object. Not they. A fair exchange is not only no robbery, it's co-operation! All the Studio Mechanicians read Wid's to see "What's new."

This Season he is making the fight for an improvement in the "Paper," the colored lithos, the manufacturers send to the Theatres. Those who have revolted at these Drunkard's Dreams pasted over the town will agree Wid is a public-spirited citizen. The Theatre-Managers have joined with Wid in this Revolution—and soon 't will be make way for better "Paper"!

Then he turns 'round and serves the manufacturers. He asks his subscribers, the Theatre-Managers, to report back to him on the value of the Feature Films he reviews, as a Box-Office attraction. Thus, he back-checks on his own advance judgment. He compiles and arranges these figures; and gives the manufacturer the percentages of Success and Failure; gives them the average, money-vote of the People who pay at the door.

PERHAPS you judge from this, Wid is a paragon. He isn't. He's simply a Kid just past the Draft Age. His capital stock is the Only Girl, and a "rough-neck named Bill"; maybe two years old. A Chillicothe (Ohio) Kid, who sold Crackajack in the local Theatres and learned "the Business" from the ground up! He had the idea that an absolutely Independent Constructive Voice was needed in Filmdom. He knew if he could make New York accept it, the Country would follow on. So he went and did! An old Actor of the Legit, turned Movie Star, writes me, "Some agree, and some disagree with Wid—and all admit he's honest!" To be or not to be, that is the question! (Whether to pour the sweet sugary syrup of approval indiscriminately, or stand unencumbered and speak as a free man—?) But not with Wid!

So, Ladez and Gen't'l'm, I give you as the Toast—The Incorruptible Wid—His Weekly—long may he rave!

Another Message From the Firing Line.

BUNK VS. BUNK AND OTHER THINGS

(By an Exhibitor of the Short Grass Country)

To Mr. Wid Gunning,
Editor of "Wid's."
Dear Sir:

I don't know as it is your policy to give space to the wailings of a small-town exhibitor, but there are a few things that producers of motion pictures ought to know, and I know of no one having more nerve than you and I.

As a starter, I am going to explode a bomb right in the producer's camp by saying that there is no line of business of the magnitude of the picture industry in this country that is conducted with as little business sense as is manifest in the publicity and sales department of the motion pictures. That's going some for a starter!

There is a wail going up all over the country from both producer and exhibitor because of the enormous expense required to carry on the industry. Producers feel it and exhibitors are squirming under it.

The producer will argue that the high cost of productions is due largely to the enormous salaries they are required to pay their stars, and whose fault is it? Susan Sykes was doing an ingenue part with Bill Thompson's rep company, but she had "soulful eyes" and photographed beautiful, and with the addition of a few clothes she caught the producer's eye and secured an engagement. The producer saw her on the screen and he called the publicity man over to him and said, "She looks like a ringer; get busy."

"Getting busy," with the publicity man, means to grab the bass drum; so he at once starts in to bass-drum Susan into notoriety. Susan's picture appears in all the leading magazines at regular space rates, and Trade Journals wax fat exploiting Susan. The publicity man knows neither latitude nor longitude and is given license to tell the truth if he wants to, but he doesn't want to—he couldn't draw his salary if he did. It is just as easy for him to write fifty thousand as it is to write five thousand, and a cipher or two added onto Susan's contract (on paper) makes no difference to him—stage money is cheap.

The publicity man sits up nights advising the exhibitors and the general public that Susan is the most domesticated little animal in the world, and in fact is a regular little "home body, spending the most of her spare time from her arduous duties at the studio helping Mama in the kitchen and preparing such little delicacies as tea biscuits, sponge cake, etc., and that she simply "dotes on children," and a lot of other bunk that the public is supposed to swallow, all of which makes the exhibitor snicker right out loud when he reflects that in all probability Susie is just recovering from her third divorce case and drinks "Martinis" at 1.30 A. M., while "Mama" sits up waiting for her and wondering what keeps her darling little daughter so late at the studio.

Sue sees her picture in every magazine she picks up—and is mad if she doesn't—and her mail from milksop simps from all over the country is delivered in special bags, and she at once looks with scorn upon a contract with a salary attachment of $500 per week and wonders why she stuck with Bill Thompson so long at $20 per.

William X. Johnson was doing a blueshirt lead with the "Josh Simpkins" Company when he found out that clothes would hang on him in nice shape. So he asked the producer for a try-out and he at once developed into a regular "woman killer." The leader of the bass drum orchestra was told to start the music, and hell's been popping ever since, with Brother Johnson clawing his hair because his salary isn't commensurate with the number of nice-scented notes he receives from dames of marriageable age. Miss Sykes and Mr. Johnson can never pay the publicity men half what is coming to him.

Producers go upon the theory that Susie and William are the impelling force that drives people to the box office, and therefore they can command a salary that would choke a mule that had been brought up on baled hay. They never were more mistaken in their lives. The fans yap about Sue and Willie and send them bushels of nice little notes, but the fans represent about 5 per cent. of the picture-going public.

Whenever I hear a fan singing the praises of some one of his favorites I am reminded of a hungry, scurvy coyote out on the prairie at night. When he gets full action on his lungs, a tenderfoot would take to the tall timber and declare upon oath that there were a thousand of them.

Speaking strictly of the small-town picture audience, I think it safe to say that there isn't more than one in fifty that can tell the name of more than ten actors or actresses when they appear upon the screen. The public don't give a —— about Sue and Willie; what they want is a picture with a sensible theme and directed by a man of judgment.

I have lain awake nights and wondered why producers don't bass drum their directors a little and lay off from the stars a while; for the director is the man behind the gun in the picture business and it is to him, more than to any other one factor, that the business owes whatever success it has attained.

Had David Warke Griffith followed the lead of the average director when he launched "The Birth of a Nation," he would have featured Henry B. Walthall—to my mind, the most pleasing and versatile actor before the camera today—but he didn't do it; he featured "The Birth of a Nation," and incidentally D. W. Griffith as producer and director, and what has been the result? Any picture bearing the name of D. W. Griffith as director goes with the public, because he is remembered as the man who produced "The Birth of a Nation." The success of "Intolerance" will prove this statement.

Then, too, I have wondered if the time would ever come when producers would wake up to the effect that "sex" stuff, "underworld" scenes and "illegitimate children" subjects do not form the broad foundation upon which to build a stable and growing business. The time was when producers seemed to have gone mad along these lines and the market was flooded with these sickening subjects—in fact, I ran so many of these "illegitimate children" pictures that my house was dubbed "The Orphan Asylum," and it became second nature with me to take a nursing bottle into the box office with me every night, and every time I looked a kid in the face on the street I would wonder if his mother knew who his father was. I am glad to note, however, that there is a decided falling off in this type of picture of late, which indicates that there is a growing symptom of sanity at the top. There are a lot of scenario writers that ought to be hit on the head with a soft squash.

The most colossal stroke of business sagacity, however, was the adoption of the "deposit system." The man who figured that scheme out has certainly been in the oil business, for it's a case of "Heads I win, tails you lose"; and there is only one other scheme that has any sort of license to trot in that class at all, and that is the "Arizona Horse Scheme." But that system holds a little edge on the deposit system in that you can have the horses if you can catch them, and any exhibitor who would fall for the deposit system certainly inherited an appetite for cocoanuts from his forefathers.

The small-town exhibitor is beginning to wonder at what depot he will be put off at. He has been riding the bumpers now for a long time, and when he reads that Sue's salary has finally reached the figure 1 with a half bushel of zeros on the right side of it, he doesn't care whether it's paid in stage money or not; it looks pretty big anyway alongside of his overdraft to pay the exchange.

Let's get down to business and bass-drum, the picture and director a while and give the "stars" a much needed rest. Let's increase the fees for scenarios and spend a little money for blue pencils. Let's change publicity men and ad. writers and put them on the job who are capable of exploiting the merits of the production. Let's see what the Chicago convention will do. There is one thing, however, we want to remember, and that is that the small-town exhibitor is the backbone of the industry, and when he quits we will all be looking for a job. I've got mine picked out now.

It's a cinch that if Wid publishes this article the stars throughout the country will itch to redden their hands with my blood. But bless your hearts, girls, I have been married for twenty-five years and I am, therefore, proof against anything—and, besides that, the first thrashing I ever got was from my mother, for lying, and ever since that time "Truth" has been a cardinal virtue with me. I will give you my address so you can get action on me if you want to.

(Signed) JOHN CURTIS JENKINS,
Neligh, Nebraska.

FORCED ATTEMPTS TO BE FUNNY GENERALLY MISSED FIRE

George Walsh in

SOME BOY!

Fox Film

DIRECTOR	Otis Turner
AUTHOR	William Parker
CAMERAMAN	Charles Kaufman
AS A WHOLE	Forced comedy attempt that missed fire most of the time
STORY	A lot of wild stuff, some of which registered, with most of it draggy
DIRECTION	Showed fine flashes, with much that was ordinary
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied from good to ordinary
LIGHTINGS	Varied; some quite poor
CAMERA WORK	Some very good; some poor
STAR	Pleasing personality, but was forced too much
SUPPORT	Girl pleasing; others acceptable
EXTERIORS	Satisfactory
INTERIORS	Some good; others poor
DETAIL	Too much of it
TIME	Seventy-five minutes (5 parts)

GEORGE WALSH is rather a pleasing young man, but any juvenile leading man can be ruined when they force him to attempt to be funny.

In this story there were a few situations that were sure-fire, and many, many that went absolutely flat. The result was that after a certain number of the bad spots had gone by, an audience will lose its enthusiasm for this sort of thing. The general result is quite unsatisfactory—that is, figuring from what it might have been.

The average fan who is just looking at the picture to pass away a little time will probably accept this as it comes, enjoy the few good spots and say, "Good enough." The critical fan will undoubtedly come out and say it is rotten.

It was a heavy burden to give Mr. Walsh to carry, because the story had nothing new and was made up entirely from a lot of hokum which has been used in many single-reelers.

The plot centered around a college youth who got a job as press agent and then had a lot of trouble holding down the job because of various adventures. He finished up with a little farce melodrama in which he saved the heroine's ranch from a New York business pirate, who afterwards (as always happens) turned out to be his father, this of course proving that son was some account after all.

Doris Pawn, as the girl, was quite pleasing, and the other members of the cast were satisfactory, but little more.

The Box Office Angle

Because there has been too much of an attempt to force the fun in this, I fear it will not give general satisfaction. The average fan resents an attempt to make him laugh when he really doesn't feel that the action is funny, and because of that I fear this will not prove popular wherever you have an intelligent community audience to cater to.

If you are working with a house which plays to a majority of transient business, where they want a bit of light entertainment, the chances are that they will look this over, get a few laughs and decide that it is as good as the average movie.

Certainly the picture was too long. It could have been cut to splendid advantage in many places, since it ran seventy-five minutes when I saw it at the New York Theatre.

A few of the titles were very good and got laughs, and one or two bits of business were excellent, one of the best being where Walsh introduced himself to the girl on the dining car. I have a hunch that the Fox people figured that they would take a little wind out of Julian Eltinge's sails by advertising Mr. Walsh as a "female impersonator" in this production. I would be very careful about going very strong on this angle, because hardly anyone but a blind man would fail to recognize the busy little press agent in the woman's togs.

THE EPITOME OF ARTISTIC TITLES

MOVIE MELLER OF STRUGGLES AND CHASES HELPED BY HANDLING

Emmy Wehlen in

THE TRAIL OF THE SHADOW

Rolfe—Metro

DIRECTOR	Edwin Carewe
AUTHOR	Oscar A. C. Lund
SCENARIO BY	June Mathis
CAMERAMAN	Arthur Martinelli
AS A WHOLE	Ordinary melodramatic junk made fairly interesting by treatment and personalities
STORY	Terribly convenient and never really registered
DIRECTION	Held interest fairly well by treatment, although had many unnecessary scenes
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied from excellent to ordinary
LIGHTINGS	Very good on star's face; quite poor on some sets and exteriors
CAMERA WORK	Varied
STAR	Pleasing and quite beautiful in most of her close-ups
SUPPORT	Satisfactory
EXTERIORS	Some very good; others ordinary
INTERIORS	Some good; others didn't impress
DETAIL	Very convenient
TIME	Seventy-five minutes (5 parts)

CONSIDERING the fact that this was an ordinary melodrama with very, very convenient situations, it must be said that the producer has made it rather interesting by careful treatment.

Miss Wehlen was the central figure from start to finish, and it was chiefly because she was carefully lighted and because of her personality being so pleasing, that the offering held as well as it did.

The drama centered around one of those convenient things where an escaping bandit rushed into a hut in Arizona and found the heroine to be the daughter of a man he had killed when that man refused to permit him to marry aforesaid heroine.

They then pulled a scene which might either be a rape or not—as you like to take it—the value of this to the plot being that the willun left a note with the heroine stating that she now belonged to him and that he would send for her when he wanted her. This was the menace hanging over her head through the rest of the picture.

Of course there was the hero who wanted to marry her ,and she felt that she couldn't because of this menace, and then we had the hero's mother, who was society mad and purse proud to the extent of not wanting son to marry a nobody.

They finally pulled the sacrifice stuff of mother pleading with the girl and girl deciding to give the hero up, because of her past, and then on the finish, when she had gone to join the willun, our hero rode to the rescue, with officers also on the job to be sure that everything finished properly.

It happened that the officers started before the hero, in the pursuit of the willun, but the hero landed first. Both hero and officers pulled a stop occasionally in this mad pursuit to look around a bit while the camera ground out footage, and possibly the officers stopped in several scenes which were afterwards cut out, which might have explained why the hero got there first.

There was quite an assortment of struggles in this, generally between the heroine and the willun, with an odd murder or two thrown in, and several chases. If your fans care for the blood and thunder stuff, you may get this over as satisfactory. An average audience will probably accept it as program stuff, but certainly they will never enthuse over the production, because the story never at any time gets under your shirt or makes you believe it.

As a sample of the little slips, we found the willun nonchalantly casting a cigarette on the floor of what was supposed to be a very beautiful home. Of course, he knew it was only the studio floor, but then the audience don't understand those things.

Harry S. Northrup, as the willun, had the most to do in the supporting cast, Eugene Strong being satisfactory as the leading man, although Strong is more the type for a heavy than a hero.

Considering the fact that this ran seventy-five minutes in the theatre where I saw it, it seems to me that it is decidedly in need of trimming. There is much that could be eliminated.

The Box Office Angle

It is quite possible that you can get away with this as a satisfactory program release because there is enough action to make it fairly interesting, even though it is never really convincing.

If you have a house where they eat up the struggle stuff and the chase hokum, then this should go beautifully. If Emmy Wehlen is a good box office bet with you, you can play her heavily in this particular production, because she screens remarkably well in most all of her scenes and close-ups and plays very satisfactorily.

You might start a teaser campaign on this, with some sort of query as the following: "Has there ever been a shadow that has crossed your life? Are you living under a shadow," etc., afterwards announcing the name of this production and tying it up with your theatre.

INDEPENDENT PRODUCERS:
Before Presenting Your Next Production Have
GEORGE W. BEYNON
505 Fifth Avenue, New York City.
Arrange An Orchestral Setting
THAT WILL PUT THE PICTURE OVER.

Benjamin Chapin
Author and Director General
of the Lincoln Cycle Photoplays
The Benjamin Chapin Studios
and Executive Offices: Ridgefield Park, N. J.
Telephone 583 Hackensack

MORBID DETAIL AND NOT KNOWING WHEN TO QUIT MARRED EXCELLEN MYSTERY SUSPENSE MELO WHICH NEEDS EDITING VERY BADLY

Bert Lytell and Hazel Dawn in

THE LONE WOLF

Brenon Production—Selznick Pictures

DIRECTOR	Herbert Brenon
AUTHOR	Louis Joseph Vance
SCENARIO BY	George Edwardes-Hall
CAMERAMAN	J. Roy Hunt
TECHNICAL DIRECTOR	George Fitch
EDITED BY	James McKay
AS A WHOLE	Mixture of murders, thrills, mystery and action; with reel and a half of brutal detail cut out, would be great production
STORY	Crook-detective-suspense-action melo; good, but no better than many others
DIRECTION	In many places excellent; in others very ordinary, with frequent bits of objectionable detail that mar entire offering decidedly
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied decidedly; sometimes exceptionally fine; sometimes ordinary
LIGHTINGS	Many very effective and artistic; others very flat and too uniform; sometimes had bad light changes in different angles of same set
CAMERA WORK	Varied from fine to poor
STARS	He very good; she acceptable, although not pretty when emoting
SUPPORT	Quite satisfactory
EXTERIORS	Some very fine; others ordinary
INTERIORS	Many excellent; some poor
DETAIL	Generally good; some horrible bits that should be removed immediately
TIME	One hour and fifty minutes (8 parts)

IF this were reduced about a reel and a half in footage, which would be about twenty minutes in running time, it could be made into a great picture. The story is a crook action melodrama with thrills and mystery suspense, but there is an astounding variance in the treatment of some of the scenes, this being particularly noticeable in the lightings.

In several places we had revolting detail of murders and the burning of a body, which give this a morbid touch that makes it decidedly unpleasant. None of these details were necessary, and much of the action which was poorly done could be eliminated.

If this were intelligently edited it would be a very pleasing fast moving melodrama with effective lightings, several thrills and compelling action.

The story has to do with a criminal who worked alone and his fight against a band of criminals known as the "Pack," with both fighting for the possession of a small piece of negative which held the secret of an invention of great value to the warring nations.

Hazel Dawn was presented as a trained nurse working with the band of criminals who were fighting "The Lone Wolf," and then, after she fell in love with the criminal hero, she worked with him, against the criminals, but we learned on the finish that she was a detective who had been sent out to get the Lone Wolf. Of course, since she had fallen in love with him, and since he had proven a hero by that time, she decided that she would not arrest him.

In the way of thrills, they showed us a motorcar filled with men falling from the top of an open draw bridge; they registered an accident to an airplane, figh on housetops, etc. There were many scenes where th producer had an excellent opportunity to secure effecti lightings, and some of these were exceptionally we handled.

There was an unfortunate variance in the lightin which resulted in a bad contrast at times, with sever places where the light changed with different angles the same set.

The most objectionable scenes in the offering had t do with a brutal murder. One of these was where w saw a man take a razor and calmly walk into an adjoi ing room, where he sawed viciously at the throat of h victim. Not being satisfied with this, the directo showed him returning to the foreground, where he wipe the blood off the razor on the bedclothes. Afterward several characters stepped to the door and looked i turning their faces away in horror. Then one of the walked in, threw a few clothes on top of the bod poured a little oil on it and calmly set fire to the mas the director proceeding to show several close-ups of th burning bed on which the body lay. Cremation may b a very good thing, but I hardly consider a demonstratio of it good entertainment.

The other unnecessary brutality consisted of a de tailed attack upon Miss Dawn, which finished with he reaching over to get a large cut-glass ornament, wit which she belabored her assailant over the head. H was left for dead, but soon after we saw this willun get ting around, apparently more chipper than ever.

Mystery, suspense and fast melodramatic action i very good as entertainment, but when the producer o author stretches a bit too far it becomes funny.

We found the hero deciding to be honest, with th result that he returned some stolen jewels, but when th title registered the fact that he was going back to try to steal them all over again, it got quite a laugh fron the audience. This was due to their having over-reache in their attempt to carry the suspense element.

The introduction of a character labeled the Frenc minister of war, with titles proceeding to make fun o him, was certainly very bad taste under the present cir cumstances, and when this was repeated later in th action, with more emphasis, it jarred even worse. There were very few laughs in the offering, and certainly th production lacked comedy relief, this being another rea son why the audience laughed at the wrong time wher the action over-reached.

There was one place where they started a fight with new ones coming in every minute and the hero became "some" guy, which is also more liable to bring a laugh than anything else. When one of the ruffians tried to jump on the automobile in which the hero and Miss Dawn were escaping, and was shoved off, he did a very poor fall.

When called upon to emote, Miss Dawn was not lighted to advantage, with the result that she certainly was anything but pretty in many of her close-ups.

There were some lapses in detail where we had a prologue, because they pulled some automobiles and other bits of detail in tense early scenes, which certainly were not what would be found twenty years ago.

The boy who played the part of the Lone Wolf in the prologue was very good.

The exterior shot of the fire which resulted from the burning of the body was excellent. As a matter of fact this were so edited as to eliminate the objectionable murder detail, many of the bad lighting spots and trim down the action so that it would not over-reach, the production would register as one of the best mystery suspense stories that has ever been made. In its present form it is entirely too morbid, runs too long and doesn't entertain as a whole.

Bert Lytell, as the Lone Wolf, was excellent, and William E. Shay, as the detective appearing as one of the gang of criminals, was very good. Miss Dawn was quite satisfactory, although she was not lighted to advantage and frequently was not pretty.

The cast was very satisfactory, among them being Cornish Beck, Steve Grattan, Alfred Hickman, Ben Graham, Wm. Riley Hatch, Juliet Brenon, Florence Ashbrooke, Edward Abeles and Joseph Chailles.

The Box Office Angle

I certainly would insist upon this being edited before playing, because as it stands at present the general effect is seriously marred by the brutal detail and the fact that the action over-reaches so much that the latter part misses fire badly.

If this were reduced in footage, as it could be very easily, with the bad spots eliminated, it would be a very effective, artistic, fast-moving mystery suspense melo with many beauty spots and enough action to compel interest from start to finish.

If you play this I believe it will be necessary to depend principally upon your own statement that it is an effectively produced suspense melo that will surely entertain, because the names of Mr. Lytell and Miss Dawn mean very little at the box office, and the percentage of those who know the story of "The Lone Wolf" among your fans will be very small. The use of Mr. Brenon's name as the producer of "A Daughter of the Gods" and "War Brides" should help quite a bit.

It is very important, however, that the bad spots in this be eliminated before you show it, or the impression made will hardly be a favorable one.

ORDINARY MOVIE PLOT LIFTED BY RATHER GOOD DIRECTION

Marian Swayne in

THE ROAD BETWEEN

Erbograph—Art Dramas

DIRECTOR	Joseph Levering
AUTHOR	J. Fred. Sandford
CAMERAMAN	James Robertson
AS A WHOLE	Characterization and treatment of action kept this interesting
STORY	Unconvincing cheesboard movie helped by treatment
DIRECTION	Gave very poor lighting and made ordinary action interesting by effective treatment
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally very good; sometimes excellent
LIGHTINGS	Many quite effective; generally good
CAMERA WORK	Very good
STAR	Pleasing, although overdid being cute at times
SUPPORT	Quite effective
EXTERIORS	Good; although not particularly artistic
INTERIORS	Good; not exceptional
DETAIL	Some good bits
TIME	Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

THE producer has taken rather an ordinary story idea, and by the intelligent use of close-ups, lightings and a development of characterization has made this an interesting offering which stands out as much better than the average Art Dramas production.

The plot has to do with a family who moved from the farm to the city after acquiring wealth, with moneyhounds of the city immediately closing in to gather in their funds through the organization of a fake company, and an attempt to marry the daughter of the house. It finished with the family back on the farm saved by daughter's old pasture, which conveniently proved to be a solid bed of coal, this being discovered when she was about ready to sign it over to the crooks.

Marian Swayne was rather pleasing, except that she tried a bit too hard to be cute at all times, this becoming a little tiresome in spots.

Gladys Fairbanks, who appeared as the sweetheart of the crook who wanted to marry Miss Swayne, was just as pleasing as Miss Swayne, if not more so, on many occasions. She screened quite well, although her evening dress made her appear a bit buxom. Her characterization was very satisfactory, principally because of her repose.

The crooks and the parents of Miss Swayne were all well played and the action was made rather interesting by good treatment. Some of the titles were excellent.

They pulled a scene where the young crook pointed out Grant's Tomb to Miss Swayne, saying that it was his home, and, although this was quite farfetched, it will be a sure-fire laugh getter, just the same.

In many places they registered some good lightings and the producer proved by the handling of his scenes that he had a nice realization of dramatic values.

Others who appeared were Frank Andrews, Armand Cortes, Kirke Brown and Bradley Barker.

The Box Office Angle

As a program offering this will get by very satisfactorily. It is an ordinary movie plot which will not fool any of your regulars, and there is little suspense, but it has been so treated as to keep it decidedly interesting all the way. The flashes of the cabaret were well done, and, in fact, the entire offering was an intelligently made production for a moderate expenditure.

The title means little or nothing, and I doubt if Miss Swayne's name will pull you much business, so that I cannot figure that this production is worth a very stiff rental. Figured as a feature to fill in on a day when you play just program stuff as it comes, this should prove very satisfactory.

CRANE WILBUR

Exclusive Management

MABEL CONDON EXCHANGE

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

WONDERFUL TECHNICALLY, BUT VERY BAD PICKFORD SUBJECT BECAUSE OF REVOLTING RAPE SCENES AND TOO MUCH WAR HORROR

Mary Pickford in

THE LITTLE AMERICAN

Pickford—Artcraft

DIRECTOR.....Cecil B. De Mille
AUTHOR.....Jeanie Macpherson
SCENARIO BY.....Cecil B. De Mille and Jeanie Macpherson
CAMERAMAN.....Alvin Wyckoff
SCENIC SETTINGS.....Wilfred Buckland
AS A WHOLE.....War horror with much unnecessary detail; well done technically, but leaves bad taste; Little Mary buried under avalanche of atmosphere and action
STORY.....Had convenient situations and too much brutal detail; will not help recruiting
LIRECTION.....Exceptionally well-handled atmosphere, many big scenes, splendid technically, much fine lighting and good drama; but misses heart appeal and becomes revolting at times
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Very fine; night stuff excellent
LIGHTINGS.....Many unusually fine; generally excellent
CAMERA WORK.....Splendid
STAR.....Delightful, but seemed like pearl among swine
SUPPORT.....Several excellent characterizations; all action very well handled
EXTERIORS.....Very well chosen; effectively lighted
INTERIORS.....Very good
DETAIL.....Much that was very objectionable
TIME.....Seventy-two minutes (6 parts)

I SYMPATHIZE with the statement made by a prominent Southern exhibitor, who commented on the Pickford situation something on this fashion: "What are you going to do about it? When you play her in the good old curl parts, they say, 'It's the same old thing,' and when you put her in something else, they say it isn't a Pickford part!"

I do want to object most strenuously, however, to having Little Mary injected into such an offering as "The Little American." Technically this is an excellent picture because there are scores of big scenes that have been perfectly produced with very effective lightings and striking atmosphere, but, except possibly in the case of the Frank Keenan picture, "The Despoilers" (afterwards known as "War's Women"), I cannot remember having seen more repulsive detail of war's horrors, particularly as they effect defenseless women, placed upon the screen.

The picturization of the sinking of the "Lusitania," and most of the dramatic situations in this production, were very good, and if the curse of the objectionable detail were taken off, the production might register in a different manner.

As it stands now, I fear that nine-tenths of any audience will leave the theater with a bad taste in their mouths, principally due to the fact that they cannot forget the repulsive detail of the German soldiers breaking down doors to attack the Red Cross nurses, with close-ups afterwards of the woman victims.

At the very first of the offering Miss Pickford has a chance to do a few little cute bits, but almost immediately they introduce a German officer for a hero. Well, we knew of course that sooner or later this German was going to renounce the Kaiser, but, nevertheless, I am afraid that the average audience will not enthuse very readily over such a story idea.

They finally got Miss Pickford into the heroine-being attacked-by-a-drunkard-in-a-room scene, only in this they made it even worse by having her attacked by the German officer who had asked her to marry him before the war. Certainly this is not "Pickford" stuff.

Technically, Mr. De Mille has again demonstrated his ability to register effective scenes. I believe, however, that he has seriously erred in his choice of story material and his elaboration of certain details.

It may be that some will consider this a worthy picture, because on the finish the hero renounces the Kaiser etc., but I feel that the general effect will not be one which will encourage recruiting anywhere.

To make it clear just how strong the feeling is in this country today, I can tell you that the Strand orchestra very foolishly played just a few strains of a German air when one of the officers started to drink a toast, and this bone-headed move was immediately greeted by hisses from all parts of the house, and these hisses were not followed by a laugh, as you find happens occasionally when some fan hisses the willun; there was a sincerity about the rebuke given to the orchestra.

Jack Holt as the hero, Hobart Bosworth, and Walter Long, as German officers, and Raymond Hatton as a fighting little Frenchman, gave excellent support, with the handling of the extras at all times so intelligently done as to make the scenes very effective.

If the producers would take this offering and eliminate a great many of the objectionable scenes, the production would be much more satisfactory, even though it would still be anything but a Pickford subject. I cannot believe that audiences want to see these rape details, with titles such as this where Miss Pickford protested to the general—"Madam; my men must have relaxation!" The cold-blooded execution of an entire family while the old woman pleaded with Miss Pickford was another bit of horror that will surely not appeal as entertainment.

Through the wreck scenes, where the hit of the torpedo was registered very effectively by a big close-up of Miss Pickford's face, and through the wild scene that followed, in which the wireless S O S was repeatedly flashed on the screen, the general impression was very good; but as soon as we got into the war proper the unpleasant element began to dominate.

I believe that most fans go to see a film in which Mary Pickford appears with the expectation of laughing a bit and being quietly and pleasantly entertained with refined light comedy and a few touches of pathos. An offering like this, if intended to stir an audience by its very brutality, might be acceptable with some other star, but surely I think it was a very serious error in judgment to put Miss Pickford in such an atmosphere.

The Box Office Angle.

Of course, you can get money with this. Miss Pickford's name and the title promise patriotic entertainment that will please, with America's most popular little lady as the center of attraction.

I would suggest that you agree to play this providing you are permitted to eliminate all of the rape scenes and the unnecessary detail of horror. Certainly I would not show this production as screened at the Strand Theatre in any community house. To do so would be to send your fans away with a bad taste that might keep them out of your house for a long time. It would be a very easy matter to eliminate the objectionable scenes from this without in any way interfering with the dramatic situations, and if your exchange doesn't see fit to do so, I certainly believe that in this case you would be justified in doing it yourself, providing you have always played the Pickford subjects, and provided you cannot afford to let this go to your competitor, who might book it and cut it himself.

If your exchange refuses to allow you to cut this, and books it with your competitor, I would come out in an open statement and give your reasons for refusing to present such an offering in your house. You will gain more by that than you will by missing the booking.

George Creel, who has been passing upon some such matters as this, in reference to the newspapers of the country, is said to have endorsed this picture as one which is very "patriotic." Mr. Creel probably has a very hazy idea as to the class of people who patronize the film theatres, if he thinks that rape detail will appeal to them. If I were you I would not take Mr. Creel's endorsement as a criterion, but would look at this subject personally before booking, so that I might know whether or not I could afford to play it in my house. Of course, there are many theatres where all of this will be considered "great stuff." I am trying to warn you boys who play to community audiences and discriminating patrons.

GOOD JEKYLL AND HYDE MELO WITH VIOLENT START AND ROUTINE ENDING

Montagu Love in

THE BRAND OF SATAN

Peerless—World

DIRECTOR	George Archainbaud
AUTHOR	Jere. F. Looney
CAMERAMAN	Philip Hatkin
AS A WHOLE	Jekyll and Hyde characterization slumped into routine melo on finish
STORY	Rather interesting until end, which is ordinary and convenient
DIRECTION	Gave excellent atmosphere and good lightings; kept action interesting
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally very artistic; a few poor spots
LIGHTINGS	Very good generally
CAMERA WORK	Generally excellent
STAR	Dominant figure; good characterization
SUPPORT	Very good; some excellent types
EXTERIORS	Well chosen for atmosphere; a few very beautiful
INTERIORS	Good atmosphere
DETAIL	Good
TIME	Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

WE have here another Jekyll and Hyde story, with the author attempting to explain this dual personality by a rape scene in the first reel, this crime giving the child of the main portion of the story the Brand of Satan.

The plot proper showed Montagu Love, as the criminal prosecutor of Paris, searching for a notorious criminal, "The Strangler." Then we learned that Mr. Love was the strangler in his other personality.

Most of the action had to do with his drifting from one personality to the other. As the prosecutor he was in love with the daughter of a famous doctor, who had in the prologue been in love with his mother. As the strangler he was living with the girl whose father had been killed by the criminal who had attacked his mother in the prologue, and consequently was his father. This criminal had taken the girl to the apache den, and the strangler had rescued her from him.

We found a number of scenes in which Mr. Love as the strangler was planning with his apache band to murder himself as the prosecutor, because this prosecutor was trying to wipe out all of the apaches.

When they finally got down to the finish we found the end slumping badly, because they resorted to the old familiar stuff of overheard conversations, killing the apache's sweetheart off by the consumption route and an explosion, which stunned prosecutor, and then the operation which removed the pressure from his brain and thus ridded him of the criminal personality.

As melodramas go, this will register very satisfactorily, because the general atmosphere was rather artistic and occasionally we had some very beautiful scenes. The interest will be held by the action, and the players made their parts sufficiently convincing to be effective.

Although Gerda Holmes and Evelyn Greeley were featured with Mr. Love, Katherine Johnston, who played the part of the apache sweetheart, had as much to do as either of the others, and she did it very well, indeed. In many of the close-ups, in the story proper, where she appeared as Mr. Love's mother, Miss Holmes' make-up around her eyes was decidedly in evidence.

J. Herbert Frank, as the doctor, gave a very good performance, and Albert Hart, as the criminal apache, made this part brutally effective.

Others in the cast were Nat Gross and Emile La Croix.

The Box Office Angle

This should go big wherever they like melodrama. In any house it will be considered an artistic, interesting melodrama, although the rape scene may jar a bit with some, and the finish may slump it off so that the final impression is not as strong as it might have been.

This has been produced by a French director, who has given an excellent atmosphere to his scenes, with a few very beautiful bits. Figured as a programe offering of the melodramatic class, this is very good.

QUICK ANNOUNCEMENTS for Your Screen

SLIDENE OUTFIT: 6 bottles slide ink; 25 cover glasses; 6 special pens; 2 slide charts—all complete for only.....$1.00

Novelty Typewriter Slides.....$3.50 per 100

Handy Slide Holder and Clip FREE.

NOVELTY SLIDE CO., 115 East 23d St., New York.

ERNEST STERN, Inc.

THE TITLE MAN

Specializes in

MOTION PICTURE TITLES OF THE HIGHEST GRADE

729 Seventh Ave., New York - - Phone Bryant 8973

GEORGE EDWARDES-HALL

WITH

HERBERT BRENON

Index from April 5, 1917 to July 5, 1917

There will be an index in Wid's every three months following this issue. Each issue containing an index will have a colored cover to make it easily noticeable from the other issues.

PAGE	TITLE	DATE
LOIS WEBER PRODUCTION—UNIVERSAL—S. R.
214	Even as You and I	April 5
349	The Hand That Rocks the Cradle	May 31
WHARTON, INC.—SHERRIOTT PICTURES CORP.—S. R.
220	The Black Stork	April 5
GEORGE LOANE TUCKER—COSMOFOTOFILM—S. R.
231	The Manxman	April 12
FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.—S. R.
238	God's Man	April 12
ARROW FILM—S. R.
241	The Deemster	April 19
EUGENIC FILM—S. R.
244	Birth	April 19
CINES PRODUCTION—S. R.
246	The Fated Hour	April 19
BALBOA—B. S. MOSS—S. R.
248	In the Hands of the Law	April 19
FRANK G. HALL—ABRAMS & WERNER—S. R.
257	The Bar Sinister	April 26
PARAGON FILMS—S. R.
259	The Whip	April 26
EDWARD WARREN PROD.—S. R.
260	The Warfare of the Flesh	April 26
GEORGE BACKER PROD.—M. H. HOFFMAN—S. R.
262	The Sin Woman	April 26
FOX SPECIAL—S. R.
274	The Honor System	May 3
IVAN FILM—S. R.
296	One Law For Both	May 10
VITAGRAPH SPECIAL—S. R.
316	Womanhood	April 5
312	Within the Law	May 17
CHARTER FEATURES CORP.—S. R.
353	The Lincoln Cycle	June 7
SUNBEAM PHOTOPLAY—S. R.
367	Somewhere in Georgia	June 7
HOBART HENLEY-FRANK J. SENG-S. R.
369	Parentage	June 14
WHARTON, INC.—S. R.
374	The Great White Trail	June 14
WILLIAMSON BROS.—SUBMARINE FILM CORP.—S. R.
387	The Submarine Eye	June 21
MASTER DRAMA FEATURES, INC.-S. R.
389	Whose Your Neighbor?	June 21
JULIUS STEGER PROD.—S. R.
393	Redemption	June 21
ESSANAY—FIRST NATIONAL EXHIBITORS CIRCUIT.
397	On Trial	June 21
GEORGE LOANE TUCKER—COSMOFOTOFILM—H. A. SHERMAN—S. R.
418	I Believe	July 5
PUBLIC RIGHTS FILM—S. R.
420	The Public Be Damned	July 5
ARTCRAFT.
279	In Again—Out Again	May 3
319	A Romance of the Redwoods	May 17
419	Wild and Woolly	July 5
SELZNICK—PICTURES
261	The Law of Compensation	April 26
310	The Easiest Way	May 17
340	The Silent Master	May 31
375	Poppy	June 14
PARAMOUNT.
215	The Bond Between	April 5
244	The Tides of Barnegat	April 19
252	Sleeping Fires	April 19
253	The Lonesome Chap	April 19
253	The Cost of Hatred	April 19
276	The Girl at Home	May 3
283	Heart's Desire	May 3
292	The Valentine Girl	May 10
298	The Silent Partner	May 10
301	Sacrifice	May 10
303	The Marcellini Millions	May 10
316	Her Better Self	May 17
317	The Primrose Ring	May 17
321	Freckles	May 24
323	Unconquered	May 24
324	As Men Love	May 24
332	The Highway of Hope	May 24
342	The Undying Flame	May 31
344	The World Apart	May 31
358	The Jaguar's Claws	June 7
359	Giving Becky a Chance	June 7
395	The Strange Wedding	June 21
405	Forbidden Paths	June 28
408	At First Sight	June 28
409	The Heir of the Ages	June 28
413	A Roadside Impresario	June 28
414	Big Timber	June 28
TRIANGLE.
245	Cheerful Givers	April 19
246	The Desert Man	April 19
247	Sweetheart of the Doomed	April 19
263	Paddy O'Hara	April 26
264	Her Official Fathers	April 26

PAGE	TITLE	DATE
267	The Pinch Hitter	April 26
268	Hands Up!	April 26
277	The Man Who Made Good	May 3
278	The Snarl	May 3
280	An Old-Fashioned Young Man	May 3
299	Happiness	May 10
311	Might and the Man	May 17
326	The Millionaire Vagrant	May 24
327	Souls Triumphant	May 24
333	Madame Bo-Peep	May 24
339	Wild Winship's Widow	May 31
357	The Girl, Glory	June 7
360	Wolf Lowry	June 7
366	American—That's All	June 7
371	Love or Justice?	June 14
394	A Hater of Men	June 21
402	Paws of the Bear	June 28
403	The Clodhopper	June 28
420	Madcap Madge	July 5
422	Her Excellency, the Governor	July 5
424	Borrowed Plumage	July 5

BLUEBIRD.

213	The Clock	April 5
218	The Girl With the Checkered Coat	April 5
255	A Jewel in Pawn	April 19
269	Little Miss Nobody	April 26
293	The Flashlight	May 10
302	Treason	May 10
334	Southern Justice	May 24
345	Bringing Home Father	May 31
363	A Doll's House	June 7
391	The Little Orphan	June 21
411	A Kentucky Cinderella	June 28
421	The Plow Woman	July 5
423	Fires of Rebellion	July 5

RED FEATHER.

234	The Flower of Doom	April 12
265	The Birth of Patriotism	April 26

BUTTERFLY.

280	The Eternal Love	April 3
316	The Phantom's Secret	May 17
362	Money Madness	June 7
398	The Field of Honor	June 21
407	The Flame of Youth	June 28

MUTUAL.

219	Sunny Jane	April 5
236	The Devil's Assistant	April 12
239	The Painted Lie	April 12
249	High Play	April 19
254	Mrs. Balfame	April 19
271	The Single Code	April 26
285	The Wildcat	May 3
286	The Debt	May 3
291	Environment	May 10
326	Annie-for-Spite	May 24
346	The Checkmate	May 31
347	The Mirror	May 31
365	The Serpent's Tooth	June 7
378	Shackles of Truth	June 14
392	Periwinkle	June 21
406	A Bit of Kindling	June 28
423	The Upper Crust	July 5

FOX.

217	Love's Law	April 5
234	The Blue Streak	April 12
250	High Finance	April 19
266	Her Greatest Love	April 26
281	Tangled Lives	May 3
287	The Derelict	May 3
294	Her Temptation	May 10
318	She	May 17
331	American Methods	May 24
334	A Royal Romance	May 24
344	A Small-Town Girl	May 3
364	The Book Agent	June 7
372	The Final Payment	June 14
376	Heart and Soul	June 14
377	The Broadway Sport	June 14
410	The Silent Lie	June 28
415	The Slave	June 28

VITAGRAPH.

250	Sally in a Hurry	April 19
251	Apartment 29	April 19
275	The Hawk	May 3
284	Her Secret	May 3
314	The Sixteenth Wife	May 17
322	Clover's Rebellion	May 24
335	The Captain of the Grey Horse Troop	May 24
348	The Soul Master	May 31
355	The Magnificent Meddler	June 7
409	A Son of the Hills	June 18
412	The Question	June 28
415	The Maelstrom	June 28

WORLD.

232	Forget-Me-Not	April 12
235	The Family Honor	April 12
268	Darkest Russia	April 26
284	The Page Mystery	May 3
324	Moral Courage	May 24
325	Maternity	May 24
328	Yankee Pluck	May 24
365	The Crimson Dove	June 7
373	The False Friend	June 14
394	The Stolen Paradise	June 21
404	The Divorce Game	June 28
425	The Price of Pride	July 5

K. E. S. E. SERVICE.

221	The Law of the North	April 5
282	Builders of Castles	May 3
295	The Danger Trail	May 10
302	Skinner's Bubble	May 10
313	The Saint's Adventure	May 17
330	The Lad and the Lion	May 24
343	The Night Workers	May 31
348	The Tell-Tale Step	May 31
350	The Trufflers	May 31
362	The Mystery of No. 47	June 7
396	Filling His Own Shoes	June 21
404	The Ghost of Old Morro	June 28
406	The Land of Long Shadows	June 28

PATHE.

219	The Hunting of the Hawk	April 5
265	Sunshine and Gold	April 26
270	Hinton's Double	April 26
300	The Candy Girl	May 10
315	The Recoil	May 17
329	The Amateur Orphan	May 24
341	The Fires of Youth	May 31
351	Blind Man's Luck	May 31
356	When Baby Forgot	June 7
390	The Iron Heart	June 21
408	The Woman in White	June 28
411	The Cigarette Girl	June 28

ART DRAMAS.

233	The Inevitable	April 12
243	The Great Bradley Mystery	April 19
294	A Mother's Ordeal	May 10
297	Little Miss Fortune	May 10
318	The Auction of Virtue	May 17
328	The Mystic Hour	May 24

METRO.

222	The Hidden Children	April 5
237	The Power of Decision	April 12
248	A Magdalen of the Hills	April 19
296	The Millionaire's Double	May 10
300	God's Law and Man's	May 10
330	Sowers and Reapers	May 24
339	The Beautiful Lie	May 31
354	The Call of Her People	June 7
361	The Duchess of Doubt	June 7
388	The Haunted Pajamas	June 21
392	Lady Barnacle	June 21
413	The Greatest Power	June 28
431	Aladdin's Other Lamp	July 5

STAR BADLY HANDICAPPED IN VERY CRUDELY DONE MOVIE

Ann Pennington in

THE LITTLE BOY SCOUT

Famous Players-Paramount

DIRECTOR.....Francis J. Grandon
AUTHOR.....Charles Sarver
CAMERAMAN.....William Marshall
AS A WHOLE.....Superficial story very poorly handled, looked like mixture of home-town talent stuff
STORY.....Crude; convenient; elementary
DIRECTION.....Very poor composition, lighting, action and general treatment
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Quite ordinary; never distinctive
LIGHTINGS.....Poor
CAMERA WORK.....Ordinary
STAR.....Pitifully handicapped; never lighted to advantage
SUPPORT.....Poorly handled
EXTERIORS.....Very ordinary
INTERIORS.....Unimpressive
DETAIL.....Poor
TIME.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

THIS looked like a production which any one of you exhibitors might make if you hired a cameraman and took Miss Pennington out to work with a company of the militia and a group of Boy Scouts. The treatment of the scenes was amateurish, the action was weak and the grouping, composition and atmosphere was very ordinary throughout.

Miss Pennington is pretty, graceful and cute and has demonstrated that she has sufficient personality to mak her one of the big stars of the Follies. Of course, he regular work is being a dancer; but that doesn't mea that a real director could not take her and make her very charming ingenue.

In this Miss Pennington is given no opportunity what ever, she is never lighted to advantage and is badl handicapped by an insipid story that never gets anywher and always fails to convince. In one place they gave he a little dance, but this was not treated to the best advan tage.

Owen Moore, who appeared as the hero, seemed t feel the impossible situations and the poor handling, be cause he didn't work nearly so well as he generally does

The other members of the supporting cast were quit amateurish, many of the extras being very decidedl camera-conscious, with the disadvantage of always bein poorly ground. In the cast were Frannie Fraunholtz, Mar cia Harris and George Burton.

The Box Office Angle

Of course, this has a title that might make you be lieve that you can do some business with it, but if yo find it necessary to make good by showing them rea films, I would dodge this because it is crude.

If your fans are willing to accept productions tha are absolutely ordinary and only of "movie" calibre simply because there is a cute little ingenue in th action, then you might sneak this by. Personally, I'd advise that you forget it, because it has spots which ar so crude that it seems impossible that this should b offered on the Paramount program. Certainly, here i an instance of figuring that "anything" will get by whil the program system is still in operation.

REFORMED CROOK HERO MADE INTERESTING BY TREATMENT

William Desmond in

TIME-LOCKS AND DIAMONDS

Kay Bee-Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Walter Edwards
AUTHOR.....John Lynch
SCENARIO BY.....J. G. Hawks
CAMERAMAN.....Albert G. Gosden
AS A WHOLE.....Interesting crook suspense melo quite well handled
STORY.....Very convenient in spots, but provided interesting situations
DIRECTION.....Kept action quiet and dignified, with treatment holding interest nicely; gave distinctive atmosphere
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very good
LIGHTINGS.....Many quite effective; generally good
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR.....Pleasing; played with repose
SUPPORT.....Very good; McKim excellent; girls excellent
EXTERIORS.....Good; some excellent
DETAIL.....Many good little touches
TIME.....Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

I BELIEVE this will register as good entertainment most anywhere, because it is one of those suspense melodramas with a reformed crook as the hero, the action centering around complications which arose from his attempting a "last" job in order to save a friend. This is good old stuff, but, nevertheless, it generally registers.

Mr. Desmond played with a repose which helped th action decidedly and he was very ably assisted by Bo McKim, than whom there is no better willunous assist ant.

There was considerable action, with several situa tions which provided a nice element of suspense, an certainly the offering will prove interesting to any audi ence all the way.

Gloria Hope, as Mr. Desmond's sister, was very pleas ing, some of her close-ups being decidedly pretty.

Mildred Harris, as Mr. Desmond's sweetheart, wa more than satisfactory.

George Beranger, as the young lover of Mr. Des mond's sister, was good ,and Thomas Guise, as the so of the jeweler who was victimized by the crooks, ha a very pleasing personality and played quietly, with jus the right shading of astonishment and dismay whe needed.

The general atmosphere of the offering was ver good, the treatment of the situations in the handling o the close-ups and camera angles being such as to hel the action decidedly.

The final scene of the wedding supper was apparentl "duped," but this will get by with the average audience except for the fact that the duping makes something o a light change.

Others who appeared were Milton Ross and Rowlan Lee.

The Box Office Angle

I believe that your fans will consider this very goo entertainment, despite the fact that the story is decid edly convenient. The action moves with sufficient spee to hold the interest at all times, and the hero crook is made a sympathetic character such as most people love to see come through victorious.

I would make particular mention of the presence of Robert McKim in this production, and if your fans remember "The Phantom," I would refer to Mr. Desmond's work in this, with Mr. McKim being something like the character played by Frank Keenan in "The Phantom." It isn't as good a production as "The Phantom," because it lacks the story value, but it is very interesting action melo that should please anywhere if they have been accepting the average program offerings.

I Want To See

YOU

Look Me Up

IN CHICAGO

Will be at the Convention and Exposition, stopping at the Annex Hotel.

TABULATED PERCENTAGE REPORTS FROM EXHIBITORS

THE BATTING AVERAGES

These are the averages of the companies having 200 reports or more.

Reports		% P. P.	% B. O.	Repeat
637	Fox	73.0	70.0	85
519	Metro	70.7	66.9	49
1735	Triangle	70.1	64.7	351
423	Vitagraph	68.2	66.3	73
2015	Paramount	68.9	62.8	332
470	World	67.2	61.1	41
224	Bluebird	62.1	61.5	19

THE NUMBER BEFORE THE NAME OF THE FEATURE INDICATES THE NUMBER OF REPORTS RECEIVED AND TABULATED ON THAT FILM.

THE FIRST COLUMN CARRIES THE PERCENTAGE OF PLEASED PATRONS.

THE SECOND COLUMN SHOWS THE BOX OFFICE PERCENTAGE.

FIGURES IN THE THIRD COLUMN INDICATE THAT MANY REPORTED THE FILM WORTH A RETURN DATE.

All reports in this percentage tabulation have been marked on this scale:

EXCEPTIONAL	100%
EXCELLENT	80%
GOOD	60%
FAIR	40%
POOR	20%
BAD	0%

PARAMOUNT

2015 Paramount 68.9 62.8 332

Reports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
1	In Bishop's Carriage	85	93
1	The Lost Paradise	50	85
5	The Virginian	85	79	1
1	Such a Little Queen	80	80	1
2	Where Trail Divides	100	100	1
10	Wildflower	90	82	6
1	The County Chairman	80	80
1	What's His Name	75	100
3	Behind the Scenes	92	84
1	Man from Mexico	90	70	2
1	Circus Man	94	95
1	Rose of the Rancho	87	80
4	The Bargain	85	86	3
1	Ghost Breakers	60	60
5	The Crucible	97	94	2
4	The Sign of the Cross	89	91
3	Cameo Kirby	50	38
5	Cinderella	88	98	2
1	The Million	70	90
4	Girl of the Golden West	78	71	2
2	The Dancing Girl	71	68
3	The Italian	77	62	1
1	No Laughing Matter	90	85
1	Morals of Marcus	60	50
5	The Goose Girl	95	95	4
2	After Five	51	50
1	Mistress Nell	88	95
2	Buckshot John	60	60
3	Her Triumph	60	74	1
3	The Warrens of Virginia	70	71	1
1	Country Boy	60	60
6	David Harem	82	78	1
1	A Gentleman of Leisure	80	70
2	The Caprices of Kitty	63	70
1	Love Route	60	60
1	Sunshine Molly	40	20
1	The Governor's Lady	97	98
3	Gretna Green	100	100	1
3	Are You a Mason?	78	84
1	Pretty Mrs. Smith	65	90
1	The Unafraid	80	75
1	When We Were 21	75	45
4	Snobs	64	52
5	Captain Courtesy	84	84	1
3	Captive	82	67
2	Niobe	75	55	1
1	Help Wanted	80	75
5	The Woman	86	59	1
3	House of Lost Court	81	84	2
1	Fanchon, The Cricket	89	92	3
1	Betty in Search of Thrill	83	87
5	Stolen Goods	78	75
1	Wild-Goose Chase	60	55	1
6	Pretty Sister Jose	84	82	2
5	Jim the Penman	64	65
6	The Dawn of a To-morrow	83	88	1
5	Arab	89	56	2
1	Clarissa	75	80
2	The Dictator	45	45
5	Wild Olive	82	69
6	Chimmy Fadden	91	75	1
3	Little Pal	79	85
4	Rugmaker's Daughter	40	50
2	The Clue	74	88
6	Kindling	81	82
1	The Running Fight	60	70
3	The Fighting Hope	77	80
5	Kilmeny	75	73
6	Seven Sisters	87	86	1
5	Puppet Crown	83	85
19	Rags	91	93	5
2	Sold	83	72
6	The Secret Orchid	79	74
5	Nearly a Lady	65	75
6	The Marriage of Kitty	76	64
3	Poor Schmaltz	63	37
8	Helene of the North	87	81	2
3	The Majesty of the Law	56	60
3	Heart of Jennifer	68	55
2	Incorrigible Dukane	75	55
4	Esmeralda	89	89	2
2	The Case of Becky	65	65
1	Out of Darkness	60	40
1	Peer Gynt	81	100
4	The Explorers	72	61
4	'Twas Ever Thus	53	68
2	Voice in the Fog	75	67
6	Fatal Card	65	59
4	Zaza	91	67	2
6	The Girl of Yesterday	89	88	3
7	White Pearl	71	75
4	Blackbirds	57	58
7	Chorus Lady	73	68
6	The Secret Sin	69	74	1
7	Yankee Girl	52	57
6	Masqueraders	56	56
11	Carmen	82	83	3
11	Still Waters	95	92	7
8	Madame Butterfly	82	89	2
7	Mummy and Humming Bird	61	68
7	Bella Donna	92	77	4
8	Armstrong's Wife	79	65
8	Chimmie Fadden Out West	88	76	2
8	A Gentleman From Indiana	86	78
9	The Prince and the Pauper	92	88	4
10	Mr. Grex from Monte Carlo	84	69	1
9	Jane	75	81
9	The Unknown	76	67	1
18	The Cheat	94	80	12
9	The Reform Candidate	80	54	1
9	The Immigrant	73	62
10	The Old Homestead	88	84	7
8	Lydia Gilmore	82	61	3
10	Temptation	82	77	2
9	The Foundling	78	76	3
5	Tongues of Men	82	58	1
7	Mice and Men	84	84	4
6	The Golden Chance	80	68	2
1	My Lady Incog	40	40
4	Ragamuffins	77	57
4	Call of Cumberlands	77	72
6	The Spider	87	68	1
9	Pudd'n Head Wilson	83	66	4
8	Tennessee's Pardner	65	59
7	Madame Le Presidente	21	48
8	Nearly King	52	53	1
12	Trail of Lonesome Pine	75	88	3
7	Fell in Love with Wife	56	52	1
7	Blacklist	61	53	1
9	Out of the Drifts	90	89	3
8	Diplomacy	58	56	1
13	Poor Little Peppina	88	85	7
15	To Have and To Hold	75	72	4
11	Ben Blair	72	65
9	For the Defense	68	66	1
6	The Code of Marcia Gray	70	66	2
8	The Lost Bridegroom	80	70	2
7	The Saleslady	75	66	1
14	Audrey	75	72	3
8	The Sowers	65	60
10	The Heart of Paula	72	57	1
11	The Race	71	62
7	The Eternal Grind	71	82	3
9	The Love Mast	58	56	2
9	Molly Make-Believe	87	83	5
7	The Red Widow	62	53	2
12	The Heart of Nora Flynn	72	60	4
8	A Moment Before	52	64	1
12	David Garrick	68	46	2
9	The Innocent Lie	56	51
15	Maria Rosa	79	78	4
12	Alien Souls	69	67	1
13	The Feud Girl	60	56
16	Pasquale	78	53	3
16	Sweet Kitty Bellairs	72	62	2
20	Saints and Sinners	51	49
17	Thousand-Dollar Husband	69	62	4
22	A Gutter Magdalene	62	54	1
10	Evil Thereof	44	44
15	The Making of Maddalena	63	57	3
23	Silks and Satins	85	88	16
14	Destiny's Toy	60	51
19	The Clown	79	54	3
20	Susie Snowflakes	69	59	2
16	The World's Great Snare	73	78	4
19	The American Beauty	61	61	3
22	The Dupe	64	64	1
22	The Smuggler	53	50	1
26	The Selfish Woman	72	68	8
29	Davy Crockett	67	62
28	The Dream Girl	69	64	8
28	Under Cover	79	75	5
27	International Marriage	55	51	1
27	Common Ground	64	64	1
35	Hulda from Holland	95	94	23
30	House of Golden Windows	73	64	3
22	A Woman in the Case	72	72	3
25	Little Lady Eileen	87	89	10
22	The Stronger Love	53	52
31	Public Opinion	82	72	4
20	Rolling Stones	67	62	2
21	The Honorable Friend	65	62	1
18	Victory of Conscience	59	60	2
19	Each Pearl a Tear	74	72	2
20	The Parson of Panamint	77	68	6
13	The Big Sister	47	58
12	The Reward of Patience	66	54
13	The House of Lies	76	68	1
13	The Daughter of MacGregor	55	46

Reports	Title	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
16	Ashes of Embers	84	84	6
15	The Quest of Life	58	72
14	Anton, the Terrible	46	45
15	The Lash	59	56
12	The Storm	78	64	1
18	The Intrigue	81	60	2
15	Her Father's Son	74	68	2
13	Witchcraft	53	54
13	The Kiss	74	68	2
15	The Rainbow Princess	81	72	3
14	Seventeen	84	72	2
13	Miss George Washington	94	94	10
15	The Heir to the Hoorah	82	69	5
15	The Soul of Kura San	80	71	1
12	A Son of Erin	79	73	2
10	Unprotected	53	55	1
10	The Years of the Locust	49	51
11	The Plow Girl	75	60
8	The Yellow Pawn	65	58	1
9	Nanette of the Wilds	50	57	2
7	Martyrdom of Philip Strong	53	55	1
10	The Coney Island Princess	62	63	1
10	The Road to Love	72	59	1
14	Oliver Twist	85	69	6
12	The Victoria Cross	43	55	1
13	The Traveling Salesman	76	57	3
17	The Right Direction	75	59	2
18	Snow White	94	95	10
13	The Redeeming Love	60	56	1
17	The Slave Market	73	70	5
11	The Evil Eye	27	41	1
16	Great Expectations	76	53	1
14	Happiness of Three Women	74	60	1
13	Betty to the Rescue	45	47
14	A Girl Like That	53	48
15	Lost and Won	58	51
18	The Golden Fetter	50	55
18	His Sweetheart	83	58	2
17	The Wax Model	67	58
18	Each to His Kind	62	61
15	Her Own People	72	51
11	The Black Wolf	35	41
17	The American Consul	53	50	1
17	The Fortunes of Fifi	64	77	2
19	On Record	63	57	2
15	Winning of Sally Temple	40	48
16	Those Without Sin	54	52	1
14	Castles for Two	53	50	1
13	Out of the Wreck	60	54
12	Sapho	75	83	3
10	Prison Without Walls	52	51
11	The Dummy	70	54
8	The Spirit of Romance	62	52
7	As Men Love	73	51
9	The Bottle Imp	76	67	2
6	The Bond Between	52	37
7	A School for Husbands	48	46	1
6	The Lonesome Chap	47	44
8	Sleeping Fires	59	61	1
7	The Tides of Barnegat	46	40
7	The Cost of Hatred	40	36
8	The Valentine Girl	71	74
1	Unconquered	10	15
5	The Girl at Home	45	39
5	Heart's Desire	21	31
4	Sacrifice	30	48
4	The Primrose Ring	34	30
5	The Silent Partner	30	31
3	Marcellini Millions	32	20
2	The Highway of Hope	23	23
2	Her Better Self	50	55
2	The Undying Flame	33	25
1	Freckles	75	50

TRIANGLE

Reports	Title	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
1735	Triangle	70.1	64.7	351
10	The Iron Strain	81	66	2
8	The Lamb	85	73	3
9	Old Heidelberg	72	63	1
11	The Coward	84	67	1
9	Martyrs of the Alamo	67	57	2
14	The Disciple	85	76	2
7	Matrimony	81	74	2
5	Sable Lorcha	64	53
6	The Golden Claw	61	72
9	Double Trouble	64	64	2
7	Aloha Oe	63	[illegible]	1
5	Lily and Rose	61	53
7	Jordan is a Hard Road	58	54
6	Winged Idol	53	52
[illegible]	Penitents	28	32
11	The Edge of the Abyss	67	61
[illegible]	Submarine Pirate	85	78	1
5	Cross Currents	48	45
11	Between Men	72	70	1
14	Let Katy Do It	87	66	6
5	The Corner	56	47
5	The Missing Link	55	43	1
3	Beckoning Flame	65	48
9	The Wood Nymph	54	50	1
8	The Conqueror	71	70
9	Price of Power	55	51
10	The Green Swamp	80	78	1
12	Acquitted	69	51
6	D'Artagnan	59	54
18	His Picture in the Papers	90	75	5
13	Honor's Altar	77	67	2
14	Betty of Greystone	77	65	2
23	Peggy	94	91	15
7	Don Quixote	57	56
9	The Last Act	79	78	1
11	Daphne and the Pirate	71	57	1
18	Hell's Hinges	93	89	11
17	The Flying Torpedo	88	80	[illegible]
14	Bullets and Brown Eyes	85	75	[illegible]
14	Martha's Vindication	79	72	2
14	Moral Fabric	75	62	1
15	Hoodoo Ann	68	65	1
15	The Raiders	79	70
14	The Habit of Happiness	92	85	[illegible]
8	Waifs	70	59	1
8	Little Meena's Romance	64	60	1
17	The Aryan	59	80	6
10	Sold for Marriage	71	72	1
16	Stepping Stones	85	74	2
10	Sunshine Dad	36	46
9	Civilzation's Child	68	64	1
14	Children In the House	80	66	2
11	The Beggar of Cawnpore	61	49
18	The Good-Bad Man	90	81	4
12	The No-Good Guy	74	60	3
16	Susan Rocks the Boat	71	64
20	Not My Sister	79	77	4
18	Child of Paris Streets	76	64
21	The Primal Lure	82	74	7
8	Mr. Goode, the Samaritan	53	53
20	The Market of Vain Desire	79	64	5
21	Going Straight	77	78	3
27	The Bugle Call	93	79	8
26	Reggie Mixes In	93	80	11
16	The Sorrows of Love	66	69	1
20	An Innocent Magdalene	71	71	2
18	The Dividend	70	68	1
21	The Wild Girl of Sierras	45	53
23	An Apostle of Vengeance	88	87	4
18	Casey at the Bat	44	48
27	The Phantom	84	71	7
29	Flirting with Fate	87	86	11
30	The Deserter	85	68	11
26	The Little School Ma'am	74	67	2
26	The Eye of the Night	74	58	5
18	Stranded	61	51
27	The Captive God	65	70	2
23	The Halfbreed	72	74	2
22	The Payment	81	70	3
18	The Marriage of Molly O	48	47
22	Honor Thy Name	86	72	4
22	The Devil's Needle	64	64	1
29	Shell 43	87	69	6
26	Hell-to-Pay Austin	83	66	6
21	Lieutenant Danny, U. S. A.	79	69
16	Pillars of Society	59	56	1
22	Home	91	80	9
16	Gretchen the Greenhorn	64	62	2
20	The Patriot	78	79	6
23	The Social Secretary	89	74	8
17	The Thoroughbred	82	72	1
11	The Little Liar	69	57
18	The Wolf Woman	87	90	6
15	The Dawnmaker	59	78	3
17	Diane of the Follies	71	74	2
24	Manhattan Madness	94	91	12
19	Plain Jane	88	77	5
17	Old Folks at Home	83	66	2
16	The Jungle Child	62	63	1
14	The Rummy	68	52	1
19	The Return of Draw Egan	89	87	7
19	The Vagabond Prince	75	69	3
17	Somewhere in France	77	68	1
15	A Corner In Colleens	88	80	6
11	Sister of Six	70	64	2
20	Fifty-Fifty	89	82	6
4	War's Women	61	48
11	Atta Boy's Last Race	54	54
14	American Aristocracy	92	89	8
9	The Microscope Mystery	46	39
12	The Honorable Algy	77	67	3
14	Jim Grimsby's Boy	68	62	3
13	The Devil's Double	92	93	7
11	The Children Pay	73	63	3
13	Children of the Feud	56	53	1
8	The Criminal	49	45
9	The Gamble in Souls	72	68	3
15	The Wharf Rat	54	55
16	The Matrimaniac	93	94	8
17	The Sin Ye Do	93	84	10
13	The Heiress at Coffee Dan's	60	53	2
10	Three of Many	62	53
7	The House Built Upon Sand	79	66	3
7	Nina, the Flower Girl	45	45
9	The Female of the Species	76	74	2
14	Truthful Tulliver	98	95	9
12	The Weaker Sex	88	83	4
7	The Little Yank	40	52	1
10	The Bride of Hate	78	74	4
11	The Iced Bullet	62	53
14	The Americano	99	97	11
10	Chicken Casey	75	56	1
13	Jim Bludso	64	42	1
14	The Crab	83	70	5
10	Girl of the Timberclaims	37	34
15	The Gunfighter	76	85	10
12	The Bad Boy	71	51	2
9	Princess of the Dark	36	42
5	Stage-Struck	35	32
9	The Last of the Ingrams	46	41
7	Blood Will Tell	65	62
3	Love Sublime	42	35
6	The Little Brother	48	36	2
13	Back of the Man	91	81	5
9	Betsy's Burglar	59	55
10	The Square Deal Man	96	94	5
7	The Dark Road	62	54	1
1	A Daughter of the Poor	35	38
5	Woman's Awakening	62	50
6	Her Father's Keeper	47	34
7	Her Official Fathers	50	46
7	Old-Fashioned Young Man	44	46
6	Sweetheart of the Doomed	79	71	3
6	Paddy O'Hara	61	51	1
8	The Desert Man	89	91	1
7	Cheerful Givers	42	36
7	The Pinch Hitter	97	71	1
4	Hands Up!	28	25
5	The Snarl	46	56
1	Might and the Man	20	20
4	Happiness	70	42
3	The Man Who Made Good	40	27
2	Wild Winship's Widow	65	58
3	Souls Triumphant	40	34
3	The Millionaire Vagrant	82	70
1	Wold Lowry	90	95
1	The Girl, Glory	80	60

WORLD

Reports	Title	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
470	World	67.2	61.1	41
4	Hearts Afire	70	78
1	Daughter of the Sea	60	50
2	The Warning	88	48
4	The Little Dutch Girl	80	63
1	The Price of Her Silence	80	90
2	The Master of the House	68	53
1	The Dragon	60	[illegible]
1	The Price	80	65
1	Love's Cross Roads	85	60
1	Better Woman	75	65
1	By Whose Hand	60	55
1	Her Great Hour	60	40
1	When it Strikes Home	60	[illegible]
2	Circus Romance	65	55
1	Old Dutch	75	50
2	Ballet Girl	82	62
3	Marrying Money	79	63
1	Wishing Ring	[illegible]	60
[illegible]	The Dollar Mark	55	42
1	Gentleman from Mississippi	[illegible]	40
1	As Ye Sow	100	45
1	Stolen Voice	60	[illegible]
1	Face in the Moonlight	80	60
1	Women and Wine	[illegible]	40
2	Blue Grass	75	68

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
1 Fruits of Desire	40	[illegible]
1 Alias Jimmy Valentine	80	69
6 Trilby	81	69	1
1 Idols	40	40
2 Master Hand	86	80
2 Devil's Toy	57	73
3 Salvation Nell	60	47
3 Family Cupboard	59	57	1
1 Heart of Blue Ridge	84	73	1
1 Butterfly on Wheel	80	70
2 Hearts of Men	80	52
1 Body and Soul	40	45
2 The Ransom	63	43
4 The Labyrinth	66	65
3 Should a Wife Forgive?	90	90
2 The Senator	83	60
1 Hearts in Exile	90	90
1 His Wife's Good Name	25	20
1 The Chain Invisible	90	5
1 The Imposter	80	75
1 Sunday	95	30
1 As In a Looking Glass	60	40
1 Over Night	70	70
3 Sins of Society	76	[illegible]
7 Camille	86	79	3
3 The Rack	89	69
1 Fine Feathers	70	40
1 The Clarion	60	75
3 The Woman in 47	74	80
5 The Yellow Passport	82	80	2
3 The Price of Happiness	58	50
2 A Woman's Power	45	50
1 Cowardly Way	[illegible]	60
1 Passersby	60	[illegible]
1 Man and His Angel	62	45
3 Supreme Sacrifice	77	63
2 The Struggle	60	60
3 The Hand of Peril	75	67
5 Then I'll Come Back To You	76	66	1
4 The Reapers	75	65
2 The Shadow of Doubt	78	65
2 Social Highwaymen	75	48
3 Closed Road	87	81	1
7 The Feast of Life	61	73
7 Her Maternal Right	58	74
6 Sudden Riches	76	71
2 The Twin Triangle	83	45
6 Tangled Fates	57	[illegible]
3 Fate's Boomerang	42	53
5 His Brother's Wife	83	74
10 Perils of Divorce	61	63
13 La vie de Boheme	47	50
2 What Happened at 22	82	80
1 Crucial Test	59	58
7 The Weakness of Man	61	[illegible]
12 Sally in Our Alley	68	[illegible]
14 Paying the Price	70	70	1
12 Miss Petticoats	59	61
14 Woman's Way	75	74	4
13 The Summer Girl	56	57
12 Rail Rider	68	60
10 Husband and Wife	75	63	2
8 Almighty Dollar	76	72	1
13 The Velvet Paw	74	69	1
8 Friday, the Thirteenth	72	70
11 Dark Silence	77	79	2
14 The Revolt	66	63
7 The Gilded Cage	75	70
6 Hidden Scar	77	67
8 The Scarlet Oath	60	62
7 Man Who Stood Still	71	63
8 The Heart of a Hero	59	49
3 Without a Soul	70	85
15 Bought and Paid For	91	91	10
10 The Madness of Helen	57	54
8 Men She Married	58	55
4 The Deep Purple	81	75
11 All Man	59	63	2
7 Broken Chains	50	43
12 The Rise of Susan	79	83	6
6 The World Against Him	52	43
9 Woman Alone	69	65	1
7 On Dangerous Ground	65	71
7 The Man Who Forgot	65	61	1
4 Marriage a la Carte	73	73	1
1 The Unpardonable Sin	40	55
5 The Bondage of Fear	65	63
8 Tillie Wakes Up	79	78	1
8 The Hungry Heart	87	83	2
7 The Square Deal	74	74	1
3 A Girl's Folly	65	75
4 The Red Woman	56	50
4 The Web of Desire	78	73	1
4 The Family Honor	61	54
5 The Dancer's Peril	76	71	1
3 The Social Leper	60	53
3 Man's Woman	68	68
3 Darkest Russia	72	79
5 Forget-Me-Not	58	56
1 The Bludgeon	87	80
1 As Man Made Her	60	60
4 The Page Mystery	49	51
2 Yankee Pluck	68	55
3 Moral Courage	62	63
4 Mothers of France	66	51
4 Maternity	75	95
1 The False Friend	65	65
1 Atonement	70	65
1 The Pawn of Fate	85	45

METRO

519 Metro	70.7	66.9	49
1 Her Reckoning	60	40
1 Satan Sanderson	70	70
1 Cowboy and Lady	80	55
1 Heart of a Painted Lady	85	75
1 High Road	80	80
3 Shooting of Dan McGraw	81	78
1 Middleman	90	80
1 My Best Girl	60	60
1 Right of Way	70	85
2 Second in Command	77	80
1 The Vampire	80	90
6 Soul of a Woman	93	80	1
2 Silent Voice	77	87
1 An Enemy of Society	60	40
2 Song of Wage Slave	75	70
1 Emmy of Stork's Nest	80	60
2 Final Judgment	80	85
2 Pennington's Choice	92	90
4 Woman Pays	78	52
2 One Million Dollars	78	70
3 Barbara Frietchie	82	73
5 The Yellow Streak	85	64
3 House of Tears	80	65
4 Rosemary for Remembrance	73	68
3 Black Fear	73	57
5 What'll People Say?	80	84
4 The Turmoil	70	55
8 Lure of Heart's Desire	56	56
5 Her Debt of Honor	49	50
6 A Man and His Soul	83	83	2
3 The Upstart	68	72
3 Dimples	52	58
4 Corner in Cotton	64	58
5 The Price of Malice	66	65
6 The Soul Market	83	75	2
2 Blindness of Love	80	85	1
3 Lovely Mary	67	83
1 My Madonna	80	85
6 Her Great Price	80	68	1
8 The Wall Between	78	82	1
5 The Kiss of Hate	60	74
6 Half Million Bribe	69	49
8 Playing with Fire	78	75
11 The Come-Back	75	74	1
8 Snow Birds	80	77
8 A Million a Minute	72	84	1
4 The Spell of the Yukon	79	71
8 His Great Triumph	49	43
10 The Scarlet Woman	73	84	1
10 Dorian's Divorce	74	68
8 Masked Rider	69	68
6 Flower of No Man's Land	58	75
8 The Purple Lady	82	63
10 The Eternal Question	76	83	1
11 The Quitter	69	73
15 The River of Romance	87	76	7
8 The Child of Destiny	51	57
13 The Devil at His Elbow	64	61	1
14 God's Half Acre	65	62	1
14 The Weakness of Strength	68	54
11 The Pretender	80	72	1
7 The Upheaval	57	63
9 The Light of Happiness	67	61	1
10 Mister 44	88	93	4
8 The Wheel of the Law	77	66	1
10 The Dawn of Love	66	60
7 The Iron Woman	43	57
5 Life's Shadows	66	60
12 In the Diplomatic Service	67	83	4
8 The Brand of Cowardice	64	52
12 The Gates of Eden	68	51
11 Extravagance	69	82	3
10 The Wager	78	64
1 My Madonna	80	85
6 The Sunbeam	44	36
10 Big Tremaine	74	82	5
8 The Black Butterfly	70	79	4
7 The Stolen Triumph	54	49
6 Awakening of Helena Richie	63	64
9 Pidgin Island	69	73	2
10 Vanity	62	53
11 The White Raven	86	85	4
7 Wife by Proxy	45	41
7 Threads of Fate	39	38
9 Bridges Burned	43	63
7 The End of the Tour	41	41
8 One of Many	61	56	1
7 The Secret of Eve	34	67	1
12 The Promise	81	84	2
6 The Barricade	58	57
6 Hidden Children	43	65
9 The Mortal Sin	53	58
7 The Waiting Soul	49	61	1
6 The Father's Son	67	62
4 The Power of Decision	46	51
6 A Magdalen of the Hills	49	47
5 God's Law and Man	47	46
2 The Millionaire's Double	65	58
2 The Call of Her People	65	61
1 Sowers and Reapers	75	60
1 The Beautiful Lie	40	40
1 The Duchess of Doubt	75	70

FOX

637 Fox	73.0	70 0	85
1 Girl I Left Behind Me	[illegible]	25
2 St. Elmo	52	92
4 Fool There Was	82	96	2
2 Dr. Rameau	90	87	1
2 Kreutzer Sonata	90	85
2 The Idler	55	65
2 Celebrated Scandal	70	70
2 Clemenceau Case	87	82	1
2 Walls of Jericho	40	35
1 Woman's Resurrection	80	45
2 Anna Kerinina	67	65
2 Life's Shop Window	35	57
2 The Nigger	100	70
4 The Gilded Fool	70	75
3 Devil's Daughter	77	95
4 Should a Mother Tell?	83	76
1 Wormwood	80	80
1 Lady Audley's Secret	90	75
1 Princess Romanoff	60	60
1 Valley of the Missing	50	40
1 Children of the Ghetto	75	40
1 Samson	80	80
1 The Thief	90	40
8 Two Orphans	84	86	3
2 The Song of Hate	92	82
7 Regeneration	77	72	4
5 Wonwerful Adventure	75	77
5 Sin	62	82
2 Little Gypsy	80	74
5 Soul of Broadway	83	78	1
2 The Family Stain	87	64
3 Carmen	82	83	2
3 Blindness of Devotion	56	53
4 Woman's Past	63	43
9 Broken Law	82	65	1
8 Galley Slave	76	75	1
3 Unfaithful Wife	73	61
3 Her Mother's Secret	73	57
3 A Soldier's Oath	82	70
5 Destruction	86	94	1
3 Green-Eyed Monster	53	74
3 Parisian Romance	65	61
2 Fourth Estate	80	68
6 Serpent	92	93	1
5 Ruling Passion	53	59
5 Merely Mary Ann	52	45
7 Fool's Revenge	45	49
10 Fighting Blood	74	70
4 The Witch	63	59
4 Marble Heart	41	60
10 Gold and the Woman	65	86	1
10 The Bondman	79	64	1
5 A Wife's Sacrifice	55	56

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
1 Blue Blood and Red	84	71	1
6 Slander.	80	70
0 A Modern Thelma	59	49	1
9 Man of Sorrow	63	64	1
9 Blazing Love	70	68
1 The Eternal Sapho	84	87	4
2 Sins of Men	76	61	1
4 Battle of Hearts	63	61
0 The Spider and the Fly	67	72	1
1 Hypocrisy	76	68
0 A Woman's Honor	69	71
1 East Lynne	86	86	9
5 Ambition	71	67
8 Man From Bitter Roots	82	81	2
0 Caprice of the Mountains	68	66	1
5 Tortured Heart	71	67
1 The Beast	87	66	4
6 Under Two Flags	94	92	17
9 The End of the Trail	66	79
9 Sporting Blood	62	57	1
8 Little Miss Happiness	75	68	3
9 Daredevil Kate	74	78	4
4 The Unwelcome Mother	63	66
5 Her Double Life	86	84	4
9 Where Love Leads	69	61
3 Fires of Conscience	64	70	1
1 The Straight Way	68	73
2 The Ragged Princess	81	72
3 The War Bride's Secret	76	58	3
1 Romeo and Juliet	85	85	4
5 Love and Hate	66	60
4 The Mischief-Maker	69	69	1
4 Jealousy	73	83
6 The Mediator	73	72	1
4 Sins of Parents	91	78	3
4 The Battle of Life	72	63
5 The Vixen	61	73
4 Love Thief	86	85
3 The Primitive Call	66	65
4 The Island of Desire	75	65	1
3 The Price of Silence	83	72
2 The Bitter Truth	83	80	1
8 The Darling of Paris	66	73
3 One Touch of Sin	62	73
4 The New York Peacock	85	85
5 The Scarlet Letter	80	75	1
2 The Tiger Woman	80	80	1
3 Sister Against Sister	63	60
5 A Tale of Two Cities	93	81	3
1 Melting Millions	70	40
8 The Victim	64	62
8 Love's Law	17	27
3 The Blue Streak	53	58
1 High Finance	80	50
1 American Methods	90	85

MUTUAL

137 Mutual	72.6	71.0	14
1 Buzzard's Shadow.	85	80
1 Death Lock	98	85
1 On the Night Stage	75	40
1 The Mating	80	70
1 Enoch Arden	100	100
1 Girl from His Town	65	70
1 Ghosts	80	65
1 Cup of Life	55	40
1 His Wife	70	75
1 House of Scandal	90	75
1 Infatuation	60	50
1 Miracle of Life	83	83	1
1 Inner Struggle	40	20
1 Mill of Floss	75	90
2 The Painted Soul	82	55
1 End of the Road	90	100
1 Father and Son	75	75
1 The Reward.	80	80
2 Bird of Prey	85	87
2 Inspiration	70	100	1
2 As a Woman Sows	80	82
1 The Decoy	50	88
1 The Drifter	75	60
1 Life's Blind Alley	50	75
1 Silas Marner	100	100	1
3 The Craving	69	67
1 Law Unto Himself	40	50
1 Heart of Tara	75	75
1 According to Law	65	52
1 Overalls	75	90
3 My Partner	72	70
3 The Bruiser	78	65	1

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
1 Hidden Law.	100	90	1
2 Love Liar	72	82	1
1 Revelations	50	50
1 The Net	90	100	1
1 The Haunted Manor	52	58
2 Feathertop	90	90
1 Lying Lips	60	70
1 Dust	80	80
1 Other People's Money	85	68
2 Isle of Love	80	85	1
4 Whispering Smith	59	67
1 Soul Mates	69	63
2 Wasted Years	76	81
2 Far from Madding Crowd	70	67
4 Medicine Bend	74	81
4 Highest Bid	64	66	1
3 Her American Prince	70	67
5 Doorsteps	65	60	1
2 House of Mirrors	77	75
2 Wall Street Tragedy	65	80
6 Youth's Endearing Charm	77	74	1
2 Strength, Donald Mackenzie	75	72
1 Million for Mary	90	90	1
6 Judith of the Cumberlands	68	67
2 A Welsh Singer	60	53
1 Man Who Would Not Die	85	75
1 The Wolf Man	50	50
1 The Painted Lie	40	35
2 Three Pals	73	71
3 Manager of the B. & A	63	70
7 The Pearl of Paradise	69	75	1
5 Dulcie's Adventure	88	82	1
1 Bluff	85	80
7 Faith	74	65
3 Miss Jackie of the Navy	95	90	1
2 A Dream or Two Ago	88	80
6 The Innocence of Lizette	85	80
3 The Butterfly Girl	72	80
1 The House of Scandal	0	10
1 The Man From Oregon	95	75
1 The Girl From Rector's	40	40
2 The Greater Woman	55	75
3 Where Love Is	52	48
6 The Gentle Intruder	77	78
1 Damaged Goods	40	100
2 Philip Holden—Waster	59	48
2 Redeemed	55	30
1 Lonesome Town	85	85
1 The Love Hermit	78	78
4 My Fighting Gentleman	60	44
1 The Twinkler	100	90
1 East is East	90	80
1 Immediate Lee	90	82	1
1 Beloved Rogues	95	80
2 The Painted Lie	50	68
2 Motherhood	38	55
2 Sunny Jane	58	55
2 The Devil's Assistant	60	70
2 High Play	43	53
1 The Single Code	20	20
1 The Death	20	20
2 The Wildcat	65	58
1 Periwinkle	80	80

MUTUAL-CHAPLIN

1 A Night in the Show	100	90	1
4 The Fireman	75	88
4 The Vagabond	55	88
5 The Floorwalker	97	100	2
8 One A. M.	63	81	1
16 The Count	88	86	8
10 The Pawnshop	73	74	2
7 Behind the Screen	89	91	5
7 The Rink	96	99	6
7 Easy Street	97	100	7
12 The Cure	93	94	7
2 The Immigrant	90	98	1

PATHE

137 Pathe	68.1	68.5	15
1 Last Volunteer	80	80
1 The Spender	80	80
3 At Bay	78	81
1 The Galloper	40	90
1 Closing Net	60	80
2 Nedra	55	45
1 Affair of Three Nations	75	80
3 The Beloved Vagabond	76	67
2 Greater Will	50	55
6 Excuse Me!	90	73	2

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
3 King's Game	56	62
6 Madame X	71	91	3
3 Love Trail	38	52
3 Hazel Kirk	60	55
1 Simon the Jester	60	35
6 New York	80	74	1
2 Precious Packet	67	65
4 Shrine of Happiness	78	72
6 Woman's Law	68	65
10 Big Jim Garrity	69	55	1
6 Girl with the Green Eyes	65	72
3 Matrimonial Martyr.	63	73	1
7 Shadow of Her Past	34	81
4 The Fugitive	75	65
8 Little Mary Sunshine	90	78	1
1 Divorce and the Daughter	78	75
1 The World and the Woman	85	90
6 The Shine Girl	72	74
2 Fear of Poverty	65	95
2 The Test	60	48
3 Saint, Devil and Woman	44	57
3 Light That Failed	69	69	1
7 Shadows and Sunshine	94	81	3
3 Prudence the Pirate	65	78
3 Arms and the Woman	70	53	1
3 The Challenge	73	65
6 Joy and the Dragon	79	72	1
2 The Romantic Journey	78	68
4 Her New York	81	62	1
5 Kick In	76	74
1 Sold at Auction	55	65
1 Modern Monte Cristo	70	65
1 The Hidden Valley	95	90
2 Twin Kiddies	85	70
2 The Image Maker	48	40
1 Told at Twilight	85	75
2 Mayblossom	15	83
1 The Hunting of the Hawk	60	40
1 Sunshine and Gold	70	80

BLUEBIRD

224 Bluebird	62.1	61.5	19
2 Jeanne Dore	27	45
2 The Secret Love	38	40
2 Hop, the Devil's Brew	40	43
7 Undine	80	87	3
1 Wrong Door	75	80
1 Grip of Jealousy	75	85
2 Rupert of Hentzau	51	60
2 Strength of the Weak	76	75
1 The Yaqui	42	58
4 The Flirt	44	66
2 Tangled Hearts	44	36
2 John Needham's Double	54	59
2 The Great Problem	79	66
4 Gaylord Waring	51	50
5 Crippled Hand	58	69	1
3 Gilded Spider	46	64
1 Elusive Isabel	48	46
3 The Measure of a Man	63	65
2 Love Never Dies	65	48
4 Son of the Immortals	64	71
5 Eye of God	64	80	1
3 Bobbie of the Ballet	67	79
3 Evil Women Do	60	62
9 Three Godfathers	68	74	1
15 Shoes	71	77	3
11 Broken Fetters	64	56	1
8 The Love Girl	63	64	1
6 The Grasp of Greed	71	76	1
8 The Silent Battle	78	84
8 Secret of the Swamp	71	56	2
7 Love's Lariat	65	64	1
7 Bettina Loved a Soldier	70	72
9 Wanted—A Home	71	73
3 The Chalice of Sorrow	72	65
7 Little Eve Edgarton	58	61	1
8 The Girl of Lost Lake	65	60
6 The Unattainable	51	48
12 Saving the Family Name	80	56	1
8 Behind the Lines	63	63
4 The Social Buccaneer	72	65
4 Gloriana	69	70
5 Stranger from Somewhere	68	63
4 The Price of Silence	88	86
2 The End of the Rainbow	63	48
6 The Honor of Mary Blake	58	58
1 The Right to be Happy	50	40
4 Black Orchids	75	78	1
2 Her Soul's Inspiration	55	39

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
4 God's Crucible	88	84	2
1 The Piper's Price	40	20
5 The Bugler of Algiers	80	69	1
3 The Sign of the Poppy	65	63
5 Mutiny	58	51
5 Mysterious Mrs. M	72	50	1
1 The Reward of the Faithless	72	81
2 The Saintly Sinner	48	58
2 The Boy-Girl	63	68
2 Susan's Gentleman	55	55
3 The Clock	77	65
4 Hell Morgan's Girl	89	89	1
1 The Devil's Pay Day	71	75
3 Polly Redhead	57	67
3 A Jewel In Pawn	65	60
2 Girl In the Checkered Coat	70	65

UNIVERSAL

1 Little Brother of the Rich	60	68
1 Business is Business	50	65
1 Father and the Boys	20	80
1 The Frame-up	40	45
1 Judge Not	70	70
1 Long Chance	85	80
1 Man of Shame	50	55
1 My Old Dutch	20	55
1 Nature Man	95	60
1 Under Southern Skies	90	75
2 Langdon's Legacy	66	60
3 Love's Pilgrimage	62	53
2 College Orphan	70	63
1 Colorado	90	100
2 The Campbells Are Coming	84	83	1

RED FEATHER

72 Red Feather	64.9	60.2	2

1 It Happened In Honolulu	80	80
1 The Madcap	70	70
1 Soul Enslaved	60	80
1 Knight of the Range	80	[illegible]
2 Beckoning Trail	88	71
2 Man From Nowhere	75	90	1
3 The Path of Happiness	70	50
2 The Sphinx	50	50
2 Pool of Flame	70	75
1 Lords of High Decision	60	40
2 Black Sheep of the Family	60	63
2 Autumn	65	67
3 Her Bitter Cup	72	71
1 The Yoke of Gold	45	64
1 Heritage of Hate	90	85
1 Thrown to the Lions	60	20
3 Huntress of Men	49	55
3 The Youth of Fortune	69	63	1
2 What Love Can Do	50	86
3 Half a Rogue	78	60
1 Sons of Satan	60	40
2 Two Men of Sandy Bar	72	68
1 Folly of Desire	20	40
1 Brigadier Gerard	50	40
2 Romance of Billy Goat Hill	75	55
4 The Target	76	46
2 Whirlpool of Destiny	62	65
2 Narrow Path	82	60
2 Drugged Waters	57	52
3 If My Country Should Call	58	62
2 Black Friday	60	62
3 The Place Beyond the Winds	66	55
2 The Isle of Life	50	43
2 The Mainspring	72	62
1 Morals of Hilda	80	80
2 Mixed Blood	70	55
1 The Child of Mystery	45	15
3 Polly Put the Kettle On	45	57
5 Fighting for Love	69	65
2 The Double Room Mystery	55	35
2 Heart Strings	70	60
2 Love Aflame	78	80
1 The Terror	70	60
1 The Devil's Bondwoman	40	20
1 Barriers of Society	40	20
1 Me and Me Pal	85	70
1 The Girl and the Crisis	75	70
1 The Scarlet Crystal	60	75
1 The Girl Who Lost	50	70
1 The Gates of Doom	60	70

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
GREATER VITAGRAPH
423 Vitagraph	68.2	66.3	73
12 Battle Cry of Peace	95	80	4
7 The Juggernaut	73	73	2
7 Island of Regeneration	85	81	4
1 Sporting Duchess	40	30
1 Sins of the Mothers	87	87	1
3 Crooky	70	69	2
1 Playing Dead	75	75
5 Dust of Egypt	67	66	2
2 The Rights of Men	74	85
3 Turn of the Road	82	78
3 The Cave Man	74	60
3 Heights of Hazard	75	44
2 A Nation's Peril	86	76
1 The Man's Making	60	78
2 Price of Folly	95	95	2
7 The Great Divide	80	71	2
1 Souls in Bondage	100	80	1
2 Thou Art the Man	72	57
1 Green Stockings	87	88	2
1 Milady's Slipper	90	90
1 Island of Surprise	87	85
5 Gods of Fate	62	62
1 What Happened to Father?	60	78
9 The Night Out	81	75	1
1 The Crown Prince's Double	75	60
1 The Writing on the Wall	70	40
4 Kennedy Square	88	66	1
2 For a Woman's Fair Name	80	85
1 Hunted Woman	74	54	1
4 Hero of Submarine D-2	74	71
4 Dollars and the Woman	79	60
1 Supreme Temptation	60	60
5 Two-Edged Sword	76	53
2 Vital Question	80	55
1 Flames of Johannis	40	40
7 Salvation Joan	78	50
10 God's Country and Woman	81	85	4
1 Love's Toll	60	60
9 The Law Decides	80	70	4
1 The Ne'er-Do-Well	94	94	1
4 Ordeal of Elizabeth	58	50
10 The Suspect	80	76	2
3 Lights of New York	70	78
7 The Destroyers	68	57	1
2 Redemption of Dave Darcey	90	80
4 Man Behind the Curtain	85	76
0 The Shop Girl	78	79	1
3 The Conflict	67	47
7 Fathers of Men	71	67
11 The Tarantula	82	72	3
15 The Daring of Diana	61	75
4 Hesper of the Mountains	57	64
11 The Light at Dusk	85	72	4
8 The Alibi	69	69
1 The Dawn of Freedom	0	50
4 Footlights of Fate	88	80
16 The Combat	82	84	1
5 The Kid	60	57
2 Phantom Fortunes	42	62
5 His Wife's Good Name	64	76
12 Through the Wall	78	63	1
14 The Chattel	72	83	3
8 Prince in a Pawnshop	64	67	1
8 The Blue Envelope Mystery	55	59
1 Firm of Girdlestone	85	45
11 The Last Man	82	81	1
6 The Devil's Prize	49	62
6 The Price of Fame	40	46
6 Dollar and the Law	52	73
8 An Enemy to the King	61	67	2
9 Rose of the South	73	62
9 Whom the Gods Destroy	59	73	3
6 Ninety and Nine	76	70	1
5 Indiscretion	53	61	1
8 The Man of Mystery	69	64	1
8 My Official Wife	90	82	4
9 The Glory of Yolanda	71	71	3
2 The Enemy	80	70	1
10 The Girl Phillipa	69	76	2
8 The Courage of Silence	69	69	2
7 Money Magic	57	66
5 Blind Justice	63	60
9 Arsene Lupin	66	62
8 Kitty Mackay	57	58	1
5 Intrigue	47	54
6 Aladdin From Broadway	62	68	1
4 The Money Mill	51	49

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
4 Her Right to Live	49	55
4 Babette	70	70
7 The More Excellent Way	67	68	1
3 Apartment 29	55	60	1
2 Sally in a Hurry	68	68
1 The Cowardly Way	78	60
3 Her Secret	47	48
2 The Hawk	65	80
4 Captain of Grey Horse Troop	63	63
2 The Sixteenth Wife	33	55
2 Clover's Rebellion	90	90
2 The Soul Master	58	58
1 The Magnificent Meddler	40	40

KEYS

110 K. E. S. E.	70.0	65.8	2

1 The Bank	90	90	1
1 The Woman	60	75
1 Work	75	75
3 Thou Shalt Not Covet	78	55
1 Vultures of Society	80	60
1 Between Savages and Tigers	90	100
1 Quo Vadis	60	40
1 The Spendthrift	80	60
1 Officer 666	25	40
1 When Love is King	20	25
1 The Magic Skin	80	75
1 Woman Next Door	60	90
1 The Havoc	5	20
1 Sentimental Lady	65	40
2 The Scarlet Road	70	55
2 Destroying Angel	90	87
1 Money Masters	90	60
1 Commuters	85	60
1 Musty Suffer	80	90
1 Devil's Prayer Book	50	60
1 Children of Evil	70	65
1 Green Cloak	70	60
2 The Spollers	92	95
5 Graustark	88	90
2 The Slim Princess	77	94
3 The Rosary	80	55
2 A Texas Steer	72	65
1 House of Thousand Candles	40	30
2 The Raven	87	20
2 The Alster Case	75	60
2 Daughter of the City	60	70
3 Misleading Lady	73	50
2 Cycle of Fate	62	75
3 Carmen (Chaplin)	50	93
3 The Little Shepherd of Bargain Row	75	63
1 Sherlock Holmes	75	50
3 Into the Primitive	52	60
3 That Sort	70	43
4 Vallants of Virginia	85	75
5 The Prince Chap	51	53
3 The Return of Eve	75	73
9 Country God Forgot	75	67
4 Chaplin Revue	63	70
1 The Innocence of Ruth	60	81
1 At Piney Ridge	60	60
2 The Heart of the Hills	63	60
5 Prince of Graustark	81	80
6 The Cossack's Whip	86	67
3 Message to Garcia	67	73
2 The Last Sentence	55	70
4 The Truant Soul	69	76
3 Little Shoes	82	82
2 Adventures of Buffalo Bill	45	78
6 Skinner's Dress Suit	96	89
1 The Law of the North	50	90
1 Royal Pauper	10	100
3 The Heart of Texas Ryan	59	68
1 Princess of Patches	50	100
1 The Master Passion	80	100
1 Burning the Candle	80	55
1 Skinner's Bubble	100	100
2 The Danger Trail	45	60
1 The Night Workers	60	85
2 The Trufflers	40	80
1 The Saint's Adventure	60	50

PARAMOUNT SPEC.

5 The Christian	81	78	1
5 Tess of Storm Country	88	84	2
2 The Typhoon	88	78	1
7 The Eternal City	93	96	4

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
SERIALS
Patria	86	82
Gloria's Romance	78	83
The Crimson Stain	61	65
Mysteries of Myra	87	88
The Yellow Menace	40	40
Liberty	91	94
Grip of Evil	73	67
Who's Guilty	78	78
The Iron Claw	93	92
The Diamond Runners	66	82
The Shielding Shadow	91	91
Secret of Submarine	73	79
Peg o' the Ring	50	59
Scarlet Runner	67	64
The Lass of Lumberlands	59	60
Girl and the Game	73	48
The Great Secret	56	65
Pearl of the Army	91	93
The Secret Kingdom	20	0
The Voice on the Wire	98	80
The Purple Mask	85	80
The Railroad Raiders	50	50
The Neglected Wife	90	93
ART DRAMAS
Whoso Taketh A Wife	90	90
The Lash of Destiny	60	45
A God of Little Children	67	63
Infidelity	63	65
The Great Secret	35	45
The Rainbow	68	66
Rosie O'Grady	82	80
Her Good Name	85	84
SELZNICK
The Common Law	85	90	5
Vera, the Medium	62	65	2
The Foolish Virgin	36	66	2
War Brides	77	64	10
Panthea	81	76	4
The Price She Paid	73	73	2
The Argyle Case	87	74	2
The Easiest Way	88	83	1
Mc CLURE
Pride	34	37
Envy	37	52
Passion	22	30
Greed	31	34
Sloth	14	14
Wrath	28	32
The Seventh Sin	5	13

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
ARTCRAFT
11 The Poor Little Rich Girl	98	98	9
18 The Pride of the Clan	73	74
7 Broadway Jones	97	86	4
6 In Again—Out Again	88	93	2
5 Romance of the Redwoods	76	62
8 The Butcher Boy	71	76	1
3 A Reckless Romeo	87	70	1
UNIV. SPEC.
1 Scandal	80	72
1 Robinson Crusoe	65	70
0 Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea	68	86	5
10 The Dumb Girl of Portici	51	64
2 Diana the Huntress	58	75	1
8 Where Are My Children?	79	84	2
2 Jewel	83	65
1 God's Law	40	40
4 The Eagle's Wings	82	77
8 Idle Wives	57	88	4
2 Neptune's Daughter	61	60	1
IVAN
1 Her Surrender	85	70
2 Her Husband's Wife	96	95
1 The Flower of Faith	50	25
8 Faded Flower	83	74	1
SELIG SPEC.
4 The Crisis	72	56
FROHMAN
5 The Witching Hour	67	65	2
4 Jaffery	63	55
FOX SPEC.
3 A Daughter of the Gods	73	47
METRO SPEC.
13 Romeo and Juliet	79	58	3
B. S. MOSS
1 The Power of Evil	87	70
1 One Day	85	80
SPECIAL FEATURES
8 Geoffrey Manning	70	75
1 Garden of Knowledge	100	100	1
3 The Unwritten Law	43	78
8 The Escape	67	70	1

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
8 Birth of a Nation	100	100	8
2 The Salamanders	40	58
8 The Libertine	83	78	4
1 My Country First	60	60
3 Tillie's Punctured Romance	90	90	8
1 Race Suicide	67	60
1 Shanghaied	90	90	1
1 Pendleton 1916 Round-Up	90	86
2 Cabiria	45	45
2 Marvelous Maciste	85	55
5 End of the World	20	57
2 Birth of Man	62	58
1 Love's Sacrifice	60	60
5 The Iron Hand	65	46
3 Police	63	81
1 Is Any Girl Safe?	90	60
1 Salomy Jane	90	100
6 The Whirl of Life	69	84	3
2 Silver Threads Among Gold	84	92	1
2 Victory of Virtue	50	100	1
5 The Melting Pot	78	53	2
4 Ramona	73	63
1 Hiawatha	40	100	1
2 Sullsbury's Wild Life in America	60	73
1 Hypocrites	60	90
1 The Only Son	40	60
1 Judge Legard	80	40
3 The Alien	98	68	1
5 The Little Girl Next Door	77	87	3
8 Alice in Wonderland	78	86	1
1 Purity	92	84	1
1 The Eyes of the World	95	100	1
1 The Immortal Flame	80	72
1 Heartaches	70	78
1 Birth of Character	20	50
1 Fire and Sword	20	60
1 America Waiting	10	15
1 Beulah	60	60
1 The Aftermath	40	40
1 Heart of Maryland	0	40
3 Doctor Neighbor	53	49
6 Ramona	71	63
2 The Eyes of the World	88	72	1
3 Beware of Strangers	57	62
1 It May be Your Daughter	95	65	1
1 The House of Bondage	75	100
1 The Barrier	100	80
5 The Fall of a Nation	73	86	1
11 Civilization	76	82	5
1 Joan the Woman	100	100
1 Womanhood	92	90	1
1 The Spoilers	100	90
1 The Woman Who Dared	90	70
1 The Black Stork	70	70

YOUR SUPREME OPPORTUNITY to know absolutely what a certain feature, that you have booked, will do in your Theatre.

THE EXHIBITORS' OWN PERCENTAGE REPORTS do this and more, besides giving you absolutely the standing of each film, it gives you your only chance to tell the producer what kind of films are money makers for you.

SEND YOUR REPORTS TO "WID'S"

Get A Binder

$1.50 Prepaid Everywhere

HAROLD LOCKWOOD

Yorke--Metro

HEART STIRRING HAND COLORED PATRIOTIC SLIDES 25c. Each

71. If It's Worth Living Under, It's Worth Fighting For.
54. Americans Must Protect America.
95. We Are With You, Mr. President, One Hundred Million Strong.
53. Your Country Needs You.
28. American Flag.
95. President Wilson & Flag.
60. Geo. Washington.
45. The Birth of the American Flag.
70. Abraham Lincoln.
76. Spirit of '76—Reflects in 1917.
27. If It's Good Enough to Live Under, It's Worth Fighting for.
87. Pledge Allegiance.
68. Star Spangled Banner.
42. My Country 'Tis of Thee (Flag).

EXCELSIOR ILLUSTRATING CO., 219 Sixth Ave. New York City

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

WILLIAM F. ALDRICH
FEATURE PRODUCER
Screen Club, 117 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG CORP.

BERT CARBER
TECHNICAL DIRECTOR
THANHOUSER SCREEN CLUB

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

HAL CLARENDON
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL

WILLIAM DESMOND
TRIANGLE PLAYS
Culver City, Cal.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
PRODUCING
Clara Kimball Young Features

JACK HARVEY
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
Producer of
"PARENTAGE"

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
PRODUCING FEATURES
Ivan Film Corp.

LLOYD INGRAHAM
MANAGEMENT
GRIFFITH-FINE ARTS STUDIOS

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR
Frohman Amusement Corporation

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

HARLEY KNOLES
FEATURE DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

O. A. C. LUND

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE PRODUCER
B. A. Rolfe-Metro Pictures Corporation

EUGENE NOWLAND
PRODUCING FEATURES

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITAGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

FREDERIC SULLIVAN
DIRECTOR THANHOUSER
Screen Club

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
PRODUCING FEATURES
VITAGRAPH

JAMES VINCENT
PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

JAMES YOUNG

WID'S IS READ NOT SKIMMED

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Address—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM A MAGAZINE—IN FACT A SERVICE

THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM

WID'S

INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS

Always Issued Every Independent Thursday VOL. III. THURSDAY, JULY 19, 1917. No. 29 25 Cents a Copy $10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

INTELLIGENT TREATMENT AND STAR MAKE THIS BIG. GET IT

Dorothy Dalton in

THE FLAME OF THE YUKON

Kay Bee—Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Charles Miller
AUTHOR.....Monte M. Katterjohn
CAMERAMAN.....Clyde de Vinna
AS A WHOLE.....Treatment and star put dance-hall melo over with a bang
STORY.....Provided excellent situation, although treatment more important than story
DIRECTION.....Gave excellent atmosphere, exceptional types, very effective tempo, and played up star's personality with wonderful results
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent
LIGHTINGS.....Some very effective; others just good
CAMERA WORK.....Excellent
STAR.....A personality that registers with a bang
SUPPORT.....Some great types; generally excellent
EXTERIORS.....Good atmosphere
INTERIORS.....Fitted atmosphere nicely; some effective shots
DETAIL.....Very good; many splendid touches
TIME.....One hour and 20 minutes (7 parts)

WE have had many dance-hall stories in the films in the past year, and, so far as plot is concerned, this was in many ways no bigger than the others, although it had a good twist that was logically put over. It was the treatment which made this effective, and certainly it is an effective bit of work.

Dorothy Dalton has done several very good things in recent months, but this can be called nothing short of excellent. The director gave her every opportunity, shooting many close-ups and playing for little touches that were exceptionally effective because they were intelligently slipped into the action.

In most of the scenes Miss Dalton appeared in various L. & B. H. gowns, some of which registered very plainly the fact that she has quite "some" figger, and as a vamp she was truly a blazing flame.

The story was one which threw all the sympathy to her, since she was shown in the act of making a tremendous sacrifice, and I believe that this story will hit home very generally because it has that unusual character, the sympathy vamp, which has a double appeal.

The producer, from the very start to the finish, gave us scores of little touches, which builded his atmosphere into a perfect whole. There were types that held the attention and suggested the uncouth Northwest, and then we had wild scenes of riotous living which had a swing to them that made them absolutely realistic. The action did not seem to be staged. We were made to feel that these people were real.

Melodrama when it is mechanical lacks the necessary punch of conviction with the average fan today. Nevertheless, that same fan will thoroughly enjoy melodrama which convinces and registers as real.

While we were led to believe almost up to the finish that Miss Dalton is to end the picture unhappy, except that she has the joy of having made a real sacrifice in the last scenes without overstepping the possibilities of coincidences, they easily slipped by this and gave us a happy ending which will send anyone out with a feeling of warmth about their heart.

You can figure this sure-fire. In a few places they have some rough stuff that is sure-enough "ruff," but I think it has been well enough done that it is going to get over with a bang, even in one instance where they have a fight which runs to very lengthy footage.

Miss Dalton does some of the best work of her career, and certainly proves that she is real stellar material.

Melbourne McDowell as the hero was very pleasing, he being clean-cut and commanding in appearance, with sufficient poise and repose to make his dramatic moments register. The other members of the supporting cast were quite satisfactory, with some very fine types used for small bits.

In the cast were Kenneth Harlan, Margaret Thompson, Carl Ullman, and May Palmer.

The Box Office Angle.

I would say that with this one you can make some fuss about it being a red-blooded melodrama of the Alaskan country that will prove entertaining to all who love action and romance. I would play up Dorothy Dalton particularly, since she is the central figure throughout, and certainly her personality will get over in this in such a manner as to win many who have never given her serious consideration before.

I believe Miss Dalton has a very large following, but here is an opportunity for you to increase her following tremendously. Go to it!

You might play upon this angle in advertising it: "Would you be big enough to give up the man you loved if you knew he loved you? Think it over!"

HEART STIRRING HAND COLORED PATRIOTIC SLIDES 25c. Each

71. If It's Worth Living Under, It's Worth Fighting For.
54. Americans Must Protect America.
95. We Are With You, Mr. President. One Hundred Million Strong.
53. Your Country Needs You.
28. American Flag.
95. President Wilson & Flag.
60. Geo. Washington.
45. The Birth of the American Flag.
70. Abraham Lincoln.
76. Spirit of '76—Reflects in 1917.
27. If It's Good Enough to Live Under, It's Worth Fighting for.
87. Pledge Allegiance.
68. Star Spangled Banner.
42. My Country 'Tis of Thee (Flag).

EXCELSIOR ILLUSTRATING CO., 219 Sixth Ave. New York City

RAY AS HERO IN BING BANG ACTION MELO SNAPPY STUFF

Charles Ray in

SUDDEN JIM

Kay Bee—Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Victor L. Schertzinger
AUTHOR.....Clarence Budington Kelland
CAMERAMAN.....Paul E. Eagler
AS A WHOLE.....Splendid combination of fast meller and human elements
STORY.....Simple, but made entertaining by little touches
DIRECTION.....Gave excellent tempo to meller action and fine comedy relief, with good types and treatment
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good; not exceptional
LIGHTINGS.....Generally ordinary; no attempt for effects
CAMERA WORK.....Good; not distinctive
STAR.....Very pleasing, winning personality
SUPPORT.....Some excellent types
EXTERIORS.....Good atmosphere
INTERIORS.....Quite satisfactory; fitted atmosphere
DETAIL.....Several very good touches
TIME.....Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

AFTER seeing Charlie Ray in many productions as a weakling, we now get this young man in a story where he has a chance to be an honest-to-Jerry fightin' hero. He puts it over beautifully. and to see him in action no one would ever dream that he has made a specialty of weakling characterizations.

The story was quite elementary, but by treatment the director kept it human, and someone—either the director or the author—planted an exceptional lot of very good titles which provided laughs and emphasized dramatic points. These titles were also of decided value in making it possible to give the tempo a swinging smash at times, with the entire production moving without any lost energy resultant from unnecessary scenes. Some of these titles were truly funny in the odd philosophy expressed, with a few of them slipping over quiet laughs that will be sure fire.

The general atmosphere of the story was that of a little logging camp, and Mr. Ray was presented as a youthful hero whose father had sent him to take charge of a mill and make good. He had the customary opposition which called for quick action on his part, and of course in the end he triumphed after strenuous battles and a little quick head work.

They gave us some real melo in the situation where Charlie had to take a gang of roughnecks and steal the use of the railroad in order to haul in two carloads of logs over a burning trestle, but this was well handled, and as a result it didn't register merely as movie melo, but rather as swinging action that was comparatively real.

On the finish they gave us a round-up political meeting where the women sat in the balcony and delivered a few instructions to the men below, which will be good for laughs anywhere.

There were a number of exceptionally well chosen types, and Joseph J. Dowling as Judge Frame registered a very delightful bit of work. Sylvia Bremer was satisfactory as the heroine, although she was inclined to overact in spots.

Others who appeared were Lydia Knott, Wm. Bellinford, Frank Whitson and Georgie Stone.

The Box Office Angle.

I believe this is an excellent bet most anywhere, having particular value wherever Charlie Ray is a favorite. I would emphasize the fact that in this Charlie appears as a sure-enough battling hero instead of a weakling. You can promise laughs, action and human bits, with a touch of romance and a thrill or two.

As a teaser campaign for this you might say, "Are you called by a nickname? How did you earn it?" Then afterwards say, "See 'Sudden Jim' and find out how Charlie Ray earned his nickname."

BEBAN LIFTS SLENDER STORY BY CHARACTERIZATION

George Beban in

THE COOK OF CANYON CAMP

Morosco—Paramount

DIRECTOR.....Donald Crisp
AUTHOR.....Donald Crisp
SCENARIO BY.....Donald Crisp and Julia Crawford Ivers
CAMERAMAN.....Faxon M. Dean
AS A WHOLE.....Beban lifts ordinary movie
STORY.....Has one slender incident which was dragged into much footage
DIRECTION.....Permitted scores of unnecessary scenes, failed to give atmosphere distinction, and frequently incidents lacked treatment which would have helped
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied from excellent to fair
LIGHTINGS.....A few very good, but generally ordinary
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR.....Wonderful personality; exceptionally human characterization
SUPPORT.....Helen Eddy very good; others just acceptable
EXTERIORS.....Some very beautiful; others ordinary
INTERIORS.....Satisfactory; not remarkable
DETAIL.....Acceptable; too much in spots
TIME.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

GEORGE BEBAN is again handicapped in this production. The direction fails to realize the full possibilities of various incidents and presents entirely too much footage of things which mean nothing. Upon several occasions bad overplaying was permitted.

The story material was woefully weak and lacking in incident, with just one slender situation upon which the entire five reels was built. The audience was perfectly aware as to how it was all going to end long before the footage had unfolded.

Mr. Beban is in a class by himself in a certain line of characterizations, and he has a very large following in this country, who seek out everything he does. It seems a pity that such a sincere, capable artist should be handicapped by poor stories and direction which failed to provide a fitting atmosphere.

This story was centered entirely upon one little incident where our good friend the misunderstood situation sent a husband into a lumber camp suspicious of his wife because he had seen her with her brother.

When he told his story to Mr. Beban, the French-Canadian cook, that worthy told him immediately that he was in the same position and that he needed the assistance of this educated man to write a letter to his wife, explaining that he was sorry, and asking for her forgiveness.

Of course, the cook hurried away to the lonesome man's wife with this letter, and brought her to the camp, reuniting them happily. He received a check for a thousand dollars which squared everything with his sweetheart's father and made it possible for him to get married on the finish.

Certainly this is hardly what anyone would consider a fit story out of which to make a good five-rell production. To be sure, there was one incident, but, as the wise old lad insisted, "One swallow doesn't satisfy a drunkard."

Those who love Mr. Beban will accept this since he is always delightful, making his characterization sufficiently human to register with anyone. He provides a good many laughs and works very hard, but was under a terrible handicap.

Helen Jerome Eddy, as Mr. Beban's sweetheart, was excellent. She is a very clever girl.

Monroe Salisbury as the husband acted—oh, quite some!

Florence Vidor as the wife, and John Burton as Miss Eddy's father were satisfactory.

The Box Office Angle.

This isn't what I would call a pleasing production, because it is very weak as to story material. But for those who care particularly for George Beban, I believe that the production will very probably register in a satisfactory manner, because George has a lot of individual scenes, some of which are rather good, thereby making the offering one which may sneak by.

By way of a teaser campaign on this, if you intend to play it, use something like this: "Do you put salt in your flapjacks? Have you ever eaten flapjacks?" Then afterwards you might say, "See George Beban make flapjacks in 'The Cook of Canyon Camp.'"

There are no weird errors in this outside of the bad acting of the husband, the business of writing a letter in the woods at night—which is rather a hard trick—and a few other such slips, and the production moves along in just a routine movie manner, so that if you have been playing regular program Paramount stuff, the chances are that you can sneak this one over. It isn't what I would consider a good Beban picture, however, so if you are in the habit of telling them the truth, be careful on this!

SLENDER STORY WITH KIDS AND CIRCUS STUFF; WILL APPEAL

Bessie Love in

THE SAWDUST RING

Kay Bee—Triangle

DIRECTOR	Charles Miller
AUTHOR	L. V. Jefferson
CAMERAMAN	Clyde de Vinna
AS A WHOLE	Cute kid stuff dragged in spots, but will please generally
STORY	Decidedly lacking in incident, but had real human touches
DIRECTION	Made human bits register, but allowed it to slump occasionally
PHOTOGRAPHY	Just good; occasionally only fair
LIGHTINGS	No attempt for effects, but faces generally good
CAMERA WORK	Just acceptable
STAR	Very pleasing; surely registered as kid
SUPPORT	Harold Goodwin good; several good types
EXTERIORS	Fitted story atmosphere, not particularly beautiful
INTERIORS	Satisfactory; not artistic
DETAIL	Several good bits
TIME	Sixty minutes (5 parts)

FOR those who like the simple little human stories this will undoubtedly register as a very satisfactory offering, because it makes up in human touches what it lacks in story value. The atmosphere is not artistic, but it does seem to suggest just the sort of small-town and country life that the story calls for.

What is more human than a kiddie's desire to go to the circus or have a circus of her own? That's what this story is built upon.

We found Bessie Love, the daughter of circus people, living with her mother in a small town because the mother had run away from Bessie's father when she suspected him unjustly. The mother kept her daughter from all circuses for fear that she might answer the call of the sawdust ring.

A neighbor boy, played by Harold Goodwin, who was very good, wanted to take Bessie to the show, but mother vetoed it, and the two kids sat mournfully on the steps of her home watching the animals in the distance. When he returned home the boy was abused by his drunkard father, and so decided to run away. Bessie's mother was ordered sent to the hospital, and so Bessie agreed to run away with the boy.

Camping out along the road, they decided to have a circus of their own, and gave one show at a farmer's house, where summer boarders made up a collection sufficient to send them to the next town. There the scenarioist conveniently provided that they should bump into a big circus, and of course we found Bessie's father the owner of this show.

I believe the average audience will accept this, however, even though the story is slender, because the burlesque circus stuff done by Miss Love is quite funny and registers a lot of laughs. The production is not an artistic one, but it seems enough like "real folks" to hold the attention.

From start to finish Bessie appears as a little youngster of about ten, and the boy seemed to be about the same age. Thank goodness they didn't show them grown up on the finish.

Among those who appeared in support of Miss Love were Jack Richardson, Josephine Headley, Daisy Dean and Alfred Hollingsworth.

The Box Office Angle.

I believe that a great many people think a lot of Bessie Love. In this story she does a lot of cute kid stuff that will be sure-fire and particularly pleasing because she is kept in the character of a kiddie all the way.

This is not a big story, nor is it a big production. It is just a simple little five-reeler of kid stuff that has some very good spots. At times the action is rather slow and inclined to become draggy, but, on the whole, I believe that the average audience will consider this decidedly better than the regular run of program meller-drammers and sex stories, which might have ten times as much action, but not one-tenth as much of the human note.

For a teaser campaign you might start off with something along this line: "Have you ever wanted to run away and join a circus or have a circus of your own?" "Have you ever felt the lure of the sawdust ring?" "Do you remember when you were a kid and wanted to carry water for the elephant to get in the circus?"

MANY ANIMALS MESSILY MIXED WITH BAD ACTING

Eileen Sedgwick and Kingsley Benedict in

MAN AND BEAST

Butterfly—Universal

DIRECTOR	Henry McRae
SCENARIO BY	Reed Heustis
CAMERAMAN	Fred Le Roy Granville
AS A WHOLE	Wild meller mixture of action, acting and animals
STORY	Had no dramatic merit, but provided opportunity for many animals to figure in scenes
DIRECTION	Let everyone rave, permitted many bad titles and pulled some awful slips, but had interesting animal stuff
PHOTOGRAPHY	Just good; not distinctive
LIGHTINGS	Ordinary
CAMERA WORK	Acceptable
STARS	Were not
SUPPORT	Ordinary; acted much; animals better than people
EXTERIORS	Acceptable; nothing more
INTERIORS	Ordinary
DETAIL	Some very bad spots
TIME	Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

IN the good old days of several years ago when anything went as drama, this wild feud story of two families living in South Africa would have been a great picture, because of the animal stuff brought into it.

Figured today, when animal stuff is no longer of exceptional interest, the general effect of the dramatic story was pitifully poor. None of the players had any personality, and they all acted upon any and all occasions, with much unnecessary emphasis.

The average fan who regards films as movies will probably accept this as interesting because of the animals. They used an elephant, a chimpanzee, lions, tigers and most everything that is supposed to run loose in the jungles of Africa. In many places these animals were absolutely dragged into the action, and seldom did their presence have any dramatic significance. Fans will be interested in them but will not be impressed or thrilled.

They pulled one of the funniest bonehead detail errors I've ever seen, it having to do with a lot of black "s-tras" who made an attack upon a house. These wi men of the woods rushed up to the place they we to besiege, each carrying one spear. We had ma flashes of them on the way to the house, so that the was no question about the fact that each carried o spear. When they arrived and the battle started ma many dozens of spears were hurled into scenes, a probably a hundred altogether were shown inside a outside the house. These were still remaining when te blacks retreated, and yet as they left we still fou that each man carried one spear. Such is life when te director and his assistants fail to think!

Some scenes in which a chimpanzee played with a baby will probably cause many women to cuss the -rector, internally, for permitting such a thing, and son-thing of the same feeling may come when the scenes a-pear in which an elephant is supposed to be carrying a baby in a cradle.

There was no real personality in evidence in this a the action never at any time convinced, with the to fat fathers registering as comedians more than anythi else. The wicked "wun," who was supposed to be s of a willun, ran up to the foreground at one time a put his hand to his ear to listen. If there is one thi that no director should allow any boob actor to , that's it!

In the cast were Harry Clifton, L. M. Wells, Mrs. W-ting, J. Parks Jones and Joe Martin.

The Box Office Angle.

If you are playing program stuff as it comes, this m get by satisfactorily if you will exploit it intelligent By that I mean that you should tell the truth about t picture, explaining that it isn't a wonderful drama success, but that it is an interesting subject because o many animals are seen in action. Call attention to t fact that an elephant, a chimpanzee, lions and tigers have something to do with the story development, and you will center the attention of the audience upon th fact, they may excuse much that happens which th don't like.

If it is necessary for you to deliver real, sure-enou features upon any and all occasions, you'd better for this. It doesn't ring true, nor does it thrill.

PAINFULLY UNCONVINCING ACTION MELLER FAIRLY INTERESTING

Allen J. Holubar and Louise Lovely in

THE REED CASE

Butterfly—Universal

DIRECTOR	Allen J. Holubar
AUTHOR	Allen J. Holubar
CAMERAMAN	Roy H. Klaffki
AS A WHOLE	Detective crook meller with many rough mixups and no human note
STORY	One of those wild convenient things
DIRECTION	Provided much action that never convinced nor impressed
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally excellent
LIGHTINGS	Some exteriors good; interiors ordinary
CAMERA WORK	Good straight stuff
STARS	Quite actory; never impressed
SUPPORT	Movie types
EXTERIORS	Some good scenic shots
INTERIORS	Satisfactory; not distinctive
DETAIL	Some impossible bits
TIME	Sixty-four minutes (5 parts)

THIS was just a movie meller.

They started off with a lot of junk explaini what a wonderful detective Mr. Holubar w with much reference to the fact that the pol were unable to do anything, while he invariabl landed every crook he ever thought about.

Feeling the need of a rest, this detective geni went to a lonely lodge in the Adirondacks. Crooks tha obligingly abducted the shero and planted her in a secret underground cabin of some sort, which seem to adjoin this lonely lodge that the detective gink h picked out for his vacation.

They pulled a lot of mysterious stuff before we kn that the girl was planted there, which left the audien in the same state of mind as the detective, regardi the happenings, because it seemed as if either he w crazy or somebody was having a good time at his e-pense.

During these scenes, however, we found some m-terious person nonchalantly shooting at our hero d-tective every now and then, these shots always missi him by about an inch, with our brave one never at a me going into cover. Certainly this guy was no de-ctive! We saw this mysterious personage carelessly ioot a hole through hero's hat, he stopping to examine ie hole and look around curiously to see who was ying to kill him, without any thought about getting at on the ground or trying to conceal himself from ie foe.

Afterwards they shot past the detective's ears on veral occasions, with always the same result: our ero stepped right out into the open and pointed a evolver at nothing in particular—and the thing which have been unable to figure is, why didn't the mys-rious gink, whom we afterwards learned was one of ie crooks, shoot the hero full of holes when he came it in the open? Of course, if they had, they couldn't ave finished the story.

We had an assortment of rough-and-tumble fights, hich to the minds of some film folk proves that a icture is good, although I refuse to believe that the verage film fan is of the same opinion. They pulled ne or two of these scraps in the opening three reels nd then finished off with a grand and glorious one the end. Of course, shero was eventually rescued, nd they all lived happily ever after.

Neither of the stars made any impression except to egister much "acting," and none of the other characters id anything of any importance.

Ernie Shields was shown as some sort of a boob count ho was supposed to do things that were funny, and, far as I could see, the only reason he was in the plot was to provide something to cut to. While the big fight was on, they showed Ernie driving wildly in an automobile headed from New York to the Adirondacks. Of course, this made it possible to cut up the fight. That's about all it was good for, and those who do not understand scenario detail will probably say, Why?

In the cast were Alfred Allen, Fred Montague, Geo. Pearce, Sydney Dean, Nanine Wright and Edward Brady.

The Box Office Angle.

If the wild meller stuff gets by with you, you may slip this one over because it is no better and no worse than dozens of others of the same type. But certainly if you feel that you can afford to play it, I can tell you definitely that you cannot afford to make very much fuss about it. The story is painfully convenient and never gets any place in particular, the situation being one of those "planted" things that fails utterly to impress as a possible happening.

I doubt very much if the names of Allen Holubar and Louise Lovely mean anything in the lives of the average film fan, and consequently I'd say that this is good for nothing except a filler on an off day when you feel that it is just a case of showing a movie.

Personally, I am of the opinion that you fellers who have worth-while houses should never show a production that is "just a filum." The good old speed-'em-up-Dick and roughhouse battle hokum when jumbled together without any particular rhyme or reason doesn't impress these days.

STAR AND ATMOSPHERE HELP OBVIOUS CONVENIENT PLOT

Kitty Gordon in

THE BELOVED ADVENTURESS

Peerless—World

IRECTOR ..... George Cowl
UTHOR ..... Frances Marion
AMERAMAN ..... Lucien Tainguy
S A WHOLE ..... Statuesque star wearing many gowns in movie plot with messy morals
TORY ..... Will be very obvious to wise fans, and consequently lacks conviction; finished with painful coincidence
IRECTION ..... Gave very good sets, locations and some excellent lightings; but failed to make action ring true at times, with occasional lack of close-ups
HOTOGRAPHY ..... Generally very good; occasionally excellent
IGHTINGS ..... Sometimes excellent; generally very good
AMERA WORK ..... Very good
TAR ..... Impressive beauty wearing interesting outfits
UPPORT ..... Girls good; men satisfactory
XTERIORS ..... Some beautiful; generally well chosen
NTERIORS ..... Generally very good
ETAIL ..... Satisfactory
IME ..... Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

UNFORTUNATELY, the story of this was a chess-board movie plot which made the development very obvious, with the result that the scenes didn't have any real element of suspense. The action was interesting, and Miss Gordon, as she always is, was rather good to look at, with many gowns being displayed, some of which were decidedly L. & B. d., there being numerous "double exposures." The general atmosphere of the offering as to settings, locations and lightings was very good. Occasionally they acted quite some, but the chief fault with the entire offering was that any wise fan will have everything figured out long before it happens.

Considering the agitation which has been proclaimed broadcast regarding the necessity of very clean pictures, it seems that this had to do with a plot of rather messy morals.

We found Miss Gordon, as the mistress of a man with whom she had lived ten years, bringing her younger sister from a convent to live with her, and right away it was evident that the youthful sister was to be the man's next prospect. Most of the story centered around his playing for the younger sister after throwing the older one down flat.

Eventually Miss Gordon, the older sister, locked her younger sister in her room when she was going to keep an appointment with the man, and Miss Gordon, after taking a revolver from the trusty old resting place (the drawer), went to the man's room and shot him "in the struggle." Of course, she could have shot him in the heart as soon as she came in, but that would have been murder—so she shot him in the struggle, which got rid of him just as well, and he calmly wrote a note saying that he had taken his own life. Isn't it odd that they always die immediately after finishing these statements?

The younger sister forgot about this affair, of course, and married the hero, who'd been lurking in the offing, and then they pulled a little unnecessary stuff on the finish which, nevertheless, was rather well done. This showed Kitty as a Red Cross nurse in the war. A woman was seen crawling across the battlefield with a searchlight following her, much the same as the scene in "Joan the Woman." After Miss Gordon had pulled the "sheroics" and rescued the lady, who do you s'pose it was?—the man's former wife! Why in the world they decided to tack such a coincidence on to the finish, I can't figure—because certainly it will make 90 per cent. of any audience groan and say, "Surely they do it in the movies!"

Miss Gordon handled her part very satisfactorily, because no one expects her to do anything save look as good as she can and wear clothes. She emoted a bit, but it can hardly be said that she made clear just exactly what emotion she was registering.

Lillian Cook as the younger sister was very pleasing, and Katherine Johnston as Miss Cook's friend made a small part stand out.

Others who appeared were Inez Shannon, Madge Evans, Robt. Forsyth, Jack Drumier, Pinna Nesbit, R. Payton Gibbs, Fred C. Truesdell and Ed Elkas.

The Box Office Angle.

This is a well-done production with a star who will undoubtedly pull some business if you will exploit her properly. The story never really registers, but it is interesting. They pull a lot of scenes of President Wilson's inauguration which are wished into the story by the use of a few balcony flashes supposed to get over that the characters of the story were watching the crowds, and on the finish they do the Red Cross stuff, so that there is an element of "patriotism" in one or two places.

The film lacks comedy relief, which would have helped decidedly, but I believe you can very safely put this over because of Kitty Gordon's presence and the fact that the production has a certain atmosphere of near class which will make an impression with the average patron.

As program productions run, this stands very well except for the obvious story, and I believe that if you will center your attention upon Miss Gordon in the advertising you will be able to get some money with it and get it by without any serious complaint.

STAR'S PERSONALITY AND TREATMENT PUT THIS OVER

William Russell in

THE MASKED HEART

American-Mutual

DIRECTOR	Edward Sloman
AUTHOR	Julius Grinnell Furthmann
CAMERAMAN	Joe Morgan
AS A WHOLE	Personalities and treatment made old situations quite interesting
STORY	Trifling wife, suspicious husband, and hero-who-sacrificed-self-to-save-wife situation; but nicely handled
DIRECTION	Gave good atmosphere, many nice lightings and generally good treatment
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally very good
LIGHTINGS	Many decidedly effective; generally good
CAMERA WORK	Very good
STAR	Powerful and pleasing principally because of repressed emotion
SUPPORT	Wife very good; others very satisfactory
EXTERIORS	Some excellent; generally good
INTERIORS	Several fine sets; atmosphere throughout good
DETAIL	Good
TIME	Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

THIS started off with a nice bit of romantic mystery having to do with Bill Russell discovering a mysterious beauty at a dance, only to meet her afterwards as the wife of a friend. Since she had been masked at the first meeting, he was never sure, and she denied the meeting, with the result that he was kept interested.

Finally, when hubby left for town, the wife admitted that she was the masked beauty and started to trifle. Hubby was forced to return by a falling tree (as they always are forced to return by something), saw shadows on the window; wifey was warned, and hero took refuge in another room, which proved to be that of the husband's daughter by a former marriage, daughter having previously demonstrated that she was very much in love with hero.

Hero and daughter married, the trifling wife's hubby died, and she came back to "vamp," and so hero's wife left him, which made him discover that he really loved her. Hero caught the boat, and then they had their real honeymoon.

William Russell is a young man who handles situations in which he suggests power by repressed emotion, very successfully. In this he had plenty of opportunity to do just that sort of thing.

Kathleen Kirkham, as the trifling wife, was very good at times suggesting, just a bit, that very clever star Dorothy Dalton.

Francelia Billington as the daughter who became Mr. Russell's wife, was very pleasing.

William Conklin as Miss Billington's father handled his part nicely.

I believe the average audience will consider this good entertainment because it is interesting. At times the situations seem very familiar, but they have been intelligently treated and a certain element of suspense maintained. The atmosphere, for the most part, is very good, although occasionally we found a number of characters rather plainly grouped for the camera.

The Box Office Angle

Figured from the viewpoint of the program release, I believe this is very good. It should get you some money, because if you aren't pulling business with Bill Russell's stuff, there is something wrong with your method of exploitation. Bill is the sort of hero that the girls fall for, and recently he has had stories with something of a kick in them in certain spots. If you have never played any of his, I believe it would be worth while to check a few of them over and start your fans to cultivating his acquaintance.

Certainly this has been better handled than the average program release, and surely it is much better than the Mutual average has been. You might, in arousing interest on this, say: "If you were wealthy, would you marry a girl you didn't love, if you knew she loved you, in order to save her stepmother from disgrace because of an indiscretion?" To make it more brief, you might say: "Would you marry a girl you didn't love, to shield her stepmother?"

You might stir up some interest in this by advertising along this line: "Do you like Bill Russell when he gets mad but has sense enough to keep from fighting? See him in 'The Masked Heart.'"

HAROLD LOCKWOOD

Yorke--Metro

SLACKER SUBJECT WELL ENOUGH DONE TO REGISTER

Bryant Washburn in

THE MAN WHO WAS AFRAID

Essanay—K-E-S-E

DIRECTOR	Fred E. Wright
AUTHOR	Mary Brecht Pulver
SCENARIO BY	Fred E. Wright
AS A WHOLE	Subject that should appeal just now, only fairly done, but will get over nicely
STORY	Had "slacker" touch, but missed characterization possibility of registering early development of cowardice
DIRECTION	Had some good touches, but many that were ordinary
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied from good to poor
LIGHTINGS	A few excellent; many ordinary
CAMERA WORK	Varied decidedly
STAR	Personality that lifted many scenes
SUPPORT	Just acceptable; some of it ordinary
EXTERIORS	Only acceptable, although a few battle flashes excellent
INTERIORS	Acceptable; not distinctive
DETAIL	A little messy in spots
TIME	Sixty minutes (5 parts)

THEY missed a wonderful opportunity here in failing to register in an effective manner a characterization study as to why the central figure in this was a coward. If this line of thought had been intelligently developed, every bit of the footage which was shown would have had additional punch.

As it stands, this production runs along with scenes and atmosphere that is just good, but a theme which at the present moment is almost sure-fire.

The story told of a young man whose mother had kept him from joining the militia because she didn't want him to go to war, until a neighbor suggested that he would look very handsome in a uniform, when she promptly told son to get into the company.

Then came the call to Mexico, and we found the mother forcing the boy to drop out of the company, there being one or two titles here which might have been very readily omitted or toned down.

Then we had many flashes of soldiers going to war, which scenes were cut into the story, there being many shots of Mr. Washburn at home very much worried because every one had bawled him out as a slacker.

The final blow came when a doll baby, registering him as a war baby, was brought in from the steps, and we saw this young man feel his country's call sufficiently to walk out on his mother and join his company as a private.

Of course, we knew right then that he was going to pull some hero stunts, and sure enough the troops got in trouble, just like they used to do in the Civil War days and the Indian times (according to the movies), with it necessary to send a messenger for help.

Our "coward" hero volunteered with two friends to get word to reinforcements, and then we had many bing-bang scenes of fighting, with the flying automobile carrying the three men, shown racing over terrible roads.

They had some very rough country to traverse, and finally the automobile was seen to go over a cliff, landing the three men in the water below. It happened that, in the print I saw, several of these scenes were assembled in improper order, with the result that this part of the story was pretty messy. Anyway, the good old "Boys to the Rescue!" stuff worked, and the reinforcements arrived in time.

Of course, hero returned to mother with honors and won the girl, with mother deciding that after all it was fine to have a sojer for a son.

The mother in this is a very unsympathetic part, and I fear that some of the titles given to her when she is keeping her son out of the army are a little bit strong for the present crisis. Certainly she gets no sympathy when she welcomes her boy upon his return.

The general treatment of this is little more than ordinary, but it is good enough to get by, and conditions justify your booking this and boosting it as a patriotic melodrama that will make every young man want to enlist. There is enough of the appeal to patriotism in the film to guarantee a certain amount of applause at proper moments.

Bryant Washburn made the young coward-hero a very human personage, and it is certainly to be regretted that the author and director did not give us about two reels of characterization describing the environment and training which made a coward of this young man. That would have been great stuff, and surely Washburn could have put it over with a bang. This would have given a tremendous amount of sympathy to the character and would have made all of his cowardly actions easily understandable. It would also have given a bigger punch to the scenes in which his real character broke through the shell created by his mother's training.

The supporting cast was quite ordinary. Those who appeared were Ernest Maupin, Margaret Watts and Frankie Raymond.

The Box Office Angle

Considering the fact that Bryant Washburn has gone over with a bang in such pictures as "Skinner's Dress Suit," "Skinner's Bubble," and "Filling His Own Shoes," I believe that you can go to this right now, get real money with it and send most everybody out feeling more than satisfied, because the story has a sure-fire patriotic appeal. There is a swing to the tempo of the battle action which is good enough to stir them up a bit, and the chances are that most every one will like it even though the treatment is a bit crude in spots.

You might advertise this along lines similar to this: "Do you know any slackers? Why don't some men enlist? See 'The Man Who Was Araid.'"

Exhibitors Can Obtain
Beynon's Orchestral Settings
For All Features On a Moderate Rental Basis. Same Scores As Used In Many New York Theatres.
Write
GEORGE W. BEYNON,
505 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.

CRANE WILBUR
Exclusive Management
MABEL CONDON EXCHANGE
LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

ALASKAN DANCE HALL STUFF JUST FAIRLY WELL HANDLED

Myrtle Gonzalez in

THE GREATER LAW

Bluebird

DIRECTOR	Lynn F. Reynolds
AUTHOR	Charles J. Wilson
SCENARIO BY	Lynn F. Reynolds
CAMERAMAN	Clyde R. Cook
AS A WHOLE	Roughneck Alaskan melo, interesting but didn't convince
STORY	Obvious and convenient, but provided several good situations
DIRECTION	Registered rather good atmosphere and some good action, but permitted it to drag badly in spots, with some bad treatment of important scenes
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied from fine to poor
LIGHTINGS	Some very good, but only fair in most of interiors
CAMERA WORK	Varied
STAR	Satisfactory, but overshadowed by atmosphere
SUPPORT	Some roughneck types
EXTERIORS	Many beautiful snow bits; atmosphere generally good
INTERIORS	Good dance-hall atmosphere
DETAIL	Some good rough stuff
TIME	Sixty-four minutes (5 parts)

As program offerings go, this is very satisfactory because it has a lot of action and a fairly good element of suspense, so far as the average patron is concerned, although the wise ones will have it figured. While the important situations are convenient coincidences, they are rather good and, as individual incidents, compel attention.

Most of the action was centered in a roughneck dance hall in Alaska, with the exteriors comprising rather pretty snow scenes on the trail to the Klondike. We had the usual assortment of types in the dance hall scenes, a few of these being very good, and, of course, there was the hero, with Miss Gonzalez the young girl from outside who came to the camp in search of her brother. The brother had been accidentally shot by the hero, who had rushed in to save him from an attack by the willun. The audience was led to believe that the brother had been killed.

After considerable footage, we found that the shero had made the acquaintance of the willun, and he had told her that the hero had killed her brother in cold blood. She started for the mines to get the hero, and after she was on her way in blew the brother with his sweetheart, happy and all that goes with it.

Shero arrived at hero's cabin and pulled the good old stuff of "Go get your gun and fight me!" which, believe me, is never done except in the movies. They lined up for the duel in the snow, while the hero's pal raced in a dog sled to stop the bloodshed. Of course he got there in time, although, to make it a little more intrikut, hero allowed the girl to shoot him, without attempting to fire. The hero was supposed to think that the man he had shot was her sweetheart, so, of course, what did he care about his young life!

After shooting the man the girl fainted, which brought a laugh, because the hero's pal was there on the scene and we knew that hero was going to get well and she was going to forgive him and everything was going to be "slovely"—which happened within a very few feet.

I believe the average audience will accept this as it runs as just a fairly interesting movie, but there is the danger that many may protest decidedly against showing all of this meller with fights and shootin's, etc., which never at any time convinces, and stands without a truly distinctive personality sufficient to carry the burden of the ordinary plot.

There was much beautiful snow stuff and the photography was generally such as to lift this quite a bit.

In the cast were Gretchen Lederer, Maud Emory, G. M. Rickerts, Larry Peyton, George Hernandez, Jack Curtis and Jean Herscholt.

The Box Office Angle.

If you are playing the routine program stuff you can figure this as just another dance-hall-roughneck-miner mellerdrammer that has nothing of real distinction, but considerable action and a certain amount of interest. It will get by without much comment one way or the other from the average fan, while a few of the wisest will probably "pan" it pretty hard, and a few of those who love meller will probably say it is "great."

Don't promise too much on it. Just slide it over as a reasonably good action movie.

I do not believe that "The Greater Law" means anything in the young life of the average fan, and it is questionable whether the star's name will pull any business, so that, as a box office bet, this can hardly be figured anything more than a filler.

ERNEST STERN, Inc.
THE TITLE MAN
Specializes in
MOTION PICTURE TITLES
OF THE HIGHEST GRADE
729 Seventh Ave., New York - - Phone Bryant 8973

GEORGE EDWARDES-HALL
WITH
HERBERT BRENON

Get A Binder
for WID'S
$1.50 Prepaid Everywhere

Every Day We Get Orders to Duplicate

WID'S

That Have Been Lost

Our stock on some of these issues is very low.

The best way to always have your file of Wid's complete for reference is to Keep Them In a Binder

Wid's Binders are sold at cost.

$1.50 PREPAID ANYWHERE

TABULATED PERCENTAGE REPORTS FROM EXHIBITORS

THE BATTING AVERAGES

These are the averages of the companies having 200 reports or more.

Reports		% P. P.	% B. O.	Repeat
637	Fox	73.0	70.0	85
520	Metro	70.5	66.7	49
1768	Triangle	70.2	64.7	352
425	Vitagraph	68.1	66.3	74
2046	Paramount	68.7	62.9	334
477	World	67.3	61.0	41
233	Bluebird	62.7	63.3	19

THE NUMBER BEFORE THE NAME OF THE FEATURE INDICATES THE NUMBER OF REPORTS RECEIVED AND TABULATED ON THAT FILM.

THE FIRST COLUMN CARRIES THE PERCENTAGE OF PLEASED PATRONS.

THE SECOND COLUMN SHOWS THE BOX OFFICE PERCENTAGE.

FIGURES IN THE THIRD COLUMN INDICATE THAT MANY REPORTED THE FILM WORTH A RETURN DATE.

All reports in this percentage tabulation have been marked on this scale:

EXCEPTIONAL	100%
EXCELLENT	80%
GOOD	60%
FAIR	40%
POOR	20%
BAD	0%

Reports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
2046	Paramount	68.7	62.9	334

PARAMOUNT

1	In Bishop's Carriage	85	93
2	The Lost Paradise	50	73
6	The Virginian	88	81	2
2	Such a Little Queen	78	78	1
1	Marta of the Lowlands	50	70
3	Where the Trail Divides	93	90	1
11	Wildflower	89	82	6
1	The County Chairman	80	80
1	What's His Name	75	100
4	Behind the Screen	86	83
5	Man from Mexico	90	70	2
1	The Man From Home	70	70
1	Circus Man	94	95
2	Rose of the Rancho	84	77
4	The Bargain	85	86	3
2	Ghost Breakers	60	63
6	The Crucible	94	92	2
1	False Colors	50	80
5	The Sign of the Cross	79	85
4	Cameo Kirby	61	50
6	Cinderella	86	94	3
1	The Million	70	90
4	Girl of the Golden West	78	71	2
3	The Dancing Girl	65	65
3	The Italian	77	62	1
1	No Laughing Matter	90	85
1	Morals of Marcus	60	50
5	The Goose Girl	95	95	4
2	After Five	51	50
1	Mistress Nell	88	95
2	Buckshot John	60	60
3	Her Triumph	60	74	1
3	The Warrens of Virginia	70	71	1
1	Country Boy	60	70
6	David Harem	82	78	1
1	A Gentleman of Leisure	80	70
2	The Caprices of Kitty	63	70
1	Love Route	60	60
1	Sunshine Molly	40	20
1	The Governor's Lady	97	85
3	Gretna Green	100	100	2
3	Are You a Mason?	78	84
1	Pretty Mrs. Smith	65	80
1	The Unafraid	80	75
1	When We Were 21	75	63
4	Snobs	64	52
5	Captain Courtesy	88	68	1
3	Captive	82	67
3	Niobe	75	55	1
3	Help Wanted	80	75
5	The Woman	86	80	1
5	House of Lost Court	82	54	1
4	Panchon, The Cricket	89	92	3
8	Betty in Search of Thrill	88	87
5	Stolen Goods	78	75
8	Wild-Goose Chase	60	55	1
6	Pretty Sister Jose	84	82	2
5	Jim the Penman	64	65
6	The Dawn of a To-morrow	83	88	1
5	Arab	89	84	3
1	Clarissa	75	80
2	The Dictator	45	45
5	Wild Olive	82	69
8	Chimmy Fadden	91	75	1
3	Little Pal	79	85
4	Rugmaker's Daughter	40	50
2	The Clue	74	88
6	Kindling	81	82
1	The Running Fight	60	70
3	The Fighting Hope	77	80
5	Kilmeny	76	73
6	Seven Sisters	87	86	1
3	Puppet Crown	85	85
19	Rags	91	93	5
2	Sold	83	72
6	The Secret Orchid	79	74
5	Nearly a Lady	65	75
6	The Marriage of Kitty	76	64
3	Poor Schmaltz	62	37
5	Helene of the North	87	81	2
3	The Majesty of the Law	56	60
3	Heart of Jennifer	68	55
2	Incorrigible Dukane	75	55
4	Esmeralda	89	89	2
2	The Case of Becky	65	65
1	Out of Darkness	40	40
1	Peer Gynt	100	100
4	The Explorers	72	61
4	'Twas Ever Thus	53	60
2	Voice in the Fog	75	67
6	Fatal Card	65	50
4	Zaza	91	67	2
6	The Girl of Yesterday	89	88	3
7	White Pearl	71	75
4	Blackbirds	57	48
7	Chorus Lady	73	68
6	The Secret Sin	69	74	1
7	Yankee Girl	52	57
6	Masqueraders	56	56
11	Carmen	82	68	3
11	Still Waters	95	92	7
8	Madame Butterfly	82	59	2
7	Mummy and Humming Bird	64	54
7	Bella Donna	93	77	4
8	Armstrong's Wife	79	65
5	Chimmie Fadden Out West	84	84	2
8	A Gentleman From Indiana	86	78
9	The Prince and the Pauper	92	88	4
10	Mr. Grex from Monte Carlo	84	69	1
9	Jane	75	51
9	The Unknown	76	67	1
18	The Cheat	94	80	12
9	The Reform Candidate	80	54	1
9	The Immigrant	73	62
10	The Old Homestead	88	84	7
8	Lydia Gilmore	82	61	2
10	Temptation	82	77	2
9	The Foundling	78	76	3
5	Tongues of Men	82	58	1
7	Mice and Men	84	84	4
6	The Golden Chance	80	68	2
1	My Lady Incog	40	40
4	Ragamuffins	77	87
4	Call of Cumberlands	77	78
6	The Spider	87	68	1
9	Pudd'n Head Wilson	83	66	4
8	Tennessee's Pardner	83	80
7	Madame Le Presidente	21	48
8	Nearly King	52	53	1
12	Trail of Lonesome Pine	75	88	3
7	Fell in Love with Wife	56	52	1
7	Blacklist	61	51	1
9	Out of the Drifts	90	89	3
8	Diplomacy	58	54	1
13	Poor Little Peppina	88	85	7
15	To Have and To Hold	75	72	4
11	Ben Blair	72	65
9	For the Defense	68	66	1
6	The Code of Marcia Gray	70	66	1
8	The Lost Bridegroom	80	70	2
7	The Saleslady	75	66	1
14	Audrey	75	72	3
8	The Sowers	65	60
10	The Heart of Paula	72	57	1
11	The Race	71	62
7	The Eternal Grind	71	82	3
9	The Love Mast	58	56	2
9	Molly Make-Believe	87	83	5
7	The Red Widow	62	58	2
12	The Heart of Nora Flynn	72	60	4
8	A Moment Before	52	64	1
12	David Garrick	68	46	2
9	The Innocent Lie	56	51
15	Maria Rosa	79	78	4
12	Alien Souls	69	67	1
13	The Feud Girl	60	56
16	Pasquale	78	53	3
16	Sweet Kitty Bellairs	72	62	2
20	Saints and Sinners	51	49
17	Thousand-Dollar Husband	58	62	4
22	A Gutter Magdalene	62	54	1
10	Evil Thereof	44	44
15	The Making of Maddalena	63	57	3
23	Silks and Satins	85	88	16
14	Destiny's Toy	60	51
19	The Clown	79	54	1
20	Susie Snowflakes	69	59	2
16	The World's Great Snare	73	78	4
19	The American Beauty	61	61	3
22	The Dupe	64	64	1
22	The Smugglers	53	50	1
26	The Selfish Woman	72	68	4
28	Davy Crockett	67	61
28	The Dream Girl	69	64	1
28	Under Cover	79	75	5
27	International Marriage	55	51	1
27	Common Ground	64	64	1
35	Hulda from Holland	95	94	23
30	House of Golden Windows	73	64	3
22	A Woman in the Case	72	72	3
25	Little Lady Eileen	87	89	10
12	The Stronger Love	53	52
21	Public Opinion	82	72	4
20	Rolling Stones	67	62	2
21	The Honorable Friend	65	62	1
18	Victory of Conscience	59	60	2
19	Each Pearl a Tear	74	72	2
20	The Parson of Panamint	77	68	3
13	The Big Sister	47	58

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
12 The Reward of Patience	66	54
13 The House of Lies	76	68	1
13 The Daughter of MacGregor	55	46
16 Ashes of Embers	84	84	6
15 The Quest of Life	58	72
14 Anton, the Terrible	46	45
15 The Lash	59	56
12 The Storm	78	64	1
15 The Intrigue	81	66	2
15 Her Father's Son	74	68	2
13 Witchcraft	53	54
13 The Kiss	74	68	2
15 The Rainbow Princess	81	72	3
14 Seventeen	84	72	2
13 Miss George Washington	94	94	10
15 The Heir to the Hoorah	82	69	5
15 The Soul of Kura San	80	71	1
12 A Son of Erin	79	73	2
10 Unprotected	53	55	1
10 The Years of the Locust	49	51
11 The Plow Girl	75	60
8 The Yellow Pawn	65	58	1
9 Nanette of the Wilds	50	57	2
7 Martyrdom of Philip Strong	53	55	1
10 The Coney Island Princess	62	63	1
10 The Road to Love	72	59	1
14 Oliver Twist	85	69	6
12 The Victoria Cross	43	55	1
13 The Traveling Salesman	76	57	3
14 The Right Direction	75	59	2
18 Snow White	94	95	10
13 The Redeeming Love	60	56	1
17 The Slave Market	73	70	5
11 The Evil Eye	27	41	1
16 Great Expectations	76	53	1
14 Happiness of Three Women	74	60	1
13 Betty to the Rescue	45	47
14 A Girl Like That	53	48
15 Lost and Won	58	51
18 The Golden Fetter	50	55
18 His Sweetheart	83	58	2
17 The Wax Model	67	58
18 Each His Kind	62	61
15 Her Own People	72	51
11 The Black Wolf	35	41
17 The American Consul	53	50	1
17 The Fortunes of Fifi	64	77	2
19 On Record	63	57	2
15 Winning of Sally Temple	40	48
16 Those Without Sin	54	52	1
14 Castles for Two	53	50	1
13 Out of the Wreck	60	54
12 Sapho	75	83	3
10 Prison Without Walls	52	51
11 The Dummy	70	54
8 The Spirit of Romance	62	52
7 As Men Love	73	51
9 The Bottle Imp	76	67	2
6 The Bond Between	52	37
7 A School for Husband	48	46	1
6 The Lonesome Chap	47	44
8 Sleeping Fires	59	61	1
7 The Tides of Barnegat	46	40
7 The Cost of Hatred	40	36
9 The Valentine Girl	72	75
1 Unconquered	10	15
5 The Girl at Home	45	39
7 Heart's Desire	21	34
6 Sacrifice	28	43
5 The Primrose Ring	30	38
7 The Silent Partner	30	34
4 Marcellini Millions	39	25
4 The Highway of Hope	26	26
4 Her Better Self	59	48
4 The Undying Flame	26	40
2 Freckles	68	55

TRIANGLE

1768 Triangle	70.2	64.7	352
10 The Iron Strain	81	66	2
9 The Lamb	84	75	3
9 Old Heidelberg	72	63	1
11 The Coward	84	67	1
9 Martyrs of the Alamo	67	57	2
14 The Disciple	85	76	2
7 Matrimony	81	74	2
5 Sable Lorcha	64	53
6 The Golden Claw	61	72
9 Double Trouble	64	64	2
7 Aloha Oe	82	65	1
5 Lily and Rose	61	53
7 Jordan is a Hard Road	81	54
6 Winged Idol	53	52
3 Penitents	29	32
11 The Edge of the Abyss	67	61
8 Submarine Pirate	85	78	1
5 Cross Currents	48	45
11 Between Men	72	70	1
14 Let Katy Do It	87	66	6
5 The Corner	56	47
5 The Missing Link	55	43	1
3 Beckoning Flame	65	48
9 The Wood Nymph	54	50	1
8 The Conqueror	71	70
9 Price of Power	55	51
10 The Green Swamp	80	78	1
12 Acquitted	69	51
6 D'Artagnan	59	54
18 His Picture in the Papers	90	75	5
13 Honor's Altar	77	67	2
14 Betty of Greystone	77	65	2
23 Peggy	94	91	15
7 Don Quixote	57	56
9 The Last Act	79	78	1
11 Daphne and the Pirate	71	57	1
18 Hell's Hinges	93	89	11
17 The Flying Torpedo	88	80	8
14 Bullets and Brown Eyes	85	75	3
14 Martha's Vindication	79	72	2
14 Moral Fabric	75	62	1
15 Hoodoo Ann	68	65	1
15 The Raiders	79	70
14 The Habit of Happiness	92	85	5
8 Waifs	70	59	1
8 Little Meena's Romance	64	60	1
17 The Aryan	59	80	6
10 Sold for Marriage	71	72	1
17 Stepping Stones	85	75	2
10 Sunshine Dad	36	46
9 Civilzation's Child	68	64	1
14 Children In the House	80	66	2
11 The Beggar of Cawnpore	61	49
19 The Good-Bad Man	90	92	4
12 The No-Good Guy	74	60	3
16 Susan Rocks the Boat	71	64
20 Not My Sister	79	77	4
18 Child of Paris Streets	76	64
22 The Primal Lure	82	76	7
8 Mr. Goode, the Samaritan	53	53
20 The Market of Vain Desire	79	64	5
22 Going Straight	77	78	3
19 The Bugle Call	93	79	9
26 Reggie Mixes In	93	80	11
16 The Sorrows of Love	66	69	1
21 An Innocent Magdalene	71	71	2
18 The Dividend	70	68	1
21 The Wild Girl of Sierras	45	53
25 An Apostle of Vengeance	88	83	4
18 Casey at the Bat	44	48
28 The Phantom	83	72	7
30 Flirting With Fate	87	86	11
31 The Deserter	85	69	11
26 The Little School Ma'am	74	67	2
26 The Eye of the Night	74	58	5
18 Stranded	61	51
27 The Captive God	65	70	2
23 The Halfbreed	72	74	2
22 The Payment	81	70	3
18 The Marriage of Molly O	48	47
23 Honor Thy Name	87	73	4
22 The Devil's Needle	64	64	1
29 Shell 43	87	69	6
26 Hell-to-Pay Austin	83	66	6
21 Lieutenant Danny, U. S. A.	79	69
16 Pillars of Society	59	56	1
22 Home	91	80	9
16 Gretchen the Greenhorn	64	62	2
21 The Patriot	79	80	6
23 The Social Secretary	89	74	8
17 The Thoroughbred	82	72	1
11 The Little Liar	69	57
19 The Wolf Woman	86	89	6
15 The Dawnmaker	59	78	3
17 Diane of the Follies	71	74	2
25 Manhattan Madness	94	91	12
20 Plain Jane	88	77	5
18 Old Folks At Home	83	67	2
16 The Jungle Child	62	63	1
14 The Rummy	68	52	1
20 The Return of Draw Egan	88	87	7
19 The Vagabond Prince	75	69	3
17 Somewhere in France	77	68	1
16 A Corner In Colleens	88	81	6
12 A Sister of Six	69	64	2
21 Fifty-Fifty	89	83	6
4 War's Women	61	48
12 Atta Boy's Last Race	54	55
15 American Aristocracy	92	89	8
9 The Microscope Mystery	46	39
12 The Honorable Algy	77	67	3
14 Jim Grimsby's Boy	68	62	3
13 The Devil's Double	92	93	7
11 The Children Pay	73	63	3
13 Children of the Feud	56	53	1
8 The Criminal	49	45
9 The Gamble in Souls	72	68	3
15 The Wharf Rat	54	55
16 The Matrimaniac	93	94	8
17 The Sin Ye Do	93	84	10
13 The Heiress at Coffee Dan's	60	53	2
10 Three of Many	62	53
7 The House Built Upon Sand	79	66	3
7 Nina, the Flower Girl	45	45
9 The Female of the Species	76	74	2
14 Truthful Tulliver	98	95	9
12 The Weaker Sex	88	83	4
7 The Little Yank	52	52	1
10 The Bride of Hate	78	74	4
11 The Iced Bullet	62	53
14 The Americano	99	97	11
10 Chicken Casey	75	56	1
13 Jim Bludso	64	42	1
14 The Crab	83	70	5
10 Girl of the Timberclaims	37	34
15 The Gunfighter	76	85	10
12 The Bad Boy	71	51	2
9 Princess of the Dark	36	42
5 Stage-Struck	35	32
9 The Last of the Ingrams	46	41
7 Blood Will Tell	65	62
3 Love Sublime	42	35
6 The Little Brother	48	36	2
13 Back of the Man	93	81	5
9 Betsy's Burglar	59	55
10 The Square Deal Man	96	94	5
7 The Dark Road	62	54	1
1 A Daughter of the Poor	35	38
5 Woman's Awakening	62	50
6 Her Father's Keeper	47	34
7 Her Official Fathers	50	46
7 Old-Fashioned Young Man	44	46
6 Sweetheart of the Doomed	79	71	3
6 Paddy O'Hara	61	51	1
8 The Desert Man	89	91	1
7 Cheerful Givers	42	36
7 The Pinch Hitter	97	71	1
4 Hands Up!	28	25
6 The Snarl	53	62
2 Might and the Man	13	30
5 Happiness	76	51
4 The Man Who Made Good	45	39
3 Wild Winship's Wife	70	62
4 Souls Triumphant	35	30
4 The Millionaire Vagrant	81	72
2 Wolf Lowry	90	95
1 The Girl, Glory	80	60

WORLD

447 World	67.3	61.0	41
4 Hearts Afire	70	78
1 Daughter of the Sea	60	50
2 The Warning	88	41
4 The Little Dutch Girl	80	63
1 The Price of Her Silence	80	90
2 The Master of the House	68	53
1 The Dragon	40	30
1 The Price	50	45
1 Love's Cross Roads	55	50
1 Better Woman	75	85
1 By Whose Hand	60	55
1 Her Great Hour	60	40
1 When it Strikes Home	60	85
2 Circus Romance	65	55
2 Old Dutch	75	30
1 Ballet Girl	42	47
3 Marrying Money	79	61
1 Wishing Ring	64	66
1 The Dollar Mark	55	42
1 Gentleman from Mississippi	40	44
1 As Ye Sow	100	44
1 Stolen Voice	44	44

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
1 Face in the Moonlight	80	60
1 Women and Wine	60	40
2 Blue Grass	75	68
1 Fruits of Desire	40	50
1 Alias Jimmy Valentine	80	80
6 Trilby	81	69	1
1 Idols	40	40
2 Master Hand	86	80
3 Devil's Toy	57	73
1 Salvation Nell	60	47
1 Family Cupboard	50	57	1
4 Heart of Blue Ridge	84	73	1
1 Butterfly on Wheel	80	70
2 Hearts of Men	80	52
1 Body and Soul	40	45
2 The Ransom	63	43
4 The Labyrinth	66	65
1 Should a Wife Forgive?	90	90
2 The Senator	83	60
1 Hearts in Exile	90	90
1 His Wife's Good Name	25	20
1 The Chain Invisible	90	5
1 The Imposter	80	75
1 Sunday	95	30
1 As In a Looking Glass	60	40
1 Over Night	70	70
1 Sins of Society	76	65
7 Camille	86	79	3
3 The Rack	89	69
1 Fine Feathers	70	40
1 The Clarion	60	75
3 The Woman in 47	74	80
5 The Yellow Passport	82	80	2
3 The Price of Happiness	58	50
2 A Woman's Power	45	50
1 Cowardly Way	60	60
2 Passersby	73	55
5 Man and His Angel	62	45
4 The Supreme Sacrifice	78	69
1 The Struggle	60	60
1 The Hand of Peril	75	67
5 Then I'll Come Back To You	76	66	1
4 The Reapers	75	65
2 The Shadow of Doubt	78	65
1 Social Highwaymen	75	48
3 Closed Road	87	81	1
7 The Feast of Life	61	73
1 Her Maternal Right	58	74
6 Sudden Riches	76	71
2 The Twin Triangle	83	45
6 Tangled Fates	57	63
3 Fate's Boomerang	42	53
5 His Brother's Wife	83	74	1
10 Perils of Divorce	61	63
18 La vie de Boheme	47	50
1 What Happened at 22	82	80
8 Crucial Test	59	58
7 The Weakness of Man	61	68
12 Sally in Our Alley	68	65
14 Paying the Price	70	70	1
12 Miss Petticoats	59	61
14 Woman's Way	75	74	4
13 The Summer Girl	56	57
12 Rail Rider	68	60
10 Husband and Wife	75	63	2
1 Almighty Dollar	76	72	1
13 The Velvet Paw	74	69	1
1 Friday, the Thirteenth	72	70
11 Dark Silence	77	79	2
4 The Revolt	66	63
7 The Gilded Cage	75	70
6 Hidden Scar	77	67
1 The Scarlet Oath	60	62
7 Man Who Stood Still	71	63
8 The Heart of a Hero	59	49
3 Without a Soul	70	85
15 Bought and Paid For	91	91	10
10 The Madness of Helen	57	54
6 Men She Married	58	55
4 The Deep Purple	81	75
11 All Man	59	63	2
7 Broken Chains	50	43
12 The Rise of Susan	79	83	6
8 The World Against Him	52	43
9 Woman Alone	69	65	1
7 On Dangerous Ground	65	71
7 The Man Who Forgot	65	61	1
4 Marriage a la Carte	73	73	1
1 The Unpardonable Sin	40	55
5 The Bondage of Fear	65	63
8 Tillie Wakes Up	73	78	1
8 The Hungry Heart	87	83	2
7 The Square Deal	74	74	1
3 A Girl's Folly	65	75
4 The Red Woman	56	50
4 The Web of Desire	78	73	1
4 The Family Honor	61	54
5 The Dancer's Peril	76	71	1
3 The Social Leper	60	53
3 Man's Woman	68	68
3 Darkest Russia	72	79
5 Forget-Me-Not	58	56
1 The Bludgeon	87	80
1 As Man Made Her	60	60
4 The Page Mystery	49	51
2 Yankee Pluck	68	55
3 Moral Courage	62	63
4 Mothers of France	66	51
2 Maternity	85	90
1 The Crimson Dove	80	70
2 The False Friend	68	68
1 Stolen Paradise	40	65
1 Atonement	70	65
1 The Pawn of Fate	85	45

METRO

520 Metro	70.5	66.7	49
1 Her Reckoning	60	40
1 Satan Sanderson	70	70
1 Cowboy and Lady	80	55
1 Heart of a Painted Lady	85	75
1 High Road	80	80
3 Shooting of Dan McGraw	81	78
1 Middleman	90	80
1 My Best Girl	60	60
1 Right of Way	70	85
2 Second in Command	77	80
1 The Vampire	90	90
6 Soul of a Woman	93	80	1
2 Silent Voice	77	87
1 An Enemy of Society	60	40
2 Song of Wage Slave	75	70
1 Emmy of Stork's Nest	80	60
2 Final Judgment	80	85
2 Pennington's Choice	92	90
4 Woman Pays	78	52
2 One Million Dollars	78	70
3 Barbara Frietchie	82	73
5 The Yellow Streak	85	64
8 House of Tears	80	65
4 Rosemary for Remembrance	73	68
3 Black Fear	73	57
5 What'll People Say?	80	84
4 The Turmoil	70	55
8 Lure of Heart's Desire	56	56
5 Her Debt of Honor	49	50
6 A Man and His Soul	83	83	2
3 The Upstart	68	72
3 Dimples	52	58
4 Corner in Cotton	64	58
5 The Price of Malice	66	65
6 The Soul Market	83	75	2
2 Blindness of Love	80	85	1
3 Lovely Mary	67	83
1 My Madonna	50	85
6 Her Great Price	80	68	1
8 The Wall Between	78	82	1
5 The Kiss of Hate	60	74
6 Half Million Bribe	69	49
8 Playing with Fire	78	75
11 The Come-Back	75	74	1
8 Snow Birds	80	77
8 A Million a Minute	72	84	1
4 The Spell of the Yukon	79	71
6 His Great Triumph	49	43
10 The Scarlet Woman	73	84	1
10 Dorian's Divorce	74	68
8 Masked Rider	69	68
6 Flower of No Man's Land	58	75
8 The Purple Lady	82	63
10 The Eternal Question	76	83	1
11 The Quitter	69	73
15 The River of Romance	87	76	7
8 The Child of Destiny	51	57
13 The Devil at His Elbow	64	61	1
14 God's Half Acre	71	62	1
14 The Weakness of Strength	68	54
11 The Pretender	80	72	1
7 The Upheaval	57	63
9 The Light of Happiness	67	61	1
10 Mister 44	88	93	4
8 The Wheel of the Law	77	66	1
10 The Dawn of Love	66	60
7 The Iron Woman	43	57
5 Life's Shadows	66	60
12 In the Diplomatic Service	67	83	4
8 The Brand of Cowardice	64	52
12 The Gates of Eden	68	51
11 Extravagance	69	82	3
10 The Wager	78	64
1 My Madonna	80	85
6 The Sunbeam	44	36
10 Big Tremaine	74	82	5
8 The Black Butterfly	70	79	4
7 The Stolen Triumph	54	49
6 Awakening of Helena Richie	63	64
9 Pidgin Island	69	73	2
10 Vanity	62	53
11 The White Raven	80	85	4
7 Wife by Proxy	45	41
7 Threads of Fate	39	38
9 Bridges Burned	43	63
7 The End of the Tour	41	41
8 One of Many	61	56	1
7 The Secret of Eve	34	67	1
12 The Promise	81	84	2
6 The Barricade	58	57
6 Hidden Children	43	65
9 The Mortal Sin	53	58
7 The Waiting Soul	49	61	1
6 The Father's Son	67	62
4 The Power of Decision	46	51
6 A Magdalen of the Hills	49	47
5 God's Law and Man	47	46
2 The Millionaire's Double	65	58
3 The Call of Her People	57	54
1 Sowers and Reapers	75	60
1 The Beautiful Lie	40	40
1 The Duchess of Doubt	75	70

FOX

637 Fox	73.0	70.0	85
1 Girl I Left Behind Me	0	25
2 St. Elmo	52	92
4 Fool There Was	82	96	1
2 Dr. Rameau	90	87	1
2 Kreutzer Sonata	90	85
1 The Idler	55	65
2 Celebrated Scandal	70	70
2 Clemenceau Case	87	81	1
2 Walls of Jericho	40	35
1 Woman's Resurrection	80	45
2 Anna Kerinina	67	65
2 Life's Shop Window	35	57
2 The Nigger	100	70
4 The Gilded Fool	70	75
3 Devil's Daughter	77	95
4 Should a Mother Tell?	83	76
1 Wormwood	80	80
1 Lady Audley's Secret	90	75
1 Princess Romanoff	60	60
1 Valley of the Missing	50	40
1 Children of the Ghetto	75	40
1 Samson	80	50
1 The Thief	90	40
8 Two Orphans	84	86	3
2 The Song of Hate	92	82
7 Regeneration	77	72	4
5 Wonwerful Adventure	75	77
5 Sin	62	82
2 Little Gypsy	80	74
5 Soul of Broadway	83	78	1
2 The Family Stain	87	64
3 Carmen	82	83	2
3 Blindness of Devotion	56	53
4 Woman's Past	63	43
9 Broken Law	82	65	1
8 Galley Slave	76	75	1
3 Unfaithful Wife	73	61
3 Her Mother's Secret	73	57
3 A Soldier's Oath	82	70
5 Destruction	86	94	1
3 Green-Eyed Monster	53	74
3 Parisian Romance	65	61
2 Fourth Estate	80	68
6 Serpent	92	93	1
5 Ruling Passion	53	59
5 Merely Mary Ann	52	45
7 Fool's Revenge	45	49
10 Fighting Blood	74	70

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
4 The Witch	63	59
4 Marble Heart	41	60
10 Gold and the Woman	65	86	1
10 The Bondman	79	64	1
5 A Wife's Sacrifice	55	56
11 Blue Blood and Red	84	71	1
6 Slander	80	70
10 A Modern Thelma	59	49	1
9 Man of Sorrow	63	64	1
9 Blazing Love	70	68
11 The Eternal Sapho	84	87	4
12 Sins of Men	76	61	1
14 Battle of Hearts	63	61
10 The Spider and the Fly	67	72	1
11 Hypocrisy	76	68
10 A Woman's Honor	69	71
21 East Lynne	86	86	9
15 Ambition	71	67
18 Man From Bitter Roots	82	81
20 Caprice of the Mountains	68	66	1
15 Tortured Heart	71	67
21 The Beast	87	66
26 Under Two Flags	94	92	17
19 The End of the Trail	66	79
19 Sporting Blood	62	57	1
18 Little Miss Happiness	75	68	3
19 Daredevil Kate	74	78
14 The Unwelcome Mother	63	66
15 Her Double Life	86	84	4
9 Where Love Leads	69	61
13 Fires of Conscience	64	70	1
11 The Straight Way	68	73
9 The Ragged Princess	81	72
13 The War Bride's Secret	76	58	3
11 Romeo and Juliet	85	85	4
5 Love and Hate	66	60
4 The Mischief-Maker	69	69	1
6 Jealousy	73	83
6 The Mediator	73	72	1
4 Sins of Parents	91	78	3
4 The Battle of Life	72	63
5 The Vixen	61	73
4 Love Thief	86	85
3 The Primitive Call	63	65
4 The Island of Desire	75	65	1
3 The Price of Silence	83	72
2 The Bitter Truth	83	80	1
8 The Darling of Paris	66	73
3 One Touch of Sin	62	73
4 The New York Peacock	85	85
3 The Scarlet Letter	80	75	1
2 The Tiger Woman	80	80	1
3 Sister Against Sister	63	60
5 A Tale of Two Cities	93	81	3
1 Melting Millions	70	40
3 The Victim	64	62
1 Love's Law	17	27
3 The Blue Streak	53	58
1 High Finance	80	50
1 American Methods	90	85

MUTUAL

146 Mutual	71.8	70.2	14
1 Buzzard's Shadow	85	80
1 Death Lock	98	85
1 On the Night Stage	75	40
1 The Mating	80	70
1 Enoch Arden	100	100
1 Girl from His Town	85	70
1 Ghosts	80	65
1 Cup of Life	85	40
1 His Wife	70	25
1 House of Scandal	90	75
1 Infatuation	60	50
1 Miracle of Life	83	81	1
1 Inner Struggle	40	20
1 Mill of Floss	75	90
1 The Painted Soul	82	85
1 End of the Road	90	100
1 Father and Son	75	75
1 The Reward	80	50
2 Bird of Prey	85	87
1 Inspiration	70	100	1
1 As a Woman Sows	80	22
1 The Decoy	50	85
1 The Drifter	75	60
1 Life's Blind Alley	50	75
1 Silas Marner	100	100	1
3 The Craving	69	67
1 Law Unto Himself	46	50

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
1 Heart of Tara	75	75
1 According to Law	67	52
1 Overalls	75	90
3 My Partner	72	70
3 The Bruiser	78	65	1
1 Hidden Law	100	90	1
2 Love Liar	72	82	1
1 Revelations	50	50
1 The Net	90	100	1
1 The Haunted Manor	52	55
2 Feathertop	90	90
1 Lying Lips	60	70
1 Dust	80	80
1 Other People's Money	85	60
2 Isle of Love	80	85	1
3 Whispering Smith	64	66
6 Soul Mates	69	63
2 Wasted Years	76	81
2 Far from Madding Crowd	70	67
4 Medicine Bend	74	81
4 Highest Bid	64	66	1
3 Her American Prince	70	67
5 Doorsteps	65	60	1
2 House of Mirrors	77	75
1 Wall Street Tragedy	65	80
6 Youth's Endearing Charm	77	74	1
2 Strength, Donald Mackenzie	75	72
1 Million for Mary	90	90	1
7 Judith of the Cumberlands	68	68
1 A Welsh Singer	60	53
1 Man Who Would Not Die	85	75
1 The Wolf Man	50	50
1 The Painted Lie	40	35
2 Three Pals	73	71
3 Manager of the B. & A	63	70
8 Pearl of Paradise	67	74	1
6 Dulcie's Adventure	87	84	1
1 Bluff	85	80
8 Faith	76	68
4 Miss Jackie of the Navy	86	85	1
2 A Dream or Two Ago	88	80
6 The Innocence of Lizette	85	80
3 The Butterfly Girl	72	80
1 The House of Scandal	0	10
1 The Man From Oregon	95	75
1 The Girl From Rector's	40	40
2 The Greater Woman	55	75
3 Where Love Is	52	48
6 The Gentle Intruder	77	78
1 Damaged Goods	100	100
2 Philip Holden—Waster	59	48
2 Redeemed	55	30
1 Lonesome Town	85	85
1 The Love Hermit	78	78
4 My Fighting Gentleman	60	44
1 The Twinkler	100	90
2 East Is East	88	60
1 Immediate Lee	90	82	1
1 Beloved Rogues	95	90
2 The Painted Lie	50	68
2 Motherhood	38	55
2 Sunny Jane	58	55
2 The Devil's Assistant	60	70
2 High Play	43	53
1 The Single Code	20	20
1 The Death	20	20
2 The Wildcat	65	58
1 Whose Wife?	40	40
2 Periwinkle	70	60

MUTUAL-CHAPLIN

1 A Night in the Show	100	90	1
4 The Fireman	75	88
4 The Vagabond	55	88
5 The Floorwalker	97	100	2
8 One A. M.	63	81	1
16 The Count	88	86	8
10 The Pawnshop	73	74	2
7 Behind the Screen	89	91	5
7 The Rink	96	99	6
7 Easy Street	97	100	7
12 The Cure	93	94	7
2 The Immigrant	90	98	1

PATHE

139 Pathe	68.2	68.7	16
1 Last Volunteer	80	80
1 The Spender	80	80
3 At Bay	78	81
1 The Galloper	40	90

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
1 Closing Net	60	80
2 Nedra	55	45
1 Affair of Three Nations	75	80
3 The Beloved Vagabond	76	67
1 Greater Will	50	55
6 Excuse Me!	90	73	2
3 King's Game	56	62
6 Madame X	71	91	3
5 Love Trail	38	52
3 Hazel Kirk	60	55
1 Simon the Jester	60	35
6 New York	80	74	1
2 Precious Packet	67	65
4 Shrine of Happiness	78	72
6 Woman's Law	68	65
10 Big Jim Garrity	69	55	1
4 Girl with the Green Eyes	65	72
3 Matrimonial Martyr	63	73	1
7 Shadow of Her Past	34	81
4 The Fugitive	75	68
3 Little Mary Sunshine	90	78	1
1 Divorce and the Daughter	78	75
1 The World and the Woman	85	90
6 The Shine Girl	72	74
2 Fear of Poverty	65	95
2 The Test	60	48
3 Saint, Devil and Woman	44	57
3 Light That Failed	69	69	1
7 Shadows and Sunshine	94	81	3
3 Prudence the Pirate	65	78
3 Arms and the Woman	70	53	1
3 The Challenge	73	65
6 Joy and the Dragon	79	72	1
3 The Romantic Journey	70	65
4 Her New York	81	62	1
5 Kick In	76	74
1 Sold at Auction	55	65
1 Modern Monte Cristo	70	65
1 The Hidden Valley	95	90
2 Twin Kiddies	85	70
2 The Image Maker	48	40
2 Told at Twilight	88	83	1
2 Mayblossom	15	83
1 The Hunting of the Hawk	60	40
1 Sunshine and Gold	70	80

BLUEBIRD

233 Bluebird	62.7	63.3	19
1 Jeanne Dore	27	45
2 The Secret Love	38	40
2 Hop, the Devil's Brew	40	43
7 Undine	80	87	3
1 Wrong Door	75	95
1 Grip of Jealousy	75	85
2 Rupert of Hentzau	51	60
2 Strength of the Weak	76	75
1 The Yaqui	42	58
4 The Flirt	44	66
2 Tangled Hearts	44	36
2 John Necham's Double	54	59
2 The Great Problem	79	66
4 Gaylord Waring	51	50
5 Crippled Hand	58	60	1
3 Gilded Spider	46	61
1 Elusive Isabel	48	56
3 The Measure of a Man	63	65
2 Love Never Dies	65	4
4 Son of the Immortals	64	71
3 Eye of God	64	80	1
3 Bobbie of the Ballet	67	79
3 Evil Women Do	60	62
8 Three Godfathers	68	71	1
15 Shoes	71	77	3
11 Broken Fetters	64	56	1
4 The Love Girl	63	64	1
6 The Grasp of Greed	71	76	1
8 The Silent Battle	78	84
8 Secret of the Swamp	71	56	3
7 Love's Lariat	65	64	1
7 Bettina Loved a Soldier	70	72
9 Wanted—A Home	73	74
3 The Chalice of Sorrow	72	65
7 Little Eve Edgarton	58	61
8 The Girl of Lost Lake	65	60
4 The Unattainable	51	48
12 Saving the Family Name	80	56
8 Behind the Lines	63	63
4 The Social Buccaneer	72	65
4 Gloriana	69	70
5 Stranger from Somewhere	68	63

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
4 The Price of Silence	88	86
1 The End of the Rainbow	63	48
6 The Honor of Mary Blake	58	58
1 The Right to be Happy	50	40
4 Black Orchids	75	78	1
2 Her Soul's Inspiration	55	39
4 God's Crucible	88	84	2
1 The Piper's Price	40	20
5 The Bugler of Algiers	80	69	1
3 The Sign of the Poppy	65	60
5 Mutiny	58	51
6 The Mysterious Mrs. M	73	56
1 The Reward of the Faithless	72	81
2 The Saintly Sinner	48	58
3 The Boy-Girl	63	70
3 Polly Red Head	61	74
1 The Gift-Girl	60	75
3 Susan's Gentleman	62	63
3 The Clock	77	65
4 Hell Morgan's Girl	89	89	1
1 The Devil's Pay Day	71	75
4 A Jewel In Pawn	71	69
3 Girl With Checkered Coat	72	70
1 Bringing Home Father	70	70

UNIVERSAL

1 Little Brother of the Rich	60	68
1 Business is Business	50	65
1 Father and the Boys	20	80
1 The Frame-up	40	45
1 Judge Not	70	70
1 Long Chance	85	90
1 Man of Shame	50	55
1 My Old Dutch	20	55
1 Nature Man	95	60
1 Under Southern Skies	90	75
2 Langdon's Legacy	65	60
1 Love's Pilgrimage	62	53
2 College Orphan	70	63
1 Colorado	90	100
2 The Campbells Are Coming	84	83	1

RED FEATHER

80 Red Feather	64.8	61.6	2

1 It Happened in Honolulu	80	80
1 The Madcap	70	70
1 Soul Enslaved	60	50
1 Knight of the Range	50	4
2 Beckoning Trail	88	71
1 Man From Nowhere	75	90	1
3 The Path of Happiness	70	50
2 The Sphinx	50	50
2 Pool of Flame	70	75
1 Lords of High Decision	60	40
2 Black Sheep of the Family	60	63
2 Autumn	65	67
1 Her Bitter Cup	72	71
1 The Yoke of Gold	45	64
1 Heritage of Hate	90	85
1 Thrown to the Lions	60	20
3 Huntress of Men	49	55
1 The Youth of Fortune	69	63	1
2 What Love Can Do	50	80
3 Half a Rogue	78	60
1 Sons of Satan	60	40
2 Two Men of Sandy Bar	72	68
1 Folly of Desire	20	40
1 Brigadier Gerard	50	40
1 Romance of Billy Goat Hill	75	55
4 The Target	76	46
1 Whirlpool of Destiny	62	65
2 Narrow Path	82	60
1 Drugged Waters	57	52
3 If My Country Should Call	58	60
2 Black Friday	60	60
3 The Place Beyond the Winds	66	55
2 The Isle of Life	50	43
1 Kinkaid—Gambler	80	85
1 The Mainspring	71	67
1 Morals of Hilda	80	80
1 Mixed Blood	70	55
1 The Bronze Bride	60	75
1 The Child of Mystery	45	15
3 Polly Put the Kettle On	45	57
5 Fighting for Love	69	65
2 The Double Room Mystery	55	35
2 Heart Strings	70	60
2 Love Aflame	78	80

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
1 The Terror	70	50
1 The Devil's Bondwoman	40	10
1 Barriers of Society	40	20
1 Me and Me Pal	85	70
1 Mister Dolan of New York	65	70
2 The Girl and the Crisis	73	73
2 The Scarlet Crystal	60	78
1 The Girl Who Lost	50	70
1 The Gates of Doom	60	70
1 The Birth of Patriotism	65	70
1 The Hero of the Hour	55	70

GREATER VITAGRAPH

425 Vitagraph	68.1	66 3	74

12 Battle Cry of Peace	95	80	4
7 The Juggernaut	73	73	2
7 Island of Regeneration	85	81	4
1 Sporting Duchess	40	30
8 Sins of the Mothers	87	87	1
3 Crooky	70	69	1
1 Playing Dead	75	75
5 Dust of Egypt	67	66	2
2 The Rights of Men	74	85
1 Turn of the Road	82	78
1 The Cave Man	74	60
3 Heights of Hazard	75	44
2 A Nation's Peril	86	76
1 The Man's Making	60	78
1 Price of Folly	95	95	2
7 The Great Divide	80	71	2
1 Souls in Bondage	100	80	1
2 Thou Art the Man	72	87
5 Green Stockings	87	55	2
1 Milady's Slipper	90	90
3 Island of Surprise	87	85
5 Gods of Fate	62	62
1 What Happened to Father?	60	78
9 The Night Out	81	75	1
1 The Crown Prince's Double	75	60
2 The Writing on the Wall	70	40
4 Kennedy Square	88	66	1
1 For a Woman's Fair Name	50	35
5 Hunted Woman	74	54	1
4 Hero of Submarine D-2	74	71
4 Dollars and the Woman	79	60
1 Supreme Temptation	60	60
5 Two-Edged Sword	76	53
2 Vital Question	80	53
1 Flames of Johannis	40	40
7 Salvation Joan	78	59
10 God's Country and Woman	81	85	4
1 Love's Toll	60	50
9 The Law Decides	80	70	4
9 The Ne'er Do Well	94	94	7
4 Ordeal of Elizabeth	58	50
10 The Suspect	80	76	2
3 Lights of New York	70	78
7 The Destroyers	68	57	1
2 Redemption of Dave Darcey	90	80
4 Man Behind the Curtain	85	76
9 The Shop Girl	78	79	1
3 The Conflict	67	47
7 Fathers of Men	71	67
11 The Tarantula	82	72	3
15 The Daring of Diana	61	75
4 Hesper of the Mountains	57	64
11 The Light at Dusk	85	72	4
3 The Alibi	69	69
1 The Dawn of Freedom	0	50
4 Footlights of Fate	84	80
16 The Combat	82	84	1
5 The Kid	60	57
2 Phantom Fortunes	42	62
5 His Wife's Good Name	64	76
12 Through the Wall	78	63	1
14 The Chattel	72	83	3
3 Prince in a Pawnshop	64	67	1
8 The Blue Envelope Mystery	55	59
3 Firm of Girdlestone	35	45
11 The Last Man	82	81	1
6 The Devil's Prize	49	62
6 The Price of Fame	40	46
6 Dollar and the Law	52	73
8 An Enemy to the King	61	67	2
9 Rose of the South	73	62
9 Whom the Gods Destroy	59	78	3
6 Ninety and Nine	76	70	1
5 Indiscretion	53	61	1
8 The Man of Mystery	69	64	1
8 My Official Wife	90	82	4

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
9 The Glory of Yolanda	71	71	3
2 The Enemy	80	70	1
11 The Girl Phillipa	68	76	2
8 The Courage of Silence	69	69	2
7 Money Magic	57	66
5 Blind Justice	63	60
9 Arsene Lupin	66	62
8 Kitty Mackay	57	58	1
5 Intrigue	47	54
6 Aladdin From Broadway	62	68	1
4 The Money Mill	51	49
4 Her Right to Live	49	55
4 Babette	70	70
7 The More Excellent Way	67	68	1
3 Apartment 29	55	60	1
2 Sally in a Hurry	68	68
1 The Cowardly Way	78	60
3 Her Secret	47	48
2 The Hawk	65	80
4 Captain of Grey Horse Troop	63	63
2 The Sixteenth Wife	33	55
2 Clover's Rebellion	80	90
2 The Soul Master	58	58
1 The Magnificent Meddler	40	40

KEYS

117 K. E. S. E.	70.1	65.6	23

1 The Bank	90	90	1
1 The Woman	60	75
1 Work	75	75
3 Thou Shalt Not Covet	78	55
1 Vultures of Society	80	40
1 Between Savages and Tigers	90	100
1 Quo Vadis	60	40
1 The Spendthrift	80	60
1 Officer 666	25	40
1 When Love is King	20	25
1 The Danger Signal	80	60
2 The Magic Skin	85	75
1 Woman Next Door	60	90
1 The Havoc	5	20
2 The Sentimental Lady	73	60
2 The Scarlet Road	70	55
3 The Destroying Angel	93	85
1 Money Masters	90	60
1 Commuters	85	60
1 Musty Suffer	80	90
1 Devil's Prayer Book	50	60
1 Children of Evil	70	65
1 Green Cloak	70	80
4 The Spoilers	95	91	1
5 Graustark	88	90	4
2 The Slim Princess	77	94	1
3 The Rosary	80	55	1
2 A Texas Steer	72	65
1 House of Thousand Candles	40	30
2 The Raven	87	20
2 The Alster Case	75	60
1 Daughter of the City	60	70
4 Misleading Lady	73	50	1
2 Cycle of Fate	62	75
4 Carmen (Chaplin)	50	93
3 The Little Shepherd of Bargain Row	75	63
1 Sherlock Holmes	75	50
3 Into the Primitive	52	60
3 That Sort	70	45	1
4 Vallants of Virginia	85	75
5 The Prince Chap	51	53
8 The Return of Eve	75	73	2
9 Country God Forgot	75	67
4 Chaplin Revue	63	79
1 The Innocence of Ruth	60	81
1 At Piney Ridge	60	60
2 The Heart of the Hills	63	60
5 Prince of Graustark	84	80	1
6 The Cossack's Whip	86	67
3 Message to Garcia	67	73
2 The Last Sentence	55	70
4 The Truant Soul	60	76	1
3 Little Shoes	82	82
2 Adventures of Buffalo Bill	45	78
6 Skinner's Dress Suit	96	89	4
1 The Law of the North	50	90
1 Royal Pauper	10	100
3 The Heart of Texas Ryan	59	68
1 Princess of Patches	50	100
1 The Master Passion	80	100
1 Burning the Candle	80	55

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
2 Skinner's Bubble	90	95
3 The Danger Trail	45	60
1 The Night Workers	60	85
2 The Truffiers	40	80
1 The Saint's Adventure	60	50

PARAMOUNT SPEC.

5 The Christian	81	78	1
5 Tess of Storm Country	88	84	2
2 The Typhoon	88	78	1
7 The Eternal City	93	96	4

SERIALS

12 Patria	86	82
16 Gloria's Romance	78	83
3 The Crimson Stain	61	65
4 Mysteries of Myra	87	86
2 The Yellow Menace	40	40
5 Liberty	91	82
3 Grip of Evil	73	67
8 Who's Guilty	78	78
10 The Iron Claw	93	92
3 The Diamond Runners	66	82
9 The Shielding Shadow	91	92
6 Secret of Submarine	73	70
4 Peg o' the Ring	50	50
8 Scarlet Runner	67	64
6 A Lass of the Lumberlands	62	62
1 Girl and the Game	73	45
4 The Great Secret	56	65
4 Pearl of the Army	81	85
1 The Secret Kingdom	20	0
2 The Voice on the Wire	88	85
2 The Purple Mask	73	83
1 The Railroad Raiders	50	50
2 The Neglected Wife	90	93
1 The Double Cross	80	70

ART DRAMAS

1 Whoso Taketh A Wife	90	90
2 The Lash of Destiny	60	45
3 A God of Little Children	67	63
2 Infidelity	63	65
2 The Great Secret	35	45
2 The Rainbow	68	66
1 Rosie O'Grady	82	80
1 Her Good Name	85	86

SELZNICK

15 The Common Law	83	90	5
7 Vera, the Medium	62	65	2
8 The Foolish Virgin	36	66	2
18 War Brides	77	64	10
8 Panthea	81	76	4
10 The Price She Paid	73	73	2
5 The Argyle Case	87	74	2
5 The Easiest Way	88	85	2

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
Mc CLURE
5 Pride	34	37
6 Envy	39	57
5 Passion	22	30
6 Greed	34	42
5 Sloth	14	14
6 Wrath	28	32
4 The Seventh Sin	5	13

ARTCRAFT

11 The Poor Little Rich Girl	98	98	9
18 The Pride of the Clan	73	74
7 Broadway Jones	97	86	4
7 In Again—Out Again	87	88	2
7 Romance of the Redwoods	67	68
9 The Butcher Boy	73	75	1
3 A Reckless Romeo	87	70	1

UNIV. SPEC.

1 Scandal	80	75
1 Robinson Crusoe	65	70
9 Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea	68	86	5
10 The Dumb Girl of Portici	51	64
2 Diana the Huntress	58	75	1
2 Where Are My Children?	79	84	2
3 Jewel	85	75
1 God's Law	40	40
4 The Eagle's Wings	82	77
8 Idle Wives	57	88	4
2 Neptune's Daughter	61	60	1

IVAN

1 Her Surrender	85	70
2 Her Husband's Wife	80	95
2 The Flower of Faith	50	25
2 Faded Flower	82	74	1

SELIG SPEC.

4 The Crisis	72	56

FROHMAN

5 The Witching Hour	67	65	2
4 Jaffery	63	55

FOX SPEC.

3 A Daughter of the Gods	73	47

METRO SPEC.

13 Romeo and Juliet	79	58	3

B. S. MOSS

1 The Power of Evil	87	70
1 One Day	85	80

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
SPECIAL FEATURES
2 Geoffrey Manning	70	75
1 Garden of Knowledge	100	100	1
3 The Unwritten Law	43	78
2 The Escape	67	70	1
6 Birth of a Nation	100	100	1
2 The Salamanders	40	58
6 The Libertine	83	78	4
1 My Country First	60	60
2 Tillie's Punctured Romance	90	90	1
1 Race Suicide	67	60
1 Shanghaied	90	90	1
1 Pendleton 1916 Round-Up	90	86
8 Cabiria	45	45
3 Marvelous Maciste	85	55
5 End of the World	20	57
3 Birth of Man	62	55
1 Love's Sacrifice	60	40
5 The Iron Hand	65	45
3 Police	63	81
1 Is Any Girl Safe?	90	60
1 Salomy Jane	90	100
4 The Whirl of Life	68	84	1
3 Silver Threads Among Gold	84	92	1
8 Victory of Virtue	50	100	1
5 The Melting Pot	78	83	1
4 Ramona	73	65
1 Hiawatha	40	100	1
2 Salisbury's Wild Life in America	60	73
1 Hypocrites	60	90
1 The Only Son	40	60
1 Judge Legard	80	40
8 The Alien	90	60	1
5 The Little Girl Next Door	77	87	3
8 Alice in Wonderland	76	84	1
1 Purity	92	96	1
1 The Eyes of the World	95	100	1
1 The Immortal Flame	80	72
1 Heartaches	70	78
1 Birth of Character	20	50
1 Fire and Sword	20	60
1 America Waiting	10	15
1 Beulah	60	60
1 The Aftermath	40	40
1 Heart of Maryland	8	40
2 Doctor Neighbor	53	49
6 Ramona	71	63
2 The Eyes of the World	88	72	1
3 Beware of Strangers	57	62
1 It May be Your Daughter	95	65	1
1 The House of Bondage	75	100
1 The Barrier	100	80
5 The Fall of a Nation	73	86	1
11 Civilization	76	82	5
1 Joan the Woman	100	100
1 Womanhood	92	90	1
1 The Spoilers	100	90
2 The Woman Who Dared	90	80
1 The Black Stork	70	70

WID'S REACHES

Every Person of Consequence in the Film Industry—Especially

The "BIG BOSSES"

who sign the contracts.

DO YOU BELIEVE IN KEEPING YOUR NAME ALIVE?

Address All Communications Relative to Advertising in Wid's to

HARRY P. DRIGGS, Adv. Mgr.,

Wid's Film and Film Folk, 510 Times Bldg., New York City.

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

WILLIAM F. ALDRICH
FEATURE PRODUCER
Screen Club, 117 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG CORP.

BERT CARBER
TECHNICAL DIRECTOR
THANHOUSER SCREEN CLUB

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

HAL CLARENDON
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL

WILLIAM DESMOND
TRIANGLE PLAYS
Culver City, Cal.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

JACK HARVEY
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
Producer of
"PARENTAGE"

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
PRODUCING FEATURES
Ivan Film Corp.

LLOYD INGRAHAM
MANAGEMENT
GRIFFITH-FINE ARTS STUDIOS

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR
Frohman Amusement Corporation

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

HARLEY KNOLES
FEATURE DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

O. A. C. LUND

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE PRODUCER
B. A. Rolfe-Metro Pictures Corporation

EUGENE NOWLAND
PRODUCING FEATURES

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITAGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

FREDERIC SULLIVAN
DIRECTOR THANHOUSER
Screen Club

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
PRODUCING FEATURES
VITAGRAPH

JAMES VINCENT
PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

JAMES YOUNG

WID'S IS READ NOT SKIMMED

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Address—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM A MAGAZINE—IN FACT A SERVICE
THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM

WID'S

INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS

Always Independent
Issued Every Thursday VOL. III. THURSDAY, JULY 26, 1917. NO. 30 25 Cents a Copy
$10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

Real Things Happened in Chicago!

Expositions Should Be Killed.

I will leave it to the papers who have plenty of room) give you all of the harrowing details of the Chicago onvention, but there were a few high spots that it eems to me should be pointed out for the general good f the industry.

To begin with, everyone agreed—just as they did fter the exposition last year—that expositions are of o account to anyone except the people who collect ie money, and the general sentiment among the pro- ucers seemed to be that they would rather donate the ims paid for booths than to go to the trouble of deco- ating, bringing on stars, etc.

Walter W. Irwin, of the Vitagraph, put over a peaut" when called before the Convention, by express- ig his "regret" that the Vitagraph had been unable to ake a booth this year because their stars were so busy iat they couldn't leave their work to attend. Mr. Irwin ent into quite some detail to explain that he felt and is company felt that a booth without stars would hardly e creditable to either the Vitagraph or the exhibitors.

This beautiful introductory with a bit of the sob cuff all around put everyone in a humor to feel that was too bad that iVtagraph had not been in evidence ith a booth, and then Walter W. came through with check for one thousand dollars, which he handed) the exhibitors for the Vitagraph Company as evi- ence of their good intentions.

The exhibitors were so overcome that they applauded)r several minutes, and even cheered, this being fol- wed by a motion that a rising vote of thanks be given) the Vitagraph, which was done with due ceremony.

About this time the other producers sitting in the ackground, some of whom had come through to the xtent of three, four and five thousand dollars for booths nd the time of their stars attending the exposition,)mmenced to squirm—quite visibly. Some of them re- arked, with considerable emphasis, that they had been)obs to worry about booths and should have sent checks)r their share.

Since anyone with any business sense should know iat every nickle thus contributed by a producer is ventually charged up on the exhibitor's film rental, I in't figure how these expositions are considered of enefit to the trade. Certainly there is considerable net rofit, but there is also considerable expense. All of ie money put into expenses is likewise charged on the lm rental, although nobody but the salaried exposition anagers get any benefit from this.

I have a decided hunch that we will have no more xpositions. Surely there should never be another.

The Steam Roller Skidded.

From the very first it seemed evident that there was to be serious opposition to the candidacy of Lee A. Ochs. Ochs and his friends apparently realized this ,and from the first moment of the Convention politics was played, with the steam roller in evidence to see to it that every possible means to protect the candidacy of Ochs was put into operation.

Before the Convention I was requested by a number of people to take sides. I decided that I would not declare in favor of any candidate, but would go to Chicago and sit on the sidelines with my eyes open, ready to commend anything that anybody pulled that would be right, or condemn anything that I figured was all wrong.

I found a number of very intelligent exhibitors aggressively opposed to the methods of Ochs, but through a manipulation of delegations and a credential committee, which was all for Ochs, the boss soon had a majority on the floor.

After three days of wrangling which brought nothing of any consequence above the surface, it was evident that a split was in order. Then came a proposition from the anti-Ochs exhibitors that they would withdraw all candidates other than Ochs provided he would withdraw.

A committee from each faction met and agreed in writing that all candidates would retire. It was definitely understood that this included Ochs. As soon as the members of both factions reassembled, however, Ochs was again nominated.

The anti-Ochs faction refused to nominate anyone, and Mr. Jake Wells, representing the anti-Ochs exhibitors, put the question point blank to Ochs as to whether or not he intended to accept this nomination under the circumstances of the agreement and existing conditions. Ochs stated that he did intend to, and the anti-Ochs delegates promptly left the convention hall.

Pettijohn Puts One Over.

The election of Ochs was then automatic, and his choice was given a touch of added interest by the presence in the hall of Ray Andrews and C. C. Pettijohn, delegates from Indiana, who remained. The Ochs faction passed a motion delegating to Mr. Pettijohn the right to vote for the State of Indiana, but Mr. Pettijohn declined this honor, stating that he thought the privilege should be conferred by Indiana.

Ochs then began his speech of acceptance, in which he used some choice language, referring to the exhibitors who had left the hall as "bolting babies," also stating that some of the other candidates had permitted their expenses to be paid by the "dirty, rotten 'Motion Picture News.'"

Ochs "admitted" that he was good and even went a bit further than the adjective "good" as referring to himself. He said he would "show" those bolting babies, etc., etc. At the finish of Ochs' speech (if it might be termed such) Mr. Pettijohn asked for the floor and was hailed with delight.

Mr. Pettijohn, throughout the three days previous, had been one of the leaders of the anti-Ochs exhibitors. He now opened in a slow, deliberate, suave manner, complimenting the Convention upon having chosen such a president as Lee Ochs, which was followed by wild cheers and much applause. Mr. Pettijohn then made one or two other remarks about the Convention and their choice as leader, which resulted in tremendous applause. And then, as you have seen a lawyer do when he was keenly enjoying himself, Mr Pettijohn went on to state that he wanted particularly to compliment Mr. Ochs upon his dignified speech of acceptance, upon his intelligent choice of language, and his nicely worded praising of himself.

Well, boys, when Pettijohn got through sticking that knife in, quietly but cruelly, and then turning it around two or three times, that Convention was sick. He had played them along beautifully and turned the laugh on them with sure-enough emphasis. It was probably the neatest thing pulled during the week. Considering the fact that Mr. Pettijohn had been so active in the anti-Ochs faction, it proved definitely that those who were supporting Ochs were not at all familiar with real politics, and made it evident that they were more or less blindly following a leader. It certainly should have been evident to any who had listened to Mr. Pettijohn in his other speeches that he was not the type of man who would immediately switch from one faction to the other.

New Association Formed.

Those who were opposed to Ochs and his methods gathered at the Hotel Morrison and organized the American Exhibitors Association, with the representation of more than twenty States, these delegations being those who had come to the city for the Exhibitors League Convention.

Jake Wells, owner of about fifty theatres in the South, was named as temporary president. Mr. Wells is a man who has somewhat the appearance of former Ambassador Myron T. Herrick, and certainly no other man at the Convention made a more favorable impression during the week. He was freely spoken of as the logical president for the Exhibitors League by many of those who sought to bring the factions together. To be sure, Mr. Wells is the type of man who can represent the exhibitors of the country in a dignified, intelligent manner. He is wealthy, and plainly stated that it would be impossible for him to devote all of his time to an exhibitors' organization, but he did say that he would be willing and glad to donate liberally to a businesslike organization and give quite a lot of his time to its problems.

Those who were in the main responsible for the organization of the new League were Harry Crandall, of Washington, D. C.; Guy L. Wonders, of Baltimore, Md.; William Fait, Jr., of Utica, N. Y.; Fred J. Herrington, of Pennsylvania; Frank J. Rembusch, Shelbyville, Ind.; Sam Trigger, of New York City; Percy Wells, of South Carolina; Ray Andrews, of Indiana; Judge Tugwell, of California; N. Thatcher, of New Orleans, La.; Mr. Burnstein, of Norfolk, Va.; I. M. Mosher, of Buffalo, N. Y., and about fifty other delegates whose names I didn't get. Peter Jeup, of Detroit, resigned as treasurer of the Exhibitors League in order to do what he could with the new Association.

To Be Run on Business Basis.

Probably the most important action of the new Association was a decision to see to it that something was accomplished by business methods. Mr. Pettijohn was named as general manager on a salary of $10,000 a year. This was done in order that the new Association may have an intelligent leader capable of accomplishing something, whose time and ability is at the service of the exhibitors, for which he receives a salary thereby immediately offsetting any possibility of a question as to why he might be able to make personal sacrifices.

The exhibitors who made up the new organization seemed unable to fathom the reason for Ochs making such a strenuous fight for the position of president when he repeatedly stated that he had held the office at a great personal sacrifice. His statements and his actions didn't seem to dovetail, and certainly if he had held the office at such personal sacrifice there was only one answer—that being he was a poor business man.

Of course, the exhibitors who left the League Convention to start a new organization resented particularly the fact that Ochs had forced an endorsement of the "Trade Review." It seemed to them as if he had centered entirely too much upon this publication.

Directors To Conduct Business.

The new Association organized on an entirely different basis from that of the old League. They are arranged so that each State would be represented by one director, chosen by the State, with each city of over one million population represented by a director separate from the State in which that city is located.

These directors shall be intrusted with the business of the organization and the direction of the activities of the general manager. Paid secretaries and organizers are to be employed, and the entire association is to be conducted along different lines from anything known in the past.

Politics are to be forgotten, the elective officers are to be honorary rather than executive, and the salaried officials are to be considered on a basis of results secured.

The directors will hold an annual convention, at which important questions will be taken up, and at that time all exhibitors will be invited to attend, with arrangements made for social affairs which will bring the exhibitors together in such a manner as to make it possible for them to meet on intimate terms and exchange opinions and discuss the business from their personal angles.

It was freely commented upon that in Chicago there was a woeful lack of preparation for the entertainment of the visiting exhibitors. The men didn't get to know one another, as they had desired, and too much time was taken up with politics and wrangling.

The dues of the new Association will be $1 a month or $12 a year, for every theater owned, as against $6 a year per member, regardless of theaters in the old organization. None but exhibitors may join the new Association.

Nothing Accomplished.

While many resolutions were introduced on the floor of the Convention of the Exhibitors League, nothing of any importance was accomplished. There were no even any intelligent discussions which might help the men in facing the coming year. One afternoon was devoted to speeches by various producers, but most of these speeches were comprised of explanations of how good (?) these producers of their companies were.

William A. Brady, representing the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, and also the President of the United States, made an excellent speech. He talked to the League at a time when the anti-Ochs exhibitors were not present and appealed to them to get together.

W. A. can be depended on at any time to make a real speech. He said things in his emphatic manner and they registered; but, unfortunately, I fear that his speech went in one ear and out the other of most of those present.

New Association Looks Good.

On the face of things as they looked to me, I believe that the new Association is the most promising possibility that has ever developed. Many of you fellows may think that I say this because I don't like Lee Ochs' methods. That's not the idea!

I will frankly admit that I have not approved of Ochs and his tactics, but I refrained from taking any active part either before the Convention or during the Convention. I went to Chicago to look on, and, after sizing up the situation carefully, I can say with emphasis to you men who weren't there that the new Association looks to me like a logical proposition handled in a business-like manner by intelligent exhibitors who earnestly desire to accomplish something for the good of the exhibitors as a whole.

Unless I am seriously mistaken, the American Exhibitors Association will, in the course of a few months, be the dominant exhibitors' organization of the country. They are working on sound, sane business principles and surely have the right idea.

Exhibitors Should Forget Politics.

For the past six or seven years the Exhibitors League has been a joke to intelligent film men because the annual conventions were never anything but a lot of political mix-ups. Very little has ever been accomplished, and the wasting of several days over politics in Chicago this year demonstrated conclusively that Ochs had devoted most of his time to fixing up his fences for the political battle.

I made it my business to get a good angle on Jake Wells and some of the other exhibitors who left the old League, and, from where I sit, I believe that Mr. Wells will make an excellent representative for the exhibitors of the country.

I am certainly willing to go on record as saying that C. C. Pettijohn is a live, able, intelligent gentleman, perfectly familiar with the film industry, and truly capable of delivering in the position that he has been placed in. I believe he is the most capable man who has ever had a position of responsibility in any exhibitors' organization to date.

Open Booking That Isn't

A lot of my good friends are up in arms over the new Paramount-Artcraft distribution plan, and well they may be. In Chicago I listened to the recital of propositions submitted in many sections of the country, and it seems that the Paramount-Artcraft people have decided that they have about reached the point where they can buffalo the poor unorganized exhibitor into almost anything.

The price of pictures in which Paramount-Artcraft players appear has suddenly jumped from 50 to 100 per cent., with this good-natured gang of highbinders calmly requesting a deposit on each star under the new method.

When Paramount came through with a hullabaloo about the Open Market I had a hunch that there was something wrong. Now it comes out. To be sure, they have said that you may book the stars you like, and it was suggested that this was going to make it possible for you to forget forevermore the "lemons" which have been foisted upon you by the program system. That listened well when they spilled it, but, oh, boy!—when it gets into operation it's another matter.

Enter Mr. Salesman into the office of poor, misguided, unsuspecting Mr. Exhibitor, with the nice collection of Paramount-Artcraft stars in his vest pocket. Then begins the process of selection. The exhibitor has had a beautiful time figuring out what he would like to have, but when he is told what such a combination would cost him he begins to see red. Then Mr. Salesman suavely informs Mr. Exhibitor that it would cost him very little more to take them all, there being a suggestion that, of course, if he didn't feel inclined to take them all they might talk business to Mr. Competitor because Mr. Competitor had suggested that he would like to have every one of the Paramount-Artcraft favorites.

In other words, they're getting right back to the good old program proposition, with the exception that they have a flexible bludgeon to kill off the exhibitors just as conditions warrant. That seperate deposit for each star was quite a neat little idea in itself.

There are several interesting angles to this new Paramount-Artcraft proposition, one of them being that some of the high-priced stars are going to stand on their left ear when they learn that their pictures are being sold for the same money as those made by small-salaried stars. The joker in this is that the high-priced stars are working on a percentage.

Now, Mr. Exhibitor, your day of trial is here. It is up to you to think hard and act quick. Personally, I would think a long time before I decided that it was necessary for me to hand over all the money I could get into my theatre to pay for an organization which has been built up by Paramount and Artcraft. Most of you fellows were in business before either Paramount or Artcraft were thought of, and I have a hunch that some of you will be in business longer if you let the other feller have a good time trying to pay for Mr. Paramount-Artcraft's organization while you pick the best you can get from the rest of the manufacturers and spend a little of the money you save on rental in advertising and service around your house.

Most of you fellers, if you only knew it, could take a lot of single reels intelligently picked and, by careful advertising, get enough people into your house to make money.

I will grant the fact that you can make more money with features than you can with single reels, and I will grant the fact that you can probably take in more at the box office with well-known stars—BUT, what's the use of taking it in at the box office if you have to give it all up to Mr. Producer's organization?

If any of you fellers have an idea that you must play the pictures of any one organization or go broke, all I can tell you is that you deserve to go broke—either by playing them or by not playing them. To you fellers whose intestinal equipment is good I want to say that you are going to find this fall that there will be all the good pictures you need on the market for the man who knows how to run his theatre properly. The man who plays a picture for a full week doesn't have to worry about Paramount, Artcraft, or any other producer. He can find fifty-two good pictures—unless he's blind. The man who changes more often than twice a week will simply have to get away from that policy and increase the capacity of his house so that he can play pictures that are good for several days, or else go back to shootin' gallery methods, with the short stuff at five and ten cents a throw.

The Paramount-Artcraft organization has bought up a lot of talent. I wish them joy, and hope that they make good pictures, but I can't sympathize or understand any reason in the world for an arbitrary increase in price of from 50 to 100 per cent. just because there is to be a new method of distribution. The only possible increase in cost, so far as I can figure out, is the fact that this organization is using up a dozen or more pages of trade paper space every week to print pictures of their stars, which doesn't get anybody but the trade papers anything, so far as I can figure.

You exhibitors have been told that the trade papers need your support, but I am quite sure that you aren't anxious to support them in just exactly this manner.

Just to show there is no hard feeling, I am willing to listen to arguments pro and con on this arbitrary increase in price and this magnanimous offer of the Open Market, which, after all, seems to be anything but what it was supposed to be. If you've got anything on your chest come on, let's have it!

Every exhibitor I have talked to so far has either thrown up both hands and emptied his pockets or else declared himself willing to take off his coat and fight without the stars while his competitor worked for the producer.

MUCH BAD MELO MIXED IN WITH CUTE KID STUFF

Baby Marie Osborne in

CAPTAIN KIDDO

Lasalida—Pathe

DIRECTOR	W. Eugene Moore
AUTHOR	Elizabeth Burbridge
AS A WHOLE	Cute kiddie in ordinary movie meller
STORY	Rotten
DIRECTION	Not good; made actors camera-conscious
PHOTOGRAPHY	Ordinary
LIGHTINGS	Generally too uniform
CAMERA WORK	Just acceptable
STAR	Cute, but seemed forced in this
SUPPORT	Grown-ups very camera-conscious; other kiddies just good
EXTERIORS	Acceptable; a few very pretty
INTERIORS	Only fair
DETAIL	Not good
TIME	Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

IT seems a pity that those who undertake to make kid pictures cannot give us some delightful little human stories without mixing a lot of wild-eyed mellerdrammer into the plot.

Baby Marie Osborne has had some excellent films and upon several occasions has proved her ability as a money-getter. Unfortunately, it seems that the producers have taken too much for granted because of this, and have decided that they can shoot most any old thing with her in it and get the money.

In this we get a very poor movie meller having to do with smugglers, etc., and about one-half of the footage is devoted to cheap "blood and thunder" stuff, while the other half is centered upon the kiddies. The melodrama could have been omitted entirely, so far as the average film fan is concerned.

There was also a suggestion of direction which forced the players into unnatural actions because all of the adults seemed very camera-conscious, with the children at times registering forced actions that betrayed the fact that the director's voice was taking their attention from what they were doing.

At no time did this register in such a manner as to make it seem real, and the greater part of the footage was absolutely wasted, since it had to do with wild chases and fights between the hero and the willun's smugglers.

The general atmosphere of the offering was quite ordinary, although there were several exterior shots that were very good looking.

In the cast were Marion Warner, Philo McCollough, Harry Von Meter and Ray Clark.

The Box Office Angle.

Considerable depends upon just how strong your fans are for Little Mary Sunshine as to whether or not you can get this by. Of course, this youngster is cute, and in this she has a few opportunities, although not as many as she has had in many other better productions. In previous films, cheap unconvincing melodrama has also been mixed into the action, but I can't remember of one of her pictures where the melodrama was any worse than it is in this.

I'd suggest that you pass this one by unless Baby Marie draws so big with you that you can afford to have your fans come out and "pan" it a bit after they have laid down their good coin.

Since the story is centered almost entirely upon the smuggling situation, you might advertise along such lines as this: "How would you like to have your little girl fastened in a gasolene tank and thrown from the top of a cliff into the ocean? See Little Mary Sunshine in 'Captain Kiddo.'"

There is a suggestion of pirates in this plot, with the kids imagining that they are sure-enough demons of the deep, forcing their enemies to walk the plank and it is possible that you can arouse some interest by the use of such a line as—"Did you ever see a real kid pirate? See Little Mary Sunshine as 'Captain Kiddo.'"

You might say, "If cupid is a pirate, he must have learned from Little Mary Sunshine, the original Captain Kiddo."

I believe that most audiences are more willing to overlook cheap melodrama when sandwiched into a kid story than under any other circumstances, which may help you to sneak this one by, although it is of course to be regretted that the producers didn't make this 100 per cent. entertaining.

STAR'S PERSONALITY AND HUMAN TOUCHES MAKE THIS ENTERTAINING

Bryant Washburn in

THE GOLDEN IDIOT

Essanay—K-E-S-E.

DIRECTOR	Arthur Berthelet
AUTHOR	Robert Rudd Whiting
SCENARIO BY	H. Tipton Steck
AS A WHOLE	Clever titles and personalities make this very entertaining
STORY	Slender, but holds interest
DIRECTION	Kept action intimate and human, registering nice little touches
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally satisfactory; never distinctive
LIGHTINGS	A few excellent; generally good
CAMERA WORK	Dissolves excellent; many good little tricks
STAR	Clean-cut, wholesome, delightful personality
SUPPORT	Very pleasing
EXTERIORS	Fitted nicely; a few very beautiful
INTERIORS	Generally satisfactory
DETAIL	Many good little bits
TIME	Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

IN the last year, Bryant Washburn has stepped right out to the front, and today he is certainly going strong.

Following the phenomenal success of Douglas Fairbanks, it would seem that the American public is registering very emphatically its preference for the clean, wholesome type of young American who knows how to entertain without murdering eighteen people or attacking a half-dozen defenseless females. Mr. Fairbanks has a wonderful smile, and Bryant Washburn has one that isn't half bad, all his own. Of course, "Skinner's Dress Suit" was a wonderful story, but we must not overlook the fact that Mr. Washburn has come through now and made good in several other productions of a similar type, and certainly it is his personality which helps principally to lift this offering out of the ordinary rut and place it in the preferred list.

The slender story has been nicely handled, with the director realizing the value of little human touches which he has intelligently placed in order to contrast humor and pathos. A little three-legged pup figured quite prominently in the action, and somehow he just seemed to belong as one of the characters.

The girls in the cast were well chosen, because they seemed real human beings, and I want to mention particularly Miss Virginia Valli, who proved again her ability to make a part stand out. I commented on the work of this young lady in "Filling His Own Shoes," and, unless I am a bum picker, she will be heard from in future productions.

The plot wandered along with some rather convenient angles, but nobody cared much as to that, because the interest was centered upon the personalities, the characterizations and the little human things which they did. If your audience fails to laugh at the bit where Miss Valli pulls a fake drowning and is rescued by Mr. Washburn, I think you ought to give every one of them a little red button.

I want to comment particularly upon the intelligently worded titles in this. They helped decidedly to put over many scenes and were planted into the action in such a manner as to make the entire film truly entertaining.

The story devoted most of the footage to the adventures of Mr. Washburn wandering through the country, picking up odd jobs as secretary to writers, with most of his odd moments spent in entertaining our heroine. He had been a copy reader on a newspaper, but was fired for getting stewed after his queer old uncle had informed him that when he died his money was to be divided in proportions of 10 to 1, between hero and his cousin, who was a wealthy broker, each to receive one hundred times what they owned of their own.

Of course, on the finish we found that the broker cousin was sure-enough "broke," while hero had in his possession fifty cents, which therefore entitled him to uncle's coin.

The Box Office Angle.

Considering Bryant Washburn's popularity, due to the several productions in which he has registered to advantage, I believe that you can safely grab this and make a little fuss over it. It is hardly necessary that you call it "another 'Skinner's Dress Suit'" or any other such extravagant statement. You can be satisfied with calling attention to the fact that Mr. Washburn has another of those delightful human characterizations typical of those in which he has made such successes in the past few months.

Make a fuss about Washburn, and don't talk unnecessarily about the picture itself. It will be sufficient if you tell them that it will entertain.

For an advertising angle you might say, "Do you consider a three-legged dog good luck?" If you want to stir up some interest running a teaser campaign, you might shoot in something along this line: "Do you think a three-legged dog is lucky?" afterwards asking them to see Bryant Washburn's three-legged "purp" in "The Golden Idiot."

If you have played "Filling His Own Shoes" I would use this line: "Do you remember the most beautiful girl of the harem ladies bequeathed to Bryant Washburn in 'Filling His Own Shoes'? You can see her again with him in 'The Golden Idiot.'"

EXHIBITORS CAN OBTAIN
Beynon's Orchestral Settings
For All Features On a Moderate Rental Basis. Same Scores As Used In Many New York Theatres.
Write
GEORGE W. BEYNON,
505 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.

VERY PLEASING BOY STUFF QUITE HUMANLY PRESENTED

Yale Boss and Paul Kelly in

KNIGHTS OF THE SQUARE TABLE

Conquest—Edison—K-E-S-E

DIRECTOR ..... Alan Crosland
AUTHOR ..... James A. Wilder
CAMERAMAN ..... Philip Canura
AS A WHOLE ..... Excellent boy stuff humanly done
STORY ..... Slight, but provided nice contrasts; was well done DIRECTION ..... Gave characters intimate touch by close-ups, and kept atmosphere quite human PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Generally good; occasionally only fair
LIGHTINGS ..... A few very good; some ordinary
CAMERA WORK ..... Very good on close-ups and dissolves
STARS ..... Gang leader excellent
SUPPORT ..... Splendid types
EXTERIORS ..... Well chosen for atmosphere
INTERIORS ..... Fitted story
DETAIL ..... Several nice little touches; generally very good
TIME ..... Fifty-seven minutes (4 parts)

THIS is the first I have seen of the Conquest Pictures, which is the Edison idea of the complete program. I must commend this company very highly for this production, because they have taken a simple little story and made it register by treatment which brought out the human elements. There were no stars such as required that the story be centered about them, and most of the actors were just kids; but they played sincerely and the director used enough close-ups to acquaint his audience intimately with each of the types.

I believe that the average audience will enjoy this much more than they do many of the regular program offerings, because the story gets over as real life, with the situations providing food for thought and an excellent example for the young boys of this country.

If I had told you to begin with that this picture was one which proved why boys should join the Boy Scouts you would probably have quit right there and said, "I don't want any such film." You do want this film, however, because it registers a good thought without at any time preaching. It puts over an idea by suggestion and by characterization which registers as real.

We find in the story two sets of boys—one a gang of troublesome devils who want to go out and "start something" without any particular reason for doing so except that they have an ambition for upsetting the routine of life; and the other a group of boys who belonged to a patrol of Boy Scouts. There was an interesting clash between these two groups when the roughnecks accused the Boy Scouts of being "sissies." This is handled in true kid fashion and developed up to the point where we get a sure-enough battle that proved one faction to be about as sturdy as the other when it came to using their fists.

The free-for-all fight was halted by one of the youngsters falling into the water, where he was drowning when rescued, and then we saw the Scouts use their knowledge of what to do, while the other boys only "thought" they knew.

Later in the story we had other adventures which impressed even more firmly the need of a boy having the right sort of guidance.

In connection with this four-reel subject the Edison people released some very interesting educational subjects, and, so far as this particular release is concerned, I would say that it is far beyond the average of any program, as to entertainment value. Of course, this may not be an average release from the Edison Studios, but I certainly intend to make an effort to cover these productions as carefully as possible in order to get a line on them.

The cast in this was a very good one, because the types were well chosen. Paul Kelly, as the leader of the roughneck gang, registered big possibilities. I believe this youngster can be made a very effective star in this sort of work if properly handled.

Yale Boss was very satisfactory as the manly Boy Scout, and served as an excellent contrast to the roughneck gang leader.

Others who appeared were Andy Clark, Donald McClollan and James Wilder.

The Box Office Angle

If you will advertise this intelligently I believe it is a picture which will get some money, and certainly it should entertain. Every community, no matter how big or how small, has on its hands the "boy problem." Some boys are too "sissified," and some too rough. Every parent is anxious to hit the happy medium. This picture shows intelligently why many boys are members of roughneck gangs, and at the same time gives intelligent reasons why boys should join the Boy Scout movement. At the finish it also registers very definitely the fact that no man is "too busy" to give some attention to the training of the boys of this country.

The short subjects which accompanied this feature were very interesting and well chosen, and I believe that if you will go after this properly it should register as a most satisfactory evening's entertainment.

In your ads center your attention upon the thought that this film deals with the boy problem.. Use something like this: "Where does your boy spend his idle hours? You should know!" "Did you spend your idle hours with a roughneck gang—members of a secret society— or in intelligent occupation?"

You might center the attention upon a line like this: "Is it really a good thing for a boy to be a roughneck when he is young? See 'Knights of the Square Table.'"

If you play this program complete don't fail to mention the short subjects in your advertising. You will find that many of your fans are particularly keen on seeing educational films, preferring educationals even to the ordinary feature. The athletic stunts shown and the making of big guns were both very entertaining and instructive.

HEART STIRRING HAND COLORED PATRIOTIC SLIDES 25c. Each

71. If It's Worth Living Under, It's Worth Fighting For.
54. Americans Must Protect America.
95. We Are With You, Mr. President, One Hundred Million Strong.
53. Your Country Needs You.
28. American Flag.
95. President Wilson & Flag.
60. Geo. Washington.
45. The Birth of the American Flag.
70. Abraham Lincoln.
76. Spirit of '76—Reflects in 1917.
27. If It's Good Enough to Live Under, It's Worth Fighting for.
87. Pledge Allegiance.
68. Star Spangled Banner.
42. My Country 'Tis of Thee (Flag).

EXCELSIOR ILLUSTRATING CO., 219 Sixth Ave. New York City

TIRESOME HANDLING OF VERY ORDINARY PLOT

Orrin Johnson and Rhea Mitchell in

WHITHER THOU GOEST

Harry T. Samwick—State Rights

AS A WHOLE	Crude and tiresome treatment of very poor story
STORY	A fair half-reel
DIRECTION	Generally ordinary; failed to make action human
PHOTOGRAPHY	Occasionally fine, but frequently poor
LIGHTINGS	A few very good; generally ordinary
CAMERA WORK	Varied decidedly
STARS	Failed to impress
SUPPORT	Acted a lot
EXTERIORS	A beautiful home and a dusty desert
INTERIORS	Some good; some ordinary; some poor
DETAIL	Just acceptable; too much of it
TIME	Sixty-four minutes (5 parts)

IT is funny what we get sometimes heralded as a special feature. Here is a production which never at any time justifies its being considered anything more than an ordinary "movie," and yet it has been offered as a State rights feature.

To begin with, this production is based upon a story which would hardly justify more than a half reel of footage from an intelligent producer, because it never gets anywhere. The sum and substance of the plot is that an older brother, who has been told by a doctor that he would die in six months, married a chorus girl in order to save her from his younger brother. The girl went to Arizona with her husband, and there he recovered his health.

Mother, who had objected to the younger boy marrying the chorus girl, horned in again, visiting the Arizona home with her lorgnette, on a tour of inspection, and after a little of the well-known "Camille" stuff, chorus girl went out into the dusty desert to leave her well-bred Hubby to live in peace in sassiety.

Fortunately, Hubby had an Indian around the joint who was something of a bloodhound, and he soon trailed Wifey and went walking in the desert with her. They walked into a sunset and then came the welcome title, "The End."

Speaking of titles, they certainly had some bad ones in this. Most of them were poorly worded and didn't blend with the action, our old friend "That Night" being in evidence despite the fact that an attempt was made to disguise him by putting him in funny-looking letters with a lot of decorations on the side. "That Evening" also loomed up, with a number of "Next Morning's," "A Few Weeks Later's," etc.

Neither Orrin Johnson nor Miss Mitchell displayed the essential personality needed today to register satisfactorily with the average audience. Mr. Johnson walked around through most of the footage with a solemn face and neatly pasted hair. Miss Mitchell emoted quite some, but failed utterly to register.

Mother was awful! She emoted and emoted and appeared several times dressed up like a Trojan Horse. Her visit to the Arizona cabin, where she insisted upon looking at everything with her lorgnette, was quite ridiculous. It was odd that she didn't need it to see Friend Son when he blew in.

This is mostly footage. It goes through reel after reel without anything that can be called a dramatic situation, the characters switching their affections from one to the other without much of a struggle and with very little animation.

Several scenes were taken in a restaurant, and in one place it was noticeable that the editor "slipped" in allowing a young lady to be present in two different scenes in the same dress, as an onlooker, when the scenes were supposed to be a day apart. Possibly she was one of the entertainers around the place and the dress was her regular costume.

The general atmosphere was rather cheap. A few of the sets supposed to be the home of the boys were rather good, and the exterior of their home was that of a magnificent mansion, but the stage sets, the dressing-room scenes and many other bits were quite ordinary. There was nothing truly distinctive about the atmosphere at any time.

The man playing the younger brother was acceptable, in fact being a little more likeable than Mr. Johnson, but he was allowed to drop out of the story as soon as he had served his purpose.

The Box Office Angle.

Possibly you can afford to play this sort of thing. I wouldn't think so. The name, taken from the Biblical quotation, will hardly attract any rioting mob bent upon seeing this particular bit of entertainment. I cannot feel that either Orrin Johnson or Rhea Mitchell have any sure-enough box office value.

There is no sure-enough merit about the offering sufficient to justify your paying out good money for it, and the only reason I can figure why you should play it by any chance is that you must have something and can find nothing else.

If for any reason you decide to use this, I would concentrate on such advertising as this: "If you had only six months to live, would you marry a chorus girl to save your brother from her?" "Supposing you married your brother's girl to save him from her, expecting to die in six months, and then got well—what should you do?" "Are you your brother's keeper? What about his sweetheart?"

You might say that there has been agitation in some sections in reference to the incorporation in the marriage ceremony of the Biblical quotation "Whither thou goest, I go." Possibly you can stir up a little agitation on this last angle. Don't tell them where the agitation started. They might blame it on me.

HAROLD LOCKWOOD
Yorke--Metro

GEORGE EDWARDES-HALL
WITH
HERBERT BRENON

MOUNTAIN FEUD MELO FAILS TO GET OUT OF RUT

Mary Miles Minter in

MELISSA OF THE HILLS

American—Mutual

DIRECTOR ..... James Kirkwood
AUTHOR ..... Maibelle Heikes Justice
AS A WHOLE ..... Routine movie plot helped by star but lacked the director's inspiration to lift it
STORY ..... Kentucky feud stuff with no new angle
DIRECTION ..... Failed to give sufficient intimate characterization studies and permitted action to become movie meller
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Sometimes excellent; sometimes poor
LIGHTINGS ..... Varied from fine to poor
CAMERA WORK ..... Varied decidedly; not enough close-ups
STAR ..... Beautiful and pleasing, but handicapped by plot and not shown to advantage
SUPPORT ..... Acceptable; some good types, but not unusual
EXTERIORS ..... A few excellent shots, but many that were ordinary INTERIORS ..... Just acceptable, with bad composition at times
DETAIL ..... Movie routine
TIME ..... Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

A KENTUCKY feud story means very little in the young life of the average film fan today unless the producer takes his characters and builds an intimate life study which gives an added interest to the action.

Mary Miles Minter is a beautiful young lady who has a very pleasing personality, but in this she was shown to advantage only about one-third of the time, many of her other scenes being unsatisfactory, either because of the lighting or her make-up.

There was no new angle in this story and there was much footage that failed to advance the plot, with the result that the production became quite tiresome at times and finished without having stirred any real emotion. Occasionally we had a good exterior location and some of the types were very good, but the director failed to give enough attention to either characterization or atmosphere to lift the production by virtue of these two elements.

The story was really centered around Miss Minter as the daughter of a preacher who was conducting revivals for the poor mountaineers, and it led up to a point where the feud broke loose, with the danger of imprisonment threatening the heroine's father, he being charged with a crime that he had never committed, because the guilty man had thrown suspicion upon him, causing him to hide away in the mountains.

This was one of those stories that wandered along without ever getting anywhere. I am afraid that it will not make much of an impression anywhere.

Alan Forrest, as the juvenile opposite Miss Minter, was quite satisfactory. The other members of the cast were acceptable, but all of the scenes seemed to lack distinctive individuality.

In the cast were George Peiolat, Gertrude Le Brandt, Perry Banks, Harvey Clark, Frank Thompson, Emma Kluge, Spottswoode Aitken and Ann Schafer.

The Box Office Angle

Since Mary Miles Minter has a very good following it is quite possible that you can do some business with this, but I can tell you definitely that the offering lacks the essentials which would make it a truly pleasing one.

Those who are particularly partial to Miss Minter may accept the production as it stands, without making serious complaint, but I fear that the average fan will feel that it is just another ordinary movie of the sort which makes them feel that they are wasting their time in the film theatres.

I wouldn't advertise this production heavily, and there is really no angle on the story that you can afford to push, so that it would be advisable in case you are for any reason compelled to play this, to talk about Miss Minter and forget to refer to the production itself.

IMPOSSIBLE ENGLISH PRODUCTION BOTH CRUDE AND CHEAP

Peggy Hyland in

CASTE

English Production—Vitagraph

DIRECTOR ..... Larry Trimble
AUTHOR ..... T. W. Robertson
AS A WHOLE ..... Decidedly crude and cheap
STORY ..... Much fussing around, but nothing happened
DIRECTION ..... Registered very poor technique
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Generally ordinary; sometimes bad
LIGHTINGS ..... Ordinary
CAMERA WORK ..... Only fair
STAR ..... Terribly handicapped
SUPPORT ..... Ordinary
EXTERIORS ..... Only acceptable
INTERIORS ..... Rather poor
DETAIL ..... Too much of it
TIME ..... Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

SINCE this was put out by Vitagraph, your fans would expect it to be a recent Peggy Hyland production made in America. I am very sure that when they find it to be a crude English production, badly made, without any story strength, they may be not only peeved but sure-enough sore.

Miss Hyland appeared in dresses which will look very dowdy to Americans, and the emphasis of the English atmosphere—which was quite natural, since the picture was made in London—will not please here, because English studios, for the most part, have never mastered American technique.

Some of your fans might sit through this without a howl, but I am very much inclined to believe that 80 per cent. will want to walk out, because most of the film is taken up with a lot of unnecessary scenes which don't mean anything.

The story is the old-time favorite of aristocrats who fell in love with chorus girls who were poor but honest, with the result that finally caste was swept aside and they lived happily ever after.

We had, as usual, the mother who opposed the marriage of her aristocratic sons, but the general treatment of the offering was not sufficiently intelligent to make it worthy of serious consideration.

In the cast were Sir John Hare, Roland Pertwee, Mary Rorke, Campbell Gullen and Dawson Milward.

The Box Office Angle

I wouldn't play this, because I feel sure that it will not prove satisfactory.

If, for any reason, it is absolutely essential that you accept this production, I would be very particular about having it clearly understood that the film is an English production made some time ago, when Miss Hyland was still in that country.

Don't make any claims for the film, because it is quite crude.

CABIRIA GIANT AND SNOW CLAD MOUNTAINS PLEASE, BUT CRUDE STORY AND SUPPORT CHEAPEN OFFERING

Featuring Maciste

THE WARRIOR

Itala Film—Harry R. Raver—State Rights

AS A WHOLE.....Peculiar novelty that may get over because of locations, atmosphere and freak personality
STORY.....Very poor and crudely tied together
DIRECTION....Photographed series of incidents without coherent dramatic value, and permitted much overplaying
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Occasionally very beautiful, but frequently very bad
LIGHTINGS.....Not distinctive except in occasional exterior beauty shots
CAMERA WORK.....Varied decidedly; not American technique
STAR.....Freak personality; quite sure to please
SUPPORT.....Very poor; served only as foil for giant EXTERIORS.....Many mountain scenes very beautiful, but some locations ordinary
INTERIORS.....Only fair
DETAIL.....Didn't convince
TIME.....Sixty-eight minutes (6 parts)

THIS is a peculiar proposition, since it affords exceptional advertising possibilities with a serious question as to just how your patrons will receive the offering after they have paid their good money.

Of course you remember the giant of "Cabiria" and possibly some of you have played "Marvelous Maciste," in which he did a few stunts showing off his strength. This production is in many ways similar to the "Marvelous Maciste" picture except that an attempt has been made to tie it up with the present war, and we find many very beautiful exteriors taken in snow-capped mountains, which gives a beautiful atmosphere.

I could not help but feel, in looking at this, that here was a tremendous opportunity which had been "muffed." Without question, "Maciste" is a very unusual character. Seldom have I seen in a story more beautiful exteriors than were found in this, and hardly anything could be more timely than a picture of a well-known figure taking part in the present conflict.

Unfortunately, those responsible for this film have given us many beautiful shots, many stunts by Maciste and a suggestion here and there of the war, without at any time intelligently tying these three values together so as to make the whole register and impress.

It is quite possible that this production could be helped very decidedly by editing which would trim the footage and eliminate much of the crude, amateurish overplaying of the supporting cast, at the same time inserting some intelligently worded subtitles in the place of the very poor ones which now cheapen the production.

While the story is in a way supposed to be drama, it should be billed as comedy and you should prepare your fans for a lot of fun, rather than for anything serious about the war. Although Maciste lacks the personality and histrionic ability possessed by our good American hero "Doug" Fairbanks, there will certainly be a thought in most everyone's mind that this big Italian giant does, in a way, put over the same sort of stunts that have helped make "Doug" such a popular favorite.

The average fan will probably look at this, get a few laughs out of it, enjoy the beautiful scenery and say at the end that at least it was different and better than the ordinary melodramatic junk. Surely if this were so edited that the unnecessary scenes in which the crude overplaying of the supporting cast appears would be eliminated, then the production would go over in a very satisfactory manner.

The Box Office Angle

If you know anything about advertising, and particularly if "Cabiria" is remembered in your town, you should be able to get some money with this. Unless it is edited you may not get money very, very long and your regulars may be very seriously divided in their opinions as to the merits of the offering; but surely you can bank on this as a money-getter for a few days if you will play up the advertising angle of seeing the giant of "Cabiria" fighting for Italy in the snow-clad Alps.

I would be particularly careful in my advertising to prepare the audience for the rather unusual character of this production, emphasizing the fact that it is not a story of the horrors of war, but is a film of comedy adventures with Maciste as the hero.

Bill it particularly as a comedy.

QUICK ANNOUNCEMENTS FOR YOUR SCREEN

SLIDENE OUTFIT: all complete.....$1.00
6 bottles slide ink; 25 cover glasses; 6 special pens; 2 slide charts
Novelty Typewriter Slides.....$3.50 per 100
Handy Slide Holder and Clip FREE.
NOVELTY SLIDE CO., 115 East 23d St., New York.

TABULATED PERCENTAGE REPORTS FROM EXHIBITORS

THE BATTING AVERAGES

These are the averages of the companies having 200 reports or more.

Reports		% P. P.	% B. O.	Repeat
660	Fox	73.1	70.8	85
531	Metro	70.8	67.0	49
1813	Triangle	70.6	65.2	354
429	Vitagraph	68.1	66.2	74
2079	Paramount	68.7	62.9	336
454	World	67.7	61.5	41
240	Bluebird	62.7	63.5	20

THE NUMBER BEFORE THE NAME OF THE FEATURE INDICATES THE NUMBER OF REPORTS RECEIVED AND TABULATED ON THAT FILM.

THE FIRST COLUMN CARRIES THE PERCENTAGE OF PLEASED PATRONS.

THE SECOND COLUMN SHOWS THE BOX OFFICE PERCENTAGE.

FIGURES IN THE THIRD COLUMN INDICATE THAT MANY REPORTED THE FILM WORTH A RETURN DATE.

All reports in this percentage tabulation have been marked on this scale:

EXCEPTIONAL	100%
EXCELLENT	80%
GOOD	60%
FAIR	40%
POOR	20%
BAD	0%

PARAMOUNT

2079 Paramount 68.7 62.9 336

Reports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
3	In Bishop's Carriage	85	93
2	The Lost Paradise	50	73
6	The Virginian	88	81	2
2	Such a Little Queen	78	78	1
1	Marta of the Lowlands	50	70
3	Where the Trail Divides	93	90	1
11	Wildflower	89	82	6
1	The County Chairman	80	80
1	What's His Name	75	100
4	Behind the Screen	86	83
5	Man from Mexico	90	70	1
1	The Man From Home	70	70
1	Circus Man	94	95
2	Rose of the Rancho	84	77
4	The Bargain	85	86	1
2	Ghost Breakers	60	63
6	The Crucible	94	92	2
1	False Colors	50	80
5	The Sign of the Cross	79	85
4	Cameo Kirby	61	50
6	Cinderella	86	94	1
3	The Million	70	90
4	Girl of the Golden West	78	71	2
3	The Dancing Girl	65	65
3	The Italian	77	62	1
1	No Laughing Matter	90	85
1	Morals of Marcus	60	50
5	The Goose Girl	95	95	4
2	After Five	51	50
1	Mistress Nell	88	95
2	Buckshot John	60	60
3	Her Triumph	60	74	1
3	The Warrens of Virginia	70	71	1
1	Country Boy	60	60
6	David Harem	82	78	1
1	A Gentleman of Leisure	80	70
2	The Caprices of Kitty	63	70
1	Love Route	60	60
1	Sunshine Molly	40	20
1	The Governor's Lady	97	85
3	Gretna Green	100	100	2
3	Are You a Mason?	78	84
1	Pretty Mrs. Smith	85	90
1	The Unafraid	80	75
1	When We Were 21	75	63
4	Snobs	64	52
5	Captain Courtesy	84	66	1
3	Captive	82	67
2	Niobe	75	55	1
3	Help Wanted	80	75
5	The Woman	86	59	1
5	House of Lost Court	82	64	1
4	Fanchon, The Cricket	89	92	3
3	Betty in Search of Thrill	83	87
5	Stolen Goods	78	75
2	Wild-Goose Chase	60	55	1
6	Pretty Sister Jose	84	92	2
5	Jim the Penman	64	65
6	The Dawn of a To-morrow	83	88	1
5	Arab	59	56	2
1	Clarissa	75	80
2	The Dictator	45	45
5	Wild Olive	82	69
6	Chimmy Fadden	91	75	1
3	Little Pal	73	85
4	Rugmaker's Daughter	40	50
2	The Clue	74	88
6	Kindling	81	82
1	The Running Fight	60	70
3	The Fighting Hope	77	80
5	Kilmeny	75	73
6	Seven Sisters	87	86	1
2	Puppet Crown	83	85
19	Rags	91	93	5
2	Sold	83	72
6	The Secret Orchid	79	74
5	Nearly a Lady	65	75
6	The Marriage of Kitty	76	64
2	Poor Schmaltz	62	37
8	Helene of the North	87	81	2
3	The Majesty of the Law	56	60
3	Heart of Jennifer	42	55
1	Incorrigible Dukane	75	55
4	Esmeralda	89	89	2
2	The Case of Becky	65	65
1	Out of Darkness	60	40
1	Peer Gynt	42	100
4	The Explorers	72	61
4	'Twas Ever Thus	53	68
2	Voice in the Fog	75	47
6	Fatal Card	65	59
4	Zaza	91	67	2
6	The Girl of Yesterday	59	68	3
7	White Pearl	71	75
4	Blackbirds	57	58
7	Chorus Lady	73	68
6	The Secret Sin	69	74	1
7	Yankee Girl	52	57
6	Masqueraders	56	56
11	Carmen	82	83	3
11	Still Waters	95	92	7
8	Madame Butterfly	82	89	2
7	Mummy and Humming Bird	64	56
7	Bella Donna	92	77	4
8	Armstrong's Wife	79	65
5	Chimmie Fadden Out West	83	74	1
8	A Gentleman From Indiana	86	78
9	The Prince and the Pauper	92	86	4
10	Mr. Grex from Monte Carlo	84	89	1
9	Jane	75	81
8	The Unknown	76	67	1
18	The Cheat	94	80	12
9	The Reform Candidate	80	54	1
9	The Immigrant	73	62
10	The Old Homestead	88	84	7
8	Lydia Gilmore	82	61	2
10	Temptation	82	77	2
9	The Foundling	78	76	1
5	Tongues of Men	82	58	1
7	Mice and Men	84	84	4
8	The Golden Chance	80	62	1
1	My Lady Incog	40	40
4	Ragamuffins	77	57
4	Call of Cumberlands	77	72
6	The Spider	87	68	1
9	Pudd'n Head Wilson	83	66	4
5	Tennessee's Pardner	65	59
7	Madame Le Presidente	21	48
8	Nearly King	52	33	1
12	Trail of Lonesome Pine	75	88	8
7	Fell in Love with Wife	56	52	1
7	Blacklist	61	53	1
9	Out of the Drifts	90	89	3
8	Diplomacy	88	56	1
13	Poor Little Peppina	88	85	7
15	To Have and To Hold	75	72	4
11	Ben Blair	72	55
9	For the Defense	60	66	1
6	The Code of Marcia Gray	70	66	2
8	The Lost Bridegroom	80	70	2
7	The Saleslady	75	66	1
14	Audrey	75	72	3
5	The Sowers	65	60
10	The Heart of Paula	72	57	1
11	The Race	71	62
7	The Eternal Grind	71	82	3
9	The Love Mast	58	56	2
9	Molly Make-Believe	87	83	5
7	The Red Widow	62	55	2
12	The Heart of Nora Flynn	72	60	4
8	A Moment Before	52	64	1
12	David Garrick	68	46	2
9	The Innocent Lie	75	51
15	Maria Rosa	79	78	4
12	Alien Souls	69	67	1
13	The Feud Girl	60	56
16	Pasquale	78	53	3
16	Sweet Kitty Bellairs	72	62	2
20	Saints and Sinners	51	49
17	Thousand-Dollar Husband	69	62	4
22	A Gutter Magdalene	62	54	1
10	Evil Thereof	44	44
15	The Making of Maddalena	63	57	3
23	Silks and Satins	85	88	10
14	Destiny's Toy	60	51
19	The Clown	79	54	3
20	Susie Snowflakes	69	59	2
16	The World's Great Snare	73	71	4
19	The American Beauty	64	61	3
22	The Dupe	64	64	1
22	The Smugglers	53	50	1
26	The Selfish Woman	72	68	4
29	Davy Crockett	67	62
28	The Dream Girl	69	64	1
28	Under Cover	79	75	4
27	International Marriage	55	51	3
27	Common Ground	64	64	3
35	Hulda from Holland	95	94	23
30	House of Golden Windows	73	64	3
22	A Woman in the Case	72	72	3
25	Little Lady Eileen	87	89	10
11	The Stronger Love	53	82
31	Public Opinion	82	72	4
20	Rolling Stones	67	62	3
21	The Honorable Friend	65	62	3
19	The Victory of Conscience	60	60	3
20	Each Pearl a Tear	75	72	3
21	The Parson of Panamint	77	69	6
14	The Big Sister	48	59

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
13 The Reward of Patience	66	55
14 The House of Lies	76	69	1
13 The Daughter of MacGregor	55	40
16 Ashes of Embers	84	84	6
16 The Quest of Life	59	61
14 Anton, the Terrible	46	45
16 The Lash	58	56
13 The Storm	75	65	1
19 The Intrigue	81	61	2
16 Her Father's Son	74	68	2
14 Witchcraft	55	55
14 The Kiss	74	68	2
15 The Rainbow Princess	81	72	3
14 Seventeen	84	72	2
13 Miss George Washington	94	94	10
15 The Heir to the Hoorah	82	69	5
15 The Soul of Kura San	80	71	1
12 A Son of Erin	79	73	2
10 Unprotected	53	55	1
10 The Years of the Locust	49	51
11 The Plow Girl	75	60
9 The Yellow Pawn	66	57	1
9 Nanette of the Wilds	50	57	2
7 Martyrdom of Philip Strong	53	55	1
10 The Coney Island Princess	62	63	1
16 The Road to Love	72	59	1
14 Oliver Twist	85	69	6
13 The Victoria Cross	44	54	1
15 The Traveling Salesman	76	60	3
18 The Right Direction	75	59	2
20 Snow White	95	95	12
15 Redeeming Love	61	59	1
19 The Slave Market	73	70	5
12 The Evil Eye	30	44	1
18 Great Expectations	76	56	1
16 Happiness of Three Women	74	59	1
14 Betty to the Rescue	46	48
16 A Girl Like That	55	51
15 Lost and Won	58	51
19 The Golden Fetter	50	56
18 His Sweetheart	83	58	2
17 The Wax Model	67	58
18 Each to His Kind	62	61
15 Her Own People	72	51
11 The Black Wolf	35	41
17 The American Consul	53	50	1
17 The Fortunes of Fifi	64	77	2
19 On Record	63	57	2
15 Winning of Sally Temple	40	48
16 Those Without Sin	54	52	1
14 Castles for Two	53	50	1
13 Out of the Wreck	60	54
12 Sapho	75	83	3
10 Prison Without Walls	52	51
11 The Dummy	70	54
8 The Spirit of Romance	62	52
7 As Men Love	73	51
9 The Bottle Imp	76	67	2
6 The Bond Between	52	37
7 A School for Husband	48	46	1
6 The Lonesome Chap	47	44
8 Sleeping Fires	59	61	1
7 The Tides of Barnegat	46	40
7 The Cost of Hatred	40	36
9 The Valentine Girl	72	75
1 Unconquered	10	15
5 The Girl at Home	45	39
7 Heart's Desire	21	34
6 Sacrifice	28	43
5 The Primrose Ring	30	38
7 The Silent Partner	30	34
4 Marcellini Millions	39	25
4 The Highway of Hope	26	26
4 Her Better Self	59	48
4 The Undying Flame	26	40
2 Freckles	68	55

TRIANGLE

1813 Triangle	70.6	65.2	354
10 The Iron Strain	81	66	2
9 The Lamb	84	75	3
8 Old Heidelberg	72	63	1
11 The Coward	84	67	1
9 Martyrs of the Alamo	67	57	2
14 The Disciple	85	76	2
7 Matrimony	81	74	2
5 Sable Lorcha	64	53
6 The Golden Claw	61	72
9 Double Trouble	64	64	2
7 Aloha Oe	63	62	1
5 Lily and Rose	61	53
7 Jordan Is a Hard Road	55	54
4 Winged Idol	53	52
8 Penitents	28	32
11 The Edge of the Abyss	67	61
8 Submarine Pirate	85	70	1
5 Cross Currents	48	45
11 Between Men	72	70	1
14 Let Katy Do It	87	81	6
5 The Corner	56	47
8 The Missing Link	55	43	1
3 Beckoning Flame	65	48
9 The Wood Nymph	54	50	1
8 The Conqueror	71	70
9 Price of Power	55	51
10 The Green Swamp	80	78	1
12 Acquitted	69	51
6 D'Artagnan	59	54
18 His Picture in the Papers	90	75	5
13 Honor's Altar	77	67	2
14 Betty of Greystone	77	65	2
23 Peggy	94	91	15
7 Don Quixote	57	56
9 The Last Act	79	78	1
11 Daphne and the Pirate	71	57	1
18 Hell's Hinges	93	89	11
17 The Flying Torpedo	88	80	8
14 Bullets and Brown Eyes	85	75	3
14 Martha's Vindication	79	72	2
14 Moral Fabric	75	62	1
15 Hoodoo Ann	68	65	1
15 The Raiders	79	70
14 The Habit of Happiness	92	85	5
8 Waifs	70	59	1
8 Little Meena's Romance	64	60	1
17 The Aryan	59	80	6
10 Sold for Marriage	71	72	1
17 Stepping Stones	85	75	2
10 Sunshine Dad	36	46
9 Civilization's Child	66	64	1
14 Children In the House	80	66	2
11 The Beggar of Cawnpore	61	49
19 The Good-Bad Man	90	92	4
12 The No-Good Guy	74	60	3
16 Susan Rocks the Boat	71	64
20 Not My Sister	79	77	4
18 Child of Paris Streets	76	64
22 The Primal Lure	82	76	7
8 Mr. Goode, the Samaritan	53	53
26 The Market of Vain Desire	79	64	8
22 Going Straight	77	78	3
29 The Bugle Call	93	79	9
26 Peggie Mixes In	86	80	11
16 The Sorrows of Love	66	69	1
21 An Innocent Magdalene	71	71	2
18 The Dividend	70	68	1
21 The Wild Girl of Sierras	45	53
25 An Apostle of Vengeance	88	83	4
18 Casey at the Bat	44	48
28 The Phantom	83	72	7
30 Flirting With Fate	87	86	11
31 The Deserter	85	69	11
26 The Little School Ma'am	74	67	2
26 The Eye of the Night	74	58	5
18 Stranded	61	51
27 The Captive God	65	70	2
23 The Halfbreed	72	74	2
22 The Payment	81	70	3
18 The Marriage of Molly O	48	47
28 Honor Thy Name	87	73	4
22 The Devil's Needle	64	64	1
29 Shell 43	87	69	6
26 Hell-to-Pay Austin	83	66	6
21 Lieutenant Danny, U. S. A.	79	69
16 Pillars of Society	59	56	1
22 Home	91	80	9
16 Gretchen the Greenhorn	64	62	2
21 The Patriot	79	80	6
23 The Social Secretary	89	74	8
17 The Thoroughbred	82	72	1
11 The Little Liar	69	57
19 The Wolf Woman	86	89	6
15 The Dawnmaker	59	78	3
19 Diane of the Follies	70	72	2
26 Manhattan Madness	94	92	12
21 Plain Jane	88	77	5
19 Old Folks at Home	84	66	2
16 The Jungle Child	62	63	1
15 The Rummy	67	54	1
21 The Return of Draw Egan	88	86	7
20 The Vagabond Prince	75	70	3
18 Somewhere in France	77	69	1
17 A Corner in Colleens	88	80	6
12 A Sister of Six	69	64	2
21 Fifty-Fifty	89	83	6
4 War's Women	61	48
12 Atta Boy's Last Race	54	55
15 American Aristocracy	92	89	8
10 The Microscope Mystery	50	43
13 The Honorable Algy	78	68	3
14 Jim Grimsby's Boy	68	62	3
14 The Devil's Double	92	91	7
11 The Children Pay	73	63	3
13 Children of the Feud	56	53	1
8 The Criminal	49	45
9 The Gamble in Souls	72	68	3
15 The Wharf Rat	54	55
18 The Matrimaniac	93	95	9
18 The Sin Ye Do	93	85	10
13 Heiress of Coffee Dan's	60	53	2
10 Three of Many	62	53
9 Houee Built Upon Sand	75	67	3
8 Nina the Flower Girl	51	52
10 Female of the Species	75	74	2
16 Truthful Tulliver	97	93	9
12 The Weaker Sex	88	83	4
7 The Little Yank	40	52	1
10 The Bride of Hate	78	74	4
10 The Iced Bullet	62	53
14 The Americano	99	97	11
10 Chicken Casey	75	56	1
13 Jim Bludso	64	42	1
14 The Crab	83	70	5
10 Girl of the Timber Claims	41	39
16 The Gun-Fighter	76	85	10
13 The Bad Boy	71	54	2
10 Princess of the Dark	49	44
6 Stage Struck	41	38
11 Last of the Ingrams	47	44
8 Blood Will Tell	66	63
4 Love Sublime	54	45
6 The Little Brother	48	36	2
14 Back of the Man	90	81	5
10 Betsy's Burglar	59	54
12 The Square Deal Man	95	94	6
9 The Dark Road	64	58	1
5 A Daughter of the Poor	57	55
7 A Woman's Awakening	65	52
8 Her Father's Keeper	52	48
7 Her Official Fathers	50	46
7 Old-Fashioned Young Man	44	46
6 Sweetheart of the Doomed	79	71	3
7 Paddy O'Hara	64	56	1
8 The Deserter Man	89	91	1
7 Cheerful Givers	42	36
7 The Pinch Hitter	97	71	1
4 Hands Up!	28	25
6 The Snarl	53	62
2 Might and the Man	13	30
5 Happiness	76	51
4 The Man Who Made Good	45	39
3 Wild Winship's Wife	70	62
4 Souls Triumphant	35	30
4 The Millionaire Vagrant	84	72
3 Wolf Lowry	93	95
1 The Girl, Glory	80	60

WORLD

454 World	67.7	61.5	41
4 Hearts Afire	70	78
1 Daughter of the Sea	60	50
2 The Warning	85	41
4 The Little Dutch Girl	80	43
1 The Price of Her Silence	80	90
2 The Master of the House	68	51
1 The Dragon	60	18
1 The Price	80	41
1 Love's Cross Roads	85	60
1 Better Woman	75	65
1 By Whose Hand	60	55
1 Her Great Hour	60	44
1 When it Strikes Home	60	41
2 Circus Romance	62	55
2 Old Dutch	75	30
3 Ballet Girl	81	61
3 Marrying Money	79	42
1 Wishing Ring	64	46
1 The Dollar Mark	85	46
1 Gentleman from Mississippi	85	46
1 As Ye Sow	100	42
1 Stolen Voice	60	44

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
1 Face in the Moonlight	80	60
1 Women and Wine	60	40
2 Blue Grass	75	68
1 Fruits of Desire	40	50
1 Alias Jimmy Valentine	80	80
6 Trilby	81	69	1
1 Idols	40	40
2 Master Hand	86	80
1 Devil's Toy	57	73
1 Salvation Nell	60	47
1 Family Cupboard	50	57	1
1 Heart of Blue Ridge	84	73	1
1 Butterfly on Wheel	80	70
1 Hearts of Men	80	52
1 Body and Soul	40	45
1 The Ransom	63	42
1 The Labyrinth	66	65
1 Should a Wife Forgive?	90	90
2 The Senator	83	60
1 Hearts in Exile	90	90
1 His Wife's Good Name	25	20
1 The Chain Invisible	90	5
1 The Imposter	80	75
1 Sunday	95	30
1 As In a Looking Glass	60	40
1 Over Night	70	70
3 Sins of Society	76	65
7 Camille	86	79	3
3 The Rack	89	69
1 Fine Feathers	70	40
1 The Clarion	60	75
3 The Woman in 47	74	80
5 The Yellow Passport	82	80	2
1 The Price of Happiness	58	50
2 A Woman's Power	45	50
1 Cowardly Way	60	60
2 Passersby	73	55
1 Man and His Angel	62	45
4 The Supreme Sacrifice	78	69
1 The Struggle	60	60
3 The Hand of Peril	75	67
5 Then I'll Come Back To You	76	66	1
4 The Reapers	75	65
2 The Shadow of Doubt	78	65
1 Social Highwaymen	75	48
3 Closed Road	87	81	1
7 The Feast of Life	61	73
7 Her Maternal Right	58	74
6 Sudden Riches	76	71
1 The Twin Triangle	83	45
1 Tangled Fates	57	63
1 Fate's Boomerang	42	53
5 His Brother's Wife	85	74	2
10 Perils of Divorce	61	63
13 La vie de Boheme	47	50
1 What Happened at 22	82	80
5 Crucial Test	59	58
7 The Weakness of Man	61	68
12 Sally in Our Alley	84	81
14 Paying the Price	70	70	1
12 Miss Petticoats	59	61
14 Woman's Way	75	74	4
13 The Summer Girl	56	57
12 Rail Rider	68	60
10 Husband and Wife	75	63	2
1 Almighty Dollar	76	72	1
13 The Velvet Paw	74	69	1
1 Friday, the Thirteenth	72	70
11 Dark Silence	77	79	2
4 The Revolt	66	60
7 The Gilded Cage	75	70
6 Hidden Scar	77	67
6 The Scarlet Oath	60	62
7 Man Who Stood Still	71	63
8 The Heart of a Hero	59	49
1 Without a Soul	70	85
15 Bought and Paid For	91	91	10
10 The Madness of Helen	57	54
6 Men She Married	58	55
4 The Deep Purple	81	75
11 All Man	59	63	2
7 Broken Chains	50	43
12 The Rise of Susan	79	83	6
6 The World Against Him	52	43
9 Woman Alone	69	65	1
7 On Dangerous Ground	65	71
7 The Man Who Forgot	65	61	1
4 Marriage a la Carte	73	73	1
1 The Unpardonable Sin	40	55
5 The Bondage of Fear	65	63
8 Tillie Wakes Up	79	78	1
8 The Hungry Heart	87	83	2
7 The Square Deal	74	74	1
3 A Girl's Folly	65	75
4 The Red Woman	56	50
4 The Web of Desire	78	73	1
5 The Family Honor	66	61
6 The Dancer's Peril	80	76	1
4 The Social Leper	66	61
3 Man's Woman	68	68
4 Darkest Russia	71	75
6 Forget-Me-Not	63	69
1 The Bludgeon	87	80
2 As Man Made Her	73	73
5 The Page Mystery	55	57
2 Yankee Pluck	68	55
3 Moral Courage	62	63
4 Mothers of France	66	51
2 Maternity	85	90
1 The Crimson Dove	80	70
2 The False Friend	68	68
1 Stolen Paradise	40	65
1 Atonement	70	65
1 The Pawn of Fate	85	45

METRO

531 Metro	70.8	67.0	49
1 Her Reckoning	60	40
1 Satan Sanderson	70	70
1 Cowboy and Lady	80	55
1 Heart of a Painted Lady	85	75
1 High Road	80	80
3 Shooting of Dan McGraw	81	78
1 Middleman	90	80
1 My Best Girl	60	60
1 Right of Way	70	85
2 Second in Command	77	80
1 The Vampire	80	90
6 Soul of a Woman	93	80	1
2 Silent Voice	77	87
1 An Enemy of Society	60	40
1 Song of Wage Slave	75	70
1 Emmy of Stork's Nest	80	60
2 Final Judgment	80	85
2 Pennington's Choice	92	90
4 Woman Pays	78	52
2 One Million Dollars	78	70
3 Barbara Frietchie	82	73
5 The Yellow Streak	85	64
3 House of Tears	80	65
4 Rosemary for Remembrance	73	68
3 Black Fear	73	57
5 What'll People Say?	80	64
4 The Turmoil	70	55
8 Lure of Heart's Desire	56	56
5 Her Debt of Honor	49	50
6 A Man and His Soul	83	83	2
3 The Upstart	68	72
3 Dimples	52	58
4 Corner In Cotton	64	58
5 The Price of Malice	66	65
6 The Soul Market	83	75	2
2 Blindness of Love	80	85	1
3 Lovely Mary	67	83
1 My Madonna	80	85
6 Her Great Price	80	68	1
8 The Wall Between	78	82	1
5 The Kiss of Hate	60	74
6 Half Million Bribe	69	49
1 Playing with Fire	78	75
11 The Come-Back	75	74	1
1 Snow Birds	80	77
1 A Million a Minute	72	84	1
4 The Spell of the Yukon	79	71
6 His Great Triumph	49	43
10 The Scarlet Woman	73	84	1
10 Dorian's Divorce	74	68
8 Masked Rider	69	68
6 Flower of No Man's Land	58	75
1 The Purple Lady	82	63
10 The Eternal Question	76	83	1
11 The Quitter	69	73
15 The River of Romance	87	76	7
8 The Child of Destiny	51	57
13 The Devil at His Elbow	64	61	1
14 God's Half Acre	71	62	1
14 The Weakness of Strength	68	54
11 The Pretender	80	72	1
7 The Upheaval	57	63
9 The Light of Happiness	67	61	1
10 Mister 44	88	93	4
8 The Wheel of the Law	77	66	1
10 The Dawn of Love	66	60
7 The Iron Woman	43	57
5 Life's Shadows	66	60
13 In the Diplomatic Service	69	83	4
9 The Brand of Cowardice	65	54
13 The Gates of Eden	68	54
11 Extravagance	69	82	3
10 The Wager	78	64
1 My Madonna	80	85
8 The Sunbeam	53	51
11 Big Tremaine	74	82	5
9 The Black Butterfly	70	80	4
7 The Stolen Triumph	54	49
6 Awakening of Helena Richie	63	64
9 Pidgin Island	69	73	2
10 Vanity	62	53
11 The White Raven	86	85	4
7 Wife by Proxy	45	41
7 Threads of Fate	39	38
10 Bridges Burned	47	66
8 The End of the Tour	44	44
9 One of Many	65	59	1
7 The Secret of Eve	34	67	1
13 The Promise	82	85	2
6 The Barricade	58	57
6 Hidden Children	43	65
9 The Mortal Sin	53	58
7 The Waiting Soul	49	61	1
6 The Father's Son	67	62
4 The Power of Decision	46	51
6 A Magdalen of the Hills	49	47
5 God's Law and Man	47	46
2 The Millionaire's Double	65	58
3 The Call of Her People	57	54
1 Sowers and Reapers	75	60
1 The Beautiful Lie	40	40
1 The Duchess of Doubt	75	70

FOX

660 Fox	73.1	70.8	85
1 Girl I Left Behind Me	0	25
2 St. Elmo	52	92
4 Fool There Was	82	96	2
2 Dr. Rameau	90	87	1
2 Kreutzer Sonata	80	88
2 The Idler	55	65
2 Celebrated Scandal	70	70
2 Clemenceau Case	87	82	1
2 Walls of Jericho	40	55
1 Woman's Resurrection	80	45
2 Anna Kerinina	67	60
2 Life's Shop Window	55	57
2 The Nigger	100	70
4 The Gilded Fool	70	75
3 Devil's Daughter	77	95
4 Should a Mother Tell?	83	76
1 Wormwood	80	80
1 Lady Audley's Secret	90	75
1 Princess Romanoff	60	60
1 Valley of the Missing	50	40
1 Children of the Ghetto	75	40
1 Samson	80	80
1 The Thief	90	40
8 Two Orphans	84	86	3
2 The Song of Hate	92	82
7 Regeneration	77	72	4
5 Wonwerful Adventure	75	77
5 Sin	62	82
2 Little Gypsy	80	74
5 Soul of Broadway	83	78	1
2 The Family Stain	87	64
3 Carmen	82	83	2
3 Blindness of Devotion	56	53
4 Woman's Past	63	43
9 Broken Law	82	65	1
8 Galley Slave	76	75	1
3 Unfaithful Wife	73	61
3 Her Mother's Secret	73	57
3 A Soldier's Oath	82	70
5 Destruction	86	94	1
3 Green-Eyed Monster	53	74
3 Parisian Romance	65	61
2 Fourth Estate	80	68
6 Serpent	92	93	1
5 Ruling Passion	53	59
5 Merely Mary Ann	52	45
7 Fool's Revenge	45	49
10 Fighting Blood	74	70

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
4 The Witch	63	59
4 Marble Heart	41	60
10 Gold and the Woman	65	86	1
10 The Bondman	79	64	1
5 A Wife's Sacrifice	55	56
11 Blue Blood and Red	84	71	1
6 Slander	80	70
10 A Modern Thelma	59	49	1
9 Man of Sorrow	63	64	1
9 Blazing Love	70	68
11 The Eternal Sapho	84	87	4
12 Sins of Men	76	61	1
14 Battle of Hearts	63	61
10 The Spider and the Fly	67	72	1
11 Hypocrisy	76	58
10 A Woman's Honor	69	71
21 East Lynne	86	86	9
15 Ambition	71	67
18 Man From Bitter Roots	82	81	2
21 Caprice of the Mountains	69	63	1
15 Tortured Heart	71	67
21 The Beast	87	66	6
26 Under Two Flags	94	92	17
19 The End of the Trail	66	79
19 Sporting Blood	62	57	1
18 Little Miss Happiness	75	68	3
19 Daredevil Kate	74	78
14 The Unwelcome Mother	63	66
16 Her Double Life	86	85	5
9 Where Love Leads	69	61
13 Fires of Conscience	64	70	1
12 The Straight Way	67	72
10 The Ragged Princess	79	69
14 The War Bride's Secret	76	63	3
11 Romeo and Juliet	85	85	4
5 Love and Hate	66	60
5 The Mischief Maker	66	66	1
6 Jealousy	73	83
6 The Mediator	73	72	1
5 Sins of the Parents	86	72	3
4 The Battle of Life	72	63
5 The Vixen	61	73
4 Love Thief	86	85
3 The Primitive Call	63	65
4 The Island of Desire	75	65	1
4 The Price of Silence	80	71
2 The Bitter Truth	83	80	1
8 The Darling of Paris	66	73
4 One Touch of Sin	66	76
5 The New York Peacock	82	84
1 A Child of the Wilds	90	90
3 The Scarlet Letter	80	75	1
3 The Tiger Woman	80	82	1
4 Sister Against Sister	66	63
5 A Tale of Two Cities	93	81	3
2 Melting Millions	80	65
3 The Victim	64	62
3 Love's Law	17	27
4 The Blue Streak	57	61
2 High Finance	83	65
1 American Methods	90	85
2 Her Greatest Love	75	83
1 Tangled Lives	70	65
1 Her Temptation	76	78
1 The Final Payment	20	20
1 The Silent Lie	90	90
1 The Slave	20	40

MUTUAL

153 Mutual	72.0	71.1	14
1 Buzzard's Shadow	85	80
1 Death Lock	88	85
1 On the Night Stage	75	40
1 The Mating	80	70
1 Enoch Arden	100	100
1 Girl from His Town	85	70
1 Ghosts	80	65
1 Cup of Life	88	40
1 His Wife	70	25
1 House of Scandal	90	75
1 Infatuation	60	50
3 Miracle of Life	83	85	1
1 Inner Struggle	40	20
1 Mill of Floss	75	90
1 The Painted Soul	82	55
1 End of the Road	90	100
1 Father and Son	75	75
1 The Reward	80	80
2 Bird of Prey	85	81
2 Inspiration	70	100	1
2 As a Woman Sows	80	81
1 The Decoy	50	55
1 The Drifter	75	60
1 Life's Blind Alley	50	75
1 Silas Marner	100	100	1
3 The Craving	69	67
1 Law Unto Himself	46	50
1 Heart of Tara	75	75
1 According to Law	45	52
1 Overalls	75	90
3 My Partner	72	70
3 The Bruiser	78	65	1
1 Hidden Law	100	90	1
1 Love Liar	72	85	1
1 Revelations	50	50
1 The Net	90	100	1
1 The Haunted Manor	52	55
2 Feathertop	90	90
1 Lying Lips	60	70
1 Dust	80	80
1 Other People's Money	85	65
2 Isle of Love	80	85	1
5 Whispering Smith	64	66
6 Soul Mates	69	63
2 Wasted Years	76	81
2 Far from Madding Crowd	70	67
4 Medicine Bend	74	81
4 Highest Bid	64	66	1
3 Her American Prince	70	67
5 Doorsteps	65	60	1
2 House of Mirrors	77	75
2 Wall Street Tragedy	65	80
6 Youth's Endearing Charm	77	74	1
2 Strength, Donald Mackenzie	75	72
1 Million for Mary	90	90	1
7 Judith of the Cumberlands	68	68
2 A Welsh Singer	40	53
1 Man Who Would Not Die	85	75
1 The Wolf Man	50	50
1 The Painted Lie	40	35
2 Three Pals	73	71
3 Manager of the B. & A	63	70
8 Pearl of Paradise	67	74	1
6 Dulcie's Adventure	87	84	1
1 Bluff	85	80
8 Faith	76	68
4 Miss Jackie of the Navy	86	85	1
2 A Dream or Two Ago	88	80
6 The Innocence of Lizette	85	80
3 The Butterfly Girl	72	80
1 The House of Scandal	0	10
1 The Man From Oregon	95	75
1 The Girl From Rector's	40	40
2 The Greater Woman	55	75
3 Where Love Is	52	48
6 The Gentle Intruder	77	78
1 Damaged Goods	40	100
2 Philip Holden—Waster	59	48
2 Redeemed	55	30
1 Lonesome Town	85	85
1 The Love Hermit	78	78
4 My Fighting Gentleman	60	44
1 The Torch Bearer	80	80
2 The Twinkler	92	88
2 East Is East	88	60
1 Immediate Lee	90	82	1
1 Beloved Rogues	95	90
1 The Valley of Decision	75	80
1 The Gilded Youth	80	75
3 The Painted Lie	62	74
2 Motherhood	38	55
3 Sunny Jane	67	65
2 The Devil's Assistant	60	70
2 High Play	43	53
2 The Single Code	50	53
1 The Death	20	20
2 The Wildcat	65	58
1 Whose Wife?	40	40
2 Periwinkle	70	60

MUTUAL-CHAPLIN

1 A Night in the Show	100	90	1
4 The Fireman	75	80
4 The Vagabond	55	55
5 The Floorwalker	97	100	2
8 One A. M.	63	81	1
16 The Count	88	86
10 The Pawnshop	73	74	2
7 Behind the Screen	89	91	5
8 The Rink	97	99	7
8 Easy Street	95	100	8
12 The Cure	93	94	7
3 The Immigrant	93	98	2

PATHE

146 Pathe	68.9	68.1	16
1 Last Volunteer	80	80
1 The Spender	80	80
3 At Bay	78	81
1 The Galloper	40	90
1 Closing Net	60	80
2 Nedra	55	45
1 Affair of Three Nations	75	80
3 The Beloved Vagabond	76	67
2 Greater Will	50	55
5 Excuse Me!	90	73
3 King's Game	56	62
6 Madame X	71	91	3
5 Love Trail	38	52
1 Hazel Kirk	60	55
1 Simon the Jester	60	35
6 New York	80	74	1
2 Precious Packet	67	85
4 Shrine of Happiness	78	72
6 Woman's Law	68	65
10 Big Jim Garrity	69	55	1
6 Girl with the Green Eyes	65	72
3 Matrimonial Martyr	63	73	1
7 Shadow of Her Past	34	81
4 The Fugitive	75	63
1 Little Mary Sunshine	90	78	1
1 Divorce and the Daughter	78	75
1 The World and the Woman	85	90
6 The Shine Girl	72	74
2 Fear of Poverty	65	95
2 The Test	60	48
3 Saint, Devil and Woman	44	57
3 Light That Failed	69	69	1
7 Shadows and Sunshine	94	81	3
3 Prudence the Pirate	65	78
3 Arms and the Woman	70	53	1
3 The Challenge	73	65
6 Joy and the Dragon	79	72	1
3 The Romantic Journey	76	65
4 Her New York	81	62	1
1 Her Life or His	75	70
5 Kick In	76	74
1 Sold at Auction	55	65
1 Modern Monte Cristo	70	65
1 The Hidden Valley	95	90
1 Crime and Punishment	65	65
1 Her Beloved Enemy	67	77
1 Pots and Pans Peggy	78	70
2 Twin Kiddies	85	70
2 The Image Maker	48	40
3 Told at Twilight	92	87	1
3 Mayblossom	40	85
1 The Hunting of the Hawk	60	40
1 Mary Lawson's Secret	77	78
1 Sunshine and Gold	70	80

BLUEBIRD

240 Bluebird	62.7	63.5	20
1 Jeanne Dore	27	45
2 The Secret Love	38	40
2 Hop, the Devil's Brew	40	43
7 Undine	80	87	3
1 Wrong Door	75	95
1 Grip of Jealousy	75	85
2 Rupert of Hentzau	51	60
2 Strength of the Weak	76	75
1 The Yaqui	42	58
4 The Flirt	44	66
2 Tangled Hearts	44	36
2 John Needham's Double	54	30
1 The Great Problem	79	66
4 Gaylord Waring	51	50
5 Crippled Hand	58	69	1
3 Gilded Spider	46	64
1 Elusive Isabel	48	46
3 The Measure of a Man	63	65
2 Love Never Dies	65	18
4 Son of the Immortals	61	71
5 Eye of God	64	80	1
3 Bobbie of the Ballet	67	79
3 Evil Women Do	60	62
9 Three Godfathers	68	74	1
15 Shoes	71	77	3
11 Broken Fetters	64	56	1
8 The Love Girl	63	64	1

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
The Grasp of Greed	71	76	1
The Silent Battle	78	84
Secret of the Swamp	71	56	2
Love's Lariat	65	64	1
Bettina Loved a Soldier	65	72
Wanted—A Home	71	75
The Chalice of Sorrow	72	65
Little Eve Edgarton	58	61	1
The Girl of Lost Lake	65	60
The Unattainable	51	48
Saving a Family Name	81	68	1
Behind the Lines	62	65
The Social Buccaneer	72	65
Gloriana	69	70
A Stranger from Somewhere	69	67
The Price of Silence	88	80
The End of the Rainbow	63	48
The Honor of Mary Blake	58	58
The Right to be Happy	50	40
Black Orchids	75	78	1
Her Soul's Inspiration	55	39
God's Crucible	88	84	2
The Piper's Price	40	20
The Bugler of Algiers	80	69	1
The Sign of the Poppy	65	62
Mutiny	58	51
Mysterious Mrs. M.	74	59	1
The Reward of the Faithless	72	81
The Saintly Sinner	48	58
The Boy-Girl	63	70
Polly Red Head	61	74
The Gift-Girl	60	75
Susan's Gentleman	62	63
The Clock	77	65
Hell Morgan's Girl	90	88	1
The Devil's Pay Day	71	75
A Jewel In Pawn	71	69
Girl With Checkered Coat	72	70
Bringing Home Father	70	70

UNIVERSAL

Little Brother of the Rich	60	54
Business is Business	50	65
Father and the Boys	20	30
The Frame-up	40	45
Judge Not	70	70
Long Chance	85	80
Man of Shame	50	55
My Old Dutch	20	55
Nature Man	95	60
Under Southern Skies	90	75
Langdon's Legacy	60	60
Love's Pilgrimage	42	53
College Orphan	70	63
Colorado	90	100
The Campbells Are Coming	84	83	1
Money Madness	67	80

RED FEATHER

80 Red Feather	64 8	61.6	2

It Happened in Honolulu	80	80
The Madcap	70	70
Soul Enslaved	60	80
Knight of the Range	80	4
Beckoning Trail	88	71
Man From Nowhere	75	90	1
The Path of Happiness	70	50
The Sphinx	50	50
Pool of Flame	70	75
Lords of High Decision	60	40
Black Sheep of the Family	60	63
Autumn	65	67
Her Bitter Cup	72	71
The Yoke of Gold	45	64
Heritage of Hate	90	85
Thrown to the Lions	60	20
Huntress of Men	49	55
The Youth of Fortune	69	63	1
What Love Can Do	50	50
Half a Rogue	78	60
Sons of Satan	60	40
Two Men of Sandy Bar	72	68
Folly of Desire	20	40
Brigadier Gerard	50	40
Romance of Billy Goat Hill	75	55
The Target	76	46
Whirlpool of Destiny	62	45
Narrow Path	82	60

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
Drugged Waters	57	52
If My Country Should Call	58	62
Black Friday	60	61
The Place Beyond the Winds	66	53
The Isle of Life	50	42
Kinkaid—Gambler	80	85
The Mainspring	71	67
Morals of Hilda	80	80
Mixed Blood	70	55
The Bronze Bride	60	75
The Child of Mystery	45	15
Polly Put the Kettle On	45	57
Fighting for Love	69	65
The Double Room Mystery	55	35
Heart Strings	70	60
Love Aflame	78	80
The Terror	70	60
The Devil's Bondwoman	40	25
Barriers of Society	40	20
Me and Me Pal	85	70
Mister Dolan of New York	65	70
The Girl and the Crisis	73	73
The Scarlet Crystal	60	78
The Girl Who Lost	50	70
The Gates of Doom	60	70
The Birth of Patriotism	65	70
The Hero of the Hour	55	70

GREATER VITAGRAPH

429 Vitagraph	68.1	66.2	74

Battle Cry of Peace	95	80	4
The Juggernaut	73	73	2
Island of Regeneration	85	81	4
Sporting Duchess	40	30
Sins of the Mothers	87	87	1
Crooky	70	69	1
Playing Dead	75	75
Dust of Egypt	67	66	2
The Rights of Men	74	85
Turn of the Road	82	78
The Cave Man	74	60
Heights of Hazard	75	44
Nation's Peril	86	76
The Man's Making	66	78
Price of Folly	95	95	1
The Great Divide	80	71	2
Souls in Bondage	100	80	1
Thou Art the Man	72	57
Green Stockings	87	88	2
Milady's Slipper	90	93
Island of Surprise	87	82
Gods of Fate	62	62
What Happened to Father?	60	78
The Night Out	81	75	1
The Crown Prince's Double	75	60
The Writing on the Wall	70	40
Kennedy Square	80	66	1
For a Woman's Fair Name	80	85
Hunted Woman	74	54	1
Hun of Submarine D-2	74	71
Dollars and the Woman	79	60
Supreme Temptation	60	55
Two-Edged Sword	76	53
Vital Question	80	55
Flames of Johannis	40	40
Salvation Joan	78	59
God's Country and Woman	81	85	4
Love's Toll	60	55
The Law Decides	80	70	4
The Ne'er Do Well	94	94	7
Ordeal of Elizabeth	58	50
The Suspect	80	76	2
Lights of New York	70	78
The Destroyers	60	57	1
Redemption of Dave Darcey	90	84
Man Behind the Curtain	85	76
The Shop Girl	78	70	1
The Conflict	67	47
Fathers of Men	71	67
The Tarantula	82	72	3
The Daring of Diana	61	75
Hesper of the Mountains	57	61
The Light at Dusk	85	72	4
The Alibi	69	69
The Dawn of Freedom	0	50
Footlights of Fate	68	80
The Combat	82	84	1
The Kid	60	57
Phantom Fortunes	42	41
His Wife's Good Name	64	76

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
Through the Wall	78	63	1
The Chattel	72	83	3
Prince in a Pawnshop	84	67	1
The Blue Envelope Mystery	55	59
Firm of Girdlestone	35	15
The Last Man	82	81	1
The Devil's Prize	49	62
The Price of Fame	40	46
Dollar and the Law	52	73
An Enemy to the King	61	67	2
Rose of the South	73	62
Whom the Gods Destroy	59	73	3
Ninety and Nine	76	70	1
Indiscretion	53	61	1
The Man of Mystery	69	64	1
My Official Wife	90	82	4
The Glory of Yolanda	71	72	3
The Enemy	80	70	1
The Girl Phillipa	68	76	2
The Courage of Silence	70	71	2
Money Magic	57	66
Blind Justice	63	60
Arsene Lupin	67	63
Kitty Mackay	57	58	1
Intrigue	47	54
Aladdin From Broadway	62	68	1
The Money Mill	51	49
Her Right to Live	49	55
Babette	70	70
The More Excellent Way	67	68	1
Apartment 29	55	60	1
Sally in a Hurry	68	68
The Cowardly Way	78	60
Her Secret	47	48
The Hawk	63	73
Captain of Grey Horse Troop	63	63
The Sixteenth Wife	33	55
Clover's Rebellion	90	90
The Soul Master	58	58
The Magnificent Meddler	40	40

KEYS

120 K. E. S. E.	70.1	65.8	23

The Bank	90	90	1
The Woman	60	75
Work	75	75
Thou Shalt Not Covet	78	55
Vultures of Society	80	60
Between Savages and Tigers	90	100
Quo Vadis	60	40
The Spendthrift	80	60
Officer 666	25	40
When Love is King	20	25
The Danger Signal	80	60
The Magic Skin	85	75
Woman Next Door	60	90
The Havoc	5	20
The Sentimental Lady	73	60
The Scarlet Road	70	55
The Destroying Angel	93	85
Money Masters	90	60
Commuters	85	80
Musty Suffer	80	90
Devil's Prayer Book	50	60
Children of Evil	70	65
Green Cloak	70	60
The Spoilers	95	91	1
Graustark	85	90	4
The Slim Princess	77	84	1
The Rosary	80	55	1
A Texas Steer	72	65
House of Thousand Candles	40	30
The Raven	87	20
The Alster Case	75	60
Daughter of the City	60	70
Misleading Lady	73	50	1
Cycle of Fate	62	75
Carmen (Chaplin)	50	82	3
The Little Shepherd of Bargain Row	75	63
Sherlock Holmes	75	50
Into the Primitive	52	60
That Sort	70	45	1
Vallants of Virginia	85	75
The Prince Chap	51	53
The Return of Eve	72	71	2
Country God Forgot	75	67
Chaplin Revue	63	79
The Innocence of Ruth	60	81
At Piney Ridge	60	60

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
PARAMOUNT SPEC.
2 The Heart of the Hills	63	60
5 Prince of Graustark	84	80	1
6 The Cossack's Whip	86	67
3 Message to Garcia	87	73
2 The Last Sentence	55	70
4 The Truant Soul	69	76	1
3 Little Shoes	82	82
2 Adventures of Buffalo Bill	45	78
7 Skinner's Dress Suit	94	85	4
1 The Law of the North	50	90
1 Royal Pauper	10	100
4 The Heart of Texas Ryan	63	70
1 Princess of Patches	50	100
1 The Master Passion	80	100
1 Burning the Candle	80	55
2 Skinner's Bubble	90	95
2 The Danger Trail	45	60
1 The Night Workers	60	85
2 The Trufflers	40	80
1 The Saint's Adventure	60	50
1 Builders of Castles	68	70
1 The Little Lost Sister	90	96
SERIALS
12 Patria	86	82
16 Gloria's Romance	78	83
3 The Crimson Stain	61	65
4 Mysteries of Myra	87	86
2 The Yellow Menace	40	40
5 Liberty	91	82
3 Grip of Evil	73	67
3 Who's Guilty	78	78
10 The Iron Claw	93	91
3 The Diamond Runners	66	82
9 The Shielding Shadow	91	92
8 Secret of Submarine	73	79
4 Peg o' the Ring	50	59
3 Scarlet Runner	67	64
6 A Lass of the Lumberlands	62	62
1 Girl and the Game	73	45
5 The Great Secret	64	70
4 Pearl of the Army	81	85
1 The Secret Kingdom	20	0
2 The Voice on the Wire	88	85
2 The Purple Mask	73	83
1 The Railroad Raiders	50	50
2 The Neglected Wife	90	93
1 The Double Cross	80	70
ART DRAMAS
1 Whoso Taketh A Wife	90	90
2 The Lash of Destiny	60	45
3 A God of Little Children	67	63
2 Infidelity	63	65
2 The Great Secret	35	45
2 The Rainbow	68	66
1 Rosie O'Grady	82	80
1 Her Good Name	85	86

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
SELZNICK
16 The Common Law	83	90	5
7 Vera, the Medium	62	65	2
9 The Foolish Virgin	36	68	2
19 War Brides	75	65	10
8 Panthea	81	76	4
11 The Price She Paid	75	74	3
5 The Argyle Case	87	74	2
5 The Easiest Way	88	85	2
Mc CLURE
6 Pride	41	46
7 Envy	41	59
6 Passion	28	38
8 Greed	43	51
6 Sloth	20	20
6 Wrath	28	32
5 Seventh Sin	8	20
ARTCRAFT
18 Less Than the Dust	58	75	5
13 Poor Little Rich Girl	97	96	9
19 The Pride of the Clan	73	75	7
10 Broadway Jones	95	83	4
9 In Again-Out Again	90	90	4
7 Romance of the Redwoods	67	68
9 The Butcher Boy	73	75	1
4 A Reckless Romeo	81	68	1
UNIV. SPEC.
1 Scandal	80	72
1 Robinson Crusoe	65	70
9 Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea	68	86	3
10 The Dumb Girl of Portici	51	64
2 Diana the Huntress	58	75	1
3 Where Are My Children?	79	84	2
3 Jewel	85	75
1 God's Law	40	40
5 The Eagle's Wings	76	71
8 Idle Wives	57	88	4
2 Neptune's Daughter	61	60	1
IVAN
1 Her Surrender	85	70
2 Her Husband's Wife	90	95
3 The Flower of Faith	50	55
9 Faded Flower	80	74	1
SELIG SPEC.
4 The Crisis	72	56
FROHMAN
5 The Witching Hour	67	65	2
4 Jaffery	63	55
FOX SPEC.
3 A Daughter of the Gods	73	47
METRO SPEC.
13 Romeo and Juliet	79	58	3

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
B. S. MOSS
1 The Power of Evil	87	70
1 One Day	85	80
SPECIAL FEATURES
2 Geoffrey Manning	70	75
1 Garden of Knowledge	100	100	1
3 The Unwritten Law	43	78
2 The Escape	67	70	1
6 Birth of a Nation	100	100	3
2 The Salamanders	40	55
4 The Libertine	83	78	4
1 My Country First	60	60
3 Tillie's Punctured Romance	90	90	3
1 Race Suicide	67	60
1 Shanghaied	90	90	1
1 Pendleton 1916 Round-Up	100	85
2 Cabiria	45	45
2 Marvelous Maciste	85	55
5 End of the World	20	57
3 Birth of Man	62	88
1 Love's Sacrifice	60	60
3 The Iron Hand	65	46
3 Police	63	81
1 Is Any Girl Safe?	90	60
1 Salomy Jane	90	100
4 The Whirl of Life	60	84	3
4 Silver Threads Among Gold	84	92	1
2 Victory of Virtue	50	100	1
3 The Melting Pot	78	53	3
4 Ramona	73	63
1 Hiawatha	40	100	1
3 Salisbury's Wild Life in America	60	73
1 Hypocrites	60	90
1 The Only Son	40	60
1 Judge Legard	80	40
3 The Alien	98	68	1
5 The Little Girl Next Door	77	87	3
5 Alice in Wonderland	76	86	1
1 Purity	92	96	1
1 The Eyes of the World	95	100	1
1 The Immortal Flame	80	72
1 Heartaches	70	78
1 Birth of Character	20	50
1 Fire and Sword	20	60
1 America Waiting	10	15
1 Beulah	60	60
1 The Aftermath	40	40
1 Heart of Maryland	0	40
3 Doctor Neighbor	53	49
6 Ramona	71	63
2 The Eyes of the World	88	72	1
3 Beware of Strangers	57	62
1 It May be Your Daughter	95	65	1
1 The House of Bondage	75	100
1 The Barrier	100	80
6 The Fall of a Nation	76	83	1
11 Civilization	76	82	6
1 Joan the Woman	100	100
2 Womanhood	91	91	1
1 The Spoilers	100	90
2 The Woman Who Dared	90	80
1 The Black Stork	70	70
1 Intolerance	100	100	1

CRANE WILBUR

Exclusive Management

MABEL CONDON EXCHANGE

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

ERNEST STERN, Inc.

THE TITLE MAN

Specializes in

MOTION PICTURE TITLES OF THE HIGHEST GRADE

729 Seventh Ave., New York - - Phone Bryant 8973

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

WILLIAM F. ALDRICH
FEATURE PRODUCER
Screen Club, 117 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG CORP.

BERT CARBER
TECHNICAL DIRECTOR
THANHOUSER SCREEN CLUB

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

HAL CLARENDON
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL

WILLIAM DESMOND
TRIANGLE PLAYS
Culver City, Cal.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

JACK HARVEY
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
Producer of
"PARENTAGE"

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
PRODUCING FEATURES
Ivan Film Corp.

LLOYD INGRAHAM
MANAGEMENT
GRIFFITH-FINE ARTS STUDIOS

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR
Frohman Amusement Corporation

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

HARLEY KNOLES
FEATURE DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

O. A. C. LUND

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE PRODUCER
B. A. Rolfe-Metro Pictures Corporation

EUGENE NOWLAND
PRODUCING FEATURES

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITAGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

FREDERIC SULLIVAN
DIRECTOR THANHOUSER
Screen Club

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
PRODUCING FEATURES
VITAGRAPH

JAMES VINCENT
PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

JAMES YOUNG

WID'S IS READ NOT SKIMMED

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Address—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM — A MAGAZINE — IN FACT A SERVICE INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS

WID'S

Always Independent
Issued Every Thursday

VOL. III. THURSDAY, AUGUST 2, 1917. NO. 31

25 Cents a Copy
$10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

OLD MINTER SCENES PATCHED INTO ANOTHER STORY. UNFAIR TO STAR AND FANS

Mary Miles Minter, Francine Larrimore and Thomas J. Carrigan in

SOMEWHERE IN AMERICA

Rolfe—Metro

DIRECTORS	Charles Horan and William C. Dowlan
AS A WHOLE	Flashes of old story mixed in with modern melo; very unsatisfactory
STORY	Attempt to patch old picture into modern plot, which failed to register
DIRECTION	Modern scenes rather good, but gangster stuff poorly handled
PHOTOGRAPHY	Newly made scenes good; others poor
LIGHTINGS	Varied from very fine to very poor
CAMERA WORK	Varied decidedly
STARS	Miss Minter in few scenes only; Miss Larrimore and Mr. Carrigan quite satisfactory
SUPPORT	Routine movie characters
EXTERIORS	A few very good; others ordinary
INTERIORS	Newly made sets good; old ones poor
DETAIL	Story badly messed
TIME	Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

IT seems to me that any intelligent fan will be offended by this attempt on the part of Metro to make capital of a star's name through the use of a few scenes from an old production which was never fit to be released.

It will be very evident to anyone after looking this over that a few flashes have been taken from an old subject in which Mary Miles Minter appeared, and a new story written around this action in order to fill out five reels of footage. There was very little logical connection between the two stories and a great many of the scenes which were cut in had no bearing whatever on the new plot.

The scenes of Miss Minter which were used showed her as the wife of a gangster who got into trouble and was mixed up in a gang fight in which several hundred extras were used. However, Miss Minter appeared only in about a dozen scenes, most of which were out of focus, and none of which had any connection with the story which carried most of the footage.

The new story was a lot of melodrama about a willun who wanted to steal the plans to some new models for army airplanes, and we had the hero who stuck around until it was time to call in the soldiers and thwart the willun. Then we had the heroine who was about ready to run away with the willun, but finally drifted gently into the arms of our hero.

Tom Carrigan was the father of the heroine and the owner of the airplane factory. He was supposed to be Miss Minter's husband in the scenes from that film which were cut in, and Francine Larrimore, who was the heroine in the modern melo, was supposed to be Miss Minter's daughter.

Miss Larrimore was rather good. She suggests a sort of combination of Billie Burke and Mabel Normand, which you will admit ought to be good. With proper opportunity she may advance rapidly.

Mr. Carrigan was satisfactory, although he spent most of his time doing a lot of heavy thinking, occasionally looking at a locket which contained Miss Minter's photograph.

Herbert Heyes as the hero was very good, although he had little to do save stick around and wait for the finish.

The good old stuff of bringing in the soldiers to stop the theft of "the poipers" at the end will probably get more laughs than it will cheers from the average audience of wise film fans.

The Box Office Angle.

The first thing you must consider in connection with this production is whether or not you can afford to fool your fans. Certainly, Mary Miles Minter is not in enough of this picture to justify your advertising it as one in which she stars, and the title, "Rose of the Alley," has no more to do with the patched-up plot which is offered than if they had called it "The Watermelon of Broadway."

All fans who know that Miss Minter has been with American-Mutual for the past year will certainly resent this presentation of an old patched-up release under her name, and I believe that any fan anywhere will know that it is a patched-up film, whether or not they have any idea as to where Miss Minter has been working recently.

The modern mellerdrammer is acceptable—that's about all—because the story is poor. The injection of the scenes from the former Minter picture tends to mess the new story up rather than to help it, and consequently the general result is more unfavorable than favorable.

If Miss Minter has any following in your section it would seem advisable to forget this. Apparently Metro has decided to clean out all the old junk lying on the shelves, whether the exhibitors who have to receive it on contract like it or not. My advice is to go out and book something which will at least have a chance to seem intelligible.

HAROLD LOCKWOOD

Yorke--Metro

IMPOSSIBLE DEMONSTRATION OF BRUTALITY AND BESTIALITY BADLY IN NEED OF EDITING, LACKS GENUINE ENTERTAINMENT VALUE

Tyrone Power in

THE PLANTER

F. M. Manson—State Rights

DIRECTOR.....Thomas N. Heffron
AUTHOR.....Herman Whitaker
SCENARIO BY.....Harry C. Drum
CAMERAMEN.....Geo. W. Lawrence and H. M. Hawkins
AS A WHOLE.....Disgusting, tiresome exposition of brutality and bestiality
STORY.....Supposed to be true facts regarding American-owned Mexican rubber plantations; may be true but is not entertaining
DIRECTION.....Failed to give enough contrast between scenes; devoted most of footage to brutality, fights and attacks on women
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied from good to poor; general average only fair
LIGHTINGS.....Very few distinctive; generally poor
CAMERA WORK.....Generally poor
STAR.....Registered brutality in convincing manner
SUPPORT.....Lucille King rather good; others ordinary EXTERIORS.....Fitted atmosphere of story, but very few were artistic INTERIORS.....Just acceptable
DETAIL.....Much that was objectionable
TIME.....Two hours and twenty minutes (10 parts)

CONSIDERED as entertainment this is all wrong. To begin with, the producers have set out to portray a condition which may be interesting to students of conditions or those who desire to uplift the downtrodden nations of the world, but certainly this is not a fit subject to offer as entertainment, or even as propaganda, because the production of this picture will never right the wrong which the producers claim they hope to remedy.

In the program at the private showing it was stated that ". . . revolting as have been the oppressions of ages, none stand out with the ruthlessness, the brutality, the wanton cruelty of the slavery on American-owned rubber plantations of tropical Mexico. . . . Never has the world known such utter inhumanity, such unspeakable bestiality. . . . History's darkest blot lies unheeded and flourishing on our very threshold. . . ." That may all be true enough, but, nevertheless, I cannot believe that American film patrons wish to spend their money and their time, when seeking entertainment, looking at these examples of the brutality and bestiality which prevails in Mexican rubber plantations.

One of the first things which should be done with this, in case it is to be presented in any theater, would be to reduce the footage from ten reels to five or six. Fully half of the offering is taken up with tiresome and unnecessary action which only tends to make the production drag in a most annoying manner.

The greater part of the film is made up of brutal treatment of slaves, such as whipping and outright murder, with a varied assortment of attacks on women, there being much detail of the tearing of their clothes, etc.

The grand finale shows a free-for-all fight between the slaves of the plantation and the official guard, with the slaves triumphantly burning the buildings on the plantation as the hero obligingly arrives in time to rescue the heroine, who has just been attacked for the last reel and one-half by the willun and one of his roughneck henchmen.

After the willun had fought with the heroine for about 600 feet, he apparently became tired and called in the roughneck to start all over again.

There may be communities which have such perverted tastes that they would consider this sort of brutal mess good entertainment, but I have more respect for the average American community than to think that this would be enjoyed generally anywhere.

Possibly, if this were trimmed to about one-half the footage with a goodly portion of the brutality omitted, it would be a fairly good melodrama, but certainly it'll never be anything about which an intelligent audience will enthuse.

In about the fourth or fifth reel we had some interesting scenes in which a native girl did a little vamping, trying to make love to a Puritanical hero who was unaccustomed to the approaches of such females, and they pulled a little nude bathing stuff which will probably arouse the interest of some, providing it isn't cut out by the censors in their community.

I can't just exactly figure what is to become of this. In its present form it looks to me like an impossible proposition. If reduced in footage and trimmed of much of the brutality, it is a question whether there will be enough remaining to make up an interesting offering. As it stands I would certainly advise you to be very careful not to play it.

Tyrone Power was satisfactory in his characterization of the brutal planter, but none of the other members of the cast—with the exception of the vampire girl, Lucille King, who had a part which didn't figure largely in the plot—seemed to register sufficiently well to arouse much interest.

Others who appeared were Mabel Wiles, Pearl Elmore, Helen Bateman, L. Encinas, George R. Odell, James Donald, Alice Winchester, Louis Fitzroy, Lamar Johnstone, P. C. Hartigan, Grace Whitehead, Laura Winston, Lottie Kruse, H. Davenport, John Nicholson and J. N. MacDonald.

The Box Office Angle

As this stands, in ten reels, it won't do. No matter how you might prepare your fans for the brutality to be seen, they would undoubtedly come away with a bad taste and a secret grudge against you for having shown such a production. It has too much of the horrible and too little of the beautiful to offset it, and surely the propaganda which the producers seem to desire to register does not appeal sufficiently to the average American to guarantee that they will be interested in the offering as a preachment.

If this is so edited as to reduce it decidedly in footage and eliminate some of the horror, it might be that you can stir up an agitation over the conditions on Mexican plantations that might pull you some business. That depends to a great extent upon how this is exploited.

It has been conclusively demonstrated in the past few months that there are very few subjects indeed which should be put out in ten-reel length. To be sure, this is not one of them. I presume that those who have made it will soon realize that fact and get it down to a commercial basis. After this film has been reduced to, say, a short six reels, it may make an entirely different impression. If it is offered to you, be sure to inquire as to the footage.

PITIFULLY TIRESOME TREATMENT OF ONE INCIDENT. VERY FLAT.

Roy Stewart in

THE DOUBLE STANDARD

Butterfly—Universal

IRECTOR	Phillips Smalley
UTHOR	Brand Whitlock
CENARIO BY	Elliott J. Clawson
AMERAMAN	Stephen S. Norton
S A WHOLE	Tiresome development of one little incident that never got anywhere
TORY	Lacked dramatic interest and ended most abruptly
IRECTION	Failed to develop intimate characterization studies that might have given incidents impressive meaning
HOTOGRAPHY	Only fair
IGHTINGS	Some good; generally ordinary
AMERA WORK	Varied
AR	Camera-conscious "thinker"
UPPORT	Failed to impress
XTERIORS	Ordinary street scenes
NTERIORS	Acceptable, but nothing unusual
ETAIL	Too much that meant nothing
IME	Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

OF all the unsatisfying productions I have ever seen, I believe this gets the medal.

As a sort of alibi, the titles at the very first state that the author intends to state a condition, but has no intention of solving the prob-m.

The story then proceeds to deal with one incident hav-ig to do with a raid on a dance hall, in which two girls re brought in. These girls had been drinking with two oung men, who were related to the judge on the bench, ie editor of a paper and a bishop. The judge was a eformer and he insisted that the girls were no more uilty than the two men they had been with, and so iese men were brought into court. When the judge earned who these two men were he dismissed the quar-ette with a suspended sentence pending their good be-avior.

We then learned that the bishop and the judge's wife wned the property which was rented to the dance hall wner, and the editor was properly disgraced through ie newspapers publishing the story of his son's arrest. When they reached this point the story suddenly quit.

In other words, the entire five reels had been devoted to a statement of an existing condition, which surely is no news to anyone, and then, without developing any dramatic situation, any love interest or even suggesting a possible remedy, the action ceased. When most fans see this they will feel that something has been omitted. It seems as if the action stops very abruptly without ever having gotten anywhere.

Roy Stewart as the judge worked through most of the footage with a studious expression upon his face, and at times he was truly funny in his attempt to be slow and deliberate. He was decidedly camera-conscious.

None of the other characters were introduced with sufficient intimacy to register a characterization that might be remembered, and surely this production is about as near to nothing as might be figured. Had the various characters been introduced intimately at first and the cause and effect of the conditions spoken of been more clearly registered as they concerned the lives of the individuals, then this might have been interesting as a character study. As presented it was just a lot of footage that never made any sort of impression. Your audience will wait for something to happen, and be disappointed because the happening never arrives.

In the cast were Frank Brownlee, Clarissa Selwyn, Frank Elliott, Joe Girard, Hazel Page, Maxfield Stanley and Irene Aldwyn.

The Box Office Angle

Because of the fact that this never gets anywhere, I am afraid that your fans will be sadly disappointed if you try to make capital of the title and pull them in expecting to see something.

The situation as dealt with is surely not a new one to any, and the fact that the producer simply shows an incident without in any way justifying or condemning any of the characters leaves a feeling of unsatisfied desire.

If you play Universal productions regularly your fans will probably recognize the Universal bed used in the deathbed scene, and the Universal cabaret entrance used for the den of evil. Some one should set fire to these stock sets, because it is surely bad business to use them so regularly.

As a name "The Double Standard" sounds interesting, but since this offering does nothing outside of registering the fact that the women are generally brought in from a dance hall raid while the men are permitted to go free, I cannot feel that any one will consider this either entertaining or instructive.

My advice is—forget it!

CRANE WILBUR
Exclusive Management
MABEL CONDON EXCHANGE
LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

ERNEST STERN, Inc.
THE TITLE MAN
Specializes in
MOTION PICTURE TITLES
OF THE HIGHEST GRADE
29 Seventh Ave., New York - - Phone Bryant 8973

ANCIENT HOKUM POORLY DONE MISSES FIRE BADLY

Violet Mersereau in

THE LITTLE TERROR

Bluebird

DIRECTOR	Rex Ingram
AUTHOR	Rex Ingram
CAMERAMAN	Harry W. Forbes
AS A WHOLE	Labored, tiresome attempt at comedy that dragged
STORY	Ridiculous and impossible
DIRECTION	Gave much tiresome detail and missed fire, with forced attempts at comedy
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally poor
LIGHTINGS	A few good; generally poor
CAMERA WORK	Not good
STAR	Tried hard but was badly handicapped
SUPPORT	Overplayed pitifully
EXTERIORS	Ordinary
INTERIORS	Ordinary
DETAIL	Some impossible
TIME	Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

THERE is nothing more un-funny than forced attempt at comedy which misses fire.

The plot of this went back to the good old soubrette in rags with pig-for-a-pet hokum, there being the ridiculous fop suitor brought in for further attempt at laugh-getting.

Most of the early footage was devoted to the introduction of the star into the household of her wealthy grandfather, almost an entire reel being given up to getting her to bed.

The greater part of the film was built around the ordinary, time-honored hokum in which the "little terror" startled everyone, both by her own antics and by introducing her pet pig where it wasn't wanted. The cousin, who was the sissified suitor, was made such a ridiculous character that he failed to be funny. Some bright individual even worked into the titles a suggestion that [illegible] lived only on cod liver oil, for which food his mother w[illegible] sent a bill running into the thousands.

Violet Mersereau has done a few good things, but r[illegible] cently she has been badly handicapped by the produ[illegible] tions in which she has appeared. Certainly this'll r[illegible] increase her pouularity becaues it is very, very ordina[illegible] from start to finish.

The Box Office Angle

If you are catering to a patronage which cares ve[illegible] little about the quality of offerings as long as somethi[illegible] happens once in a while, it is possible that this sort [illegible] hokum comedy will get by, despite the ridiculous, forc[illegible] fun-making provided by the producer. Certainly if yo[illegible] fans are discriminating you cannot afford to play th[illegible] because they'll laugh at it—not with it—and come [illegible] with a pretty serious kick. The very title, "The Lit[illegible] Terror," will suggest to the average fan just about wh[illegible] to expect from this, because this type of production h[illegible] been done and overdone for lo these many years. My [illegible] would be to forget it and book something worth wh[illegible] waiting until you get a real film before you try to attr[illegible] business on the strength of Violet Mersereau's followi[illegible]

As a sample of how seriously the story values w[illegible] considered, we found hero, who had been drawing p[illegible] tures for ten cents apiece with a circus, suddenly c[illegible] verted into a successful cartoonist, accepting a contr[illegible] for $1,000 a week, all in one title.

You might stir up a little interest by doing what [illegible] exhibitor I know did with Ann Pennington. You mi[illegible] display some pictures of the star's lower extremiti[illegible] with the question as to whether or not the fans th[illegible] that they have the necessary qualifications for the fi[illegible] row in the chorus. This exhibitor, with the Ann P[illegible] nington photos, aroused quite a discussion over w[illegible] constitutes a really good-looking pair of limbs—I g[illegible] I should call 'em that. In this picture Misser[illegible] chases around most of the time with dresses that [illegible] very, very short. That may interest some, who [illegible] never worry about how rotten the story is.

FUNNY NUT STUFF AND INTERESTING BURLESQUE MELO

Jack Devereaux and Winifred Allen in

A SUCCESSFUL FAILURE

Eastern Triangle

DIRECTOR	Arthur Rosson
ASSISTANT DIRECTOR	Dick Rosson
SUPERVISED BY	Allan Dwan
AUTHOR	Robert Shirley
CAMERAMAN	Roy Overbaugh
AS A WHOLE	Burlesque melo built for fun, with star doing "nut" stuff that will register
STORY	Good combination of melodrama, mystery and laughs
DIRECTION	Balance nicely maintained between melo and fun
PHOTOGRAPHY	Not artistic, but satisfactory
LIGHTINGS	Acceptable
CAMERA WORK	Just good
STARS	Did much "nut" stuff, earning many laughs
SUPPORT	Very satisfactory
EXTERIORS	Some good angles
INTERIORS	Quite satisfactory
DETAIL	Much of it funny
TIME	Sixty-eight minutes (5 parts)

JACK DEVEREAUX sort of "came back" in this, [illegible] cause he certainly registers a goodly number [illegible] laughs. This boy made a very favorable imp[illegible] sion in his first Triangle film, but slumped quit[illegible] bit in the next two or three, principally due to [illegible] fact that his nut actions in the story didn't quite [illegible] over.

Here we get a happy combination of burlesque m[illegible] "bunk" mystery and funny "nut" stuff that holds [illegible] interest because of the action development, and ma[illegible] you snicker because of the truly funny stunts of De[illegible] eaux, who simply cuts loose and behaves like a nut[illegible] any and all occasions.

Somehow in this offering you seem to get a little [illegible] ter acquainted with Devereaux, and when he pulls [illegible] weird stuff it registers just as if he were a wild Ir[illegible] out in some crowd looking for merry adventure, [illegible] this one character the nut who was providing the lau[illegible]s.

The plot had to do with "the poipers," and I must [illegible] somebody credit here for having tied together rath[illegible] good bit of melodramatic action for burlesque purpo[illegible]. There was enough interest in what was going to ha[illegible] to hold the attention right well, and this was part[illegible]larly good since it was all centered around Dever[illegible] as an unsuccessful lawyer who thought that he [illegible] found some U. S. bonds, while, as a matter of fact h[illegible] ıd come into possession of the papers which both the ıief of police and the reform leader were very anxious secure again.

The "poipers" in question proved that the reform ader was a crook, and the chief of police wanted them offset the knowledge held by the reform leader that ıe chief had killed a man. The chief's daughter was ıe heroine, and so you can see that there was an in-resting combination of wild-eyed melodrama capable of oviding enough interesting action to keep things mov-ıg through several reels.

The general atmosphere was not distinctive, because ıe photography was rather muddy and there were not s many close-ups as there should have been, but I be-eve that you can safely figure on this as a burlesque comedy that will please, and surely it is decidedly bet-ter than the average program release, so far as enter-tainment value is concerned.

The Box Office Angle.

I would go after this pretty strong as a burlesque comedy full of action and fun. Play up Jack Devereaux as the nuttiest nut in pictures, and make it very clear that, while this is filled with action, it is made primarily for laughing purposes.

You might advertise along these lines: "Do you be-lieve there can be such a thing as a SUCCESSFUL FAIURE? Jack Devereaux is a nut, but he proves such a thing possible."

You might run a teaser campaign, using the line, "Are you a SUCCESSFUL FAILURE? Think it over!"

CRUDE CONVENIENT MELLER MOVIE PAINFULLY ORDINARY

Wallace Reid and Anita King in

THE SQUAW MAN'S SON

Lasky—Paramount

IRECTOR	Edward J. Le Saint
UTHOR	Edwin Milton Royle
CENARIO BY	Charles Maigne
AMERAMAN	Allen S. Davey
S A WHOLE	Crudely done, ordinary meller
TORY	Convenient incidents poorly tied together
IRECTION	Failed to make action human or convincing at any time
HOTOGRAPHY	Occasionally good; generally poor
IGHTINGS	Lacked definition; generally unsatisfactory
AMERA WORK	Not good
TARS	Gave ordinary movie characterizations
UPPORT	Camera-conscious
XTERIORS	Ordinary
NTERIORS	Ordinary
ETAIL	Convenient
IME	Fifty-seven minutes (5 parts)

THE chances are that this would never have seen the light of day except for the fact that Para-mount decided to adopt the new booking-by-stars system. If this hasn't been on the shelf, it should have been. Certainly it is crude, ordi-ary movie meller.

The story of this is blamed on to Edwin Milton Royle, uthor of "The Squaw Man," and this is supposed to be sequel to that production. It would seem that some-ne had it figured out that such a sequel would get some ıoney, and Royle, in response to an order to produce uch a sequel, sat down and wrote a lot of melodramatic unk one evening after dinner, and sent it along. Cer-ainly he could not have given this story very serious onsideration.

The general treatment was not good. The players ere camera-conscious, the sets and exteriors were not istinctive and generally the lighting failed to give suffi-ient definition to the faces of the players. The lights ere frequently placed in approximately the proper posi-ion, but there was not enough light coming from them o register the intentions of the characters.

The plot was a lot of melodramatic junk having to do vith the son of the Squaw Man leaving his wife and state in England to go back to the Indians, where he, fter many adventures, managed to thwart the willun cho wanted to steal some asphalt property from the njuns.

He was going to divorce his English wife and then liscovered that she was a morphine addict, which made im say he'd stick with her; but of course, after he came to the Indians a second time, the wife obligingly died, so that he might marry the Injun heroine.

Wally Reid was handicapped by the requirements of the story, which made it necessary for him to be a routine hero. Anita King was ordinary, as she always has been, there being very little change in her expression, no mat-ter what the emotion to be registered. Dorothy Daven-port was not looking her best, and the other characters were decidedly camera-conscious.

Others in the cast were Ernest Joy, Donald Bowles, Frank Lanning, Charles H. Geldert, Raymond Hatton, Lucien Littlefield and Mabel Van Buren.

The Box Office Angle

Of course, the fact that this is presented as a sequel to "The Squaw Man" gives it a certain amount of in-terest, but it would seem to me that it is too bad a pro-duction for you to make any noise about. The situtaions are painfully convenient and they have been crudely handled, with the result that the offering is just plain, ordinary movie meller.

If you have an intelligent clientele, I certainly should advise not playing this. Most anything you might book would be more entertaining, and I doubt very much if Anita King will pull you any business, the chances being that she would keep more people away than she would bring in.

Wallace Reid is a favorite in many sections, but I fear the combination of Mr. Reid and Anita King.

If, for any reason, you have to play this, I would con-centrate all my advertising on the fact that this is a sequel to "The Squaw Man," written by the author of that drama, and talk about the fact that Wally Reid is in it. Be careful to make no promises whatever regard-ing the production, putting it all up to the author to shoulder the blame when your patrons decide that they don't like it.

If your fans accept routine meller, it is possible that you can sneak this by because of the little bit of pres-tige which the authorship gives it.

HEART STIRRING HAND COLORED PATRIOTIC SLIDES 25c. Each

71. If It's Worth Living Under, It's Worth Fighting For.
54. Americans Must Protect America.
95. We Are With You, Mr. President, One Hundred Million Strong.
53. Your Country Needs You.
28. American Flag.
95. President Wilson & Flag.
60. Geo. Washington.
45. The Birth of the American Flag.
70. Abraham Lincoln.
76. Spirit of '76—Reflects in 1917.
27. If It's Good Enough to Live Under, It's Worth Fighting for.
87. Pledge Allegiance.
68. Star Spangled Banner.
42. My Country 'Tis of Thee (Flag).

EXCELSIOR ILLUSTRATING CO., 219 Sixth Ave. New York City

CONVENIENT, MECHANICAL MOVIE POOR STAR POORLY HANDLED

Margaret Illington in

THE INNER SHRINE

Lasky—Paramount

DIRECTOR ..... Frank Reicher
AUTHOR ..... Basil King
SCENARIO ..... Beatrice De Mille and Leighton Osmun
CAMERAMAN ..... Dent Gilbert
AS A WHOLE ..... Ordinary movie will not appeal
STORY ..... Convenient melodrama that never convinced
DIRECTION ..... Gave rather mechanical action, with very bad lighting at times and unsatisfactory result as whole
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Occasionally good; generally poor
LIGHTINGS ..... Very bad on faces
CAMERA WORK ..... Not good
STAR ..... Screened badly; failed utterly to register
SUPPORT ..... Badly handicapped
EXTERIORS ..... A few very good; others ordinary
INTERIORS ..... Acceptable
DETAIL ..... Painfully convenient
TIME ..... Fifty-four minutes (5 parts)

FOLLOWING the other Illington picture, which failed to get over, I certainly cannot see where this one has a chance. The plot is an ordinary series of convenient incidents with things happening when and where needed, in a way that fails utterly to convince. People "just happen" to go where they will be needed in the plot, and the way in which they are pulled together on various occasions is enough to jar most any fan.

Margaret Illington doesn't register before the camera and was made up very badly in some scenes, while in others she was lighted so that her face was a glare of white.

Hobart Bosworth and Elliott Dexter were wasted because of the handicaps of the story, star and direction, Mr. Bosworth being shown in several flashes sprinting through two or three reels doing nothing except stalling around in a South American jungle and waiting for Mr. Dexter to conveniently go to South America, rescue him and take him home to the woman they both love.

From start to finish this was only a mechanical movie. It may get by with your audiences if they're particularly good natured, but certainly it isn't worthy of consideration if you can possibly get anything worth while.

The Box Office Angle.

Margaret Illington means nothing in the young line of most film fans, and because of that and the fact that her first film was a flivver, I would think that you should forget this and dig up something that is worth while.

The production isn't good because the star screens badly and has been poorly handled and the story never registers. "The Inner Shrine" doesn't mean anything to the average fan, so that I can see no particular box office value in this any way you could figure.

If you have to play this stuff in order to fill in, I would slide it by with the soft pedal. To my mind, you are endangering the prestige of your theatre and inviting trouble in the way of lost patronage. Soon they will seek out a live house where they play real pictures if you continue to offer such ordinary routine junk as this.

WANDERING MOVIE THAT FAILED TO GET ANYWHERE

Antonio Moreno and Mary Anderson in

BY RIGHT OF POSSESSION

Vitagraph

DIRECTOR ..... William Wolbert
AUTHOR ..... Alvah Milton Kerr
CAMERAMAN ..... Reginald E. Lyons
AS A WHOLE ..... Very poor movie meller crudely handled
STORY ..... Would have been poor half-reel; wandered badly
DIRECTION ..... Failed to make action or atmosphere convince PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Ordinary; occasionally good; generally poor
LIGHTINGS ..... A few very good; generally poor
CAMERA WORK ..... Not good
STARS ..... Badly handicapped by situations and direction
SUPPORT ..... Ordinary; willun was awful
EXTERIORS ..... A few good; generally ordinary
INTERIORS ..... Poor
DETAIL ..... Too much of no consequence
TIME ..... Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

TONY MORENO and Mary Anderson are two likeable young folks, but when we find them in a Western melo that wanders through much footage without ever getting anywhere it is impossible for them to save the day.

Never at any time did the story of this arouse any real interest, and much footage was devoted to scenes which in no way advanced the plot. We had footage of bucking horses, rope tricks, etc., with an incident supposed to register the blowing up of a dam and the stampeding of some cattle, which was so poorly handled that it became ludicrous.

This certainly must have been a production which Vitagraph has had on the shelf, or else they are lowering their standards of quality.

The entire plot of this (if it can be called a plot) has to do with Miss Anderson's arrival in the West to take charge of some mining properties and her immediate assertion of executive ability, resulting in stopping a young riot.

Much footage was then devoted to the gradual development of a love interest between Tony Moreno, the sheriff, and Miss Anderson, with the women of the community finally persuading Miss Anderson to run the sheriff against her sweetheart.

She was elected, and then the willun, who had been standing around twirling his moustache for much footage, blew up the dam. Then we had the cattle stampede, and they lived happily ever after.

Unless I am misjudging the audiences of the average community, I believe they will consider this funny. If you can find anything that either thrills or convinces, forget this.

Miss Anderson rides horseback right well, and Tony Moreno is always pleasing, but the parts which they were called upon to portray in this were so impossible that it would be an injustice to them to try to make your fans believe that this is a good picture.

Otto Lederer and Leon Kent were in the supporting cast.

There were many titles which were truly funny because of the highbrow language placed in the mouths of the roughneck Western characters. One cowpuncher remarked that he was "steeped in gloom." Many other statements were made which will probably get a laugh when flashed on the screen. Unfortunately, those responsible for such titles didn't figure that they would be funny.

The Box Office Angle

If Mr. Moreno and Miss Anderson have any following in your section and you expect to show them in films in the future, I certainly would pass this one by. It drags and drags through much footage, with the final scenes lacking the necessary punch to create any real interest.

Miss Anderson rides horseback rather well, but the plot is so lacking in worth-while incident that your fans will probably become very tired of seeing the two stars floating through scene after scene with nothing to do.

If for any reason you feel that you can afford to play this sort of junk, I'd go after it more as a comedy than as a drama. You might advertise along these lines. "What would you do if your suffragist neighbors insisted on your running for sheriff and your sweetheart was the opposition . . .

You might say—"Do you believe that a woman could stop a riot in Colorado? See Mary Anderson in 'By Right of Possession.'"

ELABORATE SETS AND ARTISTIC SHOTS MAKE THIS INTERESTING

Robert Warwick in

THE MAD LOVER

Harry Rapf Production—Pathe

DIRECTOR	Leonce Perret
AUTHOR	Leonce Perret
CAMERAMAN	Lucien Andriot
AS A WHOLE	Distinctive atmosphere, sets and exteriors make this impressive
STORY	Holds interest right well, with twisted end
DIRECTION	By distinctive atmosphere made action impressive; had occasional bad grouping and permitted some overplaying
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally excellent; some particularly artistic shots
LIGHTINGS	Many good silhouette bits; generally excellent
CAMERA WORK	Excellent
STAR	Impressive; pleasing personality
SUPPORT	Generally very good, although some overplayed
EXTERIORS	Generally artistic; a few very beautiful
INTERIORS	Decidedly distinctive; generally excellent
DETAIL	Good
TIME	Sixty-six minutes (5 parts)

WHILE the story of this is for the most part a light romance, the interest is held rather well by the personalities of Mr. Warwick and Elaine Hammerstein, and the producer has made the entire production impressive by distinctive sets and artistic exteriors.

In one part of the story the action became quite dramatic—even tragic—but this was nicely turned at the finish by the surprise ending. For the most part the story is devoted to a romance between Mr. Warwick and Miss Hammerstein, culminating in their marriage, with the main portion of the story devoted to their happy married life being interrupted by a visit from many friends and relatives of the wife.

An amateur entertainment was planned, and "Othello" was to be given. Mr. Warwick, under protest, was chosen for the part of Othello, since he had given evidence of being jealous of the attention paid his wife by one of the guests.

We then saw the performance, and Mr. Warwick was seen to choke his wife to death when he was supposed to only make believe. This was followed by his suicide.

When the story reached this point we learned that he had been dreaming, and we came back to the well-known happy finale, with the amateur theatricals abandoned.

The actual story incidents and the handling of them were hardly enough to make this stand out as an exceptional feature, but certainly Producer Perret must be given credit for having provided an artistic atmosphere. Almost any fan will enjoy this because of the sets and the artistic exteriors.

Mr. Warwick was decidedly at home in the part of the dignified husband with his jealous inclinations, and Miss Hammertsein was quite pleasing as the happy young wife, she being quite beautiful in some lightings.

Upon several occasions the director had a number of people very badly grouped, and frequently he permitted the characters to play the camera or to overplay. On the whole, however, the cast was satisfactory.

Among those who appeared were Valentine Petit, Ed Kimball, George Flanteau and Frank McGlynn.

The Box Office Angle

You should be able to get money with this, because the title, "Robert Warwick in 'The Mad Lover,'" should suggest many wild and interesting things to all the young ladies who like to see him as a hero. It isn't a tremendous film, but it will please, because it has been artistically handled. The story holds the interest fairly well, and the surprise finish is well enough covered up so that the tragedy will seem rather real.

I would concentrate all of my advertising upon two points—the name of the star and the picture—without any explanation of the character of the story—and the fact that the production has been made by Leonce Perret, one of the most famous of the French directors.

If you can't get business on those two points, then the business isn't to be had. Surely it will be better to concentrate on those facts rather than to explain the story, which might result in someone deciding that they don't care for the film.

VERY SLOW UNINTERESTING STORY THAT NEVER ARRIVED

Susan Grandaise in

WHEN TRUE LOVE DAWNS

French Production—World Film

DIRECTOR ..... Louis Mercanton
AS A WHOLE ..... Unconvincing drama that lacked human note and intimate touch
STORY ..... Dragged sadly and never really impressed DIRECTION ..... Provided some good locations and atmospheres, but failed to make action ring true
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Occasionally excellent, but frequently poor
LIGHTINGS ..... Some very fine; others poor
CAMERA WORK ..... Varied
STAR ..... Very pretty, but had little to do
SUPPORT ..... Ordinary; didn't impress
EXTERIORS ..... Good; some quite impressive
DETAIL ..... Much too much
TIME ..... Seventy minutes (5 parts)

THIS is a French production marketed in this country by the World, which has a very bad fault. It contains too much footage which means nothing. The story is not a big one and the scores of unnecessary scenes caused the action to drag so badly that it becomes very tiresome. We get good atmosphere, some excellent exterior locations and several rather impressive sets, but the French technique, which gives few close-ups and plays too many long scenes, makes it rather difficult to register the intimate touch which American fans desire.

The story was based on the well-known situation of the wife who thought she loved another, until she learned how much her husband was willing to sacrifice for her, this attempted sacrifice on Hubby's part finally bringing a realization of her love for him.

The plot wandered and wandered through many minor incidents without concentrating on real situations that would command attention, and as a consequence the interest in the action lagged most of the way.

Susan Grandaise is a very pretty girl and seemed to have a pleasing personality, but there was little for her to do, and so she didn't register her personality strong enough to impress particularly.

The Box Office Angle

The general atmosphere of this is such as to make it seem better than the average cheap melodrama, but I am afraid that the many unnecessary scenes and the slow progress of the story will keep this from seeming worth while to the average fan.

From where I sit, it would seem to me that this is the sort of production that can be played as a filler when you expect your fans to come in and look it over without becoming enthusiastic or throwing bricks at the screen. It isn't bad save that it is so slow; and it isn't good, because it lacks the human note.

In advertising this I would frankly state that it is a French production, and center the attention upon the fact that it features a beautiful French girl.

You might bill it along this line and possibly pull a little business: "Do you appreciate your husband? See 'When True Love Dawns.'"

ANCIENT MELO SITUATIONS MADE FAIRLY INTERESTING

Harold Lockwood in

THE HIDDEN SPRING

Yorke—Metro

DIRECTOR ..... E. Mason Hopper
AUTHOR ..... Clarence Budington Kelland
SCENARIO BY ..... Fred J. Balshofer
CAMERMAN ..... Tony Gaudio
AS A WHOLE ..... Fairly interesting because of action, although basic idea very old STORY ..... "Hero who combats boss of town" idea with customary triumph and boss' downfall
DIRECTION ..... Individual incidents well handled, but action failed to get under your shirt
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Just good; not distinctive
LIGHTINGS ..... Occasionally splendid; generally ordinary
CAMERA WORK ..... Acceptable
STAR ..... Pleasing personality
SUPPORT ..... Heroine pleasing; other types good
EXTERIORS ..... Satisfactory; not exceptional
INTERIORS ..... Acceptable
DETAIL ..... Acceptable
TIME ..... Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

WHILE this may get by as a satisfactory program release it will never arouse any enthusiasm, because the story is the same old bromide of young hero who goes to small town which is run by a boss, with the result that he decides to fight the tyrant and eventually triumphs by being declared the leader of the townsfolk who were ready to revolt against the willunous ruler.

Of course there was the heroine who sat around through much footage, with titles telling how her sympathies were still with the hero. Once or twice they tried to make us believe that she didn't like hero any more, but, of course, nobody is ever fooled by such twists in what is otherwise a very obvious plot.

Harold Lockwood is a pleasing hero, and there were several good types in this, so that the production will possibly go over as satisfactory, despite the fact that it has few really dramatic moments.

Herbert Standing was the boss of the city, and it seemed that he had been right cruel, for he even went as far as to take one man's property and then have him beaten until he became an idiot. Of course, hero sheltered this character, and eventually brought him into his own, while the boss was run out of town.

The suffering victim, as is generally the case, was beaten up a second time by the willun, so that he regained his memory. I don't know why it is, but it seems to be always necessary for anyone who loses his memory through a blow on the head to get another kick in the ear so as to regain it.

Vera Sisson as the hero had little to do but sit around and have close-ups made, but she screened to splendid advantage in a number of these, and so was quite satisfactory.

Whoever wrote the titles did quite a lot towards pulling the scenes together, and certainly many bits were given added significance by titles which went on to explain what it was all about.

In the cast were Lester Cuneo, Arthur Millette, J. H. Crane and Billie West.

The Box Office Angle

If Harold Lockwood is a favorite in your community, and I understand he is rather popular most everywhere, you should be able to get this by principally because the titles pull the action together and give many of the scenes real significance.

This is not really a fault but is decidedly to be preferred to a production where everything is told in much deail, in scenes that frequently are entirely unnecessary. The average audience prefers to have a certain number of titles bridging the necessary action, with the scenes putting over the more essential de-

I should think it would be advisable to make clear the meaning of the title of this production, because, unless you do so, many may think it concerns some sort of a mineral spring hidden in the woods. The title refers to the hidden spring which, when touched, released the fighting force of our hero and made him an aggressive, battling power. Tie this explanation up with the story by some such lines as this:

"Has the HIDDEN SPRING of your personality ever been touched? Have you come to a full realization of your ability to achieve big things?

DELIGHTFUL NEW SKINNER COMEDY HUMAN AND APPEALING

Bryant Washburn in

SKINNER'S BABY

Essanay—K-E-S-E

DIRECTOR.....Harry Beaumont
AUTHOR.....Harry Beaumont
AS A WHOLE.....Delightful entertainment
STORY.....Human stuff that will appeal to everyone
DIRECTION.....Made little touches stand out by treatment and developed tempo beautifully to important moments
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Very good
LIGHTINGS.....Good straight stuff; not particularly artistic
CAMERA WORK.....Very good
STAR.....Very pleasing personality
SUPPORT.....Splendid types; registered great touches
EXTERIORS.....Fitted atmosphere perfectly
INTERIORS.....Very good
DETAIL.....Many fine little touches
TIME.....Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

IF anyone needs proof of the fact that the little human stories properly developed are the most entertaining, then they need only see this new Skinner story.

The entire five reels of this has been builded round the situation of expectant father, and yet this time-honored stuff has been made exceptionally entertaining simply because the characters are really human. They do things the way you or I might do them, and it is principally because of these little touches that the action registers so forcefully.

We have all the characters from the previous Skinner pictures, and it seems to me that this has been a very happy idea, since these characters have come to seem like old friends.

In a few places the action oversteps the bounds of hard-headed logic, but the few places where the action appears to be a bit over the boundary line are excused because of the whimsical character of Skinner. We expect him to do things different from just an ordinary mortal.

The entire plot is based upon the Skinners' realization of the fact that a baby in their home would mean additional happiness. When the glad news is given to Skinner that a youngster is on the way, he goes down to the office and gives everybody a holiday, they thinking that the baby had arrived. This is possibly overstepping, but, nevertheless, it is very funny and has been treated so humanly that it gets by and is accepted.

Skinner then makes all of his plans for what will be done for his "boy," and they build on this up to the very end, when we learn that the new arrival is a girl. Most of your wise ones will commence to figure that Skinner is to be disappointed, but the director has treated this so nicely that they will feel that, after all, the new arrival is a boy, and then on the finish the twist does come as a sort of surprise.

Full credit must be given to the producer for the intelligent use of close-ups, types and effective little bits of business. The titles were also very good.

Bryant Washburn in the past year has stepped right out into the foreground, and I believe he is one of the most popular stars in the country today. He has had good material to appear in and considerable credit is due Harry Beaumont, who directed his best productions. Mr. Washburn is a most likeable, clean-cut chap, and has a smile that is surely a close rival to that of the famous "Doug."

Hazel Daly, who is now known to everybody as "Honey," is just as pleasing in this as she has been in her other pictures, and it would seem to me that this combination should be good for many more Skinner stories.

The others in the cast were very satisfactory.

The Box Office Angle.

If you can't get money with this, then you ought to burn up your show shop. With the success and prestige of the previous Skinner pictures to work on, and the knowledge that you can afford to boom this as another one of the Skinner winners, it will be nobody's fault but your own if you fail to play to capacity.

I would concentrate on the fact that this is another delightful Skinner story and hook this up with some such lines as these:

"Have you a baby in your home? See if he can rival SKINNER'S BABY." "Do you realize how ridiculous grownups appear when they try to entertain a baby? See them at work in SKINNER'S BABY." "Have you ever made faces at a baby to get him to laugh? See how funny you looked by watching Bryant Washburn in SKINNER'S BABY."

QUICK ANNOUNCEMENTS FOR YOUR SCREEN

SLIDENE OUTFIT: all complete.....$1.00
6 bottles slide ink; 25 cover glasses; 6 special pens; 2 slide charts

Novelty Typewriter Slides.....$3.50 per 100
Handy Slide Holder and Clip FREE.

NOVELTY SLIDE CO., 115 East 23d St., New York.

EXHIBITORS CAN OBTAIN
Beynon's Orchestral Settings

For All Features On a Moderate Rental Basis. Same Scores As Used In Many New York Theatres. Write

GEORGE W. BEYNON,
505 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.

TABULATED PERCENTAGE REPORTS FROM EXHIBITORS

THE BATTING AVERAGES

These are the averages of the companies having 200 reports or more.

Reports		% P. P.	% B. O.	Repeat
660	Fox	73.1	70.8	85
531	Metro	70.8	67.0	49
1813	Triangle	70.6	65.2	354
429	Vitagraph	68.1	66.2	74
2079	Paramount	68.7	62.9	336
454	World	67.7	61.5	41
240	Bluebird	62.7	63.5	20

THE NUMBER BEFORE THE NAME OF TH FEATURE INDICATES THE NUMBER OF RE PORTS RECEIVED AND TABULATED ON THA FILM.

THE FIRST COLUMN CARRIES THE PER CENTAGE OF PLEASED PATRONS.

THE SECOND COLUMN SHOWS THE BO OFFICE PERCENTAGE.

FIGURES IN THE THIRD COLUMN INDICAT THAT MANY REPORTED THE FILM WORTH RETURN DATE.

All reports in this percentage tabulation have been marked on this scale:

EXCEPTIONAL	100%
EXCELLENT	80%
GOOD	60%
FAIR	40%
POOR	20%
BAD	0%

PARAMOUNT

Reports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
2079	Paramount	68.7	62.9	336
3	In Bishop's Carriage	85	93
2	The Lost Paradise	50	73
6	The Virginian	88	81	2
2	Such a Little Queen	78	78	1
1	Marta of the Lowlands	50	70
3	Where the Trail Divides	93	90	1
11	Wildflower	89	82	6
1	The County Chairman	80	80
1	What's His Name	75	100
4	Behind the Screen	86	83
5	Man from Mexico	90	70	2
1	The Man From Home	70	70
1	Circus Man	94	95
2	Rose of the Rancho	84	77
4	The Bargain	85	86	3
2	Ghost Breakers	60	63
6	The Crucible	94	92	2
1	False Colors	50	80
5	The Sign of the Cross	79	85
4	Cameo Kirby	61	50
6	Cinderella	86	94	3
1	The Million	70	90
4	Girl of the Golden West	78	71	2
3	The Dancing Girl	65	65
3	The Italian	77	62	1
1	No Laughing Matter	90	85
1	Morals of Marcus	60	50
5	The Goose Girl	95	95	4
2	After Five	51	50
1	Mistress Nell	85	05
2	Buckshot John	60	60
3	Her Triumph	60	74	1
3	The Warrens of Virginia	70	71	1
1	Country Boy	60	60
6	David Harem	82	78	1
1	A Gentleman of Leisure	80	70
2	The Caprices of Kitty	63	70
1	Love Route	60	60
1	Sunshine Molly	40	50
1	The Governor's Lady	97	85
3	Gretna Green	100	100	2
3	Are You a Mason?	78	84
1	Pretty Mrs. Smith	65	80
1	The Unafraid	80	75
1	When We Were 21	75	60
4	Snobs	64	52
5	Captain Courtesy	84	86	1
3	Captive	82	81
1	Niobe	75	55	1
3	Help Wanted	80	75
5	The Woman	86	59	1
5	House of Lost Court	82	54	1
4	Fanchon, The Cricket	89	92	3
3	Betty in Search of Thrill	83	87
5	Stolen Goods	78	75
2	Wild-Goose Chase	80	55	1
6	Pretty Sister Jose	84	82	1
5	Jim the Penman	84	66
6	The Dawn of a To-morrow	83	88	1
5	Arab	89	66	1
1	Clarissa	75	80
2	The Dictator	45	45
5	Wild Olive	82	69
6	Chimmy Fadden	91	75	1
3	Little Pal	79	85
4	Rugmaker's Daughter	40	58
2	The Clue	74	88
6	Kindling	81	82
1	The Running Fight	60	70
3	The Fighting Hope	77	80
5	Kilmeny	75	73
6	Seven Sisters	87	86	1
3	Puppet Crown	83	85
19	Rags	91	93	5
2	Sold	83	72
6	The Secret Orchid	79	74
5	Nearly a Lady	65	75
6	The Marriage of Kitty	76	64
1	Poor Schmaltz	63	37
8	Helene of the North	87	81	2
3	The Majesty of the Law	56	60
1	Heart of Jennifer	40	55
1	Incorrigible Dukane	75	35
4	Esmeralda	89	80	2
2	The Case of Becky	65	65
1	Out of Darkness	60	40
1	Peer Gynt	32	100
4	The Explorers	72	61
4	'Twas Ever Thus	53	65
2	Voice in the Fog	75	47
0	Fatal Card	65	59
4	Zaza	91	67	2
6	The Girl of Yesterday	89	88	3
7	White Pearl	71	75
4	Blackbirds	57	58
7	Chorus Lady	73	68
6	The Secret Sin	69	74	1
7	Yankee Girl	52	57
6	Masqueraders	56	56
11	Carmen	82	83	3
11	Still Waters	95	92	7
8	Madame Butterfly	82	89	2
7	Mummy and Humming Bird	64	56
7	Bella Donna	92	77	4
1	Armstrong's Wife	79	65
5	Chimmie Fadden Out West	85	76	2
8	A Gentleman From Indiana	85	78
9	The Prince and the Pauper	92	88	4
10	Mr. Grex from Monte Carlo	84	69	1
9	Jane	75	51
9	The Unknown	76	67	1
18	The Cheat	94	80	12
9	The Reform Candidate	80	54	1
7	The Immigrant	73	62
10	The Old Homestead	82	84	7
8	Lydia Gilmore	82	61	2
10	Temptation	82	77	2
9	The Foundling	78	76	3
5	Tongues of Men	82	58	1
7	Mice and Men	84	84	4
6	The Golden Chance	86	68	2
1	My Lady Incog	40	40
4	Ragamuffins	77	87
4	Call of Cumberlands	77	72
6	The Spider	87	68
9	Pudd'n Head Wilson	83	66
8	Tennessee's Pardner	45	50
7	Madame Le Presidente	21	48
8	Nearly King	52	53
12	Trail of Lonesome Pine	75	88
7	Fell in Love with Wife	56	52
7	Blacklist	61	53
9	Out of the Drifts	90	89
8	Diplomacy	88	56
13	Poor Little Peppina	88	85
15	To Have and To Hold	75	72
11	Ben Blair	72	82
9	For the Defense	68	66
6	The Code of Marcia Gray	70	66
8	The Lost Bridegroom	80	70
7	The Saleslady	75	66
14	Audrey	75	72
8	The Sowers	65	60
10	The Heart of Paula	72	57
11	The Race	71	62
7	The Eternal Grind	71	82
9	The Love Mast	58	56
9	Molly Make-Believe	87	83
7	The Red Widow	62	55
12	The Heart of Nora Flynn	72	60
8	A Moment Before	52	64
12	David Garrick	68	46
9	The Innocent Lie	56	51
15	Maria Rosa	79	78
12	Alien Souls	69	67
13	The Feud Girl	60	56
16	Pasquale	78	53
16	Sweet Kitty Bellairs	72	62
20	Saints and Sinners	51	49
17	Thousand-Dollar Husband	69	51
2	A Gutter Magdalene	62	54
10	Evil Thereof	44	44
15	The Making of Maddalena	63	57
23	Silks and Satins	85	88
14	Destiny's Toy	69	51
19	The Clown	79	54
20	Susie Snowflakes	69	59
16	The World's Great Snare	73	78
19	The American Beauty	61	61
22	The Dupe	64	64
22	The Smugglers	55	50
26	The Selfish Woman	72	83
29	Davy Crockett	67	82
28	The Dream Girl	60	64
28	Under Cover	79	75
27	International Marriage	55	51
27	Common Ground	64	64
35	Hulda from Holland	95	94
30	House of Golden Windows	73	64
22	A Woman in the Case	72	72
25	Little Lady Eileen	87	89
22	The Stronger Love	53	52
21	Public Opinion	82	72
20	Rolling Stones	67	62
21	The Honorable Friend	65	62
19	The Victory of Conscience	60	60
20	Each Pearl a Tear	75	72
21	The Parson of Panamint	77	69
14	The Big Sister	48	59

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
13 The Reward of Patience	66	55
14 The House of Lies	76	69	1
13 The Daughter of MacGregor	55	46
16 Ashes of Embers	84	84	6
16 The Quest of Life	59	61
14 Anton, the Terrible	46	45
16 The Lash	58	56
13 The Storm	75	65	1
19 The Intrigue	81	61	2
16 Her Father's Son	74	68	2
14 Witchcraft	55	55
14 The Kiss	74	68	2
15 The Rainbow Princess	81	72	3
14 Seventeen	84	72	2
13 Miss George Washington	94	94	10
15 The Heir to the Hoorah	82	69	5
15 The Soul of Kura San	80	71	1
12 A Son of Erin	79	73	2
10 Unprotected	53	55	1
10 The Years of the Locust	49	51
11 The Plow Girl	75	60
9 The Yellow Pawn	66	57	1
9 Nanette of the Wilds	50	57	2
7 Martyrdom of Philip Strong	53	55	1
10 The Coney Island Princess	62	63	1
10 The Road to Love	72	59	1
14 Oliver Twist	85	69	6
13 The Victoria Cross	44	54	1
15 The Traveling Salesman	76	60	3
18 The Right Direction	75	59	2
20 Snow White	95	95	12
15 Redeeming Love	61	59	1
19 The Slave Market	73	70	5
12 The Evil Eye	30	44	1
18 Great Expectations	76	56	1
16 Happiness of Three Women	74	59	1
14 Betty to the Rescue	46	48
16 A Girl Like That	55	51
15 Lost and Won	58	51
19 The Golden Fetter	50	56
18 His Sweetheart	83	58	2
17 The Wax Model	67	58
18 Each to His Kind	62	61
15 Her Own People	72	51
11 The Black Wolf	35	41
17 The American Consul	53	50	1
17 The Fortunes of Fifi	64	77	2
19 On Record	63	57	2
15 Winning of Sally Temple	40	48
16 Those Without Sin	54	52	1
14 Castles for Two	53	50	1
13 Out of the Wreck	60	54
12 Sapho	75	83	3
10 Prison Without Walls	52	51
11 The Dummy	70	54
8 The Spirit of Romance	62	52
7 As Men Love	73	51
9 The Bottle Imp	76	67	2
6 The Bond Between	52	37
7 A School for Husband	48	46	1
6 The Lonesome Chap	47	44
8 Sleeping Fires	59	61	1
7 The Tides of Barnegat	46	40
7 The Cost of Hatred	40	36
9 The Valentine Girl	72	75
1 Unconquered	10	15
5 The Girl at Home	45	39
7 Heart's Desire	21	34
6 Sacrifice	28	43
5 The Primrose Ring	30	38
7 The Silent Partner	30	34
4 Marcellini Millions	39	25
4 The Highway of Hope	26	26
4 Her Better Self	59	48
4 The Undying Flame	26	40
2 Freckles	68	55

TRIANGLE

1813 Triangle	70.6	65.2	354
10 The Iron Strain	81	66	2
9 The Lamb	84	75	3
9 Old Heidelberg	72	63	1
11 The Coward	84	67	1
9 Martyrs of the Alamo	67	57	2
14 The Disciple	85	76	2
7 Matrimony	81	74	2
5 Sable Lorcha	64	53
8 The Golden Claw	61	72
9 Double Trouble	64	64	2
7 Aloha Oe	62	65	1
5 Lily and Rose	61	53
7 Jordan is a Hard Road	58	54
6 Winged Idol	53	52
8 Penitents	28	32
11 The Edge of the Abyss	67	61
8 Submarine Pirate	85	78	1
5 Cross Currents	48	45
11 Between Men	72	70	1
14 Let Katy Do It	87	66	6
5 The Corner	56	47
5 The Missing Link	55	43	1
3 Beckoning Flame	65	48
9 The Wood Nymph	54	50	1
8 The Conqueror	71	70
9 Price of Power	55	51
10 The Green Swamp	80	78	1
12 Acquitted	69	51
6 D'Artagnan	59	54
18 His Picture in the Papers	90	75	5
13 Honor's Altar	77	67	2
14 Betty of Greystone	77	65	2
23 Peggy	94	91	15
7 Don Quixote	57	56
9 The Last Act	79	78	1
11 Daphne and the Pirate	71	57	1
18 Hell's Hinges	93	89	11
17 The Flying Torpedo	88	80	8
14 Bullets and Brown Eyes	85	75	3
14 Martha's Vindication	79	72	2
13 Moral Fabric	75	62	1
15 Hoodoo Ann	68	65	1
15 The Raiders	79	70
14 The Habit of Happiness	92	85	5
8 Waifs	70	59	1
8 Little Meena's Romance	64	60	1
17 The Aryan	59	80	6
10 Sold for Marriage	71	72	1
17 Stepping Stones	85	75	2
10 Sunshine Dad	36	46
9 Civilization's Child	68	64	1
14 Children In the House	80	66	2
11 The Beggar of Cawnpore	61	49
19 The Good-Bad Man	90	92	4
12 The No-Good Guy	74	60	3
16 Susan Rocks the Boat	71	64
20 Not My Sister	79	77	4
18 Child of Paris Streets	76	64
22 The Primal Lure	82	76	7
8 Mr. Goode, the Samaritan	53	53
20 The Market of Vain Desire	79	64	5
22 Going Straight	77	78	3
29 The Bugle Call	93	79	9
26 Reggie Mixes In	93	80	11
16 The Sorrows of Love	66	69	1
21 An Innocent Magdalene	71	71	2
18 The Dividend	70	68	1
21 The Wild Girl of Sierras	45	53
25 An Apostle of Vengeance	88	83	4
18 Casey at the Bat	44	48
28 The Phantom	83	72	7
30 Flirting With Fate	87	86	11
31 The Deserter	85	69	11
26 The Little School Ma'am	74	67	2
26 The Eye of the Night	74	58	5
18 Stranded	61	51
27 The Captive God	65	70	2
23 The Halfbreed	72	74	2
22 The Payment	81	70	3
18 The Marriage of Molly O	48	47
23 Honor Thy Name	87	73	4
22 The Devil's Needle	64	64	1
29 Shell 43	87	69	6
26 Hell-to-Pay Austin	83	66	6
21 Lieutenant Danny, U. S. A.	79	69
16 Pillars of Society	59	56	1
22 Home	91	80	9
16 Gretchen the Greenhorn	64	62	2
21 The Patriot	79	80	6
23 The Social Secretary	80	74	4
17 The Thoroughbred	82	72	1
11 The Little Liar	69	57
19 The Wolf Woman	86	89	6
15 The Dawnmaker	59	78	3
19 Diane of the Follies	70	72	2
26 Manhattan Madness	94	92	12
21 Plain Jane	88	77	5
19 Old Folks at Home	84	66	2
16 The Jungle Child	62	63	1
15 The Rummy	67	54	1
21 The Return of Draw Egan	88	86	7
20 The Vagabond Prince	75	70	3
18 Somewhere in France	77	69	1
17 A Corner in Colleens	88	80	6
12 A Sister of Six	69	64	2
21 Fifty-Fifty	89	83	6
4 War's Women	61	48
12 Atta Boy's Last Race	54	55
15 American Aristocracy	92	89	8
10 The Microscope Mystery	50	43
13 The Honorable Algy	78	68	3
14 Jim Grimsby's Boy	68	62	2
14 The Devil's Double	92	91	7
11 The Children Pay	73	63	3
13 Children of the Feud	56	53	1
8 The Criminal	49	45
9 The Gamble in Souls	72	68	3
15 The Wharf Rat	54	55
18 The Matrimaniac	93	95	9
18 The Sin Ye Do	93	85	10
13 Heiress of Coffee Dan's	60	53	2
10 Three of Many	62	53
9 Houee Built Upon Sand	75	67	3
8 Nina the Flower Girl	51	52
10 Female of the Species	75	74	2
16 Truthful Tulliver	97	93	9
12 The Weaker Sex	88	83	4
7 The Little Yank	40	52	1
10 The Bride of Hate	78	74	4
11 The Iced Bullet	62	53
14 The Americano	99	97	11
10 Chicken Casey	75	56	1
13 Jim Bludso	64	42	1
14 The Crab	83	70	5
10 Girl of the Timber Claims	41	39
16 The Gun-Fighter	76	85	10
13 The Bad Boy	71	54	2
10 Princess of the Dark	40	44
6 Stage Struck	41	38
11 Last of the Ingrams	47	44
8 Blood Will Tell	66	63
4 Love Sublime	54	45
6 The Little Brother	48	36	2
14 Back of the Man	90	81	5
10 Betsy's Burglar	59	54
12 The Square Deal Man	95	94	6
9 The Dark Road	64	58	1
5 A Daughter of the Poor	57	55
7 A Woman's Awakening	65	52
8 Her Father's Keeper	52	48
7 Her Official Fathers	50	46
7 Old-Fashioned Young Man	44	46
6 Sweetheart of the Doomed	79	71	3
7 Paddy O'Hara	64	56	1
8 The Desert Man	89	91	1
7 Cheerful Givers	42	36
7 The Pinch Hitter	97	71	1
4 Hands Up!	28	25
6 The Snarl	53	62
2 Might and the Man	13	30
5 Happiness	76	51
4 The Man Who Made Good	45	39
3 Wild Winship's Wife	70	62
4 Souls Triumphant	35	30
4 The Millionaire Vagrant	81	72
3 Wolf Lowry	93	95
1 The Girl, Glory	80	60

WORLD

454 World	67.7	61.5	41
4 Hearts Afire	70	78
1 Daughter of the Sea	60	50
1 The Warning	55	48
4 The Little Dutch Girl	80	60
1 The Price of Her Silence	80	60
2 The Master of the House	65	55
1 The Dragon	60	30
1 The Price	80	65
1 Love's Cross Roads	55	50
1 Better Woman	75	55
1 By Whose Hand	60	55
1 Her Great Hour	60	40
1 When it Strikes Home	60	65
2 Circus Romance	65	55
2 Old Dutch	75	30
2 Ballet Girl	80	60
3 Marrying Money	70	65
1 Wishing Ring	60	60
2 The Dollar Mark	55	42
1 Gentleman from Mississippi	60	40
1 As Ye Sow	100	45
1 Stolen Voice	60	30

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
1 Face in the Moonlight	80	60
1 Women and Wine	80	40
2 Blue Grass	75	68
1 Fruits of Desire	40	50
1 Alias Jimmy Valentine	80	60
6 Trilby	81	69	1
1 Idols	40	40
2 Master Hand	86	80
3 Devil's Toy	57	73
3 Salvation Nell	60	47
3 Family Cupboard	50	57	1
4 Heart of Blue Ridge	84	73	1
1 Butterfly on Wheel	80	70
3 Hearts of Men	80	52
1 Body and Soul	40	45
2 The Ransom	65	43
4 The Labyrinth	66	65
3 Should a Wife Forgive?	90	90
2 The Senator	83	60
1 Hearts in Exile	90	90
1 His Wife's Good Name	25	20
1 The Chain Invisible	90	5
1 The Imposter	80	75
1 Sunday	95	30
1 As In a Looking Glass	60	40
1 Over Night	70	70
3 Sins of Society	76	65
7 Camille	86	78	3
3 The Rack	89	69
1 Fine Feathers	70	40
1 The Clarion	60	75
3 The Woman in 47	74	80
5 The Yellow Passport	82	80	2
3 The Price of Happiness	58	50
2 A Woman's Power	45	50
1 Cowardly Way	60	60
2 Passersby	73	55
3 Man and His Angel	62	45
4 The Supreme Sacrifice	78	69
2 The Struggle	60	60
3 The Hand of Peril	75	67
5 Then I'll Come Back To You	76	66	1
4 The Reapers	75	65
2 The Shadow of Doubt	73	65
3 Social Highwaymen	75	48
3 Closed Road	87	51	1
7 The Feast of Life	61	73
7 Her Maternal Right	58	74
6 Sudden Riches	76	71
2 The Twin Triangle	83	45
0 Tangled Fates	57	63
3 Fate's Boomerang	42	53
5 His Brother's Wife	83	74	1
10 Perils of Divorce	61	63
13 La vie de Boheme	47	50
2 What Happened at 22	82	80
5 Crucial Test	59	58
7 The Weakness of Man	61	68
12 Sally in Our Alley	68	68
14 Paying the Price	70	70	1
12 Miss Petticoats	59	61
14 Woman's Way	75	74	1
13 The Summer Girl	56	57
12 Rail Rider	68	60
10 Husband and Wife	75	63	2
1 Almighty Dollar	76	72	1
13 The Velvet Paw	74	69	1
8 Friday, the Thirteenth	72	70
11 Dark Silence	77	79	2
4 The Revolt	66	63
7 The Gilded Cage	75	70
6 Hidden Scar	77	67
1 The Scarlet Oath	60	62
7 Man Who Stood Still	71	63
1 The Heart of a Hero	59	49
1 Without a Soul	70	85
15 Bought and Paid For	91	91	10
10 The Madness of Helen	57	54
6 Men She Married	58	55
4 The Deep Purple	81	75
11 All Man	59	63	2
7 Broken Chains	50	43
12 The Rise of Susan	79	83	6
6 The World Against Him	52	43
9 Woman Alone	69	65	1
7 On Dangerous Ground	65	71
7 The Man Who Forgot	65	61	1
1 Marriage a la Carte	73	73	1
1 The Unpardonable Sin	40	55
3 The Bondage of Fear	65	63
8 Tillie Wakes Up	79	78	1
8 The Hungry Heart	87	83	2
7 The Square Deal	74	74	1
3 A Girl's Folly	65	75
4 The Red Woman	56	50
4 The Web of Desire	78	73	1
5 The Family Honor	66	61
6 The Dancer's Peril	80	76	1
4 The Social Leper	66	61
3 Man's Woman	68	68
4 Darkest Russia	71	75
6 Forget-Me-Not	63	69
1 The Bludgeon	87	80
2 As Man Made Her	73	73
5 The Page Mystery	55	57
2 Yankee Pluck	68	55
3 Moral Courage	62	63
4 Mothers of France	66	51
2 Maternity	85	90
1 The Crimson Dove	80	70
2 The False Friend	68	68
1 Stolen Paradise	40	65
1 Atonement	70	65
1 The Pawn of Fate	85	45

METRO

531 Metro	70.8	67.0	49
1 Her Reckoning	60	40
1 Satan Sanderson	70	70
1 Cowboy and Lady	80	55
1 Heart of a Painted Lady	85	75
1 High Road	80	80
3 Shooting of Dan McGraw	81	78
1 Middleman	90	80
1 My Best Girl	60	60
1 Right of Way	70	85
2 Second in Command	77	80
1 The Vampire	80	90
6 Soul of a Woman	93	80	1
2 Silent Voice	77	87
1 An Enemy of Society	60	40
2 Song of Wage Slave	75	70
1 Emmy of Stork's Nest	80	60
2 Final Judgment	80	85
2 Pennington's Choice	92	90
4 Woman Pays	78	52
2 One Million Dollars	78	70
3 Barbara Frietchie	82	73
5 The Yellow Streak	85	64
3 House of Tears	60	65
4 Rosemary for Remembrance	73	68
3 Black Fear	73	57
5 What'll People Say?	80	84
4 The Turmoil	70	55
8 Lure of Heart's Desire	56	56
5 Her Debt of Honor	49	50
6 A Man and His Soul	25	63	1
3 The Upstart	68	72
3 Dimples	52	58
4 Corner in Cotton	64	58
5 The Price of Malice	66	65
6 The Soul Market	83	75	1
2 Blindness of Love	80	85	1
3 Lovely Mary	67	83
1 My Madonna	40	45
6 Her Great Price	80	68	1
8 The Wall Between	78	82	1
2 The Kiss of Hate	60	74
6 Half Million Bribe	69	49
8 Playing with Fire	78	75
11 The Come-Back	75	74	1
8 Snow Birds	80	77
8 A Million a Minute	72	84	1
4 The Spell of the Yukon	79	71
6 His Great Triumph	49	43
10 The Scarlet Woman	73	84	1
10 Dorian's Divorce	74	68
2 Masked Rider	69	68
6 Flower of No Man's Land	58	75
8 The Purple Lady	82	63
10 The Eternal Question	76	83	1
11 The Quitter	69	73
15 The River of Romance	87	76	7
8 The Child of Destiny	51	57
13 The Devil at His Elbow	64	61	1
14 God's Half Acre	71	62	1
14 The Weakness of Strength	68	54
11 The Pretender	80	72	1
7 The Upheaval	57	63
7 The Light of Happiness	67	61	1
10 Mister 44	88	93	4
8 The Wheel of the Law	77	66	1
10 The Dawn of Love	60	60
7 The Iron Woman	43	57
5 Life's Shadows	66	60
13 In the Diplomatic Service	69	83	4
9 The Brand of Cowardice	65	54
13 The Gates of Eden	68	54
11 Extravagance	69	82	3
10 The Wager	78	64
1 My Madonna	80	85
8 The Sunbeam	53	51
11 Big Tremaine	74	82	5
9 The Black Butterfly	70	80	4
7 The Stolen Triumph	54	49
6 Awakening of Helena Richie	63	64
9 Pidgin Island	69	73	2
10 Vanity	62	53
11 The White Raven	86	85	4
7 Wife by Proxy	45	41
7 Threads of Fate	39	38
10 Bridges Burned	47	66
8 The End of the Tour	44	44
9 One of Many	65	59	1
7 The Secret of Eve	34	67	1
13 The Promise	82	85	2
6 The Barricade	58	57
6 Hidden Children	43	65
9 The Mortal Sin	53	58
7 The Waiting Soul	49	61	1
6 The Father's Son	67	62
4 The Power of Decision	46	51
6 A Magdalen of the Hills	49	47
5 God's Law and Man	47	46
2 The Millionaire's Double	65	58
3 The Call of Her People	57	54
1 Sowers and Reapers	75	60
1 The Beautiful Lie	40	40
1 The Duchess of Doubt	75	70

FOX

660 Fox	73.1	70.8	85
1 Girl I Left Behind Me	0	25
2 St. Elmo	52	92
4 Fool There Was	82	90	1
2 Du Rameau	90	87	1
2 Kreutzer Sonata	90	85
2 The Idler	55	65
2 Celebrated Scandal	70	70
2 Clemenceau Case	87	81	1
2 Walls of Jericho	40	35
1 Woman's Resurrection	80	45
2 Anna Kerinina	67	65
2 Life's Shop Window	85	81
2 The Nigger	100	70
4 The Gilded Fool	70	75
3 Devil's Daughter	77	94
4 Should a Mother Tell?	83	76
1 Wormwood	80	80
1 Lady Audley's Secret	90	75
1 Princess Romanoff	60	60
1 Valley of the Missing	50	40
1 Children of the Ghetto	75	40
1 Samson	50	50
1 The Thief	90	40
8 Two Orphans	84	86
2 The Song of Hate	92	82
7 Regeneration	77	72	4
5 Wonwerful Adventure	75	77
5 Sin	62	82
2 Little Gypsy	80	74
5 Soul of Broadway	83	78	1
2 The Family Stain	87	64
3 Carmen	82	83	2
3 Blindness of Devotion	56	53
4 Woman's Past	63	43
9 Broken Law	82	65	1
8 Galley Slave	76	75	1
3 Unfaithful Wife	73	61
3 Her Mother's Secret	73	57
3 A Soldier's Oath	82	70
5 Destruction	86	94	1
3 Green-Eyed Monster	53	74
3 Parisian Romance	65	61
2 Fourth Estate	80	68
6 Serpent	92	93	1
5 Ruling Passion	53	59
5 Merely Mary Ann	52	45
7 Fool's Revenge	45	49
10 Fighting Blood	74	70

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
4 The Witch	63	80
4 Marble Heart	41	60
10 Gold and the Woman	65	86	1
10 The Bondman	79	64	1
5 A Wife's Sacrifice	55	56
11 Blue Blood and Red	84	71	1
6 Slander.	80	70
10 A Modern Thelma	59	49	1
9 Man of Sorrow	63	64	1
9 Blazing Love	70	68
11 The Eternal Sapho	84	87	4
12 Sins of Men	76	61	1
14 Battle of Hearts	63	61
10 The Spider and the Fly	67	72	1
11 Hypocrisy	76	68
10 A Woman's Honor	69	71
21 East Lynne	86	86	9
15 Ambition	71	67
18 Man From Bitter Roots	82	81	2
21 Caprice of the Mountains	69	63	1
15 Tortured Heart	71	67
21 The Beast	87	100	6
26 Under Two Flags	94	92	17
19 The End of the Trail	66	79
19 Sporting Blood	62	57	1
18 Little Miss Happiness	75	68	3
19 Daredevil Kate	74	78	2
14 The Unwelcome Mother	63	66
16 Her Double Life	86	85	5
9 Where Love Leads	69	61
13 Fires of Conscience	64	70	1
12 The Straight Way	67	72
10 The Ragged Princess	79	69
14 The War Bride's Secret	71	63	3
11 Romeo and Juliet	85	85	4
8 Love and Hate	66	60
5 The Mischief Maker	66	66	1
6 Jealousy	73	83
6 The Mediator	73	72	1
5 Sins of the Parents	86	72	3
4 The Battle of Life	72	63
5 The Vixen	61	73
4 Love Thief	86	85
3 The Primitive Call	63	65
4 The Island of Desire	75	65	1
4 The Price of Silence	80	71
2 The Bitter Truth	83	80	1
8 The Darling of Paris	66	73
4 One Touch of Sin	66	76
5 The New York Peacock	82	84
1 A Child of the Wilds	80	90
3 The Scarlet Letter	80	75	1
3 The Tiger Woman	80	82	1
4 Sister Against Sister	66	63
5 A Tale of Two Cities	93	81	3
2 Melting Millions	80	65
3 The Victim	64	62
3 Love's Law	17	27
4 The Blue Streak	57	61
2 High Finance	83	65
1 American Methods	90	85
2 Her Greatest Love	75	83
1 Tangled Lives	70	65
1 Her Temptation	76	78
1 The Final Payment	20	20
1 The Silent Lie	90	90
1 The Slave	20	40

MUTUAL

153 Mutual	72.0	71.1	14
1 Buzzard's Shadow	85	80
1 Death Lock	98	85
1 On the Night Stage	75	40
1 The Mating	80	70
1 Enoch Arden	100	100
1 Girl from His Town	65	70
1 Ghosts	80	85
1 Cup of Life	85	45
1 His Wife	70	55
1 House of Scandal	90	75
1 Infatuation	80	50
3 Miracle of Life	83	81	1
1 Inner Struggle	40	20
1 Mill of Floss	75	90
2 The Painted Soul	82	55
1 End of the Road	90	100
1 Father and Son	75	75
1 The Reward	80	50
2 Bird of Prey	85	87
2 Inspiration	70	100	1
2 As a Woman Sows	80	82
1 The Decoy	50	88
1 The Drifter	75	60
1 Life's Blind Alley	50	75
1 Silas Marner	100	100	1
3 The Craving	69	67
1 Law Unto Himself	46	50
1 Heart of Tara	75	75
1 According to Law	65	52
1 Overalls	75	90
3 My Partner	72	70
3 The Bruiser	78	65	1
1 Hidden Law	100	90	1
2 Love Liar	72	82	1
1 Revelations	50	50
1 The Net	90	100	1
1 The Haunted Manor	52	58
2 Feathertop	90	90
1 Lying Lips	60	70
1 Dust	80	80
1 Other People's Money	85	68
2 Isle of Love	80	85	1
5 Whispering Smith	64	66
6 Soul Mates	69	63
2 Wasted Years	76	81
2 Far from Madding Crowd	70	67
4 Medicine Bend	74	81
4 Highest Bid	64	66	1
3 Her American Prince	70	67
5 Doorsteps	65	60	1
2 House of Mirrors	77	75
2 Wall Street Tragedy	65	80
6 Youth's Endearing Charm	77	74	1
3 Strength, Donald Mackenzie	75	72
1 Million for Mary	90	90	1
7 Judith of the Cumberlands	68	68
2 A Welsh Singer	60	53
1 Man Who Would Not Die	85	75
1 The Wolf Man	50	50
1 The Painted Lie	40	35
8 Three Pals	73	71
3 Manager of the B. & A	63	70
8 Pearl of Paradise	67	74	1
6 Dulcie's Adventure	87	84	1
1 Bluff	85	80
8 Faith	76	68
4 Miss Jackie of the Navy	86	85	1
2 A Dream or Two Ago	85	80
6 The Innocence of Lizette	85	80
3 The Butterfly Girl	72	80
1 The House of Scandal	0	10
1 The Man From Oregon	95	75
1 The Girl From Rector's	40	40
2 The Greater Woman	55	75
3 Where Love Is	52	48
6 The Gentle Intruder	77	78
1 Damaged Goods	40	100
2 Philip Holden—Waster	59	48
2 Redeemed	55	30
1 Lonesome Town	85	85
1 The Love Hermit	78	78
4 My Fighting Gentleman	60	44
1 The Torch Bearer	80	80
2 The Twinkler	92	88
2 East Is East	88	60
1 Immediate Lee	90	82	1
1 Beloved Rogues	95	90
1 The Valley of Decision	78	80
1 The Gilded Youth	80	75
3 The Painted Lie	62	74
2 Motherhood	38	55
3 Sunny Jane	62	65
2 The Devil's Assistant	60	70
2 High Play	43	53
2 The Single Code	50	53
1 The Death	20	20
2 The Wildcat	65	58
1 Whose Wife?	40	40
2 Periwinkle	70	60

MUTUAL-CHAPLIN

1 A Night in the Show	100	90	1
4 The Fireman	75	88
4 The Vagabond	55	88
5 The Floorwalker	97	100	2
8 One A. M.	63	81	1
16 The Count	88	86	8
10 The Pawnshop	73	74	2
7 Behind the Screen	89	91	5
8 The Rink	97	99	7
8 Easy Street	93	100	8
12 The Cure	93	94	7
3 The Immigrant	93	98	2

PATHE

146 Pathe	68.9	68.1	16
1 Last Volunteer	80	80
1 The Spender	80	80
3 At Bay	78	81
1 The Galloper	40	90
1 Closing Net	60	80
2 Nedra	55	45
1 Affair of Three Nations	75	80
3 The Beloved Vagabond	76	67
2 Greater Will	50	55
6 Excuse Me!	90	73	2
3 King's Game	56	62
6 Madame X	71	91	3
2 Love Trail	38	52
3 Hazel Kirk	60	55
1 Simon the Jester	60	35
6 New York	80	74	1
2 Precious Packet	67	65
4 Shrine of Happiness	78	72
6 Woman's Law	68	65
10 Big Jim Garrity	69	55	1
6 Girl with the Green Eyes	65	72
3 Matrimonial Martyr	63	73	1
7 Shadow of Her Past	34	31
4 The Fugitive	75	82
8 Little Mary Sunshine	90	78	1
1 Divorce and the Daughter	78	75
1 The World and the Woman	85	90
6 The Shine Girl	72	74
2 Fear of Poverty	65	95
2 The Test	60	48
3 Saint, Devil and Woman	44	57
8 Light That Failed	69	69	1
7 Shadows and Sunshine	94	81	3
3 Prudence the Pirate	65	78
3 Arms and the Woman	70	53	1
3 The Challenge	73	65
6 Joy and the Dragon	79	72	1
3 The Romantic Journey	79	65
4 Her New York	81	62	1
1 Her Life or His	75	70
5 Kick In	76	74
1 Sold at Auction	55	65
1 Modern Monte Cristo	70	65
1 The Hidden Valley	95	90
1 Crime and Punishment	65	65
1 Her Beloved Enemy	67	77
1 Pots and Pans Peggy	78	70
2 Twin Kiddies	85	70
2 The Image Maker	48	40
3 Told at Twilight	92	87	1
3 Mayblossom	40	85
1 The Hunting of the Hawk	60	40
1 Mary Lawson's Secret	77	78
1 Sunshine and Gold	70	80

BLUEBIRD

240 Bluebird	62.7	63.5	20
2 Jeanne Dore	27	45
2 The Secret Love	38	40
2 Hop, the Devil's Brew	40	43
7 Undine	80	87	3
1 Wrong Door	75	95
1 Grip of Jealousy	75	85
2 Rupert of Hentzau	51	60
2 Strength of the Weak	76	75
1 The Yaqui	42	58
4 The Flirt	44	60
2 Tangled Hearts	44	36
2 John Needham's Double	54	59
2 The Great Problem	78	66
4 Gaylord Waring	51	50
5 Crippled Hand	58	65	1
3 Gilded Spider	46	64
1 Elusive Isabel	48	46
3 The Measure of a Man	63	65
2 Love Never Dies	65	48
4 Son of the Immortals	64	71
3 Eye of God	64	80	1
3 Bobbie of the Ballet	67	79
3 Evil Women Do	60	62
9 Three Godfathers	68	74	1
15 Shoes	71	77	3
11 Broken Fetters	64	56	1
8 The Love Girl	63	64	1

WID'S

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
The Grasp of Greed	71	76	1
The Silent Battle	78	84
Secret of the Swamp	71	56
Love's Lariat	67	64	1
Bettina Loved a Soldier	65	72
Wanted—A Home	74	75
The Chalice of Sorrow	72	65
Little Eve Edgarton	58	61	1
The Girl of Lost Lake	65	60
The Unattainable	51	45
Saving a Family Name	81	68	1
Behind the Lines	62	65
The Social Buccaneer	72	65
Gloriana	69	70
A Stranger from Somewhere	69	67
The Price of Silence	55	50
The End of the Rainbow	63	48
The Honor of Mary Blake	58	58
The Right to be Happy	50	40
Black Orchids	75	78	1
Her Soul's Inspiration	55	39
God's Crucible	88	84	2
The Piper's Price	40	20
The Bugler of Algiers	80	69	1
The Sign of the Poppy	85	81
Mutiny	58	51
Mysterious Mrs. M.	74	59	1
The Reward of the Faithless	72	81
The Saintly Sinner	48	58
The Boy-Girl	63	70
Polly Red Head	61	74
The Gift-Girl	60	75
Susan's Gentleman	62	63
The Clock	77	65
Hell Morgan's Girl	90	88	1
The Devil's Pay Day	71	75
A Jewel In Pawn	71	69
Girl With Checkered Coat	72	70
Bringing Home Father	70	70

UNIVERSAL

Little Brother of the Rich	60	65
Business is Business	50	65
Father and the Boys	20	30
The Frame-up	40	45
Judge Not	70	70
Long Chance	85	80
Man of Shame	50	55
My Old Dutch	20	55
Nature Man	95	60
Under Southern Skies	90	75
Langdon's Legacy	66	60
Love's Pilgrimage	62	53
College Orphan	70	63
Colorado	90	100
The Campbells Are Coming	84	83	1
Money Madness	67	80

RED FEATHER

80 Red Feather	64.8	61.6	2

It Happened in Honolulu	50	50
The Madcap	70	70
Soul Enslaved	60	50
Knight of the Range	50	4
Beckoning Trail	88	71
Man From Nowhere	75	90	1
The Path of Happiness	70	50
The Sphinx	10	20
Pool of Flame	70	75
Lords of High Decision	60	40
Black Sheep of the Family	60	63
Autumn	65	57
Her Bitter Cup	72	71
The Yoke of Gold	45	64
Heritage of Hate	90	85
Thrown to the Lions	60	20
Huntress of Men	49	55
The Youth of Fortune	69	63	1
What Love Can Do	50	50
Half a Rogue	78	60
Sons of Satan	60	40
Two Men of Sandy Bar	72	68
Folly of Desire	20	40
Brigadier Gerard	50	40
Romance of Billy Goat Hill	75	55
The Target	76	46
Whirlpool of Destiny	62	85
Narrow Path	35	50

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
Drugged Waters	57	52
If My Country Should Call	58	60
Black Friday	60	62
The Place Beyond the Winds	60	55
The Isle of Life	50	43
Kinkaid—Gambler	80	85
The Mainspring	71	67
Morals of Hilda	80	80
Mixed Blood	70	55
The Bronze Bride	60	75
The Child of Mystery	45	15
Polly Put the Kettle On	45	57
Fighting for Love	69	65
The Double Room Mystery	55	35
Heart Strings	70	60
Love Aflame	78	80
The Terror	70	60
The Devil's Bondwoman	40	20
Barriers of Society	40	10
Me and Me Pal	85	70
Mister Dolan of New York	65	70
The Girl and the Crisis	73	73
The Scarlet Crystal	60	78
The Girl Who Lost	50	70
The Gates of Doom	60	70
The Birth of Patriotism	65	70
The Hero of the Hour	55	70

GREATER VITAGRAPH

429 Vitagraph	68.1	66.2	74

Battle Cry of Peace	95	80	4
The Juggernaut	73	73	2
Island of Regeneration	85	81	4
Sporting Duchess	40	30
Sins of the Mothers	87	87	1
Crooky	70	69	3
Playing Dead	75	75
Dust of Egypt	67	66	2
The Rights of Men	74	85
Turn of the Road	82	78
The Cave Man	74	60
Hights of Hazard	75	44
A Nation's Peril	86	76
The Man's Making	60	78
Price of Folly	95	95	2
The Great Divide	80	71	2
Souls in Bondage	100	80	1
Thou Art the Man	72	87
Green Stockings	87	88	2
Milady's Slipper	90	90
Island of Surprise	87	85
Gods of Fate	62	62
What Happened to Father?	60	78
The Night Out	81	75	1
The Crown Prince's Double	75	60
The Writing on the Wall	70	40
Kennedy Square	55	66	1
For a Woman's Fair Name	80	85
Hunted Woman	74	84	1
Hero of Submarine D-2	74	71
Dollars and the Woman	79	60
Supreme Temptation	60	40
Two-Edged Sword	76	53
Vital Question	50	55
Flames of Johannis	40	40
Salvation Joan	78	50
God's Country and Woman	81	85	4
Love's Toll	60	90
The Law Decides	80	70	4
The Ne'er Do Well	94	94	7
Ordeal of Elizabeth	58	50
The Suspect	80	76	2
Lights of New York	70	78
The Destroyers	65	57	1
Redemption of Dave Darcey	90	80
Man Behind the Curtain	85	76
The Shop Girl	78	79	1
The Conflict	67	47
Fathers of Men	71	67
The Tarantula	82	72	3
The Daring of Diana	61	75
Hesper of the Mountains	57	64
The Light at Dusk	85	72	4
The Alibi	69	69
The Dawn of Freedom	0	50
Footlights of Fate	60	80
The Combat	82	84	1
The Kid	60	57
Phantom Fortunes	42	62
His Wife's Good Name	64	76

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
Through the Wall	78	63	1
The Chattel	72	83	3
Prince in a Pawnshop	64	67	1
The Blue Envelope Mystery	55	59
Firm of Girdlestone	35	45
The Last Man	82	81	1
The Devil's Prize	49	62
The Price of Fame	40	46
Dollar and the Law	52	73
An Enemy to the King	61	67	2
Rose of the South	73	62
Whom the Gods Destroy	59	73
Ninety and Nine	76	70	1
Indiscretion	53	61	1
The Man of Mystery	69	64	1
My Official Wife	90	82	4
The Glory of Yolanda	71	72	3
The Enemy	80	70	1
The Girl Phillipa	68	76	2
The Courage of Silence	70	71	2
Money Magic	57	66
Blind Justice	63	60
Arsene Lupin	67	63
Kitty Mackay	57	58	1
Intrigue	47	54
Aladdin From Broadway	62	68	1
The Money Mill	51	49
Her Right to Live	49	55
Babette	70	70
The More Excellent Way	67	68	1
Apartment 29	55	60	1
Sally in a Hurry	68	68
The Cowardly Way	78	60
Her Secret	47	48
The Hawk	63	73
Captain of Grey Horse Troop	63	63
The Sixteenth Wife	33	55
Clover's Rebellion	50	90
The Soul Master	58	58
The Magnificent Meddler	40	40

KEYS

120 K. E. S. E.	70.1	65.8	23

The Bank	90	90	1
The Woman	60	75
Work	75	75
Thou Shalt Not Covet	78	55
Vultures of Society	80	60
Between Savages and Tigers	90	100
Quo Vadis	60	40
The Spendthrift	80	80
Officer 666	25	40
When Love is King	20	25
The Danger Signal	80	60
The Magic Skin	85	75
Woman Next Door	60	90
The Havoc	5	20
The Sentimental Lady	73	60
The Scarlet Road	70	55
The Destroying Angel	93	85
Money Masters	90	60
Commuters	85	60
Musty Suffer	80	90
Devil's Prayer Book	50	60
Children of Evil	70	85
Green Cloak	70	60
The Spoilers	95	91	1
Graustark	88	90	4
The Slim Princess	77	94	1
The Rosary	80	55	1
A Texas Steer	72	65
House of Thousand Candles	40	30
The Raven	87	20
The Alster Case	75	60
Daughter of the City	60	70
Misleading Lady	73	50	1
Cycle of Fate	62	75
Carmen (Chaplin)	50	93	1
The Little Shepherd of Bargain Row	75	63
Sherlock Holmes	75	50
Into the Primitive	52	60
That Sort	70	43	1
Valiants of Virginia	85	75
The Prince Chap	51	53
The Return of Eve	72	71	2
Country God Forgot	75	67
Chaplin Revue	83	79
The Innocence of Ruth	60	81
At Piney Ridge	60	60

Re-orts		% P.P.	% B.O.	Re-peat
2	The Heart of the Hills	63	60
5	Prince of Graustark	84	80	1
6	The Gossack's Whip	86	67
3	Message to Garcia	87	73
2	The Last Sentence	55	70
4	The Truant Soul	69	76	1
3	Little Shoes	82	82
2	Adventures of Buffalo Bill	45	78
7	Skinner's Dress Suit	94	85	4
1	The Law of the North	50	90
1	Royal Pauper	10	100
4	The Heart of Texas Ryan	63	70
1	Princess of Patches	50	100
1	The Master Passion	80	100
1	Burning the Candle	80	55
2	Skinner's Bubble	90	95
2	The Danger Trail	45	60
1	The Night Workers	60	85
2	The Trufflers	40	80
1	The Saint's Adventure	60	50
1	Builders of Castles	68	70
1	The Little Lost Sister	90	96

PARAMOUNT SPEC.

5	The Christian	81	78	1
5	Tess of Storm Country	88	84	2
2	The Typhoon	88	78	1
7	The Eternal City	93	96	4

SERIALS

2	Patria	86	82
6	Gloria's Romance	78	83
3	The Crimson Stain	61	65
4	Mysteries of Myra	87	84
2	The Yellow Menace	40	40
5	Liberty	91	82
3	Grip of Evil	73	67
8	Who's Guilty	78	78
0	The Iron Claw	93	92
3	The Diamond Runners	66	82
9	The Shielding Shadow	91	92
6	Secret of Submarine	73	78
4	Peg o' the Ring	50	59
3	Scarlet Runner	67	64
6	A Lass of the Lumberlands	62	62
1	Girl and the Game	73	48
5	The Great Secret	64	70
4	Pearl of the Army	81	85
1	The Secret Kingdom	20	0
2	The Voice on the Wire	88	85
2	The Purple Mask	73	83
1	The Railroad Raiders	50	50
2	The Neglected Wife	90	93
1	The Double Cross	80	70

ART DRAMAS

1	Whoso Taketh A Wife	90	90
2	The Lash of Destiny	60	45
3	A God of Little Children	67	63
2	Infidelity	63	65
2	The Great Secret	35	45
2	The Rainbow	68	66
1	Rosie O'Grady	82	80
1	Her Good Name	85	86

Re-ports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Re-peat

SELZNICK

16	The Common Law	83	90	5
7	Vera, the Medium	62	65	2
9	The Foolish Virgin	36	68	2
19	War Brides	75	65	10
8	Panthea	81	76	4
11	The Price She Paid	75	74	3
5	The Argyle Case	87	74	2
5	The Easiest Way	88	85	2

Mc CLURE

6	Pride	41	46
7	Envy	41	59
6	Passion	28	38
8	Greed	43	51
6	Sloth	20	20
6	Wrath	28	32
5	Seventh Sin	9	20

ARTCRAFT

18	Less Than the Dust	58	75	5
13	Poor Little Rich Girl	97	96	9
19	The Pride of the Clan	73	75	7
10	Broadway Jones	95	83	4
9	In Again-Out Again	90	90	4
7	Romance of the Redwoods	67	68
9	The Butcher Boy	73	75	1
4	A Reckless Romeo	81	68	1

UNIV. SPEC.

1	Scandal	80	72
1	Robinson Crusoe	65	70
9	Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea	68	86	5
10	The Dumb Girl of Portici	51	64
2	Diana the Huntress	84	75	1
8	Where Are My Children?	79	84	2
3	Jewel	85	75
1	God's Law	40	40
5	The Eagle's Wings	76	71
8	Idle Wives	57	88	4
2	Neptune's Daughter	61	60	1

IVAN

1	Her Surrender	85	70
2	Her Husband's Wife	90	95
1	The Flower of Faith	50	25
1	Faded Flower	82	74	1

SELIG SPEC.

4	The Crisis	72	56

FROHMAN

5	The Witching Hour	67	65	2
4	Jaffery	63	55

FOX SPEC.

3	A Daughter of the Gods	73	47

METRO SPEC.

13	Romeo and Juliet	79	58	3

Re-ports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Re-peat

B. S. MOSS

1	The Power of Evil	87	70
1	One Day	85	80

SPECIAL FEATURES

2	Geoffrey Manning	70	75
1	Garden of Knowledge	100	100	1
1	The Unwritten Law	43	78
2	The Escape	87	70	1
4	Birth of a Nation	100	100	5
2	The Salamanders	40	58
6	The Libertine	83	78	4
1	My Country First	60	60
3	Tillie's Punctured Romance	90	90	2
1	Race Suicide	67	60
1	Shanghaied	90	90	1
1	Pendleton 1916 Round-Up	90	86
3	Cabiria	45	45
2	Marvelous Maciste	85	88
5	End of the World	20	57
3	Birth of Man	62	80
1	Love's Sacrifice	40	40
5	The Iron Hand	65	46
3	Police	63	81
1	Is Any Girl Safe?	90	60
1	Salomy Jane	90	100
6	The Whirl of Life	69	84	1
3	Silver Threads Among Gold	84	87	1
2	Victory of Virtue	50	100	1
5	The Melting Pot	78	83	3
4	Ramona	73	48
1	Hiawatha	40	100	1
2	Salisbury's Wild Life in America	60	78
1	Hypocrites	60	90
1	The Only Son	40	48
1	Judge Legard	80	40
3	The Alien	98	98	1
5	The Little Girl Next Door	77	87	3
5	Alice in Wonderland	78	84	1
1	Purity	91	96	1
1	The Eyes of the World	95	100	1
1	The Immortal Flame	80	72
1	Heartaches	70	78
1	Birth of Character	20	50
1	Fire and Sword	20	60
1	America Waiting	10	15
1	Beulah	60	60
1	The Aftermath	48	48
1	Heart of Maryland	0	40
3	Doctor Neighbor	53	49
6	Ramona	71	63
2	The Eyes of the World	88	72	1
3	Beware of Strangers	57	62
1	It May be Your Daughter	95	65	1
1	The House of Bondage	75	100
1	The Barrier	100	80
6	The Fall of a Nation	76	83	1
11	Civilization	76	82	0
1	Joan the Woman	100	100
2	Womanhood	91	91	1
1	The Spoilers	100	90
2	The Woman Who Dared	90	80
1	The Black Stork	70	70
1	Intolerance	100	100	1

GEORGE EDWARDES-HALL

WITH

HERBERT BRENON

A BINDER

for "WIDS"

$1.50 Prepaid Everywhere

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

WILLIAM F. ALDRICH
FEATURE PRODUCER
Screen Club, 117 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG CORP.

BERT CARBER
TECHNICAL DIRECTOR
THANHOUSER SCREEN CLUB

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

HAL CLARENDON
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL

WILLIAM DESMOND
TRIANGLE PLAYS
Culver City, Cal.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

JACK HARVEY
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
Producer of
"PARENTAGE"

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
PRODUCING FEATURES
Ivan Film Corp.

LLOYD INGRAHAM
MANAGEMENT
GRIFFITH-FINE ARTS STUDIOS

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR
Frohman Amusement Corporation

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

HARLEY KNOLES
FEATURE DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

O. A. C. LUND

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE PRODUCER
B. A. Rolfe-Metro Pictures Corporation

EUGENE NOWLAND
PRODUCING FEATURES

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITAGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

FREDERIC SULLIVAN
DIRECTOR THANHOUSER
Screen Club

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
PRODUCING FEATURES
VITAGRAPH

JAMES VINCENT
PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

JAMES YOUNG

WID'S IS READ NOT SKIMMED

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Address—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM A MAGAZINE—IN FACT A SERVICE

THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM

WID'S

INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS

Always Independent Issued Every Thursday VOL. III. THURSDAY, AUGUST 9, 1917. NO. 32 25 Cents a Copy $10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

FINE CHARACTERIZATIONS MAKE CONVENIENT MELLER VERY INTERESTING

Miriam Cooper in

THE INNOCENT SINNER

Fox Film

DIRECTOR.....Raoul A. Walsh
AUTHOR.....Mary Synon
SCENARIO BY.....Raoul A. Walsh and C. B. Clapp
CAMERAMAN.....Dal Clawson
AS A WHOLE.....Excellent treatment of chessboard romantic melodrama with good twists mixed in between very convenient happenings
STORY.....Holds right well despite slow sequences, and has nice element of suspense
DIRECTION.....Developed excellent characterizations which made chessboard situations seem real
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Occasionally very artistic, but generally flat and too soft, lacking definition
LIGHTINGS.....Generally very well placed, but frequently failed to give sufficient definition and detail
CAMERA WORK.....Played more for artistic composition than for detail; used traveling camera too much
STAR.....Appealing personality; decidedly pleasing
SUPPORT.....Excellent characterizations
EXTERIORS.....Generally well chosen; good composition
INTERIORS.....Very good; kept subordinated to action and characters
DETAIL.....Many good bits, but some very convenient
TIME.....One hour and twenty-one minutes (6 parts)

WHILE this story is really very interesting and has been handled with excellent characterizations, there are times when the action is decidedly slow, and I believe the production as a whole would be much more satisfying if it were reduced in footage, even at the sacrifice of eliminating some incidents.

The plot is a sort of biography of the life of Miss Cooper, starting her in as an orphan who was ruined by a city chap who took her to town, and following her through the life in the dance halls up to the murder of her betrayer, with many happenings afterwards, before the roughneck hero finally rescued her from the cadet of the slums, who had killed her betrayer.

A cousin of the young man who had taken her to the city was played along through the story by sending him to France through the important reels, and bringing him back towards the end, so that he could be the hero ready to marry Miss Cooper after the roughneck hero had made the proper sacrifice of giving up his life to save her from the villainous little murderer who had been chasing her through many reels.

The plot went through many twists, with some of these painfully convenient, but much of this will be forgiven because of the fact that occasionally they led up to a situation which looked like it was going to be a meeting and then just slipped by it with a sort of "we fooled you!" twist.

The saving grace of the entire production was the fact that the cast was excellent and the characterizations were intimate and convincing. The director provided a proper tempo which made the dramatic scenes impressive and the action scenes snappy.

Miss Cooper was the plaintive, wronged heroine through most of the offering, and of course, as such, she was at her best, because parts of that sort fit her general appearance.

William E. Parsons as the roughneck hero did a splendid bit of work. The director reformed him a bit too quick the first scene where he met Miss Cooper, but through a greater part of the story his characterization was excellent.

Charles Clary as the cousin who stood around in the background awaiting the time for him to return from France and get into the story again was very satisfactory. He had a number of important scenes in the last reel or two and handled these with the proper poise to make them very effective.

Jane Novak as the girl secretary-friend of Miss Cooper made her part stand out by a quiet, intelligent characterization. I believe she is an exceptional prospect for things worth while. Some of her little touches were excellent.

Johnny Reese, as "The Weasel," looked the part and played it perfectly. Several of his mannerisms will register bigger than anything in the picture, and surely he will be remembered.

There were many bits that were well handled, and the general selection of types was quite commendable.

Jack Standing, as the city chap who lured Miss Cooper away, looked the part and played it quietly enough to put it over without unnecessary exaggeration.

Jennie Lee, as the grandmother, and the two kid brothers of Miss Cooper, had some good scenes.

While I think of it, I would like to know why they had two extra places set at the table in Miss Cooper's home in the early part of the story. It's a little item, but the chances are that every housewife will notice it.

As a sample of some of the little things in the way of convenience, we found the sailor roughneck hero, on shore leave, meeting The Weasel, and immediately afterwards meeting the girl. Surely this was obliging. On another occasion when The Weasel had kidnapped the girl, her newsboy friend had been perched conveniently on the housetop to examine a flower, so that he might see the getaway. He chased over to the dock and there was our sailor hero and a squad of friends waiting for the call.

It was also sweet of the authors (and quite obliging) to have the cousin of the murdered man conveniently return from France to start work in the dispensary, where the friend of Miss Cooper was employed, with the Weasel strolling in there to be attended to after his fight with the sailor, promptly followed by the sailor himself, who had located Miss Cooper.

At the finish, after a wild roughhouse similar to the one pulled in "The Honor System," in which there was much throwing of chairs, etc., we found the sailor hero and the Weasel battling in a room where the girl was prisoner, and after the sailor had taken the gun from the Weasel and covered him with it, he obligingly threw the gun to one side, so that the Weasel could pick it up and shoot him in the back, thus disposing of the sailor hero to make way for the doctor hero, who was to come in and marry the girl.

There were a number of little comedy touches that registered well, one of the best of these being a bit of a coon who was "tipped," only to lose his coin promptly shooting craps. Many of the scenes would have been more effective had more close-ups been used.

At the end it was hard to understand why the doctor hero quietly stood by and saw the sailor hero die without making any effort to save him, except that I presume that he felt that this was necessary since he knew that the scenario called for a finish with him as the bridegroom.

Rosita Marstini appeared as Madame De Coeuer.

The Box Office Angle.

I believe you can feel pretty safe about plugging this pretty strong, because the convenient angles of the story and the spots that didn't exactly register as real will be overlooked by most fans on the grounds of "picture license."

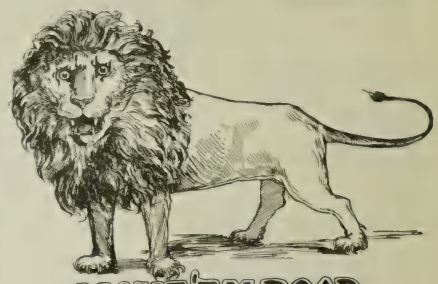
Certainly Producer Walsh has kept the action interesting throughout, and he has given us some very fine characterizations. I believe the production is a little long on footage, this being particularly so for the average theatre that plays a feature running only one hour. The offering could be trimmed to advantage in spots, and I think such editing would help it.

In billing this I would center most of my attention on the fact that it has been made by Raoul A. Walsh, who produced "The Honor System." You can also play up the fact that Miriam Cooper will be remembered from her work in Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," Mr. Walsh's "The Honor System," and many other recent successes.

I would state that this is an exceptionally interesting study of characterizations and bill it as a production which makes clear the force of circumstance which often drives an innocent girl into a false position of shame. Of course, this is old junk about the poor thing from the country who is brought to the city and then sinks to the depths, but, just the same, it is interesting as a rule, particularly when you can promise that it has been intelligently handled with interesting action and good characterizations.

You might use a line like this: "Are the girls of the dance halls to blame? See 'The Innocent Sinner.'"

ERNEST STERN, Inc.
THE TITLE MAN
Specializes in
MOTION PICTURE TITLES
OF THE HIGHEST GRADE
729 Seventh Ave., New York - - Phone Bryant 8973



That's what they will do——

Lion Comedies

Single Reelers Issued Weekly

Featuring

NATHAN DEWING

A Big, Fat, Funny Individual

Produced by

MASTERPICTURES Houston, Texas.

A Producing Firm with Brains

and

Distributed By

The A. KAY Company

Specializing in Exceptional Short Subjects

729 SEVENTH AVENUE NEW YORK CITY

IRISH COSTUME MELO THAT IS NOT WHAT YOU EXPECT

Thelma Salter in

IN SLUMBERLAND

Kay Bee—Triangle

DIRECTOR ..... Irvin Willat
AUTHOR ..... L. V. Jefferson
CAMERAMAN ..... Dwight Warren
AS A WHOLE ..... Much Irish atmosphere with dialect titles, but was messily constructed and not any too well treated
STORY ..... Painfully obvious melodrama with convenient fairy incidents DIRECTION ..... Atmosphere rather good, but costume detail incorrect; general composition artistic, but action lacked intimate touch
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... General effect frequently artistic, but often lacked definition and detail
LIGHTINGS ..... Some very fine; others poor
CAMERA WORK ..... A few good trick bits, but not enough angles and close-ups
STAR ..... Very pleasing youngster, but was not given enough opportunity
SUPPORT ..... Some excellent types; others actory
EXTERIORS ..... Generally very well handled
INTERIORS ..... General effect good, although there were some errors
DETAIL ..... Costumes incorrect and fairy stuff not intelligently developed
TIME ..... Sixty-six minutes (5 parts)

WHEN this started off I figured we were going to get a delightful, whimsical little child fairy story laid in Ireland, with Thelma Salter very much in evidence. I was sadly disappointed in finding that the first part of the offering was devoted to melodrama and as the film progressed there never was enough of the charming little kiddie.

The plot, if it can be called such, was painfully ordinary, obvious melodrama that never at any time held the interest, and while the atmosphere, viewed generally, was rather pleasing, the director failed to give enough intimate touches and a sufficient number of close-ups in his treatment to make the production get under your shirt and register a truly human appeal.

To begin with, the costumes worn by most of the Irish folk in the picture were a very sad mixture of several periods. The time of this story was supposed to be during the Boer War, but we found many of the Irish characters wearing costumes which would have been in perfect order for a story of the time of Robert Emmett.

We had the willunous landlord who wanted the heroine, and the hero who was made to believe that he had killed a man so that he would enlist, thereby leaving the heroine at the mercy of the landlord. Finally we found hero returning from the war, wealthy, just about the time the landlord was ready to close in and force the heroine to give up to him because she thought her hubby had been killed.

We had two scenes of hubby at war, one of these being rather funny, since it followed a title stating that he was "fighting" the Boers in Africa. The scene showed him standing in a vacant field with a couple of palms in the offing, dressed in the uniform of a soldier, and all the "fighting" that he did was to take off his hat and mop his brow. Later on we had another flash in which there was a suggestion of the finish of a battle where a town had been burned, and obligingly our hero found a chest containing much wealth which he swiped and took home to his folks, instead of turning it over to the authorities—as a true hero would have done. In other words, hero became a plain, ordinary looter.

There was very little fairy stuff in the first four reels, and the kids were decidedly in the background. Finally, after the story had reached the point where every one had it all figured out, they pulled about five or six hundred feet of fairy stuff registered in a dream, most of which missed fire badly because there were not enough close-ups or intimate touches.

They reached the finale after dragging through this fairy stuff, where hero came in just as the willunous landlord was attacking his wife, this proving that they thought they should make use of all of the old meller-dramatic hokum while they were at it.

As the willun left the hero's cabin (which, by the way, contained a room about four times as large as any poor Irishman's cabin ever had), he was swatted over the bean by a second willun, who was the man hero had thought he'd killed. Of course this bit of Keystone melodrama was put at the end to prove that hero had not killed the man after all, although it was entirely unnecessary, because the audience knew all the time that the man had never died.

They used a terrific number of dialect titles in this, some of which will register satisfactorily, while others will seem tiresome.

The chief objection to this as it stands is that it fails to live up to what it is expected to be. Those who go in thinking they will see some charming kid stuff will be disappointed because there is not enough of it.

Little Miss Salter has always been very pleasing, but she had little opportunity to do anything in this. Georgie Stone, who is a very clever youngster, appeared only in a few very inconsequential scenes. Some of the Irish types were very good.

As a matter of detail, it seemed that the beautiful little curls which little Thelma wore throughout the offering were not in keeping with the part of a poor Irish youngster.

Others in the cast were Laura Sears, Walter Perry, Jack Livingston and J. P. Lockney.

The Box Office Angle

Considering the fact that Thelma Salter has a very large following because she has appeared in so many good Fine Arts and Kay Bee productions, you can probably get some money with this, and it may be that your fans will accept it without criticism that is too serious.

In advertising it refer particularly to Miss Salter's work in "The Crab," where she appeared with Frank Keenan, and if you played that story I would bank on it that every fan will remember it.

It would be advisable to talk about this from the Irish angle rather than from the kiddie angle. Ask your fans if they believe in fairies and tell them that all good Irish folk do. Say they can see why Irish people do believe in fairies by enjoying the production "In Slumberland," in which Thelma Salter stars.

Don't lay too much stress on the kid stuff or emphasize the presence of Georgie Stone unduly, because the kids didn't have any too big an opportunity at any time. There was one very cute baby that played through most of the action in which Miss Salter appeared, but we had only a very few close-ups, and in half of these the youngster had a hand over its face.

QUESTIONABLE SITUATIONS VERY WELL PLAYED AND PRODUCED

Florence Reed in

TODAY

Today Feature Film Corp.—Pathe

DIRECTOR.....Ralph W. Ince
AUTHORS.....Abraham Schomer and George Broadhurst
SCENARIO BY.....Ralph W. Ince
CAMERAMAN.....Andre Barlatier
AS A WHOLE.....Rather rough subject made quite dramatic and convincing, with attempt to sweeten by dream ending
STORY.....Dissatisfied wife desiring clothes, trifles until fate makes date with her husband, causing murder; hardly fit for family consumption
DIRECTION.....Kept action interesting and centered attention upon characterization
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very good
LIGHTINGS.....Some very fine; many too uniform; generally satisfactory
CAMERA WORK.....Good; not exceptional
STAR.....Excellent characterization
SUPPORT.....Splendid types; played convincingly
EXTERIORS.....Ordinary, but satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Very good; some excellent
DETAIL.....Some bits too rough
TIME.....Seventy minutes (5 parts)

THE problem for you to consider, so far as this is concerned, is whether or not your house is one in which you can afford to play a production that is very rough (so far as concerns the story), despite the fact that it is made into a dream on the finish in an attempt to take the bad taste from the mouth.

As a play, this plot was a flat failure when it first opened in New York, but some sensational advertising managed to give it quite a run. As a play, it ended logically as a tragedy, and no excuse was offered to suggest that it wasn't the real thing.

If you have a neighborhood house with a community audience composed for the most part of family patrons, I question very much the advisability of showing this film which deals so intimately with secret dinner parties, married women who get clothes by being "nice" to other men, parties arranged in call flats, etc.

The story of this is very simple. It has to do with a wife who was dissatisfied with her husband's business progress and wanted more pretty things and more entertainment. To get them she was advised by a friend who had found the "easier way."

Eventually the husband, who was a real estate man, was made agent for an apartment where he found his wife's picture in one of the flats. Questioning the woman occupying the flat, he was informed that she was a friend, and a date was made for him to meet her at eight that evening.

Hubby returned to his house and had dinner with his wife and his mother and father, who lived with him, from which dinner the nervous wife hurried away to dress secretly for her appointment.

Hubby, however, beat her to the flat and waited anxiously. When she came in he took her behind some curtains and choked her to death.

Realizing that this proposition had very little chance of being accepted by the general public—let alone some of the censors—the producers finished off with a happy ending, showing all of this experience to have been a dream of the wife, which converted her to a better view of life. Since the incidents having to do with her falling by the wayside and the final tragedy were given in so much detail, however, the audience will be very hazy as to just when the dream started, and that finish will never be a sufficient antidote to remove the bad taste of the other scenes.

So far as characterization and drama is concerned, the offering is very good. The important situations were intelligently handled, the general atmosphere was good and some of the sets were excellent. In a number of places we found lighting that was too uniform, but, on the other hand, there were many effectively lighted scenes.

As the young wife who slipped from grace, Florence Reed gives a portrayal which, for the first time, demonstrates her real dramatic ability on the screen. There were a few places in which she was a bit too theatric, which fault has marred her previous appearances, but, on the whole, her characterization was splendid. She used the mannerism of one hand clasped back of her head a bit too frequently, and some of her gestures were too theatric, but in a majority of her scenes her work was sincere and impressive. She made the character live.

Frank Mills as the husband was excellent. He played with enough repose to stand out against the nervous activity of Miss Reed, and from first to last his characterization was genuinely pleasing.

Gus Weinberg and Alice Gale, as Mr. Mills' father and mother respectively, were great types, and they played with a nice knowledge of the value of little touches.

Producer Ralph Ince is deserving of credit for having registered a number of effective bits of business, although there was an occasional unnecessary bit of continuity which could have been omitted to advantage, making the story advance more smoothly by knitting the action more closely together.

Others in the cast were Lenore Harris, Kate Lester and Capt. Harry Lambert.

The Box Office Angle

If you have a transient downtown theatre you can probably do very well with this if you will make it plain that it is a dramatization of the sensational New York success, with Florence Reed, the star of "The Wanderer," appearing as the young wife who chose the easier way.

Unfortunately, this sort of advertising hurts the film business, and in a case like this it is only such advertising that will get you money.

There is one point that you will have to be very carefuly about if you play this. As you all know, it is customary all over the country to strip a date across the paper which you put in front of your house, with the word "Today" on it. The chances are that a very large percentage of the people who will see the ads on this film will want to come to the window and inquire, "What is the name of the picture in which Miss Florence Reed appears?" In other words, "Today" looks to them like a date, rather than a name. You must give this serious consideration, because it is a bit of psychology that must be reckoned with.

If you will handle this carefully, in case you play the picture, you may register the name in the minds of your patrons by such advertising as this: "Today is today; but Florence Reed in 'Today' doesn't come to the ——— Theatre until Friday." You will have to be careful about your advertising on account of this tricky title.

If yours is a community house of particular patrons, I believe it would be decidedly safer for you to pass this by. The chances are that your regulars would deliver an emphatic kick after seeing the picture.

If you decide to play the film, don't overlook the value of referring to the fact that Miss Reed has been the star of the tremendous production "The Wanderer," now playing New York City. Be careful, however, that you do not advertise Florence Reed, star of "The Wanderer," in "Today" at such and such a theatre, because you are liable to get a lot of people to your house expecting to see "The Wanderer" on account of the name of the film being "Today." Give that some thought.

INANE, IMPOSSIBLE WASTE OF FOOTAGE. VERY, VERY WEAK

Emmy Wehlen in

MISS ROBINSON CRUSOE

Rolfe—Metro

DIRECTOR	William Christy Cabanne
AUTHOR	William Christy Cabanne
SCENARIO BY	June Mathis
CAMERAMAN	William E. Fildew
AS A WHOLE	Much silly footage with star in forced attempts to be cute
STORY	Terrible; a lot of silly rot with no rhyme or reason
DIRECTION	Registered footage more than anything else
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally good; although nothing exceptional
LIGHTINGS	A few very good; generally ordinary
CAMERA WORK	Acceptable
STAR	Forced efforts to pout and be cute became very tiresome
SUPPORT	Ordinary
EXTERIORS	A few very pretty scenes in the Thousand Islands
INTERIORS	Good
DETAIL	Painfully convenient
TIME	Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

THIS thing may have provided a nice vacation for Director Cabanne and Miss Wehlen in the Thousand Islands, but certainly they are the only ones who will get any benefit out of it, unless it may be that Metro will profit by having this go out as a regular program release.

I have had to see a lot of silly junk in the way of stories in the past few years, but can remember nothing more inane than this. In the first three reels nothing happened except that a bonehead hero and a wealthy old man wanted to marry Miss Wehlen, and both tried to commit to memory a gushy passage from a romantic novel which she knew by heart, with the result that the boob lover "muffed" it and the old bird quoted it properly, whereupon this poor nut of a heroine promptly became engaged to the old man.

Then they moved all the principals to the Thousand Islands and pulled a lot of footage ending up with a motorboat race which would go very well in a "scenic" along with the views of the homes planted on the various islands.

Two mysterious characters were carried along through the entire plot, using up footage without ever doing anything, although they were arrested on the finish by Uncle Sam. It seemed, according to the titles, that they were trying to keep the old man from becoming a member of the Russian mission—why, we never learned, nor did they at any time do anything serious enough to justify their end, which was behind the bars.

A few laughs were earned, but even these will be a case of laughing at the ridiculous situations rather than with the comedy. One of these came when we found the boob society boy, who had been eating raw meat in order to be strong and rough, holding the heroine as a prisoner in a cabin which "just happened" to be the willun's. He told Miss Wehlen, "Sit down, or I'll knock your blonde block off!" It's quite possible that the audience will feel somewhat in sympathy with the hero at this stage in the film, so that, in a way, that feeling may account for the laugh that this gets.

The old hokum about the lover who was going to commit suicide but didn't because the water was too cold was played for all it was worth, both ways. In the first instance the boob lover attempted it, and in the second, Miss Wehlen threatened to walk back home through the water.

There was one scene of a ballroom that was quite commendable for a very good reason. It was shown with side lighting suggesting that the lights in the ballroom were out, and consequently this was rather effective. Some of the directors who've been making ballrooms of society gatherings showing a lot of two-dollar-a-day extras trying to dance, should take a leaf out of Director Cabanne's book.

Walter Miller was mis-cast as the boob lover, and seemed to realize it through most of the action. The other members of the cast were quite ordinary.

Among those who appeared were Harold Entwhistle, Mrs. Sue Balfour, Augustus Phillips, Margaret Seddon and Daniel Jarret.

The Box Office Angle.

The name of this sounds rather interesting, but there's no reason in the world for having named it this. The picture is a lot of silly junk, so I would be very careful about doing any boosting.

If, by any chance, they like Miss Wehlen in your neighborhood, some of your fans may think that she is cute in this. I fear that most of them will agree with me, however, that she missed fire about ninety-nine times out of a hundred.

If you have to play this for any reason, don't talk about the story or the plot or the quality of the film, but just say that Emmy Wehlen is the star and that the film was made in the Thousand Islands, with many very interesting scenes taken in this greatest of all summer resorts.

An attempt is made to get over the idea that some females like to be treated rough. If you want to go lightly on that angle in order to arouse interest, you might say: "What about it—do you treat your wife rough? Some women say they like it! See 'Miss Robinson Crusoe.'"

CRANE WILBUR
Exclusive Management
MABEL CONDON EXCHANGE
LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

MUCH DOMESTIC DIFFICULTY RATHER WELL PLAYED AND PRODUCED

Gerda Holmes, Arthur Ashley and Edward T. Langford in

THE IRON RING

Peerless—World

DIRECTOR.....George Archainbaud
AUTHOR.....Horace Hazelton
CAMERAMAN.....Philip Hatkin
AS A WHOLE.....Conflict of mussed-up affections well done, but came near moral border line very frequently
STORY.....Several varieties of domestic difficulty diagrammed in detail
DIRECTION.....Kept action rather interesting, gave good atmosphere and registered situations without permitting too much acting
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally artistic and soft, but lacked definition for faces
LIGHTINGS.....Quite artistic for sets, but generally not good on faces
CAMERA WORK.....Varied
STARS.....Very good characterizations
SUPPORT.....Good
EXTERIORS.....Quite satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Generally very good
DETAIL.....A little rough at times
TIME.....Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

WHILE this has to do with the mussed-up affections and domestic difficulties of three married couples, one willun and his sister—making four pairs all told—with some of the action and situations having to do with problems which the censors think should not be touched on the screen, still the general effect is rather good because the players have handled their characterizations with a quiet sincerity which resulted in making them convincing and impressive.

The most important point to be registered was that a husband's failure to give his wife his confidence in business matters tended to cause a feeling of distrust which generally led to a possible split. This was the reason one wife had for trifling, but it was not demonstrated why another wife trifled, except that she seemed to like the other boys, and the husband with a couple of children worked up to a point of eloping with the willun's sister, who was supposed to be an innocent young thing, although she didn't seem to be, without any excuse being offered for his action save that he liked sister.

These messy mix-ups have been handled rather well, but a fussy community audience may complain over so much matrimonial trifling in one film. Of course, it was the fact that the willun's sister eloped with the married man that caused the willun, who was tempting the hero's wife, to change his plans, only this reformation came after the hero had suddenly returned in that unexpected manner which has come to be accepted so faithfully by film fans who study stories.

The willun tried to convince the hero that his wife was innocent of wrongdoing, but it took the old servant, who had been an onlooker, to add the final touches to this alibi. The willun then headed off his sister who was trying to elope, and that married man went home and was forgiven. The married woman who had tempted the hero's wife to trifle found that her husband had suicided when she reached home.

The general atmosphere of this was rather artistic, so far as lightings were concerned, but in most of the scenes the lightings failed to give proper definition to the faces. Frequently the faces seemed out of focus, or the photography seemed either flat or too soft. More close-ups could have been used to advantage.

Edward T. Langford, the hero, was very pleasing, handling all of his scenes with a quiet dignity that impressed.

Gerda Holmes as the wife who almost slipped was very good.

Arthur Ashley as the willun who tempted the wife, gave the best performance he has registered in a long time. He played with greater ease, more poise and quiet dignity than he has in any part in many, many months. It was decidedly well done.

George MacQuarrie, as the bachelor business partner who caused the trouble in the first place by stating that a husband should never tell his wife anything about business, was very good.

Katherine Johnson, as the girl MacQuarrie finally "fell" for, made the small part stand out.

The titles, for the most part, were good. In many cases they helped the situations and they were, as a whole, well written.

Others who appeared were George Cowl, Victor Kennard, Richard Clarke, Alexandria Carewe, Gladys Thompson and Herbert Frank.

The Box Office Angle.

It is possible that the messy mix-up of affections in this may not have to worry you much, because it is all worked out logically on the finish, with everyone saved and happy, the error of one pointing the way to the other's reforms. In any case, you can rest assured that it is a better plot and a more intelligently produced picture than the average World has been recently. The three stars give commendable characterizations and the action is kept interesting.

"The Iron Ring," to my mind, will mean nothing in the young life of your fans. Therefore, it will be necessary to go after this with advertising which will in some way stir up some interest. It is also probable that the names of the three stars will not pull very heavily at the ticket window, and so I would advise that you use lines something after this fashion: "Do you believe a husband should tell his wife about business? Are you sure your opinion is right? See 'The Iron Ring.'" "Should a wife be a housekeeper or a business partner? It's a big question! See 'The Iron Ring.'" "Do you practice what you preach when it effects you personally? See how much trouble one who preached caused before it came for him to practice when he failed to follow his own preaching. See 'The Iron Ring.'"

HEART STIRRING HAND COLORED PATRIOTIC SLIDES 25c. Each

71. If It's Worth Living Under, It's Worth Fighting For.
54. Americans Must Protect America.
95. We Are With You, Mr. President. One Hundred Million Strong.
53. Your Country Needs You.
28. American Flag.
95. President Wilson & Flag.
60. Geo. Washington.
45. The Birth of the American Flag.
70. Abraham Lincoln.
76. Spirit of '76—Reflects in 1917.
27. If It's Good Enough to Live Under, It's Worth Fighting for.
87. Pledge Allegiance.
68. Star Spangled Banner.
42. My Country 'Tis of Thee (Flag).

EXCELSIOR ILLUSTRATING CO., 219 Sixth Ave. New York City

MELO FARCE MADE FAIRLY INTERESTING BY STAR'S PERSONALITIES

Harry T. Morey and Alice Joyce in

RICHARD THE BRAZEN

Vitagraph

DIRECTOR.....Perry N. Vekroff
AUTHORS.....Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady and Edward Peple
CAMERAMAN.....Arthur T. Quinn
AS A WHOLE.....Light-comedy moments saved this despite ordinary melodrama
STORY.....One of those "lover who pretends he's someone else, winning daughter of father's enemy" plots
DIRECTION.....Kept action fairly interesting by treatment, except in melodramatic spots; provided several good comedy bits
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally pleasing, although occasionally flat without enough definition on faces
LIGHTINGS.....Better for sets than for faces
CAMERA WORK.....Generally good; more close-ups would have helped STARS.....Pleasing personalities who lifted some ordinary scenes
SUPPORT.....Quite satisfactory
EXTERIORS.....Registered distinctive atmosphere; some artistic composition
INTERIORS....Satisfactory; gave suggestion of solidity
DETAIL.....Convenient but satisfactory
TIME.....Sixty-four minutes (5 parts)

THE plot of this was rather ordinary, except for a few light-comedy scenes. The melodrama was decidedly weak, and it was only the farcical twists and the bits that registered laughs that saved this from being quite poor.

It was one of those stories which had to do with two young men who traded names, with the result that our hero, the son of a Texas manufacturer, found himself in the home of his father's business rival, using the name of an English lord, who was his friend, because hero had suddenly discovered that his father's business rival had a charming daughter.

There were a number of little complications, with a bit of melo dragged in having to do with a crook who possessed some old letters which had been written by heroine's sister in the years gone by, and then the finish brought the disclosure of the identity of our hero, which was offset by his having done his duty in protecting the daughter's name. Then we learned that the contract over which the two fathers had been fighting had been secured by another character, who turned it over to the two children as a wedding present.

The story construction carried things along with a certain element of suspense which may succeed in holding the interest, and then we had one of those general clean-ups on the finish where everything was explained and everybody got together and lived happily ever after.

Harry T. Morey is, of course, one of our screen favorites in such a character as this, since he was supposed to be a Texas cowboy masquerading as an English lord. His scene which he played with his friend's valet (played by Robert Kelly) in which he bluffed the valet out of the notion that he was going to blackmail him by telling a story of how he had shot a man up in Texas for doing that very thing was one of the best bits in the film.

Alice Joyce is always pleasing, and she handled what was to be done in this very satisfactorily.

Others who appeared in the cast were William Frederic, Franklyn Hanna, William Bailey, Agnes Eyre and Charles Wellesley.

The Box Office Angle

While this fails to get beyond the routine program average, the chances are that the comedy element with the romantic touch will sneak it over for your average fan. It surely is not anything to rave over, but, all the same, it isn't rotten.

If you are playing program productions as they come, you can probably afford to use this, centering your advertising on lines something after this fashion: "Can you imagine Harry Morey, as a Texas cowboy, masquerading as an English lord in order to win the daughter of his father's business rival? See 'Richard the Brazen.'"

GOOD SITUATIONS AND CHARACTERIZATIONS WELL PRODUCED

Gladys Hulette in

THE LAST OF THE CARNABYS

Astra—Pathe

DIRECTOR.....William Parke
AUTHOR.....Sam Morse
SCENARIO BY.....Geo. Brackett Seitz
CAMERAMAN.....Albert Richard
AS A WHOLE.....Excellent situations beautifully treated in impressive atmosphere
STORY.....Good characterizations in situations that were quite dramatic DIRECTION.....Gave effective treatment of incidents in distinctive atmosphere
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very fine
LIGHTINGS.....Decidedly artistic and generally effective
CAMERA WORK.....Very good
STAR.....Registered splendidly throughout
SUPPORT.....Good types; well handled
EXTERIORS.....Not unusual, but good angles
INTERIORS.....Very good
DETAIL.....Several excellent little touches
TIME.....Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

YOU can rest assured that this will please. The atmosphere from start to finish is distinctive and impressive and the action interesting because the situations are good and have been intelligently treated by the director and well played by the characters.

At the very start we have an interesting opening with Miss Hulette discovered in an atmosphere that impressed because of the distinctive sets and the effective lighting. The introduction of William Parke, Jr., as her brother was also nicely handled, and the producer worked into his story proper smoothly and with a sure dramatic development which held the interest.

The story centered about the efforts of Miss Hulette, as the last of an old family, striving strenuously to keep up appearances despite a lack of funds. Her brother was a spendthrift who caused her quite a lot of trouble, and we had the wealthy juvenile hero who wanted to marry her, and the wealthy willun with the same desire, only one forced his wealth into her life with good intentions, while the other did the same with evil intentions.

The willun was "keeping" a girl who had kidded the brother into the belief that she was going to marry him, and when this willun forced his attentions upon the shero, her brother shot him.

The girl, to save her brother, stated that she had killed the man in self-defense, and on the witness stand she told a story of having been ruined by the willun, in order to provide a defense which would bring acquittal from the jury. When the brother, who was in hiding, learned of his sister's efforts to save him at the cost of her own reputation, he raced towards the court-house, but was injured in a motor crash and finally brought into the courtroom dying, just in time to confess that it was he who had committed the crime.

They should have quit at this point, but, unfortunately, they decided that the shero should proceed to attempt suicide. She did so, with the hero stopping her just in time. That was the only bad spot in the film. It would have been much better to have quit in the courtroom.

I want to commend the director particularly for his treatment of several of the more dramatic situations. The players were kept from exaggerating unnecessarily, and the action throughout was sincere and convincing. The work of Miss Hulette and Mr. Parke, Jr., was excellent, and Helene Chadwick gave a splendid characterization of the kept woman.

Harry Benham was very pleasing as the hero. The part called for a straight juvenile characterization, and he handled this very nicely.

Paul Everton, as the willun, kept his part within bounds, and J. H. Gilmour as the old butler made this character decidedly sympathetic and very pleasing.

The Box Office Angle.

Figured as a dramatic subject, I believe that this will prove more than satisfactory anywhere. The general atmosphere gives the production a distinction which lifts it out of the ordinary rut and the story has a new angle, and is centered upon characterizations, which is always to be desired.

In advertsiing this you might use lines of this type: "Would you confess to a murder and testify that your victim had mistreated you, in order to save your brother? See 'The Last of the Carnabys'." "What would you do if you saw your brother shoot a man and knew he was justified? Could you think quick and provide a defense that would acquit him? See 'The Last of the Carnabys'." "Is any man's life worth the sacrifice of his sister's good name? See 'The Last of the Carnabys'."

This production is decidedly better as to general atmosphere and lightings than any in which Gladys Hulette has appeared, and there is more dramatic strength to the story. You can very safely promise this in your advertising, since many who love dramas may think that her productions are only light comedy.

TIRESOME, AMATEURISH, ORDINARY POLITICAL REFORM MELLER

HATE

Fairmount Film Corp.—State Rights

DIRECTOR.....Walter Richard Stahl
AUTHOR.....J. Walter Meade
CAMERAMAN.....George Coudert
AS A WHOLE.....Very ordinary movie meller lacked impressive situations and personalities; action failed to convince STORY.....Ordinary ancient junk about political battle, with politicians attacking reform leader's past
DIRECTION.....Gave ordinary atmosphere and failed to make characters human PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied from very good to very poor
LIGHTINGS.....A few excellent; generally ordinary; some poor
CAMERA WORK.....Varied decidedly
ACTING.....Amateurish; lacked finish
EXTERIORS.....A few pretty Southern shots, but generally ordinary
INTERIORS.....Generally setty; never impressive
DETAIL.....Several slips
TIME.....One hour and 25 minutes (7 parts)

TO begin with, I can't enthuse over this title. I wouldn't feel wildly anxious to see a production which bristled, according to the name, with the promise of wild melo.

Except for the preliminary connection that the titles tried to wish into the story, I can see no reason for the name "Hate," and certainly the production didn't justify the elaborate attempt in the titles to dwell upon the question of heredity.

This got away to rather a bad start by the showing of some tenement melodrama, which, we afterwards learned, was supposed to be twenty years ago (despite the fact that an automatic revolver appeared in the action). When they got down to the story proper, we found that it dealt with the owner of a newspaper who had married the wronged girl of the prologue in order that she might be admitted to a maternity hospital so that her child might be born.

It seemed that this reporter, afterwards become owner-editor of the paper, was indeed a charitable soul to take such a responsibility for the sake of a girl of the tenements.

Anyway, the rest of the film centered about the battle between this editor and the political boss, with the time-honored situation of the editor's adopted child, a boy, being in love with the politician's daughter. We had much tiresome footage demonstrating the wickedness of the politician and the terrible condition of the city, which the editor wanted to remedy. Then we found the politician trying to dig up some dirt about the reformer. Of course he stumbled across the father of the editor's adopted boy, and the editor was instructed to be good or be disgraced.

At the end we found the adopted son murdering the bum who was his father, and then they pulled the good old standby, the courtroom scene, and finally handed us the verdict "Not guilty." At this point they pulled a title which said that, after many weary "hours," the verdict came in—and, by heck!—the audience which had been seated in the courtroom had not budged an inch in all those weary "hours!"

There were many titles which were painfully preachy and quite frequently they were ungrammatical. As a sample of the ravings of some of these titles I might quote you "For God's sake, let me unveil the secret of my tortured life!" That title alone will give you an idea as to what the film is like.

They pulled one rather serious "bonehead" in this which may cause trouble. The politician, who was shown to be eighteen kinds of a crook, was labeled a Democrat, and his conspiracy meetings were shown in a hall-room where a framed picture of President Wilson hung alongside one of George Washington. This is not only very bad taste—it is absolutely inexcusable and unnecessary.

There were several rather pretty shots taken in Southern exteriors, but, on the whole, the atmosphere was decidedly that of an ordinary movie. The sets never impressed, and. in fact, some of them were rather poor.

There was not a personality that stood out or made a favorable impression in the entire cast. Most of the players seemed camera-conscious and rather amateurish, and their characterizations lacked the finish needed to make dramatic situations register. There was a decided lack of close-ups which might have given a more intimate touch to many of the scenes.

The Box Office Angle.

I cannot figure this as a possibility anywhere, except in a transient house where you pull 'em in with the title and never worry much as to whether they like it or not. The production will not please a discriminating community audience, and I believe the title will keep more away from any theatre than it will attract.

You can't afford to bill this strong if you find it necessary to make good with your patrons, although the advertising provides an opportunity to talk about heredity in case you are willing to stir up business by ballyhoo methods without worrying about the aftermath when the production fails to please.

There is no personality in the cast that you can afford to feature. There is nothing new about the story itself which you can afford to play up, so that the only angle I can see, where you feel safe in offering this thing, is to talk about the name and heredity and promise that it is a melodrama which deals with the evils which are countenanced by some politicians.

COMEDY-DRAMA MARRED BY PERPETUAL SMILING HERO

Franklyn Farnum and Brownie Vernon in

THE CLEAN-UP

Bluebird

DIRECTOR.....William Worthington
AUTHOR.....Waldemar Young
CAMERAMAN.....Friend F. Baker
AS A WHOLE.....Earned some good laughs but was handicapped by camera-conscious hero and a few slips in action
STORY.....Was good small-town situation, but overstepped boundaries occasionally and had unnecessary melodramatic incidents which weakened effect of other action
DIRECTION.....Permitted characters to overplay and used several incidents which failed to convince as small-town life
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very good; occasionally make-up showed LIGHTINGS.....Not particularly artistic; generally too uniform
CAMERA WORK.....Acceptable; not distinctive STARS.....He smiled too much; she quite pleasing
SUPPORT.....Allowed to overplay in characterization
EXTERIORS.....Satisfactory for small town
INTERIORS.....Some good; others ordinary
DETAIL.....Several bits overdrawn, but many good
TIME.....Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

THE basic idea of this offered an opportunity to register some excellent small-town comedy. The story was centered around the situation of a young man returning to his home town as the advance agent of a burlesque show just when the father of his sweetheart was heading the reform league in an effect to clean up the burg.

The press agent had the old man give an interview to a scribe on one of the town papers stating that he would stop the show, and then began to play the thing up with some rather interesting results.

Unfortunately, they had a wandering sequence of some crooks who had come to rob father's bank, which was entirely unnecessary, and, even though they pulled a twist which showed the woman with the two crooks to be a detective who was trying to get them with the goods, this melodrama seemed out of place with the small-town hokum.

The battle between the press agent and father reached a point where the boy challenged the old man to a debate on the reform question, and it was accepted. Then came word that the show had busted.

The boy, to make good at the mass meeting, agreed to withdraw the show, but they landed a good twist when father said no, he would insist upon the show coming to the town. The boy insisted upon his "sacrifice," however, and it was accepted, thereby making the path clear for the clutch on the finish.

Unfortunately, most of the characters were allowed to overplay. Had these characters been kept within bounds so as to register like real small-town folks, this would have been a winner. Another drawback was the fact that Franklyn Farnum seems to think that he must smile upon any and all occasions. He seems to have two expressions—one which registers nothing at all, and the other a smile.

There was one very bad spot in the treatment of the story situations. We found the press agent getting out a banner announcing the coming of the burlesque show, and having the banker's daughter (his sweetheart) drive him around town, with a kid hanging on behind beating a bass drum so that they could follow another auto which carried an announcement of the coming mass meeting. If the press agent had picked up a jitney to pull this stunt it would have been great. But surely it was bringing his sweetheart down to the level of the burlesque show to have her act as chauffeur while he advertised it. If it was desired to have her work with him in getting the show to town, it would have been just as well to have made the coming attraction an ordinary rep show or dramatic production, since the possibility of the Purity League stopping that sort of theatricals would be just as reasonable in some communities.

Brownie Vernon was rather pleasing, but Mr. Farnum failed to win any sympathy because he persisted in his smile upon any and all occasions. It will be evident to any fan that he is playing to the camera from start to finish, and there is nothing which will antagonize those out front quicker than to realize that the hero is a lens louse.

In the cast were Clyde Benson, Marc Robbins, Martha Mattox, Al MacQuarrie, Claire McDowell, Mary Talbot and William Human.

The Box Office Angle.

Because there are several good hokum situations in this you can probably get it by as a very satisfactory program release, and while it will not register as a tremendous winner good for a repeat, many of your fans may enjoy it very much.

I would play up, in my advertising, the situation of the press agent who came to his old home town heading a burlesque show. to find that the father of his sweetheart was at the head of a reform party determined to keep burlesque shows out of the city. Just tell them that much about the plot, and then promise that it provides a number of funny situations.

When you are talking about this in your advertising forget the bank robbery incident, because that's the oldest kind of junk melodrama.

VERY TIMELY PREACHMENT WELL DONE. A MONEY GETTER

Wilfred Lucas and Elda Miller in

THE FOOD GAMBLERS

Eastern Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Albert Parker
AUTHOR.....Robert Shirley
SUPERVISED BY.....Allan Dwan
CAMERAMAN.....Roy Vaughn
AS A WHOLE.....Propaganda with kick; has been intelligently handled and is certainly timely
STORY.....Melodrama and romance patched into preachment
DIRECTION.....Kept action interesting; general atmosphere satisfactory, although not distinctive or artistic PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good; never exceptional
LIGHTINGS.....Generally good; sometimes too uniform
CAMERA WORK.....Satisfactory
STARS.....Personalities that helped melodramatic characters
SUPPORT.....Several very good types
EXTERIORS.....Quite satisfactory, although not distinctive
INTERIORS.....Some good, but others failed to impress
DETAIL.....Generally good; many interesting bits
TIME.....Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

WHILE this is a preachment, it has been intelligently handled and certainly is very timely, so that I believe it can be figured as a very good box office proposition.

Much will depend upon how you exploit this. The food speculation problem is one that is most vital now and it is under consideration in every State in the Union. We have National legislation as well as State legislation on this problem everywhere, with first-page newspaper stories referring to it.

If you will take advantage of this fact and tie up this film with that agitation, you should be able to do real business. After you get them in the film will hold well enough to get by satisfactorily, and certainly it puts up a strong plea for Government regulation of food distribution, showing rather specifically how the gamblers work, and finishing up with a plea to the audience to write to the lawmakers, a sample of the letter which might be used being shown at the end.

The film is aimed primarily as preachment. It starts with a little prologue preparing the romance between the food speculator and the woman reporter who was to uncover his criminal operations, and then we had considerable drama showing the extremes to which the speculators would go in order to accomplish their purpose.

This was all finished up with a hearing at Albany before the legislation committee on a bill prepared by "Mr. Jones," who is really the Food Commissioner in New York State, and at this hearing we found the former head of the speculators, now reformed, exposing the methods of his associates, and at the same time we saw these former associates accused of having conspired to kill their former leader.

The willunous speculators were led away to jail, while the newspaper-woman, who had fought the hero when he was a food speculator and had cared for him after he reformed, went to the clutch with that worthy.

Wilfred Lucas, as the head of the food gamblers, was very satisfactory. At no time did the picture reach any great dramatic heights, and in many places treatment would have bettered certain incidents. The general effect was quite satisfactory, however.

Elda Miller, as the newspaper-woman, was rather a good type for this part, and her work throughout was sympathetic and satisfactory.

Others who appeared were Russel Simpson, Mac Barnes, Jack Snyder and Edouardo Cianelli.

The Box Office Angle.

If you have any confidence whatever in your ability to advertise intelligently when the opportunity comes, you should certainly go after this. The production is essentially preachment, and you must emphasize that very forcefully, in order to have your fans really enjoy it after they get in.

The general atmosphere, treatment and the playing is not such as to make it truly pleasing except for the underlying thought, which impresses all the way.

I would dig up a lot of dope about the food speculation situation in your State and in your city and start out with a teaser campaign two weeks before you play this, asking, "Why are potatoes so expensive?" "Why do we have such high prices for food?" "Why don't you do something about the cost of potatoes?" etc., afterwards tying this up with your announcement of "The Food Gamblers," which should include the statement that this film will show how to kill off these speculators.

I would say that this is an excellent opportunity for a real advertising man to do a clean-up business, and the film is good enough to stand up. It is far superior to the production "The Public Be Damned," released a few weeks ago, which had something of the same theme.

WHY DON'T YOU FIND OUT WHY

GEORGE W. BEYNON

505 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY

Arranges More Musical Scores for the Big Film Productions Than All Other Composers Combined

ASK HIM!

Phone Murray Hill 9876

PRIZE FIGHTER HERO IN SYMPATHETIC PART WILL PLEASE

William Russell in

PRIDE AND THE MAN

American—Mutual

IRECTOR ..... Edward Sloman
UTHOR ..... William Russell
AMERAMAN ..... Joe Morgan
S A WHOLE ..... Rather interesting romantic drama intelligently handled; will please generally
TORY ..... Prizefighter-marrying-heiress-with-sacrifice-for-her-happiness-giving-him-sympathy plot
IRECTION ..... Kept action convincing and registered several appealing scenes that will please those who love romance
HOTOGRAPHY ..... Varied from fine to fair
IGHTINGS ..... Some excellent; others ordinary
AMERA WORK ..... Varied
TAR ..... Quite pleasing as prizefighter hero making sympathy sacrifice
UPPORT ..... Several good types; generally satisfactory
XTERIORS ..... Generally very good; not exceptional
NTERIORS ..... Some classy sets and good prizefight scene
ETAIL ..... Several good touches; generally satisfactory
IME ..... Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

YOU should be able to please very generally with this.

The story centers about a stalwart hero who meets an heiress and wins her heart before she learns that he is a prizefighter. After winning e championship of the world (and oh, boy! how easily ey do it in the movies!) the heiress was wedded to r hero despite the opposition of father.

Hero then "flunked" in business, partly because of the anipulation of his former rival for the hand of his wife, id even wifey's fortune, which was secretly placed at s disposal to save him, failed to do the trick.

Realizing that society friends had begun to snub his ife for marrying him even before his business failure, ro decided that his wife was unhappy, and so pre-nded to be drunk in order to send her back to her me. Then he learned of her fortune having been lost r him, and so he agreed to fight once more to pay back e $50,000. He was to get $60,000, win or lose, and in this, the second fight scene staged in the picture, he was given the K. O. The money, however, was his, and he paid his debt, which of course made the shero ask questions, and so she came back to him and they started over again.

A bit played by Antrim Short as the kid worshipper of the prizefighter was very well done, and he was responsible for bringing the hero and shero together again because of his explanation that no man could win a fight with his heart broken.

I believe the average film fan will think this a very good picture. The girls and boys will think it's great. For the most part, the scenes have been intelligently done, and Bill Russell is quite pleasing, because he plays with repose and never insists upon acting all over the place.

The two fight scenes have been rather well handled, with nice cutting for tempo, so that they really become rather interesting.

Francelia Billington, as the shero, was appealing and played quietly, and George Fisher did the juvenile heavy without unnecessary exaggeration.

Others in the cast were Clarence Burton, Paul Weigel, Al Kaufman and Tom Moran.

The Box Office Angle

I believe that Bill Russell is quite a favorite with many film fans, and this is a production which should go over most anywhere because it has a pleasing element of romance with a sympathetic, athletic hero.

You might start something on this by advertising "Would you marry a prizefighter?" "Supposing you loved a man and then learned he was a prizefighter—would you marry him?"

If you are able to slip over publicity stories in your town, you might hand them a little bunk about Bill Russell being an exceptional heavyweight boxer, and state that some people are urging Bill to go in for heavyweight honors, incidentally mentioning the fact that he has a chance to show what a good boxer he is in a couple of sure-enough fights in "Pride and the Man." You can tell a few wild tales about how Bill really put out a couple of reg'lar "pugs" in doing these scenes, because it was necessary to make the action realistic and so both the hero and the fighters were told to "go to it," with disastrous results to the fighters.

KIDDING TITLES WILL GET ORDINARY MELO BY AS COMEDY

Carlyle Blackwell and June Elvidge in YOUTH

Peerless—World

IRECTOR ..... Romaine Fielding
UTHOR ..... Roy S. Sensabaugh
AMERAMAN ..... William Cooper
S A WHOLE ..... Very ordinary production lifted decidedly by comedy titles
TORY ..... Provided fairly interesting action, but would have been very ordinary except for titles
HOTOGRAPHY ..... Varied decidedly from good to poor
IGHTINGS ..... Generally poor; failed to show players to advantage
AMERA WORK ..... Varied; generally ordinary
TARS ..... Not shown to advantage
UPPORT ..... Just acceptable
XTERIORS ..... A few interesting scenes, but generally ordinary NTERIORS ..... Acceptable; some good and some poor
ETAIL ..... Too much of it
IME ..... Sixty-four minutes (5 parts)

IT would seem that the producers realized that this failed to register after it had been finished, with the result that they had good sense enough to dig up someone capable of injecting a number of laughs into the production by writing comedy titles all the way.

To the one responsible for these titles, eighty per cent. of the credit should go, for the fact that this film will get by most anywhere as satisfactory entertainment. From start to finish these titles "kidded" the action and the players, and made fun of the various situations.

Carlyle Blackwell, June Elvidge, Muriel Ostriche and Johnny Hines have all done parts in the past which have registered satisfactorily, but in this none of them made much of an impression, except Mr. Hines as the Jap butler—principally because the titles made this a comedy and the part of Mr. Hines fitted in with the attempts of the title writer to poke fun at the action in general.

The story was the time-honored stuff about sending son away to make good because he insisted upon being stewed all the time, and of course it was the fact that a girl bawled him out that made him want to reform.

As a plot, this was very rotten, and the action didn't improve it a great deal. The happy thought of making fun of the whole thing saved the day.

Others who appeared were George Cowl, Robert Broderick, Victor Kennard, Henry West and Henrietta Simpson.

The Box Office Angle

If the names of Mr. Blackwell, Miss Elvidge, Miss Ostriche and Mr. Hines will pull you any business, I believe you can safely play this, billing it as a comedy drama. The introduction of scores of titles written something after the style of George Ade's "Fables in Slany" make this acceptable entertainment, although I don't want you to get the idea that I consider this a winner from any angle. It is just one of those cases where the production was "impossible" and the use of many titles to make fun of the action provided enough laughs to get it by with the average audience.

If you can grab something which is really worth while you will of course be better off than if you play a production of this caliber. If you decide to play this bill it as a comedy dealing with the adventures of a Broadway spendthrift trying to make good as the boss of a construction camp.

The story is supposed to be centered around the construction of a dam, but you should be careful not to say anything about this, because the dam they show at the finish, which is apparently intended to be the one which has been constructed, is that little mill dam which you have seen in so many productions, and which is certainly not the sort of dam which the audience has been led to believe was under way. I presume that this final bit of film wandered into the story either after it was all finished, by somebody taking it from another film, or because the cameraman was given instructions to go out and "photograph a dam," and picked this out as the nearest one he could think of. This dam at the finish propided the final laugh gained from the production.

Your wise audiences will understand that many of the titles in this have been written after the production was finished, in order to make fun of it, and because of that will enjoy the film more than if it had been intended for a comedy in the first place.

UNCONVINCING STORY HELPED IN SPOTS BY TREATMENT

Mignon Anderson in

A WIFE ON TRIAL

Butterfly

DIRECTOR.....Ruth Ann Baldwin
AUTHOR.....Leo Pierson
CAMERAMAN.....Stephen S. Norton
EDITED BY.....Roy Dixon
AS A WHOLE.....Kids at first and coons at end save rather unconvincing romantic melodrama
STORY.....Orphan shero marrying paralytic to nurse him, only to fall in love, with danger causing him to walk on finish—Who would have guessed it?
DIRECTION.....General atmosphere rather pleasing, with many little touches which made action interesting
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied from fine to fair, but general effect artistic LIGHTINGS.....Some very fine; others ordinary; generally satisfactory
CAMERA WORK.....Varied from fine to fair
STAR.....Appealing enough to please
SUPPORT.....Juvenile camera-conscious; other types pleasing
EXTERIORS.....Some very pretty shots
INTERIORS..Generally very good; had one bad bear rug
DETAIL.....Some good touches
TIME.....Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

THIS started off with a great close-up of a kid tearing a book and then introduced several excellent characters, so that it looked fine, until they pulled a very bad accident where young hero insisted upon driving along a road that had been marked "closed," crashing through an open bridge in his auto when he should surely have seen the torn up bridge at least 500 yards away.

Following that smash-up, in which the hero was made a paralytic and his fiancee was killed, the story blew up, because it became one of those things which might happen once in a million times, which is no longer the best material for film productions.

Our heroine was brought in to be the wife of the paralyzed hero, it being suggested that his mother, who was about to die, wanted someone to marry him and take care of him, instead of hiring a nurse. I can't quite figure what the difference is between marrying a man for his money to look after him, and hiring a nurse to do the same thing for money. As a matter of fact, a girl who married him for money under such conditions might care less about how soon the patient died than a nurse who had to keep him alive to draw her salary.

Anyway, we knew that the shero was going to bring him out of his belief that the world was all wrong, and gradually she accomplished this by changed surroundings.

On the finish we knew something had to happen to make this guy get up and walk again, and, since they couldn't think of anything else, they used the good old stuff of burglar attacking the wife, thus making it necessary for hero to save her—to do which he had to rise from his chair and walk over to the doorway.

They tried to "kid" us a bit with a suggestion that hubby thought shero was in love with his doctor friend in which attempt they will never fool any fan.

The first of the film was helped quite a little by some good touches, in which several kiddies figured and the final scenes were lifted a lot by a couple of coons who were planted for comedy.

On the whole, this is a fairly interesting development of one of those stories that nobody believes, with a heroine who was able to hold quite a bit of sympathy, and a hero who was camera-conscious most of the time.

The Box Office Angle.

As program releases go, this will probably get by satisfactorily. It is a long way from being a good production, because it never really convinces and frequently becomes tiresome and draggy. The light touches and the sympathetic opening give it a chance, however, so that the average fan will probably look it over and figure that it has been satisfactory.

I can't see any real box office value in either the name of the star or the name of the story. If you are playing Butterflies regularly, however, this is certainly as good as the average release has been under the brand, and consequently should get through without serious complaint.

In billing this I would not depend upon the pulling power of Miss Anderson. Ask them if they would marry a wealthy paralytic in order to live in luxury. You might say: "Mignon Anderson married to have a rose garden—would you?" "What is your ambition? Would you marry a man in order to have a rose garden?"

FINE CHARACTERIZATIONS AT START MELLER KILLS THE FINISH

Olive Thomas in

AN EVEN BREAK

Kay Bee—Triangle

DIRECTOR ..... Lambert Hillyer
AUTHOR ..... Lambert Hillyer
AS A WHOLE..... Started rather well with some good characterizations, but melodrama ruined it
STORY..... Looked promising at first, but soon blew up
DIRECTION... Had several nice characterization touches and interesting Follies restaurant set, but melo ruined general effect
PHOTOGRAPHY..... Artistic for sets, but frequently hard on faces
LIGHTINGS... Some splendid bits, but generally ordinary
CAMERA WORK..... Generally good; more close-ups would have helped STAR..... Rather pretty at times, although face a bit hard; expressions seemed to lack sincerity
SUPPORT..... Charles Gunn excellent; others ordinary; some quite actory
EXTERIORS..... A few excellent shots, but generally ordinary
INTERIORS..... Some very fine; generally quite satisfactory
DETAIL..... Excellent cutting for auto accident and nice handling of cabaret set
TIME..... Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

IN the first few reels we got some splendid characterizations in this, with Charles Gunn walking away with the honors because of some very intelligent work registering the effect upon a country boob of getting acquainted with the "white lights." Miss Thomas was also rather carefully handled in most of these scenes, so that we had several characters nicely developed in some situations which registered very effectively.

There were one or two characters who were quite actory, but all went well until they hit the melodrama in the last two reels, and then the whole works went kaflewy!

They gave us the good old hokum of the striking workmen, the attempt to keep the hero from reaching the mills, the plotting willuns who would kidnap him, the heroine to the rescue with her racing car and an all-night auto chase in which (according to the film) one willun stood up and shot at the rear tires of Miss Thomas' car, without success, from sunset until dawn.

Immediately after the title "Dawn" we saw the car bearing the shero and hero rush across in front of a train, with the pursuing car crashing into the engine at the crossing. This bit was very well timed and nicely cut, but unfortunately such things fail to make any impression in this day and age—because they've been done to death in the old feature films and the new Keystone Komedies.

At the end the militia came from somewhere, and hero and shero drove in just in time to stop the dynamiting of a lot of machines which were needed to save the mills of hero's father. The two villains stood beside the plunger of the charge igniter that was to set off the dynamite, and one wanted to blow 'em up anyway, but the other refused when he saw shero standing beside the doomed cars. The two willuns then proceeded to fight until the rescue party arrived.

Had this been confined to a characterization study along the line of the work which Charles Gunn put over in the first part of the film, it would undoubtedly have been a very pleasing production. As it runs, you may get by with it as a program release and some of your fans may think this better than the average, but I am afraid that the old hokum meller which comes at the end is going to send them out with a bad impression.

The cast, for the most part, was rather ordinary, but Darrel Foss, playing the part of the son of the willunous factory owner, persisted in acting so much as to mar several scenes.

In the cast were Charles K. French, J. Frank Burke, Margaret Thompson and Louis Durham.

The Box Office Angle

The name of Olive Thomas probably means nothing to your fans, so if you intend to play this you will have to bill her as the famous beauty from the Ziegfield Follies. Since she has that sort of a part in this production you might salve it a little heavy on that particular angle. I would also mention the presence of Charles Gunn, since Mr. Gunn is very good in this, and has had several leads in Triangle films, so that many of your fans may remember him.

This is not a big winner, but it will very probably get by for you, and I would say that you can safely put it through as a program release centering the attention upon the fact that it is an interesting study of the career of a country girl who became a cabaret favorite in New York, and the young man who blossomed when he first saw the white lights of Broadway.

A BINDER for "WIDS"
$1.50 Prepaid Everywhere

GEORGE EDWARDES-HALL

WITH

HERBERT BRENON

HAROLD LOCKWOOD

Yorke--Metro

QUICK ANNOUNCEMENTS FOR YOUR SCREEN
SLIDENE OUTFIT: all complete..... $1.00
6 bottles slide ink; 25 cover glasses; 6 special pens; 2 slide charts
Novelty Typewriter Slides..... $3.50 per 100
Handy Slide Holder and Clip FREE.
NOVELTY SLIDE CO., 115 East 23d St., New York.

MESSY, NASTY PRODUCTION OF OLD PLOT MUCH TOO ROUGH

Gladys Brockwell in

TO HONOR AND OBEY

Fox Film

DIRECTOR.....Otis Turner
AUTHOR.....Olga Printzlau
SCENARIO BY.....F. McGrew Willis
CAMERAMAN.....Charles Kaufman
AS A WHOLE....Messy "Paid in Full" drama with nasty situations, helped somewhat by Miss Brockwell and Miss Carmen
STORY.....Rather ancient idea with unnecessary, disgusting detail at times
DIRECTION.....Failed to make action convince, and registered many scenes in decided bad taste
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally poor in long shots; good in close-ups
LIGHTINGS.....Good on sets, but poor on faces in long shots; good in close-ups
CAMERA WORK.....Many long shots out of focus; close-ups good
STAR.....Very good
SUPPORT.....Good characterizations, but some nasty characters
EXTERIORS.....Acceptable
INTERIORS....Several very good; generally satisfactory
DETAIL.....Much that was unpleasant; some terrible titles
TIME.....Sixty-four minutes (5 parts)

I HAD been under the impression that Mr. Fox had reformed somewhat in the matter of dishing out the dirt, but some of the titles which were wished into this production prove that the reform was at least only temporary.

In one place in this rather disagreeable drama of the "Paid in Full" type, where the weak husband deliberately sent his wife to a wealthy friend with instructions to be "nice" to him in order to gain financial favor, we found this husband standing at a telephone, talking to a drunken harlot, while the wife, who was about to give birth to an heir, stood at the head of the stairs calling to him. The husband allowed her to stagger and fall down the stairs without paying any attention to her, and then they flashed a title in which he said, "Oh, hell . . . take her upstairs . . . I'm too busy!"

A little later we found this harlot coming to the husband's house after we had had the good old Stock Exchange battle junk, and when she discovered that he was "broke" they registered a title: "Not a dollar Well, you can go to hell!" This stuff might go ver well in a Coney Island dump where they serve beer o the side as your admission fee, but surely it is hardl what any intelligent theatre manager wants to play i a community house where he caters to families.

The general trend of the story was the old stuff abou the girl who married, only to repent at leisure whe she learned that hubby was a weakling. The wealth man whom she had refused was the one to whom he hubby sent her for the tip that made it possible fo him to clean up a fortune on the market, and, of cours on the finish they worked around to the point wher the hubby was punished by being broke and sufferin desertion from his kept female, while the wife foun happiness with the man she should have married i the first place.

The general atmosphere of this was rather good a to sets, but most of the long shots were out of focu and as a consequence there was little definition to th faces of the characters. The close-ups were very goo both as to photography and lightings.

The Stock Exchange battle scenes are old stuff an will hardly make any impression.

Willard Louis, in a comedy character, managed t register a few laughs, but such snickers could neve offset the nastiness of the several bad breaks.

Miss Brockwell gave a very good characterizatio and was quite pleasing personally. Jewel Carmen a the kept woman registered an excellent characteriza tion, and both Bertram Grassby and Josef Swickar were quite satisfactory, although Chas. Clary as the hus band had one of the worst characters to portray tha I have ever seen on the screen.

The Box Office Angle.

You certainly cannot afford to play this in a hous that caters to family patronage.

If you play to transient trade and roughnecks wh like a little cussin' now and then, with a story whic is a bit off-color, this should please 'em very muc If yours is a community house, there is no redeemin feature about this production which would justify yo accepting it, even though some of the worst titles wer omitted.

If you are willing to handle the "ruff stuff" you migh get some business with this, but, personally, I thin it's a mistake to play anything as messy and nasty a this, no matter what impression you may have of th character of your patrons.

All Eyes of the Film Industry

SEE WID'S

To Those Who Create for the Screen

IT MEANS SOMETHING

To Keep the Names Before the "Big Bosses"

Address all communications pertaining to advertising to

HARRY P. DIGGS, Adv. Mgr.

Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc. Times Bldg., New York City

Say you saw it in "WID'S."

THE ROLL OF HONOR!!

These features have at least five reports, and all have a combined average for Pleased Patrons and Box Office of 80 per cent or more.

In the case of several Features having the same percentage, we have placed the one with the higher percentage of repeats first.

Reports	Features	Company	% P. P.	% B. O.	Repeats
6	Birth of a Nation	D. W. Griffith	100	100	5
5	The Floorwalker	Mutual-Chaplin	97	100	2
8	The Rink	Mutual-Chaplin	97	99	7
14	The Americano	Triangle	99	97	11
8	Easy Street	Mutual-Chaplin	95	100	8
13	A Poor Little Rich Girl	Arteraft	97	96	9
5	The Goose Girl	Paramount	95	95	4
20	Snow White	Paramount	95	95	12
16	Truthful Tulliver	Triangle	97	93	9
35	Hulda from Holland	Paramount	94	95	23
7	The Eternal City	Para. Spec.	93	96	4
12	The Square Deal Man	Triangle	95	94	6
9	The Ne'er-Do-Well	Lesser Spec.	94	94	7
13	Miss George Washington	Paramount	94	94	10
18	The Matrimaniac	Triangle	93	95	9
11	Still Waters	Paramount	95	92	7
12	The Cure	Mutual-Chaplin	93	94	7
26	Under Two Flags	Fox	94	92	17
26	Manhattan Madness	Triangle	94	92	12
6	The Crucible	Paramount	94	92	2
23	Peggy	Triangle	94	91	15
6	The Serpent	Fox	92	93	1
10	The Iron Claw	Serial	93	92
19	Rags	Paramount	91	93	5
14	The Devil's Double	Triangle	92	91	7
9	The Shielding Shadow	Serial	91	92
15	Bought and Paid For	World	91	91	10
18	Hell's Hinges	Triangle	93	89	11
19	The Good Bad-Man	Triangle	90	92	4
15	American Aristocracy	Triangle	92	89	8
10	Mister 44	Metro	88	93	4
7	Behind the Screen	Mutual-Chaplin	89	91	5
6	Cinderella	Paramount	86	94	3
9	In Again—Out Again	Arteraft	90	90	4
9	Prince and the Pauper	Paramount	92	88	4
5	Destruction	Fox	86	94	1
8	The Desert Man	Triangle	89	91	1
7	Skinner's Dress Suit	K. E. S. E.	94	85	4
9	Out of the Drifts	Paramount	90	89	3
5	Graustark	K. E. S. E.	88	90	4
18	The Sin Ye Do	Triangle	93	85	10
10	Broadway Jones	Arteraft	95	83	4
5	Hell Morgan's Girl	Bluebird	90	88	1
6	The Girl of Yesterday	Paramount	89	88	3
14	The Habit of Happiness	Triangle	92	85	5
25	Little Lady Eileen	Paramount	87	89	10
7	Shadows and Sunshine	Pathe	94	81	3
5	Green Stockings	Vitagraph	87	88	2
12	The Battle Cry of Peace	Vitagraph	95	80	4
19	The Wolf Woman	Triangle	86	89	6
21	Return of Draw Egan	Triangle	88	86	7
18	The Cheat	Paramount	94	80	12
5	A Tale of Two Cities	Fox	93	81	3
16	The Count	Mutual-Chaplin	88	86	8
23	Silks and Satins	Paramount	85	88	16
13	Poor Little Peppina	Paramount	88	85	7
5	The Easiest Way	Selznick	88	85	2
26	Reggie Mixes In	Triangle	93	80	11
30	Flirting with Fate	Triangle	87	86	11
16	The Common Law	Selznick	83	90	5
6	Seven Sisters	Paramount	87	86	1
6	The Soul of a Woman	Metro	93	80	1
5	Liberty	Serial	91	82
10	Old Homestead	Paramount	88	84	7
8	My Official Wife	Vitagraph	90	82	4
5	Tess of Storm Country	Para. Spec.	88	84	2
29	The Bugle Call	Triangle	93	79	9
21	East Lynne	Fox	86	86	9
21	Fifty-Fifty	Triangle	89	83	6
11	Wildflower	Paramount	89	82	6
22	Home	Triangle	91	80	9
11	The White Raven	Metro	86	85	4
11	The Eternal Sapho	Fox	84	87	4
14	Back of the Man	Triangle	90	81	5
16	Her Double Life	Fox	86	85	5
12	The Weaker Sex	Triangle	88	83	4
8	Madame Butterfly	Paramount	82	89	2
25	An Apostle of Vengeance	Triangle	88	83	4
6	The Dawn of a To-morrow	Paramount	83	88	1
6	Dulcie's Adventure	Mutual	87	84	1
9	Molly Make-Believe	Paramount	87	83	5
8	The Two Orphans	Fox	84	86	3
11	Romeo and Juliet	Fox	85	85	4
8	The Hungry Heart	World	87	83	2
7	Bella Donna	Paramount	92	77	4
6	The Virginian	Paramount	88	81	2
7	Mice and Men	Paramount	84	84	4
17	The Flying Torpedo	Triangle	88	80	8
16	Ashes of Embers	Paramount	84	84	6
17	A Corner in Colleens	Triangle	88	80	6
8	Helene of the North	Paramount	87	81	2
7	The Pinch Hitter	Triangle	97	91	1
8	Little Mary Sunshine	Pathe	90	78	1
12	Patria	Serial	86	82
7	Undine	Bluebird	80	87	3
13	The Promise	Metro	82	85	2
7	Island of Regeneration	Vitagraph	85	81	4
10	God's Country and Woman	Vitagraph	81	85	4
6	Pretty Sister of Jose	Paramount	84	82	2
6	A Man in His Soul	Metro	83	83	2
6	Chimmie Fadden	Paramount	91	75	1
16	The Combat	Vitagraph	82	84	1
5	The New York Peacock	Fox	82	84
7	Camile	World	86	79	3
11	Carmen	Paramount	82	83	3
18	His Picture in the Papers	Triangle	90	75	5
21	Plain Jane	Triangle	88	77	5
6	The Innocence of Lizette	Mutual	85	80
5	The Little Girl Next Door	Essanay Spec.	77	87	3
5	Chimmie Fadden Out West	Paramount	88	76	2
5	The Prince of Graustark	K. E. S. E.	84	80	1
5	The Sign of the Cross	Paramount	79	85
5	What Will the People Say?	Metro	80	84
8	A Gentleman from Iniana	Paramount	86	78
15	The River of Romance	Metro	87	76	7
23	The Social Secretary	Triangle	89	74	8
12	Trail of Lonesome Pine	Paramount	75	88	3
8	Where Are My Children?	Universal Spec.	79	84	2
6	Excuse Me!	Pathe	90	73	2
18	Man from Bitter Roots	Fox	82	81	2
11	The Last Man	Vitagraph	82	81	1
6	Kindling	Paramount	81	82
12	The Rise of Susan	World	79	83	0
6	Madame X	Pathe	71	91	3
5	The Yellow Passport	World	82	80	2
5	Alice in Wonderland	Eskay	76	86	1
8	The Silent Battle	Bluebird	78	84
6	The Libertine	Mammoth	83	78	4
16	The Gunfighter	Triangle	76	85	10
5	The Argyle Case	Selznick	87	74	2
14	The Disciple	Triangle	85	76	2
5	The Soul of Broadway	Fox	83	78	1
16	Gloria's Romance	Serial	78	83
5	The Man from Mexico	Paramount	90	70	2
14	Bullets and Brown Eyes	Triangle	85	75	3
23	Honor Thy Name	Triangle	87	73	4
6	David Harum	Paramount	82	78	1
17	Stepping Stones	Triangle	85	75	3

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

WILLIAM F. ALDRICH
FEATURE PRODUCER
Screen Club, 117 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG CORP.

BERT CARBER
TECHNICAL DIRECTOR
THANHOUSER SCREEN CLUB

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

HAL CLARENDON
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL

WILLIAM DESMOND
TRIANGLE PLAYS
Culver City, Cal.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

JACK HARVEY
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
Producer of
"PARENTAGE"

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
PRODUCING FEATURES
Ivan Film Corp.

LLOYD INGRAHAM
MANAGEMENT
GRIFFITH-FINE ARTS STUDIOS

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR
Frohman Amusement Corporation

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

HARLEY KNOLES
FEATURE DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

JOSEPH LEVERING
DIRECTOR

O. A. C. LUND

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE PRODUCER
B. A. Rolfe-Metro Pictures Corporation

WEDGWOOD NOWELL
TRIANGLE
Friars Club, N. Y. C.

EUGENE NOWLAND
PRODUCING FEATURES

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITAGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

FREDERIC SULLIVAN
DIRECTOR THANHOUSER
Screen Club

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
PRODUCING FEATURES
VITAGRAPH

JAMES VINCENT
PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

JAMES YOUNG

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Address—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM A MAGAZINE—IN FACT A SERVICE
THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM
WID'S
INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS
Always Independent
Issued Every Thursday
VOL. III. THURSDAY, AUGUST 16, 1917. NO. 33
25 Cents a Copy
$10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

SHARPEN YOUR PENCILS, BOYS!

Buy Right and Advertise Is My Tip!

I have never written an editorial that stirred up such a unanimous and immediate yell of approval as that which came after my little discussion of the new Paramount-Artcraft "open booking" proposition in the July 26th issue.

In the week following I had letters from big exhibitors in every mail agreeing with me, in language that I could not print without being grabbed for emphatic profanity, and in most cases the only thing that they didn't agree with me on was that I hadn't made it strong enough.

Undoubtedly the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, which has now signed up a majority of the best box office personalities of the country, has signed a lot of contracts under their new high-cost-of-exhibiting schedules. However, I am equally certain that they have missed a surprising number of expected contracts due to having raised the "anti" too high.

When it became evident that the Paramount people were lining up everything in sight, I figured this organization was going to be wise enough to meet the exhibitors squarely, win their confidence and as a result have the industry just about where they wanted it.

Personally, I like most everybody connected with the Paramount-Artcraft group and I know that they have made and can make good pictures. To my mind, they made a tremendous mistake, however, in jumping prices sky high when they came after contracts under the new "open booking" arrangement. Here was a supreme opportunity to make good with the exhibitor and win his confidence forevermore by allowing him to book only those subjects which he wanted, thereby making it clear to the producer just what units were actually worth a lot of money.

They could have well afforded the possible loss on a few of the units which nobody would want, because at the end of the year they would have been able to say to those stars and directors who proved unsatisfactory, "We're sorry, but we need you no longer."

The possible rentals on the additional prints on the stars which were successful would have made the net result pretty near to the anticipated mark under the present arrangement, and the exhibitors would have been satisfied, because most live wires are willing to pay pretty stiff prices for certain stars providing they are not forced to take a lot of people that they don't want.

According to the reports I get from the firing line, it looks as if the exhibitors everywhere are on the defensive and working fast and hard to get things lined up so that they can tell the "Art—Graft" salesmen that they are not interested in being held up. Certainly there has never been, in the history of the business, a better opportunity for good pictures to be booked either on the independent open market or on the program basis, when the exhibitor can know that he is going to get something worth advertising, at a price that he can afford to spend some money on the advertising and still make a little profit.

Many of the aggressive, independent exhibitors tell me that they intend to let the other feller have the high-priced stuff and dig in on the advertising themselves, picking out good pictures and spending the difference in rental price on advertising.

The recent combination of the Zukor interests with the L. J. Selznick Enterprises took another competitive factor out of the field and made it possible for the salesman representing the one group to be very arbitrary in his remarks to exhibitors.

The unfortunate angle about this system of pricing the stars according to the new Zukor method is that, in many instances, exhibitors are requested to play stars that they don't want, in order to get the stars they do want—which is simply going back to the old program bunk—and in almost every instance the question of director is decidedly in the background.

It is generally admitted—and I have insisted on this point myself for a year or two—that the star has been the most important angle so far as getting business INTO a theatre is concerned. Granting that, the exhibitor is confronted with the very important item of pleasing his patrons after he gets them in, and it is almost impossible for him to figure upon the merit of a series of productions unless he knows who will direct them.

This has been proved in the past year in the case of every star that I can think of. Just look them over where more than one director has been on the job, and I believe you will agree with me that there has been a decided variance in the quality of the productions.

Many people have been very much disturbed over the progress Mr. Zukor has made towards signing up everybody in sight, and many people have said that we are facing an organization which will control the film business. Personally, I don't believe that the film business can ever be controlled again.

One of the reasons is that the exhibitors have advanced in intelligence far beyond the days of the General Film. Another more important reason is that there are scores of independent producers to-day with plenty of available capital, whereas in the General Film days the producers were very few, and independent producers had a very serious time getting started.

Had the Paramount-Artcraft been presented in such a manner as to win the good will of the exhibitors of the country, that organization would have been in a wonderful position. It would seem, however, that they stand to-day on one side of the road, with the exhibitors on the other side building a defensive trench to keep out these invaders who seem to be seeking every nickel that comes in at the box office.

There is one item of tremendous importance in the Paramount-Artcraft contract. It has a two-weeks' cancellation clause. Many an exhibitor is going to have that before his eyes constantly when he counts up his box office receipts to find out whether he is working for himself or Mr. Zukor.

I can see no reason for either exhibitors or independent producers worrying in the least about the Paramount-Artcraft combination, because I believe there will be plenty of pictures for everybody outside of this combination, and, as a matter of fact, we have entirely too many pictures anyway, so that it may work out that Paramount will make a lot of pictures but only rent some of them after the first few months, which will show them what they might have done in the first place and bring Open Booking for good and all.

And, while I think of it—I want to say, as I have said before, that Open Booking is the only honest and fair way to release films. The program method of distribution never has been good because there has never been a program that has lived up to its standard. The program is all right for the lazy or incompetent exhibitor, but it naturally gives all the advantage to the producer, who, up to date, has freely taken advantage of his opportunities.

When once we get a program that is standardized, where the producer is man enough to put a bad picture on the shelf or make it over when it doesn't come up to standard, then the program system of distribution will be a very good one; but, still, it will not be as desirable for the intelligent exhibitor as the Open Market, which makes it possible for him to book every picture when he wants it and pay for it what it is worth.

Meanwhile, check up what the new trust wants for their stuff, figure out what you can buy good films for and study over whether the difference between the two spent in judicious advertising would not net you more money on the long run. It's worth giving a thought!

TERRIBLE MESS OF CROSS CURRENT EMOTIONS THAT MISS FIRE

Valeska Suratt in

WIFE NO. 2

Fox Film

DIRECTOR	William Nigh
AUTHOR	William Nigh
CAMERAMAN	Joseph Ruttenberg
AS A WHOLE	Weird situations and characters in impossible mess
STORY	Truly remarkable contradictory twists which wandered and wandered and never hit any human note
DIRECTION	Rather weird
PHOTOGRAPHY	Some long shots excellent; others very muddy; close-ups generally good
LIGHTINGS	Some very effective; others poor
CAMERA WORK	Exteriors excellent; close-ups good; interior long shots fair and poor
STAR	Hard-faced and masculine; did weird emotional work and wore ridiculous clothes
SUPPORT	Several impossible characters; none of them seemed real
EXTERIORS	Many exceptionally beautiful as to composition and general treatment
INTERIORS	Acceptable
DETAIL	Many impossible bits
TIME	Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

MOST anyone who goes to see a Valeska Suratt picture expects it to be weird. Certainly their expectations will be realized in this instance, because the situations are awful, some of the characterizations are worse and the attempts of the star to act at times are pathetic.

The story of this may have sounded well when it was first read in scenario form, but it surely is awful as presented on the screen with the titles which go with it. Some of the characterizations are absolutely uncanny, and certainly the human note is never touched.

The plot centers about Miss Suratt as an unhappy wife of a country doctor who listens to a wealthy neighbor and buys $3,000 worth of clothes from a funny looking fat tailor who seemed to be more of a shoemaker than the other thing. The scenes in which he attempts to secure payment for the gowns by being regarded with favor by Miss Suratt were certainly rather repulsive.

After much footage that never got anywhere, we found Suratt dead, and many details were given of the funeral arrangements. She was shown apparently lying in state, with a spotlight on her face, and several scenes were played in this room, with other scenes in a room where a half-dozen of the natives sat around looking solemn.

As originally laid out, this plot was apparently aimed for some good characterization work. The attempts of Miss Suratt to act, however, were very painful, and several times she had all the appearances of a man dressed up in woman's clothes. A number of the other characters were equally unable to register their characterizations in such a manner as to make them convince, and consequently this was such a mess that it was enough to get on anyone's nerves. As a man who came out of the theatre back of me said, "That was the sort of picture that was hard work to look at."

As a sample of some of the weird titles that were presented, most of which didn't seem to fit the action as originally played, there was one place where the husband's mother looked at Suratt and said: "All dressed up like a horse. . . . Going to a party?" I can't believe that anyone will accept this as a title which might have been spoken by any mother.

The Box Office Angle.

As I understand it, the method of getting money with Suratt is to depend upon her weird clothes to attract the women. Nobody ever has any hunch that she will be good as an actress, and, for that reason, it is possible that you can get this junk by, although I believe it is the worst I have ever seen her in—and that's going some!

Suratt does wear a lot of weird clothes, as usual, although a number of the costumes have been worn before, but it is extremely doubtful in my mind if intelligent fans will consider this anything worthy of their time—let alone their money—despite the wardrobe presented for their approval.

The story is such a contradictory mess and such a weird mixture of cross-current emotions that I am quite certain that no one will ever get any sense out of it. Suratt could act for a half an hour straight ahead and it would be impossible to tell any one emotion that she had registered, according to her past performances on the screen, so that makes it possible to title her emotions most anything. It looks to me as if they have done this in several instances here, possibly changing the original intent of the story in many ways, in an attempt to straighten it out. Unfortunately, they seem to have failed to make the plot any more understandable than it was in the first place.

RATHER TIRESOME BECAUSE OF FORCED COMEDY ATTEMPTS

Myrtle Gonzalez in

THE SHOW-DOWN

Bluebird

DIRECTOR.....Lynn F. Reynolds
AUTHOR.....Waldemar Young
CAMERAMAN.....Clyde R. Cook
AS A WHOLE.....Tropical island exteriors with shipwrecked party furnishing comedy and melo of ordinary calibre
STORY.....Based on sarcastic comedy proving inability of author to make good on popular novel statements
DIRECTION.....Registered some good touches, but many that failed utterly, with tiring results
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good, although lighting on faces not carefully planned
LIGHTINGS.....Acceptable; not particularly artistic
CAMERA WORK.....Varied
STAR.....Acceptable; nothing unusual
SUPPORT.....Registered occasionally, but overplayed frequently
EXTERIORS.....Many interesting shots of tropical locations
INTERIORS.....Very few
DETAIL.....Acceptable, although U-boat and patriotic melodrama evidently dragged
TIME.....Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

I AM afraid that the average fan is about in a mood to commence to get pretty sore when you pull one of these shipwrecked-on-the-island things. Of course, in this case they manipulated a lot of U boats torpedoing the ship carrying the cast, with a U boat station shelled by some warships from topical news-film stuff on the finish, but, nevertheless, the major part of this thing was devoted to a lot of junk about how an author of a popular book called "Into the Primitive" was unable to make good when he landed in such a predicament. Of course, the hero was the feller who knew what to do when the emergency arose, and, because of this, shero learned to love him.

Many attempts were made to put over comedy bits, but about 80 per cent. of these were so forced that they failed utterly to register, and, because of that, I fear the film will seem quite tiresome to intelligent patrons.

I doubt very much if this production was made with any intention of having the mysterious houses on the island, a secret U boat station of Germany in the Pacific, etc., but, nevertheless, the titles and editing, with the use of a little bit of battleship stuff showing broadsides being fired, brought this through very satisfactorily.

Never at any time does this really convince, because most of the action has been played too broadly. As a routine movie it'll get by with those who aren't particular. That about lets it out.

Almost the entire production was made up of exteriors, some of these being very interesting shots on a rocky coast, with other bits of tropical foliage which were quite interesting. The exteriors were really about the best thing in the picture.

The cast included George Hernandez and Jean Herscholt.

The Box Office Angle.

If you are playing routine program offerings for a few evenings a week, and find that you can get by because a certain number of your fans come in regularly whether your show is good, bad or indifferent, then this will undoubtedly get by for you as an average release. Certainly no one is ever going to enthuse over it. I can't figure that the star has any box office value, and surely her work in this doesn't justify her being played up.

If you feel safe in advertising very much on what is really an ordinary production, I'd center my billing on the question "Do you think you know how to take care of yourself and a party of friends in case you were shipwrecked on an island? See what happened to one wiseacre in 'THE SHOW-DOWN.' Would you risk your life in a rowboat on the Pacific Ocean to bring news to Uncle Sam of a secret station for German U boats? See 'THE SHOW-DOWN.' Which would you rather do, go hunt bananas or dig clams, if you found yourself ordered to do one or the other after landing on a tropical island with a shipwrecked party? See 'THE SHOW-DOWN.' Do you think you would like a steady diet of bananas and clam broth flavored with seaweed? Think it over and see 'THE SHOW-DOWN.'"

From the 4 Corners of the U.S.A.
Wide Awake Exhibitors Are Getting on the Band Wagon
With
George Beynon's Orchestral Settings
Their Orchestral Leaders Welcome This Successful Solution of "Fitting the Pictures" BEYNON'S Service is Well Worth While and
REASONABLE
Address - George W. Beynon
505 Fifth Ave., New York City.

THE ONE DOUG IN CLEVER STUFF THAT REGISTERS

Douglas Fairbanks in

DOWN TO EARTH

Fairbanks—Artcraft

DIRECTOR	John Emerson
AUTHOR	Douglas Fairbanks
SCENARIO BY	Anita Loos and John Emerson
CAMERAMAN	Victor Fleming
TITLES BY	Anita Loos
AS A WHOLE	Exceptionally clever; full of pep, humorous types and wonderful titles
STORY	A real idea sprinkled with quiet chuckles and hundreds of snickers
DIRECTION	Gave distinctive atmosphere, exceptional types, remarkably effective tempo and delightful technique in cutting scenes
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally excellent
LIGHTINGS	Always good; little attempt for effects
CAMERA WORK	Excellent
STAR	The best in the world
SUPPORT	Well chosen and played delightfully
EXTERIORS	Fitted story throughout—class where needed and suggestion of barrenness where desired
INTERIORS	Not many, but were very good
DETAIL	Hundreds of fine touches
TIME	Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

GET this and go to it!

This one is a little more quiet than some of Doug's have been, in that we don't have any melodrama and we have very little athletics, but it is all the more to the credit of the best drawing card in the world that this goes over like a shot without anything except a clever story, a personality and a general atmosphere of fitness. Since Doug gets credit for the story idea of this, he is certainly responsible for a goodly share of praise for the success of the entire offering.

Anita Loos steps well into the fore because of her exceptional titles, and, as has happened many times before, she pulled as many laughs with her very cleverly worded captions as the action itself registered. Of course, it was the perfectly balanced combination of beautiful action, perfectly chosen types, the star's personality and the situations which made these exceptional titles even more effective.

Producer John Emerson must be given credit for the tempo at which he played the various situations. He registered his points and went ahead without batting an eye, with the result that the interest didn't lag at any time.

I believe that this will prove a wonderfully successful Fairbanks film anywhere. Your audiences may not be as uproarious in their laughter and applause, but I'm willing to gamble that if you sit down in the center of your house you will find as many favorable comments on this, and as many quiet chuckles and snickers as Doug has ever registered in any of his productions. Instead of being wild fun, as some of his films have been, this is quiet humor and witty sarcasm. It registers—and that's the answer.

The plot had to do with Doug as the boy and Eileen Percy as the girl who had fought since childhood. Doug wanted to marry her when they grew up, and she couldn't "see" it.

Then, in three short flashes and three titles, Doug went to the top of a snow-clad mountain, to the tropics at the equator, and to his ranch in Wyoming. This was done in such a manner as to give a swing and a little speed to the whole story without really jarring you, because the titles were well handled and the scenes were beautifully done.

The girl then hit the "high spots" and landed in a sanitarium. Doug came to the rescue and found a weird but humorous assortment of people who thought they were ill, under the general guidance of a wise old gink who had become wealthy by allowing them to think they were ailing while he gave them harmless medicine and took their coin.

Doug had an inspiration. He bought out the sanitarium, pulled a smallpox scare and dragged the whole gang on his yacht. After "losing" them at sea, he sighted a "desert island" and landed them all on the island after a fake fire.

Realizing that Doug had pulled something, the party walked out on him and refused to associate with him. The result was that we had a lot of good laughs over their difficulties, while Doug proved his ability to take care of himself. Finally they came to him, one by one, to get something to eat, and Doug put them all to doing something which would cure their ailment.

After two months of this we found the whole gang having a wonderful time, and then the society simp, who had become engaged to Doug's girl, discovered that the mountain pass that had been guarded by Doug's hired "wild man from Weehawken" was really a little opening in the mountain that overlooked a summer resort city, thereby learning that they had been within a mile of civilization all the time.

Of course, by this time the girl had learned to love Doug, and when the society simp returned with a friend to abduct her, adopting Doug's cave-man tactics, our hero said that he would have to lick him, and in order to give him an even chance he would do it with one hand. He did. That was all.

Eileen Percy as the girl was decidedly more pleasing in this than in "Wild and Woolly." She had a better opportunity, because she was allowed to register before the camera a little more frequently, whereas in "Wild and Woolly" they kept her moving most of the time.

Charles Gerrard, who played the part of Charlie Riddle, the society simp, was an excellent foil for Doug. The other types were excellent and played perfectly.

Miss Loos handed the whole gang a bunch of names, such as the fat lady who was called Miss Helfer-Eaton, etc.

Others who appeared were Gustave Von Seyfertitz, Chas. P. McHugh, Ruth Allen, Wm. H. Keith, Frederick Goodwine, Florence Mayon, Bull Montana, David Porter, and Herbert Standing.

The Box Office Angle.

It's unnecessary to tell you what you can do with a Doug Fairbanks picture. The only advice I can give you is that the producer is not entitled to all of it. Figure out how much you can do, and then insist upon having a little of it for yourself. It's better business to let the other feller have it if he is going to play at a loss than to play it yourself—because it ain't no fun to have a good picture and do a terrific business and still lose money.

In advertising this I would emphasize particularly the fact that Doug furnished the idea for the story. I believe, also, that you can say with safety that it is the cleverest Fairbanks release to date. It isn't the wildest, but you can promise them that they will have more quiet chuckles and satisfying snickers than they have enjoyed in many, many moons.

You might, in a teaser campaign, start a little discussion by inquiries like this: "Have you pains in your back? Come DOWN TO EARTH." "Is your liver bad? Come DOWN TO EARTH." "Are you fearful of germs? Come DOWN TO EARTH." "Has a pink rhinoceros ever pursued you for days? Come DOWN TO EARTH." If you will start this sort of a teaser campaign, I'll gamble a plug nickel that it'll stir up somethin'. Of course, it is up to you to see that the "Down to Earth" name registers emphatically enough that your first official announcement that it is a Doug Fairbanks picture will tie up with your teaser campaign.

You might head your regular ads by saying, "You know Doug Fairbanks is an athlete; you know he is funny; you know he is a hero. Did you know he is an author? Come see his own story, "Down to Earth."

RATHER HUMAN STUFF DONE WELL ENOUGH TO PLEASE

John Drew Bennett in

ONE TOUCH OF NATURE

Edison Conquest—K-E-S-E

DIRECTOR.....Edward H. Griffith
AUTHOR.....Peter B. Kyne in S. E. P.
CAMERAMAN.....Charles Gilson
AS A WHOLE.....Will go anywhere despite occasional crudities and overplaying
STORY.....Decidedly human and registered big at times
DIRECTION..Handled baseball atmosphere exceptionally well; registered some delightful bits, but occasionally permitted overplaying that marred a little
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good
LIGHTINGS.....Little attempt for effects; generally satisfactory
CAMERA WORK.....Some good angles
STAR.....Quite pleasing
SUPPORT.....Some very good types, although some were overdrawn
EXTERIORS.....Generally good
INTERIORS.....Satisfactory; not exceptional
DETAIL.....A bit ragged at times, but satisfactory
TIME.....Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

COMPARED with the average run of ordinary routine program action stories, melodramas, chessboard domestic-troubles plots, etc., this ranks rather well above the general run.

The story of this had a human note and there were many very well written titles which were possibly either taken from Peter B. Kyne's Saturday Evening Post story or adapted from it, some of these titles landing harder than the action itself.

The baseball atmosphere about which most of the story was centered was well handled and rather effective. Manager John J. McGraw, of the N. Y. Giants, was shown in a number of scenes, and he got by with it for the most part very satisfactorily.

In some of the baseball situations the tempo was developed almost to the point where you were inclined to get a bit enthusiastic. On the other hand, they allowed the two fathers to run a bit wild towards the finish, going beyond the limits of what ordinary humans would do, and as a consequence they broke what might have been a very good situation by their overplaying, thus marring its effectiveness.

The star, John Drew Bennett, as the hero, was a very satisfactory juvenile, and Viola Cain as his sweetheart was a pleasing personality. She registered intelligently and played as if she believed what she was doing in most of her scenes.

The story was centered around the well-known situation of son ordered out of his home because he married against the wishes of his parents. In this case, however, they got a little humor out of it and made it somewhat human by titles which registered son's democracy in the manner of his approach when he told father and mother that the girl's father "had something to do" with the plumbing business.

Son, who had been scouted out as a find at college, was promptly hired by Manager McGraw to play with the Giants, and then father felt a bit proud of the boy, although he wouldn't admit it. He fixed up a patent scoreboard, resembling in a way a chessboard outfit, which he manipulated on his desk from a private wire to the Polo Grounds, where a paid attendant gave him the dope. He had said that he would not attend a game in which his son played, even though he was a dyed-in-the-wool fan.

When it came to the World's Series, father had a very exciting day with his office scoreboard, and when his boy put over a triple-sacker early in the session he beat it to the grounds without worrying about past resolutions. When the boy saw his old man he flunked and struck out.

In the well-known last inning, when the score was unfavorable, McGraw ordered another player to bat for the boy, and then the old man went down to plead with "Mugsy" that his son should not be taken out. His plea was heeded, and the kid, encouraged by his father's support, clouted the pill over the farthest sign in center field.

After that the two fathers had a joyfest, and the hero was taken home, where even mother was made to like it. A plumber's daughter and the plumber himself were a stiff dose for the aristocratic mother and the baseball bingler, but she came through with a smile, and then they quit.

In the cast were George Henry, Helen Strickland and Edward O'Connor.

The Box Office Angle

When you figure the fact that there are thousands and thousands of poor nuts in this country who can tell you more about the batting averages of some few hundred ball players than they can about the details of their own business, this must be reckoned with as a pretty good proposition.

For the most part, the story is rather humanly done, and surely the baseball angle has been put over. You can play this safely in most any house, and for transient business the presence of John McGraw might help it quite a bit, with the possibility of this same item being an influence in a community house.

In advertising for community patronage, however, I would center more attention upon the fact that this has been made from Peter B. Kyne's Saturday Evening Post story and has a very human appeal, than upon the presence of John McGraw. Don't run wild in your claims, but be reasonable, and I believe this will surely satisfy.

You might stir up some interest by saying, "Would you object to your boy marrying a plumber's daughter if he was a good plumber?" "What would you do if your boy signed up with the New York Giants after you had put him out of the house? Could you stay away from the game? See 'One Touch of Nature.'"

NORTHWEST STUFF FAIRLY PRESENTED BUT NOT A SPECIAL

Jane Grey in

HER FIGHTING CHANCE

A. H. Jacobs Photoplays—Frank G. Hall—State Rights

DIRECTOR.....Edwin Carewe
AUTHOR.....James Oliver Curwood
CAMERAMAN.....Arthur Martinelli
AS A WHOLE.....Northwest woods melo that never hit any high spots; has been done before just as well, in less footage STORY.....Old plot of villainous Mounted Policeman attacking wife of innocent man whom he had sought as criminal
DIRECTION.....Gave some very beautiful snow exteriors, but oodles of unnecessary action, unconvincing melodramatic scenes and climaxes that missed fire because of bad timing of action
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied from fine to poor
LIGHTINGS.....Some very effective; others good; some poor
CAMERA WORK.....Varied decidedly
STAR.....Very pleasing at times, but occasionally looked bad and missed fire in some scenes
SUPPORT.....Failed to make action convince
EXTERIORS.....A few very beautiful shots; generally good snow stuff
INTERIORS.....Most of cabin scenes good, although some rather ordinary
DETAIL.....Several slips in action
TIME.....Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

I CAN'T consider this a State rights special worthy of the name, because it is only a Northwest woods melodrama based on an idea which has been used before in similar productions of less footage, where it was done just as satisfactorily, if not more so.

One of the faults with this film was that there was entirely too much unnecessary footage, this frequently being a fault to the extent of making the offering decidedly tiresome.

The general atmosphere was good, but the action dragged.

Jane Grey was quite pleasing in many of her scenes and photographed to splendid advantage in some close-ups, but upon several occasions she looked rather bo and sometimes—particularly in the dancing scenes—she didn't register to advantage.

If this had been edited into less footage it would have been much improved. Many of the titles were also quite poor.

Good snow stuff is always interesting to the average audience, and some of the shots shown here were truly beautiful. The distance shot of the exterior of Miss Grey's home was decidedly artistic.

The plot was one of those movie melos having to do with the happy couple in the woods whose home was visited by a villainous Mounted Policeman in search of a murderer. The wife was attacked by this man, who believed her husband guilty of the murder, and she agreed to sacrifice herself to save hubby, only to learn on the finish that hubby was not guilty, this being cleared up by the confession of the real murderer at a convenient moment.

The story moved slowly at times, and then when they finally got down to the rip-and-tear blood-and-thunder stuff where they fought with knives, etc., we had the husband made prisoner, only to see him hurl a chair through a window in making an escape, after which he stopped to kiss his wife good-bye before starting to run. To my mind, it would have been much more intelligent to have had him kiss his wife before he made a noise. However, the director made the Policeman in the next room stop to put on his cap and gloves before he started to chase this gink, so that the slowness of one was offset by the slowness of the other. Most any fan will be inclined to quarrel over such a delay in scenes that are supposed to be action.

Thomas Holding as the hero hubby was tall enough and broad enough, but he failed to give the proper suggestion of power to his portrayal. His struggles lacked enough of the element of sincerity to make them convince.

Percy Standing as the Policeman was satisfactory, but failed to make any lasting impression. He was just a brute type.

In accordance with the handling of the scene where Hubby made his getaway from the cabin, we found, a little later, that an officer from the post sat in a sledge awaiting the return of some of his men, and listened to about a dozen shots fired by the two men who were standing behind trees, plugging away at one another, before he decided that there must be something wrong and bestirred himself from his comfortable position to go look and see what it was all about. Such things as these could have been remedied by cutting, and surely many such alterations would have helped the film decidedly.

The Box Office Angle.

This can get by about on an average with a routine program release. There's nothing about the production to justify your calling for a special business on it, and if you value the confidence of your fans I would say that it would be rather unwise for you to attempt to make them believe that this is something exceptional.

You can safely promise that there is some beautiful snow stuff and you can talk a little bit about Jane Grey, although I wouldn't make too much of a fuss over her, since she does nothing particularly remarkable in this production. You might call attention to her having appeared in "Let Katy Do It," which was one of her most successful productions at Triangle, and if you think it wise, you might refer to Thomas Holding's appearances on the Paramount program. Personally, I don't believe that Mr. Holding has made much of an impression, but you know just how strong he is in your community. Percy Standing was a prominent figure in "The Fall of a Nation," if that ever made good with you.

Outside of the fact that this is a story of the Northwest Mounted Police, I can't figure any advertising angle that marks it as exceptional. There's nothing distinctive about the plot or the manner in which it has been produced.

HEART STIRRING HAND COLORED PATRIOTIC SLIDES 25c. Each

71. If It's Worth Living Under, It's Worth Fighting For.
54. Americans Must Protect America.
95. We Are With You, Mr. President. One Hundred Million Strong.
53. Your Country Needs You.
28. American Flag.
95. President Wilson & Flag.
60. Geo. Washington.
45. The Birth of the American Flag.
70. Abraham Lincoln.
76. Spirit of '76—Reflects in 1917.
27. If It's Good Enough to Live Under, It's Worth Fighting for.
87. Pledge Allegiance.
68. Star Spangled Banner.
42. My Country 'Tis of Thee (Flag).

EXCELSIOR ILLUSTRATING CO., 219 Sixth Ave. New York City

STAR AND GOOD ATMOSPHERE HELPED, BUT MELO HURT

Mabel Taliaferro in

THE JURY OF FATE

Rolfe—Metro

DIRECTOR	Tod Browning
AUTHOR	Finis Fox
SCENARIO BY	June Mathis
CAMERAMAN	Charles W. Hoffman
AS A WHOLE	Started well but finished as melo; atmosphere pleasing throughout
STORY	A fair half-reel
DIRECTION	Gave excellent atmosphere and made characterizations pleasing until hit melodrama, which was ordinary
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally very good
LIGHTINGS	Some quite effective; generally good
CAMERA WORK	Generally pleasing
STAR	Quaint little personality; had sympathetic appeal
SUPPORT	Generally satisfactory; Bennett pleasing
EXTERIORS	Many very artistic; generally good
INTERIORS	A few excellent; generally good
DETAIL	Some convenient but generally satisfactory
TIME	Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

STARTING off with a story which presented Miss Taliaferro in two parts, playing a boy and a girl (twins), this was made very interesting for sev-reels by intimate scenes of the star and interesting and beautiful exterior atmosphere. About the third reel they pulled the well-known accident above the falls, with the two twins going over in the canoe, and Frank Bennett, who had been playing the sympathetic hero in the background, rescued the girl, while the boy was drowned. That ended the double-exposure work.

They then began on the melodrama having to do with the marriage which had been pre-arranged by the father when the children were babies, and we had a mix-up occasioned by Miss Taliaferro, as the girl who had been rescued, deciding that her father would never be able to withstand the shock of the news of the death of his son who had always been favored, with the result that she cut off her hair, put on boy's clothes and played the part of the son who had been drowned.

When father died she was sent to his old friend, and so the pre-arranged wedding was brought into action after all. Then came our hero who had met Miss Taliaferro in the woods and learned to love her, and there was also the trapper lad, Mr. Bennett, who had been faithful if unappreciated.

It was necessary then to get rid of the old friend's son who was lined up for the wedding, and so they pulled the good old misunderstanding stuff, with the guy who was to be killed insulting the heroine after the misunderstanding, which made it possible for Mr. Bennett, the trapper sympathetic hero, to go up and kill the prospective bridegroom so that he could afterwards hand over the heroine to the man she had loved all the time.

Just to make the finish more like "The Barrier," they sent the sympathetic woodsman hero down the river in his canoe.

Miss Taliaferro is quite pleasing. She is pretty and has a certain appeal that holds the interest even when she is doing little or nothing.

Frank Bennett, as the half-breed lover who had to save the heroine upon several occasions and finally hand her over to her lover, was very good. He is a young man who will probably be remembered from Fine Arts productions of the past.

Billy Sherwood, as the juvenile, was pleasing although he had little to do except stand around and smile upon occasions.

Bradley Barker was the prospective bridegroom who had to stick around until it was time to be killed. He did that satisfactorily.

The Box Office Angle

Figured as a program release I believe this will be satisfactory despite the fact that it becomes quite some meller towards the end. Most of your fans will have it doped out long before they get to the finish, and many of them will fuss a bit because it moves too slowly in getting down to the real plot development.

However, the general atmosphere is quite pleasing and I believe Mabel Taliaferro's personality is sufficient to carry this over and have it register as a satisfactory production.

"The Jury of Fate" means very little to me and will probably mean less to your fans, and so I would emphasize Miss Taliaferro more than anything else, telling them that she plays two parts, and registering particularly her portrayal of the part of a boy, using photographs to show how different her characterizations are.

You might stir up some interest in this by printing two pictures—one of Miss Taliaferro as a boy and one of her as herself—and possibly use several other photos with them, asking your fans to pick out which faces are those of Miss Taliaferro. You would of course have to do this before you announce that she is playing the part of a boy in this picture.

You might also work along this line. Use just a picture of her as a boy, alone, showing the full photograph, and not just the face, offering to give a season pass to the first person telling you who this star is.

Don't promise too much about the story of this. It isn't there. Depend rather upon saying that it is a beautiful production with a delightful star doing an exceptional bit of characterization that is different.

ERNEST STERN, Inc.
THE TITLE MAN
Specializes in
MOTION PICTURE TITLES
OF THE HIGHEST GRADE
729 Seventh Ave., New York - - Phone Bryant 8973

CRANE WILBUR
Exclusive Management
MABEL CONDON EXCHANGE
LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

GEORGE EDWARDES-HALL
WITH
HERBERT BRENON

ORDINARY MOVIE WITH VERY GOOD STAR HANDICAPPED

Marjorie Rambeau in

MARY MORELAND

Frank Powell—Mutual

DIRECTOR	Frank Powell
AUTHOR	Marie Van Vorst
SCENARIO BY	Clara S. Beranger
CAMERAMAN	Billy Wagner
AS A WHOLE	Rather ordinary movie, lacking intimate touches and convincing realism
STORY	Elementary and obvious; failed to impress at any time
DIRECTION	Failed to register intimate touches, leaving action rather mechanical
PHOTOGRAPHY	Good for sets; not for faces
LIGHTINGS	Excellent for sets; poor for faces
CAMERA WORK	Varied
STAR	Very good, but not handled to advantage
SUPPORT	Ordinary
EXTERIORS	Acceptable
INTERIORS	Very good
DETAIL	Acceptable
TIME	Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

AS in the case of several other Powell productions in which Marjorie Rambeau has appeared, the star was not shown to advantage in this, and, while we had some good sets and some excellent lightings for the sets, most of the photography was poor, so far as the faces were concerned.

There was nothing of truly dramatic significance to the story, and at no time did it impress sufficiently to cause any one to enthuse over the plot. It just moved along without really starting anything at any time. It is possible that your average fan will look this over and accept it, even though it doesn't get out of the ordinary rut, but it seems a pity to me that Miss Rambeau, who is very capable, should not have had better opportunities.

The story had to do with a man who loved his stenographer and didn't fully realize it until after she was gone, and we had a lot of footage showing what she did after she left and how he missed her, with visions, etc., and then the wife conveniently died so that they could get together again.

A novelist capable of developing characterization can take this sort of material and make it into an interesting book. Stripped of this characterization and left only as action, it fails to make any impression whatever. If more of our directors would realize that action fails to make good pictures to-day, we would be better off.

In the cast were Gene La Mott, Auguste Burmeister, Fraser Tarbutt, Edna M. Holland and Robert Elliott.

The Box Office Angle.

You know by now what Marjorie Rambeau is worth at your box office. The chances are that she isn't worth as much now as she was at first, and certainly this particular subject isn't going to enhance her value any.

As an average release on the program basis you can possibly get it by without an unusual number of kicks, because it moves along with a lot of sets that have some trick lighting in them, and the general atmosphere is sufficiently different from the ordinary cheap melodrama that many of your fans may consider it their fault that they can't appreciate Miss Rambeau and this story by such a well-known author.

You can feel very sure, however, that your intelligent fans will know that this isn't "there." If you are trying to make them believe that you know good pictures when you see them, and are picking only what is good, then take my advice and dig up something else.

If for any reason you are going to play this, center all the attention upon Miss Rambeau and the author of the book, referring to Miss Rambeau as the star of the big New York stage success "Cheating Cheaters."

UNCONVINCING MOVIE HITS AND MISSES IN GOOD ATMOSPHERE

Gladys Hulette in

THE STREETS OF ILLUSION

Astra—Pathe

DIRECTOR	William Parke
AUTHOR	Andrew Soutar
SCENARIO BY	Philip Bartholomae
CAMERAMAN	Albert Richard
AS A WHOLE	Action didn't convince, but was interesting, and atmosphere was very good
STORY	Had some good touches, but generally failed to convince
DIRECTION	Gave distinctive atmosphere and some good characterization touches, but frequently missed human note
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally very good
LIGHTINGS	Many very effective; generally artistic
CAMERA WORK	Generally very good
STAR	Pleasing, appealing personality
SUPPORT	Some very good types, but frequently lacked close-ups to put over their touches
EXTERIORS	Satisfactory
INTERIORS	Generally very good
DETAIL	Some good bits
TIME	Fifty-nine minutes (5 parts)

THE lightings in this and the general atmosphere, which was quite pleasing, gave a background to this story which will make it quite satisfactory to the average film fan accustomed to accept program releases, despite the fact that the story, although interesting, seldom hits a convincing spot capable of really registering at the heart. Most of the action just happens, and too often do we find situations that fail to ring true.

Miss Hulette is rather pleasing in the characterization of the struggling little boarding-housekeeper, and there are many little bits of business in connection with her arrangement of the house and her treatment of her blind father that have a certain amount of appeal. Unfortunately, a majority of the incidents seemed too much like movie stuff to register as they were expected.

William Parke, Jr., appeared as Miss Hulette's brother, about whom she made up stories which she read to their blind father, these stories telling of heroic deeds which the boy had never performed.

Finally he came home a deserter, landing at the house the same night that a stranger had engaged a room in which to commit suicide. It "just happened" that this stranger was the father of the man who loved Miss Hulette, father's notion about the suicide being caused by a belief that he was very ill.

Of course on the finish the brother was made brave again and sent back to war, the lover's father was convinced that he shouldn't commit suicide and every one was happy. A kiddie was used in a number of scenes to advantage, and the finale was built around a Christmas party arranged in honor of this youngster.

Upon several occasions we found titles that were very poorly worded. The general sense was evident, but the language was in error.

Others who appeared were William P. Burt, William Marion, Logan Paul, J. H. Gilmour, Doris Grey, Richard Barthelmess, Will Dudley, William Yearance, Kathryn Adams and William Marion.

The Box Office Angle.

This is not an exceptional feature nor one that will send any audience away enthusiastic. It is just a rather well done movie story with very convenient angles which has a chance to get by because Miss Hulette is a pleasing little lady and the director has given a rather artistic atmosphere with some lightings quite effective.

The title of this sounds fairly interesting, so that possibly you can consider it a safe bet. Certainly I would not call it anything more than an average program release, and I wouldn't make any rash promises regarding it.

In advertising this you might work along these lines: "Do you know the value of illusions? Sometimes they help make life worth while. See 'THE STREETS OF ILLUSION.' Have you ever had any illusions which helped you? Think it over. See Gladys Hulette in 'THE STREETS OF ILLUSION.'"

TERRIBLE MESS OF MELLER AND ATTEMPTED COMEDY

Joe Welch in

THE PEDDLER

U. S. Amus. Corp.—Art Dramas

DIRECTOR ..... Herbert Blache
AUTHOR ..... Hal Reid
SCENARIO BY ..... Frederic Chapin
CAMERAMAN ..... John G. Haas
AS A WHOLE ..... Awful messy mixture of hokum meller and attempt at Hebrew comedy
STORY ..... Could hardly have been worse had he dreamed it DIRECTION ..... Very, very crude; decidedly old-school
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Ordinary
LIGHTINGS ..... Generally poor
CAMERA WORK ..... Ordinary
STAR ..... Crude and amateurish as screen player SUPPORT ..... Routine movie meller types player as such EXTERIORS ..... Ordinary
INTERIORS ..... Poor
DETAIL ..... Very crude, with painful titles
TIME ..... Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

I CAN just see some well-meaning friend telling Joe Welch how "successful" he would be in the movies. I can imagine that this successful vaudeville monologist had very little respect for the movies, to begin with, and will have much less after he finds out that his film has been a flivver.

"The Peddler" was one of those good old melodramas that saw service in the old days. Boy, it's criminal to bring those birds back! They pulled all the hokum from the scenes at the race-track to the mortgage on the old home. A good part of the footage was devoted to a mix-up that son got into, where he seemed to be "keeping" one woman while he was married to another. This was so crudely done as to acting, settings, titles and other detail, however, that I doubt if any censors will ever stop to worry about the "moral" angle.

An attempt has been made to use comedy titles where Joe speaks, and people may laugh at them, but never with them. The other titles—and there were certainly too many of them—were decidedly wordy and fearfully written.

To give you an idea as to what they cared about realism in the plot, we came to the last reel, after son had been ruining father through much footage, and up walked the gentleman who probably got $3.00 a day, with the question on his lips, did Mr. Welch own some property in Oklahoma. "Why, yes," said Mr. Welch. "Well," said the young man, "they have struck oil on your land, and I have been commissioned to offer you $500,000 for it." And thereupon he handed Joe a check. Boy, can you beat that?

Of course, oil companies are inclined toward philanthropy, and I believe they make a practice of always seeking out those from whom they wish to purchase land, thus making it easier for their conscience in case they should happen to make five hundred thousand and ten dollars out of the property which might have been purchased for a paltry two or three hundred, had they neglected to be honest, frank and truthful in their dealings when trying to purchase the property which they knew in their hearts was of great value.

Mr. Welch wore a make-up that was very, very bad. At no time could any one have suggested that he was anything but a three-dollar-a-day extra except for the fact that he had been billed as the star of this, and many folk will remember his name from vaudeville.

In the cast were Sidney Mason, Sally Crute, Kittens Reichert and Catherine Calvert.

The Box Office Angle

If you have any respect for your patrons, forget this! It's quite possible that you have been playing Art Dramas and getting by with them because some have been just "good," some have been fair and some have been poor—but, boy, this is plain rotten!

If you want to bill it, in case there's any reason why you simply can't avoid it, take your public into your confidence and explain that you think it is one of the rottenest pictures you have ever seen. Figured on that basis, they may have a good time sitting through it.

Working along similar lines you might say that it is a production which has been patterned after those which were successful some years ago. You might suggest, also, that if they want to appreciate the difference between the old methods and those which they sometimes criticize to-day, they should see this in order to realize how much improvement has been made even in films that they are inclined to criticize. By comparing this with just an ordinary film of modern technique, they can see that some of the films they thought weak are not bad at all compared with what they might have been.

Of course, the sensible thing to do is to let the other feller have this while you play something has signs of life.

HAROLD LOCKWOOD
Yorke--Metro

QUICK ANNOUNCEMENTS FOR YOUR SCREEN
SLIDENE OUTFIT: all complete $1.00
6 bottles slide ink; 25 cover glasses; 6 special pens; 2 slide charts
Novelty Typewriter Slides ..... $3.50 per 100
Handy Slide Holder and Clip FREE.
NOVELTY SLIDE CO., 115 East 23d St., New York.

TABULATED PERCENTAGE REPORTS FROM EXHIBITORS

THE BATTING AVERAGES

These are the averages of the companies having 200 reports or more.

Reports		% P. P.	% B. O.	Repeat
660	Fox	73.1	70.8	85
531	Metro	70.8	67.0	49
1813	Triangle	70.6	65.2	354
429	Vitagraph	68.1	66.2	74
2079	Paramount	68.7	62.9	336
454	World	67.7	61.5	41
240	Bluebird	62.7	63.5	20

THE NUMBER BEFORE THE NAME OF TH FEATURE INDICATES THE NUMBER OF RE PORTS RECEIVED AND TABULATED ON THA FILM.

THE FIRST COLUMN CARRIES THE PER CENTAGE OF PLEASED PATRONS.

THE SECOND COLUMN SHOWS THE BO OFFICE PERCENTAGE.

FIGURES IN THE THIRD COLUMN INDICAT THAT MANY REPORTED THE FILM WORTH RETURN DATE.

All reports in this percentage tabulation have been marked on this scale:

EXCEPTIONAL	100%
EXCELLENT	80%
GOOD	60%
FAIR	40%
POOR	20%
BAD	0%

PARAMOUNT

2079 Paramount 68.7 62.9 336

Reports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
8	In Bishop's Carriage	95	91
2	The Lost Paradise	50	73
7	The Virginian	84	78	2
2	Such a Little Queen	78	78	1
1	Marta of the Lowlands	50	70
3	Where the Trail Divides	93	90	1
11	Wildflower	89	82	6
1	The County Chairman	80	80
1	What's His Name	75	100
4	Behind the Screen	86	83
5	Man from Mexico	90	70	2
1	The Man From Home	70	70
1	Circus Man	94	95
2	Rose of the Rancho	84	77
4	The Bargain	85	86	3
2	Ghost Breakers	60	63
6	The Crucible	94	92	2
1	False Colors	50	80
5	The Sign of the Cross	79	85
4	Cameo Kirby	61	50
7	Cinderella	85	92	3
1	The Million	70	90
4	Girl of the Golden West	78	71	2
3	The Dancing Girl	65	65
3	The Italian	77	62	1
1	No Laughing Matter	90	85
1	Morals of Marcus	60	50
5	The Goose Girl	95	95	4
2	After Five	51	50
1	Mistress Nell	88	95
2	Buckshot John	60	60
3	Her Triumph	60	74	1
3	The Warrens of Virginia	70	71	1
1	Country Boy	60	60
6	David Harem	82	78	1
1	A Gentleman of Leisure	80	70
2	The Caprices of Kitty	63	70
1	Love Route	60	60
1	Sunshine Molly	40	20
1	The Governor's Lady	97	85
3	Gretna Green	100	100	2
3	Are You a Mason?	78	84
1	Pretty Mrs. Smith	65	90
1	The Unafraid	80	75
1	When We Were 21	75	63
4	Snobs	64	52
5	Captain Courtesy	84	66	1
3	Captive	82	67
2	Niobe	75	55	1
3	Help Wanted	80	75
5	The Woman	86	59	1
5	House of Lost Court	82	54	1
4	Fanchon, The Cricket	89	92	3
3	Betty in Search of Thrill	83	81
5	Stolen Goods	78	75
2	Wild-Goose Chase	60	55	1
6	Pretty Sister Jose	84	81	2
5	Jim the Penman	64	63
6	The Dawn of a To-morrow	83	88	1
5	Arab	89	56	2
1	Clarissa	75	80
2	The Dictator	45	45
5	Wild Olive	82	69
6	Chimmy Fadden	91	75	1
3	Little Pal	79	83
4	Rugmaker's Daughter	40	50
2	The Clue	74	88
6	Kindling	81	82
1	The Running Fight	60	70
3	The Fighting Hope	77	80
5	Kilmeny	75	73
8	Seven Sisters	86	74	1
3	Puppet Crown	80	85
19	Rags	91	92	5
2	Sold	83	72
6	The Secret Orchid	79	74
5	Nearly a Lady	65	75
6	The Marriage of Kitty	76	64
3	Poor Schmaltz	63	37
8	Helene of the North	87	81	2
3	The Majesty of the Law	56	60
3	Heart of Jennifer	68	55
2	Incorrigible Dukane	75	55
4	Esmeralda	89	89	2
2	The Case of Becky	65	65
1	Out of Darkness	60	40
1	Peer Gynt	82	100
4	The Explorers	72	61
4	'Twas Ever Thus	53	68
2	Voice in the Fog	75	67
6	Fatal Card	65	59
4	Zaza	91	67	2
6	The Girl of Yesterday	89	88	3
7	White Pearl	71	75
4	Blackbirds	57	58
7	Chorus Lady	73	68
6	The Secret Sin	69	74	1
7	Yankee Girl	52	57
6	Masqueraders	56	56
11	Carmen	82	82	3
12	Still Waters	94	83	7
8	Madame Butterfly	82	89	2
7	Mummy and Humming Bird	61	56
7	Bella Donna	92	77	4
8	Armstrong's Wife	79	65
5	Chimmie Fadden Out West	81	75	2
8	A Gentleman From Indiana	86	78
9	The Prince and the Pauper	92	88	4
10	Mr. Grex from Monte Carlo	84	69	1
9	Jane	75	51
9	The Unknown	76	67	1
18	The Cheat	94	80	12
9	The Reform Candidate	80	54	1
9	The Immigrant	73	62
10	The Old Homestead	88	84	7
8	Lydia Gilmore	82	61	1
10	Temptation	82	77	2
9	The Foundling	78	76	3
5	Tongues of Men	82	58	1
7	Mice and Men	84	84	4
6	The Golden Chance	80	68	2
1	My Lady Incog	40	40
4	Ragamuffins	77	57
4	Call of Cumberlands	77	72
7	The Spider	87	70
9	Pudd'n Head Wilson	81	66
8	Tennessee's Pardner	85	59
7	Madame Le Presidente	21	48
8	Nearly King	52	53
12	Trail of Lonesome Pine	75	88
7	Fell in Love with Wife	56	52
7	Blacklist	61	53
9	Out of the Drifts	90	89
8	Diplomacy	88	56
13	Poor Little Peppina	88	85
15	To Have and To Hold	75	72
11	Ben Blair	72	65
9	For the Defense	68	66
6	The Code of Marcia Gray	70	66
8	The Lost Bridegroom	80	70
7	The Saleslady	75	66
14	Audrey	75	72
8	The Sowers	65	60
10	The Heart of Paula	72	57
11	The Race	71	62
7	The Eternal Grind	71	82
9	The Love Mast	58	56
9	Molly Make-Believe	87	83
7	The Red Widow	62	55
12	The Heart of Nora Flynn	72	60
8	A Moment Before	52	64
12	David Garrick	68	46
9	The Innocent Lie	56	51
16	Marie Rosa	81	80
12	Alien Souls	69	67
13	The Feud Girl	60	56
16	Pasquale	78	53
16	Sweet Kitty Bellairs	72	62
20	Saints and Sinners	51	49
17	Thousand-Dollar Husband	69	62
3	A Gutter Magdalene	62	54
10	Evil Thereof	44	44
15	The Making of Maddalena	63	57
23	Silks and Satins	85	88
14	Destiny's Toy	60	51
19	The Clown	79	54
20	Susie Snowflakes	69	59
16	The World's Great Snare	73	78
19	The American Beauty	61	61
22	The Dupe	64	64
22	The Smugglers	53	50
26	The Selfish Woman	72	68
29	Davy Crockett	67	62
28	The Dream Girl	69	64
28	Under Cover	79	75
27	International Marriage	55	51
27	Common Ground	64	64
35	Hulda from Holland	95	94
30	House of Golden Windows	73	64
22	A Woman in the Case	72	72
25	Little Lady Eileen	87	89
22	The Stronger Love	53	52
21	Public Opinion	82	72
20	Rolling Stones	67	62
21	The Honorable Friend	65	62
19	The Victory of Conscience	60	60
20	Each Pearl a Tear	75	72
22	The Parson of Panamint	79	70
14	The Big Sister	48	59

Re-		%	%	Re-
ports		P.P.	B.O.	peat
14	The Reward of Patience	65	55
15	The House of Lies	73	65	1
13	The Daughter of MacGregor	55	46
18	Ashes of Embers	85	83	7
16	The Quest of Life	59	61
14	Anton, the Terrible	46	45
17	The Lash	57	55
13	The Storm	75	65	1
19	The Intrigue	81	61	2
16	Her Father's Son	74	68	2
14	Witchcraft	55	55
14	The Kiss	74	68	2
16	The Rainbow Princess	82	74	3
15	Seventeen	85	74	2
13	Miss George Washington	94	94	10
15	The Heir to the Hoorah	82	69	5
16	The Soul of Kura San	80	73	1
13	A Son of Erin	79	73	2
10	Unprotected	53	55	1
11	The Years of the Locust	49	50
12	The Plow Girl	77	63
9	The Yellow Pawn	66	57	1
9	Nanette of the Wilds	50	57	2
7	Martyrdom of Philip Strong	53	55	1
10	The Coney Island Princess	62	63	1
10	The Road to Love	72	59	1
14	Oliver Twist	85	69	6
13	The Victoria Cross	44	54	1
17	The Traveling Salesman	78	60	3
20	The Right Direction	76	61	2
21	Snow White	95	95	13
16	Redeeming Love	63	60	1
21	The Slave Market	74	70	5
12	The Evil Eye	30	44	1
9	Great Expectations	74	55	1
7	Happiness of Three Women	73	58	1
14	Betty to the Rescue	46	48
6	A Girl Like That	55	51
6	Lost and Won	59	50
9	The Golden Fetter	50	56
8	His Sweetheart	83	58	2
8	The Wax Model	67	56
8	Each to His Kind	62	61
5	Her Own People	72	51
1	The Black Wolf	35	41
7	The American Consul	53	50	1
8	The Fortunes of Fifi	65	76	2
0	On Record	62	56	2
6	Winning of Sally Temple	39	48
7	Those Without Sin	51	50	1
8	Castles For Two	51	48	1
3	Out of the Wreck	60	54
3	Sapho	74	83	3
9	Prison Without Walls	52	51
1	The Dummy	70	54
8	The Spirit of Romance	63	52
8	As Men Love	73	53
0	The Bottle Imp	75	66	2
7	The Band Between	50	39
8	A School for Husbands	49	46	1
8	The Lonesome Chap	51	44
9	Sleeping Fires	56	63	1
8	The Tides of Barnegat	49	43
8	The Cost of Hatred	40	38
0	The Valentine Girl	73	76
4	Unconquered	14	18
5	The Girl at Home	45	39
4	Heart's Desire	24	34
7	Sacrifice	27	42
5	The Primrose Ring	30	38
7	The Silent Partner	30	34
5	Marcellini Millions	43	28
5	The Highway of Hope	29	25
5	Her Better Self	55	58
6	The Undying Flame	27	40
5	Freckles	65	53
4	The World Apart	38	31
2	Giving Becky a Chance	70	51
3	The Jaguar's Claws	40	47
4	The Inner Shrine	38	58
3	The Roadside Impresario	28	17
5	The Heir of the Ages	23	22
2	Her Strange Wedding	20	30
2	The Little Boy Scout	40	20
3	At First Sight	40	34
2	Big Timber	60	60
2	Love That Lives	70	80
2	Forbidden Paths	40	40
1	What Money Can't Buy	40	40

Re-		%	%	Re-
ports		P.P.	B.O.	peat
TRIANGLE
1813	Triangle	70.6	65.2	354
10	The Iron Strain	81	66	2
9	The Lamb	84	75	3
9	Old Heidelberg	72	63	1
11	The Coward	84	67	1
9	Martyrs of the Alamo	67	57	2
14	The Disciple	85	76	2
7	Matrimony	81	74	2
5	Sable Lorcha	64	53
6	The Golden Claw	61	72
9	Double Trouble	64	64	2
7	Aloha Oe	63	65	1
5	Lily and Rose	61	53
8	Jordan is a Hard Road	56	52
6	Winged Idol	53	52
8	Penitents	28	32
11	The Edge of the Abyss	67	61
4	Submarine Pirate	85	78	1
5	Cross Currents	48	45
11	Between Men	72	70	1
14	Let Katy Do It	87	66	6
5	The Corner	56	47
5	The Missing Link	55	43	1
3	Beckoning Flame	65	48
9	The Wood Nymph	54	50	1
8	The Conqueror	71	70
9	Price of Power	55	51
10	The Green Swamp	80	78	1
12	Acquitted	69	51
6	D'Artagnan	59	54
18	His Picture in the Papers	90	75	5
13	Honor's Altar	77	67	2
14	Betty of Greystone	77	65	2
23	Peggy	94	91	15
7	Don Quixote	57	56
9	The Last Act	79	78	1
11	Daphne and the Pirate	71	57	1
18	Hell's Hinges	93	89	11
17	The Flying Torpedo	88	80	8
14	Bullets and Brown Eyes	85	75	3
14	Martha's Vindication	79	72	2
14	Moral Fabric	75	62	1
15	Hoodoo Ann	68	65	1
15	The Raiders	79	70
14	The Habit of Happiness	92	85	5
8	Waifs	70	59	1
8	Little Meena's Romance	64	60	1
17	The Aryan	59	80	6
10	Sold for Marriage	71	72	1
17	Stepping Stones	85	75	2
10	Sunshine Dad	36	46
9	Civilization's Child	68	64	1
14	Children In the House	80	66	2
11	The Beggar of Cawnpore	61	49
19	The Good-Bad Man	90	92	4
12	The No-Good Guy	74	60	3
17	Susan Rocks the Boat	69	63
20	Not My Sister	79	77	4
18	Child of Paris Streets	76	64
22	The Primal Lure	82	76	7
8	Mr. Goode, the Samaritan	53	53
26	The Market of Vain Desire	79	64	5
22	Going Straight	77	78	3
20	The Bugle Call	93	79	9
26	Reggie Mixes In	93	80	11
16	The Sorrows of Love	66	69	1
21	An Innocent Magdalene	71	71	2
18	The Dividend	70	68	1
21	The Wild Girl of Sierras	45	53
25	An Apostle of Vengeance	88	83	4
18	Cusey at the Bat	44	48
28	The Phantom	83	72	7
30	Flirting With Fate	87	86	11
31	The Deserter	85	69	11
26	The Little School Ma'am	74	67	2
26	The Eye of the Night	74	58	5
19	Stranded	60	50
27	The Captive God	65	70	2
23	The Halfbreed	72	74	2
22	The Payment	81	70	3
18	The Marriage of Molly O	48	47
24	Honor Thy Name	87	73	4
22	The Devil's Needle	64	64	1
30	Shell 43	87	68	6
26	Hell-to-Pay Austin	83	66	6
21	Lieutenant Danny, U. S. A.	79	69
16	Pillars of Society	59	56	1
22	Home	91	80	9

Re-		%	%	Re-
ports		P.P.	B.O.	peat
16	Gretchen the Greenhorn	64	62	2
21	The Patriot	79	80	6
24	The Social Secretary	89	75	8
17	The Thoroughbred	82	72	1
11	The Little Liar	69	57
19	The Wolf Woman	86	89	6
16	The Dawnmaker	58	78	3
20	Diane of the Follies	71	72	2
27	Manhattan Madness	94	92	12
22	Plain Jane	88	75	5
20	Old Folks at Home	81	64	2
17	The Jungle Child	60	61	1
15	The Rummy	67	54	1
21	The Return of Draw Egan	88	86	7
20	The Vagabond Prince	75	70	3
19	Somewhere in France	76	69	1
18	A Corner in Colleens	88	80	7
12	A Sister of Six	69	64	2
21	Fifty-Fifty	89	83	6
4	War's Women	61	48
13	Alta Bay's Last Race	54	55
16	American Aristocracy	92	89	9
10	The Microscope Mystery	50	43
14	Honorable Algy	76	65	3
14	Jim Grimsby's Boy	68	62	2
15	The Devil's Double	91	91	7
12	The Children Paid	72	63	3
14	Children of the Feud	55	52	1
8	The Criminal	49	45
10	A Gamble in Souls	67	65	3
15	The Wharf Rat	54	55
20	The Matrimaniac	92	94	10
19	The Sin Ye Do	92	85	10
13	Heiress of Coffee Dan's	60	53	2
10	Three of Many	62	53
9	House Built Upon Sand	75	67	3
8	Nina the Flower Girl	51	52
11	The Female of the Species	72	74	2
16	Truthful Tulliver	97	93	9
12	The Weaker Sex	88	83	4
11	The Little Yank	40	52	1
10	The Bride of Hate	78	74	4
11	The Speed Bullet	62	53
14	The Americano	99	97	11
10	Chicken Casey	75	56	1
14	Jim Bludso	63	41	1
14	The Crab	83	70	3
10	Girl of the Timber Claims	41	39
16	The Gun-Fighter	76	85	10
13	The Bad Boy	71	54	2
11	The Princess of the Dark	39	41
6	Stage Struck	41	38
12	Last of the Ingrams	45	42
9	Blood Will Tell	64	61
5	A Love Sublime	47	40
8	The Little Brother	51	37	2
8	Back of the Man	90	81	5
10	Betsy's Burglar	59	54
14	The Square Deal Man	96	95	7
11	The Dark Road	60	49	1
5	A Daughter of the Poor	57	55
9	A Woman's Awakening	61	52
9	Her Father's Keeper	54	48
8	Her Official Fathers	53	48
8	Old-Fashioned Young Man	48	46
9	Sweetheart of the Doomed	75	68	4
8	Paddy O'Hara	66	54	1
10	The Desert Man	92	91	3
8	Cheerful Givers	44	41
9	The Pinch Hitter	95	71	1
4	Hands Up!	28	25
7	The Snarl	51	61
3	Might and the Man	15	27
6	Happiness	59	56
4	The Man Who Made Good	45	39
4	Wild Winship's Widow	68	56
5	Souls Triumphant	32	30
7	The Millionaire Vagrant	78	64
7	Wolf Lowry	93	95	1
2	The Girl Glory	80	55
5	Bawbs o' Blue Ridge	38	63
6	A Hater of Men	79	68
5	American—That's All	32	32
5	The Girl Glory	80	58
5	Love or Justice?	69	69
1	Her Excellency, the Governor	20	20
5	Paws of the Bear	62	54
1	Madcap Madge	100	85
7	The Clodhopper	97	83	1

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
4 The Flame of the Yukon	100	94
2 A Strange Transgressor	80	90
1 Time Locks and Diamonds	20	20
1 The Mother Instinct	80	40
1 Sudden Jim	100	90
WORLD
454 World	67.7	61.5	41
4 Hearts Afire	70	78
1 Daughter of the Sea	60	50
2 The Warning	88	48
4 The Little Dutch Girl	80	63
1 The Price of Her Silence	80	90
2 The Master of the House	68	53
1 The Dragon	40	30
1 The Price	80	65
1 Love's Cross Roads	85	60
1 Better Woman	70	45
1 By Whose Hand	60	55
1 Her Great Hour	60	40
1 When it Strikes Home	60	65
2 Circus Romance	65	55
2 Old Dutch	75	30
2 Ballet Girl	82	62
3 Marrying Money	70	63
1 Wishing Ring	64	60
2 The Dollar Mark	55	42
1 Gentleman from Mississippi	60	40
1 As Ye Sow	100	45
1 Stolen Voice	60	80
1 Face in the Moonlight	80	60
1 Women and Wine	60	40
2 Blue Grass	75	68
1 Fruits of Desire	40	50
1 Alias Jimmy Valentine	80	60
7 Trilby	81	68	1
1 Idols	40	40
2 Master Hand	86	80
3 Devil's Toy	57	73
1 Salvation Nell	60	47
3 Family Cupboard	50	57	1
4 Heart of Blue Ridge	84	73	1
1 Butterfly on Wheel	80	70
2 Hearts of Men	80	52
1 Body and Soul	40	45
2 The Ransom	63	41
4 The Labyrinth	66	65
1 Should a Wife Forgive?	90	90
2 The Senator	83	60
1 Hearts in Exile	90	90
1 His Wife's Good Name	25	20
1 The Chain Invisible	90	5
1 The Imposter	80	75
1 Sunday	95	30
1 As In a Looking Glass	60	40
1 Over Night	70	70
3 Sins of Society	76	65
7 Camille	86	79	3
3 The Rack	89	69
1 Fine Feathers	70	40
1 The Clarion	60	75
3 The Woman in 47	74	80
5 The Yellow Passport	82	80	2
3 The Price of Happiness	58	50
2 A Woman's Power	45	50
1 Cowardly Way	60	60
2 Passersby	73	55
3 Man and His Angel	62	45
4 The Supreme Sacrifice	78	69
2 The Struggle	60	60
8 The Hand of Peril	75	67
5 Then I'll Come Back To You	76	66	1
4 The Reapers	75	65
2 The Shadow of Doubt	78	65
3 Social Highwaymen	75	48
3 Closed Road	87	81	1
7 The Feast of Life	61	73
7 Her Maternal Right	58	74
6 Sudden Riches	76	71
2 The Twin Triangle	83	45
6 Tangled Fates	57	63
3 Fate's Boomerang	42	53
5 His Brother's Wife	83	74	1
10 Perils of Divorce	61	63
13 La vie de Boheme	47	50
2 What Happened at 22	82	80
5 Crucial Test	59	58
7 The Weakness of Man	61	68
12 Sally in Our Alley	68	68
14 Paying the Price	70	70	1
12 Miss Petticoats	59	61
14 Woman's Way	75	74	4
13 The Summer Girl	56	57
12 Rail Rider	68	60
10 Husband and Wife	75	63	2
8 Almighty Dollar	76	72	1
13 The Velvet Paw	74	69	1
8 Friday, the Thirteenth	72	70
11 Dark Silence	77	79	2
4 The Revolt	66	63
7 The Gilded Cage	75	70
8 Hidden Scar	77	67
6 The Scarlet Oath	60	62
7 Man Who Stood Still	71	63
8 The Heart of a Hero	59	49
3 Without a Soul	70	85
15 Bought and Paid For	91	91	10
10 The Madness of Helen	57	54
6 Men She Married	58	55
4 The Deep Purple	81	75
11 All Man	59	63	2
7 Broken Chains	50	43
12 The Rise of Susan	79	83	6
6 The World Against Him	52	43
10 Woman Alone	67	65	1
1 On Dangerous Ground	65	71
7 The Man Who Forgot	65	61	1
4 Marriage a la Carte	73	73	1
1 The Unpardonable Sin	40	55
5 The Bondage of Fear	65	63
8 Tillie Wakes Up	79	78	1
8 The Hungry Heart	87	83	2
8 The Square Deal	69	72
3 A Girl's Folly	65	75
5 The Red Woman	49	48
4 The Web of Desire	78	73	1
5 The Family Honor	66	61
8 The Dancer's Peril	77	71	1
5 The Social Leper	65	65
4 Man's Woman	61	61
4 Darkest Russia	71	75
6 Forget-Me-Not	63	69
1 The Bludgeon	87	80
3 As Man Made Her	62	68
5 The Page Mystery	55	57
4 Yankee Pluck	61	48
4 Moral Courage	61	58
4 Mothers of France	66	51
2 Maternity	85	90
2 The Crimson Dove	60	55
2 The False Friend	68	68
2 The Stolen Paradise	50	70
1 Atonement	70	65
1 The Pawn of Fate	85	45
1 The Divorse Game	5	75
1 The Price of Pride	75	60
1 The Brand of Satan	75	60
1 The Golden Lotus	50	50
METRO
531 Metro	70.8	67.0	49
1 Her Reckoning	60	40
1 Satan Sanderson	70	70
1 Cowboy and Lady	80	85
1 Heart of a Painted Lady	85	75
1 High Road	80	80
3 Shooting of Dan McGraw	81	78
1 Middleman	90	60
1 My Best Girl	60	60
1 Right of Way	70	85
2 Second In Command	77	80
1 The Vampire	80	100
6 Soul of a Woman	93	80	1
2 Silent Voice	77	87
1 An Enemy of Society	60	40
2 Song of Wage Slave	75	70
1 Emmy of Stork's Nest	80	60
2 Final Judgment	80	85
2 Pennington's Choice	92	90
4 Woman Pays	78	52
2 One Million Dollars	78	70
3 Barbara Frietchie	82	73
5 The Yellow Streak	85	64
3 House of Tears	80	65
4 Rosemary for Remembrance	73	68
3 Black Fear	73	57
8 What'll People Say?	80	84
4 The Turmoil	70	55
8 Lure of Heart's Desire	56	56
5 Her Debt of Honor	49	50
6 A Man and His Soul	83	83
3 The Upstart	68	72
3 Dimples	52	58
4 Corner in Cotton	64	58
5 The Price of Malice	66	65
6 The Soul Market	83	75
2 Blindness of Love	80	85
3 Lovely Mary	67	83
1 My Madonna	80	85
6 Her Great Price	80	68
8 The Wall Between	78	82
5 The Kiss of Hate	60	74
6 Half Million Bribe	69	49
8 Playing with Fire	78	75
11 The Come-Back	75	74
8 Snow Birds	80	77
8 A Million a Minute	72	84
4 The Spell of the Yukon	79	71
6 His Great Triumph	49	43
10 The Scarlet Woman	73	84
10 Dorian's Divorce	74	68
8 Masked Rider	69	68
6 Flower of No Man's Land	58	75
8 The Purple Lady	82	63
10 The Eternal Question	76	83
11 The Quitter	69	73
15 The River of Romance	87	76
8 The Child of Destiny	51	57
13 The Devil at His Elbow	64	61
14 God's Half Acre	71	62
14 The Weakness of Strength	68	54
11 The Pretender	80	72
7 The Upheaval	57	63
9 The Light of Happiness	67	61
10 Mister 44	88	93
8 The Wheel of the Law	77	66
10 The Dawn of Love	66	60
7 The Iron Woman	43	57
5 Life's Shadows	66	60
13 In the Diplomatic Service	69	83
9 The Brand of Cowardice	65	54
13 The Gates of Eden	68	54
11 Extravagance	69	82
10 The Wager	78	64
1 My Madonna	80	85
8 The Sunbeam	53	51
11 Big Tremaine	74	82
9 The Black Butterfly	70	80
7 The Stolen Triumph	54	49
7 Awakening of Helena Ritchie	60	61
10 Pidgin Island	66	74
11 Vanity	59	52
11 The White Raven	86	85
8 The Wife by Proxy	44	43
7 Threads of Fate	39	38
10 Bridges Burned	47	66
8 The End of the Tour	44	44
9 One of Many	65	59
7 The Secret of Eve	34	67
14 The Promise	82	85
6 The Barricade	58	57
6 Hidden Children	43	65
9 The Mortal Sin	53	58
7 The Waiting Soul	49	61
6 The Father's Son	67	62
4 The Power of Decision	46	51
6 A Magdalen of the Hills	49	47
5 God's Law and Man	47	46
2 The Millionaire's Double	65	58
4 The Call of Her People	63	56
4 Sowers and Reapers	56	43
3 The Soul of a Magdalene	27	34
4 The Beautiful Lie	25	30
2 The Duchess of Doubt	58	65
1 Lady Barnacle	40	40
3 The Haunted Pajamas	80	75
1 The Greatest Power	35	40
1 Aladdin's Other Lamp	60	60
FOX
660 Fox	73.1	70.8
1 Girl I Left Behind Me	0	25
2 St. Elmo	52	92
4 Fool There Was	82	96
2 Dr. Rameau	90	87
2 Kreutzer Sonata	90	85
2 The Idler	55	65
2 Celebrated Scandal	70	70
2 Clemenceau Case	87	82

Re-orts	% P.P.	% B.O.	Re-peat
2 Walls of Jericho	40	15
1 Woman's Resurrection	80	45
2 Anna Kerinina	67	65
2 Life's Shop Window	55	47
2 The Nigger	100	70
4 The Gilded Fool	70	75
3 Devil's Daughter	77	95
4 Should a Mother Tell?	83	76
1 Wormwood	80	80
1 Lady Audley's Secret	90	75
1 Princess Romanoff	60	60
1 Valley of the Missing	50	40
1 Children of the Ghetto	75	45
1 Samson	56	50
1 The Thief	90	40
8 Two Orphans	84	86	3
2 The Song of Hate	92	82
7 Regeneration	77	72	4
5 Wonwerful Adventure	75	77
5 Sin	62	82
2 Little Gypsy	80	74
5 Soul of Broadway	83	78	1
2 The Family Stain	87	64
1 Carmen	82	83
3 Blindness of Devotion	56	53
4 Woman's Past	63	43
9 Broken Law	82	65	1
8 Galley Slave	76	75	1
3 Unfaithful Wife	73	61
3 Her Mother's Secret	73	57
3 A Soldier's Oath	82	70
5 Destruction	86	94	1
3 Green-Eyed Monster	53	74
3 Parisian Romance	65	61
2 Fourth Estate	80	65
6 Serpent	92	93	1
5 Ruling Passion	53	59
5 Merely Mary Ann	52	45
7 Fool's Revenge	45	49
0 Fighting Blood	74	70
4 The Witch	63	59
4 Marble Heart	41	60
0 Gold and the Woman	65	86	1
0 The Bondman	79	64	1
5 A Wife's Sacrifice	55	56
2 Blue Blood and Red	84	70	1
6 Slander	80	70
0 A Modern Thelma	59	49	1
9 Man of Sorrow	63	64	1
9 Blazing Love	70	68
1 The Eternal Sapho	84	87	4
2 Sins of Men	76	61	1
4 Battle of Hearts	68	61
6 The Spider and the Fly	67	72	1
1 Hypocrisy	76	68
0 A Woman's Honor	69	71
2 East Lynne	86	85	9
5 Ambition	71	67
8 Man From Bitter Roots	82	81	2
1 Caprice of the Mountains	69	63	1
5 Tortured Heart	71	67
1 The Beast	87	66	6
6 Under Two Flags	94	92	17
9 The End of the Trail	66	79
0 Sporting Blood	62	57	1
5 Little Miss Happiness	75	68	3
9 Daredevil Kate	74	78	3
4 The Unwelcome Mother	63	66
6 Her Double Life	86	85	5
9 Where Love Leads	69	61
3 Fires of Conscience	64	70	1
2 The Straight Way	67	72
1 The Ragged Princess	77	70
5 The War Bride's Secret	76	71	3
1 Romeo and Juliet	85	85	4
5 Love and Hate	66	60
5 The Mischief Maker	66	66	1
3 Jealousy	73	83
6 The Mediator	73	72	1
8 Sins of the Parents	86	72	3
4 The Battle of Life	72	63
5 The Vixen	61	73
4 Love Thief	86	85
3 The Primitive Call	63	65
4 The Island of Desire	75	65	1
4 The Price of Silence	80	71
2 The Bitter Truth	83	80	1
8 The Darling of Paris	66	73
4 One Touch of Sin	66	76
6 The New York Peacock	82	76
2 A Child of the Wilds	85	65
3 The Scarlet Letter	80	75	1

Re-ports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Re-peat
4 The Tiger Woman	70	81	1
5 Sister Against Sister	61	54
5 A Tale of Two Cities	93	81	3
3 Melting Millions	80	56
3 The Victim	64	62
3 Love's Law	17	27
4 The Blue Streak	57	61
2 High Finance	83	65
1 American Methods	90	85
2 Her Greatest Love	75	83
1 Tangled Lives	70	65
1 Her Temptation	76	78
1 The Final Payment	20	20
1 The Silent Lie	90	90
1 The Slave	20	40
1 The Broadway Sport	55	40
1 Two Little Imps	90	90

MUTUAL

153 Mutual	72.0	71.1	14
1 Buzzard's Shadow	55	60
1 Death Lock	90	85
1 On the Night Stage	75	40
1 The Mating	50	70
1 Enoch Arden	100	100
1 Girl from His Town	65	70
1 Ghosts	80	65
1 Cup of Life	85	80
1 Hip Wife	70	75
1 House of Scandal	90	75
1 Infatuation	60	50
1 Miracle of Life	83	91	1
1 Inner Struggle	40	30
1 Mill of Floss	75	90
2 The Painted Soul	82	55
1 End of the Road	90	100
1 Father and Son	75	75
1 The Reward	80	50
2 Bird of Prey	85	87
1 Inspiration	70	100	1
2 As a Woman Sows	80	82
1 The Decoy	50	45
1 The Drifter	75	60
1 Life's Blind Alley	50	75
1 Silas Marner	100	100	1
3 The Craving	69	67
1 Law Unto Himself	46	50
1 Heart of Tara	75	75
1 According to Law	65	52
1 Overalls	75	90
3 My Partner	72	70
3 The Bruiser	78	65	1
1 Hidden Law	100	90	1
2 Love Liar	72	81	1
1 Revelations	50	50
1 The Net	90	100	1
1 The Haunted Manor	52	58
2 Feathertop	90	90
1 Lying Lips	60	70
1 Dust	80	80
1 Other People's Money	85	68
2 Isle of Love	80	85	1
5 Whispering Smith	64	66
6 Soul Mates	69	63
2 Wasted Years	76	81
2 Far from Madding Crowd	70	67
4 Medicine Bend	74	81
4 Highest Bid	64	66	1
3 Her American Prince	70	67
5 Doorsteps	65	60	1
2 House of Mirrors	77	75
2 Wall Street Tragedy	65	80
6 Youth's Endearing Charm	77	74	1
2 Strength, Donald Mackenzie	75	72
1 Million for Mary	90	90	1
7 Judith of the Cumberlands	68	68
2 A Welsh Singer	60	53
1 Man Who Would Not Die	85	75
1 The Wolf Man	50	50
1 The Painted Lie	40	35
2 Three Pals	73	71
3 Manager of the B. & A.	63	70
8 Pearl of Paradise	67	74	1
7 Dulcie's Adventure	88	84	2
1 Bluff	85	80
8 Faith	76	68
4 Miss Jackie of the Navy	86	85	1
2 A Dream or Two Ago	88	80
6 The Innocence of Lizette	85	80
3 The Butterfly Girl	72	80

Re-ports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Re-peat
1 The House of Scandal	0	10
1 The Man From Oregon	95	75
1 The Girl From Rector's	40	40
2 The Greater Woman	55	75
3 Where Love Is	52	48
6 The Gentle Intruder	77	78
1 Damaged Goods	40	100
2 Philip Holden—Waster	59	48
2 Redeemed	55	30
1 Lonesome Town	85	85
1 The Love Hermit	78	78
5 The Fighting Gentleman	60	44
1 The Torch Bearer	80	80
2 The Twinkler	92	88
2 East Is East	88	60
1 Immediate Lee	90	82	1
1 Beloved Rogues	95	90
1 The Valley of Decision	78	80
1 The Gilded Youth	80	75
3 The Painted Lie	62	74
2 Motherhood	38	55
3 Sunny Jane	67	65
2 The Devil's Assistant	60	70
2 High Play	43	53
2 The Single Code	50	53
1 The Death	20	20
2 The Wildcat	65	58
3 Whose Wife?	47	47
2 Periwinkle	70	60
1 A Bit of Kindling	60	70
1 Annie-for-Spite	40	40
1 The Mirror	40	20
1 The Checkmate	20	20
1 The Serpent's Tooth	20	20
1 The Dazzling Miss Davidson	40	20

MUTUAL-CHAPLIN

1 A Night in the Show	100	90	1
4 The Fireman	75	88
4 The Vagabond	55	88
5 The Floorwalker	97	100	2
8 One A. M.	63	81	1
16 The Count	88	86	8
10 The Pawnshop	73	74	2
7 Behind the Screen	89	91	5
8 The Rink	97	99	7
8 Easy Street	95	100	8
13 The Cure	94	94	7
7 The Immigrant	51	54	2

PATHE

146 Pathe	68.9	68.1	16
1 Last Volunteer	80	80
1 The Spender	80	80
3 At Bay	78	81
1 The Galloper	40	90
1 Closing Net	60	80
2 Nedra	55	45
1 Affair of Three Nations	75	80
1 The Beloved Vagabond	56	67
2 Greater Will	50	55
6 Excuse Me!	90	73
3 King's Game	56	62
6 Madame X	71	91
3 Love Trail	38	52
3 Hazel Kirk	60	55
1 Simon the Jester	60	35
6 New York	80	74	1
2 Precious Packet	67	65
4 Shrine of Happiness	78	72
6 Woman's Law	68	65
10 Big Jim Garrity	69	55	1
6 Girl with the Green Eyes	65	72
3 Matrimonial Martyr	63	78	1
7 Shadow of Her Past	54	81
4 The Fugitive	75	63
8 Little Mary Sunshine	90	78	1
1 Divorce and the Daughter	78	75
1 The World and the Woman	85	90
7 The Shine Girl	73	64
2 Fear of Poverty	65	95
2 The Test	60	48
3 Saint, Devil and Woman	44	57
4 The Light That Failed	70	71	1
8 Shadows and Sunshine	93	78	3
4 Prudence the Pirate	54	64
3 Arms and the Woman	70	53	1
3 The Challenge	73	65
6 Joy and the Dragon	79	72	1
3 The Romantic Journey	79	65

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
4 Her New York	81	62	1
1 Her Life or His	75	70
5 Kick In	76	74
1 Sold at Auction	55	65
1 Modern Monte Cristo	70	65
2 The Hidden Valley	78	85
1 Crime and Punishment	65	65
1 Her Beloved Enemy	67	77
1 Pots and Pans Peggy	78	70
2 Twin Kiddies	85	70
2 The Image Maker	48	40
4 Told at Twilight	91	80	1
3 Mayblossom	40	85
1 The Hunting of the Hawk	60	40
1 Mary Lawson's Secret	77	78
2 Sunshine and Gold	84	88
1 Hinton's Double	60	60
1 The Amateur Orphan	60	40
1 The Candy Girl	20	60

BLUEBIRD

240 Bluebird	62.7	63.5	20
2 Jeanne Dore	27	45
1 The Secret Love	38	40
2 Hop, the Devil's Brew	40	43
7 Undine	80	87	1
1 Wrong Door	75	95
1 Grip of Jealousy	75	85
2 Rupert of Hentzau	51	60
2 Strength of the Weak	76	75
1 The Yaqui	42	58
4 The Flirt	44	66
2 Tangled Hearts	44	36
2 John Necham's Double	54	59
2 The Great Problem	79	66
4 Gaylord Waring	51	50
5 Crippled Hand	58	69	1
2 Gilded Spider	46	64
1 Elusive Isabel	48	46
3 The Measure of a Man	63	65
2 Love Never Dies	65	48
4 Son of the Immortals	64	71
5 Eye of God	64	80	1
3 Bobbie of the Ballet	67	79
3 Evil Women Do	60	62
9 Three Godfathers	68	74	1
15 Shoes	71	77	1
11 Broken Fetters	64	50	1
1 The Love Girl	63	64	1
6 The Grasp of Greed	71	76	1
8 The Silent Battle	78	84	2
1 Secret of the Swamp	71	56	2
7 Love's Lariat	65	64	1
8 Bettina Loved a Soldier	65	72
10 Wanted—A Home	74	75
2 The Chalice of Sorrow	72	65
7 Little Eve Edgarton	58	61	1
8 The Girl of Lost Lake	65	60
6 The Unattainable	51	48
13 Saving a Family Name	81	68	1
9 Behind the Lines	62	65
4 The Social Buccaneer	72	65
4 Gloriana	69	70
6 A Stranger from Somewhere	69	67
4 The Price of Silence	88	86
1 The End of the Rainbow	63	48
6 The Honor of Mary Blake	58	58
1 The Right to be Happy	50	40
4 Black Orchids	75	78	1
2 Her Soul's Inspiration	55	39
3 God's Crucible	81	64	2
1 The Piper's Price	40	20
1 The Bugler of Algiers	80	69	1
3 The Sign of the Poppy	65	42
5 Mutiny	58	51
7 Mysterious Mrs. M.	74	59	1
1 The Reward of the Faithless	72	81
2 The Saintly Sinner	48	58
3 The Boy-Girl	63	70
1 Polly Red Head	61	74
1 The Gift-Girl	60	75
3 Susan's Gentleman	62	63
3 The Clock	77	65
5 Hell Morgan's Girl	90	88	1
1 The Devil's Pay Day	71	75
4 A Jewel in Pawn	71	69
3 Girl With Checkered Coat	72	70
1 Little Miss Nobody	50	50
1 Treason	65	75
1 The White Lights	70	50
2 Bringing Home Father	70	60
1 A Kentucky Cinderella	60	60
1 The Car of Chance	40	40

UNIVERSAL

1 Little Brother of the Rich	60	65
1 Business is Business	50	65
1 Father and the Boys	20	80
1 The Frame-up	40	45
1 Judge Not	70	70
1 Long Chance	85	80
1 Man of Shame	50	55
1 My Old Dutch	20	55
1 Nature Man	95	60
1 Under Southern Skies	90	75
3 Langdon's Legacy	65	60
8 Love's Pilgrimage	62	53
2 College Orphan	70	63
1 Colorado	90	100
2 The Campbells Are Coming	84	83	1
1 Money Madness	67	80

RED FEATHER

80 Red Feather	64 8	61.6	2
1 It Happened in Honolulu	80	80
1 The Madcap	70	70
1 Soul Enslaved	60	80
1 Knight of the Range	80	4
2 Beckoning Trail	88	71
2 Man From Nowhere	75	90	1
3 The Path of Happiness	70	50
2 The Sphinx	50	50
8 Pool of Flame	70	75
1 Lords of High Decision	60	40
8 Black Sheep of the Family	60	63
2 Autumn	65	67
3 Her Bitter Cup	72	71
1 The Yoke of Gold	45	64
1 Heritage of Hate	90	55
1 Thrown to the Lions	60	20
3 Huntress of Men	49	55
8 The Youth of Fortune	69	63	1
1 What Love Can Do	50	50
4 Half a Rogue	78	60
1 Sons of Satan	60	40
2 Two Men of Sandy Bar	72	65
1 Folly of Desire	20	40
1 Brigadier Gerard	50	40
2 Romance of Billy Goat Hill	75	55
4 The Target	76	46
2 Whirlpool of Destiny	62	55
2 Narrow Path	82	60
2 Drugged Waters	57	53
4 If My Country Should Call	58	62
2 Black Friday	60	62
8 The Place Beyond the Winds	60	55
2 The Isle of Life	50	43
1 Kinkaid—Gambler	80	85
3 The Mainspring	71	67
1 Morals of Hilda	80	80
2 Mixed Blood	70	55
1 The Bronze Bride	60	75
1 The Child of Mystery	45	15
3 Polly Put the Kettle On	45	57
5 Fighting for Love	69	65
2 The Double Room Mystery	55	35
2 Heart Strings	70	60
2 Love Aflame	78	80
1 The Terror	70	60
1 The Devil's Bondwoman	40	20
1 Barriers of Society	40	20
1 Me and Me Pal	85	70
1 Mister Dolan of New York	65	70
2 The Girl and the Crisis	73	73
2 The Scarlet Crystal	60	78
1 The Girl Who Lost	50	70
1 The Gates of Doom	60	70
1 The Birth of Patriotism	65	70
1 The Hero of the Hour	55	70

GREATER VITAGRAPH

429 Vitagraph	68.1	66.2	74
12 Battle Cry of Peace	95	80	4
7 The Juggernaut	73	73	2
7 Island of Regeneration	85	81	4
1 Sporting Duchess	40	36
8 Sins of the Mothers	87	87
3 Crooky	70	69
1 Playing Dead	75	75
5 Dust of Egypt	67	66
2 The Rights of Men	74	85
3 Turn of the Road	82	78
3 The Cave Man	74	60
3 Heights of Hazard	75	44
2 A Nation's Peril	86	76
1 The Man's Making	60	78
2 Price of Folly	95	95
7 The Great Divide	80	71
1 Souls in Bondage	100	80
2 Thou Art the Man	72	57
3 Green Stockings	87	88
1 Milady's Slipper	90	90
2 Island of Surprise	87	85
6 Gods of Fate	62	62
1 What Happened to Father?	60	78
9 The Night Out	81	75
1 The Crown Prince's Double	75	60
2 The Writing on the Wall	70	40
4 Kennedy Square	88	66
7 For a Woman's Fair Name	80	85
5 Hunted Woman	74	54
4 Hero of Submarine D-2	74	71
5 Dollars and the Woman	75	56
1 Supreme Temptation	60	60
5 Two-Edged Sword	76	53
3 Vital Question	80	85
1 Flames of Johannis	40	40
7 Salvation Joan	78	59
10 God's Country and Woman	81	85
1 Love's Toll	80	80
9 The Law Decides	80	70
9 The Ne'er Do Well	94	94
1 Ordeal of Elizabeth	58	50
10 The Suspect	80	76
3 Lights of New York	70	78
7 The Destroyers	68	57
2 Redemption of Dave Darcey	90	80
4 Man Behind the Curtain	85	76
6 The Shop Girl	78	79
5 The Conflict	67	47
7 Fathers of Men	71	67
12 The Tarantula	78	72
15 The Daring of Diana	61	75
4 Hesper of the Mountains	57	64
11 The Light at Dusk	85	72
8 The Alibi	69	69
1 The Dawn of Freedom	0	50
4 Footlights of Fate	68	80
17 The Combat	80	83
5 The Kid	60	57
8 Phantom Fortunes	42	62
5 His Wife's Good Name	64	76
12 Through the Wall	78	63
14 The Chattel	72	83
8 Prince in a Pawnshop	64	67
8 The Blue Envelope Mystery	55	59
4 The Firm of Girdlestone	31	39
11 The Last Man	82	81
6 The Devil's Prize	49	62
6 The Price of Fame	40	46
6 Dollar and the Law	52	73
8 An Enemy to the King	61	67
9 Rose of the South	73	62
9 Whom the Gods Destroy	59	73
7 Ninety and Nine	70	69
5 Indiscretion	53	61
8 The Man of Mystery	69	64
8 My Official Wife	90	82
11 The Glory of Yolanda	72	70
2 The Enemy	80	70
11 The Girl Phillipa	68	76
9 The Courage of Silence	70	71
8 Money Magic	55	61
5 Blind Justice	63	60
10 Arsene Lupin	67	63
8 Kitty Mackay	57	58
5 Intrigue	47	54
7 Aladdin from Broadway	62	67
4 The Money Mill	51	49
4 Her Right to Live	49	55
4 Babette	70	70
7 The More Excellent Way	67	68
3 Apartment 29	55	60
2 Sally in a Hurry	68	68
1 The Cowardly Way	78	60
5 Her Secret	55	54

Re-ports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Re-peat
The Hawk	63	73
Captain of Grey Horse Troop	63	63
The Sixteenth Wife?	39	63
Clover's Rebellion	74	75
The Soul Master	49	59
The Magnificent Meddler	40	40
The Question	60	60
The Maelstrome	40	40
Caste	30	30
The Message of the Mouse	60	60
Within the Law	100	100
A Million Bid	90	75

KEYS

K. E. S. E.	70.1	65.8	23
The Bank	90	90	1
The Woman	60	75
Work	75	75
Thou Shalt Not Covet	78	55
Vultures of Society	80	60
Between Savages and Tigers	90	100
Quo Vadis	60	40
The Spendthrift	80	60
Officer 666	25	40
When Love is King	20	25
The Danger Signal	80	60
The Magic Skin	85	75
Woman Next Door	60	90
The Havoc	5	20
The Sentimental Lady	73	60
The Scarlet Road	70	55
The Destroying Angel	93	85
Money Masters	90	60
Commuters	85	60
Musty Suffer	80	90
Devil's Prayer Book	50	60
Children of Evil	70	65
Green Cloak.	70	60
The Spoilers	95	91	1
Graustark	88	90	4
The Slim Princess	77	94	1
The Rosary	80	55	1
A Texas Steer	72	65
House of Thousand Candles	40	30
The Raven	87	20
The Alster Case	75	60
Daughter of the City	60	70
Misleading Lady	73	50	1
Cycle of Fate	62	75
Carmen (Chaplin)	50	93	2
The Little Shepherd of Bargain Row	75	63
Sherlock Holmes	75	50
Into the Primitive	52	60
That Sort	70	45	1
Valiants of Virginia	85	75
The Prince Chap	51	53
The Return of Eve	72	71	2
Country God Forgot	75	67
Chaplin Revue	63	79
The Innocence of Ruth	60	81
At Piney Ridge	60	60
The Heart of the Hills	63	60
Prince of Graustark	84	80	1
The Cossack's Whip	86	67
Message to Garcia	67	73
The Last Sentence	55	70
The Truant Soul	69	76	1
Little Shoes	82	82
Adventures of Buffalo Bill	45	78
Skinner's Dress Suit	94	85	4
The Law of the North	50	90
Royal Pauper	10	100
The Heart of Texas Ryan	63	70
Princess of Patches	50	100
The Master Passion	80	100
Burning the Candle	80	55
Skinner's Bubble	90	95
The Danger Trail	45	60
The Lad and the Lion	75	60
The Night Workers	60	63
The Trufflers	40	80
The Saint's Adventure	60	50
Builders of Castles	68	70
The Little Lost Sister	90	96
Filling His Own Shoes	45	55
The Man Who Was Afraid	60	40
Filling His Own Shoes	40	62

PARAMOUNT SPEC.

The Christian	81	78	1
Tess of Storm Country	88	84	2
The Typhoon	88	78	1
The Eternal City	93	96	4

SERIALS

Patria	86	82
Gloria's Romance	78	83
The Crimson Stain	61	65
Mysteries of Myra	87	84
The Yellow Menace	40	40
Liberty	91	82
Grip of Evil	73	67
Who's Guilty	78	78
The Iron Claw	93	92
The Diamond Runners	66	82
The Shielding Shadow	91	92
Secret of Submarine	73	79
Peg o' the Ring	50	59
Scarlet Runner	67	84
A Lass of the Lumberlands	62	62
Girl and the Game	73	45
The Great Secret	64	70
Pearl of the Army	81	85
The Secret Kingdom	20	0
The Voice on the Wire	88	85
The Purple Mask	73	83
The Railroad Raiders	50	50
The Neglected Wife	90	93
The Double Cross	80	70

ART DRAMAS

Whoso Taketh A Wife	90	90
The Lash of Destiny	60	45
A God of Little Children	67	63
Infidelity	63	65
The Great Secret	35	45
The Rainbow	66	66
Rosie O'Grady	82	80
Her Good Name	85	80

SELZNICK

The Common Law	83	90	1
Vera, the Medium	63	64	2
The Foolish Virgin	39	68	2
War Brides	73	65	10
Panthea	81	76	4
The Price She Paid	95	79	3
The Argyle Case	86	75	2
The Easiest Way	88	87	2
Poppy	40	80

Mc CLURE

Pride	41	46
Envy	41	59
Passion	28	38
Greed	43	51
Sloth	20	21
Wrath	28	32
The Seventh Sin	10	23

ARTCRAFT

Less Than the Dust	58	75	5
Poor Little Rich Girl	97	97	10
The Pride of the Clan	73	75	7
Broadway Jones	96	82	4
In Again—Out Again	91	92	5
Romance of the Redwoods	68	69
The Butcher Boy	73	75	1
Reckless Romeo	89	82	1
The Little American	95	94	2
Wild and Woolly	96	97	3
A Rough House	99	99	1

UNIV. SPEC.

Scandal.	80	72
Robinson Crusoe	65	70
Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea	68	86	5
The Dumb Girl of Portici	51	64
Diana the Huntress	58	75	1
Where Are My Children?	79	84	2
Jewel	85	75
God's Law	45	40
The Eagle's Wings	76	71
Idle Wives	57	88	4
Neptune's Daughter	61	60	1

IVAN

Her Surrender	85	70
Her Husband's Wife	90	95
The Flower of Faith	50	25
Faded Flower	82	74	1

SELIG SPEC.

The Crisis	72	56

FROHMAN

The Witching Hour	67	65	2
Jaffery	63	53

FOX SPEC.

A Daughter of the Gods	73	47

METRO SPEC.

Romeo and Juliet	79	58	3

B. S. MOSS

The Power of Evil	87	70
One Day	85	80

SPECIAL FEATURES

Geoffrey Manning	70	75
Garden of Knowledge	100	100	1
The Unwritten Law	43	78
The Escape.	67	70	1
Birth of a Nation	100	100	5
The Salamanders	40	58
The Libertine	81	80	4
My Country First	60	60
Tillie's Punctured Romance	90	90	2
Race Suicide	67	60
Shanghaied	90	90	1
Pendleton 1916 Round-Up	90	86
Cabiria	45	45
The Marvelous Maciste	90	70
End of the World	20	57
Birth of Man	62	88
Love's Sacrifice	60	60
The Iron Hand	65	46
Police	63	81
Is Any Girl Safe?	90	60
Salomy Jane	90	100
The Whirl of Life	69	84	3
Silver Threads Among Gold	84	92	1
Victory of Virtue	50	100	1
The Melting Pot	78	53	2
Ramona	73	63
Hiawatha	40	100	1
Salisbury's Wild Life in America	60	73
Hypocrites	60	90
The Only Son	40	60
Judge Legard	80	40
The Alien	98	58	1
The Little Girl Next Door	77	87	3
Alice in Wonderland	76	86	1
Purity	92	96	1
The Eyes of the World	95	100	1
The Immortal Flame	80	72
Heartaches	70	78
Birth of Character	20	50
Fire and Sword	20	60
America Waiting	10	15
Beulah	60	60
The Aftermath	40	40
Heart of Maryland	0	40
Doctor Neighbor	53	49
Ramona	71	63
The Eyes of the World	88	72	1
Beware of Strangers	58	69
It May be Your Daughter	95	65	1
The House of Bondage	75	100
The Barrier	100	80
The Fall of a Nation	76	83	1
Civilization	76	82
Joan the Woman	63	70
Womanhood	84	84	2
The Spoilers	100	90
The Woman Who Dared	90	80
The Black Stork	70	70
Intolerance	100	100	1
The Star Spangled Banner	28	44
The Spoilers	80	60
On Trial	80	60
The Whip	95	100

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

WILLIAM F. ALDRICH
FEATURE PRODUCER
Screen Club, 117 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
PRODUCER

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

WILLIAM DESMOND
TRIANGLE PLAYS
Culver City, Cal.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

JACK HARVEY
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
Producer of
"PARENTAGE"

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
PRODUCING FEATURES
Ivan Film Corp.

LLOYD INGRAHAM
PRODUCER

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

HARLEY KNOLES
FEATURE DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

JOSEPH LEVERING
DIRECTOR

O. A. C. LUND

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE PRODUCER
FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.

WEDGWOOD NOWELL
TRIANGLE
Friars Club, N. Y. C.

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITAGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
PRODUCING FEATURES
VITAGRAPH

JAMES VINCENT
PRODUCER

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

CHESTER WITHEY
DIRECTOR

JAMES YOUNG

WID'S
IS READ
NOT SKIMMED

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Address—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM A MAGAZINE—IN FACT A SERVICE

THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM

WID'S

INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS

Always Independent
Issued Every Thursday

VOL. III. THURSDAY, AUGUST 23, 1917. NO. 34

25 Cents a Copy
$10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

EXCEPTIONAL TREATMENT OF ROMANCE WITH THOUGHT PUNCHES

Lillian Walker in

THE LUST OF THE AGES

Ogden Pictures Corp.—State Rights

DIRECTOR.....Harry Revier
AUTHOR.....Aaron Hoffman
CAMERAMAN.....Joseph Seiden
ART DIRECTOR.....Thomas Brierley
AS A WHOLE.....Interesting and unusual treatment of argumentative theme with timely tying up to war and back-to-nature movement
STORY.....Modern struggle of girl to win man from love of gold, with novel treatment projecting characters into other periods of the past
DIRECTION.....Exceptionally well handled technical dissolves, blends, and multiple exposures which gave distinction to entire offering and held interest throughout; treatment appealed to mind as interesting, rather than to heart as powerful drama
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very good, with many bits excellent
LIGHTINGS.....Some effective bits; generally good
CAMERA WORK.....Exceptionally good, with many very difficult effects perfectly blended
STAR.....Very pleasing personality
SUPPORT.....Good
EXTERIORS.....A few very pretty shots; generally quite satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Several excellent; generally good
DETAIL.....Very good
TIME.....Seventy-two minutes (6 parts)

CERTAINLY this production is interesting, and it is quite an unusual offering, due to the exceptional number of blends, double-exposures, titles superimposed over scenes and other technical bits of artistry which helped to carry the offering along in an atmosphere of distinction which made it decidedly different from the ordinary routine production.

From the start, this film became a story within a story, the modern romance starting, as the title said, where most of them finish—with the engagement of the lovers.

There was then a quarrel caused by the man's decision in favor of protecting capital by discharging an old professor at the college from which Miss Walker, the heroine, had been graduated, which was followed by the girl giving him a book, which she had written for her lover to read. This book presented as an argument the fact that through the ages the lust for money had brought unhappiness, while those who loved nature and the simple things found true happiness without gold.

As the young man started to read the story, the action appeared upon the screen, with Miss Walker, the girl, as the happy shepherdess of the Valley of Content, and we had some very interesting scenes taken in the great outdoors of a picturesque mountain country before the warriors coveting the gold came into the Valley and despoiled it.

There were then a number of arguments presented to register the influence of gold in causing crime, in forcing girls to solicit on the streets and tempting men to ruin through gambling. Then we came to the episode dealing with the great world war, which registered the fact that forty years ago an emperor had planned to make war against the world when his war chest was filled with gold from taxes levied upon the peasants.

When the chest became filled we found a younger emperor declaring war, while Miss Walker as a hoyden princess pleaded with her lover, who had invented liquid fire, to destroy the war chest and so save the world from a disastrous conflict. In the act of destroying this chest with his new invention the couple were discovered. They were executed by order of the emperor.

The reading of this book brought our hero to a realization of the futility of his mad desire for unnecessary wealth, with the result that we found the lovers happy at the end, living in the country where nature could be appreciated.

The most important mark of merit which this film bears is that it is different. It has an element of romance which is effective, but beneath it all there is a thought which will reach home. At no time did the dramatic scenes attain such a height as to pull at the heartstrings particularly, but, nevertheless, the interest is held throughout, and, as a consequence, I believe most any fan will consider this a production quite worth while.

The sequence having to do with the world war will surely appeal decidedly, there being several titles that will be sure-fire. The sequence showing Miss Walker as the happy shepherdess is light romance, with several bits of beauty that will certainly please.

Miss Walker has rather a large following because of her many successful productions at Vitagraph, but never before has she had a production wherein she was called upon to enact a number of characters calling for such essentially different emotion portrayals. Miss Walker has a very pleasing personality, was decidedly beautiful in many of her closeups and gave such a spirit of carefree happiness in the part of the shepherdess that her work in this production will not soon be forgotten.

Jack Mowers, as the money-mad man of modern times, was quite satisfactory in every episode and played with a poise that made his characterizations decidedly pleasing.

Say you saw it in "WID'S."

The remainder of the cast were good, although not unusual, and the ensemble scenes were all nicely handled.

The producer is entitled to particular credit for his treatment of the scenes in the theatre, and certainly I have never seen one production in which so much difficult technical work was so intelligently handled.

The Box Office Angle.

Considering the advertising possibilities of this, which include a very good name, a popular star and several timely thoughts, such as the episode dealing with the present war and the back-to-nature movement, I believe that this is a production which should be good for real business if intelligently exploited. The film offers a number of angles for advertising, and, to be sure, it has been well enough done to prove decidedly interesting to any audience, with a general effect which is rather pleasing. The mere fact that the technique is essentially different from the ordinary production makes this stand out.

You can make quite a little fuss over the central theme that money doesn't bring happiness, and amplify it by referring to the world war and the war chest filled by the taxed peasants, to tie up with the present situation.

I believe that Miss Walker's name is worth considerable at the box office, and certainly her appearance fo the first time since leaving Vitagraph should prov particularly interesting to all who have followed he work under the Vitagraph banner for the past few year

You will find that there are some scenes which sho Miss Walker in scant costume, and these can of cours be used in your lobby displays, but I would not pla very strong on that angle. There are one or two sho flashes of her nude which fit into some allegorical scene but these also should be kept down in the advertisir if you have a community audience.

There are several big scenes—that is, a number scenes in which a lot of people appear—and this, course, adds dignity to the production, so that it wou be advisable to give a suggestion of these by using st pictures of them if they are available.

I would make it clear that "The Lust of the Age applies to the lust for gold; because you might othe wise antagonize some people who would get a wror impression from the use of the word lust. For dow town transient business this title should be a sure-fi money-getter.

A few duped war scenes were used in one part the production, but I have been informed that the are to be removed and a few flashes of real war st inserted in their stead.

SYMPATHETIC CHARACTERIZATION WILL INTEREST AND PLEASE

Arthur Hoyt in

MR. OPP

Bluebird

DIRECTOR	Lynn F. Reynolds
AUTHOR	Alice Hegan Rice
SCENARIO BY	Lynn F. Reynolds
CAMERAMAN	Clyde R. Cook
AS A WHOLE	Sympathetic character study that will register very well
STORY	Centered upon small-town character and his influence upon villagers
DIRECTION	Characterizations nicely developed in interesting atmosphere, although gave little that was artistic
PHOTOGRAPHY	Good straight stuff
LIGHTINGS	Occasionally good, but generally too uniform
CAMERA WORK	Mostly old-school technique; not enough closeups
STAR	Sympathetic, appealing characterization
SUPPORT	Good types, but not exceptional
EXTERIORS	Satisfactory
INTERIORS	Acceptable; not unusual
DETAIL	A few good bits
TIME	Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

THIS should register most anywhere as a very satisfactory production because it is somewhat away from the ordinary run of routine movies, since the entire production is a character study rather than an exposition of action. It is quite possible that the book by Alice Hegan Rice is known in your community, although I wouldn't bank on this except to include in my advertising the statement that this has been adapted from the successful novel.

Small-town stories, to my mind, are greatly to be desired today, since they come nearer to registering as real life. The character of Mr. Opp is an unusual one, and consequently interesting, and throughout the action gets an exceptional amount of sympathy because of l sacrifices for what he thinks is right.

The production is not particularly artistic, since t photography, lightings and camera work are rather f the old school than of the new, but certainly the gener effect of this production is a more favorable one th is recorded by the average routine program release.

The supporting cast was satisfactory, and there we several good types. None of them registered in su a manner as to make their parts stand out particular

The cast included George Chesebro, Jack Curtis, Nea Gerber, George Hernandez, Elise Maison and Are Lockhart.

The Box Office Angle.

You have nothing here to work upon except the na of the story. I would play this for all it is worth starting a little teaser campaign announcing that "M Opp is coming to town." Then when you come to announcement of your theatre and date I would cen upon this sort of a campaign. "Are you building y life with the sole thought of helping yourself . . . or do you try to do something for others? See 'M Opp.'" "Have you any castles in the air? They e better than graves in the cellar. Think it over and e 'Mr. Opp.'"

HEART STIRRING HAND COLORED PATRIOTIC SLIDES 25c. Eac

71. If It's Worth Living Under, It's Worth Fighting For.
54. Americans Must Protect America.
95. We Are With You, Mr. President, One Hundred Million Strong.
53. Your Country Needs You.
28. American Flag.
95. President Wilson & Flag.
60. Geo. Washington.
45. The Birth of the Americ Flag.
70. Abraham Lincoln.
76. Spirit of '76—Reflects 1917.
27. If It's Good Enough Live Under, It's Wor Fighting for.
87. Pledge Allegiance.
68. Star Spangled Banner.
42. My Country 'Tis of Th (Flag).

EXCELSIOR ILLUSTRATING CO., 219 Sixth Av New York Ci

EFFECTIVE HANDLING OF HUMAN SITUATIONS MAKE THIS REGISTER

William Desmond in

MASTER OF HIS HOME

Kay Bee—Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Walter Edwards
AUTHOR.....R. Cecil Smith
AS A WHOLE.....Good situations very well treated and effectively played STORY.....Provided action, human moments and several real kicks
DIRECTION.....Gave excellent tempo to both action and dramatic scenes, with many touches that were quite effective
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally pleasing, with some excellent effects
LIGHTINGS.....Generally good; some very artistic and effective
CAMERA WORK.....Good angles, close-ups and general treatment
STAR.....Quite pleasing; gave very good characterization
SUPPORT.....Alma Rueben and Joseph Dowling excellent; others good
EXTERIORS.....Several fine shots; generally good
INTERIORS.....Very good; maintained atmosphere nicely
DETAIL.....Several excellent bits; generally very pleasing
TIME.....Sixty-seven minutes (5 parts)

THIS is decidedly above the average program routine, principally because it is a combination of dramatic and romantic action with a serious thought injected into the story without seeming to have been dragged in.

At the very first they put over some snappy action, beautifully played, having to do with the hero and heroine being caught in a flooded mine. Excellent camera angles and good cutting made this very effective.

The story then moved into a characterization study with the Western millionaire, played by William Desmond, winning the Eastern shero, Alma Rueben, only to learn after many months of married life that she was still dominated by her mother to the extent of realizing his shortcomings as a society tea-hound.

They were on the verge of separation because of the attentions of Bob McKim as the lounge-lizard, when Mr. Desmond learned that his wife was about to become a mother. He came home from the club ready to forgive everything, only to find that his wife's mother had been suggesting a visit to a doctor of shady reputation.

There was a strong dramatic scene in which Mr. Desmond accused his wife of murder, he thinking that she had already visited the doctor, and she taking an independent attitude, because, she said, he had not talked to her like a gentleman.

Mr. Desmond went back to the West, but we had seen already that his wife really wanted to be happy with him, and so on the finish she came with her child to his cabin in the mountains and there was a happy reunion.

Director Walter Edwards is deserving of particular credit for having put over the important scenes in this in a very effective manner. Every dramatic bit was nicely timed and beautifully played, with the high spots ringing true. They were two touches which were particularly good, one being where he speeded the action and cut it in to put over the scene where Mr. Desmond landed on McKim's jaw, and the other where he slowly but surely led up to the discovery of the wife's baby in Desmond's cabin. This final bit was worked up to in such a manner as to get the maximum result out of what some directors might have made a short, inconsequential scene.

There were a number of effective bits of lighting, and the general atmosphere was quite pleasing.

William Desmond, as the Western millionaire, put over the character in a most impressive manner, making it convince at all times. He was pleasing in the lighter scenes and forceful when the situations demanded such treatment.

Alma Rueben, as the Eastern girl, who became Mr. Desmond's wife, was good enough to deserve co-starring in this offering. She handled all of her scenes with a dignity and a delicate timing that made them very effective because of the sincerity displayed, and the little shadings of emotion which frequently conveyed the exact thought necessary to build a scene into something truly dramatic were registered by her as few other of our young girls of the screen can do. Despite the fact that Miss Rueben had an unsympathetic character for a good part of the story, she held the audience with her because of the manner in which she treated it.

Robert McKim as the willunous idler was quite effective, as he always is.

Eleanor Hancock as Miss Rueben's mother was good in some of her scenes, but occasionally missed fire because of an inclination to overplay. She was the weakest spot in the cast.

Joseph J. Dowling, as Mr. Desmond's partner Boggs, was exceptionally pleasing. This bit of character work will get over with a bang anywhere, there being a number of bits where he stood out over everyone else in the scene.

Will H. Bray was Miss Rueben's father.

The Box Office Angle.

I would play this up in my advertising as an exceptionally well handled study of the predicament in which a millionaire found himself when he married expecting his wife to make their house a home. I would play up Alma Rueben almost as big as Mr. Desmond, because most of your fans who have been seeing Triangle productions will remember her work. You can safely guarantee that this has been very well produced, that it is an interesting story with a genuine underlying thought and a very pleasing element of romance and action. There is a bit of kid stuff that is very effective because of its influence upon the characters, and you might go so far as to use this sort of a line: "What would you do if you married for children and a home and found your wife's mother insisting upon her devoting herself to society rather than to the things you desired?"

I would refer to the recent productions in which Mr. Desmond has appeared, if any of them have been particularly pleasing to your fans.

QUICK ANNOUNCEMENTS FOR YOUR SCREEN

SLIDENE OUTFIT: all complete.....$1.00
6 bottles slide ink; 25 cover glasses; 6 special pens; 2 slide charts

Novelty Typewriter Slides.....$3.50 per 100

Handy Slide Holder and Clip FREE.

NOVELTY SLIDE CO., 115 East 23d St., New York.

INTERESTING ATMOSPHERE AND PLEASING CHARACTERS—JUST MISSES BEING GREAT

Marc MacDermott, Mildred Manning and Eulalie Jensen in

MARY JANE'S PA

Vitagraph

DIRECTOR.....William P. S. Earle
AUTHOR.....Edith Ellis
SCENARIO BY.....A. Van Buren Powell
CAMERAMAN.....Jack Brown
TITLE PAINTINGS BY.....Ferdinand Earle
AS A WHOLE.....Pleasing characterizations with some good situations in interesting atmosphere
STORY.....Held interest, although failed occasionally to really convince DIRECTION.....Gave excellent atmosphere, some effective lightings and detail bits with pleasing characterizations, although occasionally important situations fell just a bit short of definitely convincing
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Quite artistic; many very effective bits of lighting
LIGHTINGS.....Interiors very good; generally pleasing
CAMERA WORK.....Generally very good
STARS.....Very pleasing
SUPPORT.....Some good types; rather well handled
EXTERIORS.....Fitted atmosphere beautifully
INTERIORS.....Very good
DETAIL.....Many effective and pleasing bits
TIME.....Seventy minutes (5 parts)

MOST any audience should consider this a very pleasing production because it has been presented in an atmosphere that is not only interesting but appealing. It is a small-town story that presents a newspaper office as the scene of many of the important clashes.

The plot provides a number of very interesting situations, and these have been rather well handled, with the exception of one or two points. The father of the two children (played by Marc MacDermott) was accepted by the children as a hired man working at the house, washing dishes, etc., without sufficient surprise or interest in such an unusual happening. The bit where the son of the political boss accidentally knocked some books from the table, thereby discovering an important note written on the back of a photograph, was done too deliberately, and as a consequence was made very mechanical.

The story had a whimsical touch because of the character of the father who had gone away due to his wanderlust, traveling for fourteen years through foreign countries, while his wife slaved to rear the two children. The father's return and his subsequent reformation was the central theme of the situations, and this whimsical character was well handled by Mr. MacDermott, who plays this sort of thing better than most any other part.

Eulalie Jensen was an ideal selection for the character of the mother who had gone ahead doing the man's work to support her two grown daughters, and she looked the part of the woman who might run a newspaper and make a fight against a political boss despite all threats of destruction.

Mildred Manning was pleasing as an ingenue and looked the part of the youngster, but her importance in the dramatic moments was decidedly secondary to that of either Miss Jensen or Mr. MacDermott. This character provided a good name for the story, but the character was much more important in the play than it was in the film version, this being due to the possibility of showing a much greater variety of action on the screen than could be done on the stage.

The other members of the cast were very satisfactory, they being well chosen as to type and quite satisfactory as to the handling of the situations, with the exception of one or two instances where the willuns became a bit too emphatic.

The best point about this production was its atmosphere. The story was interesting, but it slipped somewhat in the matter of conviction when Mr. MacDermott was accepted in the family too easily, and slipped again later on when the melodrama began to get under way. As a matter of fact, this was a peculiar combination of very human bits and scenes which just missed fire, with the result that it almost registered as an exceptionally human production, and yet just slid over the edge so that you leave it with a feeling of having been entertained and interested without having been really impressed by the dramatic moments.

The lightings which Producer Earle used in the interior scenes were very good, and several of the exterior shots were exceptionally artistic. The street set used outside of the printing office was quite well constructed and will register as the real thing with most everyone.

Some of the paintings used for the title cards were quite pleasing, although one or two seemed entirely foreign to the subject matter. Most of the titles were very good and the use of closeups for the most part was quite effective.

As program releases go, I would say that this is far superior to the average production. It has many points of merit and fails only in registering absolute conviction, which we find these days in very, very few productions. As soon as all producers learn that the first and most essential point is to make an audience believe the story and the situations, the sooner will we find more 100 per cent. films.

Among those who appeared were Emmett King, Clio Ayres, William Dunn, Mother Maurice, Ed Elkas, and Templar Saxe.

The Box Office Angle.

While it is quite possible that this play never reached your community—and even if it did it may be unknown to a majority of your fans—it is possible for you to center some advertising upon the fact that this has been adapted from a successful play, and in making that statement I would mention particularly the fact that this is a story of small-town life and the fight made by a woman editor to provide for her growing daughters.

You will possibly be surprised at the number of people who are familiar with the work of Eulalie Jensen and I think you can safely give her considerable prominence in billing this. Also play up Marc MacDermott with Miss Jensen, over Miss Manning, because Miss Manning's name will mean very little to your fans whereas the other two have quite a following. I would not, of course, ignore Miss Manning, since she is very pleasing, and by using her name as the third star it gives an added interest to the production, since they will come expecting to see a new ingenue star.

In advertising this you might say: "If your husband had deserted you, and for fourteen years you had struggled to rear properly your two daughters, what would you do it he suddenly reappeared? See "Mary Jane's Pa."

PATRIOTIC APPEAL TITLES AND SITUATIONS WILL REGISTER

Emily Stevens in

THE SLACKER

Rolfe-Metro

DIRECTOR.....William Christy Cabanne
AUTHOR.....William Christy Cabanne
CAMERAMAN.....William E. Fildew
TECHNICAL DIRECTOR.....William H. Stevens
AS A WHOLE.....Patriotic recruiting appeal that has considerable kick; production just good
STORY.....Very little to plot, but footage has been devoted to emphasizing and elaborating on patriotic appeal angles and pointing out weakness of slackers
DIRECTION.....Generally satisfactory; never exceptional; had one or two slips
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Good; not exceptional
LIGHTINGS.....Generally good; occasionally poor; very few effects
CAMERA WORK.....Just good
STAR.....Not beautiful, but interesting personality
SUPPORT.....Quite satisfactory
EXTERIORS.....Good; beach atmosphere interesting
INTERIORS.....Quite satisfactory
DETAIL.....One serious mix-up
TIME.....Seventy-one minutes (7 parts)

PROPERLY handled, this should get big money anywhere, at the present time, because it has been cleverly handled in order to develop quite a substantial kick in relation to the slacker proposition.

The story, figured as to its dramatic values, is a very slender one. Figured on the patriotic angle, however, it has considerable power, because it gives a nice contrast between the brother who enlisted and the one who married so that he would not be drafted.

The action was developed in such a manner as to prove that the slacker really was courageous physically, and in the early part of the film this was demonstrated by having him rescue a man at the beach. The beach atmosphere in this part of the film was very interesting, and gives the production a nice start in classy surroundings. Afterwards the titles were placed so as to put speeches into the mouth of this man similar to those spoken by a great many thoughtless Americans, and then, by a gradual development of characterization partly influenced by his wife, we found this man converted into a fiery patriot who went right out and enlisted as a private.

Naturally this is great stuff at the present time, and there are many bits with titles which will call for applause from most any audience. We have a number of tableaux, such as Lee's Surrender; the North and the South joining hands before President Lincoln after the War; Paul Revere's Ride; Nathan Hale's speech before he was hanged; the authorship of "The Star Spangled Banner," etc., etc. These have been worked in rather smoothly and we did not have any objectionable war scenes at any time.

While Emily Stevens is neither young nor beautiful, she is a very interesting personality and holds attention by the sincerity of her characterizations. Some of her scenes were quite impressive.

Walter C. Miller, as the slacker, gave a very good characterization, building his part from that of the weakling to the patriot in a most convincing manner.

Leo Delaney was forceful as the disappointed lover, patriotic from the start, and the others in the cast were quite satisfactory.

There was one very serious error in detail that will undoubtedly be noticed by everyone and be rather freely commented upon. In one place where Miss Stevens and Mr. Miller as man and wife were host and hostess at a dinner party, we found the guests all marching into the dining-room, where they sat down at the table and enjoyed the feast very much, while Mr. Miller, Miss Stevens and Mr. Delaney were out playing an important dramatic scene in another room and outside of the house. So far as we could tell, the host and hostess never did go back to the dining-room, but went upstairs to their own rooms, there being several cut-backs to the guests apparently having a very good time without ever noticing that their host and hostess were absent.

In the cast were Belle Bruce, Chas. Fang, W. E. Lawrence, Daniel Jarrett, Eugene Borden, Baby Ivy Ward, Sue Balfour, Millicent Fisher, Mathilde Brindage, Evelyn Converse, and G. P. Hamilton, Jr.

The Box Office Angle.

Since the question of slackers is a very timely one at the present moment, and since any audience will be inclined to cheer the patriotic appeals and subtitles presented in this, I would say that this production is a pretty safe bet for getting people in and making them admit that they like it. Figured purely as entertainment of dramatic character, there is nothing much to this. If your community is decidedly patriotic it will probably go very big.

I would not promise too much about this being such a tremendous dramatic subject, but would rather center all of my advertising attention upon its power as a demonstration of the weakness of the position of the slacker, registering the fact that this production proves, without question, the real duty of every American.

EVERYWHERE

Wide Awake Exhibitors Are Getting on the Band Wagon with

GEORGE BEYNON'S

Orchestral Settings

Managers and Leaders Welcome This Successful Solution of "Fitting the Pictures"

Beynon's Service is Well Worth While and

REASONABLE

GEORGE W. BEYNON

505 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

EXCELLENT CHARACTERIZATIONS SLIPPED IN MELLER, BUT SAVED AT END

James Morrison, Grace Valentine and Arthur Donaldson in

BABBLING TONGUES

Ivan Film—State Rights

DIRECTOR.....William J. Humphrey
AUTHORS.....George Edwardes-Hall and William J. Humphrey
CAMERAMAN.....Marcel A. Le Picard
AS A WHOLE.....Rather well balanced cast made action in good atmosphere interesting despite melodramatic spots; producer developed characterizations pleasingly
STORY.....Started with excellent characterizations, became rather wild melodrama, but was saved by trick ending
DIRECTION.....Made characterizations very effective until reached conflict, where permitted some overplaying and action that was too tangled
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very good
LIGHTINGS.....Many quite effective; generally good
CAMERA WORK.....Good; more closeups would have helped
STAR.....Very pleasing, except acted a bit too much in some scenes
SUPPORT.....Presented personalities in minor parts, which helped situations
EXTERIORS.....Some very good; generally satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Very good
DETAIL.....Good, except one slip
TIME.....Seventy-one minutes (7 parts)

THE first two or three reels of this was great. The story was centered upon characterizations, and we found an exceptionally well balanced cast with situations that were not only interesting, but decidedly dramatic and impressive. After the characters had all been established, however, we found the story becoming rather melo through the introduction of a duel scene, and this was followed by other dramatic situations which overreached somewhat, with the result that they fell short of conviction.

The entire action was quite interesting, however, and the trick ending which brought us up from the tragedy to the realization that it was all a play which had been written by Mr. Morrison, gave a nice twist at the end and topped the production off with a smile which will make most anyone forgive a good part of the overacting in the wilder melodramatic moments.

The story was centered about the well-known situation of a young friend living with a married couple where the husband was quite a bit older than his wife. We found relatives and friends gossipping about the guests in the household, and this eventually led up to a situation where the young man overheard a remark about his supposed affair with the wife, which resulted in his challenge to a duel.

News of the duel was brought to the home of the husband and wife, and so the husband hurried to the scene and took the young friend's place, stating that he was there to defend the honor of his wife, this being made more dramatic by the fact that his wife was at that time in the rooms of the friend in the same building.

The husband was wounded and carried away to his home after discovering that his wife was with the friend, and then the friend fought the man who had insulted the wife, killing him. Afterwards the friend came to the home where the husband was dying and was denounced by the dying man, who staggered from his bed down the stairs to state that he now believed what had been said.

This tragic ending was blended into the scene of Mr. Morrison, who had played the friend, at the typewriter, being greeted by the husband and wife who came to hear him read the play which had just been enacted.

There was one detail slip which probably will be caught by your fast-thinking fans. Following the scene where Mr. Morrison resented the insult to the wife, we found Gladden James coming home to tell of the duel. A title at this point said that he told about the coming duel and also where it was to be held. As a matter of fact, the place where the duel was to be fought had not been decided upon up to this time and the story was not agreed upon until later, when the second visited Mr. Morrison. Consequently, the prompt arrival of Arthur Donaldson on the scene, and the arrival of the wife at the home of the friend who was supposed to have dropped out of her life were not satisfactorily explained. This is a technical slip, however, which will undoubtedly be forgiven, and, to my mind, it would have been much better if no attempt had been made to cover it up with a title when the title was absolutely wrong, as any fan will notice.

Considered as a whole, this production is decidedly superior to previous Ivan releases. The first few reels were excellent, and even when the action became melodramatic the players did not overstep as much as they have been accustomed to under the guidance of Producer Abramson. I would say that this is the best film that Ivan has produced to date, and, considering the fact that the title is a good one, it will undoubtedly register very satisfactorily, since the title centers the attention upon the early scenes which have to do with the making much of situations which are really entirely free from any thought of evil.

James Morrison was very pleasing as the friend, and Arthur Donaldson gave an excellent portrayal as the husband.

Paul Capellani, Richard Tucker, Gladden James, and Robert E. Hill were good in their respective parts. Grace Valentine, Louise Beaudet and Carolyn Birch were quite satisfactory despite the fact that they acted a bit too much occasionally.

In the melodramatic moments after the characterizations had been planted and the story got under way, the emotional threads were a bit too tangled up to be effective. Nevertheless, there was action, and, with many interesting action is a satisfactory substitute, providing the characterizations have been nicely established.

Robert E. Hill also appeared among those in the supporting cast.

The Box Office Angle.

While this is far from being a tremendous subject, it is certainly better than the average release, because it starts with an excellent characterization centered around a worth-while theme and holds beautifully for about three reels. The overplaying in the melodramatic moments is not serious enough to condemn the production, and the trick ending will probably save the film from much adverse criticism.

The title should pull some business. If you handle this intelligently, I believe you can figure this as a production that will get results and prove satisfactory. I would emphasize the fact that the cast is a well balanced one, calling attention to the presence of Arthur Donaldson, Gladden James, Paul Capellani, Richard Tucker, Grace Valentine, Louise Beaudet and Robert E. Hill, in addition to the star, James Morrison.

As a teaser campaign for this you might start off a week in advance with lines like these:

"Have BABBLING TONGUES ever injured you?"
"Have BABBLING TONGUES ever marred your life?"
"Do you believe the BABBLING TONGUES?"

ROUTINE WESTERN OF OLD SCHOOL TYPE FAIRLY DONE

Jack Gardner in

OPEN PLACES

Essanay—K-E-S-E

DIRECTOR.....W. S. Van Dyke
AUTHOR.....W. S. Van Dyke
AS A WHOLE.....Ordinary Western meller of old-school type
STORY.....Mounted Police hero in man hunt for husband of shero; a muchly-used situation
DIRECTION.....Very similar to ordinary two- and three-reel technique of several years past
PHOTOGAPHY.....Generally good straight stuff
LIGHTINGS.....Generally too uniform; no attempt for effects
CAMERA WORK.....Not enough closeups or vignetting
STAR.....Pleasing sometimes, but generally camera-conscious
SUPPORT.....Movie characters
EXTERIORS.....Western atmosphere; fitted story, but not artistic INTERIORS.....Acceptable; not photographed to advantage
DETAIL.....Routine stuff
TIME.....Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

CONSIDERED as a feature, this will probably be satisfactory to those who are willnig to accept the ordinary Western movie mellerdrammer, because it is never at any time truly rotten. The production runs along with about the same high spots that one might find in any of the two- or three-reel "Westerns" that have been made by the hundreds in the past few years.

The story was a very familiar one, having to do with the hero Mounted Policeman who was a heller with a gun despite the fact that he seemed quiet and pleasant when not in action. The willun was a highwayman who had married a nice little "thing" who ran away to Canada after her hubby had eluded a posse who had wanted him for shooting up a saloon and murdering a few men.

Obligingly, they all got together in a Canadian town, with the Mounted Policeman falling in love with the wife, who had become a school teacher, and the willun drifting in so as to keep the plot interesting. The wife made the Mounted Policeman promise that he would have no trouble with the willun, which gave us the good old stuff of willun insulting the hero who held himself in check after a terrific mental struggle.

We had had one man-hunt when the willun escaped to Canada and now we led up to the grand finale where the willun went out into the open, inviting hero to follow him. Of course, shero came right after and the willun trapped the hero, thus getting the first shot, although, as we expected, hero got the better of the argument because of his wonderful accuracy.

The best bit in the picture was the scene where the girl came through the doorway of the hut after the hero had been shot, with the girl's figure thrown out of focus to register the inability of the hero to realize that it was his sweetheart instead of the willun, this being occasioned by the result of the bullet wound and his loss of blood. This technical trick of gradually bringing the girl's face into focus was well handled, and I believe it will be very effective with the average audience.

Jack Gardner was pleasing at times, but unfortunately he seemed camera-conscious and very often tried to "act," with disastrous results. If he could be placed under a director who would keep him working naturally, I believe his work would register in a more satisfactory manner.

There was nothing particularly distinctive about any part of this, and the story and treatment of the offering hardly justify it being put in five reels; yet the natural love of the average film fan for action may justify the existence of this in preference to a good many of the sex "society" offerings.

It is an unfortunate fact that this production will fail to impress your audience principally because the characters registered their points in a routine melodramatic manner, the willun, for instance, putting over everything the Western movie willuns have done for years, from the bit of sitting down on a table with one leg on a chair as he looked mean at the shero, to the bit of coming through the door and swaying from one side to the other after he had an encounter with the hero.

Those who appeared in support of Mr. Gardner were Ruth King and Carl Stockdale.

The Box Office Angle.

I doubt if Jack Gardner's name is worth anything at the box office at the present time, although the name of the production, "Open Places," may pull you a little business if you explain that this is a story about the great outdoors of Canada.

If you have been playing program stuff as it comes, you can get this by satisfactorily, but it is hardly more than a "filler" any way you consider it. It wouldn't be advisable for you to make much noise about this.

The chief angle to center any advertising on would be the love for the open air, using lines after this fashion: "Do you appreciate the great outdoors? Have you ever lived in the OPEN PLACES? A line or two like that preceding the announcement of the production, would center some attention upon the title "Open Places."

ERNEST STERN, Inc.
THE TITLE MAN
Specializes in
MOTION PICTURE TITLES
OF THE HIGHEST GRADE
729 Seventh Ave., New York - - Phone Bryant 8973

CRANE WILBUR
Exclusive Management
MABEL CONDON EXCHANGE
LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

BEST PETROVA YET; DRAMATIC SUSPENSE STORY IN CLASSY ATMOSPHERE

Mme. Olga Petrova in

THE LAW OF THE LAND

Lasky—Paramount

DIRECTOR	Maurice Tourneur
AUTHOR	Charles Everard Whittaker
CAMERAMAN	John Vanderbroeck
AS A WHOLE	Exceptionally well done drama played at effective tempo in distinctive atmosphere
STORY	Started weak, but finished very strong
DIRECTION	Made scenes and bits very effective; provided atmosphere of class
PHOTOGRAPHY	Excellent
LIGHTINGS	Many very effective
CAMERA WORK	Excellen
STAR	Impressive; probably her best picture
SUPPORT	Very good; some bits excellen
EXTERIORS	Few, but acceptable
INTERIORS	Distinctive and classy
DETAIL	Very good
TIME	Sixty-four minutes (5 parts)

I BELIEVE you will be very safe in stating that this is the best picture Petrova has ever appeared in.

The story starts off rather badly, because we have Petrova forced into a marriage through her mother's financial difficulties, but after the real action gets under way we find the scenes from the play decidedly effective.

Producer Tourneur has handled the situations with an excellent tempo and has made small bits stand out, so that the cast seemed particularly powerful.

The plot had to do with Petrova murdering her husband, who had been very brutal to her and had whipped their boy unmercifully, with the dramatic investigation which followed the murder being developed into an excellent bit of suspense.

At the finish the officer in charge, who had just been celebrating the christening of his twins, came to a realization of the situation and announced that he had decided that the killing was an accident due to Petrova having dropped the gun, which was accidentally discharged. As a finish this was a good twist.

The atmosphere, for the most part, was particularly pleasing, although in one of the early scenes Producer Tourneur insisted on giving us a back drop. It was an excellent back drop, but, nevertheless, a drop is always a drop, and it seemed to me that it would have been much better to have made this in the open.

Mme. Petrova was very effective in all of her scenes and registered more sincerely in this than in anything I have ever seen her do.

Mahlon Hamilton was decidedly pleasing and not camera-conscious, as he has been in other productions.

Wyndham Standing as the husband was effective, and William Riley Hatch made the part of the officer stand out.

J. D. Haragan, as the butler Chetwood, registered one of the best bits I have ever seen. He put over some touches that should result in his being kept busy forever in such parts.

The entire cast was decidedly satisfactory.

The Box Office Angle.

Go to this and make a fuss about it and promise that it is the best Petrova picture ever made. It will deliver. Tell them that it is a dramatic suspense story presented in a distinctive atmosphere, and tell them, too that it was made by Producer Maurice Tourneur, mentioning some of the past productions which he has made.

You might say in your advertising: "Would a wife be justified in killing her husband if they were unhappy and he brutally beat their boy with a whip? See THE LAW OF THE LAND."

There is enough comedy in this to relieve at the right moments, and I believe that you can safely declare this a production that is decidedly above the average.

PITIFULLY CRUDE STORY AND TREATMENT HANDICAP STAR

Lew Fields in

THE BARKER

Selig—K-E-S-E

DIRECTOR	J. A. Richmond
AUTHOR	Charles K. Harris
AS A WHOLE	Crude, cheap movie meller pitifully poor from all angles
STORY	Unconvincing meller mess
DIRECTION	Painfully old-school in every way
PHOTOGRAPHY	Fair
LIGHTINGS	Poor
CAMERA WORK	Poor
STAR	Pitifully handicapped
SUPPORT	Weak
EXTERIORS	Ordinary
INTERIORS	Poor
DETAIL	Not effective
TIME	Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

CERTAINLY it is a shame to see so capable an artist as Lew Fields presented in such a crude and cheaply-made production as this. Most anyone may be attracted by the possibilities of seeing Lew Fields on the screen, and the title of the "Barker" suggests possibilities. The disappointment will be all the more keen, however, for your fans if they come in hoping to see something worth while.

Starting off with an anarchists' meeting which was raided, we found that this was an excuse for getting Mr. Fields to America. Later on they drifted into some circus atmosphere with the willun brutally forcing Mr. Fields' daughter to become an acrobat. There was a suggestion that the willun had been some sort of a nobleman early in the picture, but later on he was just an ordinary circus acrobat, because of his need for funds despite the fact that a previous title had suggested that he was turning the child over to a woman who was to place her in the circus, which surely didn't suggest that he was going to join the circus himself.

In that part of the film having to do with the circus Pat O'Malley was introduced as the hero owner of the show, and then we found Mr. Fields conveniently brought into the same surroundings by becoming the sideshow barker for the aggregation with whom his daughter was compelled to work. The willun got ruff, and the hero swatted him one, and then after an accident, when about to die, the willun confessed that the child he had been carrying with him was Mr. Fields' daughter.

To anyone who remembers having seen Lew Fields in "Old Dutch," which was made for World Film several years ago by Frank H. Crane, this production will seem almost criminal. Certainly Mr. Fields is capable of doing decidedly worth while work on the screen, and, just as surely, it is impossible for him to register effectively when presented in such an atmosphere with such crude support and technical treatment. The production looks like one which might have been made several years ago, so far as the handling of the atmosphere and the treatment of the dramatic moments is concerned.

As a sample of the crude manner in which this story was presented, they wanted to register an arrival in this country in one place, and screened a shot at a "Statue of Liberty" constructed in the studio. It is bad enough at any time to show the real thing for this purpose, but when they show a "phoney" it is going about the limit.

In the cast were Amy Dennis, Floria Fielding, A. Francis Lenz, Mabel Bardine and Anna Cohen.

The Box Office Angle.

This is a very crude production and one which I certainly would advise you not to show, particularly because your fans will expect a Lew Fields feature to be rather good.

If you are running a house where you work on the basis of getting them in without worrying about what they think about you and your show, then you can probably get some money with this. Certainly, however, if you have to make good with your fans, it would be inadvisable to play this.

There were real possibilities here, and once or twice they showed a flash of life when they got to the sideshow scenes, because it would have been impossible to have gone through this stuff without registering one or two point; but, instead of halfway realizing the possibilities of this, they didn't even scratch the outside shell, so far as the sideshow stuff was concerned.

Your decision on this must rest entirely upon the question of whether or not the films you play must please your fans. I feel very sure that any intelligent fan will feel that this is painfully crude.

WRONGED GOIL MELLER IN VERY GOOD ATMOSPHERE

Mollie King in

THE ON-THE-SQUARE-GIRL

Astra—Pathe

DIRECTOR	George Fitzmaurice
AUTHOR	Ouida Bergere
CAMERAMAN	Arthur C. Miller
AS A WHOLE	A lot of stuff that they do in the movies, in good atmosphere but never convinced
STORY	Chessboard melodrama with very convenient finish
DIRECTION	Gave good atmosphere, some distinctive sets and rather interesting action at times, but missed human note throughout
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally good, except faces too white at times
LIGHTINGS	Many very effective on sets, but frequently poor on faces
CAMERA WORK	Varied
STAR	Suffering shero, wronged goil, displaying lily-white shoulder very frequently
SUPPORT	Acted quite a lot
EXTERIORS	Some good snow scenes; generally rather interesting
INTERIORS	Some very good; generally distinctive
DETAIL	Very convenient
TIME	Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

THEY had about all of the routine movie meller in this, from the poor woiking goil whose mother was an invalid and had to go to the country, with the wicked, wealthy employer who sent mother and then tried to wrong daughter, down to the finish where we learned that the employer was the goil's father, and that the wife of the sympathetic hero, who was trying to bawl hero out for having heroine in his studio, was the daughter of the naughty employer who we thought had been killed when he tried to wrong her, only to be apprised this time, as stated above, that he was also the father of shero, who now learned that she had not killed him, after all.

There was one title which struck me as rather funny, where Miss King was explaining to Donald Hall that she couldn't be his wife for "grave" reasons. The reason was that she thought she'd killed a man. Of course that is a bit suggestive of the grave.

Producer Fitzmaurice gave us a lot of atmosphere in this that was rather interesting. They had some scenes taken at a winter resort, with some pretty snow shots, and a lot of junk having to do wit hsome fast sassiety folk who were having a little party that was not nearly as funny as it was intended to be, but still was interesting.

Miss King was presented in several L. & B. H. gowns and she managed on frequent occasions to see to it that her shoulder came into prominence. Yes, it is rather a pretty shoulder!

Richard Tucker was presented as an actor who has a wife and four kids, but insisted that he must play with the women to remain popular. I'm not sure whether the producer was taking a shot at some of our movie stars in this bit, but, anyway, this domestic tragedy gathered a few laughs as it went by.

L. Rogers Lytton, Richard Tucker and Donald Hall in the principal parts in support, were quite satisfactory, although they all acted upon any and all occasions. Mr. Hall had several serious struggles trying to carry Miss King, one or two of these being rather funny. Others who appeared were Aimee Dalamores and Ernest Lawford.

The Box Office Angle.

If they stand for movie melo with you, you can probably get this by very satisfactorily, because the atmosphere is rather good and some of the lightings were sufficiently effective to give the general impression of a distinctive production. The scenes in which the wicked villun managed to lure Miss King into one of them there "Oriental rooms," where he offered her wine (the doity thing!), was a little bit rough, but it has been done so frequently in the meller movies that I have a hunch that most fans—and even the censors—have become so hardened to this situation that it may get by. The rest of the film was nothing of much importance, except just a lot of action to make up five reels.

Mollie King's chief claim to box office value is that she has been featured in a couple of Pathe serials which brought a lot of advertising. The name of this may get you a little bit of business, although the plot fails to get away from the good old routine of all these wronged-shero mellers.

HAROLD LOCKWOOD

Yorke--Metro

TABULATED PERCENTAGE REPORTS FROM EXHIBITORS

THE BATTING AVERAGES

These are the averages of the companies having 200 reports or more.

Reports		% P. P.	% B. O.	Repeat
660	Fox	73.1	70.8	85
531	Metro	70.8	67.0	49
1813	Triangle	70.6	65.2	354
429	Vitagraph	68.1	66.2	74
2079	Paramount	68.7	62.9	336
454	World	67.7	61.5	41
240	Bluebird	62.7	63.5	20

THE NUMBER BEFORE THE NAME OF THE FEATURE INDICATES THE NUMBER OF REPORTS RECEIVED AND TABULATED ON THAT FILM.

THE FIRST COLUMN CARRIES THE PERCENTAGE OF PLEASED PATRONS.

THE SECOND COLUMN SHOWS THE BOX OFFICE PERCENTAGE.

FIGURES IN THE THIRD COLUMN INDICATE THAT MANY REPORTED THE FILM WORTH A RETURN DATE.

All reports in this percentage tabulation have been marked on this scale:

EXCEPTIONAL	100%
EXCELLENT	80%
GOOD	60%
FAIR	40%
POOR	20%
BAD	0%

PARAMOUNT

2079 Paramount 68.7 62.9 336

Reports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
3	In Bishop's Carriage	85	93
2	The Lost Paradise	50	73
8	The Virginian	81	73	2
2	Such a Little Queen	78	78	1
1	Marta of the Lowlands	50	70
3	Where the Trail Divides	93	90	1
11	Wildflower	89	82	6
1	The County Chairman	80	80
1	What's His Name	75	100
5	Behind the Screens	81	78
5	Man from Mexico	90	70	3
1	The Man From Home	70	70
1	Circus Man	94	95
2	Rose of the Rancho	84	77
5	The Bargain	80	74	3
2	Ghost Breakers	60	63
7	The Crucible	92	84	3
1	False Colors	50	80
5	The Sign of the Cross	79	85
4	Cameo Kirby	61	50
8	Cinderella	85	93	4
1	The Million	70	90
5	Girl of the Golden West	79	77	2
3	The Dancing Girl	65	65
1	The Italian	77	62	1
1	No Laughing Matter	90	85
1	Morals of Marcus	60	50
5	The Goose Girl	95	95	4
2	After Five	51	50
1	Mistress Nell	88	95
2	Buckshot John	60	60
1	Her Triumph	60	75	1
3	The Warrens of Virginia	70	71	1
1	Country Boy	60	40
6	David Harum	82	78	1
1	A Gentleman of Leisure	80	70
2	The Caprices of Kitty	63	70
1	Love Route	60	60
1	Sunshine Molly	40	20
1	The Governor's Lady	97	85
2	Gretna Green	100	100	2
3	Are You a Mason?	78	84
1	Pretty Mrs. Smith	65	90
1	The Unafraid	80	75
1	When We Were 21	75	63
4	Snobs	64	52
1	Captain Courtesy	94	94	1
3	Captive	81	67
1	Niobe	75	55	1
1	Help Wanted	80	75
1	The Woman	86	59	1
5	House of Lost Court	82	84	2
4	Fanchon, The Cricket	89	92	3
3	Betty in Search of Thrill	83	87
2	Stolen Goods	78	75
1	Wild-Goose Chase	40	55	1
6	Pretty Sister Jose	84	82	2
5	Jim the Penman	84	65
6	The Dawn of a To-morrow	83	88	1
5	Arab	80	56	2
1	Clarissa	75	80
2	The Dictator	45	45
5	Wild Olive	82	69
6	Chimmy Fadden	91	75	1
3	Little Pal	79	85
4	Rugmaker's Daughter	40	50
2	The Clue	74	88
6	Kindling	81	82
1	The Running Fight	60	70
3	The Fighting Hope	77	80
5	Kilmeny	75	73
8	Seven Sisters	86	74	1
3	Puppet Crown	83	85
19	Rags	91	93	5
2	Sold	83	72
6	The Secret Orchid	79	74
5	Nearly a Lady	65	75
6	The Marriage of Kitty	76	64
2	Poor Schmaltz	42	37
8	Helene of the North	87	81	2
3	The Majesty of the Law	56	60
3	Heart of Jennifer	66	55
2	Incorrigible Dukane	75	55
4	Esmeralda	89	80	2
2	The Case of Becky	65	65
1	Out of Darkness	60	40
1	Peer Gynt	42	100
4	The Explorers	72	61
4	'Twas Ever Thus	53	68
2	Voice in the Fog	75	67
8	Fatal Card	65	50
4	Zaza	91	67	2
6	The Girl of Yesterday	89	88	3
7	White Pearl	71	75
4	Blackbirds	57	28
7	Chorus Lady	73	68
6	The Secret Sin	69	74	1
7	Yankee Girl	52	57
6	Masqueraders	56	56
12	Carmen	82	83	4
12	Still Waters	94	83	7
9	Madame Butterfly	82	86	3
7	Mummy and Humming Bird	64	50
7	Bella Donna	92	77	4
8	Armstrong's Wife	79	65
5	Chimmie Fadden Out West	88	76	2
8	A Gentleman From Indiana	86	78
10	Prince and the Pauper	93	87	5
10	Mr. Grex from Monte Carlo	84	80	1
8	Jane	76	51
9	The Unknown	76	67	1
18	The Cheat	94	80	12
9	The Reform Candidate	80	54	1
9	The Immigrant	73	62
10	The Old Homestead	85	84	7
8	Lydia Gilmore	82	61	1
10	Temptation	82	77	2
10	The Foundling	78	76	3
6	Tongues of Men	77	53	1
8	Mice and Men	84	80	5
7	The Golden Chance	77	61	2
2	My Lady Incog	50	35
5	Ragamuffins	77	53
5	Call of the Cumberlands	79	64
8	The Spider	87	64
10	Puddin' Head Wilson	84	62
9	Tennessee's Pardner	65	58
8	Madame Le President	24	46
9	Nearly a King	52	49
13	Trail of the Lonesome Pine	75	77
8	Fell In Love With His Wife	63	51
8	Blacklist	62	52
10	Out of the Drifts	89	86
8	Diplomacy	88	56
14	Poor Little Peppina	88	84
16	To Have and To Hold	74	69
12	Ben Blair	72	63
10	For the Defense	68	62
7	The Code of Marcia Grey	64	59
9	The Lost Bridegroom	69	60
8	The Saleslady	72	62
13	Audrey	73	70
9	The Sowers	64	59
11	The Heart of Paula	71	54
12	The Race	69	59
8	The Eternal Grind	70	78
10	The Love Mask	59	54
10	Molly Make-Believe	87	82
7	The Red Widow	62	55
12	The Heart of Nora Flynn	72	60
8	A Moment Before	52	64
12	David Garrick	68	46
9	The Innocent Lie	56	51
16	Marie Rosa	81	80
12	Alien Souls	69	67
13	The Feud Girl	60	56
16	Pasquale	78	53
16	Sweet Kitty Bellairs	72	62
20	Saints and Sinners	51	49
17	Thousand-Dollar Husband	66	62
22	A Gutter Magdalene	62	54
10	Evil Thereof	44	44
15	The Making of Maddalena	63	57
23	Silks and Satins	85	88	1
14	Destiny's Toy	90	51
19	The Clown	79	54
20	Susie Snowflakes	69	59
16	The World's Great Snare	73	78
19	The American Beauty	61	61
22	The Dupe	64	64
22	The Smugglers	53	50
26	The Selfish Woman	72	68
29	Davy Crockett	67	67
28	The Dream Girl	60	64
28	Under Cover	70	75
27	International Marriage	55	51
27	Common Ground	64	64
35	Hulda from Holland	95	94	2
30	House of Golden Windows	73	64
22	A Woman in the Case	72	72
25	Little Lady Eileen	87	89	1
23	The Stronger Love	53	52
21	Public Opinion	82	72
21	Rolling Stones	67	60
21	The Honorable Friend	65	62
19	The Victory of Conscience	60	60
21	Each Pearl a Tear	74	69
22	The Parson of Panamint	79	70
14	The Big Sister	48	59

rts	% P.P.	% B.O.	Re- peat
The Reward of Patience	65	55
The House of Lies	73	65	1
The Daughter of McGregor	56	45
Ashes of Embers	85	83	7
The Quest of Life	59	61
Anton, the Terrible	46	45
The Lash	57	55
The Storm	75	65	1
The Intrigue	81	61	2
Her Father's Son	74	68	2
Witchcraft	55	55
The Kiss	74	68	2
The Rainbow Princess	82	74	3
Seventeen	85	74	2
Miss George Washington	95	95	11
The Heir to the Hoorah	82	69	5
The Soul of Kura San	80	73	1
A Son of Erin	79	73	2
Unprotected	53	55	1
The Years of the Locust	49	50
The Plow Girl	77	63
The Yellow Pawn	66	57	1
Nanette of the Wilds	50	57	2
Martyrdom of Philip Strong	53	55	1
The Coney Island Princess	62	63	1
The Road to Love	72	59	1
Oliver Twist	85	69	6
The Victoria Cross	44	54	1
The Traveling Salesman	78	60	3
The Right Direction	76	61	2
Snow White	95	95	13
Redeeming Love	63	60	1
The Slave Market	74	70	5
The Evil Eye	30	44	1
Great Expectations	74	55	1
Happiness of Three Women	73	58	1
Betty to the Rescue	55	48
A Girl Like That	55	51
Lost and Won	59	50
The Golden Fetter	50	56
His Sweetheart	83	57	2
The Wax Model	67	56
Each To His Kind	62	60
Her Own People	72	52
The Black Wolf	35	41
The American Consul	53	50	1
Fortunes of Fift	64	76	2
On Record	62	56	2
Winning of Sally Temple	40	48
Those Without Sin	51	50	1
Castles For Two	51	48	1
Out of the Wreck	60	54
Sapho	74	53	3
Prison Without Walls	52	51
The Dummy	70	54
The Spirit of Romance	63	52
As Men Love	73	53
The Bottle Imp	75	66	2
The Bond Between	50	39
A School for Husbands	49	46	1
The Lonesome Chap	51	44
Sleeping Fires	56	63	1
The Tides of Barnegat	49	43
The Cost of Hatred	40	38
The Valentine Girl	73	76
Unconquered	14	18
The Girl at Home	45	39
Heart's Desire	24	34
Sacrifice	27	42
The Primrose Ring	30	38
The Silent Partner	30	34
Marcellini Millions	43	28
The Highway of Hope	29	25
Her Better Self	55	58
The Undying Flame	27	40
Freckles	65	53
The World Apart	38	31
Giving Becky a Chance	70	51
The Jaguar's Claws	40	47
The Inner Shrine	38	58
The Roadside Impresario	28	17
The Heir of the Ages	23	22
Her Strange Wedding	20	30
The Little Boy Scout	40	20
At First Sight	40	34
Big Timber	60	60
Love That Lives	70	80
Forbidden Paths	40	40
What Money Can't Buy	40	40

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Re- peat
TRIANGLE
1813 Triangle	70.6	65.2	354
10 The Iron Strain	81	66	2
9 The Lamb	84	75	3
9 Old Heidelberg	72	63	1
11 The Coward	84	67	1
9 Martyrs of the Alamo	67	57	2
14 The Disciple	85	76	2
7 Matrimony	81	74	2
5 Sable Lorcha	64	53
6 The Golden Claw	61	72
9 Double Trouble	64	64	2
7 Aloha Oe	63	65	1
8 Lily and Rose	61	53
8 Jordan is a Hard Road	56	52
6 Winged Idol	53	52
8 Penitents	28	32
11 The Edge of the Abyss	67	61
8 Submarine Pirate	85	78	1
5 Cross Currents	48	45
11 Between Men	72	70	1
14 Let Katy Do It	87	66	6
5 The Corner	56	47
5 The Missing Link	55	43	1
3 Beckoning Flame	65	48
9 The Wood Nymph	54	50	1
8 The Conqueror	71	70
9 Price of Power	55	51
10 The Green Swamp	80	78	1
12 Acquitted	69	51
6 D'Artagnan	59	54
18 His Picture in the Papers	90	75	5
13 Honor's Altar	77	67	2
14 Betty of Greystone	77	65	2
23 Peggy	94	91	15
7 Don Quixote	57	56
9 The Last Act	79	78	1
11 Daphne and the Pirate	71	57	1
18 Hell's Hinges	93	89	11
17 The Flying Torpedo	88	80	8
14 Bullets and Brown Eyes	85	75	3
14 Martha's Vindication	79	72	2
14 Moral Fabric	75	62	1
15 Hoodoo Ann	68	65	1
15 The Raiders	79	70
14 The Habit of Happiness	92	85	5
5 Waifs	70	59	1
8 Little Meena's Romance	64	60	1
17 The Aryan	59	80	6
10 Sold for Marriage	71	72	1
17 Stepping Stones	85	75	2
10 Sunshine Dad	36	46
9 Civilzation's Child	68	64	1
14 Children In the House	80	66	2
11 The Beggar of Cawnpore	61	49
19 The Good-Bad Man	90	92	4
12 The No-Good Guy	74	60	3
17 Susan Rocks the Boat	69	63
20 Not My Sister	79	77	4
18 Child of Paris Streets	76	64
22 The Primal Lure	82	76	7
8 Mr. Goode, the Samaritan	53	53
26 The Market of Vain Desire	79	64	5
22 Going Straight	77	78	3
29 The Bugle Call	93	79	9
26 Reggie Mixes In	93	80	11
16 The Sorrows of Love	66	69	1
21 An Innocent Magdalene	71	71	2
18 The Dividend	70	68	1
21 The Wild Girl of Sierras	45	53
25 An Apostle of Vengeance	88	83	4
18 Casey at the Bat	44	48
28 The Phantom	83	72	7
30 Flirting With Fate	87	86	11
31 The Deserter	85	69	11
26 The Little School Ma'am	74	67	2
26 The Eye of the Night	74	58	5
19 Stranded	60	50
27 The Captive God	65	70	2
23 The Halfbreed	72	74	2
22 The Payment	81	70	3
18 The Marriage of Molly O	48	47
24 Honor Thy Name	87	73	4
22 The Devil's Needle	64	64	1
30 Shell 43	87	68	6
26 Hell-to-Pay Austin	83	66	6
21 Lieutenant Danny, U. S. A.	79	69
16 Pillars of Society	59	56	1
22 Home	91	80	9

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Re- peat
16 Gretchen the Greenhorn	64	62	2
21 The Patriot	79	80	6
24 The Social Secretary	89	75	8
17 The Thoroughbred	82	72	1
11 The Little Liar	69	57
19 The Wolf Woman	86	89	6
16 The Dawnmaker	58	78	3
20 Diane of the Follies	71	72	2
27 Manhattan Madness	94	92	12
22 Plain Jane	88	75	5
20 Old Folks at Home	81	64	2
17 The Jungle Child	60	61	1
15 The Rummy	67	54	1
21 The Return of Draw Egan	88	86	7
20 The Vagabond Prince	75	70	3
19 Somewhere in France	76	69	1
18 A Corner in Colleens	88	80	7
12 A Sister of Six	69	64	2
21 Fifty-Fifty	89	83	6
4 War's Women	61	48
12 Atta Boy's Last Race	54	55
16 American Aristocracy	92	89	9
10 The Microscope Mystery	50	43
14 Honorable Algy	76	65	3
14 Jim Grimsby's Boy	68	62	5
15 The Devil's Double	91	91	7
12 The Children Paid	72	63	3
14 Children of the Feud	55	52	1
8 The Criminal	49	45
10 A Gamble in Souls	67	65	3
15 The Wharf Rat	54	55
20 The Matrimaniac	92	94	10
19 The Sin Ye Do	92	85	10
13 Heiress of Coffee Dan's	60	53	2
10 Three of Many	62	53
9 House Built Upon Sand	75	67	3
8 Nina the Flower Girl	51	52
11 The Female of the Species	72	74	2
16 Truthful Tulliver	97	93	9
12 The Weaker Sex	88	83	4
7 The Little Yank	40	52	1
10 The Bride of Hate	78	74	4
11 The Iced Bullet	62	53
14 The Americano	99	97	11
10 Chicken Casey	75	56	1
14 Jim Bludso	63	41	1
14 The Crab	83	70	5
10 Girl of the Timber Claims	41	39
16 The Gun-Fighter	76	85	10
13 The Bad Boy	71	54	2
11 The Princess of the Dark	39	41
6 Stage Struck	41	38
12 Last of the Ingrams	45	42
9 Blood Will Tell	64	61
5 A Love Sublime	47	40
8 The Little Brother	51	37	2
14 Back of the Man	90	81	5
10 Betsy's Burglar	59	54
14 The Square-Deal Man	96	95	7
11 The Dark Road	60	49	1
5 A Daughter of the Poor	57	55
9 A Woman's Awakening	61	52
9 Her Father's Keeper	54	48
9 Her Official Fathers	56	48
9 Old-Fashioned Young Man	48	47
10 Sweetheart of the Doomed	74	68	4
9 Paddy O'Hara	67	56	1
11 The Desert Man	92	91	4
9 Cheerful Givers	47	41
10 The Pinch Hitter	96	71	2
5 Hands Up	35	35
8 The Snarl	54	63
4 Might and the Man	25	30
6 Happiness	59	56
4 The Man Who Made Good	45	39
4 Wild Winship's Widow	68	56
5 Souls Triumphant	32	30
7 The Millionaire Vagrant	78	64
7 Wolf Lowry	93	95	1
2 The Girl Glory	80	55
5 Bawbs o' Blue Ridge	38	63
6 A Hater of Men	79	68
5 American—That's All	32	32
5 The Girl Glory	80	58
5 Love or Justice?	69	69
1 Her Excellency, the Governor	20	20
5 Paws of the Bear	62	54
1 Madcap Madge	100	85
7 The Clodhopper	97	83	1

Reports	P.P.	B.O.	peat
4 The Flame of the Yukon	100	94
2 A Strange Transgressor	80	90
1 Time Locks and Diamonds	20	20
1 The Mother Instinct	80	40
1 Sudden Jim	100	90

WORLD

454 World	67.7	61.5	41
4 Hearts Afire	70	78
1 Daughter of the Sea	60	50
2 The Warning	55	45
4 The Little Dutch Girl	80	60
1 The Price of Her Silence	80	90
2 The Master of the House	68	53
1 The Dragon	50	30
1 The Price	80	65
1 Love's Cross Roads	55	50
1 Better Woman	75	80
1 By Whose Hand	60	55
1 Her Great Hour	60	40
1 When it Strikes Home	60	65
2 Circus Romance	65	55
2 Old Dutch	75	30
1 Ballet Girl	52	42
3 Marrying Money	79	82
1 Wishing Ring	64	90
1 The Dollar Mark	55	42
1 Gentleman from Mississippi	60	40
1 As Ye Sow	100	45
1 Stolen Voice	90	90
1 Face in the Moonlight	50	50
1 Women and Wine	60	40
2 Blue Grass	75	60
1 Fruits of Desire	40	50
1 Alias Jimmy Valentine	80	50
7 Trilby	81	64	1
1 Idols	40	40
2 Master Hand	86	80
3 Devil's Toy	57	73
1 Salvation Nell	40	47
1 Family Cupboard	50	57	1
4 Heart of Blue Ridge	84	73	1
1 Butterfly on Wheel	80	70
2 Hearts of Men	50	52
1 Body and Soul	40	45
1 The Ransom	63	42
4 The Labyrinth	66	65
3 Should a Wife Forgive?	90	90
2 The Senator	83	60
1 Hearts in Exile	90	90
1 His Wife's Good Name	25	20
1 The Chain Invisible	10	6
1 The Imposter	80	75
1 Sunday	95	30
1 As In a Looking Glass	60	40
1 Over Night	70	70
3 Sins of Society	76	65
7 Camille	86	79	3
3 The Rack	89	69
1 Fine Feathers	70	40
1 The Clarion	60	75
3 The Woman in 47	74	80
5 The Yellow Passport	82	80	2
3 The Price of Happiness	58	50
2 A Woman's Power	45	50
1 Cowardly Way	60	60
2 Passersby	73	55
3 Man and His Angel	62	45
4 The Supreme Sacrifice	78	69
2 The Struggle	60	60
3 The Hand of Peril	75	67
5 Then I'll Come Back To You	76	66	1
4 The Reapers	75	65
2 The Shadow of Doubt	78	65
2 Social Highwaymen	75	48
3 Closed Road	87	81	1
7 The Feast of Life	61	73
7 Her Maternal Right	58	74
6 Sudden Riches	76	71
1 The Twin Triangle	83	45
1 Tangled Fates	57	63
3 Fate's Boomerang	42	53
1 His Brother's Wife	83	74	1
10 Perils of Divorce	61	63
13 La vie de Boheme	47	50
1 What Happened at 22	82	80
5 Crucial Test	59	58
7 The Weakness of Man	61	68
12 Sally in Our Alley	68	63
14 Paying the Price	70	70	1
12 Miss Petticoats	59	61
14 Woman's Way	75	74	4
13 The Summer Girl	56	57
12 Rail Rider	68	60
10 Husband and Wife	75	63	2
8 Almighty Dollar	76	72	1
13 The Velvet Paw	74	69	1
5 Friday, the Thirteenth	72	70
11 Dark Silence	77	79	2
4 The Revolt	66	63
7 The Gilded Cage	75	70
6 Hidden Scar	77	67
6 The Scarlet Oath	60	62
7 Man Who Stood Still	71	63
8 The Heart of a Hero	59	49
3 Without a Soul	70	85
15 Bought and Paid For	91	91	10
10 The Madness of Helen	57	54
6 Men She Married	58	55
4 The Deep Purple	81	75
11 All Man	59	63	2
7 Broken Chains	50	43
12 The Rise of Susan	79	83	6
6 The World Against Him	52	43
10 Woman Alone	67	65	1
7 On Dangerous Ground	65	71
7 The Man Who Forgot	65	61	1
4 Marriage a la Carte	73	73	1
1 The Unpardonable Sin	40	55
5 The Bondage of Fear	65	63
5 Tillie Wakes Up	79	78	1
8 The Hungry Heart	87	83	2
8 The Square Deal	69	72
3 A Girl's Folly	65	75
5 The Red Woman	48	48
4 The Web of Desire	78	73	1
5 The Family Honor	66	61
8 The Dancer's Peril	77	71	1
5 The Social Leper	65	65
4 Man's Woman	61	61
4 Darkest Russia	71	75
6 Forget-Me-Not	63	69
1 The Bludgeon	87	80
3 As Man Made Her	62	68
5 The Page Mystery	55	57
4 Yankee Pluck	61	48
4 Moral Courage	61	58
4 Mothers of France	66	51
2 Maternity	85	90
2 The Crimson Dove	60	55
2 The False Friend	68	68
2 The Stolen Paradise	50	70
1 Atonement	70	65
1 The Pawn of Fate	85	45
1 The Divorse Game	5	75
1 The Price of Pride	75	60
1 The Brand of Satan	75	60
1 The Golden Lotus	50	50

METRO

531 Metro	70.8	67.0	49
1 Her Reckoning	60	48
1 Satan Sanderson	70	70
1 Cowboy and Lady	80	55
1 Heart of a Painted Lady	85	75
1 High Road	80	90
3 Shooting of Dan McGraw	81	78
1 Middleman	90	80
1 My Best Girl	60	60
1 Right of Way	70	80
2 Second in Command	77	80
1 The Vampire	80	90
6 Soul of a Woman	93	80	1
1 Silent Voice	77	87
1 An Enemy of Society	60	40
2 Song of Wage Slave	75	70
1 Emmy of Stork's Nest	80	60
2 Final Judgment	80	85
2 Pennington's Choice	92	90
4 Woman Pays	78	52
2 One Million Dollars	78	70
3 Barbara Frietchie	82	73
5 The Yellow Streak	85	64
3 House of Tears	80	85
4 Rosemary for Remembrance	73	68
3 Black Fear	73	57
5 What'll People Say?	80	84
4 The Turmoil	70	55
8 Lure of Heart's Desire	56	56
5 Her Debt of Honor	49	50
6 A Man and His Soul	83	83
3 The Upstart	68	72
3 Dimples	52	58
4 Corner in Cotton	64	58
5 The Price of Malice	66	65
6 The Soul Market	83	75
2 Blindness of Love	80	85
3 Lovely Mary	67	83
1 My Madonna	80	85
6 Her Great Price	80	68
8 The Wall Between	78	82
6 The Kiss of Hate	62	74
6 Half Million Bribe	69	49
8 Playing with Fire	78	75
11 The Come-Back	75	74
8 Snow Birds	80	77
8 A Million a Minute	72	84
4 The Spell of the Yukon	79	71
6 His Great Triumph	49	43
10 The Scarlet Woman	73	84
10 Dorian's Divorce	74	68
8 Masked Rider	69	68
6 Flower of No Man's Land	58	75
8 The Purple Lady	82	63
10 The Eternal Question	76	83
11 The Quitter	69	73
15 The River of Romance	87	76
9 A Child of Destiny	53	56
13 The Devil at His Elbow	64	61
14 God's Half Acre	71	62
14 The Weakness of Strength	68	54
11 The Pretender	80	72
7 The Upheaval	57	63
10 The Light of Happiness	67	66
10 Mister 44	88	90
8 The Wheel of the Law	77	66
10 The Dawn of Love	66	60
8 The Iron Woman	44	57
5 Life's Shadows	66	60
13 In the Diplomatic Service	69	83
9 The Brand of Cowardice	65	54
13 The Gates of Eden	68	54
11 Extravagance	69	82
10 The Wager	78	64
1 My Madonna	80	85
8 The Sunbeam	53	51
11 Big Tremaine	74	82
9 The Black Butterfly	70	80
8 The Stolen Triumph	56	48
7 Awakening of Helena Ritchie	60	61
11 Pigin Island	68	74
12 Vanity	61	53
12 The White Raven	85	81
9 A Wife by Proxy	46	41
9 Threads of Fate	41	34
12 Bridges Burned	47	62
9 The End of the Tour	45	44
10 One of Many	66	61
8 The Secret of Eve	37	66
14 The Promise	82	84
6 The Barricade	58	57
7 The Hidden Children	43	62
9 The Mortal Sin	53	58
8 The Waiting Soul	49	61
6 The Father's Son	67	62
5 The Power of Decision	51	53
7 A Magdalene of the Hills	51	50
6 God's Law and Man's	49	49
3 The Millionaire's Double	67	60
4 The Call of Her People	63	56
5 Sawers and Reapers	61	48
3 The Soul of a Magdalene	27	34
4 The Beautiful Lie	25	30
2 The Duchess of Doubt	58	65
1 Lady Barnacle	40	40
3 The Haunted Pajamas	80	75
1 The Greatest Power	35	40
1 Aladdin's Other Lamp	60	60

FOX

660 Fox	73.1	70.8
1 Girl I Left Behind Me	0	25
2 St. Elmo	52	92
4 Fool There Was	82	96
2 Dr. Rameau	90	87
2 Kreutzer Sonata	90	85
2 The Idler	55	65
2 Celebrated Scandal	70	70
2 Clemenceau Case	87	82

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
Walls of Jericho	40	35
Woman's Resurrection	80	45
Anna Kerinina	67	65
Life's Shop Window	45	47
The Nigger	100	70
The Gilded Fool	70	75
Devil's Daughter	77	95
Should a Mother Tell?	83	76
Wormwood	80	80
Lady Audley's Secret	90	75
Princess Romanoff	60	60
Valley of the Missing	50	45
Children of the Ghetto	75	40
Samson	80	50
The Thief	90	40
Two Orphans	84	86	3
The Song of Hate	92	82
Regeneration	77	72	4
Wonwerful Adventure	75	77
Sin	62	82
Little Gypsy	80	74
Soul of Broadway	83	78	1
The Family Stain	87	64
Carmen	82	83	2
Blindness of Devotion	56	53
Woman's Past	63	43
Broken Law	82	65	1
Galley Slave	76	75	1
Unfaithful Wife	73	61
Her Mother's Secret	73	57
A Soldier's Oath	82	70
Destruction	86	94	1
Green-Eyed Monster	53	74
Parisian Romance	65	61
Fourth Estate	80	68
Serpent	92	93	1
Ruling Passion	53	59
Merely Mary Ann	52	45
Fool's Revenge	45	49
Fighting Blood	74	70
The Witch	63	50
Marble Heart	41	60
Gold and the Woman	65	86	1
The Bondman	79	64	1
A Wife's Sacrifice	55	56
Blue Blood and Red	84	70	1
Slander	80	70
A Modern Thelma	59	49	1
Man of Sorrow	63	64	1
Blazing Love	70	68
The Eternal Sapho	84	87	4
Sins of Men	76	61	1
Battle of Hearts	63	61
The Spider and the Fly	67	72	1
Hypocrisy	76	68
A Woman's Honor	69	71
East Lynne	86	85	9
Ambition	71	67
Man From Bitter Roots	82	81	2
Caprice of the Mountains	69	63	1
Tortured Heart	71	67
The Beast	87	66	6
Under Two Flags	94	92	17
The End of the Trail	66	79
Sporting Blood	62	57	1
Little Miss Happiness	75	68	3
Daredevil Kate	74	78	3
The Unwelcome Mother	63	66
Her Double Life	86	85	5
Where Love Leads	69	63	1
The Fires of Conscience	65	71	1
The Straight Way	67	72
The Ragged Princess	77	70
The War Bride's Secret	76	71	3
Romeo and Juliet	86	86	5
Love and Hate	66	60
The Mischief Maker	70	70	2
Jealousy	63	81
The Mediator	73	70	1
Sins of the Parents	86	72	3
The Battle of Life	67	62
The Vixen	59	73
The Love Thief	82	80	1
The Island of Desire	74	67	1
A Modern Cinderella	80	75	1
The Price of Silence	82	76	1
The Bitter Truth	79	80	1
The Primitive Call	58	63
The Darling of Paris	67	74
One Touch of Sin	65	73
The New York Peacock	83	79
2 A Child of the Wilds	85	65
4 The Scarlet Letter	78	69	1
5 The Tiger Woman	72	83	2
6 Sister Against Sister	82	58	1
6 A Tale of Two Cities	93	83	4
3 Melting Millions	80	56
4 The Victim	65	64
4 Loves Law	20	35
5 The Blue Streak	58	60
3 High Finance	77	63
1 American Methods	90	85
3 Her Greatest Love	78	85
2 Tangled Lives	65	65
1 The Derelict	90	45	1
2 Her Temptation	83	59
1 The Final Payment	20	20
1 The Silent Lie	90	90
1 The Slave	20	40
1 The Broadway Sport	55	40
1 Two Little Imps	90	90

MUTUAL

153 Mutual	72.0	71.1	14
1 Buzzard's Shadow	85	80
1 Death Lock	90	85
1 On the Night Stage	75	40
1 The Mating	80	70
1 Enoch Arden	100	100
1 Girl from His Town	65	70
1 Ghosts	80	65
1 Cup of Life	85	40
1 His Wife	70	85
1 House of Scandal	90	75
1 Infatuation	60	50
3 Miracle of Life	83	83	1
1 Inner Struggle	40	20
1 Mill of Floss	75	90
3 The Painted Soul	85	85
1 End of the Road	90	100
1 Father and Son	75	75
1 The Reward	80	50
1 Bird of Prey	85	87
2 Inspiration	70	100	1
2 As a Woman Sows	80	82
1 The Decoy	50	55
1 The Drifter	75	60
1 Life's Blind Alley	50	75
1 Silas Marner	100	100	1
3 The Craving	69	67
1 Law Unto Himself	46	50
1 Heart of Tara	75	75
1 According to Law	65	52
1 Overalls	75	90
3 My Partner	72	70
3 The Bruiser	78	65	1
1 Hidden Law	100	90	1
1 Love Liar	72	82	1
1 Revelations	50	50
1 The Net	90	100	1
1 The Haunted Manor	52	55
2 Feathertop	90	90
1 Lying Lips	60	70
1 Dust	80	80
1 Other People's Money	85	68
2 Isle of Love	80	85	1
5 Whispering Smith	64	66
6 Soul Mates	69	63
2 Wasted Years	76	81
2 Far from Madding Crowd	70	67
4 Medicine Bend	74	81
4 Highest Bid	64	66	1
3 Her American Prince	70	67
5 Doorsteps	65	60	1
2 House of Mirrors	77	75
3 Wall Street Tragedy	65	80
7 Youth's Endearing Charms	77	71	1
2 Strength, Donald Mackenzie	75	72
1 Million for Mary	90	90	1
7 Judith of the Cumberlands	68	68
2 A Welsh Singer	60	53
1 Man Who Would Not Die	55	75
1 The Wolf Man	50	50
1 The Painted Lie	40	35
2 Three Pals	73	71
3 Manager of the B. & A.	63	70
9 Pearl of Paradise	68	76	1
8 Dulcie's Adventure	87	83	2
2 And the Law Says	58	64
1 Bluff	85	80
9 Faith	76	72
5 Miss Jackie of the Navy	87	85	1
4 A Dream or Two Ago	81	87
6 The Innocence of Lizette	85	80
4 The Butterfly Girl	75	85
1 The House of Scandal	0	10
1 The Man From Oregon	95	75
1 The Girl From Rector's	40	40
2 The Greater Woman	55	75
3 Where Love Is	52	45
6 The Gentle Intruder	77	78
1 Damaged Goods	40	100
3 Philip Holden-Waster	59	65
2 Redeemed	55	30
1 Lonesome Town	85	85
1 The Love Hermit	78	78
5 The Fighting Gentleman	60	44
1 The Torch Bearer	80	80
2 The Twinkler	92	88
2 East Is East	88	60
1 Immediate Lee	90	82	1
1 Beloved Rogues	95	90
2 The Valley of Decision	69	82
2 The Gilded Youth	60	75
3 The Painted Lie	62	74
2 Motherhood	38	55
3 Sunny Jane	67	65
2 The Devil's Assistant	60	70
2 High Play	43	53
2 The Single Code	50	53
1 The Death	20	20
2 The Wildcat	65	58
3 Whose Wife?	47	47
2 Periwinkle	70	60
1 A Bit of Kindling	60	70
1 Annie-for-Spite	40	40
1 The Mirror	40	20
1 The Checkmate	20	20
1 The Serpent's Tooth	20	20
1 The Dazzling Miss Davidson	40	20

MUTUAL-CHAPLIN

2 A Night In the Show	80	67	1
5 The Fireman	70	78
4 The Vagabond	55	88
6 The Floorwalker	89	90	2
8 One A. M.	63	81	1
16 The Count	88	86	5
10 The Pawnshop	73	74	2
7 Behind the Screen	89	91	5
8 The Rink	97	99	7
8 Easy Street	95	100	8
14 The Cure	94	95	8
7 The Immigrant	51	54	2

PATHE

146 Pathe	68.9	68.1	16
1 Last Volunteer	80	80
1 The Spender	80	80
3 At Bay	78	81
1 The Galloper	40	90
1 Closing Net	60	80
2 Nedra	55	45
1 Affair of Three Nations	75	80
3 The Beloved Vagabond	76	67
2 Greater Will	50	55
6 Excuse Me!	90	78	1
5 King's Game	56	60
8 Madame X	71	91	3
3 Love Trail	38	52
3 Hazel Kirk	60	55
1 Simon the Jester	60	25
1 The Jockey of Death	68	55
1 A Woman's Fight	70	60
1 The Life of Our Savior	35	55
6 New York	80	74	1
1 Precious Packet	67	45
4 Shrine of Happiness	78	72
6 Woman's Law	68	46
10 Big Jim Garrity	69	55	1
6 Girl with the Green Eyes	65	72
3 Matrimonial Martyr	63	73	1
7 Shadow of Her Past	34	81
4 The Fugitive	75	41
8 Little Mary Sunshine	90	78	1
1 Divorce and the Daughter	78	75
1 The World and the Woman	85	90
7 The Shine Girl	53	64
2 Fear of Poverty	85	95

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
2 The Test	60	48
3 Saint, Devil and Woman	44	57
4 The Light That Failed	70	71	1
3 Shadows and Sunshine	93	78	3
4 Prudence the Pirate	54	64
3 Arms and the Woman	70	53	1
3 The Challenge	73	65
7 Joy and the Dragon	78	71	1
4 The Romantic Journey	77	66
4 Her New York	82	62	2
2 Her Life or His	72	65
6 Kick In	78	71	1
2 Sold at Auction	48	58
2 Modern Monte Cristo	68	63
3 The Hidden Valley	65	68
2 Crime and Punishment	58	63
2 Her Beloved Enemy	69	71
2 Pots and Pans Peggy	79	68
3 Twin Kiddies	82	70
3 The Image Maker	38	40
4 Told at Twilight	91	80	1
3 Mayblossom	40	85
2 The Hunting of the Hawk	66	55
1 Mary Lawson's Secret	77	78
3 Sunshine and Gold	83	82
1 When Love Was Blind	70	65
2 Hinton's Double	70	63
1 The Amateur Orphan	60	40
1 The Candy Girl	20	60
1 The Recoil	68	65

BLUEBIRD

240 Bluebird	62.7	63.5	20
2 Jeanne Dore	27	45
3 The Secret Love	38	40
3 Hop, the Devil's Brew	40	43
7 Undine	80	87	3
1 Wrong Door	75	95
1 Grip of Jealousy	75	85
2 Rupert of Hentzau	51	60
3 Strength of the Weak	76	75
1 The Yaqui	42	58
4 The Flirt	44	66
2 Tangled Hearts	44	36
2 John Necham's Double	54	59
1 The Great Problem	79	66
4 Gaylord Waring	51	50
3 Crippled Hand	58	69	1
3 Gilded Spider	46	64
3 Elusive Isabel	38	46
3 The Measure of a Man	63	65
2 Love Never Dies	65	48
4 Son of the Immortals	64	71
5 Eye of God	64	80	1
3 Bobbie of the Ballet	67	79
3 Evil Women Do	60	62
3 Three Godfathers	68	74	1
15 Shoes	71	77	3
11 Broken Fetters	64	56	1
3 The Love Girl	63	64	1
3 The Grasp of Greed	71	76	1
3 The Silent Battle	78	84
3 Secret of the Swamp	71	56	2
1 Love's Lariat	65	64	1
8 Bettina Loved a Soldier	65	72
10 Wanted—A Home	74	75
3 The Chalice of Sorrow	72	65
7 Little Eve Edgarton	58	61	1
3 The Girl of Lost Lake	65	60
3 The Unattainable	51	48
13 Saving a Family Name	81	68	1
9 Behind the Lines	62	65
4 The Social Buccaneer	72	65
4 Gloriana	69	70
6 A Stranger from Somewhere	69	67
4 The Price of Silence	88	86
2 The End of the Rainbow	63	48
3 The Honor of Mary Blake	58	55
1 The Right to be Happy	50	40
4 Black Orchids	75	78	1
2 Her Soul's Inspiration	55	39
3 God's Crucible	88	84	1
1 The Piper's Price	40	20
5 The Bugler of Algiers	80	69	1
3 The Sign of the Poppy	65	65
5 Mutiny	58	51
8 The Mysterious Mrs. M	76	57	1
1 The Reward of the Faithless	72	81
2 The Saintly Sinner	48	58
4 The Boy Girl	58	58
5 Polly Red Head	61	68
1 The Gift-Girl	60	75
3 Susan's Gentleman	62	63
3 The Clock	77	65
5 Hell Morgan's Girl	90	88	1
1 The Devil's Pay Day	71	75
4 A Jewel In Pawn	71	69
4 Girl With Checkered Coat	66	63
1 Little Miss Nobody	80	50
1 Treason	65	75
1 The White Lights	70	50
2 Bringing Home Father	70	60
1 A Kentucky Cinderella	60	60
1 The Car of Chance	40	10

UNIVERSAL

1 Little Brother of the Rich	60	65
1 Business is Business	50	65
1 Father and the Boys	20	80
1 The Frame-up	40	45
1 Judge Not	70	70
1 Long Chance	85	80
1 Man of Shame	50	55
1 My Old Dutch	20	55
1 Nature Man	95	60
1 Under Southern Skies	90	75
2 Langdon's Legacy	56	60
8 Love's Pilgrimage	62	53
2 College Orphan	70	63
1 Colorado	90	100
2 The Campbells Are Coming	84	83	1
1 Money Madness	67	80

RED FEATHER

80 Red Feather	64.8	61.6	2
1 It Happened in Honolulu	80	80
1 The Madcap	70	70
1 Soul Enslaved	60	80
1 Knight of the Range	80	4
2 Beckoning Trail	66	71
2 Man From Nowhere	75	90	1
3 The Path of Happiness	70	50
2 The Sphinx	50	50
1 Pool of Flame	70	75
1 Lords of High Decision	60	40
2 Black Sheep of the Family	60	63
1 Autumn	65	67
3 Her Bitter Cup	72	71
1 The Yoke of Gold	45	64
1 Heritage of Hate	90	85
1 Thrown to the Lions	60	20
1 Huntress of Men	49	55
3 The Youth of Fortune	69	63	1
1 What Love Can Do	50	80
3 Half a Rogue	78	60
1 Sons of Satan	60	40
2 Two Men of Sandy Bar	72	68
1 Folly of Desire	20	40
1 Brigadier Gerard	50	40
2 Romance of Billy Goat Hill	75	55
4 The Target	76	46
2 Whirlpool of Destiny	62	45
2 Narrow Path	82	60
3 Drug'd Waters	57	52
3 If My Country Should Call	58	62
2 Black Friday	60	62
3 The Place Beyond the Winds	66	55
3 The Isle of Life	50	43
1 Kinkaid—Gambler	80	85
3 The Mainspring	71	67
1 Morals of Hilda	80	80
2 Mixed Blood	70	55
1 The Bronze Bride	60	75
1 The Child of Mystery	45	15
3 Polly Put the Kettle On	45	57
5 Fighting for Love	69	65
2 The Double Room Mystery	55	35
2 Heart Strings	70	60
2 Love Aflame	78	80
1 The Terror	70	65
1 The Devil's Bondwoman	40	20
1 Barriers of Society	40	20
1 Me and Me Pal	85	70
1 Mister Dolan of New York	65	70
2 The Girl and the Crisis	73	73
2 The Scarlet Crystal	60	78
1 The Girl Who Lost	50	70
1 The Gates of Doom	60	70
1 The Birth of Patriotism	65	70
1 The Hero of the Hour	55	70

GREATER VITAGRAPH

429 Vitagraph	68.1	66.2
12 Battle Cry of Peace	95	80
7 The Juggernaut	73	73
7 Island of Regeneration	85	81
1 Sporting Duchess	40	30
3 Sins of the Mothers	87	87
3 Crooky	70	69
1 Playing Dead	75	75
5 Dust of Egypt	67	66
2 The Rights of Men	74	85
3 Turn of the Road	82	78
3 The Cave Man	74	60
3 Heights of Hazard	75	44
2 A Nation's Peril	86	76
1 The Man's Making	60	78
2 Price of Folly	95	95
7 The Great Divide	80	71
1 Souls in Bondage	100	80
3 Thou Art the Man	72	57
3 Green Stockings	87	88
1 Milady's Slipper	90	90
3 Island of Surprise	87	85
5 Gods of Fate	62	62
1 What Happened to Father?.	60	78
9 The Night Out	81	75
1 The Crown Prince's Double	75	60
2 The Writing on the Wall	70	70
4 Kennedy Square	88	66
3 For a Woman's Fair Name	80	85
5 Hunted Woman	74	54
4 Hero of Submarine D-2	74	71
5 Dollars and the Woman	75	56
1 Supreme Temptation	60	60
5 Two-Edged Sword	76	53
3 Vital Question	80	55
1 Flames of Johannis	40	40
7 Salvation Joan	78	59
10 God's Country and Woman	81	85
1 Love's Toll	80	80
9 The Law Decides	80	70
10 The Ne'er Do Well	91	93
4 Ordeal of Elizabeth	58	50
10 The Suspect	80	76
3 Lights of New York	70	78
7 The Destroyers	68	57
2 Redemption of Dave Darcey	90	80
4 Man Behind the Curtain	85	76
9 The Shop Girl	78	79
3 The Conflict	67	47
7 Fathers of Men	71	67
12 The Tarantula	78	72
15 The Daring of Diana	61	75
4 Hesper of the Mountains	57	64
11 The Light at Dusk	85	72
8 The Alibi	69	69
1 The Dawn of Freedom	0	50
4 Footlights of Fate	68	80
17 The Combat	80	83
5 The Kid	60	57
2 Phantom Fortunes	42	62
5 His Wife's Good Name	64	76
12 Through the Wall	78	63
14 The Chattel	72	83
5 Prince in a Pawnshop	64	67
8 The Blue Envelope Mystery	55	59
4 The Firm of Girdlestone	31	39
11 The Last Man	82	81
8 The Devil's Prize	49	62
6 The Price of Fame	40	46
6 Dollar and the Law	52	73
8 An Enemy to the King	61	67
9 Rose of the South	73	62
9 Whom the Gods Destroy	59	73
7 Ninety and Nine	70	69
5 Indiscretion	53	61
8 The Man of Mystery	69	64
8 My Official Wife	90	82
11 The Glory of Yolanda	72	70
2 The Enemy	80	70
11 The Girl Phillipa	68	76
9 The Courage of Silence	70	71
8 Money Magic	55	61
5 Blind Justice	63	60
10 Arsene Lupin	67	63
8 Kitty Mackay	57	58
5 Intrigue	47	54
7 Aladdin from Broadway	62	67

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
4 The Money Mill	51	49
4 Her Right to Live	49	55
4 Babette	70	70
7 The More Excellent Way	67	68	1
3 Apartment 29	55	60	1
2 Sally in a Hurry	68	68
1 The Cowardly Way	78	60
5 Her Secret	55	54
3 The Hawk	63	73
4 Captain of Grey Horse Troop	63	63
4 The Sixteenth Wife?	39	63
5 Clover's Rebellion	74	75
4 The Soul Master	49	59
1 The Magnificent Meddler	40	40
1 The Question	60	60
1 The Maelstrome	40	40
2 Caste	30	30
1 The Message of the Mouse	60	60
3 Within the Law	100	100
1 A Million Bid	90	75

KEYS

120 K. E. S. E.	70.1	65.8	23

1 The Bank	90	90	1
1 The Woman	60	75
1 Work	75	75
3 Thou Shalt Not Covet	78	55
1 Vultures of Society	80	45
1 Between Savages and Tigers	90	100
1 Quo Vadis	60	40
1 The Spendthrift	80	60
1 Officer 666	25	40
1 When I Love	20	25
1 The Danger Signal	80	60
2 The Magic Skin	85	75
1 Woman Next Door	60	90
1 The Havoc	5	20
2 The Sentimental Lady	73	69
2 The Scarlet Road	70	55
3 The Destroying Angel	90	85
1 Money Masters	90	90
1 Commuters	85	60
1 Musty Suffer	80	90
1 Devil's Prayer Book	50	60
1 Children of Evil	70	65
1 Green Cloak	70	60
4 The Spoilers	95	91	1
6 Graustark	89	91	5
2 The Slim Princess	77	94	1
3 The Rosary	80	55	1
3 A Texas Steer	72	85
1 House of Thousand Candles	40	30
2 The Raven	87	20
2 The Alster Case	75	60
2 Daughter of the City	60	70
3 Misleading Lady	73	50	1
3 Cycle of Fate	62	75
3 Carmen (Chaplin)	50	90	1
3 The Little Shepherd of Bargain Row	75	63
1 Sherlock Holmes	75	50
3 Into the Primitive	52	60
3 That Sort	70	45	1
4 Vallants of Virginia	85	75
5 The Prince Chap	51	53
2 The Return of Eve	72	71	2
9 Country God Forgot	75	67
4 Chaplin Revue	63	79
1 The Innocence of Ruth	60	81
1 At Piney Ridge	60	60
2 The Heart of the Hills	63	60
6 Prince of Graustark	85	85	2
7 The Cossack Whip	84	61
3 Message to Garcia	67	73
2 The Last Sentence	55	70
4 The Truant Soul	69	76	1
4 Little Shoes	81	71
3 Adventures of Buffalo Bill	47	77
9 Skinner's Dress Suit	95	84	6
1 The Law of the North	50	90
1 Royal Pauper	10	100
5 The Heart of Texas Ryan	62	66
1 Princess of Patches	50	100
1 The Master Passion	80	100
1 Burning the Candle	80	55
3 Skinner's Bubble	88	78
2 The Danger Trail	45	60
1 The Lad and the Lion	75	60
2 The Night Workers	60	63
2 The Trufflers	40	80
1 The Saint's Adventure	60	50
1 Builders of Castles	68	70
1 The Little Lost Sister	90	96
2 Filling His Own Shoes	45	55
2 The Man Who Was Afraid	75	45	1
3 Filling His Own Shoes	40	62

PARAMOUNT SPEC.

5 The Christian	81	78	1
5 Tess of Storm Country	88	84	2
2 The Typhoon	88	78	1
7 The Eternal City	93	96	4
3 The Alien	95	83	2

SERIALS

13 Patria	84	77
16 Gloria's Romance	78	83
3 The Crimson Stain	61	65
4 Mysteries of Myra	87	86
2 The Yellow Menace	40	40
5 Liberty	91	82
3 Grip of Evil	73	67
3 Who's Guilty	73	73
10 The Iron Claw	93	92
3 The Diamond Runners	66	82
9 The Shielding Shadow	91	92
6 Secret of Submarine	73	79
4 Peg o' the Ring	50	59
3 Scarlet Runner	67	64
6 A Lass of the Lumberlands	62	62
1 Girl and the Game	73	48
6 The Great Secret	59	64
4 Pearl of the Army	81	85
1 The Secret Kingdom	20	0
2 The Voice on the Wire	88	85
2 The Purple Mask	73	83
1 The Railroad Raiders	50	50
2 The Neglected Wife	90	93
1 The Double Cross	80	70

ART DRAMAS

1 Whoso Taketh A Wife	90	90
2 The Lash of Destiny	60	45
3 A God of Little Children	67	63
4 Infidelity	59	55
2 The Great Secret	35	45
3 The Rainbow	63	62
2 Rosie O'Grady	75	68
1 Her Good Name	85	86
4 Gods of Little Children	65	57
1 A Mother's Ordeal	60	60
1 The Great Bradley Mystery	30	45
1 Adventure	55	60
1 The Cloud	60	55
1 The Accomplice	60	40
1 Pride and the Devil	65	60

SELZNICK

16 The Common Law	83	90	5
9 Vera, the Medium	64	62	2
10 The Foolish Virgin	39	68	2
20 War Brides	76	67	11
9 Panthea	81	76	4
12 The Price She Paid	95	79	3
7 The Argyle Case	82	71	2
6 The Easiest Way	88	87	2
1 Poppy	10	80

Mc CLURE

7 Pride	41	44
8 Envy	40	57
7 Passion	31	41
9 Greed	43	49
8 Sloth	18	24
7 Wrath	31	33
7 Seventh Sin	9	25

ARTCRAFT

18 Less Than the Dust	58	75	5
14 Poor Little Rich Girl	97	97	10
19 The Pride of the Clan	73	75	7
12 Broadway Jones	96	82	4
13 In Again—Out Again	91	92	5
11 Romance of the Redwoods	68	68
10 The Butcher Boy	75	71	2
9 A Reckless Romeo	89	78	2
7 The Little American	95	94	2
8 Wild and Woolly	94	96	4
5 A Rough House	93	90	1

UNIV. SPEC.

1 Scandal	80	72
1 Robinson Crusoe	65	70
11 20,000 Leagues Under Sea	66	81	5
10 The Dumb Girl of Portici	51	64
2 Diana the Huntress	58	75	1
8 Where Are My Children?	79	84	3
3 Jewel	85	75
3 God's Law	53	42
5 The Eagle's Wings	76	71
8 Idle Wives	57	88	4
2 Neptune's Daughter	61	60	1

IVAN

1 Her Surrender	85	70
2 Her Husband's Wife	90	95
2 The Flower of Faith	50	25
1 Faded Flower	82	74	1

SELIG SPEC.

4 The Crisis	72	56

FROHMAN

6 The Witching Hour	66	62	2
4 Jaffery	63	53
1 The Conquest of Canaan	75	46

FOX SPEC.

4 A Daughter of the Gods	75	48	1

METRO SPEC.

14 Romeo and Juliet	78	58	3

B. S. MOSS

1 The Power of Evil	87	70
1 One Day	85	80

SPECIAL FEATURES

3 The Unwritten Law	43	78
2 The Escape	67	70	1
8 Birth of a Nation	100	100	3
2 The Salamanders	40	58
7 The Libertine	81	80	4
1 My Country First	60	60
3 Tillie's Punctured Romance	90	90	2
1 Race Suicide	67	60
2 Cabiria	45	43
3 The Marvelous Maciste	90	70
5 End of the World	20	57
1 Love's Sacrifice	51	60
1 The Iron Hand	65	46
8 Police	63	81
1 Is Any Girl Safe?	90	60
1 Salomy Jane	90	100
4 The Whirl of Life	69	84	1
5 The Melting Pot	78	53	2
4 Ramona	73	63
1 Hiawatha	40	100	1
1 Hypocrites	60	90
1 The Only Son	40	60
1 Judge Legard	80	40
5 The Little Girl Next Door	77	87	3
5 Alice in Wonderland	76	81	1
1 Purity	92	84	1
1 Heartaches	70	78
1 Birth of Character	20	56
1 Fire and Sword	20	50
1 Beulah	60	60
1 The Aftermath	40	41
1 Heart of Maryland	0	40
3 Doctor Neighbor	53	49
6 Ramona	71	63
5 Beware of Strangers	58	69
1 It May be Your Daughter	95	65	1
1 The House of Bondage	75	100
1 The Barrier	100	80
6 The Fall of a Nation	76	83	1
12 Civilization	75	82	5
2 Joan the Woman	63	70
5 Womanhood	84	84	2
1 The Spoilers	100	90
2 The Woman Who Dared	90	80
1 The Black Stork	70	70
1 Intolerance	100	100	1
4 The Star Spangled Banner	28	44
1 The Spoilers	80	60
2 On Trial	80	60
1 The Whip	95	100
1 Rip Van Winkle	85	100	1
1 The Masque of Life	90	79	1

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

WILLIAM F. ALDRICH
FEATURE PRODUCER
Screen Club, 117 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO

ALBERT CAPELLANI
PRODUCER

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

WILLIAM DESMOND
TRIANGLE PLAYS
Culver City, Cal.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

JACK HARVEY
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
Producer of
"PARENTAGE"

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
PRODUCING FEATURES
Ivan Film Corp.

LLOYD INGRAHAM
PRODUCER

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

HARLEY KNOLES
FEATURES DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 D. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

JOSEPH LEVERING
DIRECTOR

O. A. C. LUND

ASHLEY MILLER
Director—Vitagraph Studios
Brooklyn

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE DIRECTOR
FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.

WEDGWOOD NOWELL
TRIANGLE
Friars Club, N. Y. C.

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITIGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
PRODUCING FEATURES
VITIGRAPH

JAMES VINCENT
PRODUCER

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

CHESTER WITHEY
DIRECTOR

JAMES YOUNG

WID'S
IS READ
NOT SKIMMED

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Adress—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM

A MAGAZINE—IN FACT A SERVICE

WID'S

INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS

Always Independent
Issued Every Thursday

VOL. III. THURSDAY, AUGUST 30, 1917. NO. 35

25 Cents a Copy
$10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

FEATURES AND FOOTAGE

For a number of years the question of what constitutes a "feature" has been one that has caused a lot of trouble. Most of us remember the time when a two-reeler was a feature, and then three reels was exceptional.

Recently the five-reel has become the standard of the program release, with the result that it was considered necessary to make any subject which was not to be marketed through the program method of distribution more than five reels in length, in order to prove that that subject was a "special," and, consequently, a fitting release for State rights distribution.

I believe that this is a very serious matter and one which every exhibitor should consider very carefully. This is the time to reform on this point, because conditions stand to-day where it is possible to come to a realization of the error of this idea at a time when many independent producers can be saved much misspent money.

For some months now, after much discussion with the most prominent exhibitors over the country, I have come to the conclusion that market conditions seldom justify the making of a film over six reels in length when that film is to be played in the picture houses.

In other words, the exhibitors must come to a realization that a special production should not be judged by the footage, but by merit. Many a film which has been offered in eight or nine reels in the past few months would have been at least 100 per cent. better in 5,000 feet. The producers have been afraid to make a State rights subject of 5,000-foot length, however, for fear that the exhibitor would say, "But it is only program length."

In a way, the independent producer has been justified in this because of such remarks having been made by the exhibitors in outlying sections. But I know it to be a fact at the present time that the more prominent exhibitors have made very clear their desire, wherever possible, for subjects that will run about one hour, with a time limit of about one hour and twenty minutes.

As a concrete example as to why this is good business, I can tell you that in any big theatre where they are doing real business, the difference in running time on a feature between an hour and an hour and twenty minutes will mean from three to five thousand dollars in receipts on the week. The reason for this is that it is impossible to turn the crowds over fast enough when the feature runs an hour and twenty minutes, even though the show be only two hours in length, as usual.

The point about this is that when the feature runs an hour and twenty minutes the portion of the audience which missed the first part of it will sit through two hours in order to catch the twenty minutes at the beginning. This holds out those who are standing in line on the outside.

I am thoroughly convinced that the Open Market—and by that I mean the real Open Market, and not the "Star Series" bunk which requires that you take all of the stars—will be in operation before next spring—possibly by the first of the year.

I have had an avalanche of letters commending my remarks about the method of distribution adopted by Paramount-Artcraft, under the misleading name of "Open Booking," and I feel sure that these distributors will soon be forced to book every picture independently without attempting to force upon an exhibitor those productions which he does not want.

There are many others who believe that the Open Market is coming soon, and, because of this fact, there will be many independent productions made within the next few months. I am sounding this note of warning at this time because I feel that it is decidedly to the best interests of all concerned that a feature be made in less than 6,000 feet wherever possible.

I am making an appeal to all of you real distributors to back up this idea with the statement that you will book a real production and pay the same price whether it be five reels or eight.

I would like to have some expression from you live wires on this particular line of thought, because it is a very vital issue at the present time.

I can tell you that the Paramount-Artcraft group intend to keep their productions under 6,000 feet—which, I think, is good business—and I believe that every independent State rights producer should be given to understand that it will be considered an advantage to have pictures in less than 6,000 feet, rather than insisting upon having them in 7,000 or 8,000 feet.

We will, of course, always have with us the independent producer who has some money and an idea and an ever-existent hope of making a second "Birth of a Nation." As a rule, this man thinks that the first requirement in duplicating "The Birth of a Nation's" success is to make a ten-reel picture. That's a very dangerous state of mind.

I sincerely hope that I can stir up enough discussion on this point to save many a man from foolish errors, and I feel that it is, to a great extent, up to the exhibitors to get on record on the essential point that you prefer productions of quality rather than quantity, and that a footage of more than 6,000 feet is really unwieldly for your theatre, and so results in getting you less money at the box office.

The idea that it was necessary to make a long picture in order to provide an evening's entertainment is wild stuff. Two hours is as long as any show need be, and it is a simple matter for anyone anywhere to choose, intelligently, short stuff to fill in, with the result that a one-hour feature and a well-chosen variety of subjects and music to fill in the other hour will, as a general rule, provide a much more satisfactory evening's entertainment than a film that runs a steady two hours.

This is not a fine little "theory" on my part. I am speaking as a result of talks with men who have booked long subjects and men who have played long subjects. I know that, commercially, it is decidedly advisable to keep features under 6,000 feet. Speaking from the viewpoint of a film editor, I will go on record as saying that nine out of ten of the productions that have been made to date in footage exceeding 6,000 feet would have been decidedly improved from an entertainment viewpoint had they been reduced to a running time of one hour and twenty minutes or less, and, certainly, without the possibility of qpestion, they would have brought more money to the box office, because the film would have been better and because it would have given a better turnover to the audience.

Now, don't sit back on the base of what is supposed to be your backbone and say, "Yes, that's a good idea," because your saying so won't get anybody anywhere. Come through with some letters, addressing them to the independent producers of State rights films, who will be overjoyed to get an expression from representative exhibitors on this point.

I want you fellows from the big cities and you from the smallest towns to get in on this, as well as the men in towns of 30,000. It is absolutely essential that you all take a little time to write a few letters on this vitally important subject of feature footage. One letter will be sufficient, with carbon copies going to the various companies, because this is the way to help yourself.

It does no good to stand around and "beef" with the salesman about his production being too long when he is there ready to book it. The time to do things is before the film goes out for distribution, and, where possible, before the producer has begun to "shoot."

NOW, GET ON THE JOB; IT'S UP TO YOU!

CRUDE ATTEMPT AT ALLEGORY ORDINARY AND TIRESOME

Crane Wilbur in

THE EYE OF ENVY

Horsley-Art Drama

DIRECTOR	Harrish Ingraham
AUTHOR	J. Francis Dunbar
CAMERAMAN	Robert A. Turnbull
AS A WHOLE	Very crude attempt at allegory poorly treated
STORY	Fairly good idea; very poorly handled
DIRECTION	Decidedly old-school, with lack of class and many crudities
PHOTOGRAPHY	Acceptable, but varied decidedly
LIGHTINGS	A few good; generally too uniform
CAMERA WORK	Varied decidedly; never excellent
STAR	Matinee hero stuff; didn't impress, partly because of situations and atmosphere
SUPPORT	Poor
EXTERIORS	A few very good; generally ordinary
INTERIORS	Some good; others crude
DETAIL	Failed to register
TIME	Sixty-four minutes (5 parts)

THIS was a very ordinary movie melo with an awful willun and a very cheap atmosphere that tried to register an allegory having to do with the adventures of Youth and Ambition on the road to Success, where he met Avarice and his wife Innocence.

The allegory failed utterly to register satisfactorily, because the young man playing Avarice was supposed to be an old man with a feeble body, and he certainly didn't look the part. In addition to this, he wore one of the worst mustaches I can remember having seen in "several" months, and this mustache was brought into the limelight several times in unnecessary close-ups.

As a sample of the manner in which this was treated, we had the good old ballroom stuff with a lot of $2.00-a-day extras on the job, and they shot several hundred feet of this, afterward slipping it in every so often as "something to cut to."

Crane Wilbur was called upon to appear as the hero, and afterward he portrayed the changed man who had traded his soul for the riches of another, but Mr. Wilbur was unable to register in an impressive manner at any time, partly because the production as a whole was painfully ordinary.

Others who appeared in the cast were F. A. Thompson, Julia Jackson, Lillian Webster, Jode Mullally and Gene Crosby.

The Box Office Angle.

While the average of program releases is pretty low at the present time, I hardly think that this hits the average as to quality. It is allegory that is very crude in spots and I fear that the average patron will become decidedly bored before it is halfway over. Many may accept it as a routine movie without serious complaint, but certainly no one will ever try to argue that it is a good picture.

If Crane Wilbur is popular in your community, it may be feasible for you to take this as a routine production, announcing it as a fanciful study of "The Adventures of Ambition on the Road to Success." Be careful not to be rash in your promises, however, if it is essential that you keep the good will of your patrons.

Charles Turner Dazey
AUTHOR

RECENT RELEASES.

Wolf Lowry.
Manhattan Madness. (In collaboration with Frank Dazey.)
The Redemption of Dave Darcey.
The Flower of Faith. (In collaboration with Frank Dazey.)

COMING RELEASES.

Behind the Mask.
The Three Tests.
A Daughter of America.
The Guilty Man.
A Modern Hagar.

VERY CLEVER CHILD STAR IN OLD PLOT WITH GOOD AND BAD SPOTS

Madge Evans in

THE LITTLE DUCHESS

Peerless—World

DIRECTOR	Harley Knoles
AUTHOR	Julia Burnham
CAMERAMAN	Alfred Moses
AS A WHOLE	Excellent light entertainment
STORY	Very ancient plot given a new twist
DIRECTION	Registered many good bits but slipped a few times
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally very pleasing; occasionally flat
LIGHTINGS	Varied from fine to fair
CAMERA WORK	Generally good; although a few shots poor
STAR	Delightfully clever youngster
SUPPORT	Generally excellent, with one or two bad spots
INTERIORS	Some very pleasing; others ordinary
EXTERIORS	Generally good
DETAIL	Bad gruesome bit at end and several spots that didn't register, but generally satisfactory
TIME	Sixty-seven minutes (5 parts)

CONSIDERING the popularity today of kid stuff and also of light entertainment, I believe that this will go rather big anywhere.

Unfortunately, at the very end they pulled some rather gruesome junk, registering the fact at the grouchy old man's wife had died because of an cident, instead of eloping, as he thought. In doing is they showed us two skeletons lying in a room, and en dissolved in and out the bodies of the missing per- ns. After having watched an hour of pleasing com- y it certainly seems to me that this was an unneces- ry bit of killjoy to hang onto the end. Nobody cared yway about this guy's wife—whether she'd eloped or t. The interest was all centered in the cleverness of tle Madge Evans.

The plot of this was the good old junk about the ealthy Englishman whose child had married against s will, and so when death came the grandfather was eaded with to acknowledge his grand-daughter, who d been reared in the slums of New York.

As usual, we found the willun and the old hag plan- ng to rob the righteous heiress of her estate by sub- tuting another girl, but they gave this a little twist having the real heiress located without much diffi- lty, and, as a consequence, when the imposters finally rived they were entirely too late.

The preparation of the fake heiress for the part of the ly got a number of laughs, and this kid, Maxine Hicks, deserving of special mention, since she has appeared a number of productions lately, including "The Poor ttle Rich Girl," "Parentage" and "Mary Jane's Pa," ere she made bits stand out.

This started off in the slums, coming soon to the ath of mother, and they gave us a little touch here at was also unnecessary, it being the willun robbing e body of the dead mother in closeup detail.

Madge Evans has appeared in a number of World lm productions, generally showing to decided advantage, but this is the first opportunity she has ever had to appear in a sufficiently prominent part that permitted the action to center about her entirely. She is a very clever child and plays naturally, with a wholesome freedom of expression which convinces and pleases. I believe that she can be made an exceptional favorite in a very short time if given the proper material and direction. It is my opinion that audiences are generally quite partial to clever kid stuff and good light comedy. I am sure that they prefer it decidedly to the ordinary melodrama.

In the plot, in order to make it a little more intrikut, Little Madge ran away from the orphanage, where she was placed after mother's death, and joined the circus about the time the lawyer came to find her. We saw two circuses. One provided a parade and the other scenes showed our heroine joining. It looked like this might have been intended to be the parade of that circus, with the result that after it got on the screen it was found necessary to make it two circuses, because the size of the parade and the size of the circus shown didn't tally.

Most of this circus stuff was very pleasing, except for the mustache of the guy who owned the little show. It was very bad and had an annoying habit of changing its style and size in various scenes.

In the cast were Pinna Nesbit, Mrs. Nellie Anderson, Jack Drumier, James Davis, Charles Hartley, Patrick Foy, Richard Clarke, Harry Bartlett, Nora Cecile, Ivan Dobble and Sheridan Tousey.

The Box Office Angle.

While I don't consider the name of this of much value in getting business, I believe that you can safely plug it pretty hard in your advertising, centering the attention upon Madge Evans. It is great stuff for the average audience.

In billing Madge Evans I would make considerable of the fact that this is her first appearance as a star, she having been advanced to this position after many excellent small parts played with World Film. Get over the fact definitely that she is a child, since that will appeal to many who might otherwise dodge the first appearance of a grown-up ingenue star.

Because of the few bad spots, this cannot be considered a truly exceptional production. However, when you figure it on the basis of the average program release it is certainly far superior.

HAROLD LOCKWOOD

Yorke--Metro

HART AND FAIRBANKS BUSINESS MIXED WITH OLD TIME WESTERN

Dustin Farnum in

DURAND OF THE BAD LANDS

Fox Film

DIRECTOR.....Richard Stanton
AUTHOR.....Mabelle Heikes Justice
CAMERAMAN.....J. D. Jennings
AS A WHOLE.....Combination of Hart and Fairbanks character in fearful Western meller of type popular years ago
STORY.....Hart bad-man situations with addition of old Indian massacre and train hold-up junk
DIRECTION.....Introduced old-school junk and some attempts at comedy which were fearful; failed to make offering distinctive at any time
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Sometimes excellent; generally satisfactory
LIGHTINGS.....Some very good; others too uniform
CAMERA WORK.....Some good exterior shots; generally satisfactory
STAR.....Smiled too much; failed to register convincing characterization
SUPPORT.....Overdrawn types
EXTERIORS.....Many very beautiful shots; generally satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Acceptable
DETAIL.....Decidedly overdrawn
TIME.....Seventy minutes (5 parts)

IT seems to me that Dustin Farnum should know better than to appear in such an ordinary, old-school Western meller containing everything from the Indian massacre to the train hold-up, where he rescued the governor's daughter who had been kidnapped by an Injun, with the daring hero, after saving the girl, nonchalantly firing one shot which made the reckless redskin bite the dust.

In many places in the first two or three reels it looked like Dusty was trying to steal Bill Hart's stuff, since he even went so far as to pull the famous Hart one-hand-cigarette-rolling bit with the one-hand-match-striking to follow, although it took Dusty several shots to get away with the striking of the match. Somebody should have saved him on this by either re-taking or cutting. Possibly he thought it wise to follow the good old acrobatic-act stall of missing it once or twice to prove that it was a hard trick.

All the time Dusty was pulling the Bill Hart situations and bits of business, however, he was registering a smile that reminded me of Franklyn Farnum's attempts to imitate Doug Fairbanks. The net result was very little until they got to the Injun massacre, and then some kids were introduced who helped the production somewhat until they arrived at the good old Injuns again on the job robbing a train. As a matter of fact, the story was finished before this train robbery was pulled, because Dusty had just made one of those wild getaways, leaving word for the heroine where she could write to him.

They put over the train robbery, however, with the rescue of the governor's daughter, and then brought Dusty to trial in a burlesque courtroom scene that audiences will laugh at rather than with. The judge ordered the jury to find Dusty guilty, but of course good old Gov was right on the job in the room with daughter, so that we knew he would be pardoned immediately—and, by heck, he was!

Winifred Kingston, who used to work with Dusty his Paramount releases, was again on the job, and s didn't register much better in this than she used to the Paramount films. She lacks that something wh we call personality that lifts a girl who is just pret out of the acceptable class and puts her in with favorites.

Tom Mix as the sheriff had an awful time trying look mean.

The kids were rather cute, Frankie Lee playing little boy.

A burlesque preacher who was introduced should ne have been brought into the action, because such a ch acter will offend many people, and this preacher w never at any time funny, because the character was badly overdrawn. The one scene where the preacher w supposed to be speaking to a lot of trees that he h named after the apostles was surely dragged in by heels, and all of this bit should be, and could be, eli nated.

Dusty as a star wanted to act too much, with ma of his flashes making the character even more artifici than it was because of the poor situations.

They pulled one bit of hokum comedy where Du fed the kids milk direct from "producer to consum after he had stolen a cow, and this was funny at fi but it must have been that the cameraman laughed wh he took it, because they used this bit entirely too ma times afterwards to keep it good.

In the cast were Lee Morris, Amy Jerome and Ba Cressman.

The Box Office Angle.

The kids, on Saturday afternoon, would probably th that this is great. It has a smiling hero who puts red bannadanna over his face, lots of Injuns, a fur preacher, hold-ups, massacres, etc. Whether y grownups will appreciate this rather ancient movie ju is another question, and I am inclined very much to belief that they have seen too many good films to c sider this sort of hokum entertainment.

The most pleasing bit of merit that this production h is the number of very pretty exterior shots which h been used. Some of these locations were taken fr angles that gave an artistic effect, and, in a way, t helped the production quite a little.

I would be very careful, however, about handling t and, unless Dusty Farnum is a great big favorite w you and you feel that you can stand the old-time West stuff, it would seem to me to be advisable to forget t

If you have to play this I believe the smart thing to would be to state plainly that this is a good old West melodrama with a little burlesque comedy thrown in, a make that statement so plain that no one will hav possible comeback after seeing the film. It is qu likely that many of your regulars will feel that ma such a production will seem interesting after they h seen some of the recent "sassiety" dramas, and if have been honest with them in telling just what film is, it will be impossible for them to come out argue with you that it is "old stuff."

You might use a line like this: "Do you remem the good old Injun-cowboy-holdup mellerarammers of pep, good riding, daring escapes and a few laug Well, that's the kind of film 'Durand of the Bad Lands and Dusty Farnum is the smiling, good-natured bad m If you like the good action melo, don't miss this on

ANCIENT PLOT AND ORDINARY ATMOSPHERE WITH B. O. STAR

Mme. Olga Petrova in

TO THE DEATH

Pop. P. & P.—Metro

IRECTOR.....Burton L. King
UTHORS.....Mme. Petrova and L. Case Russell
AMERAMAN.....Harry B. Harris
S A WHOLE.....Movie melo that failed to impress
TORY.....Heroine seeking lover's life, thinking he ruined sister,—an old standby for many years
IRECTION.....Failed to make action convince and allowed most of dramatic moments to miss fire; became ordinary melodrama
HOTOGRAPHY.....Occasionally good; generally too contrasty or flat
IGHTINGS.....Some good; generally a bit off
AMERA WORK.....Varied
FAR.....About as always has been in Merto productions
UPPORT.....Routine movie types, acting as such XTERIORS.....Acceptable; not artistic
NTERIORS.....Acceptable; mostly dark sets
ETAIL.....Several slips
ME.....Fifty-three minutes (5 parts)

YOU who have been playing the Metro-Petrovas regularly will know just about what the atmosphere of this is, because most of them have been quite a lot alike so far as lightings, etc., are concerned.

The plot is the good old theme of a misunderstanding ranged by the willun whereby the heroine, Petrova, is seeking the man who had ruined her sister and used her to "suicide," this man being her lover who d used an assumed name while on government business. The willun, who was the guilty guy, had used the ro's assumed name in order to trap the sister.

In order to bring in all the good old stuff, the willun manded that the heroine give up to him in order get the "info" about the guy she sought, and then en she learned that it was her lover, she stuck a ife in him, anyway, afterwards being dragged away a hotel by the willun.

The willun's wife had been hanging about, sort of ysterious-like, waiting for this moment, and now she pped in and denounced the willun, had him arrested, d saved the heroine from his wickedness. Of course, en Petrova landed back at her flat she found that ro was a "tough" guy, because the knife hadn't killed n, after all. The last title was "The Sweetest Joy . . Love."

Petrova was satisfactory in this when you figure the ork she has done in other Metro films, but certainly her rformance was nothing like the one she recently gave "The Law of the Land."

As usual, Mahlon Hamilton played opposite the star, d, although his performance was acceptable, it was t truly good, since he acted quite a little and some- w his eyes seemed very squinty in most of his scenes. trova had the bulk of the close-ups, so that the other yers were decidedly secondary.

Evelyn Brent was satisfactory as the sister who had be wronged, although she had little to do.

Wyndham Standing, playing a wery wicious willun, cted" quite some.

There were a few detail slips, such as, for instance, ere the willun dragged Petrova from her apartment go to a hotel with him, because she arrived there with hat which she was not wearing when she left.

We also found the willun confessing to Petrova that he was the guy who had wronged her sister, when it was entirely unnecessary for him to do so, since he was taking an awful chance knowing that she had just stabbed one gink whom she thought a lot of, because she believed him to be the one who had wronged sister.

They gave us the old situation of an anonymous letter coming to hero, which stated that shero needed him "much and soon." There had been many telephone conversations prior to this, and I'd like to know why a gink getting a letter like this wouldn't take a chance and call up to find out what it was all about before hurrying away in response to an anonymous letter signed "A Friend."

Others who appeared were Henry Leone, Marion Finger, Violet Reed and Boris Korlin.

The Box Office Angle.

I have been told by many exhibitors that they could get money with Petrova despite the fact that her pictures have been rotten a good part of the time. I must leave it to you as to possibilities in your community, and can only tell you that this is a very old story done in routine movie meller fashion with very little to commend it save the fact that Petrova appears.

This plot is based on the revengeful spirit of the Corsican, and you might add a little interest to this by asking, in your ads, "Did you ever know a Corsican? Petrova appears as one in 'To the Death.'"

You might say: "What would you do if you had sworn to kill the man who wronged your sister, and received proofs that your fiancee was that man? See Mme. Petrova in 'To the Death.'"

FOR YOUR USE

(Fill in Cut Out and Mail)

Date.....

GEORGE W. BEYNON,

505 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Please give me details and quite prices of your

Musical Settings for Feature Pictures

Please give me details and quote prices of your

.....

.....

Name .....

Theatre .....

City .....

State .....

Note: Beynon is being swamped with orders for this service. To insure yourself against possibly delay

MAIL THIS COUPON NOW.

STAR AND TREATMENT MAKE OLD PLOT QUITE EFFECTIVE

Louise Glaum in

GOLDEN-RULE KATE

Kay Bee—Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Reginald Barker
AUTHOR.....Monte M. Katterjohn
CAMERAMAN.....Robert Newhard
AS A WHOLE.....Made pleasing by treatment of dramatic moments
STORY.....Reformation of girl dance-hall owner, with many little touches and effective bits of business
DIRECTION.....Gave satisfactory atmosphere and made scenes register by good close-ups and effective tempo
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally satisfactory; not exceptional
LIGHTINGS.....Some very effective; others ordinary
CAMERA WORK.....Good close-ups and generally satisfactory
STAR.....Put over important moments with excellent dramatic register
SUPPORT.....Good types
EXTERIORS.....Satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Satisfactory
DETAIL.....What we generally accept for Western dance-hall town
TIME.....Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

TO my mind, Louise Glaum is a distinctive personality. She knows how to step into a scene and hold it.

In this production Miss Glaum appears as the owner of a roughneck dance-hall in a Western town, and although the plot is our good old friend the wronged sister with the misunderstanding which makes the shero think the hero minister guilty instead of the willun, we find that the treatment given to the situations by the director and the players has lifted this ancient subject from the depths and mac it rather an interesting production. The atmosphe was about the same as we have found in most danc hall stories, with the customary street of shacks ar the little church where the minister held forth.

The production is made distinctive by the intelligei use of close-ups and the effective changes of tem between the dramatic moments and those of pure a tion. The scenes where Miss Glaum came into t church to kill the minister when she thought him guil of wronging her sister held perfectly, because of t treatment.

I really believe that the major portion of credit f putting this old plot over should go to Miss Glaum, d spite the fact that the director has handled his situ tions intelligently.

William Conklin as the minister held his scenes nice and helped Miss Glaum make the big moments registe

There were a number of very good types, some them being quite funny through the comedy bits th were put over. Some good titles helped in both t comedy and dramatic moments.

Among those who appeared were Jack Richardso J. P. Lockney, Mildred Harris, Gertrude Claire, H. Mi ton Ross and Josephine Headley.

The Box Office Angle.

I consider Louise Glaum a very good bet. If yc haven't been getting business with her, I have a hunc that it is partly due to the fact that you haven't a vertised her properly. Take my tip and go after thi billing her above everything else, because the story an old-timer. Understand, the film isn't a tremendo production, but it is an effective melodrama of t dance-hall days, giving plenty of opportunity for Mi Glaum to put over a female Bill Hart character.

You might even say in your advertising: "You lil Bill Hart, don't you? See Louise Glaum do a Bi Hart character in 'Golden-Rule Kate.'"

STAR LIFTS WHAT JUST MISSES BEING VERY HUMAN FILM

Ella Hall in

THE CHARMER

Bluebird

DIRECTOR.....Jack Conway
AUTHOR.....J. Grubb Alexander
SCENARIO BY.....Fred Myton
CAMERAMAN.....Ed Kull
AS A WHOLE.....Had excellent touches but were not tied together with uniformly pleasing scenes
STORY.....Acceptable but not impressive or convincing DIRECTION.....Registered many good bits, but marred them by inferior scenes in between
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied, but acceptable
LIGHTINGS.....Some excellent; many too uniform
CAMERA WORK.....Varied
STAR.....Pleasing personality; bolstered action decidedly
SUPPORT.....Some good kids and several fine types, although many types overplayed
EXTERIORS.....Some very pleasing; others ordinary
INTERIORS.....Good, except lacked true touch of realism
DETAIL.....Acceptable
TIME.....Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

ELLA HALL is always pelasing. Her presence this will save it from slipping too decidedl and there were a lot of little touches that g over sufficiently well to have the average aud ence decide that the production is worth whil A little pickaninny and his pet monkey helped decidedl in a lot of scenes, and a number of bits in which an a sortment of youngsters figured, will get over very we despite the fact that a number of these small-tow touches fell just short of ringing true.

The plot had to do with Miss Hall's activities in brin ing together a man and wife who were on the verge divorce because the wife liked society and the ma didn't. Miss Hall was an orphan picked up from torpedoed ship, and the first part of the film was d voted to getting her planted in a New England hom along with the pickaninny and his pet monkey wh caused considerable difficulty around the house.

Every once in a while we saw some little fairies floa ing around in double-exposure scenes, this being due the fact that Miss Hall read a book of fairy tales quit a lot and had some imagination.

The young son of the couple who were having the ro was Miss Hall's "Prince Charming" in the action.

Among those who appeared were Martha Matto Belle Bennett, Frank McQuarrie, Jacob MacCandlas an George Webb.

The Box Office Angle.

Ella Hall is generally a good box office bet, and, although this is quite a bit short of being as good as many productions she has had in the past, I believe that it will satisfy the average audience sufficiently to justify your billing her as usual. The film just misses being genuinely good, but that lack of the necessary touch does pull it down to the average to such an extent that the wise fans will hardly think it "average" because of the crude spots that appear.

I do hope that the directors who attempt to do films which are suppose to be real life will quit presenting families like the fighting pair in this, in a home where they have a lot of servants, including one poor "extree" who was forced to wear a livery that looked like the costume the tenor singers used to wear in the first part of Al G. Fields' Minstrels. You know, one of those long coats that comes down to the knees with all kinds of fancy stuff on it, knickerbockers, etc. I hope someone will take one of these directors out into a few honest-to-goodness American homes some day to prove to him that wealthy people don't have such curiosities.

TREATMENT AND PERSONALITIES MAKE THIS ENTERTAINING

Anna Lehr and Jack Devereaux in

GRAFTERS

Eastern Triangle

DIRECTOR	Arthur Rosson
ASSISTED BY	Dick Rosson
SUPERVISED BY	Allan Dwan
AUTHOR	James W. Adams
CAMERAMAN	Roy Overbaugh
AS A WHOLE	Mystery comedy that held nicely and will please generally
STORY	Constructed so that suspense was maintained; generally was really good except "mortgage" excuse
DIRECTION	Registered some very good little touches at tempo that made it please
PHOTOGRAPHY	Quite satisfactory; a few good effects
LIGHTINGS	Some very good; others ordinary
CAMERA WORK	Acceptable; not remarkable
STARS	She very appealing; he pleasing
SUPPORT	Some good types
EXTERIORS	Satisfactory; not unusual
INTERIORS	Satisfactory
DETAIL	A few good bits
TIME	Fifty-two minutes (5 parts)

THIS is a fast-moving little trick mystery story with a comedy romance finish that will undoubtedly go over very satisfactorily anywhere. It swings along at a rapid pace through the first four reels, holding the attention and interest of the audience by keeping them guessing as to just how it is going to end.

The plot is based on a little "confidence" game operated by a couple of vicious looking plotters who forced a young girl to tempt a young man into a frame-up so that he might be blackmailed.

When uncle, who had cautioned the boy against the wiles of wicked women, went to square matters, we found the boy trailing along with a couple of plain-clothes men to save uncle, and then we learned that uncle had arranged the whole thing as a lesson for the boy.

As a second twist, the crooks, finding how easy the method of operation was, decided to trim uncle for fair, and were succeeding very well with a check cashed at the bank when the youth stepped in with the officers and took charge of the situation, taking over the girl at the same time.

The only bad spot in this story was the fact that they explained the presence of Anna Lehr as the tempter working for the plotters, by a statement that she had to do it because the mortgage on mother's farm was due. If I couldn't think up a better reason than that, I would drink an extra cup of coffee at dinner and plan to stay up a little later until I got a good one.

The general atmosphere of this was satisfactory, but not remarkable. The titles maintained the suspense nicely and carried the story along without telling too much at any time.

Miss Lehr as the girl was decidedly pleasing, because she has an innocent, appealing personality that is sure-fire.

Jack Devereaux, as the young hero, handled his part very satisfactorily, registering just enough pep to make it please without unnecessary hokum that might have made it slip.

Frank Currier, as the uncle, was very good.

George A. Siegmann really looked like a menace, and the other types were quite satisfactory.

Others who appeared were Irene Leonard and Robert Crimmins.

The Box Office Angle.

Considering the fact that Anna Lehr has been starred by Triangle in the past and is one of the stars of "Parentage," I believe that you will be justified in making a little fuss about her presence along with Jack Devereaux. I should think that Devereaux would have somewhat of a following if you have played his other Triangle pictures. I note that in some of the advertising Triangle announces this as an all-star Triangle cast without mentioning either of the players. I believe this is a mistake, because both Mr. Devereaux and Miss Lehr have friends and you can certainly take advantage of this with some result.

You might go after this in advance by questions such as these: "Are all women GRAFTERS? Think it over." "Should a young man trust to the innocent eyes of a beautiful little stranger? See GRAFTERS." "Could these eyes tempt you?" Show a photograph of Anna Lehr. She HAS some eyes!

ERNEST STERN, Inc.
THE TITLE MAN
Specializes in
MOTION PICTURE TITLES
OF THE HIGHEST GRADE
729 Seventh Ave., New York - - Phone Bryant 8973

CRANE WILBUR
Exclusive Management
MABEL CONDON EXCHANGE
LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

STAR'S PERSONALITY LIFTS VERY CRUDE COMEDY MELO

Jackie Saunders in

BAB, THE FIXER

Balboa—Mutual

DIRECTOR.....Sherwood Macdonald
AUTHOR.....Lee Arthur
CAMERAMAN.....William Beckway
AS A WHOLE.....Rather crude comedy meller will get by because of star
STORY.....Unconvincing and crude
DIRECTION.....Ordinary atmosphere and painfully unimpressive treatment of situations
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied from just good to poor
LIGHTINGS.....A few excellent but frequently fuzzy and contrasty, with faces chalky
CAMERA WORK.....Varied decidedly
STAR.....A real personality who lifted her scenes decidedly SUPPORT.....Camera-conscious and actory, with some poor extras
EXTERIORS.....Ordinary
INTERIORS.....Some rather good, but bad composition in shooting them
DETAIL.....Routine movie stuff
TIME.....Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

OUTSIDE of the fact that Jackie Saunders has a good time through most of this, the production is painfully crude and ordinary. They gave us a lot of the boarding-school hokum, which in spots went over very satisfactorily, and then on the finish the story became one of those stock exchange battles where they fooled around with a lot of tickers and juggled fortunes in the subtitles.

Towards the end Jackie stole her mother's securities just when mother was getting ready to invest them into a bum mine, and we had a wild automobile chase while she was getting them to the office where her sweetheart was saving father from ruin. Of course, the net result was that Jackie brought her father and mother, who had been battling, together again.

We had a lot of extras who were not sure of what they were doing in various scenes, and all of the characters except Miss Saunders were decidedly camera-conscious and inclined to act upon any and all occasions. Your intelligent fans will figure that this is pretty rotten, but some of your I-don't-care automatic arrivers may accept it.

In the cast were R. Henry Gray, Mollie McConnell, Capt. Leslie T. Peacocke and Ruth Lackaye.

The Box Office Angle.

If Jackie Saunders gets you any business I would take a chance on this and sneak it by despite the fact that it is pretty ordinary. She has had very few exceptional productions and has had to carry most everything on her own personality, so that those who like her will expect that to a certain extent, and consequently will not be seriously disappointed.

If you are trying to build carefully and keep your fans from losing confidence in the standard of your offerings, I would pass this by and dig up something worth-while. If you have found that it is safe to play this sort of a production once in a while, take a chance on getting it over, using lines something like this in your advertising: "Have you ever tried to be a 'fixer'? It's a fine way to stir up trouble. See Jackie Saunders in 'Bab, the Fixer.'"

The titles in this were very, very crude. Many of them were statements explaining just what the ensuing action was to be, and some of the phrases used were painfully worded.

DELIGHTFUL STAR IN PLEASING COMEDY AT LEAST A BIT DIFFERENT

Marguerite Clark in

THE AMAZONS

Famous Players—Paramount

DIRECTOR.....Joseph Kaufman
AUTHOR.....Sir Arthur Wing Pinero
SCENARIO BY.....Frances Marion
CAMERAMAN.....William Marshall
AS A WHOLE.....Pleasing light entertainment; clever star in situations that registered goodly number of laughs
STORY.....A bit different and quite satisfactory as foundation for tomfoolery
DIRECTION.....Gave distinctive atmosphere and kept action interesting
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Occasionally excellent; generally good
LIGHTINGS.....Some very fine; generally pleasing
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR.....Delightful personality
SUPPORT.....Registered some good touches
EXTERIORS.....Some very pretty shots; generally acceptable
INTERIORS.....Rather distinctive
DETAIL.....Some good touches
TIME.....Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

WHILE this is not the best Marguerite Clark feature ever made, it is a classy production based on an idea that is somewhat different and the star has plenty of opportunity for the little hokum bits of business which please generally.

Producer Kaufman has provided an atmosphere of class, and the sets and locations were generally artistic and distinctive. Some of the lightings were particularly effective.

The plot idea centers about three girls who have been reared as boys, with Miss Clark as an adventurous spirit who wandered into the world trying to start something. She had a couple of exciting adventures and bumped into a cousin hero who afterwards won out—as was to be expected.

Several big sets were used to advantage, and the production as a whole registered big enough to satisfy most any one.

Occasionally some of the character types overplayed, and, as a matter of fact, it could hardly be said that the production as a whole was particularly human, but I believe any one will get enough laughs out of it to be quite well satisfied.

Miss Clark made an adorable boy at times, and the production is clean-cut and wholesome, which has been one of the most important items in connection with all of her offerings.

The titles throughout were good, some of them regising laughs that might have been missed except for se well-written captions. The careful planting of the ring "Don't do that" was nicely handled, in a man- to make it sure-fire as a laugh for the last half of production.

The cast was satisfactory throughout, figured on a is of light comedy. Among those who appeared were ie Lawson, Helen Greene, William Hinckley, Edgar rton and Andre Bellon.

The Box Office Angle.

t is unnecessary for me to tell you how good Marrite Clark's name is at the box office. In many secns of the country she stands to-day as one of the very t bets. You can rest assured that this production is going to please, although some may not think it is as good as other past releases, while others may think it as good as anything Miss Clark has ever done.

Certainly the film is classy enough to register as satisfactory, and the difference in opinion as to whether it is one of Miss Clark's very best or not, will come for the most part because of personal likes and dislikes as to story material.

I would emphasize the fact that this was a famous stage success and speak of it as if every one was of course familiar with this famous old play "The Amazons."

I would mention the fact that this was produced by Joe Kaufman, who directed "Dollars and the Woman" and George M. Cohan's first screen success, "Broadway Jones."

DUAL PERSONALITY PART FOR STAR IN POOR BACKGROUND

Viola Dana in

THE GIRL WITHOUT A SOUL

Rolfe—Metro

RECTOR.....John H. Collins
THOR.....John H. Collins
MERAMAN.....John Arnold
A WHOLE.....Fairly interesting dual role stuff with good and bad spots
ORY.....Routine melo situations with twin sisters—one good, one bad—and regulation hero and willun
RECTION.....Had some great touches and excellent closeups, with other spots that were very bad; failed to register at the heart
OTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent; occasionally poor
GHTINGS.....Some very fine; others ordinary
MERA WORK.....Varied from fine to fair
AR.....Interesting personality; held nicely in twin sister parts; quite pretty at times
PPORT.....Some types very effective; others failed to register
TERIORS.....Acceptable; not distinctive TERIORS.....Satisfactory
TAIL.....Acceptable
IE.....Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

N the first place, I would like to know just why this was called "The Girl Without a Soul." Miss Dana played two parts, but, so far as I could see, each character was apparently possessed of the usual proof of the presence of that thing which we call a ul." I presume it was decided that the name sounded iting, and so it was used. In front of the theatre re I saw this, the sign read "An Empty Soul."

nyway, it didn't really matter much what the man ht have called it, since one name would have been good as another. The plot was the good old melomatic situation of the wicked tempter trying to lure y from the small town the girl who desired to see

And there was the stalwart village smithy who paid the education of the good little twin, with compli- ng results, since she thought that father had paid her clothes and schooling.

he willun persuaded the bad twin to pilfer the church ds, which were in possession of the hero, with the ult that hero's having paid for the schooling of the d twin made it appear as if he had spent the church ls for that purpose.

They pulled a trial on the finish, and finally the bad little twin came rushing in to confess. They finished off with a chase after the willun, with hero on horseback and willun in a bum Ford, which he was working as hard as he knew how to drive all over the road in order to make it more intrickut.

In this chase hero made two or three stabs at jumping from the horse to the automobile before they finally got away with it, and then the Ford was allowed to run wild, and it bumped into a stone wall, with resultant damage to the wall and little to the Ford—which I will say is a good ad for Henry.

Of course, they lived happily ever after when the hero got through choking the willun.

The only justifiable reason for the existence of this, so far as I can see, is the fact that Miss Dana is rather a pleasing little trick presented in a dual characterization which provides opportunity for many closeups wherein she is good and bad by turns. The hero and the willun both acted, and most of the types were decidedly artificial, but they did, every once in a while, slip over a touch which rang true and registered.

The cast included Robert Walker, Henry Hallam and Fred Jones.

The Box Office Angle.

If Viola Dana gets you money, you can figure this as just an acceptable program release that will probably sneak by because your fans are good-natured. The plot is pitifully poor, in that it never at any time registers as real life, and the only possible chance of this registering favorably is that your fans will be sufficiently pleased with Miss Dana's personal work not to worry about the rest of the cast of the situations.

I would lay off that title. "The Girl Without a Soul," putting the emphasis on the star, because you may be asked some very embarrassing questions about what proof there is that either one of the twins has no soul.

You might in your advertising say: "Why is it that parents generally favor one twin over the other? Think it over and see 'The Girl Without a Soul.'"

QUICK ANNOUNCEMENTS FOR YOUR SCREEN

SLIDENE OUTFIT: all complete.....$1.00
6 bottles slide ink; 25 cover glasses; 6 special pens; 2 slide charts

Novelty Typewriter Slides.....$3.50 per 100
Handy Slide Holder and Clip FREE.

NOVELTY SLIDE CO., 115 East 23d St., New York.

VERY WEAK OLD PLOT HELPED BY STAR AND ATMOSPHERE

Bessie Barriscale in

WOODEN SHOES

Kay Bee—Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Raymond B. West
AUTHOR.....J. G. Hawks
CAMERAMAN.....Charles Stumar
AS A WHOLE.....Painfully ancient story in interesting atmosphere helped by star
STORY.....Heiress-brought-to-grandfather plot, with imposters unmasked on finish; surely an old-timer
DIRECTION.....Made atmosphere pleasing and held interest fairly well despite crude convenience of situations
PHOTOGRAPHY..Occasionally excellent; generally good
LIGHTINGS.....Some very effective; although frequently too uniform
CAMERA WORK.....Varied decidedly
STAR.....Pleasing—although acted too much, with gestures, in some scenes
SUPPORT.....Just good; some characters inclined to overact
EXTERIORS.....Registered atmosphere fairly well
INTERIORS.....Satisfactory; not remarkable
DETAIL.....Painfully convenient, but acceptable
TIME.....Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

CERTAINLY it is time that this good old standby among film plots be buried deep in a metal casket so that it can never come back. This plot of the heiress restored to grandfather's arms has been overworked for many years, with several such productions offered recently. They always pull the imposters who attempt to claim the coin, with the sure-enough heiress triumphant finally. I would like to see some one do one of these things where the imposter was actually accepted. Somehow the grandfather is always made to know by instinct that the imposter can't possibly be his granddaughter. I'll say that these "filum" grandfathers have some "instinct."

This opened up in a Dutch village with a little atmosphere that was pleasing, and the first shots which were taken with night photography were particularly pleasing.

The film began to run wild, however, when they got to the love story, because this was not handled in a truly human manner. For instance, we had the unsophisticated heroine walking out into the woods to pin a note on a tree advising her lover that she would meet him on the "corner of North America." It would be hard to make any sensible American audience accept this sort of junk.

In order to "thicken" the plot a little, the heiress and her boob friend calmly lost the grandfather's address on shipboard, this making it impossible for them to lo the gentleman upon arrival. If a fortune was depen upon an address, I think even a Dutch boob would member that address without having it written d any place.

To make the chessboard action work out smoothly, t then brought in a painting which the hero artist made of our shero in Holland, and for the entertainm where this painting, among others, was to be shown all the people in New York to pick for the orchestra t selected the green Dutch boy just landed. Of cours recognized the painting and brought the shero into own.

The twist where Miss Barriscale, after being ackn edged as the heiress, bawled the old man out for ha allowed her mother to die in a faraway land, was g for a minute, but not good enough to in any way a for the general weakness of the story.

The attempt to register dialect titles missed fired cause most of these were beyond the limit which be readily accepted by the average audience.

Jack Livingston as the American artist, acted qui bit and consequently failed to be particularly impress

Howard Hickman was a satisfactory willun, and M garet Thompson was acceptable as the girl presente the fake heiress.

Others who appeared were Gertrude Claire, Josep Dowling, Don Likes, Will H. Bray, Tom S. Guise Frank Burke and J. H. Gotch.

The Box Office Angle.

As a program release this may get by because of atmosphere and star, although the story is certainl serious handicap. Most of your fans will have seen plot a number of times, and so they will guess the e ing soon after it starts, which is always an unsurmou able handicap.

If Bessie Barriscale gets you money, however, you afford to show this as a routine production, being c ful not to make any extravagant promises as to merit of the offering. If you are generally particul truthful with your patrons, I would go so far as to that it is an old theme made attractive by the atm phere, treatment and a very pleasing star. If you say that in your ads I think you will get as much busi as if you had said that it was a wonderfully orig production, etc., and you will have a safe alibi in anybody comes out and kicks about the age of the p

Personally, I always believe in advertising in suc way as to permit of no comeback. Make your ads truthfully, because you'll find that if you do so, you get real results when you have something that is w while.

Center the attention upon Miss Barriscale being tractive as a cute little blonde Dutch girl.

HEART STIRRING HAND COLORED PATRIOTIC SLIDES 25c. Each

71. If It's Worth Living Under, It's Worth Fighting For.
54. Americans Must Protect America.
95. We Are With You, Mr. President. One Hundred Million Strong.
53. Your Country Needs You.
28. American Flag.
95. President Wilson & Flag.
60. Geo. Washington.
45. The Birth of the American Flag.
70. Abraham Lincoln.
76. Spirit of '76—Reflects in 1917.
27. If It's Good Enough to Live Under, It's Worth Fighting for.
87. Pledge Allegiance.
68. Star Spangled Banner.
42. My Country 'Tis of Thee (Flag).

EXCELSIOR ILLUSTRATING CO., 219 Sixth Ave. New York City

Get A Binder for WID'S

$1.50 Prepaid Everywhe

POPULAR BEAUTY IN FAIRLY PLEASING LIGHT COMEDY

Billie Burke in

THE MYSTERIOUS MISS TERRY

Famous Players—Paramount

DIRECTOR.....J. Searle Dawley
AUTHOR.....Gelett Burgess
CAMERAMAN.....H. Lyman Broening
AS A WHOLE.....Interesting and fairly pleasing, but did not register with a bang
STORY.....Masquerading heiress playing good fairy to hero and two friends, with mystery-farce touches
DIRECTION.....Gave rather pleasing atmosphere and some good touches, keeping action interesting
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very good
LIGHTINGS..Many very effective; generally satisfactory
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR.....Quite pleasing, but didn't register particularly magnetic personality
SUPPORT....Some pleasing types; generally satisfactory
EXTERIORS.....A few very good shots
INTERIORS.....Generally very good
DETAIL.....A number of good bits
TIME.....Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

WHILE this will please generally as a production, it seems to me that Billie Burke has failed to come back with a bang to follow up the slump resultant from "Gloria's Romance."

She started off in the film world with a grand hurrah as a result of "Peggy," but hit the toboggan hard on the serial. She needs some very good pictures now to put her back on the map in such a way as to figure her as a real box office attraction.

The plot of this was the more-or-less familiar situation of the heiress who decided to masquerade a bit, with the result that she stirred up quite a little mystery through robbing her own home. Later in the story her gifts of things she had taken from her own home caused trouble for some of her new-found friends, but it all ended happily, with proper explanations, after the wishes of the hero and two of his friends had been granted by the good fairy heroine.

One of the friends wanted to have enough money to buy swell clothes, and we got a number of laughs out of the fulfillment of his wish, and another friend wanted to go West and be a cowboy, but he changed his mind when his girl told him that she would marry him.

Essentially this is a comedy, and so will be accepted as good light entertainment without much regard for the fact that it never at any time registers as anything except an interesting bit of light entertainment.

It is quite possible that, if Miss Burke gives us a number of productions as pleasing as this, she will eventually win back. She was very pretty in many close-ups and did not register unpleasantly at any time.

Tom Meighan as the attorney hero was quite satisfactory, although his was, for the most part, a stick-around-and-wait-for-the-finish character.

Walter Hiers, that smiling fat boy, was very pleasing as the hardware store clerk who wanted to be a cowboy.

The ribbon clerk, Percy, was a good type and registered a number of laughs.

One of the funniest situations in the entire production was the burlesque burglary, where we found Fatty and the ribbon clerk preparing to stage a burglary after a couple of reel crooks had just been arrested for trying to rob the same safe. We saw a half dozen cops crouched inside the window awaiting the approach of the comedy cracksmen, and I think that this situation will pull many giggles and a few snickers from any audience.

Others in the cast were Gerald O. Smith, George A. Wright and Bessie Hearn.

The Box Office Angle.

If you will handle this right in advertising it, it should pull some business. Billie Burke is a name that is known by most everyone who has ever paid much attention to either theatricals or films, and if you will announce this as her first Paramount release and remind your fans of her work in "Peggy" rather than in "Gloria's Romance," you will probably find that you will do a very nice business.

I doubt whether this film will receive any enthusiastic welcome, but I do believe that most fans will accept it without serious kicks.

In advertising this you might use lines something like these: "Do you really believe the rich are idle?" "Do you know any rich man who is actually idle? Think it over and see 'The Mysterious Miss Terry.'" "If you were rich, would you want to be idle? See 'The Mysterious Miss Terry.'" "If you were a good burglar, and a beautiful girl at that, would you become a cashier in a hardware store? See 'The Mysterious Miss Terry.'"

Only Yesterday

An Executive who signs the contracts for Players, Directors, Scenarioists, Cameramen, etc., turned to WID'S Alphabetical Directory and Found There the man he wanted.

See the Point?

Address all letters pertaining to Advertising and Directory cards to

HARRY P. DIGGS
Advertising Manager
WID'S Films and Film Folk, Inc.
510 Times Bldg., New York City

TABULATED PERCENTAGE REPORTS FROM EXHIBITORS

THE BATTING AVERAGES

These are the averages of the companies having 200 reports or more.

Reports		% P. P.	% B. O.	Repeat
660	Fox	73.1	70.8	85
531	Metro	70.8	67.0	49
1813	Triangle	70.6	65.2	354
429	Vitagraph	68.1	66.2	74
2079	Paramount	68.7	62.9	336
454	World	67.7	61.5	41
240	Bluebird	62.7	63.5	20

THE NUMBER BEFORE THE NAME OF THE FEATURE INDICATES THE NUMBER OF REPORTS RECEIVED AND TABULATED ON THAT FILM.

THE FIRST COLUMN CARRIES THE PERCENTAGE OF PLEASED PATRONS.

THE SECOND COLUMN SHOWS THE BOX OFFICE PERCENTAGE.

FIGURES IN THE THIRD COLUMN INDICATE THAT MANY REPORTED THE FILM WORTH A RETURN DATE.

All reports in this percentage tabulation have been marked on this scale:

EXCEPTIONAL	100%
EXCELLENT	80%
GOOD	60%
FAIR	40%
POOR	20%
BAD	0%

PARAMOUNT

2079 Paramount 68.7 62.9 336

Reports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
1	In Bishop's Carriage	85	93
2	The Lost Paradise	50	73
8	The Virginian	81	73	2
2	Such a Little Queen	78	78	1
1	Marta of the Lowlands	50	70
3	Where the Trail Divides	93	90	1
11	Wildflower	89	82	6
1	The County Chairman	80	80
1	What's His Name	75	100
5	Behind the Screens	81	78
5	Man from Mexico	90	70	1
1	The Man From Home	70	70
1	Circus Man	94	95
2	Rose of the Rancho	84	77
5	The Bargain	80	74	3
2	Ghost Breakers	60	63
7	The Crucible	92	84	3
1	False Colors	50	80
5	The Sign of the Cross	79	85
4	Cameo Kirby	61	50
8	Cinderella	85	93	4
1	The Million	70	90
5	Girl of the Golden West	79	77	2
3	The Dancing Girl	65	65
3	The Italian	77	62	1
1	No Laughing Matter	90	85
1	Morals of Marcus	60	50
5	The Goose Girl	95	95	4
2	After Five	51	50
1	Mistress Nell	88	95
2	Buckshot John	60	60
8	Her Triumph	60	74	1
3	The Warrens of Virginia	70	71
1	Country Boy	60	60
6	David Harem	82	78	1
1	A Gentleman of Leisure	80	70
2	The Caprices of Kitty	63	70
1	Love Route	60	60
1	Sunshine Molly	40	20
1	The Governor's Lady	97	85
8	Gretna Green	100	100	2
3	Are You a Mason?	78	84
1	Pretty Mrs. Smith	65	90
1	The Unafraid	80	75
1	When We Were 21	75	60
4	Snobs	64	52
5	Captain Courtesy	84	66	1
5	Captive	82	67
8	Niobe	75	55	1
3	Help Wanted	80	75
5	The Woman	86	59	1
5	House of Lost Court	82	54	2
4	Fanchon, The Cricket	89	92	3
3	Betty in Search of Thrill	83	87
5	Stolen Goods	78	75
2	Wild-Goose Chase	55	55	1
6	Pretty Sister Jose	84	82	2
5	Jim the Penman	64	65
6	The Dawn of a To-morrow	83	88	1
5	Arab	89	86	2
1	Clarissa	75	80
2	The Dictator	45	45
5	Wild Olive	82	69
6	Chimmy Fadden	91	75	1
3	Little Pal	79	85
4	Rugmaker's Daughter	40	50
2	The Clue	74	88
6	Kindling	81	82
1	The Running Fight	60	70
3	The Fighting Hope	77	80
5	Kilmeny	75	73
8	Seven Sisters	86	74	1
3	Puppet Crown	83	85
19	Rags	91	93	5
2	Sold	83	72
6	The Secret Orchid	79	74
5	Nearly a Lady	65	75
6	The Marriage of Kitty	76	64
3	Poor Schmaltz	63	57
8	Helene of the North	87	81	2
3	The Majesty of the Law	56	60
3	Heart of Jennifer	55	55
2	Incorrigible Dukane	75	55
4	Esmeralda	89	89	2
2	The Case of Becky	65	65
1	Out of Darkness	60	40
1	Peer Gynt	82	100
4	The Explorers	72	61
4	'Twas Ever Thus	53	68
2	Voice in the Fog	75	67
6	Fatal Card	65	59
4	Zaza	91	67
6	The Girl of Yesterday	89	88	3
7	White Pearl	71	75
4	Blackbirds	57	58
7	Chorus Lady	73	68
6	The Secret Sin	69	74	1
7	Yankee Girl	52	57
6	Masqueraders	56	56
12	Carmen	82	83	4
12	Still Waters	94	83	7
9	Madame Butterfly	82	86	3
7	Mummy and Humming Bird	64	56
7	Bella Donna	92	77	4
8	Armstrong's Wife	79	65
8	Chimmie Fadden Out West	85	76	2
8	A Gentleman From Indiana	86	78
10	Prince and the Pauper	92	87	5
10	Mr. Grex from Monte Carlo	84	69	1
9	Jane	75	54
9	The Unknown	76	67	1
18	The Cheat	94	80	12
9	The Reform Candidate	80	54	1
9	The Immigrant	73	62
10	The Old Homestead	88	84	7
8	Lydia Gilmore	82	61	2
10	Temptation	82	77	2
10	The Foundling	78	76	3
6	Tongues of Men	77	53	1
8	Mice and Men	84	80	5
7	The Golden Chance	77	61	2
2	My Lady Incog	50	35
5	Ragamuffins	77	53
5	Call of the Cumberlands	79	64
8	The Spider	87	64	1
10	Puddin' Head Wilson	81	62	4
9	Tennessee's Pardner	65	58
8	Madame Le President	24	46
9	Nearly a King	52	49	1
13	Trail of the Lonesome Pine	75	77	3
8	Fell In Love With His Wife	63	51	1
8	Blacklist	62	52	1
10	Out of the Drifts	89	86	4
8	Diplomacy	50	54	1
14	Poor Little Peppina	88	84	8
16	To Have and To Hold	74	69	4
12	Ben Blair	72	63
10	For the Defense	68	62	1
7	The Code of Marcia Grey	64	59	2
9	The Lost Bridegroom	69	60	2
8	The Saleslady	72	62	1
15	Audrey	73	70	3
9	The Sowers	64	59
11	The Heart of Paula	71	54	1
12	The Race	69	59
8	The Eternal Grind	70	78	3
10	The Love Mask	59	54	2
10	Molly Make-Believe	87	82	6
7	The Red Widow	62	55	2
12	The Heart of Nora Flynn	72	60	4
8	A Moment Before	52	64	1
12	David Garrick	68	46	2
9	The Innocent Lie	56	51
16	Marie Rosa	81	80	4
12	Alien Souls	69	67	1
13	The Feud Girl	60	56
16	Pasquale	78	53	3
16	Sweet Kitty Bellairs	72	62	2
20	Saints and Sinners	51	49
17	Thousand-Dollar Husband	69	62	4
22	A Gutter Magdalene	62	54	1
10	Evil Thereof	44	44
15	The Making of Maddalena	63	57	3
23	Silks and Satins	85	88	16
14	Destiny's Toy	60	51
19	The Clown	79	54	3
20	Susie Snowflakes	69	59	2
16	The World's Great Snare	73	73	4
19	The American Beauty	61	61	3
22	The Dupe	64	64	1
22	The Smugglers	53	50	1
26	The Selfish Woman	72	68	4
29	Davy Crockett	67	62
28	The Dream Girl	69	64	2
28	Under Cover	79	75	5
27	International Marriage	55	51	1
27	Common Ground	64	64	1
35	Hulda from Holland	95	94	23
30	House of Golden Windows	73	64	3
22	A Woman in the Case	72	72	3
25	Little Lady Eileen	87	89	10
28	The Stronger Love	53	52
24	Public Opinion	82	72	4
21	Rolling Stones	67	60	2
21	The Honorable Friend	63	62	1
19	The Victory of Conscience	60	60	2
21	Each Pearl a Tear	74	69	2
22	The Parson of Panamint	79	70	7
14	The Big Sister	48	59

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
14 The Reward of Patience	65	55
15 The House of Lies	73	65	1
14 The Daugther of McGregor	56	45
18 Ashes of Embers	85	83	7
16 The Quest of Life	59	61
14 Anton, the Terrible	46	45
17 The Lash	57	55
13 The Storm	75	65	1
19 The Intrigue	81	61	2
16 Her Father's Son	74	68	2
14 Witchcraft	55	55
14 The Kiss	74	68	2
16 The Rainbow Princess	82	74	3
15 Seventeen	85	74	2
14 Miss George Washington	95	95	11
15 The Heir to the Hoorah	82	69	5
16 The Soul of Kura San	80	73	1
12 A Son of Erin	79	73	2
10 Unprotected	53	55	1
11 The Years of the Locust	49	50
12 The Plow Girl	77	63
9 The Yellow Pawn	66	57	1
9 Nanette of the Wilds	50	57	2
7 Martyrdom of Philip Strong	53	55	1
10 The Coney Island Princess	62	63	1
10 The Road to Love	72	59	1
14 Oliver Twist	85	69	6
13 The Victoria Cross	44	54	1
17 The Traveling Salesman	78	60	3
20 The Right Direction	76	61	2
21 Snow White	95	83	13
16 Redeeming Love	63	60	1
21 The Slave Market	74	70	5
18 The Evil Eye	30	44	1
19 Great Expectations	74	55	1
17 Happiness of Three Women	73	58	1
14 Betty to the Rescue	46	48
1 What Money Can't Buy	40	40
16 A Girl Like That	55	51
16 Lost and Won	59	50
19 The Golden Fetter	50	56
19 His Sweetheart	83	57	2
19 The Wax Model	67	56
19 Each To His Kind	62	60
16 Her Own People	72	52
14 The Black Wolf	35	41
17 The American Consul	53	50	1
19 Fortunes of Fifi	64	76	2
20 On Record	62	56	2
17 Winning of Sally Temple	40	48
17 Those Without Sin	51	50	1
15 Castles For Two	51	48	1
13 Out of the Wreck	60	54
13 Sapho	74	83	3
10 Prison Without Walls	52	51
11 The Dummy	70	54
8 The Spirit of Romance	63	52
8 As Men Love	73	53
10 The Bottle Imp	75	66	2
7 The Bond Between	50	39
8 A School for Husbands	49	46	1
8 The Lonesome Chap	51	44
9 Sleeping Fires	56	63	1
8 The Tides of Barnegat	49	43
8 The Cost of Hatred	40	38
10 The Valentine Girl	73	76
4 Unconquered	14	18
5 The Girl at Home	45	39
8 Heart's Desire	24	34
7 Sacrifice	27	42
5 The Primrose Ring	30	38
7 The Silent Partner	30	34
5 Marcellini Millions	43	28
5 The Highway of Hope	29	25
5 Her Better Self	55	58
6 The Undying Flame	27	40
5 Freckles	65	53
4 The World Apart	38	31
2 Giving Becky a Chance	70	51
3 The Jaguar's Claws	40	47
4 The Inner Shrine	38	58
3 The Roadside Impresario	28	17
5 The Heir of the Ages	23	22
2 Her Strange Wedding	20	30
2 The Little Boy Scout	40	20
3 At First Sight	40	34
2 Big Timber	60	60
2 Love That Lives	70	80
2 Forbidden Paths	40	40

TRIANGLE

1813 Triangle	70.6	65.2	354
10 The Iron Strain	81	66	2
9 The Lamb	84	75	3
8 Old Heidelberg	72	63	1
11 The Coward	84	67	1
9 Martyrs of the Alamo	67	57	2
14 The Disciple	85	76	2
7 Matrimony	81	74	2
5 Sable Lorcha	64	53
6 The Golden Claw	61	72
9 Double Trouble	64	64	2
7 Aloha Oe	63	65	1
5 Lily and Rose	61	53
8 Jordan is a Hard Road	56	52
6 Winged Idol	53	52
8 Penitents	28	32
11 The Edge of the Abyss	67	61
8 Submarine Pirate	85	78	1
5 Cross Currents	48	45
11 Between Men	72	70	1
14 Let Katy Do It	87	66	6
5 The Corner	56	47
5 The Missing Link	55	43	1
3 Beckoning Flame	65	48
9 The Wood Nymph	54	50	1
8 The Conqueror	71	70
9 Price of Power	55	51
10 The Green Swamp	80	78	1
12 Acquitted	69	51
6 D'Artagnan	59	54
18 His Picture in the Papers	90	75	5
13 Honor's Altar	77	67	2
14 Betty of Greystone	77	65	2
23 Peggy	94	91	15
7 Don Quixote	57	56
9 The Last Act	79	78	1
11 Daphne and the Pirate	71	57	1
18 Hell's Hinges	93	89	11
17 The Flying Torpedo	88	80	8
14 Bullets and Brown Eyes	85	75	3
14 Martha's Vindication	79	72	2
14 Moral Fabric	75	62	1
15 Hoodoo Ann	68	65	1
15 The Raiders	79	70
14 The Habit of Happiness	92	85	5
8 Waifs	70	59	1
8 Little Meena's Romance	64	60	1
17 The Aryan	59	80	6
10 Sold for Marriage	71	72	1
17 Stepping Stones	85	75	2
10 Sunshine Dad	36	46
9 Civilzation's Child	68	64	1
14 Children In the House	80	66	2
11 The Beggar of Cawnpore	61	49
19 The Good-Bad Man	90	92	4
12 The No-Good Guy	74	60	3
17 Susan Rocks the Boat	69	63
20 Not My Sister	79	77	4
18 Child of Paris Streets	76	64
22 The Primal Lure	82	76	7
8 Mr. Goode, the Samaritan	53	53
26 The Market of Vain Desire	79	64	5
22 Going Straight	77	78	3
29 The Bugle Call	93	79	9
26 Reggie Mixes In	93	80	11
16 The Sorrows of Love	66	69	1
21 An Innocent Magdalene	71	71	2
18 The Dividend	70	68	1
21 The Wild Girl of Sierras	45	53
25 An Apostle of Vengeance	88	83	4
18 Casey at the Bat	44	48
28 The Phantom	83	72	7
30 Flirting With Fate	87	86	11
31 The Deserter	85	69	11
26 The Little School Ma'am	74	67	2
26 The Eye of the Night	74	58	5
19 Stranded	60	50
27 The Captive God	65	70	2
23 The Halfbreed	72	74	2
22 The Payment	81	70	3
18 The Marriage of Molly O	48	47
24 Honor Thy Name	87	73	4
22 The Devil's Needle	64	64	1
30 Shell 43	87	68	6
26 Hell-to-Pay Austin	83	66	6
21 Lieutenant Danny, U. S. A.	79	69
16 Pillars of Society	59	56	1
22 Home	91	80	9
16 Gretchen the Greenhorn	64	62	2
21 The Patriot	79	80	6
24 The Social Secretary	89	75	8
17 The Thoroughbred	82	72	1
11 The Little Liar	69	57
19 The Wolf Woman	86	89	6
16 The Dawnmaker	58	78	3
20 Diane of the Follies	71	72	2
27 Manhattan Madness	94	92	12
22 Plain Jane	88	75	5
20 Old Folks at Home	81	64	2
17 The Jungle Child	60	61	1
15 The Rummy	67	54	1
21 The Return of Draw Egan	88	86	7
20 The Vagabond Prince	75	70	3
19 Somewhere in France	76	69	1
18 A Corner in Colleens	88	80	7
11 A Sister of Six	69	64	2
21 Fifty-Fifty	89	83	6
4 War's Women	61	48
12 Atta Boy's Last Race	54	55
16 American Aristocracy	92	89	9
10 The Microscope Mystery	50	43
14 Honorable Algy	76	65	3
14 Jim Grimsby's Boy	68	62	3
15 The Devil's Double	91	91	7
12 The Children Paid	72	63	3
14 Children of the Feud	55	52	1
8 The Criminal	49	45
10 A Gamble in Souls	67	65	3
15 The Wharf Rat	54	55
20 The Matrimaniac	92	94	10
19 The Sin Ye Do	92	85	10
13 Heiress of Coffee Dan's	60	53	2
10 Three of Many	62	53
9 House Built Upon Sand	75	67	3
8 Nina the Flower Girl	51	52
11 The Female of the Species	72	74	2
16 Truthful Tulliver	97	93	9
12 The Weaker Sex	88	83	4
7 The Little Yank	40	52	1
10 The Bride of Hate	78	74	4
11 The Iced Bullet	62	53
14 The Americano	99	97	11
10 Chicken Casey	75	56	1
14 Jim Bludso	63	41	1
14 The Crab	83	70	5
13 Girl of the Timber Claims	71	39
16 The Gun-Fighter	76	85	10
13 The Bad Boy	71	54	2
11 The Princess of the Dark	39	41
6 Stage Struck	41	38
12 Last of the Ingrams	45	42
9 Blood Will Tell	64	61
5 A Love Sublime	47	40
8 The Little Brother	51	37	2
14 Back of the Man	90	81	5
10 Betsy's Burglar	59	54
14 The Square-Deal Man	96	95	7
11 The Dark Road	60	49	1
5 A Daughter of the Poor	57	55
9 A Woman's Awakening	61	52
9 Her Father's Keeper	54	48
9 Her Official Fathers	56	48
9 Old-Fashioned Young Man	48	47
10 Sweetheart of the Doomed	74	68	4
9 Paddy O'Hara	67	56	1
11 The Desert Man	92	91	4
9 Cheerful Givers	47	41
10 The Pinch Hitter	96	71	2
5 Hands Up	35	35
8 The Snarl	54	63
4 Might and the Man	25	30
6 Happiness	59	56
4 The Man Who Made Good	45	39
4 Wild Winship's Widow	68	56
5 Souls Triumphant	32	30
7 The Millionaire Vagrant	78	64
7 Wolf Lowry	93	95	1
2 The Girl Glory	80	55
5 Bawbs o' Blue Ridge	38	63
6 A Hater of Men	79	68
5 American—That's All	32	32
5 The Girl Glory	80	58
5 Love or Justice?	69	69
1 Her Excellency, the Governor	20	20
5 Paws of the Bear	62	54
1 Madcap Madge	100	85
7 The Clodhopper	97	83	1

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
4 The Flame of the Yukon	100	94
2 A Strange Transgressor	80	90
1 Time Locks and Diamonds	20	20
1 The Mother Instinct	80	40
1 Sudden Jim	100	90

WORLD

454 World	67.7	61.5	41
4 Hearts Afire	70	78
1 Daughter of the Sea	60	50
2 The Warning	88	88
1 The Little Dutch Girl	80	63
1 The Price of Her Silence	80	90
2 The Master of the House	68	53
1 The Dragon	60	30
1 The Price	80	65
1 Love's Cross Roads	85	60
1 Better Woman	75	65
1 By Whose Hand	60	55
1 Her Great Hour	60	40
1 When it Strikes Home	60	68
1 Circus Romance	65	55
2 Old Dutch	75	30
2 Ballet Girl	88	88
3 Marrying Money	79	92
1 Wishing Ring	64	80
1 The Dollar Mark	55	48
1 Gentleman from Mississippi	60	48
1 As Ye Sow	100	45
1 Stolen Voice	80	80
1 Face in the Moonlight	80	90
1 Women and Wine	60	40
2 Blue Grass	75	68
1 Fruits of Desire	40	50
1 Alias Jimmy Valentine	90	90
7 Trilby	81	63	1
1 Idols	40	40
2 Master Hand	86	80
1 Devil's Toy	57	72
1 Salvation Nell	60	47
1 Family Cupboard	50	57	1
4 Heart of Blue Ridge	84	73	1
1 Butterfly on Wheel	80	70
1 Hearts of Men	60	52
1 Body and Soul	40	45
1 The Ransom	42	43
4 The Labyrinth	66	65
1 Should a Wife Forgive?	90	96
2 The Senator	83	60
1 Hearts in Exile	90	90
1 His Wife's Good Name	25	20
1 The Chain Invisible	90	5
1 The Imposter	80	75
1 Sunday	95	30
1 As In a Looking Glass	60	40
1 Over Night	70	70
3 Sins of Society	70	65
7 Camille	86	79	3
3 The Rack	89	69
1 Fine Feathers	70	40
1 The Clarion	60	75
3 The Woman in 47	74	80
5 The Yellow Passport	82	80	2
3 The Price of Happiness	58	50
2 A Woman's Power	45	50
1 Cowardly Way	60	60
2 Passersby	73	55
1 Man and His Angel	62	45
4 The Supreme Sacrifice	78	69
1 The Struggle	60	60
1 The Hand of Peril	75	67
5 Then I'll Come Back To You	76	66	1
4 The Reapers	75	65
2 The Shadow of Doubt	78	65
2 Social Highwaymen	75	48
3 Closed Road	87	81	1
7 The Feast of Life	61	73
7 Her Maternal Right	58	74
6 Sudden Riches	76	71
2 The Twin Triangle	83	45
6 Tangled Fates	57	63
3 Fate's Boomerang	42	58
1 His Brother's Wife	83	74	1
10 Perils of Divorce	61	63
13 La vie de Boheme	47	50
2 What Happened at 22	82	80
1 Crucial Test	58	58
7 The Weakness of Man	61	68
12 Sally in Our Alley	66	65
14 Paying the Price	70	70	1
12 Miss Petticoats	59	61
14 Woman's Way	75	74	4
13 The Summer Girl	56	57
12 Rail Rider	68	60
10 Husband and Wife	75	63	2
1 Almighty Dollar	76	72	1
13 The Velvet Paw	74	69	1
8 Friday, the Thirteenth	72	70
11 Dark Silence	77	79	2
4 The Revolt	66	63
7 The Gilded Cage	75	70
6 Hidden Scar	77	67
5 The Scarlet Oath	60	62
7 Man Who Stood Still	71	63
8 The Heart of a Hero	59	49
3 Without a Soul	70	85
15 Bought and Paid For	91	91	10
10 The Madness of Helen	57	54
1 Men She Married	58	55
4 The Deep Purple	81	75
11 All Man	59	63	2
7 Broken Chains	50	43
12 The Rise of Susan	79	83	6
6 The World Against Him	52	43
10 Woman Alone	67	65	1
7 On Dangerous Ground	65	71
7 The Man Who Forgot	65	61	1
4 Marriage a la Carte	73	73	1
1 The Unpardonable Sin	40	55
5 The Bondage of Fear	65	63
8 Tillie Wakes Up	79	78	1
5 The Hungry Heart	87	83	2
8 The Square Deal	69	72
3 A Girl's Folly	65	75
5 The Red Woman	49	48
4 The Web of Desire	78	73	1
5 The Family Honor	66	61
8 The Dancer's Peril	77	71	1
5 The Social Leper	65	65
4 Man's Woman	61	61
4 Darkest Russia	71	75
6 Forget-Me-Not	63	69
1 The Bludgeon	87	80
3 As Man Made Her	62	68
5 The Page Mystery	55	57
4 Yankee Pluck	61	48
4 Moral Courage	61	58
4 Mothers of France	66	51
2 Maternity	85	90
2 The Crimson Dove	60	55
2 The False Friend	68	68
2 The Stolen Paradise	50	70
1 Atonement	70	65
1 The Pawn of Fate	85	45
1 The Divorse Game	5	75
1 The Price of Pride	75	60
1 The Brand of Satan	75	60
1 The Golden Lotus	50	50

METRO

531 Metro	70.8	67.0	49
1 Her Reckoning	60	40
1 Satan Sanderson	70	70
1 Cowboy and Lady	80	55
1 Heart of a Painted Lady	85	75
1 High Road	80	80
3 Shooting of Dan McGraw	81	78
1 Middleman	90	80
1 My Best Girl	60	60
1 Right of Way	70	85
2 Second in Command	77	80
1 The Vampire	80	90
8 Soul of a Woman	93	80	1
1 Silent Voice	77	87
1 An Enemy of Society	60	40
1 Song of Wage Slave	75	70
1 Emmy of Stork's Nest	80	60
1 Final Judgment	80	85
2 Pennington's Choice	92	90
4 Woman Pays	78	52
2 One Million Dollars	78	70
3 Barbara Frietchie	82	73
5 The Yellow Streak	85	64
3 House of Tears	80	65
4 Rosemary for Remembrance	72	68
3 Black Fear	73	57
5 What'll People Say?	80	84
4 The Turmoil	70	55
8 Lure of Heart's Desire	56	60
5 Her Debt of Honor	49	50
6 A Man and His Soul	83	83	1
3 The Upstart	68	72
3 Dimples	52	58
4 Corner in Cotton	64	58
5 The Price of Malice	66	65
6 The Soul Market	83	75	2
2 Blindness of Love	80	85	1
3 Lovely Mary	67	83
1 My Madonna	80	85
6 Her Great Price	80	68	1
8 The Wall Between	78	82	1
6 The Kiss of Hate	62	74
6 Half Million Bribe	69	49
1 Playing with Fire	78	75
11 The Come-Back	75	74	1
8 Snow Birds	80	77
8 A Million a Minute	72	84	1
4 The Spell of the Yukon	79	71
6 His Great Triumph	49	43
10 The Scarlet Woman	73	84	1
10 Dorian's Divorce	74	68
8 Masked Rider	69	68
6 Flower of No Man's Land	58	75
8 The Purple Lady	82	83
10 The Eternal Question	76	83	1
11 The Quitter	69	73
15 The River of Romance	87	76	7
9 A Child of Destiny	53	56
13 The Devil at His Elbow	64	61	1
14 God's Half Acre	71	62	1
14 The Weakness of Strength	68	54
11 The Pretender	80	72	1
7 The Upheaval	57	63
10 The Light of Happiness	67	66	1
10 Mister 44	88	93	4
8 The Wheel of the Law	77	66	1
10 The Dawn of Love	66	80
8 The Iron Woman	44	57
5 Life's Shadows	66	60
13 In the Diplomatic Service	69	83	4
9 The Brand of Cowardice	65	54
13 The Gates of Eden	68	54
11 Extravagance	69	82	3
10 The Wager	78	64
1 My Madonna	80	85	1
8 The Sunbeam	53	51
11 Big Tremaine	74	82	5
9 The Black Butterfly	70	80	4
8 The Stolen Triumph	56	48
7 Awakening of Helena Ritchie	60	61
11 Pigin Island	68	74	3
12 Vanity	61	53
12 The White Raven	85	81	4
9 A Wife by Proxy	46	41
9 Threads of Fate	41	34
12 Bridges Burned	47	62
9 The End of the Tour	45	44
10 One of Many	66	61	1
8 The Secret of Eve	87	66	1
14 The Promise	82	84	3
6 The Barricade	58	57
7 The Hidden Children	43	62
9 The Mortal Sin	53	58
8 The Waiting Soul	49	61	1
6 The Father's Son	67	62
5 The Power of Decision	51	53
7 A Magdalene of the Hills	51	50
6 God's Law and Man's	49	49
3 The Millionaire's Double	67	60
4 The Call of Her People	63	56
5 Sowers and Reapers	61	48
3 The Soul of a Magdalene	27	34
4 The Beautiful Lie	25	30
2 The Duchess of Doubt	58	65
1 Lady Barnacle	40	40
3 The Haunted Pajamas	80	75
1 The Greatest Power	35	40
1 Aladdin's Other Lamp	60	60

FOX

660 Fox	73.1	70.8	85
1 Girl I Left Behind Me	0	25
1 St. Elmo	52	92
4 Fool There Was	82	90	2
1 Dr. Rameau	90	87	1
2 Kreutzer Sonata	90	85
1 The Idler	55	65
1 Celebrated Scandal	70	70
2 Clemenceau Case	87	85	1

ts	% P.P.	% B.O.	Re- peat
Walls of Jericho	40	35
Woman's Resurrection	80	85
Anna Kerinina	67	65
Life's Shop Window	35	57
The Nigger	100	70
The Gilded Fool	70	75
Devil's Daughter	77	95
Should a Mother Tell?	83	76
Wormwood	80	80
Lady Audley's Secret	90	75
Princess Romanoff	60	60
Valley of the Missing	50	40
Children of the Ghetto	75	40
Samson	80	50
The Thief	90	40
Two Orphans	84	86	3
The Song of Hate	92	82
Regeneration	77	72	4
Wonwerful Adventure	75	77
Sin	62	82
Little Gypsy	80	74
Soul of Broadway	83	78	1
The Family Stain	87	64
Carmen	82	83	2
Blindness of Devotion	56	53
Woman's Past	63	43
Broken Law	82	65	1
Galley Slave	76	75	1
Unfaithful Wife	73	61
Her Mother's Secret	73	57
A Soldier's Oath	82	70
Destruction	86	94	1
Green-Eyed Monster	53	74
Parisian Romance	65	61
Fourth Estate	80	60
Serpent	92	93	1
Ruling Passion	53	59
Merely Mary Ann	52	45
Fool's Revenge	45	40
Fighting Blood	74	70
The Witch	63	59
Marble Heart	41	60
Gold and the Woman	65	86	1
The Bondman	79	64	1
A Wife's Sacrifice	55	56
Blue Blood and Red	84	70	1
Slander	80	70
A Modern Thelma	59	49	1
Man of Sorrow	63	58	1
Blazing Love	73	68
The Eternal Sapho	84	87	4
Sins of Men	76	61	1
Battle of Hearts	63	61
The Spider and the Fly	67	72	1
Hypocrisy	76	68
A Woman's Honor	69	71
East Lynne	86	85	9
Ambition	71	67
Man From Bitter Roots	82	81	2
Caprice of the Mountains	69	63	1
Tortured Heart	71	67
The Beast	87	60	6
Under Two Flags	94	92	17
The End of the Trail	66	79
Sporting Blood	62	57	1
Little Miss Happiness	75	68	3
Daredevil Kate	74	78	3
The Unwelcome Mother	63	66
Her Double Life	86	85	5
Where Love Leads	69	63	1
The Fires of Conscience	65	71	1
The Straight Way	67	72
The Ragged Princess	77	70
The War Bride's Secret	76	71	3
Romeo and Juliet	86	86	5
Love and Hate	66	60
The Mischief Maker	70	70	2
Jealousy	63	81
The Mediator	73	70	1
Sins of the Parents	86	72	3
The Battle of Life	67	62
The Vixen	59	73
The Love Thief	82	80	1
The Island of Desire	74	67	1
A Modern Cinderella	80	75	1
The Price of Silence	82	76	1
The Bitter Truth	79	80	1
The Primitive Call	58	63
The Darling of Paris	67	74
One Touch of Sin	65	73
The New York Peacock	83	79

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Re- peat
2 A Child of the Wilds	85	65
4 The Scarlet Letter	78	69	1
5 The Tiger Woman	72	83	2
6 Sister Against Sister	82	58	1
6 A Tale of Two Cities	93	83	4
3 Melting Millions	80	56
4 The Victim	65	64
4 Loves Law	20	35
5 The Blue Streak	58	60
3 High Finance	77	63
1 American Methods	90	85
3 Her Greatest Love	78	85
2 Tangled Lives	65	65
1 The Derelict	90	45	1
2 Her Temptation	83	59
1 The Final Payment	20	20
1 The Silent Lie	90	90
1 The Slave	20	40
1 The Broadway Sport	55	40
1 Two Little Imps	90	90

MUTUAL

153 Mutual	72.0	71.1	14
1 Buzzard's Shadow	85	80
1 Death Lock	98	85
1 On the Night Stage	75	40
1 The Mating	80	70
1 Enoch Arden	100	100
1 Girl from His Town	85	70
1 Ghosts	80	65
1 Cup of Life	85	40
1 His Wife	70	60
1 House of Scandal	90	75
1 Infatuation	60	50
1 Miracle of Life	83	80	1
1 Inner Struggle	40	30
1 Mill of Floss	75	90
1 The Painted Soul	82	55
1 End of the Road	90	100
1 Father and Son	75	75
1 The Reward	80	50
2 Bird of Prey	85	87
2 Inspiration	70	100	1
2 As a Woman Sows	80	82
1 The Decoy	56	60
1 The Drifter	75	60
1 Life's Blind Alley	50	75
1 Silas Marner	100	100	1
3 The Craving	69	67
1 Law Unto Himself	40	50
1 Heart of Tara	75	75
1 According to Law	65	32
1 Overalls	75	90
3 My Partner	72	70
1 The Bruiser	70	65	1
1 Hidden Law	100	90	1
2 Love Liar	72	82	1
1 Revelations	50	50
1 The Net	90	100	1
1 The Haunted Manor	52	58
2 Feathertop	90	90
1 Lying Lips	60	70
1 Dust	80	80
1 Other People's Money	85	68
2 Isle of Love	80	85	1
5 Whispering Smith	64	66
6 Soul Mates	69	63
2 Wasted Years	76	81
2 Far from Madding Crowd	70	67
1 Medicine Bend	74	81
1 Highest Bid	64	50	1
3 Her American Prince	70	67
5 Doorsteps	65	60	1
2 House of Mirrors	77	75
2 Wall Street Tragedy	65	80
7 Youth's Endearing Charms	77	71	1
2 Strength. Donald Mackenzie	75	72
1 Million for Mary	90	90	1
7 Judith of the Cumberlands	68	68
2 A Welsh Singer	60	53
1 Man Who Would Not Die	85	75
1 The Wolf Man	50	50
1 The Painted Lie	40	35
2 Three Pals	73	71
3 Manager of the B. & A.	63	70
9 Pearl of Paradise	68	76	1
8 Dulcie's Adventure	87	83	2
2 And the Law Says	58	64
1 Bluff	85	80

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Re- peat
9 Faith	76	72
5 Miss Jackie of the Navy	87	85	1
4 A Dream or Two Ago	81	87
6 The Innocence of Lizette	85	80
4 The Butterfly Girl	75	85
1 The House of Scandal	0	10
1 The Man From Oregon	95	75
1 The Girl From Rector's	40	40
2 The Greater Woman	55	75
3 Where Love Is	52	48
6 The Gentle Intruder	77	78
1 Damaged Goods	40	100
1 Philip Holden-Waster	59	65
2 Redeemed	55	30
1 Lonesome Town	85	85
1 The Love Hermit	78	78
5 The Fighting Gentleman	60	44
1 The Torch Bearer	80	80
2 The Twinkler	92	88
2 East Is East	88	60
1 Immediate Lee	90	82	1
1 Beloved Rogues	95	90
2 The Valley of Decision	69	82
2 The Gilded Youth	60	75
3 The Painted Lie	62	74
2 Motherhood	38	55
3 Sunny Jane	67	65
2 The Devil's Assistant	60	70
2 High Play	43	53
2 The Single Code	50	53
1 The Death	20	20
2 The Wildcat	65	58
3 Whose Wife?	47	47
2 Periwinkle	70	60
1 A Bit of Kindling	60	70
1 Annie-for-Spite	40	40
1 The Mirror	40	20
1 The Checkmate	20	20
1 The Serpent's Tooth	20	20
1 The Dazzling Miss Davidson	40	20

MUTUAL-CHAPLIN

1 A Night In the Show	80	67	1
5 The Fireman	70	78
4 The Vagabond	55	88
6 The Floorwalker	89	90	1
6 One A. M.	63	81	1
16 The Count	88	86	8
10 The Pawnshop	73	74	2
7 Behind the Screen	89	91	5
8 The Rink	97	99	7
8 Easy Street	95	100	8
14 The Cure	94	95	8
7 The Immigrant	51	54	2

PATHE

146 Pathe	68.9	68.1	16
1 Last Volunteer	80	80
1 The Spender	80	80
1 At Bay	78	81
1 The Galloper	40	90
1 Closing Net	60	80
2 Nedra	55	85
1 Affair of Three Nations	75	80
3 The Beloved Vagabond	76	67
2 Greater Will	50	55
6 Excuse Me!	90	73	1
3 King's Game	56	62
1 Madame X	71	91	1
4 Love Trail	58	52
1 Hazel Kirk	60	55
1 Simon the Jester	60	25
1 The Jockey of Death	68	55
1 A Woman's Fight	70	60
1 The Life of Our Savior	35	55
1 New York	80	74	1
2 Precious Packet	67	65
4 Shrine of Happiness	78	72
1 Woman's Law	68	65
10 Big Jim Garrity	69	55	1
1 Girl with the Green Eyes	65	72
3 Matrimonial Martyr	63	73	1
7 Shadow of Her Past	34	81
1 The Fugitive	75	60
1 Little Mary Sunshine	90	78	1
1 Divorce and the Daughter	78	75
1 The World and the Woman	85	90
7 The Shine Girl	73	64
2 Fear of Poverty	65	55

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

WILLIAM F. ALDRICH
FEATURE PRODUCER
Screen Club, 117 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO

ALBERT CAPELLANI
PRODUCER

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

WILLIAM DESMOND
TRIANGLE PLAYS
Culver City, Cal.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

JACK HARVEY
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
Producer of
"PARENTAGE"

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
PRODUCING FEATURES
Ivan Film Corp.

LLOYD INGRAHAM
PRODUCER

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

HARLEY KNOLES
FEATURES DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 D. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

JOSEPH LEVERING
DIRECTOR

O. A. C. LUND

ASHLEY MILLER
Director—Vitagraph Studios
Brooklyn

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE DIRECTOR
FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.

WEDGWOOD NOWELL
TRIANGLE
Friars Club, N. Y. C.

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITIGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
PRODUCING FEATURES
VITIGRAPH

JAMES VINCENT
PRODUCER

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

CHESTER WITHEY
DIRECTOR

JAMES YOUNG

WID'S
IS READ
NOT SKIMMED

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Adress—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM — A MAGAZINE — IN FACT A SERVICE INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS

WID'S

Always Independent Issued Every Thursday | VOL. III. | THURSDAY, SEPT. 6, 1917. | NO. 36 | 25 Cents a Copy $10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

What You Goin' To Do About It?

Boys, the "Clutching Hand" is with us, and it isn't one of those "Hidden Menace" things that sticks around for sixteen weeks before telling you who he is, either! Any one of you who have to buy films is particularly aware of this gang's first and last names.

The big question is, What are you going to do about it?

Every mail brings to me letters from men that I know to be honest-to-Jerry live wires who are aggressive and perfectly able to whip the hold-up men at their own game, and these fellers aren't worried for the immediate present as to their individual situations, so much as they are about the ultimate outcome, unless there is some united action taken to kill this thing while it's young.

There's no secret about the fact that the Paramount-Artcraft group of financiers are at the present time interested in many theatre properties and are rapidly acquiring interests in others wherever possible. They certainly have a very healthy aggregation of producing units, and it is a very serious, undisputable fact that if they ever get the theatres, they are going to be able to make all of you fellers sit up and bark, turn back somersets and jump through.

I have said for a number of years that the ideal proposition was one of making pictures for a chain of theatres; in other words, cutting out the expense of distribution—but it always seemed to me that the feasible way to approach this was from the exhibitor angle, since chains of theatres are much harder to acquire than directors or stars.

Nevertheless, my good friend Mr. Zukor has taken a hop-step-and-jump towards the monopoly of the big stars and producing units, and, now that he has begun the theatre negotiation angle, it is certainly time for everyone who has a theatre to use their old think-box a little.

I believe sufficiently in giving the guy that can get it credit—that if Mr .Zukor were working along absolutely square business lines at the present time, I would say: Hurray for Adolph; I hope he gets it all!

It so happens that the methods of the Paramount-Artcraft organiaztion aren't what one would call equitable and fair in any other business in the world, and so I can see no reason why the Fifth Industry should sit back and say, "Well, it's all right because it's the film business."

I find that there has been no strenuous protest from the trade journals in reference to the Paramount-Artcraft situation, despite the fact that they have probably had as many letters as I have had, and I even find in one publication a sort of halfway attempt to explain that, if the Paramount-Artcraft people (although this particular publication seemed afraid to mention any names) could grab it all, they were entitled to do so. Their very wise and Solomon-like decision was that, if a man couldn't afford to pay the high prices asked for luxuries, he should do without same.

The situation today is not centered upon the high price of stars, nearly so much as it is upon two more important evils of distribution, the first being the fact that the Paramount-Artcraft officers and managers are failing to give proper recognition to the men who have helped make that organization by consistently playing rotten stuff for many months, and these officers are forcing exhibitors to play productions which they don't want, in order to get the ones they do want.

The second very serious evil is the Advance Deposit system. Which was bad enough in its original form—where the exhibitor was generally asked to pay a deposit on the four last pictures that were played—but has been made much worse now by the demand that a separate deposit be paid upon two pictures of each star.

The excuse which served at the time the fine little graft known as the "Deposit" was started was that the men who asked for deposits frankly said that they needed them in order to be able to insure the exhibitor that he would have excellent productions. These men have made millions since that time out of the usage of the exhibitors' money, on which the exhibitor didn't even get a nickel in interest, and, having learned that the exhibitor was boob enough to put up these millions of dollars in deposits, the "Wise Man of the East," Mr. Zukor, has now decided that he might as well raise the "ante" a bit and get additional deposits which can be used for the furtherance of his present plans.

It will hardly be necessary for you to take a pencil and paper to figure out the fact that the money which is being paid in in the form of deposits may be utilized any minute in your territory in sewing up an option on a theatre which is desired.

Have you ever stopped to consider the fact that this organization may be intentionally boosting the price of films sky-high with the realization that they will be able to get away with it for a certain length of time while the exhibitor loses what little he's got, and that then it will be comparatively easy to go into Mr. Exhibitor and buy his theatre. Stranger things have happened—it isn't a wild dream, because I know that many men have figured many months on how they might manage this very proposition of a tremendous national chain of theatres fed by a producing organization in such a way that the theatres owned by the company would pay for the productions, with the other money velvet and the chain of theatres gradually enlarging until it covered every city of any size in the United States.

You fellers who are in towns of from twenty to fifty thousand may think that you are safe for a long time to come, but, take it from me, you aren't!

With the money that is now tied up in this business, the construction of a new theatre or the buying of the best theatre in your town means about as much to the Wall Street money that is at the present time interested as it means to you to spend $20 for a feature.

As I said when I started, the big question is—WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO ABOUT IT?"

I don't pretend to be a guy who can tell you all about what you ought to do, but I am going to make a few suggestions and go on record as saying that I want to hear from any man who has an idea as to what can be done, with the assurance that I will print it providing it isn't too long to go into this sheet of mine.

In the first place, this is the vital time for every one of you fellers who has any intestinal equipment to scratch a few hairs loose doping out the best pictures to be found in the independent market.

A great many productions will be released in the next few weeks, and a certain percentage of them will be excellent, another percentage will be good and another percentage poor. What you must do, and do cheerfully, is to give to the man who has an independent production the best price you can, giving him a decided preference over the organization, because it is up to you exhibitors to encourage the "independent" to save your own scalp. And play the FINE INDEPENDENT FILMS FOR LONGER RUNS!

If there is a question of quality or price, I believe that in every instance you should give the preference to the man who is booking on a sure-enough Open Market basis, because that is the condition which we want to force—and, boys, IT CAN BE DONE IF YOU WILL ALL GO TO IT!

Most of you fellers did business before you ever heard of many of the high-priced stars of today, and, believe me, if you haven't lost your manhood, your kick-'em-in-the-eye fighting spirit and your ability to write ads, you can go grab a lot of outside stuff and clean up on the man who is jellyfish enough to pay whatever the Art-Graft people want, feeling that he must do that because it's too much labor to try to do anything else.

I have said very often, and I insist that it is more true today than ever before, that the only thing necessary to make real pictures is a little money, a real director and a story. The star is an institution that has come into existence in the film business principally because we had so many rotten directors and so many pitifully weak stories. Think it over!

This statement is definitely proven by the fact that we still have productions in which there is no star, which are able to make as much money, and more, than the best stars—the answer being that if real directors are placed in a position where they have an interest in their companies in making the real pictures with the real story writers given the same sort of percentage arrangement which makes it necessary for them to deliver real material, then the "star system" can be whipped.

Understand that I, probably more than anyone else, appreciate the value of certain stars today. However, I want to lay emphasis on the word CERTAIN. There are a few stars and a lot of near-stars, and the fact that the press agents have been turning them out by the dozen per month for the last two years has given the public such a pain that they refuse absolutely to turn out en masse for any stars except the really big ones.

Another reason why the secondary "star" fails to draw in a big way today is that the average photoplay production of the past two years has been very poor. When I say "average" I mean that about ten per cent. of the productions issued have been such that people might enthuse over them; about thirty per cent. have been good; about 30 per cent. weak and poor, and 30 per cent. rotten. That brings the average production of the last two years down to the "poor" basis.

One thing which promises relief is the fact that stars and directors are only human beings, despite the fact that they may get many thousands of dollars a week, according to the present trend of events.

The "Wise Man of the East" has signed up these personalities and these efficient makers of productions on contracts which aren't as simple as they seem.

When Mr. Hart, Mr. Fairbanks, Miss Pickford and a few more of the best of them get on to the fact that their pictures are being offered for $200 a day, while secondary stars are priced at $150 a day, there's going to be a howl, with a resultant come-back.

One very live exhibitor from the West, in explaining in detail his situation, demonstrated to me that he is now asked $200 for Hart, where he formerly paid $40, and that he was being asked $150 for Dorothy Dalton, $150 for Charlie Ray and $75 for Enid Bennett. He was perfectly willing to figure the $200 for Bill Hart, although he formerly paid only $40, but he couldn't see that Miss Dalton, Mr. Ray or Miss Bennett had advanced beyond the $40 period, in that their drawing power had not increased to any extent in his community. Consequently, the proposition meant that he must add the difference in the price on these three stars to the price on Hart, which meant $390 additional on the Hart contract. That was of course prohibitive, and consequently it was necessary for him to say "Nothing doing!"

I happen to know that Mr. Hart, Mr. Fairbanks and Miss Pickford have been besieged with letters and telegrams from exhibitors who wanted to book their productions and were willing to pay fair prices, informing the stars that it would be impossible for them to play their films since the distributing organization demanded that the exhibitor play a lot of stars they didn't want, in order to get the big ones.

Boys, that will kick a hole in this new hold-up quicker than anything else. If these stars are being sacrificed in order that the distributor can make more money on the lesser stars who aren't working on a percentage arrangement—get that; it's important!—then the big stars aren't going to stand for it. If you are anxious and willing to play the big ones and pay a big price for them, providing you don't have to take others, let the stars know all about it with details and figures.

I am not shooting wildly in the air on this situation. I have scores and scores of letters giving definite facts and figures about propositions that have been submitted by various exchangemen that in many instances were as beautiful a bit of double-crossing as I have ever heard of.

One of the pet tricks in many instances has been to change the account from one city to another, or to switch exchange managers so that an honorable verbal arrangement or even a written arrangement made by the exhibitor with the man who formerly supplied his service, is thrown into the waste basket by the new man placed in charge of his account.

I want to see anyone who can make real pictures get all the money they can out of those pictures, and I believe there isn't an exhibitor in the country who will quarrel about the high prices on individual productions if he is given a fair chance to figure on them. The thing which is all wrong about the present attempt to gyp the theatre owners of the country is the fact that the methods employed have not been what they were supposed to be.

The very use of the name "Open Booking" as applied to the "Star Series" program tie-up of the Paramount-Artcraft people seems to me to have been a deliberate attempt to mislead the exhibitor.

Undoubtedly, one of the most important things you can do at the present time is to get into an organization.

From where I sit, the American Exhibitors Association looks real. They have some live wires on the job and are organized on a basis of paying a real salary to a real man to do real work, with dues which are sufficient to carry on the campaign without soliciting charity from the producer, who should never be appealed to by an exhibitors' organization for support. If the exhibitors aren't big enough to stand alone, they deserve to have their houses taken away from them and made to work on a salary for the "Wise Man of the East."

There are a few men whom I know personally who seem to believe that the M. P. E. L. of A. can still be made to accomplish things. There is a serious question in my mind regarding this, partly because of the fact that too much attention has been devoted to politics and partly because the League has been worrying too much about the good will of the National Association, which today has been a producers' organization more than anything else.

However, I want to say that it is of tremendous importance at this time that you get into one of the two organizations and get in quick. I don't know what the requirements are, but if it is possible, get in both of them. If you don't organize, God help you—you'll need it!

The trade paper issued by Mr. Ochs gave me a little free publicity last week trying to make capital out of the fact that I stated in Chicago that I couldn't see where it was to the advantage of the new Exhibitors Association to request admission into the National Association. In order that there be no misunderstanding, I'll say that I did make that statement, and I still believe it. The statement was not made in a spirit of antagonism to the National Association, but rather from the viewpoint that a real exhibitors organization based on business principles and tied together for the purpose of accomplishing something worth while for the exhibitor should be, above all else, an exhibitors association, rather than a hodge-podge of a little bit of everything.

If the National Association cared to extend an invitation to the new Association, all well and good. But it so happens that the National Association in its one year of life has failed utterly to set the world on fire except for a lot of free publicity in columns of the trade journals, and except that it has accomplished the bringing together of several producers who had not known one another so well in the past. In other words, the National Association to date has been a producers' organization.

When the question of the tax came up in Washington, the National Association voted at a meeting which I attended as a director to go to Washington and demand—get that, DEMAND!—that the Senate committee place a tax on all theatres, and at the same time demand that the committee should not place a tax on the raw stock which the producers knew would come out of their pockets.

Mr. H. B. Varner, who afterwards accomplished so much in Washington with the assistance of Mr. Schwalbe of Philadelphia and Harry Crandall of Washington, D. C., was declared by that meeting to be an outlaw. They didn't use any fancy words. It was stated that if Mr. Varner refused to agree to what the Association wanted he would be considered an outlaw. When it came to a showdown in Washington, Mr. Varner, Mr. Schwalbe and Mr. Crandall were able to at least temporarily get rid of all the tax. After that, Mr. Varner was a hero—at least in Mr. Ochs' paper—this being before the Chicago Convention, and despite the fact that Mr. Ochs had agreed previously that if Mr. Varner didn't demand the tax as the Association desired, he should be considered an outlaw.

I don't give a rap about anybody's politics in the present situation, and so I say to you again that I don't care which organization you like; get organized and if possible join them both. I do feel that the American Exhibitors Association is the most businesslike arrangement of the two organizations, and I certainly know that it has some very capable, aggressive men in charge of the active work.

To get back to the "menace" situation and sum up in a few words what you are going to do to kill the "Clutching Hand," I want to suggest these definite bits of action:

First: Refuse to play any Paramount-Artcraft productions that are offered to you at an excessive price, and make up your mind to work ten times as hard as you have in the past year making good with the productions to be had from independent companies.

Second: Write to the stars whose pictures you would like to play and give them definite facts of your local situation. Don't talk in generalities; give them facts and figures!

Third: If it is at all possible to do so, get to an understanding with the theatre men in your local community which will make it possible to combat the present situation. If they have any sense they will listen to reason, because the feller that doesn't this time is going to get hurt. I've never seen a fight yet wherein somebody didn't get a kick on the shins.

Fourth: Go after the Advance Deposit proposition with both feet and a wallop back of each fist. Explain to every man who is being forced to put up advance deposits the plain facts in the case. He is providing funds for a man more clever than he, who is in turn holding him up on the price of his pictures and at the same time preparing to take his business away from him by either buying his theatre or putting up a house better than his in the same community. It isn't a dream today, boys; it's becoming a fact. This "national chain of theatres" thing has been a dream for many years—I have dreamt a little about it myself—but today it is becoming a fact to the extent that houses are already being purchased and options taken on others.

Last but not least: Get into an organiaztion heart and soul. Don't just send in your dues. Get on the firing line and do your bit. YOU are being INVADED—RIGHT NOW!

HEART STIRRING HAND COLORED PATRIOTIC SLIDES 25c. Each

71. If It's Worth Living Under, It's Worth Fighting For.
54. Americans Must Protect America.
95. We Are With You, Mr. President, One Hundred Million Strong.
53. Your Country Needs You.
28. American Flag.
95. President Wilson & Flag.
60. Geo. Washington.
45. The Birth of the American Flag.
70. Abraham Lincoln.
76. Spirit of '76—Reflects in 1917.
27. If It's Good Enough to Live Under, It's Worth Fighting for.
87. Pledge Allegiance.
68. Star Spangled Banner.
42. My Country 'Tis of Thee (Flag).

EXCELSIOR ILLUSTRATING CO., 219 Sixth Ave. New York City

PLEASING HUMAN CHARACTER STUDY IN CLASSY ATMOSPHERE

Rupert Julian and Ruth Clifford in

MOTHER O' MINE

Bluebird

DIRECTOR	Rupert Julian
SCENARIO BY	Elliott J. Clawson
CAMERAMAN	Stephen Rounds
AS A WHOLE	Pleasing entertainment; had human spots that registered
STORY	Quiet; effective; human
DIRECTION	Gave nice quiet tempo and made action seem real
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally excellent
LIGHTINGS	Generally good; a few very pleasing effects
CAMERA WORK	Good; more closeups would have helped
STARS	Decidedly pleasing; he, quiet and human; she, pretty and effective
SUPPORT	Mother excellent; other types good
EXTERIORS	Well chosen; artistic
INTERIORS	Generally distinctive and classy
DETAIL	Several fine little touches
TIME	Seventy minutes (5 parts)

THE most attractive feature of this offering was the delightfully human manner in which the situations were developed. The action was quiet and generally appealing because it was kept near to life. Mr. Julian played more humanly than I can remember of ever having seen him, except possibly in "The Kentucky Cinderella," and Miss Clifford was not only pleasing, but decidedly beautiful in many scenes.

The general atmosphere was quite distinctive, there being many beautiful exterior locations and some interiors that were decidedly classy and in good taste.

The character of the old mother was a human bit planting many little touches that registered, and the type was well chosen.

Occasionally the situations were a bit theoretical and idealistic rather than actual and practical, but the entire handling of the production kept it down to earth sufficiently to make it register anywhere as a very pleasing little offering quite worth while.

The touch of the mother bringing jams, preserves, pies and socks in itself was enough to put over an entire reel.

The Box Office Angle.

I believe that most any audience anywhere will consider this a very pleasing bit of entertainment. It isn't a wonderful film, nor one which reaches out and registers any tremendous lesson, but it is rather pleasing entertainment intelligently played in a distinctive atmosphere, that registers in a satisfying manner to the eye.

Mr. Julian was never more pleasing, and Ruth Clifford will win many friends in this part. You can safely count this the sort of production that will go over beautifully with almost any audience. The sentiment of the mother idea is present without becoming slushy.

If you have played "The Kentucky Cinderella" with any success, mention it in the billing, but if it didn't register particularly well, forget it, because this should be able to stand on its own merits as truly pleasing entertainment.

UNREAL MOVIE MELLER THAT MISSED FIRE BADLY

Evart Overton in

SOLDIERS OF CHANCE

Vitagraph

DIRECTOR	Paul Scardon
AUTHOR	James Oliver Curwood
SCENARIO BY	George Plympton
CAMERAMAN	Robert A. Stuart
AS A WHOLE	Unconvincing melo of poipers, willuns, bum revolutions and firing-squad battles
STORY	Cheap, unreal junk
DIRECTION	Failed to lift plot from rut
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied, but acceptable
LIGHTINGS	Few effects; generally ordinary
CAMERA WORK	Only acceptable for movie
STAR	Routine melo hero
SUPPORT	Ordinary, with bad extras
EXTERIORS	Generally ordinary; failed to convince as South America
INTERIORS	Only fair
DETAIL	Much that didn't convince
TIME	Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

I CAN'T feel that any real, sure-enough intelligent people who pay honest-to-Jerry money to see films really will enjoy such wild mellerdrammer as this.

The plot is one of those things which has to do with the poipers held by the willun and wanted by the shero and the hero. They then pulled a South American revolution—one of those "three for a dime" variety—and some of the extras working in it seemed to have been on about that ratio as to salary.

Shero wanted the poipers because willun had made her father believe that he had killed a man, and hero wanted 'em because willun had done did some doity trick once and he wanted to get even.

On the finish, with the hero ready to be shot by the four men composing one army, the army of the hero's friends came rushing in to the rescue, and then we found that the guy who was supposed to have been killed wasn't dead at all, he wuzn't, but had just been playing dead because the doity willun paid him for it, he did.

The president of this South American republic looked right "official," except for his $2.00 Truly Warner hat, and, by heck, he wore that hat even when he had a sword trying to lead his half-dozen men to battle.

The titles were on about a par with the wild action. They had all the old tried-and-true junk, and in some places seemed wilfully misleading. After promising us in two titles that "Dolores" was the most beautiful woman in South America, they pulled Julia Swayne Gordon in that part. Now, I have a lot of respect for Miss Gordon's ability as an actress, but I wouldn't say she was the most beautiful woman of any country—and I don't think she would claim it.

James Oliver Curwood has wished a lot of junk onto Vitagraph in the last year or two, for which the film fans will some day make him pay by forcing him to sit through all of them in case they ever get a whack at him in the "hereafter."

Director Paul Scardon seemed to try pretty hard for a while to save this, and then evidently gave up in despair and let it ride. The revolution stuff was pretty punk, figured from any angle.

The Box Office Angle.

Considering that this was wild meller, an impossible story filled with poor titles and lacking an essential big personality, to lift it, I can't figure that any audience will even accept it as real entertainment.

If you have "movie meller" fans who like 'em when they act a lot and do wild things, you might sneak this by. But I think the intelligent folks are tired of these bum plots where they always tell the hero that he'll be shot at daybreak because the scenario man has it all figured out how he can get the rescuing party there by daybreak, whereas it would be impossible to save the hero sooner.

The battle scenes presented in this would do very well in a Chaplin comedy—hardly any place else. My advice would be to forget it, or, if you have to play it, go very softly. There is no name in this to save it at the ticket window, and the title means nothing.

ACCEPTABLE LIGHT COMEDY

Shirley Mason in

THE LADY OF THE PHOTOGRAPH

Edison Conquest—K. E. S. E.

DIRECTOR	Ben Turbett
AUTHOR	Henry Albert Phillips
CAMERAMAN	Fred. S. Brace
AS A WHOLE	Mildly interesting light comedy movie
STORY	Our old friend Changing Identity to Win Heiress with a few twists
DIRECTION	Acceptable—that's all
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied decidedly; some scenes out of focus
LIGHTINGS	Some good; some poor; frequently too contrasty
CAMERA WORK	Varied too much
STAR	Acceptable ingenue, pretty at times
SUPPORT	Stenog. had fine eyes; Byron funny at times; others acceptable
EXTERIORS	Ordinary
INTERIORS	Generally good
DETAIL	Acceptable, although of unreal movie sort
TIME	Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

THE fake identity to win an heiress plot has been worked overtime in the past four or five years, and occasionally they get it by with an odd twist. In this instance the twists make it interesting if you aren't particular, but the treatment fails to lift it out of the movie caliber.

We find the real nobleman despairing of winning the goil, with the result that he decided on suicide and was saved by the fat comedian who made one of those "Trade you some money for your life" contracts which never happen except in some wild author's nut, and then, according to the contract, the real nobleman, who was in love with the goil, tried to convince her that she should marry the fat guy. Of course, she recognized the real gink despite one of those half-portion Charlie Chaplin nosebrows and a beard that covered his chin—which doesn't prove that she was a clever goil, because most any one would have recognized the kid just as she did.

She failed to "fall" for the fat friend, and so, to keep all in good humor, he eventually realized that his stenographer was quite a good chicken, and for my part I think he was a pretty wise boy—because the "stenog" had a pair of good lamps and did look every bit as interesting, if not a bit more so, than Shirley Mason, who did the straight heiress stuff.

The camera work in this was a bit off, there being many scenes out of focus and many where the composition was bad, with others registering lighting that was entirely too contrasty. There were a few effective shots in the big ballroom set.

Royal Byron, as the fat boob, got away with this well enough to afford most folks a few laughs over his difficulties, and some may think him great.

At times, in certain lighting, Miss Mason was pretty, although she was anything but pretty at other times.

For some reason, in movies like this they will insist upon putting in butlers all dressed up like a horse pulling a circus wagon.

Others in the cast were Raymond McKee, Gerald Pring, Wm. Calhoun, Dudley Hall and Jane Harvey.

The Box Office Angle.

As a fairly interesting light comedy, this will sneak by most places where you have been handing them average program stuff. It hasn't been cleverly enough treated to be catalogued "good," but the average careless fan will pass it by without serious complaint. If they will stand for Shirley Mason after the Seven Awful "Sins," then this may get you a little money.

There is no other possible drawing power that I can see—because if you pull the old gag about marrying the heiress, etc., you will never get them to the door.

NEVER REALLY REGISTERS

HAROLD LOCKWOOD
Yorke--Metro

TIRESOME FOOTAGE OF DRIFTING BOAT AND DESERT ISLE

Ethel Clayton in

SOULS ADRIFT

Peerless—World

DIRECTOR.....Harley Knoles
AUTHOR.....Andrew Soutar
CAMERAMAN.....Arthur Edeson
AS A WHOLE.....Painfully ordinary movie meller—couple adrift in boat and then on desert isle
STORY.....Could hardly be called that DIRECTION.....Very poor
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Ordinary; sometimes poor
LIGHTINGS.....Ordinary; never distinctive CAMERA WORK.....Routine; not intelligent
STAR.....Pitifully handicapped
SUPPORT.....Likewise
EXTERIORS.....A cinch; mostly boat at sea and desert isle
INTERIORS.....A few, and ordinary
DETAIL.....Very little
TIME.....Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

IT may have taken a week to "shoot" this, but, even at that, it would seem that the director had wasted some of his time.

The plot had to do, for the most part, with much footage of Miss Clayton and Milton Sills drifting around in a boat and landing on a desert isle. They worked some flame torches in showing the burning yacht and again in burnnig down the hut, without handling them particularly well, and at one point they gave us oodles and oodles of flashes of Miss Clayton and Mr. Sills talking in front of the hut, with scenes cutting back to explain what had happened before the accident to the yacht.

This was one of those absolutely unconvincing movie mellers that happen for the most part in the penny dreadfuls. There was nothing new about any angle of the offering, and much that was painfully tiresome.

The subtitles were bad and contained some very old junk, such as one which read: "—And it has come to this." There was some junk about some fellers who buried some pearls on the island, these visitors being necessary to provide some sort of a menace. They showed us one scene of Mr. Sills shaving, so as to "alibi" the fact that he always appeared clean-shaven.

Many of the titles were slush, and others were plain rotten.

The Box Office Angle.

Even those who like Miss Clayton will hardly think she is good in this, because the story handicap is a fearful one. The admirers of Milton Sills will hardly appreciate him any more than Miss Clayton's friends will her.

I doubt if you have the nerve to acknowledge that this is a "desert isle" story, and "Souls Adrift" sounds like one of those things, so it would seem to me advisable to skip this if there is any way to do it. If you find that you must play it, I would put on the soft pedal, because it is devoid of the essentials that might make it even interesting. Instead of playing junk like this you can well afford to buy something worth while and do a little work that will make it pay.

MECHANICALLY CONVENIENT PLOT HANDICAPPED PLAYERS

Vivian Martin in

LITTLE MISS OPTIMIST

Morosco—Paramount

DIRECTOR.....Robert T. Thornby
AUTHOR.....Gardner Hunting
CAMERAMAN.....James C. Van Trees
AS A WHOLE.....Clever players handicapped by painfully convenient plot developments
STORY.....Had human elements but painfully interlocking situations and charasters that "just happened" at the right time too frequently
DIRECTION.....Gave some good lightings and excellent atmosphere in most of action
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very pleasing
LIGHTINGS.....Some very effective and many artistic
CAMERA WORK.....Pleasing
STAR.....Appealing personality
SUPPORT.....Tom Moore very good; others registered nicely
EXTERIORS.....Generally satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Many very good; generally pleasing
DETAIL.....Good, except so convenient
TIME.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

STARTING off rather well with Miss Martin as a newsie and Tom Moore as a starving musician, it looked like we might get some characterizations out of this, but very soon they began to pull plot developments and characters that interlocked in such a convenient manner that it became absolutely painful.

Producer Thornby gave a pleasing atmosphere to most of the production, and the individual scenes were rather well played; Miss Martin and Mr. Moore being able to get quite a bit out of most of their scenes, despite the handicaps of the plot.

The story had to do with a "lucky" dime given by Miss Martin to Mr. Moore which afterwards figured in a murder situation, with Miss Martin able on the finish to trap the murderer by identifying the dime which he slipped into the collection plate in church in place of a good one, after having tried to pass it a couple of times in vain.

To catch him doing this, Miss Martin was hiding under the reading stand on the pulpit, and this situation was worked up to in a fairly logical manner, although it was evidently forced into the action for this purpose.

It so happens today that the average audience anticipates these convenient points after you have pulled one or two, and they begin to outguess the author, and as a consequence they think he is pretty punk. This game of outguessing the author makes them discount the value of atmosphere, players' ability, lightings and all technical qualities of merit.

On several of the speech titles the line "Copyrighted by J. C. Ivers" seemed to have been placed there in error, and this should be given attention because it seemed rather funny at times, since the titles were hardly worthy of copyrighting.

Charles West, Ernest Joy, Chas. Gerrard and Helen Bray made up the remainder of the supporting cast.

The Box Office Angle.

As an average Paramount release this may get by where they like Vivian Martin and Tom Moore, because the atmosphere and the personalities of the players help it quite a lot. If it were not for the terribly convenient, mechanical plot situations, I believe this would have been a very pleasing production, but these awful "just happen" situations simply took the life out of the thing, leaving it bleeding and helpless.

The fans who don't indulge in story guessing, if there are any such, will probably like this very much.

For an advertising angle you might concentrate on the "lucky dime" thought. Most everyone has had one, or some other pocket piece at one time or another.

DISCONNECTED ACTION PLANTING MYSTERY RATHER ACTORY

Donna Drew, with Joseph Girard and Gretchen Lederer
—in—

THE LAIR OF THE WOLF

Butterfly

DIRECTOR ..... Charles Swickard
AUTHOR ..... E. Magnus Ingleton
CAMERAMAN ..... Jacob Kull
AS A WHOLE ..... Ordinarily done, unimpressive bunch of action developing mystery murder with trial scene and confession finish
STORY ..... Wandered long way around without getting very far DIRECTION ..... Registered some beautiful shots, but permitted players to "act" quite some
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Generally good; not exceptional
LIGHTINGS ..... Some effective bits; some ordinary; generally satisfactory
CAMERA WORK ..... Varied, but generally good
STAR ..... Stuck around doing little through scores of flashes, in order to be kept in picture
SUPPORT ..... Routine movie types
EXTERIORS ..... A few very pretty shots; others just ordinary; quite a lot of sunsets
INTERIORS ..... A few good; generally just acceptable
DETAIL ..... Sort of messy and hard to follow
TIME ..... Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

THE first three reels of this were devoted, for the most part, to giving six characters good reasons for wanting to kill a guy that needed killing pretty badly. In this footage we had about twelve characters chasing around through a lot of action that didn't mean anything very much, because the producer was building a mystery.

Finally, when they got everybody into a position of either having threatened to kill the willun or having made up their mind to do so, we discovered that the guy was dead and that the clocks registered ten minutes after ten, except for one big one in the hall which "props" forgot to fix. That was only ten minutes after eight.

They then pulled our good old friend the trial scene, and Gretchen Lederer confessed to the murder when she wasn't guilty at all, because she thought she was saving her son. They dug up the runaway girl who had started out to hunt a desert isle so that she could be a boy Robinson Crusoe and several other things, and then, after she'd landed home and proved that the boy was innocent, the old gardener confessed to having killed the guy, his reason being a good one, since the guy had done wrong by his Nell.

Most of the wise fans who are accustomed to the ways of the wise scenarioists who try to build these "mystery" plots, will be "next" to this one long before they are supposed to have it guessed. This is principally due to the fact that the willun's attentions to the gardener's daughter were pretty carefully planted and then very suddenly forgotten. Your fans will also "smell a mouse" because the author planted the possible guilt of all other parties concerned, with such deliberate purpose as to make it evident that he was trying to be smart and fool 'em a bit.

In most all of the scenes they acted quite a lot, which helped detract from the effect of the situations, and I fear that most intelligent fans will be sort of sore on this before it is half over, being that there are so many characters chasing around without any central thread giving a correlation to their various efforts in life, excepting a common desire to kill off the wicious wun.

Some of the titles were pretty bad, as, for instance, in one place where a man said "You're fired!" and was told in retort: "You haven't done with me yet!" That sure does sound like the good old ten-twent'-thirt'—yea bo!

When the runaway kid landed on the dock at Newport News there was a cop waiting right off the bat to pick her up. They tried to "alibi" it by saying, "If you're the kid we're watching for," etc., although nothing was registered to explain why any Newport News policeman should be on this particular dock. Those things don't happen in real life!

In the cast were Val Paul, Martha Matox and Peggy Custer.

The Box Office Angle.

Figured as a program release, you may be able to get this by satisfactorily because there is a lot of action with an element of mystery which some may consider interesting principally because it keeps moving.

If you cater to fans who may not be quick enough to guess this, then it will very possibly get over with them as a satisfactory release. Surely it is not distinctive or even good as to treatment.

There is no box office value in the name of Donna Drew, or even that of Joseph Girard or Gretchen Lederer, nor can I see any in the name of the production. It is a fair filler if you can afford to play such things, although, personally, I want to advise you against such action.

The time has come when you must go to the trouble of picking real films, and then putting them over with intelligent advertising and presentation. Don't think you are kidding your fans just because they come fairly regularly. They may drift from you faster than you realize.

ERNEST STERN, Inc.
THE TITLE MAN
Specializes in
MOTION PICTURE TITLES
OF THE HIGHEST GRADE
729 Seventh Ave., New York - - Phone Bryant 8973

CRANE WILBUR
Exclusive Management
MABEL CONDON EXCHANGE
LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

BEAUTIFUL BITS AND DRAGGY MELO POORLY TIED TOGETHER

Tyrone Power in

THE LORELEI OF THE SEA

M. Philip Hansen—Marine Film Corp.—State Rights

DIRECTOR.....Henry Otto
AUTHOR.....Richard Willis
CAMERAMAN.....James Crosby
AS A WHOLE.....Draggy hodge-podge of very beautiful exteriors and very "meller" melo
STORY.....Uninteresting combination of old melodramatic situations tied in with fairy tale dream to provide beauty stuff and undressed mermaids
DIRECTION.....Registered wonderfully beautiful flashes and exteriors, and artistically grouped mermaid ensembles, with generally fine composition; but fell flat on dramatic interest and action
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent; a few exquisite shots and a few poor ones
LIGHTINGS.....Many very effective bits
CAMERA WORK.....Generally very good
STAR.....An excellent pipe smoker
SUPPORT.....Mostly mobs of extras; other principals ordinary EXTERIORS.....Very well chosen and photographed
INTERIORS.....Acceptable
DETAIL.....Too many sunsets and assembling dragged at times and seemed jumpy at other times
TIME.....Seventy-four minutes (6 parts)

IF most of the story, which is ordinary melodrama rather poorly "acted," were cut out of this, there would remain enough beauty to get it by with most any audience as a pretty bit of entertainment.

Unfortunately, the present combination makes the offering painfully draggy, tiresome and unconvincing, with too little of the mermaid and beautiful exterior stuff to atone for the actory plot scenes.

Tyrone Power, who was presented as the star, did very little through all the footage save stand around and look mean and smoke his trusty old pipe. The other principals failed to impress, and we had entirely too many scenes where several hundred extras stood around and walked up and down the steps and wandered on the beach doing little or nothing. These were supposed to be "big" scenes, but they resembled the sort of action that you see when a lot of people are caught by a newsweekly standing around an accident or walking about somewhere realizing that the camera is shooting in their direction.

Of course the mermaid scenes—particularly the ones where the girls wore little else than a smile—were interesting, and some of them were quite artistic as to general composition. Unfortunately, they had little or nothing to do with the story, and the bit where the sailor was supposed to be wrecked while answering the call of the "Lorelei" was handled as one might fancy a schoolboy would direct it.

Many of the titles were poor as to wording, and frequently they failed to hold the story together properly. Scores of beautiful sunsets and sun-rises were used to break sequences, but these were pulled a bit too frequently, with the result that they lost some of their value because of the number in evidence.

After the plot was all over so far as anybody cares, they started in and told all about what happened fourteen years ago, to explain how it occurred that Mr. Power had the heroine living with him. This was a very bad finish.

In the cast were Frances Burnham, Jay Belasco, John Oaker, Gypsy Abbot and Winnifred Greenwood.

The Box Office Angle.

Of course if you slap a lot of mermaids' photographs outside your house, you can pull a certain amount of business with them and many may be perfectly satisfied with this because of the scores and scores of beautiful exteriors shown. It is truly unfortunate, however, that all of these beautiful shots should be wasted on such a poor excuse of a plot tied together with such ordinarily acted situations.

Mr. Otto proved in "Undine" that he knew how to get beautiful stuff and at the same time showed the same weakness as to dramatic construction and strength.

Of course, the average fan may be willing to pass over many of the weaknesses in this because of the beauty spots, since the average program release is pretty punk as to drama and has no beauty spots to save it.

If you decide to play this put all your emphasis on the mermaid stuff.

QUICK ANNOUNCEMENTS FOR YOUR SCREEN

SLIDENE OUTFIT: all complete.....$1.00
6 bottles slide ink; 25 cover glasses; 6 special pens; 2 slide charts

Novelty Typewriter Slides.....$3.50 per 100
Handy Slide Holder and Clip FREE.
NOVELTY SLIDE CO., 115 East 23d St., New York.

FOR YOUR USE
(Fill in Cut Out and Mail)

Date.....

GEORGE W. BEYNON,

505 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Please give me details and quote prices of your

Musical Settings for Feature Pictures

as arranged for the New York Theatres

Name .....

Theatre .....

City .....

State .....

Note: Beynon is being swamped with orders for this service. To insure yourself against possible delay

MAIL THIS COUPON NOW.

KING-BEE FILM CORP.

PRESENTS

BILLY WEST COMEDIES

TWO REELS EACH - Series No. 10

WHY?

IS THE

DEMAND GREATER

THAN THE SUPPLY.

Ask "WID" - He Knows!

KING-BEE FILM CORPORATION

LOUIS BURSTEIN, President NAT H. SPITZER, Sales Mgr.

L. L. HILLER, Treasurer

LONGACRE BLDG. NEW YORK CITY

THE ROLL OF HONOR!!

These features have at least five reports, and all have a combined average for Pleased Patrons and Box Office of 80 per cent or more.

In the case of several Features having the same percentage, we have placed the one with the higher percentage of repeats first.

Reports	Features	Company	% P. P.	% B. O.	Repeats
6	Birth of a Nation	Griffith	100	100	5
8	The Rink	Chaplin Mutual	98	99	7
14	The Americano	Triangle	99	97	11
8	Easy Etreet	Chaplin Mutual	95	100	8
14	Poor Little Rich Girl	Arteraft	97	97	10
14	The Square Deal Man	Triangle	96	95	7
5	The Goose Girl	Paramount	95	95	4
14	Miss George Washington	Paramount	95	95	11
21	Snow White	Paramount	95	95	13
16	Truthful Tulliver	Triangle	97	93	9
8	Wild and Woolly	Arteraft	94	96	4
14	The Cure	Chaplin Mutual	94	95	8
7	The Eternal City	Para. Spec.	93	96	4
35	Hulda from Holland	Paramount	95	94	23
7	The Little American	Arteraft	95	94	2
7	Wolf Lowry	Triangle	93	95	1
20	Matrimaniac	Triangle	92	94	10
27	Manhattan Madness	Triangle	94	92	12
26	Under Two Flags	Fox	94	92	7
23	Peggy	Triangle	94	91	15
6	The Serpent	Fox	92	93	1
10	The Iron Claw	Serial	93	92
10	The Ne'er-Do-Well	Selig Spec.	91	93	7
19	Rags	Paramount	91	93	5
13	In Again—Out Again	Arteraft	91	92	5
11	The Desert Man	Triangle	92	91	4
5	The Rough House	Arteraft	93	90	1
9	The Shielding Shadow	Serial	91	92
15	Bought and Paid For	World	94	91	10
18	Hell's Hinges	Triangle	92	89	11
15	The Devil's Double	Triangle	91	91	7
19	The Good Bad-Man	Triangle	90	92	4
16	American Aristocracy	Triangle	92	89	9
10	Mister Forty-Four	Metro	88	93	4
6	Graustark	K. E. S. E.	89	91	5
7	Behind the Screen	Mutual Chaplin	89	91	5
5	Destruction	Fox	86	94	1
7	The Clodhopper	Triangle	97	83	1
9	Skinner's Dress Suit	K. E. S. E.	95	84	6
10	Prince and the Pauper	Paramount	92	87	5
6	The Floorwalker	Chaplin Mutual	89	90	2
8	Cinderella	Paramount	85	93	4
12	Broadway Jones	Arteraft	96	82	4
5	Hell Morgan's Girl	Bluebird	90	88	1
12	Still Waters	Paramount	94	83	7
6	Girl of Yesterday	Paramount	89	88	3
19	The Sin Ye Do	Triangle	92	85	10
14	The Habit of Happiness	Triangle	92	85	5
6	A Tale of Two Cities	Fox	93	83	4
7	The Crucible	Paramount	92	84	3
25	Little Lady Eileen	Paramount	87	89	10
10	Out of the Drifts	Paramount	89	86	4
19	The Wolf Woman	Triangle	86	89	6
12	The Battle Cry of Peace	Vita. Spec.	95	80	4
5	Green Stockings	Vitagraph	87	88	2
6	The Easiest Way	Selznick	88	87	2
16	The Count	Chaplin Mutual	88	86	8
18	The Cheat	Paramount	94	80	12
12	The Price She Paid	Selznick	95	79	3
24	The Return of Draw Egan	Triangle	88	86	7
23	Silks and Satins	Paramount	85	88	16
26	Reggie Mixes In	Triangle	93	80
30	Flirting With Fate	Triangle	87	86	11
16	The Common Law	Selznick	83	90	5
6	The Soul of a Woman	Metro	93	80	1
5	Liberty	Serial	91	82
10	Old Homestead	Paramount	88	84	7
14	Poor Little Peppina	Paramount	88	84	8
8	My Official Wife	Vitagraph	90	82	4
12	Romeo and Juliet	Fox	86	86	5
5	Tess of Storm Country	Para. Spec.	88	84	2
29	The Bugle Call	Triangle	93	79	9
24	Fifty-Fifty	Triangle	89	83
5	Miss Jackie of the Navy	Mutual	87	85
11	Wild Flower	Paramount	89	82
22	Home	Triangle	91	80
22	East Lynne	Fox	86	85
8	Shadows and Sunshine	Pathe	93	78
11	The Eternal Sapho	Fox	84	87
12	The Weaker Sex	Triangle	88	83
14	Back of the Man	Triangle	90	81
17	Her Double Life	Fox	86	85
25	Apostle of Vengeance	Triangle	80	83
6	The Dawn of a To-morrow	Paramount	83	88
7	Molly Make-Believe	Paramount	87	83
6	The Prince of Graustark	K. E. S. E.	85	85
8	The Two Orphans	Fox	84	86
8	The Hungry Heart	World	87	83
8	Dulcie's Adventure	Mutual	87	83
7	Bella Donna	Paramount	92	77
17	The Flying Torpedo	Triangle	88	80
18	Ashes of Embers	Paramount	85	83
18	Corner in Colleens	Triangle	88	80
5	Womanhood	Vitagraph	84	84
9	Madame Butterfly	Paramount	82	86
8	Helene of the North	Paramount	87	81
8	Little Mary Sunshine	Pathe	90	78
7	Undine	Bluebird	80	87
9	Reckless Romeo	Arteraft	89	78
10	The Pinch Hitter	Triangle	96	71
7	Island of Regeneration	Vitagraph	85	81
10	God's Country and Woman	Vitagraph	81	85
12	White Raven	Metro	85	81
6	Man and His Soul	Metro	83	83
6	Pretty Sister of Jose	Paramount	84	82
11	The Promise	Metro	82	84
6	Chimmie Fadden	Paramount	91	75
7	Camille	World	86	79
12	Carmen	Paramount	82	83
18	His Picture In the Papers	Triangle	90	75
6	The Innocence of Lizette	Mutual	85	80
8	Mice and Men	Paramount	84	80
5	Little Girl Next Door	Special	77	87
5	Chimmie Fadden Out West	Paramount	88	76
24	The Social Secretary	Triangle	89	75
5	What Will People Say?	Metro	80	84
5	The Sign of the Cross	Paramount	79	85
8	Gentleman from Indiana	Paramount	86	78
15	The River of Romance	Metro	87	76
6	Excuse Me	Pathe	90	73
8	Where Are My Children?	Universal Spec.	79	84
22	Plain Jane	Triangle	88	75
18	Man from Bitter Roots	Fox	82	81
11	Last Man	Vitagraph	82	81
17	The Combat	Vitagraph	80	83
6	Kindling	Paramount	81	82
12	The Rise of Susan	World	79	83
6	Madame X	Pathe	71	91
5	The Yellow Passport	World	82	80
5	Alice In Wonderland	Eskay	76	86
6	The Love Thief	Fox	82	80
7	The New York Peacock	Fox	83	79
7	The Libertine	Mammoth	81	80
16	Maria Rosa	Paramount	81	80
5	The Soul of Broadway	Fox	83	78
14	The Disciple	Triangle	85	76
13	Patria	Serial	84	77
16	Gloria's Romance	Serial	78	83
5	Man from Mexico	Paramount	90	70
14	Bullets and Brown Eyes	Triangle	85	75
24	Honor Thy Name	Triangle	87	73
6	David Harum	Paramount	82	78
8	The Wall Between	Metro	78	82
8	Seven Sisters	Paramount	86	74
17	Stepping Stones	Triangle	85	75

TABULATED PERCENTAGE REPORTS FROM EXHIBITORS

THE BATTING AVERAGES

These are the averages of the companies having 200 reports or more.

Reports		% P. P.	% B. O.	Repeat
2628	PARAMOUNT	68.4	62.3	397
2349	TRIANGLE	70.6	65.2	434
595	WORLD	67.7	61.5	49
674	METRO	70.8	67.0	57
767	FOX	73.1	70.8	106
233	MUTUAL	72.0	71.1	17
298	BLUEBIRD	62.7	63.5	23
544	VITAGRAPH	68.1	66.2	76

THE NUMBER BEFORE THE NAME OF THE FEATURE INDICATES THE NUMBER OF REPORTS RECEIVED AND TABULATED ON THAT FILM.

THE FIRST COLUMN CARRIES THE PERCENTAGE OF PLEASED PATRONS.

THE SECOND COLUMN SHOWS THE BOX OFFICE PERCENTAGE.

FIGURES IN THE THIRD COLUMN INDICATE THAT MANY REPORTED THE FILM WORTH A RETURN DATE.

All reports in this percentage tabulation have been marked on this scale:

EXCEPTIONAL	100%
EXCELLENT	80%
GOOD	60%
FAIR	40%
POOR	20%
BAD	0%

PARAMOUNT

2628 Paramount 68.4 62.3 397

Reports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
1	In Bishop's Carriage	100	93
2	The Lost Paradise	50	73
8	The Virginian	81	73	2
2	Such a Little Queen	78	78	1
1	Marta of the Lowlands	50	70
3	Where the Trail Divides	93	90	1
11	Wildflower	89	82	6
1	The County Chairman	80	80
1	What's His Name	75	100
5	Behind the Screens	81	78
5	Man from Mexico	80	70	1
1	The Man From Home	70	70
1	Circus Man	94	95
2	Rose of the Rancho	84	77
5	The Bargain	80	74	3
2	Ghost Breakers	60	63
7	The Crucible	92	84	3
1	False Colors	50	80
5	The Sign of the Cross	79	85
4	Cameo Kirby	61	50
8	Cinderella	85	93	4
1	The Million	70	90
5	Girl of the Golden West	79	77	2
3	The Dancing Girl	65	65
8	The Italian	77	62	1
1	No Laughing Matter	100	85
1	Morals of Marcus	60	90
5	The Goose Girl	95	95	4
2	After Five	51	50
1	Mistress Nell	88	95
2	Buckshot John	60	60
3	Her Triumph	60	74	1
3	The Warrens of Virginia	70	71	1
1	Country Boy	60	60
6	David Harem	82	78	1
1	A Gentleman of Leisure	80	70
2	The Caprices of Kitty	63	70
1	Love Route	60	60
1	Sunshine Molly	40	20
1	The Governor's Lady	97	85
3	Gretna Green	100	100	2
3	Are You a Mason?	78	84
1	Pretty Mrs. Smith	65	90
1	The Unafraid	100	75
1	When We Were 21	75	85
4	Snobs	64	52
5	Captain Courtesy	84	64	1
3	Captive	82	67
2	Niobe	75	55	1
1	Help Wanted	100	75
5	The Woman	86	89	1
5	House of Lost Court	82	54	1
4	Fanchon, The Cricket	89	92	3
3	Betty in Search of Thrill	85	87
5	Stolen Goods	78	75
1	Wild-Goose Chase	60	55	1
6	Pretty Sister Jose	84	82	2
5	Jim the Penman	64	85
6	The Dawn of a To-morrow	83	88	1
5	Arab	89	56	1
1	Clarissa	75	80
2	The Dictator	45	45
5	Wild Olive	82	69
6	Chimmy Fadden	91	75	1
3	Little Pal	79	85
4	Rugmaker's Daughter	40	50
2	The Clue	74	80
6	Kindling	81	82
1	The Running Fight	60	70
3	The Fighting Hope	77	80
5	Kilmeny	75	73
8	Seven Sisters	86	74	1
3	Puppet Crown	100	85
19	Rags	91	93	5
2	Sold	83	72
6	The Secret Orchid	79	74
5	Nearly a Lady	65	75
6	The Marriage of Kitty	76	64
3	Poor Schmaltz	63	57
8	Helene of the North	87	81	2
3	The Majesty of the Law	56	60
3	Heart of Jennifer	66	55
2	Incorrigible Dukane	75	55
4	Esmeralda	89	89	2
2	The Case of Becky	65	65
1	Out of Darkness	80	40
1	Peer Gynt	82	100
4	The Explorers	72	61
4	'Twas Ever Thus	50	68
2	Voice in the Fog	75	67
6	Fatal Card	65	59
4	Zasa	91	67	2
6	The Girl of Yesterday	89	88	3
7	White Pearl	71	75
4	Blackbirds	57	58
7	Chorus Lady	73	68
6	The Secret Sin	69	74	1
7	Yankee Girl	52	57
6	Masqueraders	56	56
12	Carmen	82	83	4
12	Still Waters	94	83	7
9	Madame Butterfly	82	86	3
7	Mummy and Humming Bird	84	84
7	Bella Donna	92	77	4
8	Armstrong's Wife	79	65
8	Chimmie Fadden Out West	88	78	2
8	A Gentleman From Indiana	86	78
10	Prince and the Pauper	92	87	5
10	Mr. Grex from Monte Carlo	84	69	1
9	Jane	78	51
9	The Unknown	76	67	1
18	The Cheat	94	80	12
9	The Reform Candidate	80	54	1
9	The Immigrant	73	62
10	The Old Homestead	88	84	7
8	Lydia Gilmore	88	61	2
10	Temptation	82	77	2
10	The Foundling	78	76	3
6	Tongues of Men	77	53	1
8	Mice and Men	84	80	5
7	The Golden Chance	77	61	2
2	My Lady Incog	50	35
5	Ragamuffins	77	53
5	Call of the Cumberlands	79	64
8	The Spider	87	64	1
10	Puddin' Head Wilson	81	62	4
9	Tennessee's Pardner	65	58
8	Madame Le President	24	46
9	Nearly a King	52	49	1
13	Trail of the Lonesome Pine	75	77	3
8	Fell In Love With His Wife	63	51	1
8	Blacklist	62	52	1
10	Out of the Drifts	89	86	4
8	Diplomacy	88	88	1
14	Poor Little Peppina	88	84	8
16	To Have and To Hold	74	69	4
12	Ben Blair	72	63
10	For the Defense	68	62	1
7	The Code of Marcia Grey	64	59	2
9	The Lost Bridegroom	69	60	2
8	The Saleslady	72	62	1
15	Audrey	73	70	3
9	The Sowers	64	59
11	The Heart of Paula	71	54	1
12	The Race	69	59
8	The Eternal Grind	70	78	3
10	The Love Mask	59	54	2
10	Molly Make-Believe	87	82	6
7	The Red Widow	62	55	2
12	The Heart of Nora Flynn	72	60	4
8	A Moment Before	52	64	1
12	David Garrick	68	46	2
9	The Innocent Lie	56	51
16	Marie Rosa	81	80	4
12	Alien Souls	69	67	1
13	The Feud Girl	60	50
16	Pasquale	78	53	3
16	Sweet Kitty Bellairs	72	62	2
20	Saints and Sinners	51	49
17	Thousand-Dollar Husband	60	41	4
22	A Gutter Magdalene	62	54	1
10	Evil Thereof	44	44
15	The Making of Maddalena	63	57	3
23	Silks and Satins	85	88	16
14	Destiny's Toy	60	51
19	The Clown	79	54	3
20	Susie Snowflakes	60	50	2
16	The World's Great Snare	73	78	4
19	The American Beauty	61	61	3
22	The Dupe	64	64	1
22	The Smugglers	53	50	1
26	The Selfish Woman	72	68	4
20	Davy Crockett	67	60
28	The Dream Girl	65	64	1
28	Under Cover	79	75	3
27	International Marriage	55	51	1
27	Common Ground	64	64	1
35	Hulda from Holland	100	94	23
30	House of Golden Windows	73	64	3
22	A Woman in the Case	72	72	3
25	Little Lady Eileen	87	89	10
28	The Stronger Love	53	52
31	Public Opinion	83	72	4
21	Rolling Stones	67	60	2
21	The Honorable Friend	65	62	1
20	Victory of Conscience	60	59	3
21	Each Pearl a Tear	74	69	3
22	The Parson of Panamint	79	70	7
15	The Big Sister	50	57

Re-ports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Re-peat
14	The Reward of Patience	65	55
15	The House of Lies	73	65	1
14	The Daugther of McGregor	56	45
18	Ashes of Embers	85	83	7
16	The Quest of Life	59	61
14	Anton, the Terrible	46	45
17	The Lash	57	55
13	The Storm	75	65	1
16	The Intrigue	81	61	2
16	Her Father's Son	74	68	2
14	Witchcraft	55	55
14	The Kiss	74	68	2
16	The Rainbow Princess	82	74	3
15	Seventeen	85	74	2
14	Miss George Washington	95	95	11
15	The Heir to the Hoorah	82	69	5
16	The Soul of Kura San	80	73	1
12	A Son of Erin	79	73	2
10	Unprotected	53	55	1
11	The Years of the Locust	49	50
12	The Plow Girl	77	63
9	The Yellow Pawn	66	57	1
9	Nanette of the Wilds	50	57	2
7	Martyrdom of Philip Strong	53	55	1
10	The Coney Island Princess	62	63	1
10	The Road to Love	72	59	1
14	Oliver Twist	85	69	6
13	The Victoria Cross	44	54	1
17	The Traveling Salesman	78	60	3
20	The Right Direction	76	61	2
21	Snow White	95	95	13
16	Redeeming Love	63	60	1
21	The Slave Market	74	70	5
13	The Evil Eye	30	44	1
19	Great Expectations	74	55	1
17	Happiness of Three Women	73	58	1
14	Betty to the Rescue	46	48
1	What Money Can't Buy	40	40
14	A Girl Like That	55	51
16	Lost and Won	59	50
19	The Golden Fetter	50	56
19	His Sweetheart	83	57	2
19	The Wax Model	67	56
19	Each To His Kind	62	60
16	Her Own People	72	52
11	The Black Wolf	35	41
17	The American Consul	53	50	1
19	Fortunes of Fifi	64	76	2
20	On Record	62	56	2
17	Winning of Sally Temple	40	48
17	Those Without Sin	51	50	1
15	Castles For Two	51	48	1
13	Out of the Wreck	60	54
13	Sapho	74	83	3
10	Prison Without Walls	52	51
11	The Dummy	70	54
8	The Spirit of Romance	63	52
8	As Men Love	73	53
10	The Bottle Imp	75	66	2
7	The Bond Between	50	39
■	A School for Husbands	49	46	1
8	The Lonesome Chap	51	44
9	Sleeping Fires	56	63	1
8	The Tides of Barnegat	49	43
8	The Cost of Hatred	40	38
10	The Valentine Girl	73	76
4	Unconquered	14	18
6	The Girl at Home	51	44
9	Heart's Desire	28	36
8	Sacrifice	26	43
7	The Primrose Ring	44	48
8	The Silent Partner	33	36
6	Marcellina Millions	41	30
6	Highway of Hopes	33	28
6	Her Better Self	57	58
■	The Undying Flame	27	40
5	Freckles	65	53
4	The World Apart	38	31
2	Giving Becky a Chance	70	51
3	The Jaguar's Claws	40	47
4	The Inner Shrine	38	58
3	The Roadside Impresario	28	17
5	The Heir of the Ages	23	22
2	Her Strange Wedding	20	30
2	The Little Boy Scout	40	20
3	At First Sight	40	34
2	Big Timber	60	60
2	Love That Lives	70	80
2	Forbidden Paths	40	40

TRIANGLE

Re-ports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Re-peat
2349	Triangle	70.6	65.2	434
10	The Iron Strain	81	66	2
9	The Lamb	84	75	3
■	Old Heidelberg	72	63	1
11	The Coward	84	67	1
9	Martyrs of the Alamo	67	57	2
14	The Disciple	85	76	2
7	Matrimony	84	74	2
5	Sable Lorcha	64	53
6	The Golden Claw	61	72
9	Double Trouble	64	64	2
7	Aloha Oe	63	■■	1
5	Lily and Rose	61	53
8	Jordan is a Hard Road	56	52
■	Winged Idol	53	52
■	Penitents	28	32
11	The Edge of the Abyss	67	61
■	Submarine Pirate	85	78	1
5	Cross Currents	48	45
11	Between Men	72	70	1
14	Let Katy Do It	87	66	0
5	The Corner	56	47
5	The Missing Link	55	43	1
3	Beckoning Flame	65	48
9	The Wood Nymph	54	50	1
8	The Conqueror	71	70
9	Price of Power	55	51
10	The Green Swamp	80	78	1
12	Acquitted	69	51
6	D'Artagnan	59	54
18	His Picture in the Papers	90	75	5
13	Honor's Altar	77	67	2
14	Betty of Greystone	77	65	2
23	Peggy	94	91	15
7	Don Quixote	57	56
9	The Last Act	79	78	1
11	Daphne and the Pirate	71	57	1
18	Hell's Hinges	93	89	11
17	The Flying Torpedo	88	80	8
14	Bullets and Brown Eyes	85	75	3
14	Martha's Vindication	79	72	2
14	Moral Fabric	75	62	1
15	Hoodoo Ann	68	65	1
15	The Raiders	79	70
14	The Habit of Happiness	92	85	5
8	Waifs	70	59	1
8	Little Meena's Romance	64	60	1
17	The Aryan	59	80	6
10	Sold for Marriage	71	72	1
17	Stepping Stones	85	75	2
10	Sunshine Dad	36	46
9	Civilzation's Child	68	64	1
14	Children In the House	80	66	2
11	The Beggar of Cawnpore	61	49
19	The Good-Bad Man	90	92	4
12	The No-Good Guy	74	60	3
17	Susan Rocks the Boat	69	63
20	Not My Sister	79	77	4
18	Child of Paris Streets	76	64
22	The Primal Lure	82	76	7
8	Mr. Goode, the Samaritan	53	53
26	The Market of Vain Desire	79	64	5
22	Going Straight	77	78	3
29	The Bugle Call	93	79	9
26	Reggie Mixes In	93	80	11
16	The Sorrows of Love	66	69	1
21	An Innocent Magdalene	71	71	2
18	The Dividend	70	68	1
21	The Wild Girl of Sierras	45	53
25	An Apostle of Vengeance	88	83	4
18	Casey at the Bat	44	48
28	The Phantom	83	72	7
30	Flirting With Fate	87	86	11
31	The Deserter	85	69	11
26	The Little School Ma'am	74	67	2
26	The Eye of the Night	74	58	5
19	Stranded	60	50
27	The Captive God	65	70	2
23	The Halfbreed	72	74	2
22	The Payment	81	70	3
18	The Marriage of Molly O	48	47
24	Honor Thy Name	87	73	4
22	The Devil's Needle	64	64	1
30	Shell 43	87	68	6
26	Hell-to-Pay Austin	83	66	6
21	Lieutenant Danny, U. S. A.	79	69
16	Pillars of Society	59	56	1
22	Home	91	80	9
16	Gretchen the Greenhorn	64	62
21	The Patriot	79	80
24	The Social Secretary	89	75
17	The Thoroughbred	82	72
11	The Little Liar	69	57
19	The Wolf Woman	86	89
16	The Dawnmaker	58	78
20	Diane of the Follies	71	72
27	Manhattan Madness	94	92	1
22	Plain Jane	88	75
20	Old Folks at Home	81	64
17	The Jungle Child	60	61
15	The Rummy	67	54
21	The Return of Draw Egan	88	86
20	The Vagabond Prince	75	70
19	Somewhere in France	76	69
18	A Corner in Colleens	88	80
12	A Sister of Six	69	64
21	Fifty-Fifty	89	88
4	War's Women	61	48
23	Atta Boy's Last Race	54	55
16	American Aristocracy	92	89
10	The Microscope Mystery	50	43
14	Honorable Algy	76	65
14	Jim Grimsby's Boy	68	62
15	The Devil's Double	91	91
12	The Children Paid	72	63
14	Children of the Feud	55	52
8	The Criminal	49	45
10	A Gamble in Souls	67	65
15	The Wharf Rat	54	55
20	The Matrimaniac	92	94	1
19	The Sin Ye Do	92	85	1
13	Heiress of Coffee Dan's	60	53
10	Three of Many	62	53
9	House Built Upon Sand	75	67
8	Nina the Flower Girl	51	52
11	The Female of the Species	72	74
16	Truthful Tulliver	97	93
12	The Weaker Sex	88	83
7	The Little Yank	40	52
10	The Bride of Hate	78	74
11	The Iced Bullet	62	53
14	The Americano	99	97	1
10	Chicken Casey	75	56
14	Jim Bludso	63	41
14	The Crab	83	70
10	Girl of the Timber Claims	41	39
16	The Gun-Fighter	76	85	1
13	The Bad Boy	71	54
11	The Princess of the Dark	39	41
6	Stage Struck	41	38
12	Last of the Ingrams	45	42
9	Blood Will Tell	64	61
5	A Love Sublime	47	40
8	The Little Brother	51	37
14	Back of the Man	90	81
10	Betsy's Burglar	59	54
14	The Square-Deal Man	96	95
11	The Dark Road	60	49
5	A Daughter of the Poor	57	55
9	A Woman's Awakening	61	52
9	Her Father's Keeper	54	48
9	Her Official Fathers	56	48
9	Old-Fashioned Young Man	48	47
10	Sweetheart of the Doomed	74	68
9	Paddy O'Hara	67	56
11	The Desert Man	92	91
9	Cheerful Givers	47	41
10	The Pinch Hitter	96	71
5	Hands Up	35	35
8	The Snarl	54	63
4	Might and the Man	25	30
6	Happiness	59	56
4	The Man Who Made Good	45	39
4	Wild Winship's Widow	68	56
5	Souls Triumphant	32	30
7	The Millionaire Vagrant	78	64
7	Wolf Lowry	93	95
2	The Girl Glory	80	55
5	Bawbs o' Blue Ridge	38	53
6	A Hater of Men	79	68
5	American—That's All	32	32
5	The Girl Glory	80	58
5	Love or Justice?	69	69
1	Her Excellency, the Governor	20	20
5	Paws of the Bear	62	54
2	Madcap Madge	60	63
7	The Clodhopper	97	83

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
4 The Flame of the Yukon	100	94
2 A Strange Transgressor	80	90
1 Time Locks and Diamonds	20	20
1 The Mother Instinct	80	40
1 Sudden Jim	100	90
1 The Sawdust Ring	60	40
1 Borrowed Plumage	60	80
1 In Slumberland	80	40
1 Seeking Happiness	100	60

WORLD

695 World	67.7	61.5	49
4 Hearts Afire	70	78
1 Daughter of the Sea	60	80
2 The Warning	80	45
4 The Little Dutch Girl	80	63
1 The Price of Her Silence	80	90
2 The Master of the House	68	85
1 The Dragon	60	30
1 The Price	80	65
1 Love's Cross Roads	85	60
1 Better Woman	75	65
1 By Whose Hand	60	50
1 Her Great Hour	80	40
1 When it Strikes Home	60	65
2 Circus Romance	65	55
2 Old Dutch	75	30
2 Ballet Girl	80	60
3 Marrying Money	70	80
2 Wishing Ring	85	90
2 The Dollar Mark	55	45
1 Gentleman from Mississippi	60	40
1 As Ye Sow	100	45
1 Stolen Voice	90	90
1 Face in the Moonlight	80	60
1 Women and Wine	90	40
2 Blue Grass	75	68
1 Fruits of Desire	40	50
1 Alias Jimmy Valentine	80	90
7 Trilby	81	68	1
1 Idols	40	40
2 Master Hand	86	80
3 Devil's Toy	57	73
3 Salvation Nell	60	47
3 Family Cupboard	50	57	1
4 Heart of Blue Ridge	84	73	1
1 Butterfly on Wheel	80	70
2 Hearts of Men	80	52
1 Body and Soul	40	45
2 The Ransom	63	45
4 The Labyrinth	66	65
3 Should a Wife Forgive?	90	90
2 The Senator	83	60
1 Hearts in Exile	90	90
1 His Wife's Good Name	25	20
1 The Chain Invisible	90	5
1 The Imposter	80	75
1 Sunday	95	30
1 As In a Looking Glass	60	40
1 Over Night	70	70
3 Sins of Society	76	65
7 Camille	86	79	3
3 The Rack	89	69
1 Fine Feathers	70	40
1 The Clarion	60	75
3 The Woman in 47	74	80
5 The Yellow Passport	82	80	2
3 The Price of Happiness	58	50
2 A Woman's Power	45	50
1 Cowardly Way	60	60
2 Passersby	73	55
3 Man and His Angel	62	45
4 The Supreme Sacrifice	78	69
2 The Struggle	60	60
3 The Hand of Peril	75	67
5 Then I'll Come Back To You	76	66	1
4 The Reapers	75	65
2 The Shadow of Doubt	78	65
2 Social Highwaymen	75	48
3 Closed Road	81	71	1
7 The Feast of Life	61	73
7 Her Maternal Right	58	74
6 Sudden Riches	70	71
2 The Twin Triangle	83	45
6 Tangled Fates	57	63
3 Fate's Boomerang	42	53
4 His Brother's Wife	85	74	2
10 Perils of Divorce	61	63
13 La vie de Boheme	47	50
3 What Happened at 22	12	10
5 Crucial Test	59	58
7 The Weakness of Man	61	68
12 Sally in Our Alley	55	65
14 Paying the Price	70	70	1
12 Miss Petticoats	59	61
14 Woman's Way	75	74	4
13 The Summer Girl	56	57
12 Rail Rider	68	60
10 Husband and Wife	75	63	2
8 Almighty Dollar	76	72	1
13 The Velvet Paw	74	69	1
9 Friday, the Thirteenth	72	70
11 Dark Silence	77	79	2
4 The Revolt	66	63
7 The Gilded Cage	75	70
6 Hidden Scar	77	67
8 The Scarlet Oath	60	62
7 Man Who Stood Still	71	63
8 The Heart of a Hero	59	49
3 Without a Soul	70	85
15 Bought and Paid For	91	91	10
10 The Madness of Helen	57	54
6 Men She Married	58	55
4 The Deep Purple	81	75
11 All Man	59	63	2
7 Broken Chains	50	43
12 The Rise of Susan	79	83	6
6 The World Against Him	52	43
10 Woman Alone	67	65	1
7 On Dangerous Ground	65	71
7 The Man Who Forgot	65	61	1
4 Marriage a la Carte	73	73	1
1 The Unpardonable Sin	40	55
5 The Bondage of Fear	65	63
8 Tillie Wakes Up	79	78	1
8 The Hungry Heart	87	83	2
8 The Square Deal	69	72
3 A Girl's Folly	65	75
5 The Red Woman	49	48
4 The Web of Desire	78	73	1
5 The Family Honor	66	61
8 The Dancer's Peril	77	71	1
5 The Social Leper	65	65
4 Man's Woman	61	61
4 Darkest Russia	71	75
6 Forget-Me-Not	63	69
1 The Bludgeon	87	80
3 As Man Made Her	62	68
5 The Page Mystery	55	57
4 Yankee Pluck	61	48
4 Moral Courage	61	58
4 Mothers of France	66	51
2 Maternity	85	90
2 The Crimson Dove	60	55
3 The False Friend	65	72
2 The Stolen Paradise	50	70
1 Atonement	70	65
1 The Pawn of Fate	85	45
1 The Divorse Game	5	75
1 The Price of Pride	75	60
1 The Brand of Satan	75	60
1 The Golden Lotus	50	50
1 The Native Soul	20	30
1 When True Love Dawns	60	45

METRO

674 Metro	70.8	67.0	57
1 Her Reckoning	60	40
1 Satan Sanderson	70	70
1 Cowboy and Lady	80	55
1 Heart of a Painted Lady	85	75
1 High Road	80	60
3 Shooting of Dan McGraw	81	78
1 Middleman	90	80
1 My Best Girl	60	60
1 Right of Way	70	85
2 Second in Command	77	80
1 The Vampire	80	90
6 Soul of a Woman	93	80	1
2 Silent Voice	77	87
1 An Enemy of Society	60	40
2 Song of Wage Slave	75	70
1 Emmy of Stork's Nest	80	60
2 Final Judgment	80	80
2 Pennington's Choice	80	90
4 Woman Pays	78	52
2 One Million Dollars	78	70
3 Barbara Frietchie	82	73
5 The Yellow Streak	85	64
3 House of Tears	80	65
4 Rosemary for Remembrance	73	68
3 Black Fear	73	57
5 What'll People Say?	80	84
4 The Turmoil	70	55
5 Lure of Heart's Desire	56	56
5 Her Debt of Honor	49	50
6 A Man and His Soul	83	83	1
3 The Upstart	68	72
3 Dimples	52	58
4 Corner in Cotton	64	58
5 The Price of Malice	66	65
6 The Soul Market	83	75	1
2 Blindness of Love	80	85	1
3 Lovely Mary	67	83
1 My Madonna	80	85
6 Her Great Price	80	68	1
8 The Wall Between	78	82	1
6 The Kiss of Hate	62	74
6 Half Million Bribe	69	49
8 Playing with Fire	78	75
11 The Come-Back	75	74	1
8 Snow Birds	80	77
8 A Million a Minute	72	84	1
4 The Spell of the Yukon	79	71
6 His Great Triumph	49	43
10 The Scarlet Woman	73	84	1
10 Dorian's Divorce	74	68
8 Masked Rider	69	68
8 Flower of No Man's Land	58	75
8 The Purple Lady	82	63
10 The Eternal Question	76	83	1
11 The Quitter	69	73
15 The River of Romance	87	76	7
9 A Child of Destiny	53	56
13 The Devil at His Elbow	64	61	1
14 God's Half Acre	71	62	1
14 The Weakness of Strength	68	54
11 The Pretender	80	72	1
7 The Upheaval	57	63
10 The Light of Happiness	67	66	1
10 Mister 44	88	93	4
8 The Wheel of the Law	77	66	1
10 The Dawn of Love	66	60
8 The Iron Woman	44	57
5 Life's Shadows	66	60
13 In the Diplomatic Service	69	83	4
9 The Brand of Cowardice	65	54
13 The Gates of Eden	68	54
11 Extravagance	69	82	3
10 The Wager	78	64
1 My Madonna	80	85
8 The Sunbeam	53	51
11 Big Tremaine	74	82	5
9 The Black Butterfly	70	80	4
8 The Stolen Triumph	56	48
7 Awakening of Helena Ritchie	60	61
11 Pigin Island	68	74	3
12 Vanity	61	53
12 The White Raven	85	81	4
9 A Wife by Proxy	46	41
9 Threads of Fate	41	34
12 Bridges Burned	47	62
9 The End of the Tour	45	44
10 One of Many	66	61	1
8 The Secret of Eve	37	66	1
14 The Promise	82	84	3
6 The Barricade	58	57
7 The Hidden Children	43	62
9 The Mortal Sin	53	58
8 The Waiting Soul	49	61	1
6 The Father's Son	67	62
5 The Power of Decision	51	53
7 A Magdalene of the Hills	51	50
6 God's Law and Man's	49	49
3 The Millionaire's Double	67	60
4 The Call of Her People	63	56
5 Sowers and Reapers	61	48
3 The Soul of a Magdalene	27	34
4 The Beautiful Lie	25	30
4 The Duchess of Doubt	61	62
3 Lady Barnacle	52	47
5 The Haunted Pajamas	84	75
3 The Greater Power	43	60
3 Aladdin's Other Lamp	58	53

FOX

767 Fox	73.1	70.8	106
1 Girl I Left Behind Me	8	25
2 St. Elmo	52	92
4 Fool There Was	81	96	3

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
2 Dr. Rameau	90	87	1
2 Kreutzer Sonata	90	85
2 The Idler	55	[illegible]
2 Celebrated Scandal	70	70
2 Clemenceau Case	87	82	1
2 Walls of Jericho	40	35
1 Woman's Resurrection	80	45	2
2 Anna Kerinina	67	65
2 Life's Shop Window	35	57
2 The Nigger	100	70
1 The Gilded Fool	70	75
1 Devil's Daughter	77	95
1 Should a Mother Tell?	83	76
1 Wormwood	80	80
1 Lady Audley's Secret	90	75
1 Princess Romanoff	00	00
1 Valley of the Missing	50	45
1 Children of the Ghetto	75	40
1 Samson	80	55
1 The Thief	90	40
8 Two Orphans	84	86	3
2 The Song of Hate	92	82
7 Regeneration	77	72	4
5 Wonderful Adventure	75	77
5 Sin	62	82
2 Little Gypsy	80	74
5 Soul of Broadway	83	78	1
2 The Family Stain	87	64
3 Carmen	82	83	2
3 Blindness of Devotion	56	53
4 Woman's Past	63	43
9 Broken Law	82	85	1
8 Galley Slave	76	75	1
1 Unfaithful Wife	73	61
3 Her Mother's Secret	73	57
3 A Soldier's Oath	83	70
5 Destruction	86	94	1
3 Green-Eyed Monster	53	74
1 Parisian Romance	65	61
2 Fourth Estate	80	58
6 Serpent	92	93	1
5 Ruling Passion	53	59
5 Merely Mary Ann	52	45
7 Fool's Revenge	45	45
10 Fighting Blood	74	70
4 The Witch	63	59
4 Marble Heart	41	60
10 Gold and the Woman	65	86	1
10 The Bondman	79	64	1
5 A Wife's Sacrifice	55	56
12 Blue Blood and Red	85	70	1
6 Slander	80	70
10 A Modern Thelma	59	49	1
9 Man of Sorrow	63	64	1
9 Blazing Love	70	68
11 The Eternal Sapho	84	87	4
12 Sins of Men	76	61	1
14 Battle of Hearts	63	61
10 The Spider and the Fly	67	72	1
11 Hypocrisy	76	55
10 A Woman's Honor	69	71
22 East Lynne	86	85	3
15 Ambition	71	67
18 Man From Bitter Roots	82	81	2
21 Caprice of the Mountains	69	63	1
15 Tortured Heart	71	67
21 The Beast	87	66	6
26 Under Two Flags	94	92	17
19 The End of the Trail	66	79
19 Sporting Blood	62	57	1
19 Little Miss Happiness	75	68	3
19 Daredevil Kate	74	78	1
14 The Unwelcome Mother	63	66
17 Her Double Life	86	85	5
10 Where Love Leads	69	63	1
14 The Fires of Conscience	65	71	1
12 The Straight Way	67	72
11 The Ragged Princess	77	70
15 The War Bride's Secret	76	71	3
12 Romeo and Juliet	86	86	5
5 Love and Hate	66	60
6 The Mischief Maker	70	70	2
7 Jealousy	63	81
7 The Mediator	73	70	1
5 Sins of the Parents	86	72	3
8 The Battle of Life	67	62
7 The Vixen	59	73
6 The Love Thief	82	80	1
5 The Island of Desire	74	67	1
1 A Modern Cinderella	80	75	1
5 The Price of Silence	82	76	1
3 The Bitter Truth	79	80	1
4 The Primitive Call	58	63
9 The Darling of Paris	67	74
5 One Touch of Sin	65	73
7 The New York Peacock	83	79
2 A Child of the Wilds	85	65
4 The Scarlet Letter	78	69	1
5 The Tiger Woman	72	83	2
6 Sister Against Sister	82	58	1
6 A Tale of Two Cities	93	83	4
3 Melting Millions	80	56
4 The Victim	65	64
4 Loves Law	20	35
5 The Blue Streak	58	60
3 High Finance	77	63
1 American Methods	90	85
3 Her Greatest Love	78	85
2 Tangled Lives	65	65
1 The Derelict	90	45	1
2 Her Temptation	83	59
1 The Final Payment	20	20
1 The Silent Lie	90	90
1 The Slave	20	40
1 The Broadway Sport	55	40
1 Two Little Imps	90	90

MUTUAL

233 Mutual	72.0	71.1	17

1 Buzzard's Shadow	85	80
1 Death Lock	98	85
1 On the Night Stage	75	40
1 The Mating	80	70
1 Enoch Arden	100	100
1 Girl from His Town	85	70
1 Ghosts	80	65
1 Cup of Life	65	40
1 His Wife	70	75
1 House of Scandal	90	75
1 Infatuation	60	50
1 Miracle of Life	83	85	1
1 Inner Struggle	40	20
1 Mill of Floss	75	90
2 The Painted Soul	85	85
1 End of the Road	90	100
1 Father and Son	75	75
1 The Reward	80	80
1 Bird of Prey	85	85
1 Inspiration	70	100	1
2 As a Woman Sows	80	82
1 The Decoy	50	88
1 The Drifter	75	60
1 Life's Blind Alley	50	75
1 Silas Marner	100	100	1
3 The Craving	69	67
1 Law Unto Himself	46	50
1 Heart of Tara	75	75
1 According to Law	65	52
1 Overalls	75	90
3 My Partner	72	70
3 The Bruiser	78	65	1
1 Hidden Law	100	90	1
2 Love Liar	72	82	1
1 Revelations	50	50
1 The Net	90	100	1
2 The Haunted Manor	92	88
2 Feathertop	90	90
1 Lying Lips	60	70
1 Dust	80	80
1 Other People's Money	85	68
2 Isle of Love	80	85	1
5 Whispering Smith	64	66
6 Soul Mates	69	62
2 Wasted Years	76	81
2 Far from Madding Crowd	70	67
4 Medicine Bend	74	81
4 Highest Bid	64	66	1
3 Her American Prince	70	67
3 Doorsteps	65	60	1
2 House of Mirrors	77	75
1 Wall Street Tragedy	85	80
7 Youth's Endearing Charms	77	71	1
2 Strength, Donald Mackenzie	75	72
1 Million for Mary	90	90	1
7 Judith of the Cumberlands	68	68
2 A Welsh Singer	60	53
1 Man Who Would Not Die	85	75
1 The Wolf Man	50	50
1 The Painted Lie	40	35
2 Three Pals	73	71
3 Manager of the B. & A	63	70
9 Pearl of Paradise	68	76	1
8 Dulcie's Adventure	87	83	2
2 And the Law Says	58	64
1 Bluff	85	80
9 Faith	76	72
5 Miss Jackie of the Navy	87	85	1
4 A Dream or Two Ago	81	87
7 The Innocence of Lizette	84	83
4 The Butterfly Girl	75	85
1 The House of Scandal	0	10
1 The Man From Oregon	95	75
1 The Girl From Rector's	40	40
3 The Greater Woman	43	57
3 Where Love Is	52	48
6 The Gentle Intruder	77	78
1 Damaged Goods	40	100
3 Philip Holden-Waster	59	65
2 Redeemed	55	30
1 Lonesome Town	85	85
1 The Love Hermit	78	78
5 The Fighting Gentleman	60	44
1 The Torch Bearer	80	80
2 The Twinkler	92	88
2 East Is East	88	60
1 Immediate Lee	90	82	1
1 Beloved Rogues	95	90
2 The Valley of Decision	69	82
2 The Gilded Youth	60	75
3 The Painted Lie	62	74
2 Motherhood	38	55
3 Sunny Jane	67	65
2 The Devil's Assistant	60	70
3 High Play	48	48
2 The Single Code	50	53
1 The Death	20	20
2 The Wildcat	65	58
3 Whose Wife?	47	47
3 Periwinkle	67	57
1 A Bit of Kindling	60	70
1 Annie-for-Spite	40	40
1 The Mirror	40	20
1 The Checkmate	20	20
1 The Serpent's Tooth	20	20
1 The Dazzling Miss Davidson	40	20
1 Shackles of Truth	90	90	1
2 Environment	65	60
1 The Upper Crust	20	20
1 Pardners	60	20
1 Melissa of the Hills	20	80
1 Bab, the Fixer	40	40
2 A Bit of Kindling	58	50

MUTUAL-CHAPLIN

2 A Night In the Show	80	67	1
5 The Fireman	70	78
4 The Vagabond	55	85
6 The Floorwalker	89	90	2
8 One A. M.	63	81	1
16 The Count	88	86	8
10 The Pawnshop	73	74	2
7 Behind the Screen	89	91	5
8 The Rink	97	99	7
8 Easy Street	95	100	8
14 The Cure	94	95	8
7 The Immigrant	51	54	2

PATHE

195 Pathe	60.9	68.1	19

1 Last Volunteer	80	80
1 The Spender	80	80
3 At Bay	78	81
1 The Galloper	40	50
1 Closing Net	60	55
1 Nedra	55	45
1 Affair of Three Nations	75	80
3 The Beloved Vagabond	76	67
1 Greater Will	50	55
6 Excuse Me!	90	73	2
2 King's Game	56	62
1 Madame X	71	91	3
1 Love Trail	35	53
1 Hazel Kirk	50	55
1 Simon the Jester	60	35
1 The Jockey of Death	68	55
1 A Woman's Fight	70	60
1 The Life of Our Savior	35	55
1 New York	80	74	1
1 Precious Packet	67	45
1 Shrine of Happiness	78	72

rts	% P.P.	% B.O.	Re-peat
Woman's Law	68	65
Big Jim Garrity	69	55	1
Girl with the Green Eyes	65	72
Matrimonial Martyr.	63	73	1
Shadow of Her Past	34	81
The Fugitive	75	61
Little Mary Sunshine	90	78	1
Divorce and the Daughter	78	75
The World and the Woman	85	90
The Shine Girl	73	64
Fear of Poverty	61	85
The Test	60	48
Saint, Devil and Woman	44	57
The Light That Failed	70	71	1
Shadows and Sunshine	93	78	3
Prudence the Pirate	54	64
Arms and the Woman	70	53	1
The Challenge	73	65
Joy and the Dragon	78	71	1
The Romantic Journey	77	66
Her New York	82	62	2
Her Life or His	72	65
Kick In	78	71	1
Sold at Auction	48	58
Modern Monte Cristo	68	63
The Hidden Valley	65	68
Crime and Punishment	58	63
Her Beloved Enemy	69	71
Pots and Pans Peggy	79	68
Twin Kiddies	82	70
The Image Maker	38	40
Told at Twilight	91	80	1
Mayblossom	40	85
The Hunting of the Hawk	66	55
Mary Lawson's Secret	77	78
Sunshine and Gold	77	76
When Love Was Blind	70	65
Hinton's Double	70	63
The Amateur Orphan	60	40
The Candy Girl	20	60
The Recoil	61	63
Blind Man's Luck	80	20
The Iron Heart	40	40

BLUEBIRD

8 Bluebird	62.7	63.5	23
Jeanne Dore	27	41
The Secret Love	38	40
Hop, the Devil's Brew	40	43
Undine	80	87	3
Wrong Door	75	95
Grip of Jealousy	75	56
Rupert of Hentzau	61	60
Strength of the Weak	76	75
The Yaqui	42	58
The Flirt	44	66
Tangled Hearts	44	36
John Necham's Double	54	59
The Great Problem	70	66
Gaylord Waring	51	50
Crippled Hand	58	69	1
Gilded Spider	46	64
Elusive Isabel	48	46
The Measure of a Man	63	60
Love Never Dies	65	48
Son of the Immortals	64	71
Eye of God	64	80	1
Bobbie of the Ballet	67	79
Evil Women Do	60	62
Three Godfathers	68	74	1
Shoes	71	77	3
Broken Fetters	64	56	1
The Love Girl	63	64	1
The Grasp of Greed	71	76	1
The Silent Battle	78	84
Secret of the Swamp	71	56	1
Love's Lariat	65	64	1
Bettina Loved a Soldier	65	72
Wanted—A Home	74	75
The Chalice of Sorrow	72	65
Little Eve Edgarton	78	61	1
The Girl of Lost Lake	65	60
The Unattainable	51	48
Saving a Family Name	81	68	1
Behind the Lines	62	65
The Social Buccaneer	72	65
Gloriana	69	70
A Stranger from Somewhere	69	67
The Price of Silence	88	86
The End of the Rainbow	63	48

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Re-peat
6 The Honor of Mary Blake	58	58
1 The Right to be Happy	50	40
4 Black Orchids	75	78	1
2 Her Soul's Inspiration	55	39
4 God's Crucible	88	84	2
1 The Piper's Price	40	20
5 The Bugler of Algiers	80	69	1
3 The Sign of the Poppy	65	62
5 Mutiny	58	51
8 The Mysterious Mrs. M	76	57	1
1 The Reward of the Faithless	72	81
2 The Saintly Sinner	48	58
4 The Boy Girl	58	58
5 Polly Red Head	61	68
1 The Gift-Girl	60	75
3 Susan's Gentleman	62	63
3 The Clock	77	65
5 Hell Morgan's Girl	90	88	1
1 The Devil's Pay Day	71	75
4 A Jewel In Pawn	71	69
4 Girl With Checkered Coat	66	63
1 Little Miss Nobody	30	50
1 Treason	65	75
1 The White Lights	70	50
2 Bringing Home Father	70	60
2 Kentucky Cinderella	68	55
1 The Car of Chance	40	40
1 The Little Orphan	70	60
2 The Flashlight	68	40
1 Wife on Trial	60	40
1 Follow the Girl	60	40
1 The Little Terror	60	40
1 The Greater Law	40	40

UNIVERSAL

1 Little Brother of the Rich	60	68
1 Business is Business	50	65
1 Father and the Boys	20	30
1 The Frame-up	40	45
1 Judge Not	70	70
1 Long Chance	85	80
1 Man of Shame	50	55
1 My Old Dutch	20	55
1 Nature Man	95	60
1 Under Southern Skies	90	75
2 Langdon's Legacy	80	80
3 Love's Pilgrimage	62	53
1 College Orphan	70	63
1 Colorado	90	100
2 The Campbells Are Coming	84	83	1
1 Money Madness	67	50

RED FEATHER

100 Red Feather	64.8	61.6	2
1 It Happened in Honolulu	80	80
1 The Madcap	70	70
1 Soul Enslaved	60	80
1 Knight of the Range	80	4
2 Beckoning Trail	88	71
2 Man From Nowhere	75	90	1
3 The Path of Happiness	70	50
2 The Sphinx	50	50
1 Pool of Flame	70	75
1 Lords of High Decision	60	40
2 Black Sheep of the Family	60	65
2 Autumn	65	47
3 Her Bitter Cup	72	71
1 The Yoke of Gold	45	64
1 Heritage of Hate	90	85
1 Thrown to the Lions	60	20
3 Huntress of Men	49	55
3 The Youth of Fortune	69	63	1
2 What Love Can Do	50	80
3 Half a Rogue	78	60
1 Sons of Satan	60	40
2 Two Men of Sandy Bar	72	60
1 Folly of Desire	20	40
1 Brigadier Gerard	50	40
1 Romance of Billy Goat Hill	75	55
4 The Target	76	46
1 Whirlpool of Destiny	62	65
2 Narrow Path	82	60
2 Drugged Waters	57	51
1 If My Country Should Call	58	62
2 Black Friday	60	60
2 The Place Beyond the Winds	66	55
2 The Isle of Life	50	43
1 Kinkaid—Gambler	80	85
3 The Mainspring	71	67

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Re-peat
1 Morals of Hilda	80	80
1 Mixed Blood	70	55
1 The Bronze Bride	60	75
1 The Child of Mystery	45	15
3 Polly Put the Kettle On	45	57
1 Fighting for Love	69	65
1 The Double Room Mystery	55	35
2 Heart Strings	70	60
2 Love Aflame	78	80
1 The Terror	70	90
1 The Devil's Bondwoman	40	20
1 Barriers of Society	40	20
1 Me and Me Pal	85	70
1 Mister Dolan of New York	65	70
2 The Girl and the Crisis	73	73
2 The Scarlet Crystal	60	78
1 The Girl Who Lost	50	70
1 The Gates of Doom	60	70
1 The Birth of Patriotism	65	70
1 The Hero of the Hour	55	70

GREATER VITAGRAPH

544 Vitagraph	68.1	66.2	76
12 Battle Cry of Peace	95	80	4
7 The Juggernaut	73	73	2
7 Island of Regeneration	85	81	4
1 Sporting Duchess	40	80
8 Sins of the Mothers	87	87	1
3 Crooky	70	60	1
1 Playing Dead	75	75
5 Dust of Egypt	67	66	2
2 The Rights of Men	74	85
3 Turn of the Road	82	78
8 The Cave Man	74	60
4 Heights of Hazard	73	44
2 A Nation's Peril	86	76
1 The Man's Making	60	78
8 Price of Folly	95	95	2
7 The Great Divide	80	71	2
1 Souls in Bondage	100	80	1
2 Thou Art the Man	72	87
8 Green Stockings	87	88	2
1 Milady's Slipper	90	90
8 Island of Surprise	87	85
8 Gods of Fate	62	62
1 What Happened to Father?	60	78
9 The Night Out	81	75	1
1 The Crown Prince's Double	75	60
2 The Writing on the Wall	70	40
4 Kennedy Square	88	60	1
8 For a Woman's Fair Name	80	85
5 Hunted Woman	74	54	1
4 Hero of Submarine D-2	74	71
5 Dollars and the Woman	75	56	1
1 Supreme Temptation	60	60
5 Two-Edged Sword	76	53
8 Vital Question	80	85
1 Flames of Johannis	40	40
7 Salvation Joan	78	59
10 God's Country and Woman	81	85	4
1 Love's Toll	60	50
9 The Law Decides	80	70	4
10 The Ne'er Do Well	91	93	7
4 Ordeal of Elizabeth	50	50
10 The Suspect	80	76	2
8 Lights of New York	70	78
7 The Destroyers	68	57	1
2 Redemption of Dave Darcey	80	80
4 Man Behind the Curtain	85	76
8 The Shop Girl	78	79	1
8 The Conflict	67	47
7 Fathers of Men	71	47
12 The Tarantula	78	72	3
15 The Daring of Diana	61	75
8 Hesper of the Mountains	57	64
11 The Light at Dusk	85	72	4
8 The Alibi	69	69
1 The Dawn of Freedom	0	50
4 Footlights of Fate	68	85
18 The Combat	79	81	1
5 The Kid	60	57
8 Phantom Fortunes	42	61
5 His Wife's Good Name	64	76
12 Through the Wall	78	63	1
14 The Chattel	72	83	3
8 Prince in a Pawnshop	64	67	1
8 The Blue Envelope Mystery	55	59
4 The Firm of Girdlestone	31	39
11 The Last Man	82	81	1
6 The Devil's Prize	49	62

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

WILLIAM F. ALDRICH
FEATURE PRODUCER
Screen Club, 117 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO

ALBERT CAPELLANI
PRODUCER

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

WILLIAM DESMOND
TRIANGLE PLAYS
Culver City, Cal.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

HOBART HENLEY
Producer of
"PARENTAGE"

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
PRODUCING FEATURES
Ivan Film Corp.

LLOYD INGRAHAM
PRODUCER

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

HARLEY KNOLES
FEATURES DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 D. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

JOSEPH LEVERING
DIRECTOR

O. A. C. LUND

ASHLEY MILLER
Director—Vitagraph Studios
Brooklyn

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE DIRECTOR
FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.

WEDGWOOD NOWELL
TRIANGLE
Friars Club, N. Y. C.

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITIGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

TOM TERRISS
PRODUCER
VITAGRAPH

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
PRODUCING FEATURES
VITIGRAPH

JAMES VINCENT
PRODUCER

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

BEN WILSON
DIRECTING AND STARRING
UNIVERSAL

CHESTER WITHEY
DIRECTOR

JAMES YOUNG

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Adress—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

In Form THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM

A MAGAZINE—In Fact A SERVICE

WID'S

INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS

Always Independent
Issued Every Thursday

VOL. III. THURSDAY, SEPT. 13, 1917. NO. 37

25 Cents a Copy
$10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

PAINFULLY CRUDE AND AMATEURISH, WITH AWFUL TITLES

Gertrude McCoy in

MADAME SHERRY

Authors Film Corp.—M. H. Hoffman—State Rights

DIRECTOR.....Ralph Dean
AUTHOR.....Otto Hauerbach
CAMERAMAN.....D. W. Goddett
AS A WHOLE.....Fearfully amateurish production that dragged painfully, tied together with very unfunny attempts at comedy subtitles
STORY.....Silly musical comedy plot made ten times more ridiculous by treatment for screen; was inexcusably bad
DIRECTION.....Painfully old-school, bad composition, poor treatment of situations and permitted awful acting; decidedly crude
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Fair straight stuff
LIGHTINGS.....Poor; no attempt for effects; just straight stuff
CAMERA WORK.....Old-school
STAR.....Amateurish
SUPPORT.....Awful
EXTERIORS.....Poorly handled
INTERIORS.....Setty
TIME.....Seventy minutes (5 parts)

I HAVE to sit through a lot of pretty punk stuff, but recently I have seen nothing that seemed more draggy, more amateurish and more unlike entertainment than this attempt to picturize what was a successful musical comedy.

The story of "Madame Sherry" was never much. It succeeded principally because of some catchy music. In transferring this to the screen, however, the story has been made even more impossible and ridiculous than it was on the speaking stage, until the result is so very bad that it is almost an insult to the average American audience.

To give you an idea as to what sort of a plot they have attempted to portray I can tell you that two characters—a man and a woman, who stand about six feet in their stocking feet and weigh about one hundred and sixty apiece—explain to a visiting uncle that they are the children of another couple who looked to be at least ten years younger than the giants who present themselves as the children. This might have been considered comedy in a Keystone slapstick if the giants had been dressed in kid clothes, but in such a production as this it becomes painful and ridiculous bunk.

Someone, in trying to rescue this from the junk pile, has written about 175 titles that are as near to being a criminal offense as anything I have ever read, providing whoever wrote them got money for doing so. The title writer evidently thought that he was being funny, but, of all the junk that was ever wished onto a poor, unsuspecting public, I think this is the limit!

In many places the title writer burst into fearful poetry. After the average fan struggles through about ten or fifteen of the titles in this, he will be ready to go home giving the manager who put on such junk a beautiful mental cussing.

There is a part of this story which is supposed to take place on a private yacht, and, in order to get these scenes without securing a yacht, the director decided to photograph them on an excursion steamboat tied up to a dock. Had he been very careful in doing this he might have gotten away with it, but the angles which he used were such that the fact that he was taking the scenes on such a boat became very evident, and certainly that fact isn't going to add anything to the general atmosphere of this offering.

All of the players were decidedly amateurish and very camera-conscious. There was not a personality in the lot.

Gertrude McCoy was in evidence more or less, but, to anyone who had never heard of her, she would make no more of an impression than any of the other amateurish players.

Others in the cast were Lucy Carter, Frank L. A. O'Connor, Jean Stuart, Alphie James, H. J. Quealy, Robert Homans, Alfred Deery and Jack Mundy.

The Box Office Angle.

I certainly would advise you to steer clear of this. The name "Madame Sherry" may pull you some business at the box office, but if you have any respect for the opinion of your patrons and hope to keep their good will you cannot afford to play this sort of junk. As bad as this production is from an acting viewpoint, it might have been sneaked by had the titles been properly written to make the action hold together somewhat, instead of ridiculing it from start to finish in an attempt to be funny.

I feel sure that most intelligent fans after seeing this will be sick, sore and disgusted. This will be all the more so if they come in expecting to see something worth while because of having heard of "Madame Sherry" as a success on the stage.

This is not even a good burlesque comedy, because the situations are so awful that they make you swear a bit mentally. I can't understand how anyone could have selected such a cast as appeared in this. If the grown-up couple were supposed to be presented as children of the other couple, they should have, in some degree at least, conformed to a proper size so as to make this just a wee bit reasonable.

Just stick a pin in this one and be sure that someone doesn't wish it onto you!

HAROLD LOCKWOOD

Yorke--Metro

BEST PICKFORD EVER; DELIGHTFUL FUN; TRULY ARTISTIC

Mary Pickford in

REBECCA OF SUNNYBROOK FARM

Pickford-Artcraft

DIRECTOR	Marshall A. Neilan
AUTHORS	Kate Douglas Wiggin and Charlotte Thompson
SCENARIO BY	Frances Marion
CAMERAMAN	Walter Stradling
AS A WHOLE	Best Pickford production ever made
STORY	Slender dramatic thread, but provided great characterizations and many delightful incidents
DIRECTION	Gave exquisitely beautiful atmosphere, registered wonderful human bits of business and kept distinctive tone to production throughout; exceptionally well done
PHOTOGRAPHY	Excellent, with exterior shots exceptional
LIGHTINGS	Generally excellent, with exquisitely beautiful exteriors
CAMERA WORK	Very fine
STAR	Truly delightful; best work in a long, long time
SUPPORT	Many great types and excellent kids perfectly handled
EXTERIORS	Exceptionally artistic; very carefully chosen for composition and lighting
INTERIORS	Very fine atmosphere, with distinctive detail
DETAIL	Scores of fine little touches
TIME	Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

IF anyone has been in doubt as to the possibility of Mary Pickford holding her position as one of the very few real stars, they need only see her work in this production to realize that all she needs is the proper vehicle and direction to remain at the top of the heap for qutie some time to come.

Certainly Producer Marshall Neilan is deserving of the greatest credit for having provided such an exquisitely artistic atmosphere in this, and Frances Marion is to be complimented for the scenario provided, since the story really depends upon the development of little incidents to make it effective. Analyzed as to basic plot thread, "Rebecca" has scant material, but there was plenty of opportunity for characterization and development of incidents, and this has been perfectly done by the director and scenarioist.

I cannot recall ever having seen in any one picture a greater number of beautiful shots, this being true not only of the occasional shot picked for beauty alone, but also for every little bit of film taken in an exterior. It is typical of the work of Producer Neilan that his composition is always excellent and his scenes taken at just the right time to get the proper lighting. This means painstaking, intelligent work and is surely commendable.

There was oodles of kid stuff in this, and certainly it was well handled. Little Mary looked as young as any of the kids, and the illusion was perfect, because you enjoy watching these youngsters and the star just as if they were a lot of wild Injuns such as might be found in most any New England town.

There were plenty of laughs, and Little Mary proved that she can do the Charlie Chaplin stuff pretty nearly as well as Charlie does it himself, by registering several falls that certainly were beauts. The comedy bits were so nicely handled as to get real laughs, which is conclusive proof of a knowledge of that very elusive element necessary to make bits of business on the screen ring true.

The kid circus scenes were a little bit elaborate, but still within the possibilities, and certainly they will gather many laughs from any audience. The stealing of the pie bit was delightful.

In addition to the comedy stuff there were a few bits of pathos that were nicely handled, the death of the aunt being beautifully timed.

The titles were well written and several of them registered laughs on their own account.

The entire cast was well chosen for types and every bit of business from first to last registered effectively.

The only bad spot in the entire production was the use of several very short flashes of fake lightning. This may get by with the average audience, but it seemed a shame to me to have this technical flivver in what was otherwise a truly exceptional production technically. The last lightning flash where the church tower was struck was very well done, and if this were left in without the others it would have been very effective, with no one able to determine whether it was real or not. The flashes which preceded, however, will be caught as "studio stuff" by any fan with a quick eye, this being particularly true in one place where the clouds were quite jumpy.

Eugene O'Brien as the hero had a "stick around for the finish" part.

In the supporting cast there appeared Helen Jerome Eddy, Marjorie Daw, Charlie Ogle, Jane Wolff, Josephine Crowell, Jack MacDonald, Emma Gerdes, Kate Toncray, Violet Wilkey, Mayme Kelso and Frank Turner.

The Box Office Angle.

The only thing I can tell you about is to go the limit.

You can promise that it is The Greatest Pickford Ever Made, and I would dwell particularly upon the fact that it is the most entertaining production in which she has ever appeared, because many may feel that "The Little American" was a great picture but not of the kind which they like.

Emphasize the fact that this is the first Pickford production directed by Marshall A. Neilan, and talk about the artistic beauty of the exterior scenes and the delightful treatment of the comedy situations.

If you will go after this hard enough you can offset the possible prejudice created by some of the recent Pickford releases.

QUICK ANNOUNCEMENTS FOR YOUR SCREEN

SLIDENE OUTFIT: all complete.....$1.00
6 bottles slide ink; 25 cover glasses; 6 special pens; 2 slide charts

Novelty Typewriter Slides.....$3.50 per 100
Handy Slide Holder and Clip FREE.

NOVELTY SLIDE CO., 115 East 23d St., New York.

CRANE WILBUR

ART DRAMAS PROGRAM

Eye of Envy — Blood of His Father
Unto the End — Devil McCare
Just Jim

Say you saw it in "WID'S."

MUCH ATMOSPHERE, DOG AND CLEVER TITLES PUT THIS OVER

June Caprice in

EVERY GIRL'S DREAM

Fox Film

DIRECTOR	Harry Millarde
AUTHOR	Adrian Johnson
CAMERAMAN	David Wills
AS A WHOLE	Atmosphere fantasy helped decidedly by fool poetry titles and clever dog
STORY	Ye Ancient Plot dressed up in costume
DIRECTION	Gave pleasing atmosphere with some beautiful shots, but treatment of situations—except dog stuff—rather ordinary
PHOTOGRAPHY	At times very beautiful, but frequently flat
LIGHTINGS	Some exterior shots exceptional, but other bits ordinary
CAMERA WORK	Generally very pleasing, except for poor grouping of characters
STAR	Pleasing—what little there was of her
SUPPORT	Dog was great
EXTERIORS	Some very pretty shots; atmosphere registered rather well
INTERIORS	Generally good
DETAIL	Several slips, but acceptable
TIME	Fifty-five minutes (5 parts)

WELL, at least when they take the old junk for stories these days some producers have come to a realization of the necessity of doing something to offset Ye Ancient Plot.

In this case the story had to do with the old guy who had a mortgage and wanted to marry the shero, with the other two favorite chestnuts of the hero and shero both being adopted children who on the finish developed into prince and princess.

To give this a possible chance of pleasing, they put it in a Dutch atmosphere with costumes, etc., and introduced a dog who proved to be the cleverest actor in the cast. Then, to make sure that no one would take this too seriously, a lot of weird poetry titles were written which made clear the fact that this was only sort of a fantasy presented for light entertainment purposes.

The result of the use of the atmosphere, the dog and the titles, was that the production will register rather satisfactorily with most audiences because it provides a few laughs and a few beautiful shots without requiring at any time that anyone take it seriously.

Miss Caprice was kept in the background rather decidedly, with favorable results, because when she did appear she looked rather pretty, and the effect of giving more prominence to the atmosphere, the dog and the titles than to the star was of decided assistance to her.

In the poetry subtitles they introduced a lot of stuff supposed to be speech titles by the dog, and these bits will register very generally. In one place they introduced some wild bears who chased the princess in the woods, but it so happened that the ropes attached to the collars of these animals were quite in evidence.

To the wise film fan it will appear that Mr. Fox decided to allow Caprice and her director to go in and shoot a story in a big set that was evidently built for something else, with the result that the story was cooked up over night.

The average fan will not understand this, however, and will undoubtedly be somewhat impressed by the many people in some scenes and the rather interesting atmosphere provided.

The stunts by the dog were easily the best thing in the film. These, combined with some very beautiful shots—particularly in the early exteriors—lifted the production out of the rut sufficiently to make it register as a pleasing bit of entertainment.

In support of Miss Caprice there appeared Harry Hilliard, Kittens Reichert, Margaret Fielding, Dan Mason and Marcia Harris.

The Box Office Angle.

If you will make it clear that this is a bit of light entertainment presented in an interesting atmosphere with a story that no one is expected to take seriously, then it will probably go over very satisfactorily.

I would suggest that you emphasize particularly the presence of the dog, talking a lot about the stunts of this very clever canine. The titles have given the dog particular prominence, and certainly whoever wrote the titles knew what needed to be done.

I can't feel that June Caprice is any box office asset, and the promise of a costume production will not attract much business. Therefore, I would suggest that you concentrate heavily on the dog for this, promising that the production is light entertainment that is sufficiently pleasing to justify any fan's attendance.

Don't go too strong on it, and of course if you can get something that is really worth while, get it—although, figured as program releases run, I believe that this has been lifted enough by the dog, the atmosphere and the titles to carry it over.

Exhibitors Everywhere

Are Putting An Added Punch
To Their Feature Productions
with

BEYNON'S ORCHESTRAL SETTINGS

Are You?

No Matter What Size Orchestra
You Have It Will Pay You to Write

GEORGE W. BEYNON

505 Fifth Ave., New York City.

CANADIAN MOVING PICTURE DIGEST

An Exclusive Photoplay Trade Journal.
Published Weekly.

100% Circulation. Orpheum Theatre Bldg.
Montreal, P. Q.

LIGHTINGS, CLOSE-UPS AND TREATMENT LIFT ORDINARY PLOT

Marian Swayne in

THE LITTLE SAMARITAN

Erbograph—Art Dramas

DIRECTOR.....Joseph Levering
AUTHOR.....Rev. Clarence J. Harris
CAMERAMAN.....James Robertson
AS A WHOLE.....Lightings, types and treatment lifted slender story
STORY.....Rather obvious smalltown plot with falsely implicated innocent shero
DIRECTION.....Artistic lighting and intelligent use of closeups with some good types made this human, with favorable results
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good
LIGHTINGS.....Some very artistic, although some ordinary
CAMERA WORK.....Good; some pleasing closeups
STAR.....Pretty in most lightings; generally pleasing
SUPPORT.....Old coon great; other types good and poor; girl "extras" camera-conscious EXTERIORS.....Good smalltown atmosphere; not particularly artistic
INTERIORS.....Acceptable
DETAIL.....Satisfactory
TIME.....Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

INTELLIGENT treatment of certain situations in this rather slender story, combined with some rather effective lightings and good closeups, lifted this out of the ordinary rut and marked it as a rather pleasing bit of entertainment.

Miss Swayne was photographed to advantage. Most of her scenes and some of her closeups were decidedly beautiful. Several of the types were very well chosen, this being particularly true of the funny old coon, played by Sam Robinson, who had rather a prominent part in the story.

The plot was one of those situations where the little heroine was always trying to help everybody, with the situation arising where she was suspected of having stolen some money from the church funds, to which she had access. The treatment of this situation, however made it comparatively evident that she wasn't guilty and so the plot, as such, did very little to help this.

There were a number of little incidents—such as the bit where the minister tried to ride a bicycle, with the result that he was started downhill unexpectedly—that will gather laughs, although the picnic scenes were given too much attention, since the crowd of "extra" girls used were very camera-conscious. They were rushed back and forth in a rather mechanical manner which detracted decidedly from the effect of this sequence.

Others who appeared were Lucille Dorrington, Bernard Niemeyer, Carl Grau, Mrs. Allen Walker, Charles MacDonald and Olive Corbett.

The Box Office Angle.

This production stands a little above the average program release because there are certain incidents which get over beautifully. The human touch is in evidence quite often and several of the characters were truly funny. The intelligent use of closeups gave an intimacy to many of the situations which made them quite effective.

Don't figure this as a production worthy of making a lot of fuss about, because it has no distinctive merit capable of elevating it into the special class. However you can figure that it is a good program offering, such as may be played anywhere with safety. The story is slender, but the treatment makes it sufficiently pleasing to assure you that it will get over.

In advertising this you might concentrate on the thought—"Do you perform a kindness for your neighbor whenever possible? Think it over and see 'The Little Samaritan.'"

SKIMPY PLOT PROVIDES CHANCE FOR STAR TO VAMP SOME

Louise Glaum in

IDOLATERS

Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Walter Edwards
AUTHOR.....Monte M. Katterjohn
SCENARIO BY.....John Lynch
CAMERAMAN.....Chester Lyons
AS A WHOLE.....Obvious plot designed to present Louise Glaum as gown-wearing vamp
STORY.....Old situations of theatrical folk and play, last act of which becomes part of their life on finish
DIRECTION.....Gave distinctive atmosphere and showed Miss Glaum as SOME vamp, but lacked convincing dramatic moments to make action truly impressive
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent
LIGHTINGS.....Some very effective; generally artistic
CAMERA WORK.....Very good
STAR.....SOME vamp—in SOME clothes!
SUPPORT.....Dorcas Matthews excellent; others good
EXTERIORS.....Very few, but satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Some very effective sets
DETAIL.....Good
TIME.....Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

LOUISE GLAUM has a decided following, and, because of that, I believe you can figure this production as one which will register very satisfactorily despite the fact that the story is rather weak and obvious.

It is one of those plots which moves along for two or three reels without getting anywhere in particular, only to develop into the good old situation where an act from a play in which some of the characters figure parallels the real life of these characters. This has been done very frequently with some changes. In this instance the situation is that, in the play, the woman commits murder and is then killed by her lover, so that the police could not arrest her, this being carried out at the end of the story by Miss Glaum being killed by her former servant when the police came to arrest her for having murdered the young playwright whom she had ruined after taking him away from his wife.

The greater part of this was devoted to presenting Miss Glaum in many clinging costumes, registering her as a vamp living in a very vampish apartment.

The general atmosphere of the first few reels showing Miss Glaum in her apartment winning the young playwright away from his wife was quite artistic and rather distinctive. This gives the production enough class to make it carry as a worth-while film.

Dorcas Matthews, in the part of the wife of the playwright, was very well chosen as a contrast to Miss Glaum, and her work was decidedly pleasing, because she played with an impressive poise and repose.

The other characters were quite satisfactory, although none of them were exceptional personalities.

There were several bits of melo in the story, but none of these situations were particularly effective as drama, and the plot never at any time became strong enough to be considered big.

They used a dummy electric sign against a back drop which would have been much improved had they omitted the back drop effect and used only the sign.

At the finish of this Miss Glaum was shown in the slums, sort of as a lesson to all who consider the life of the vamp attractive. Certainly no one, if they looked her over at the end of this, would ever figure that they should become a vamp if that was to be the final result.

In the supporting cast were George Webb, Lee Hill, Hugo Koch and T. S. Hill.

The Box Office Angle.

I believe that Louise Glaum has a big enough following at the present time to make it safe for you to play this and get it by on her personality alone. I would suggest that you confine all of your advertising to talking about her and the fact that she wears some weird, vampish costumes while playing the temptress.

The production is not nearly so strong as many in which she has appeared because the plot isn't unusual, but her work is very good and I believe that most of the fans who like her will consider this a very acceptable offering.

In advertising this you might say: "Why do some people worship others as they would idols? Think it over and see Louise Glaum in IDOLATERS."

BURLESQUE BARNSTORMERS AND STAR HELPED POOR PLOT

Bessie Love in

PERSNICKETTY POLLY ANN

Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Charles Miller
AUTHOR.....R. Cecil Smith
SCENARIO BY.....J. G. Hawks
CAMERAMAN.....Henry Bredesen
AS A WHOLE.....Registered some laughs, but general atmosphere ordinary, with entire offering missing human note most of time
STORY.....Routine obvious, ancient situations; was only movie caliber
DIRECTION.....Atmosphere was ordinary, characterizations unconvincing and overdrawn
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Lacked artistry; generally ordinary straight stuff
LIGHTINGS.....Not distinctive; generally too uniform
CAMERA WORK.....Fair
STAR.....Appealing personality, but handicapped by overdrawn characterizations and unconvincing atmosphere
SUPPORT.....Failed to impress—although hero and uncle rather pleasing
EXTERIORS.....Acceptable; should have been beautiful
INTERIORS.....Not artistic or distinctive
DETAIL.....Acceptable, although overdrawn at times
TIME.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

BESSIE LOVE has an appealing personality, but she has been handicapped in a great many productions by an atmosphere which has not only been inartistic, but failed to impress or convince.

In this production we find a great many overdrawn characterizations, with atmosphere details which also fail to ring true, the net result being that the offering misses fire most of the time.

The story is one of those smalltown things with a convenient orphan adopted by the hard guy who ran the village tavern. Hero is a disowned nephew who came to the town to teach.

A barnstorming theatrical troupe provided the customary burlesque comedy, trying to present "Richard III," with the expected situation of the willunous actor who tempted Bessie to run away with him.

After hero had saved her from this disastrous career, the rest of the production was devoted to his redemption from the ruinous habit of drink, with the plot developing the fact that Miss Love was also a distant relative of the uncle who had ordered his nephew out of the house.

Of course when Bessie landed in uncle's home, she managed a reconciliation between "unk" and "nef," and so shero and hero got together on the finish.

As routine movie productions go, this may be considered acceptable becausee the theatrical burlesque stuff pulls a few laughs. Miss Love manages to save a number of scenes by her charactrization.

If your fans expect you to give them productions which ring true, and situations that seem human, then this will not deliver. If they allow you to get by with the routine stuff part of the time, then you can sneak this one over because of Bessie Love's presence.

The chief weakness of this offering is in the convenient, obvious story, which presents very ancient situations in a very ordinary manner.

In the cast were John P. Lockney, Walt Whitman, Rowland Lee, William Ellingford, Alfred Hollingsworth, Darrel Foss, Josephine Headley.

The Box Office Angle.

There is certainly nothing particularly worth while about this, because the weakness of the story holds it down at all times.

If Miss Love is a favorite in your community you can probably take a chance on getting it over, because she has a few scenes that register satisfactorily. The smalltown comedy having to do with the presentation of the Shakesperean classic will register some laughs, but I am inclined to believe that the average audience will consider the rest of the production very, very weak.

There is no angle about the plot which justifies unusual advertising. It is just a routine movie production of a very weak story.

HEART STIRRING HAND COLORED PATRIOTIC SLIDES 25c. Each

71. If It's Worth Living Under, It's Worth Fighting For.
54. Americans Must Protect America.
95. We Are With You, Mr. President. One Hundred Million Strong.
53. Your Country Needs You.
28. American Flag.
95. President Wilson & Flag.
60. Geo. Washington.
45. The Birth of the American Flag.
70. Abraham Lincoln.
76. Spirit of '76—Reflects in 1917.
27. If It's Good Enough to Live Under, It's Worth Fighting for.
87. Pledge Allegiance.
68. Star Spangled Banner.
42. My Country 'Tis of Thee (Flag).

EXCELSIOR ILLUSTRATING CO., 219 Sixth Ave. New York City

PAINFULLY CONVENIENT MELLER BADLY ACTED IN PRETTY SNOW SCENES

Lou-Tellegen and Mary Fuller in

THE LONG TRAIL

Famous Players—Paramount

DIRECTOR ..... Howell Hansell
AUTHOR ..... Eve Unsell
CAMERAMAN ..... Lewis W. Physioc
AS A WHOLE ..... Fearfully acted unconvincing melo
STORY ..... Wife-in-name-only-whose-brother-ruined-hubby's-sister mix-up DIRECTION ..... Registered some good snow stuff and many light effects which generally were bad on faces, and permitted awful acting
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Varied from fine to poor
LIGHTINGS ..... Many attempts for effects; sometimes fine for sets but generally poor for faces CAMERA WORK ..... Varied very decidedly
STARS ..... Very camera-conscious and actory
SUPPORT ..... Unimpressive
EXTERIORS ..... Some good snow shots
INTERIORS ..... Acceptable
DETAIL ..... Acceptable, but sub-titles very meller
TIME ..... Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

EXCEPT for the fact that there are a few good snow scenes in this, there is nothing about it to justify it ever having been released.

The plot of this is a combination of old situations, with some convenient twists which are rather painful, and the players have registered the big scenes with acting that fails utterly to convince or impress.

Through the good old situations of the storm that forced the girl to take refuge in the guide's hut, we find the guy whom Miss Fuller was supposed to marry, refusing to have her. Then the hero guide guy, Lou-Tellegen, offered her his name.

She said that she would be his wife in name only, and the plot dragged along through much footage until we found that Mr. Tellegen's sister had been wronged, and learned on the finish that Miss Fuller's brother was the guilty gink.

She pleaded with Tellegen to forgive her brother, informing him that she had learned to love him because he was such a grand gazook.

Upon any and all occasions Mr. Tellegen and Miss Fuller acted all over the place, with the other characters doing their best to keep up with the stars.

Some of the snow scenes were rather good, but the plot lacked the power of conviction, and, considered as a whole, I'd say that most any audience will think it a very ordinary, poorly-played meller.

The titles were very badly written, being as melodramatic and as much along the lines of the old ten-twent'-thirt' as the acting of the stars.

The Box Office Angle

Lou-Tellegen has never, since his first picture or two, registered very well, and the fact that he is Geraldine Farrar's husband has lost most of its novelty. Mary Fuller has slipped by the wayside in recent years, so that I can't see where this has much of a box office draft.

Figured as a production, I don't believe it will please, because it is ordinary meller badly acted and decidedly lacking in the necessary human elements to make such a drama pleasing.

My advice would be to dodge it.

If, for any reason, it is necessary to play it, I would sneak it by very softly.

UNIMPRESSIVE DRAGGY MENTAL STRUGGLE DRAMA

Ethel Barrymore in

THE LIFTED VEIL

Rolfe—Metro

DIRECTOR ..... George D. Baker
AUTHOR ..... Basil King
SCENARIO BY ..... Albert Shelby Le Vino
CAMERAMAN ..... Joseph Schelderfer
AS A WHOLE ..... Rather laborious study in mental struggles that fail to become impressive or dramatic STORY ..... Had good situations for drama, but seriously lacking in sympathetic characters
DIRECTION ..... Put over situations in routine manner without attempt for unusual effects or dramatic fireworks beyond the limitations of the star
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Acceptable straight stuff frequently flat; never particularly artistic LIGHTINGS ..... Generally uniform; not distinctive CAMERA WORK ..... Acceptable; too many long shots from same angle
STAR ..... Worked slowly and quietly failing to convince or stir you SUPPORT ..... Acceptable; lacked impressive personalities
EXTERIORS ..... Very few and ordinary
INTERIORS ..... Acceptable; some had much gilt furniture; frequently same angle used too often DETAIL ..... Acceptable; although too much at times
TIME ..... Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

THE fact that Ethel Barrymore is in this will get it by with many, because the story is one of those "deep" things that has to do with the psychology of the mental struggles between three people who tried to figure out whether they were big enough to forgive one another for things that had happened.

The production is fearfully slow, and there was nothing distinctive in the way of effects or particularly dramatic scenes, with the result that at times it became very draggy.

The fact, however, that the plot was centered upon the Eternal Magdalen situation, with Miss Barrymore as a woman who had erred, trying to decide whether she was good enough to marry a man who had loved her, with this man denouncing her and afterwards forgiving her while she herself almost married a minister who to her seemed to be ideally generous—kept this from slipping too far; because, while many may not know what it's all about, they will say that it must be good because Miss Barrymore looks so pathetic.

The story provides a number of "thought" situations, but, to my mind, it is decidedly weak in one very important essential. The characters fail to appeal from the sympathy angle because the love interest is never effectively developed. After the man who wanted to marry Miss Barrymore in the first place has bawled her out so beautifully, any human being will say that she never should marry him. When she suddenly does so and goes away with him to France after having pulled the W. K. flop at the altar when about to marry the minister, many will say that it will serve her right if she gets shot on the battlefield.

In the films Miss Barrymore has proved that she has a very limited range of expression. She gets through this without registering many variations.

William B. Davidson as the gink who wanted to marry her until he "suspicioned" something and then afterwards came around begging forgiveness, was lacking in power and personality and wore a bum mustache and goatee which certainly didn't improve his appearance any.

Frank Gilmore, playing the part of the minister, was satisfactory, although he failed to make this part as big as it might have been.

The tempo was made to seem even slower by the repeated use of the same angle in interior sets and by the use of too many dissolves registering what the characters were thinking about. At times closeups would have helped decidedly where not in evidence.

In the cast were Robert Weller, Ilean Hume, Maud Hill, Geo. Stevenson and Richard Brooke.

The Box Office Angle.

There is nothing really bad about this, except the fact that it is very slow, and consequently I believe that you can get it by most anywhere without serious complaint.

If you are trying to do big things and please your audiences particularly, hunt up something that is more entertaining. But, if it is for any reason necessary to play this production, I believe you can get it by safely if you will emphasize the fact that "The Lifted Veil" is a very well-known story.

Ethel Barrymore has a lot of people buffaloed, and so she gets by in the movies doing things which an unknown actress couldn't hold a job on for a week. This isn't as bad as some of the things in which she has appeared for Metro, since there is an underlying theme here of considerable strength.

Just make up your mind not to be very enthusiastic in pressing this beforehand, because if you go too strong on that angle your fans are going to be sadly disappointed.

STARTED WITH FINE CHARACTERIZATIONS; ENDED AS CHEAP MELO

Antonio Moreno and Helene Chadwick in

THE ANGEL FACTORY

Astra—Pathe

DIRECTOR	Lawrence McGill
AUTHOR	Lucien Hubbard
SCENARIO BY	Will M. Ritchey
CAMERAMAN	Harry Woods
AS A WHOLE	Movie melo with good and very bad spots
STORY	Had good characterization bits and crude meller situations
DIRECTION	Treated some incidents splendidly and others very poorly
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied from excellent to poor
LIGHTINGS	Many excellent effects and some poor bits; played for turning light on and off in room too much
CAMERA WORK	Varied decidedly from fine to poor
STARS	Pleasing personalities
SUPPORT	Gangster excellent; others satisfactory
EXTERIORS	Satisfactory; not artistic
INTERIORS	Some very good; others ordinary
DETAIL	Generally good, but society shots poor
TIME	Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

STARTING off with what promised to be rather an interesting story having to do with an "angel factory" where Mr. Moreno as a wealthy young philanthropist was conducting an establishment wherein he was educating children from the slums to do useful things, this worked into melodramatic situations which failed to be effective, because the atmosphere was switched from very effective lightings to very ordinary sets too frequently.

In stories like this the production gets its atmosphere standard by the general tone of things, and we had several scenes in the latter part of this which were supposed to be shots of a society event, which were so bad that they completely offset the favorable impression made by a number of very good light effects used in other scenes.

Tony Moreno is a very likeable hero, and his work in this was decidedly pleasing. Helene Chadwick is a promising ingenue, and Armand Cortez, as the gangster, put over a number of exceptionally good little touches, with the result that the first few reels where these three had the burden of the work were very promising.

After that they got to the melodramatic stuff showing a conflict between the two men for the girl, and the incidents became rather meller, and so lost their convincing power.

When they pulled the good old stuff about the befriended sailor who did the struggle over whether or not he should drink some whisky, the film began to slip, and from that time on it slumped badly.

Had the general atmosphere been as good as some of the light effects, this would have been very effective.

I want to commend particularly the little touches registered by Armand Cortez, as the gangster. He landed a number of good laughs by little bits of business which were very evidently put in by himself. He has done this sort of character in several productions very successfully.

Others who appeared were Margaret Greene, Suzanne Willa and Francis X. Conlan.

The Box Office Angle.

As a program production this will undoubtedly prove satisfactory despite the fact that it isn't distinctive as to general atmosphere and becomes rather melo in the final situations. Tony Moreno and Helene Chadwick are both pleasing, and their work will interest most fans sufficiently to make them decide that this is a satisfactory release.

"The Angel Factory" seems to me to be a good name, particularly when you can refer to it as a school for the development of the little rough diamonds of the slums.

In advertising I would talk about the presence of Mr. Moreno and Miss Chadwick first, and then say that this story has to do with a school in the slums where prospective gangsters and pickpockets are developed into angels.

The plot of this was one of those mechanical meller-drammers that is comparatively obvious, there being a rather obvious mystery developed through the presence of a character who is carried along through much footage for the sole purpose of confessing at the end that he was the man who fired the fatal shot.

ERNEST STERN, Inc.
THE TITLE MAN
Specializes in
MOTION PICTURE TITLES
OF THE HIGHEST GRADE
729 Seventh Ave., New York - - Phone Bryant 8973

WILL GET OVER AS COMEDY, BUT MISSED BIG OPPORTUNITIES

Jack Pickford and Louise Huff in

THE VARMINT

Lasky—Paramount

DIRECTOR.....William Desmond Taylor
AUTHOR.....Owen Johnson
SCENARIO BY.....Gardner Hunting
CAMERAMAN.....Homer Scott
AS A WHOLE.....Had good atmosphere and titles, but failed to get human characterizations and little intimate touches that would have made this wonderful
STORY.....Prep school boy stuff with wonderful possibilities
DIRECTION.....Missed many big opportunities by playing broadly with action, rather than deftly with intimate bits that could have been made very human
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent
LIGHTINGS.....Some very fine; generally good
CAMERA WORK.....Good; not enough closeups
STARS.....Very pleasing, but could have been much better with different treatment
SUPPORT.....Too many effeminate boys; Theodore Roberts excellent
EXTERIORS.....Very good
INTERIORS.....Good; some quite effective
DETAIL.....Missed human touches
TIME.....Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

THIS will probably be accepted as a good offering, but certainly the producer missed opportunities here in a pathetic manner.

The stories from which this was adapted offered an exceptional amount of material for little intimate human touches that could have been made very, very effective had they been properly treated. The film, as it stands, runs through a certain amount of action with a few good bits, but it misses about 80 per cent. of the opportunities that the story afforded. More closeups and more attention given to characterization and little touches would have made this one of the big pictures of the year.

As presently constituted, the work of Jack Pickford and Theodore Roberts carries the burden, and these two managed to get over enough good stuff to pull the picture by.

The supporting cast of boys was very weak, because they acted all the time and some of them were very objectionably effeminate.

Louise Huff was pleasing, but was not given sufficient opportunity. There were several crude spots in some of the scenes between Miss Huff and Mr. Pickford, one of the worst of these being where she awkwardly fell over him as he was stretched out on the campus.

In the football scenes there was little or no detail, and this generally was the fault in the treatment of the entire production. More good closeups and more effective types would have elevated many of the bits from nothing into very effective light-comedy.

The atmosphere for the most part was very pleasing, and the titles were very good.

The cast included Henry Malvern, Ben Suslow, Maurice Kessell, Miriam Comer, Ed Sedgwick, Maxfield Stanley and Milton Schumann.

The Box Office Angle.

Had this been more subtle, with more human touches, it would have been wonderful. As it stands it is good enough to get over with the average audience, principally because most everyone has heard of these "Saturday Evening Post" stories if they have not read them.

I believe you can feel fairly safe in playing it providing you put enough emphasis on the story and refer to Jack Pickford as an ideal selection for the part of the Varmint. Jack has developed very nicely in the last year, and today has quite a following. Miss Huff is satisfactory as a pretty little ingenue, so far as the average fan is concerned.

I would be careful in not promising too much about the merits of the production, depending principally upon the prestige that the stories have to get you some business. It is regrettable that this story wasn't given more human treatment.

TIRESOME JUMPY MIXTURE OF ROMANCE AND FORCED COMEDY

Mary Anderson and Alfred Vosburgh in

THE DIVORCEE

Vitagraph

DIRECTOR.....William Wolbert
AUTHOR.....Rufus Steele
CAMERAMAN.....Reginald E. Lyons
AS A WHOLE.....Jumpy mixture of society comedy and Western highwayman romance
STORY.....Wandered badly from one sequence to another without intelligent and coherent continuity
DIRECTION.....Registered some good individual scenes, but failed to tie production together intelligently
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good; a few beautiful shots
LIGHTINGS.....One or two beautiful bits, but varied generally
CAMERA WORK.....Varied from fine to fair
STARS.....She marred impression by forced attempt to be cute; he satisfactory as movie hero
SUPPORT.....Acceptable
EXTERIORS.....A few beautiful shots; generally acceptable
INTERIORS.....Acceptable; not distinctive
DETAIL.....Titles bad and continuity very jumpy
TIME.....Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

THE construction of this was so bad that it seemed most of the time as if two distinct stories had been made and then matched together. This of course was not true, since there was a certain correlation between the scenes, but the two main sequences ran along without anything in particular to tie them together, and at times the cutting back and forth was very annoying and confusing.

Miss Anderson is rather a pretty girl when properly photographed, but she spoiled the impression to be made in this by a forced attempt at being cute. She wanted to jump up and down all the time, which is ruinous for any but a very few of our stars.

It seemed as if someone had attempted to doctor this with a lot of subtitles, and certainly the doctoring wasn't a good job. The titles were very bad in most cases and at no time did they lift the offering.

Alfred Vosburgh as the hero was acceptable, but failed to lift his part out of the accepted routine movie characterization.

The plot of this had to do with a young woman in Reno who wanted to have a little adventure, with the result that she went to a lawyer and asked for a "divorce" when she wasn't even married. This gave her an entree into the little club of women seeking divorces and there were many nonsensical scenes which were supposed to be funny where these women tried to question her about her "troubles with her husband."

Entirely separate and distinct from this sequence was a little romance between Miss Anderson and Mr. Vosburgh, with Mr. Vosburgh playing the part of a minister who rode around out in the woods in cowboy outfit because he had always wanted to do it.

Of course, there was a real highwayman who was holding up people, with the result that the shero suspected her minister lover of being this guy. They finally caught the real man, and everybody was happy.

There was one long shot of a winding mountain road shown in the distance running along a mountainside that was very pretty, indeed. It was the best thing in the film.

The Box Office Angle.

This production was seriously handicapped by the story construction. The Reno divorce stuff seemed to have nothing to do with the little romance between Miss Anderson and the minister cowboy. The titles, instead of helping the production, mixed it up even more, and consequently I am afraid that the average fan will consider this pretty ordinary junk.

If Miss Anderson has established any following in your community, you may be able to get this by. Personally, the story mixup sinks it, so far as I am concerned.

There was nothing unusual about any of the situations, and the plot is comparatively obvious when it isn't ridiculous. I'd suggest that you pass it by if there is a possibility of getting something with more sense to it.

IMAGINARY INVASION MELO WITH USUAL SITUATIONS

Florence La Badie in

WAR AND THE WOMAN

Thanhouser—Pathe

DIRECTOR	Ernest C. Warde
AUTHOR	Philip Lonergan
CAMERAMAN	William M. Zollinger
AS A WHOLE	Unconvincing, unimpressive meller of imaginary invasion
STORY	Jumpy plot similar in basic idea to "Battle Cry of Peace" and other invasion stories
DIRECTION	Provided action and routine movie treatment of situations, but failed to make incidents impress
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally straight stuff; not artistic
LIGHTINGS	A few good; generally too uniform
CAMERA WORK	Ordinary; not artistic or distinctive
STAR	Pleasing and tried hard
SUPPORT	Routine movie characters
EXTERIORS	Satisfactory; nothing unusual
INTERIORS	Good, but not distinctive
DETAIL	Impersonation of Pres. Wilson bad
TIME	Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

WE have had a number of plots registering what might happen if the Germans or some other nation invaded our shores, and somehow it seems that the most important thing that would result from such a catastrophe would be that the general would pick out some heroine's home for division headquarters and hold some very ruff parties for a day or two before being dislodged by Uncle Sam and driven back to their own land.

I have seen a number of productions supposed to depict this imaginary invasion stuff, and in every one of them that division headquarters in the shero's home was the only thing registered.

In this particular offering the enemy arrived in our land—all of a sudden like—as a result of one title, and they were finally driven out completely in another title towards the end.

Much footage was devoted to the ruff entertainments, and, of course, the shero had to suffer various indignities before she planted some dynamite and blew up the whole gang, just before she escaped with hero.

Personally, I can't feel that anyone will consider this entertainment. It never impresses or registers anything in particular, and, as melodrama, is rather too imaginary a proposition to get over.

For your fans who accept action as it comes, this may do to pass an hour with, but certainly I believe they would be much more pleased with some human stories that really seem like real life.

In the first part of this they pulled an impersonation of President Wilson, which was not necessary from any angle and certainly seems to me to be very bad taste at this time. I suppose someone had told the actor who played this part that he looked like the President, and, as a consequence, they wished this incident into the plot.

The general treatment of the situations in this was very much a la Movie, although occasionally we had a bit that registered right well. The best twist in the entire production was the bit where the gardener, who had been planted as a half-wit, proved to be a German spy.

In the cast were Tom Brooke, Grace Henderson, Arthur Bower, Wayne Arey and Ernest C. Warde.

The Box Office Angle.

Since at the first part of this the Secret Service of the United States was not shown in a very favorable light, and later on the invading enemy landed in this country rather easily, without any explanation as to why, it would seem to me that this is not an exceptionally well written plot for the present moment. The treatment makes it just an ordinary movie, and, although there are one or two patriotic speeches by the heroine, it never at any time becomes a production worthy of any serious consideration on the part of intelligent fans.

As a program release, it will sneak by. I wouldn't make much fuss about it, and certainly I would not be misled into billing it as "what might happen if the Germans invaded this country." After such heralding it would seem pretty punk and rather tame.

WELL HANDLED MELO EFFECTIVELY PLAYED AND TREATED

Gail Kane in

A SOUL IN PAWN

American—Mutual

DIRECTOR	Henry King
AUTHOR	Julius Grinnell Furthmann
CAMERAMAN	J. Seitz
LIGHT EFFECTS BY	A. S. Winterhode
AS A WHOLE	Spy melodrama well played in distinctive atmosphere
STORY	Action situations with nice element of suspense very well developed
DIRECTION	Gave classy atmosphere and lightings, and made situations effective
PHOTOGRAPHY	Some exceptionally pleasing; generally good
LIGHTINGS	Many very effective and artistic; some rather ordinary
CAMERA WORK	Generally good
STAR	Decidedly pleasing; looked good and played forcefully
SUPPORT	Hero excellent; others very good
EXTERIORS	Some very good shots; generally satisfactory
INTERIORS	Some impressive sets; generally pleasing
DETAIL	Good
TIME	Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

THE difficult task of making a German spy a sympathy character was put over in this, and at the same time Gail Kane was presented in the best production she has ever had on the screen. She was given an opportunity to wear some good-looking gowns in an atmosphere that was distinctive because of good sets and effective lightings, and the situations were handled with a quiet dramatic balance that gave strength where needed.

A nice element of suspense was developed in the story construction, and, considered as a whole, this must be marked as a very pleasing melo, well played by personalities that stand out in an atmosphere that gives it a brand of class.

The plot starts with the killing of Miss Kane's husband, with her oath to find the murderer at any cost. She accepted a position in the secret service of a foreign nation for the purpose of getting this information, and found herself under the leadership of the man who had killed her husband because the husband had betrayed his sister.

The scene of the story is in France, and when war was declared the leader of the German secret service was called to his country's colors. Later, when he found that Miss Kane was in danger, he returned to Paris and rescued her, despite the fact that every effort was being made to capture him by the authorities who had learned of his presence in the city.

The treatment of these final scenes was very effective, and I don't remember of any recent melodrama of this character which has been handled any better.

At the end we found the hero giving up his fight for the Fatherland, to sail away with his bride who forgave him when she learned why he had killed her husband after she had led him into a trap when told that he was the man she had sought for so long.

Miss Kane was very beautiful in many of her scenes and played in the big dramatic moments with a power that made them ring true.

The part of the juvenile hero was played commendably, with a poise and repose that gave an effective suggestion of strength to all that he did, making his characterization stand out.

The supporting cast was quite satisfactory.

The Box Office Angle.

I believe you can safely bill this as the best production Gail Kane has ever had. You can call it an exceptionally interesting story of diplomatic intrigue in Paris just before the great World War.

You might say: "Supposing you found that the man you had sworn to kill was the man whom you had learned to love—what would you do? See Gail Kane in 'A Soul in Pawn.'"

STAR AND TREATMENT LIFTED OBVIOUS CONVENIENT SITUATIONS

William Desmond in

FLYING COLORS

Triangle

DIRECTOR	Frank Borzage
AUTHOR	R. Cecil Smith
SCCENARIO BY	John Lynch
AS A WHOLE	Pleasing little melodrama, convenient, but registered interesting action
STORY	Seemed obvious and mechanical, but acceptable as action melo
DIRECTION	Gave rather pleasing atmosphere and kept action interesting
PHOTOGRAPHY	Occasionally very artistic; generally good
LIGHTINGS	A few beautiful; generally pleasing
CAMERA WORK	Good
STAR	Rather pleasing as athletic detective
SUPPORT	Good; not exceptional
EXTERIORS	A few very beautiful; generally satisfactory
INTERIORS	Satisfactory
DETAIL	Convenient, but acceptable
TIME	Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

THE story of this was one of those convenient and comparatively obvious detective mysteries which serve only as a basis upon which to build some interesting action by intelligent treatment of situations.

William Desmond has established himself in a rather satisfactory manner doing this sort of hero characterization, and his work in this was good enough to carry the production along as a satisfactory program release.

Mr. Desmond was introduced as a Yale athlete unable to make good in the business world, who, at the suggestion of a friend, decided to become a detective.

Immediately (and very conveniently) an old friend of the family dropped into the office, and the result was that Desmond became this man's guest at a house party, for the purpose of discovering who was responsible for many thefts.

Just before leaving the office Desmond had conveniently noticed a photograph of the willum who was operating at the house party, so that the audience knows immediately just what is going to happen.

The only thing which saves this production is the fact that the situations covering the clashes between Desmond and the willun have been rather well treated, with the result that the action is comparatively interesting.

Desmond, of course, fell in love with the wife's sister, which kept him from immediately exposing the willun's flirtation with his host's wife.

There were several tangles before we got to the finish, where our hero captured the willun as he was about to escape with the jewels.

Mr. Desmond was presented as a pole-vaulter, in order that on the finish he could take a clothes prop and do a wild leap or vault through a window, landing on top of the willun's henchman, who was standing beside the door ready to cover him with a gun.

Laura Sears and Golda Madien, as the wife and sister, were rather pleasing, although their personalities didn't stand out strikingly.

J. Barney Sherry, as the absent-minded husband, was quite satisfactory; and Jack Livingston registered the willun characterization in a manner "sleek" enough. The remaining cast included John P. Lockney, Bert Offerd, Ray Jackson, Mary MacIvor and Geo. J. W. Chase.

The Box Office Angle.

Most of your fans will pick at this immediately because of the painfully convenient and obvious plot construction. I believe, however, that the production has been well enough done to make it satisfactory to the fan who accepts the films as they come, without worrying too much about the technical details., There is not enough merit to the offering to justify your considering it as anything except an average program offering.

If William Desmond has established himself as a favorite with your fans, his personality may carry this over. The story weaknesses, however, keep it from registering as well as many of the things in which he has appeared recently.

OLD IDEA MADE DELIGHTFUL BY TREATMENT AND PLAYERS

Mary Miles Minter in

CHARITY CASTLE

American—Mutual

DIRECTOR	Lloyd Ingraham
AS A WHOLE	Started quietly and finished big; very human situations nicely handled
STORY	Quaint touch to ingenue-reforming-grouch situation
DIRECTION	Very pleasing—although more closeups would have helped decidedly
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally satisfactory, with some very effective lightings
LIGHTINGS	Excellent at times; generally good
CAMERA WORK	Good; more closeups would have helped
STAR	Very pleasing; played very humanly
SUPPORT	Some wonderful types; all played humanly
EXTERIORS	Not exceptional but rather well chosen
INTERIORS	Very good
DETAIL	Some good little touches
TIME	Seventy minutes (5 parts)

ALTHOUGH this started rather quietly, it was interesting from the first and the situations which developed near the end were so delightful that I believe it will register as the best Mary Miles Minter production ever made.

Little Miss Minter is presented as a child in knee dresses, and she certainly plays and looks the part.

They took quite a bit of footage to get the characters properly planted before they led up to the situation where we found Miss Minter establishing herself in the home of the hero's father, which had been deserted by the butler and his wife, who expected the owner to be gone for a long enough time to permit of their having a good vacation.

When Miss Minter took possession of the home, she had her kid brother with her, whom she always referred to as the Prince, due to the fact that she had developed an imagination which made it easy for her to change this ordinary world into a kingdom of princes, princesses and good fairies.

Their first night's sleep in the house was interrupted by the arrival of a burglar, who was approached by Little Mary in such an innocent manner that the roughneck was promptly changed from an intruder to a protector, agreeing to remain in the house to protect her as the new mistress.

The next day, while this trio were having breakfast, a worn-out actor and a plain, ordinary bum drifted in, and they were also adopted into the family, who were guarding the house awaiting the return of the grouchy old father of the hero.

The hero meanwhile had secured a job and was very much worried over the disappearance of Miss Minter and her kid brother, who had been adopted by him when their mother died. Hero had been ordered by father to earn a week's salary before showing his face at the house again.

There were some great laughs in the return of the father and the resultant introductions of the burglar, the actor and the bum. Finally we found hero returning with his one week's salary check, which meant he was forgiven, and the finish found the burglar, the actor and the bum happily employed around Charity Castle, which was the new name given to the home of the old grouch who was now reformed.

This is light comedy with a few touches of pathos that will undoubtedly please anywhere because of the many little human bits. It has been very well handled and intelligently titled, the chief criticism being that the director failed to use sufficient closeups. This was particularly true of the first two or three reels. Many of these earlier scenes could have been decidedly improved by the use of more close-up shots.

Miss Minter, as an appealing, trustful youngster of probably fifteen was very pleasing. Her work was sincere and natural and registered at all times.

Alan Forrest as the hero son played quietly and humanly, being more than satisfactory.

The types were particularly well chosen and the entire cast fitted the characterizations very nicely.

Among those who appeared were Henry A. Barrows, Clifford Callis, Eugene Forde, Ashton Dearholt, Spottiswoode Aitken, Gordon Russell, Robert Klein and George Ahearn.

The Box Office Angle.

You can safely bill this as a truly delightful comedy, and I believe you will be justified in promising that it is the most pleasing production in which Miss Minter has ever appeared. The situations having to do with the acceptance of the burglar, the actor and the bum into the household will certainly make good with anyone.

In billing this I would center most of my attention upon the star, but would also use lines of this sort: "Is your home the dungeon of a grouch, or a CHARITY CASTLE? See Mary Miles Minter in CHARITY CASTLE."

INTERESTING MELO WITH MYSTERY ELEMENTS AND SOME LAUGHS

George M. Cohan in

THE SEVEN KEYS TO BALDPATE

Cohan—Artcraft

DIRECTOR	Hugh Ford
AUTHOR	Earl Derr Biggers
PLAY BY	George M. Cohan
SCENARIO BY	Hugh Ford
CAMERAMAN	Ned Van Buren
AS A WHOLE	Interesting mystery melo, although lacks suspense punch of book
STORY	Provides plenty of action and interesting situations
DIRECTION	Gave good atmosphere and made some scenes effective
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally satisfactory, with some good effects, but frequently flat
LIGHTINGS	Some good effects; some rather poor
CAMERA WORK	Satisfactory; not exceptional
STAR	Personality that stands out
SUPPORT	Some good types
EXTERIORS	Satisfactory; not particularly good
INTERIORS	Acceptable; followed set of play
DETAIL	Generally good
TIME	Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

ALTHOUGH "Seven Keys" as a film lacks many, many of the laughs and much of the suspense found in the play, it is still an interesting production, principally because it provides considerable action and a sufficient amount of suspense to keep the average fan wondering what is going to happen next.

In the treatment of the various situations we found a few well handled, with many missing vast opportunities. Georgie Cohan lifted the offering quite a little by his very pleasing personality, and Anna Q. Nilsson as the girl looked very pretty at times and was generally appealing. The other characters were little more than movie types. They didn't stand out as the characters did in the play. To a great extent I believe that this was due to treatment, because certainly this subject provided picture material of an ideal sort.

The plot of this has to do with a young writer of popular novels who made a bet that he could write a story in twenty-four hours. He went to a lonely inn in the mountains and then things began to happen with a rapidity that was astounding. The author found himself in the center of the wildest kind of melodramatic action as the night progressed.

At the end we learned that everything which had occurred was only what the author was writing in the story which he was turning out in twenty-four hours.

On the stage this was so carefully treated that the audience never suspects at any time that the action is anything but real, until we get to the finish, when the author walks down and announces that he has finished his book. In the film version, wise fans will suspect the truth long before they should, with a resultant loss in enjoyment.

In many places in the action, the better use of close-ups would have aided situations materially, and frequently the lighting was not as good as it should have been.

In the cast were Joe Smiley, Armand Cortez, Purnell Pratt, Frank Losee, Corinne Uzzell, C. Warren Cook, Eric Hudson, Carlton Macy and Elda Furry.

The Box Office Angle.

Considering the exceptional success that this play had and the fact that George M. Cohan is one of the best-known figures in American theatricals, you should be able to get some money with this anywhere. The picture isn't a world beater, but it is good and certainly decidedly above the average release so far as story or star is concerned.

You can safely promise that it is interesting action and filled with laughs and thrills. Somehow the thrills fail to get to you like they did on the stage, which is principally due to treatment, but, nevertheless, the story was so good that the situations are sure to register as they stand.

In advertising this I would concentrate upon boosting the play as one of the biggest Broadway successes and registering the fact that the author of the play, Mr. Cohan, plays the leading role.

LIGHT COMEDY STUFF THAT REGISTERS. FUNNY AND DIFFERENT

Taylor Holmes in

EFFICIENCY EDGAR'S COURTSHIP

Essanay—K. E. S. E.

DIRECTOR	L. C. Windom
AUTHOR	Clarence Budington Kelland in S. E. P.
AS A WHOLE	Light comedy that registers as real entertainment
STORY	Truly humorous idea nicely worked out
DIRECTION	Kept action human and made incidents effective by intelligent use of closeups
PHOTOGRAPHY	Good straight stuff; no attempt for effects
LIGHTINGS	No attempt for special lighting; used good old light-on-and-off in room once or twice
CAMERA WORK	Very good, except caught onlookers in street scenes
STAR	A "find" for such characterizations
SUPPORT	Girl very pleasing; other types good
EXTERIORS	Satisfactory; no effort made to be artistic
INTERIORS	Satisfactory
DETAIL	Many good little touches
TIME	Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

MY hat is off to George K. Spoor for giving us "Efficiency Edgar" and the "Skinner" stuff and similar light-comedy entertainment. He has evidently come to an appreciation of the fact that film fans are pretty sick of the old junk and anxious to find light entertainment that pleases as it runs.

For this sort of characterization Taylor Holmes is surely a "find." Efficiency Edgar is supposed to be a nut with a hankering for accomplishing big things in business and a woful inability to keep business methods out of his personal affairs.

The story of this is just different enough to be refreshing—just as the first Skinner picture caught hold because it was away from the ordinary. The chief virtue of this particular production is the fact that the producer and star have put over a lot of little bits of business and little touches that register as delightful comedy, even though they are a little bit far-fetched so far as the average human is concerned.

The story has to do with the businesslike efforts of Efficiency Edgar to convince a girl's father that he was the proper husband for the lady in question, with this unsuccessful campaign being followed by another attack on the girl herself that was carefully planned out by the business general.

The funniest part of the entire production was the introduction of the business having to do with the saxaphone which Efficiency Edgar took up after he had noticed the success of his rattle-brained rival, who used a guitar to advantage. The very idea of a young lover serenading his "intended" with a saxaphone is funny in itself. As handled here, it becomes a scream at times.

Holmes is an artist particularly fitted for this character, because he registered that funny embarrassment in a manner that will make it humorous to the worst grouch. Who can imagine that the good old stuff of practising a proposal can be made funny at such a late day?—and yet, as treated in this by the star, it pulled some real laughs.

Many of the titles were well written, and, on the whole, the story construction was very satisfactory.

There was no attempt to make this artistic, no light effects were used, and in many places in scenes taken on the street spectators were in evidence.

Nevertheless, the average fan is going to disregard all of these items and appreciate the genuine humor and fun value in the various situations as registered.

Virginia Valli was quite pleasing as the girl, although she had little to do save stand around and give Mr. Holmes an opportunity to work.

Ernest Maupain as the father put this character over very satisfactorily, and Rodney La Rock as Wimple the rival was a good type and well played.

Figuring technical slips, they used a flash of a card nestled in a candy box for an insert in one place, when the card was supposed to be in a box of flowers. This should be corrected.

The Box Office Angle.

When you figure the fact that these stories, published in the "Saturday Evening Post," are known to millions, it would seem to me that this is an A-1 box office bet, particularly when you can promise that they are similar to the Skinner stuff in being light comedy of human incidents.

Most of your fans may have never heard of Taylor Holmes, despite the fact that he is well-known on the speaking stage. I would depend altogether upon the popularity of the stories and the publicity they have received, together with your personal assurance that the productions are good light comedy intelligently produced.

In calling attention to this you might use a query similar to this: "Did you ever vgure securing a wife as a salesman proposition? Or, did you ever try to sell yourself to a girl or to her father by business methods? Don't miss EFFICIENCY EDGAR'S COURTSHIP."

HUMAN STUFF MADE DELIGHTFUL BY STAR AND BABY

George Beban in

LOST IN TRANSIT

Pallas—Paramount

DIRECTOR.....Donald Crisp
AUTHOR.....Kathlyn Williams
SCENARIO BY.....Gardner Hunting
CAMERAMAN.....Faxon M. Dean
AS A WHOLE.....Star, treatment of scenes and baby make things entertaining
STORY.....Slender and obvious, but served purpose
DIRECTION.....Provided rather good atmosphere and gave effective treatment to obvious situations; occasionally became mediocre, but generally satisfactory
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent
LIGHTINGS.....Many effective; generally pleasing
CAMERA WORK.....Varied, but generally satisfactory
STAR.....Delightful characterization
SUPPORT.....Kid wonderful; others very good
EXTERIORS.....Generally well chosen for atmosphere
INTERIORS.....Quite satisfactory; fitted atmosphere both in wop's home and wealthy surroundings
DETAIL.....Quite satisfactory; some bits well handled
TIME.....Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

WHILE the story of this was slender and rather obvious, I believe it will prove one of the most satisfactory of recent Beban releases, because there are so many delightful scenes between Mr. Beban and the little two and one-half-year-old kiddie listed as Bob White on the cast sheet. This youngster and Mr. Beban had a wonderful time together, and a good portion of the footage is devoted to their scenes, which will prove more than pleasing to most everyone.

Helen Jerome Eddy, who has appeared in so many productions with Mr. Beban, gave an excellent characterization as the Italian girl desired by George and also by Frank Bennett, his rival.

The plot had to do with a stolen child and the fact that Mr. Beban found a kiddie in his junk wagon the same day the child was stolen.

Most of the film was devoted to scenes showing the development of his love for this child, and then we found the youngster taken away from him, only to learn afterwards that the child he had learned to love was really not the one who had been stolen. We had suspected that all along, but were not sure of it until the plot unfolded.

The weakest point in the story construction was the convenient placing of the accident to the man who had really stolen the child, directly in front of Miss Eddy's store. It would have been just as well for the purposes of the story to have had this accident occur somewhere else, and it would certainly have seemed less convenient. It is always so mechanical when you bring the man who is to confess the secret that is needed to clear up the plot into the home of one of the characters and have him die there Such things seldom happen, and people are not impressed nearly so much by things that happen once in a million times as they are by things which happen with great regularity.

The cast included Pietro Sosso, Vera Lewis and Henry A. Barrows.

The Box Office Angle.

I believe you should be able to do very well with this if you will advertise it intelligently, because most anyone should thoroughly enjoy the delightful scenes between Mr. Beban and the baby.

Of course, you have a certain clientele which always wants to see Beban, whom you can count upon in playing this, and you can build additional patronage for this subject by playing up the kid thing very strong.

Ask them if they like children. Say—"Have you any youngsters at home? If so, you will appreciate LOST IN TRANSIT."

In all of your advertising I would emphasize the presence of the baby as much as that of George Beban. The youngster is particularly clever.

You might also make known the presence of Helen Jerome Eddy, because she has worked with Mr. Beban in several successful wop stories, and so she has in a way become associated with him in this line of endeavor.

ORDINARY MELLER POORLY ACTED KIDS TOO CAMERA CONSCIOUS

Zoe Rae in

THE LITTLE PIRATE

Butterfly

DIRECTOR.....Elsie Jane Wilson
AUTHOR.....Norris Shannon
SCENARIO BY.....Elliott J. Clawson
CAMERAMAN.....Stephen Rounds
AS A WHOLE.....Movie meller instead of expected cute kid stuff
STORY.....Painfully ordinary routine action melo with kid stuff obvious plant for convenient finish
DIRECTION.....Permitted everyone to overact, making action mechanical; atmosphere not distinctive or impressive
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied from good to fair
LIGHTINGS.....A few good; many poor
CAMERA WORK.....Generally old-school, with poor angles; never distinctive STAR.....Acting child very camera-conscious
SUPPORT.....Routine movie meller characters, quite actory
EXTERIORS.....Acceptable; not well chosen
INTERIORS.....Acceptable, but poor composition and angles
DETAIL.....Poorly handled in spots; much too much at times
TIME.....Sixty-four minutes (5 parts)

ANYONE would naturally expect to see a lot of cute kid stuff when a production is billed with a child star. Unfortunately, in this instance the producers have failed to deliver what was anticipated, since the production, for the most part, is an ordinary movie mellerdrammer having to do with a domestic tangle, the result of a misunderstanding.

The kid stuff in this is a very small part of the story and is an obvious plant to bring about a reconciliation between the father and mother of the little child who is starred.

This kid goes with another on to an island to be a "pirate," and the man who stole the poipers obligingly comes out to this island and buries the documents so that the kiddies can pick them up as buried treasure and restore them to the grown folks.

The first few reels are so full of ordinary movie meller, without any kid stuff to speak of, that I fear that the average audience who will come in expecting cute kid stuff will be decidedly disappointed long before the story arrives at the point where the kids are the center of attention.

Frank Brownlee, who played the father of little Zoe, was painfully actory.

Gretchen Lederer, the mother, was satisfactory. The other members of the cast were acceptable but not unusual.

Burwell Hemerick, who played the part of the boy, and little Miss Rae were not nearly so good as many other children who are not supposed to be stars, because these two youngsters tried to act all the time, instead of doing things naturally.

Among those who appeared were Mr. Titus, Charley West and Lillian Peacock.

The Box Office Angle.

If you are playing routine program stuff you may be able to sneak this by, although I am afraid it will drag very badly with most any average audience.

I'd suggest that you give serious thought to the fact that we have reached a critical point in the film business this fall, and surely it is up to you exhibitors now to select such production as will please your patrons. You are either going to make a tremendous success in the coming year or find yourself in the discard.

OLD TIME MOVIE BIG SCENES IN TRAPPED IN CITY PLOT

Edna Goodrich in

REPUTATION

Empire All-Star—Mutual

DIRECTOR.....John B. O'Brien
AUTHOR.....John B. Clymer
CAMERAMAN.....Mr. Crowley
AS A WHOLE.....Innocence Trapped in the City movie with Clothes Model, Cabaret and Courtroom Scenes to provide crowds and spend money
STORY.....Painfully old combination of time-honored situations
DIRECTION.....Failed to lift offering from movie-caliber level
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied from fine to poor
LIGHTINGS.....A few good effects, but many times too uniform
CAMERA WORK.....Varied
STAR.....Wore clothes well but handicapped by story and surroundings
SUPPORT.....Movie characters
EXTERIORS.....Acceptable but not distinctive
INTERIORS.....Some very good, but not photographed to best advantage
DETAIL.....Acceptable—but too much footage given to big scenes, which failed to advance story
TIME.....Sixty-four minutes (5 parts)

FOR the first Edna Goodrich-Mutual we find the plot to be one of the old favorites having to do with the beautiful cloak model who attracted the employer with the result that his jealous wife denounced the model at home, thus forcing her back to the city, where the employer set a trap from which she escaped by murdering him.

This is the old-time Innocence Trapped in the Wicked City junk, with the courtroom finish where several hundred extras sat around while the jury deliberated, finally returning a verdict of "Not guilty," simply because they realized that the willun was wicked and should have been shot.

The introduction of clothes model scenes into features has been done very faithfully for several years now, and unfortunately they generally use the same sort of a set for all such showings. Undoubtedly the ladies like to see pretty clothes, but, to my mind, these clothes-model bits would be much better off in news-weeklies, where they belong.

To prove that they were spending some money on this they had a big cabaret set with several entertainers, all of which had nothing to do with the story except to show that the employer took Miss Goodrich there to view the wicked city.

The courtroom scene was much bigger than it should have been, and entirely too much footage was given to the long details such as charging the jury, etc., it appearing as if someone wanted to show that he knew how a trial is conducted.

It would seem to me that Miss Goodrich should be given some clean wholesome stories that would get away from the wicked willun who traps the innocent goil in the room to struggle with her until hero arrives. If they would make a few films with her as a real American girl in the great outdoors, I believe she could become a favorite.

William Hinckley as the hero had little to do but stick around and wait for the finish when he had to fight with the wicked wun.

Frank Goldsmith as the willunous employer registered his wickedness with great regularity, and in the generally accepted movie fashion.

Others in the cast were Nellie Parker Spaulding, Mrs. Brundage, Carey Lee and Esther Evans.

The Box Office Angle.

This is such an old plot and has been treated in such a routine manner that I would not enthuse over it in case you decided that you can take a chance on such productions sneaking by.

Miss Goodrich did rather well in some Paramount productions, but is so handicapped in this that she fails to make any real impression and consequently there is nothing about the production which would justify your making much noise over it.

Figured as program releases go, it is just acceptable routine movie meller with much of the old-time stuff tied together in a fairly satisfactory manner without anything to lift it from the ordinary rut.

Personally, I'd rather dig up something which had some signs of life and something that was a little bit different from the routine movie.

If you are going to play it I would concentrate on the fact that Edna Goodrich is a Broadway star and wears some very beautiful clothes—which is about all you can say with safety.

MYSTERY ACTION COMEDY FRAME UP PLOT HOLDS RIGHT WELL

Franklyn Farnum in

A STORMY KNIGHT

Bluebird

DIRECTOR ..... Elmer Clifton
AUTHOR ..... Jack Cunningham
SCENARIO BY ..... Waldemar Young
CAMERAMAN ..... Virgil E. Miller
AS A WHOLE ..... Mystery-comedy kept interesting by fast action
STORY ..... Framed for comedy out of complicated mystery "plant" frameup arranged to reform man who had said he wouldn't marry
DIRECTION ..... Registered some good effects, kept action snappy, except in several sequences, where too much footage given to incidents made it drag
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Very effective at times, but frequently too uniform
LIGHTINGS ..... Many very effective, but some ordinary
CAMERA WORK ..... Quite satisfactory
STAR ..... Rather pleasing; much better than in recent releases
SUPPORT ..... Quite satisfactory
EXTERIORS ..... Many very pretty shots; generally satisfactory
INTERIORS ..... Satisfactory; not unusual
DETAIL ..... Generally good; sometimes action cut so snappy it became jumpy
TIME ..... Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

IN his recent releases Franklyn Farnum has marred his work most decidedly by trying to smile upon any and all occasions, thereby seeming to "imitate" Doug Fairbanks. Fortunately in this offering he plays a bit more humanly without the repeated suggestion of imitation, so that in this his personality registers rather favorably.

The story was one of those frameup comedy plots where the hero was led through many exciting adventures with apparently no rhyme or reason, except to keep him mystified.

At the end we learned that all the excitement was due to a plot on the part of an old friend of his father, who was trying to cure this young man of an idea that he didn't want to be married.

Throughout the action he was chasing a young girl, played by Brownie Vernon, who seemed to be very much in distress. This girl was the daughter of the friend of hero's father, and she was in on the game to convince hero that really he did want to get married if he ever found the right girl.

There was a lot of night stuff with rain effects introduced in the early scenes, and this atmosphere fitted perfectly with the air of mystery which was being developed for the story. The action was kept rather fast and comparatively interesting, except that any fan will very soon begin to suspect that the whole thing is a frameup on the hero.

Occasionally some of the incidents were allowed to run to too much footage, with the result that they became a bit draggy, but the construction holds the mystery together sufficiently well that most fans will consider the production different enough to entertain.

In one part of the story there were some very fine shots taken in the mountains, many of which were particularly beautiful. The general atmosphere of this was quite satisfactory, and, considering the type of story, it has been well handled.

Jean Herscholt, Hayward Mack and Frank McQuarrie made up the remainder of the cast.

The Box Office Angle.

I believe you can figure this as a program release which will go over as entertainment even though it has no exceptional merit. Most fans enjoy mystery stories and like to see snappy action which keeps them wondering just how it's all to develop.

I fear that Franklyn Farnum has slipped rather decidedly because of his persistence in the Fairbanks imitation, and I don't consider him capable of pulling much business at the box office. For the average program, however, this is certainly satisfactory.

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

WILLIAM F. ALDRICH
FEATURE PRODUCER
Lambs Club, 117 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO

ALBERT CAPELLANI
PRODUCER

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

WILLIAM DESMOND
TRIANGLE PLAYS
Culver City, Cal.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

HOBART HENLEY
Producer of
"PARENTAGE"

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
PRODUCING FEATURES
Ivan Film Corp.

LLOYD INGRAHAM
PRODUCER

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

HARLEY KNOLES
FEATURES DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 D. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

JOSEPH LEVERING
DIRECTOR

O. A. C. LUND

ASHLEY MILLER
Director—Vitagraph Studios
Brooklyn

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE DIRECTOR
FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.

WEDGWOOD NOWELL
TRIANGLE
Friars Club, N. Y. C.

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITIGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

TOM TERRISS
PRODUCER
VITAGRAPH

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
PRODUCING FEATURES
VITIGRAPH

JAMES VINCENT
PRODUCER

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

BEN WILSON
DIRECTING AND STARRING
UNIVERSAL

CHESTER WITHEY
DIRECTOR

JAMES YOUNG

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Adress—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM A MAGAZINE — IN FACT A SERVICE
THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM
WID'S
INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS
Always Independent Issued Every Thursday
VOL. III. THURSDAY, SEPT. 20, 1917. NO. 38
25 Cents a Copy $10.00 a Year
Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

HANDSOME HERO IN CENTRAL AMERICAN REVOLUTION MELO

J. Warren Kerrigan in

A MAN'S MAN

Paralta—Triangle

DIRECTOR	Oscar C. Apfel
AUTHOR	Peter B. Kyne
SCENARIO BY	Thomas G. Geraghty
ART DIRECTOR	Robert Brunton
CAMERAMAN	L. Guy Wilky
AS A WHOLE	Interesting Central American revolution melo
STORY	Romance mixed up with revolution action
DIRECTION	Kept things moving and gave rather good atmosphere
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally very good
LIGHTINGS	Some very effective; generally satisfactory
CAMERA WORK	Good
STAR	Pleasing hero type
SUPPORT	Girl pleasing; several excellent types
EXTERIORS	Rather well chosen for atmosphere
INTERIORS	Generally good
DETAIL	Generally good; made atmosphere seem real
TIME	One hour and 15 minutes (7 parts)

ALTHOUGH it seemed to me that there was no necessity of making this a seven part production, because there were many incidents and sequences that would have been bettered by trimming, still the action is kept comparatively interesting all the way, and certainly the producer managed to give a very good suggestion of what a Central American revolution is like, according to all reports. His scenes having to do with this revolution were as convincing as anything I have ever seen of this sort.

The story had to do with the adventures of Jack Kerrigan in this Central American republic, where he had gone to join an old friend who had located a gold mine there.

The first reel or two was devoted to planting Mr. Kerrigan as an adventurous spirit who wandered about the world in a nonchalant manner, and we saw where he managed to save the heroine, which served as a suggestion of what was to follow.

It "just happened" that she came to the same Central Republic that he landed in, and the remainder of the production was devoted to the various action incidents having to do with the revolution.

While still in this country, Mr. Kerrigan was accidentally brought into contact with some of the Central American revolutionists, and we found the leader of this movement taking refuge in Mr. Kerrigan's stateroom on the boat and insisting upon playing the part of his valet in order to be smuggled into his native country. As a sportsman the hero took this chance and afterwards played along with the revolutionists because it promised fun.

During the course of the scenes leading up to the final battle stuff the hero was given a number of opportunities to make fools of a couple of officers of the republican government who were sent out to catch this American intruder, and this will of course be great stuff for the matinee girl or the kid who likes to see the hero triumphant.

At the end Mr. Kerrigan got mixed up with the battle stuff and managed to stop the willunous president who was making a getaway, but he was seriously injured in getting the willun.

On the finish we found the heroine beside our wounded hero, explaining to him that she was very much interested.

Most of the photography was good straight stuff, there being many scenes that were particularly clean-cut. Occasionally there were some effective bits of lighting, and the treatment of the situation where the motorboat came out alongside the ship in the night was very good.

The part of the old widow who ran the bar (played by Ida Lewis) was very well done, and Lois Wilson, as the heroine, played so quietly and so naturally that she registered in an exceptionally pleasing manner.

On the finish they pulled a funeral, with several angles on this ceremony, and it certainly seemed to me that this was entirely unnecessary and rather objectionable. Very few people care to see funerals in pictures.

In the supporting cast were: Kenneth Harlan, Ed Coxen, Harry Von Meter, Eugene Pallette and Jos. J. Dowling.

The Box Office Angle.

Figured as a melodramatic romance with a heroic figure about which to center the action, I guess this will get by most anywhere, although I do not consider that this is sufficiently distinctive or unusual to justify your making an exceptional lot of fuss about.

Really, the production would be much better if it were trimmed to 5,000 feet, and it ranks only as a very good program release, there being nothing to justify it being considered a big "special" offering.

The title, "A Man's Man," with Jack Kerrigan as the hero, gives you an opportunity to make some noise about "J. Warren" as a matinee idol, and, as I say, you can figure that this is good, but I would not spread it on thick in talking about this as a "special production."

QUICK ANNOUNCEMENTS FOR YOUR SCREEN

SLIDENE OUTFIT: all complete.....$1.00
6 bottles slide ink; 25 cover glasses; 6 special pens; 2 slide charts

Novelty Typewriter Slides.....$3.50 per 100
Handy Slide Holder and Clip FREE.
NOVELTY SLIDE CO., 115 East 23d St., New York.

CIRCUS ATMOSPHERE OVERSHADOWS STAR. ARTISTIC SCENES AND REALISTIC

Mae Marsh in

POLLY OF THE CIRCUS

Goldwyn

DIRECTOR.....Charles T. Horan
AUTHOR.....Margaret Mayo
CAMERAMAN.....George W. Hill
AS A WHOLE.....Effective and artistic atmosphere of circus, race and panic puts it over, star and drama made incidental
STORY.....Kid stuff gave it great start, but later on was overshadowed by crowds and atmoshere
DIRECTION.....Registered very interesting and artistic atmosphere; gave air of bigness to it all; just missed being very human and appealing at times
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Many very beautiful shots; much good night stuff
LIGHTINGS.....Generally very artistic
CAMERA WORK.....Many distinctive angles; generally excellent
STAR.....Decidedly overshadowed by production
SUPPORT.....Hero pleasing; most of types quite satisfactory
EXTERIORS.....Some wonderfully beautiful; all well chosen
INTERIORS.....Very well done and generally well lighted
DETAIL.....Many good touches
TIME.....One hour and 20 minutes (7 parts)

UNDOUBTEDLY the circus atmosphere and detail in this, together with the apparent painstaking effort to keep the entire offering artistic, will put this over as a very pleasing release anywhere despite the fact that Mae Marsh, who is starred, is decidedly in the background all the way.

The film starts off to be a delightful human bit because of the introduction of considerable smalltown stuff with cleverly written titles which referred to boyhood days when your chum used to tie a string to your toe, which he could pull as it hung out the window in the morning to get you up in time to see the circus coming to town.

There were many big scenes, figured as to the number of people used, and the circus was registered in great detail, all of which will be very interesting, although it doesn't advance the story particularly.

In the first three reels we had mostly scenes of the circus, with the story getting under way slowly about the third reel, and they worked in a reel or so having to do with a race at the county fair, which gave further opportunity for crowds, excitement, etc., the final reel registering a fire in the circus tent with the resultant panic.

The general impression is one almost like that received after going to a circus. You have a recollection of seeing a great many things, without any standing out in clear outline.

In a way, it seemed as if the Goldwyn people were unwilling to take a chance on trying to make this just a human story with Miss Marsh as the star, because certainly, as they have handled this, they have given more attention to atmosphere and mob scenes than they have to drama.

I understand that some 80,000 feet were "shot" in the making of this film, and I presume that that is partly responsible for the fact that almost all of the footage shown on the screen is distinctive and artistic as to lighting and composition. When a director with a good cameraman "shoots" 80,000 feet, he certainly should be able to find six or seven thousand feet of it that is artistic.

I want to compliment those responsible for the locations, however, because some of the exteriors used when Miss Marsh was doing her "Paul Revere Ride" to the fair grounds, and afterwards when returning with the minister, were exceptionally beautiful. The general composition of the interiors was also very good, and the entire production stood out as a bit of artistry.

The story and dramatic scenes were smothered by the action, and it was so long before I got a look at Miss Marsh's face that I glanced at my watch and found we had only seen one five-foot flash of her in the first twenty-five minutes. This placing the star in the background, however, doesn't mean that the production isn't a good one; it simply means that it isn't the ordinary sort of star-in-the-spotlight production. "Polly" is a circus story, and the producers have put their emphasis on the circus with just enough of the drama and Polly to carry over the use of Miss Marsh's name to help make the production register at the box office.

In a way, the incident having to do with the county fair race seemed to be sort of dragged in by the heels, and surely the action was very unconvincing. To anyone who has ever attended a circus the idea of one of those lazy, galloping horses ridden by bareback riders being capable of winning a race even at a county fair is somewhat far-fetched. In the picture we see Miss Marsh doing a Paul Revere Ride of several miles on this fat old ring horse, and then, without a rest of even a minute, she rushed right into the race and came home victorious. The race was well handled photographically, but the incident didn't ring true.

When they hit the fire finish, most every intelligent fan is going to groan and say to himself: "Movie stuff." That piece of meller provided more mob scenes, but to my mind seemed rather undesirable, since it cheapened the production somewhat.

Although the story in this held rather well, it failed to really get under your shirt as drama and certainly was not nearly as effective as it could have been. The dramatic incidents might have been made bigger than the atmosphere by treatment that would have made them more convincing. It seemed that more attention was given to artistic composition, lightings and general effect than to dramatic conviction.

Miss Marsh's work was very satisfactory, although she didn't have much opportunity to register. It certainly was not what would be called a star part as handled.

Vernon Steele, as the minister, was pleasing and played with quiet force, and Wellington Playter, as the boss canvas-man, was quite satisfactory, although they failed to make this character as big and as sympathetic as it could have been.

The types, generally, were well chosen. The cast included Charlie Eldridge, Geo. Trimble, Lucile Laverne, Viola Compton, Stephen Carr, Mildred Call, Lucile Satterthwaite, J. B. Hollis, Chas. Riegel and Isabel Vernon.

The Box Office Angle.

This should be a big money-getter anywhere because you can afford to bill it as an elaborate production of the greatest circus story ever written, and by hammering your circus exploitation matter together with explaining that this is Mae Marsh's first Goldwyn picture you should be able to create enough interest to get real business.

The picture will please most anyone, since it is artistic and interesting with enough big scenes to give it a standing as a production, and a sufficient amount of little human touches to make folks say that it is worth while.

I would be careful not to talk too much about Miss Marsh, because she did not prove an exceptional drawing card for Triangle, and in this instance the production was given much more prominence than the star, so that you can safely concentrate on the production in your advertising.

State particularly that this shows an actual circus with interesting detail as to circus life before the audience and in the dressing room.

Goldwyn has been advertising that this production cost $250,000.00, and, while it is possible that they took enough time to make this, and used enough extra people in order to run the expenses to something like this figure, I certainly would not go too heavy on that statement in boosting the production. While fans would be willing to accept and enjoy this as a good picture, they might feel disappointed if it was presented to them as a production which had cost $250,000.00.

SOME CUTE KID STUFF RATHER CRUDELY TIED TOGETHER

Mary McAlister in

PANTS

Essanay—K. E. S. E.

AUTHOR.....Charles Mortimer Peck
AS A WHOLE.....Kids gathered some laughs, but general treatment was rather crude, with poor sets and inartistic lightings
STORY.....Didn't really convince as such; was planned to introduce hokum situations
DIRECTION.....Registered some good touches in individual scenes but allowed general atmosphere to seem cheap and crude
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Mostly straight stuff, with lighting badly arranged
LIGHTINGS.....Generally inartistic, with many black drop closeups cut into sets flooded with light
CAMERA WORK.....Not good
STAR.....A pleasing kiddie
SUPPORT.....Some cute kids and acceptable grownups, although both rather camera-conscious at times
EXTERIORS.....Some very pretty shots
INTERIORS.....Seemed rather setty
DETAIL.....Satisfactory
TIME.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

MARY M'ALISTER is a cute youngster, and if the director of this had made the atmosphere uniformly acceptable the production would register as a very pleasing kid story. As it stands there are some excellent incidents and some that are seriously marred by the very inartistic lightings provided in the sets.

There was not much to the plot, it being tied together principally for the purpose of introducing a number of hokum bits, such as having Little Mary change clothes with a boy, the well-known hokum kid parties, and the burglar who came to steal; only to be reformed by the little girl who was a friend of the burglar's little boy.

There were a number of exterior shots taken about some substantial estate or park which were decidedly attractive, but the interior shots which were supposed to be the home that went with these exteriors were decidedly setty and very poorly lighted. This made the effect quite bad. The action was also artificial and this interfered with the possibility of the scenes registering effectively.

The director erred in introducing a great many closeups taken before a black drop in scenes which were flooded with light. The black drop closeups are fine, providing the director is working in a set which is very dark.

The kid party was probably the best part of the film, since they registered a lot of good closeups here. In some of the exterior kid scenes the youngsters were rather camera-conscious.

In the situation where the burglar broke into Little Mary's home, there was an opportunity for some very effective lighting, had the burglar used a flashlight instead of nonchalantly walking into the room and turning on all the lights. A vision was introduced here where his boy was faded in over a doll seated on a table, and this would have been much more effective had it been lighted by a spotlight supposed to be the burglar's flashlight. The scenes with Little Mary would also have been better in spotlighting.

John Cossar, as the father of the poor boy friend of Mary, was rather pleasing, and the other members of the cast were satisfactory but not particularly good.

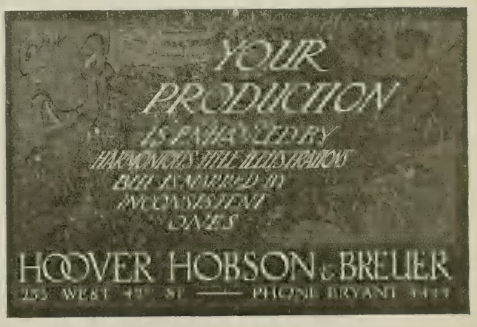
The cast included Marion Skinner, Charles Koeppe, Russell McDermott, Arthur Metcalfe and Caroline Irwin.

The Box Office Angle.

I doubt very much if Mary McAlister is sufficiently established anywhere to be starred alone in a five-reel production, and you can hardly afford to go back of this with a campaign boosting it too heavily, since the production slips badly at times.

You can with safety play this as a program offering and probably get it by because of the cute kid stuff, but I would be careful in advertising it to talk about the kids, without any promises whatever as to the production itself.

For an advertising line on this, you might use something like the following: "Why is it that most girls want to be boys when they are little? Think it over and see Mary McAlister in PANTS." Or, you might say: "When you were a little girl did you ever want to be a boy? See Mary McAlister in PANTS."



INTERESTING MYSTERY MELO KEEPS MOVING AND HOLDS RIGHT WELL

Rupert Julian and Ruth Clifford in

THE MYSTERIOUS MR. TILLER

Bluebird

DIRECTOR.....Rupert Julian
AUTHOR.....Elliott J. Clawson
CAMERAMAN.....Stephen Rounds
AS A WHOLE.....Rather well done mystery suspense stuff; kept classy and interesting
STORY.....Tangled web of crooks and mysterious detectives which holds very well
DIRECTION.....Gets attention from start and keeps atmosphere classy and action interesting
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very pleasing
LIGHTINGS.....Some very effective bits; generally good
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STARS.....Registered pleasingly
SUPPORT.....Good types
EXTERIORS.....Quite satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Generally very good
DETAIL.....Some interesting touches
TIME.....Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

THE average film fan enjoys a fast-moving mystery suspense story—particularly if it is presented in an atmosphere that is of sufficient class to lift it out of the "movie" rut.

In this we get some effective lightings and some society scenes that have an air of class, with the result that the interesting and rather speedy action holds very well all the way, while the atmosphere elevates the offering decidedly and givs it a mark of distinction.

Starting off with the introduction of Mr. Julian as a mysterious gentleman who liked adventure, we found him bumping into Miss Clifford, who appeared to be a beautiful young woman in trouble, and for the first reel or two we had considerable interesting mystery stuff developing the fact that Miss Clifford was working with a band o jewel thieves.

There were some good scenes having to do with th manipulations of this band at a society event, and it al finished up with Mr. Julian entering the den of th thieves, which was one of those mysterious old house containing secret doorways, etc., effectively lighted where he captured the leader of the band and then introduced himself to Miss Clifford as a secret service man We also learned at this time that she was in the servic of the Customs Department, and they finished with clutch in prospect.

Mr. Julian, as the mysterious detective, played with just the right touch of authority to make this characte impressive, and Miss Clifford held her characterizatio nicely in line to keep you guessing as to whether sh was a crook or a young girl held by fear.

There were a number of good types in the cast. Among those who appeared in support were Harry Ratten berry, Frank Brownlee, Wedgwood Nowell and E. A Warren.

The Box Office Angle.

I believe that in most every community a mystery suspense-detective story is welcome every so often, particularly if it is well done. The element of suspense i maintained nicely in this, the lightings are effective an the characters hold the situations nicely, and so I believ that you can depend upon this to satisfy and please.

Mr. Julian and Miss Clifford have had several goo productions recently and I would therefore refer t these in billing this one. In advertising this you migh say: "What would you do if a lady in distress asked yo to carry a note to a 'Miss Smith,' and you learned upo arrival that 'Miss Smith' was a man who looked like a old crook who suddenly disappeared upon reading th note? See THE MYSTERIOUS MR. TILLER""

RATHER WELL DONE ROUTINE MOONSHINER MELO WITH AWFUL COON

Margery Wilson in

MOUNTAIN DEW

Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Thomas N. Heffron
AUTHORS.....Julian Josephson and Monte M. Katterjohn
CAMERAMAN.....Charles Stumar
AS A WHOLE.....Good characterizations and atmosphere; generally pleasing but acting coon awful!
STORY.....Moonshine romance
DIRECTION.....Kept it pleasing and interesting except for too much of camera-conscious coon
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good
LIGHTINGS.....Many very pleasing; others ordinary CAMERA WORK.....Good; some pleasing angles
STAR.....Pleasing and appealing
SUPPORT.....Gunn very pleasing; other types good—coon marred many scenes
EXTERIORS.....Some pretty shots; generally fitted atmosphere
INTERIORS.....Satisfactory
DETAIL.....Some good bits
TIME.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

THIS is an interesting little moonshine romance with the exception of the fact that someone has introduced a coon into about 30 per cent. of the action, with very objectionable, annoying and unpleasant results. This coon was not young enough or old enough to be funny, and was of th dressed-up city type instead of the ragamuffin, with th additional curse of being camera-conscious and under th impression that he could act. In almost every incider the director registered a few flashes of this coon, mos of these being cuts where he was supposed to be ver much scared. His acting was awful! It is certainly to b regretted that this character was introduced, because h seriously marred the offering.

There was nothing particularly unusual about th story, it being the good old stuff of hero who wandere into the moonshine country and saw the beautifi heroine, with the result that he decided to stay.

Of course hero was suspected of being a revenoo off cer, and the moonshiners gathered to shoot him, but h was able to prove that what had seemed like conclusiv evidence that he was sending information out was merel part of a story which he was writing for a magazine.

Charles Gunn, as the hero, and Miss Wilson, as th ignorant little shero, were quite pleasing, and Marv Bo land, as the "educated" girl in the mountains, made th character a good contrast to Miss Wilson.

The other members of the cast were acceptable moun taineer types. Among those who appeared were Al V Filson, Jack Richardson, Aaron Edwards and Tho Washington.

The Box Office Angle.

As a program release this will be accepted becaus of some rather pleasing angles and some good bits action. However, it is certainly to be regretted that the objectionable flashes of the camera-conscious, acting coon appeared so frequently all through the picture. You might suggest to your exchange that these be eliminated, because I believe that in certain sections this character will be particularly objectionable. It isn't so much the fact that he is a coon that makes it bad, as it is the fact that his acting is so terribly forced.

Figured from the money-getting angle, I fear that Margery Wilson will not pull you much business, and certainly "Mountain Dew" doesn't mean that your crowds will break down the doors. As a filler on an off day this would be satisfactory, although if you decided to play it I would refer to Charles Gunn's presence as much as to that of Miss Wilson, because I believe that Mr. Gunn has done a number of things recently which will be remembered, and if you can talk about the two players instead of only one, you will be better off, since Miss Wilson happens to be lacking in the following which would justify her being starred alone.

STARTED WELL, BUT BECAME DRAGGY AND SLUMPED AT END

Winifred Allen in

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

Eastern Triangle

DIRECTOR	Albert Parker
SUPERVISED BY	Allan Dwan
AUTHOR	Robert Shirley
CAMERAMAN	Roy Vaughn
AS A WHOLE	Started well as characterization study, but missed fire badly on finish
STORY	Girl "nut" living in empty house scaring natives, with fugitive gangster becoming lover-hero on finish
DIRECTION	Held too many scenes too long, making action drag very badly; production would have been good in two or three reels
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally good, with some very beautiful bits
LIGHTINGS	Some quite effective, but many ordinary
CAMERA WORK	Generally good
STAR	Very pretty at times and generally appealing, but her scenes allowed to run too long, injuring effectiveness
SUPPORT	Some good types
EXTERIORS	Rather well chosen for atmosphere; not particularly artistic
INTERIORS	Fitted atmosphere; some good composition
DETAIL	Satisfactory, but too much of it
TIME	Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

THIS started off in a promising manner, with a lot of stuff about Miss Allen as a mentally unbalanced girl playing ghost in a deserted house, with the result that all the villagers were afraid to go near the place.

They arbitrarily jumped from this, however, to some city gangster scenes and filmed considerable footage for the purpose of leading up to a situation where the fugitive gangster sought refuge in the haunted house. The girl took care of him, since he was the first person who had ever seemed to appreciate her attentions, and then the authorities came and arrested the gangster after one of the young men of the town had slipped into the house while the girl was nursing the wounded man, discovering the identity of the "ghost."

They then jumped a year, and we found the gangster out of jail seeking the half-wit, and they pulled a title which registered that this girl had been living out in the open since being turned out of the haunted house. Apparently she had no visible means of support, and I'd like to be informed just how they would explain this lady's life in the open woods, in the manner they registered, for a year without seeming to be any the worse for the experience.

Anyway, the gangster found her, and we had the clutch finish.

At first the ghost stuff was rather interesting and humorous in a way, but when they pulled a scene where thirty armed men turned tail and ran from the house because the "ghost" appeared, that made the thing slip. From that time on the action was only fairly convincing, with many spots where it seemed decidedly unnatural.

Very frequently scenes were played entirely with too much footage, and it was decidedly noticeable that in the scenes where Miss Allen was nursing the wounded gangster there were too many closeups of her and too much footage given to this incident. If this were cut down to what it should have been to register to the best advantage, there would be little more than three reels left. As it stands it is very draggy at times.

Miss Allen was decidedly pretty in many of her closeups, and in some of her dramatic scenes she registered very effectively. The general atmosphere was good, and, except for the fact that the production was quite draggy and rather unconvincing toward the end, it was of the general caliber of program offerings.

The Box Office Angle.

This gets away to a pretty good start and has a story that is somewhat interesting, although not very convincing, and so you may be able to pass it through very nicely as a program release.

Unfortunately, Miss Allen has not established herself sufficiently to justify her being starred alone, and I doubt very much if this has real box office value.

If you are playing program releases, then this may get by for one night. I wouldn't figure that it is good for more than that anywhere.

If you decide that you can play this I would concentrate on the "ghost" idea by saying: "Do you believe in ghosts? Have you ever entered a HAUNTED HOUSE?" etc.

Exhibitors Everywhere

Are Putting An Added Punch To Their Feature Productions with

BEYNON'S ORCHESTRAL SETTINGS

Are You?

No Matter What Size Orchestra You Have It Will Pay You to Write

GEORGE W. BEYNON

505 Fifth Ave., New York City.

EXCELLENT STORY RATHER WELL DONE; NOT INTIMATE ENOUGH

Ann Murdock in

OUTCAST

Empire All-Star—Mutual

DIRECTOR.....Del Henderson
AUTHOR.....Hubert Henry Davies
SCENARIO BY.....Anthony P. Kelly
CAMERAMAN.....Harry L. Keepers
AS A WHOLE.....Street walker made into sympathy character in effective situations
STORY.....Was great play; film misses many points, but is pleasing
DIRECTION.....Lightings for sets generally pleasing, but not enough closeups used, which marred many scenes; general effect, however, pleasing
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally pleasing, although slipped at times
LIGHTINGS.....Good for sets most of time, but occasionally too uniform
CAMERA WORK.....Good, except not enough closeups
STAR.....Made scenes effective; held sympathy for character nicely
SUPPORT.....Powell very pleasing; others satisfactory
EXTERIORS.....Satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Good
DETAIL.....Satisfactory; not enough intimate touches
TIME.....Sixty-seven minutes (6 parts)

UNFORTUNATELY, I doubt very much if the film-going public are familiar with the fact that the "Outcast" was a very successful play. In any case, however, you can certainly feel that most any audience after seeing this should consider it a pleasing bit of entertainment.

The producer missed some big opportunities in registering his dramatic scenes, particularly in his failure to give intimate touches and closeups which would have given all of the more important scenes greater effect.

The plot is an unusual one, in a way, principally because it has to do with the sort of thing which might happen most any day in any large city. As the action progressed, the position of the kept woman is shown to be anything but one of joy, and Miss Murdock, as the street walker whom David Powell decided to care for, made this character a very sympathetic one, with the result that any audience is going to be very much relieved when he finally asks her to marry him on the finish.

Miss Murdock played quietly and convincingly in most of her scenes, but the producer made a serious error in neglecting to use many closeups, and as a consequence none of the characters were able to make their parts nearly as effective as they could have been with the proper treatment for intimacy and shading of emotions. In most of the more dramatic scenes this absence of closeups was particularly noticeable, because a good part of the action was played at such a distance from the camera as to make it simply impossible to tell what the characters were registering by facial expression, and so they had to play their scenes almost entirely with their bodies and arms.

This seemed like a simple story idea, but it really develops into some situations that have quite a lot of strength, because they have human elements that make folks think. Without saying so, the author draws a sharp contrast between the street walker who decides to go straight but is still an outcast, and the married woman who wants to trifle with her old lover but is considered a "lady" by society while she does so.

The general atmosphere of this was rather pleasing, although it registered nothing remarkable or particularly elaborate. The lightings for the most part were soft and artistic and the sets were satisfactory.

Miss Murdock was decidedly better than in her recent appearances, and in a way gave the same promise of things that might be which she showed in the first picture she made, "Captain Jinks," produced by the Essanay Company. The Edison pictures which Miss Murdock appeared in, one or two of which were marketed by McClure, gave her quite a setback, but this will undoubtedly help her to gain the following established by "Captain Jinks."

David Powell as the hero played quietly and effectively. He is one of our best juvenile leads.

Others in the cast were Jules Raucourt, Catherine Calvert, Herbert Arling, Richard Hatteras, V. L. Granville, Maud Andrew, Reginald Carrington, Kate Sergeantson, James C. Malaidy and H. Ashton Tongue.

The Box Office Angle.

There is a good story here, and I believe you will be justified in making a little fuss about this as an adaptation of one of Broadway's most successful plays. The production has been well enough staged to prove satisfactory with the average audience, and if you will concentrate upon the story I believe that this will prove rather a satisfactory production.

In referring to Miss Murdock I would speak of her as one of the stars selected by the late Charles Frohman to appear in a series of personally chosen plays, and mention her work in "Captain Jinks" in the films without saying anything whatever about her other film work.

Don't make any rash promises about the production being particularly elaborate, because it isn't. It is just a rather well-made film with a pleasing star and an exceptionally good story carrying a splendid sympathy part for the heroine.

CRANE WILBUR

ART DRAMAS PROGRAM

Eye of Envy — Blood of His Father
Unto the End — Devil McCare
Just Jim

ARTISTIC JUMBLE OF PRETTY EXTERIORS AND UNDRESSED BEAUTIES

Louise Lovely, Carmel Myers and Jack Mulhall in

SIRENS OF THE SEA

Universal—Jewel Productions—State Rights

DIRECTOR.....Allen J. Holubar
AUTHOR.....Grace Helen Bailey
SCENARIO BY.....Allen J. Holubar
CAMERAMAN.....Roy H. Klaffki
AS A WHOLE.....Jumbled assortment of scantily clad girls, pretty exteriors, fairies, witches, etc.
STORY.....Lost in the shuffle—and nobody cares
DIRECTION.....Registered crudely in modern scenes, but had some very artistic exterior scenes with pleasing composition and interesting action; director possibly followed story, but audience won't
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Exterior scenes beautiful, decidedly artistic; interiors, straight stuff with lighting too uniform
CAMERA WORK.....Very fine exteriors; ordinary on interiors
STARS.....Quite satisfactory, although nothing remarkable
SUPPORT.....Rather shapely
EXTERIORS.....Well chosen and very artistic; composition generally very pleasing
INTERIORS.....Rather massive, but very setty and crudely photographed
DETAIL.....Satisfactory
TIME.....Sixty-seven minutes (5 parts)

THE first of this, showing some scenes in a modern home, was not good; because, despite the fact they were big sets, they were very setty in appearance and lighted in such a manner as to make them seem even more artificial. This, combined with some rather actory emotional work, gave the production a poor send-off, and when they got to the fairy tale stuff I'll guarantee you that no one will care what has gone before.

The greater part of the film is devoted to the series of exterior scenes photographed in beauty spots along the Pacific Coast with some few score scantily clad maidens chasing back and forth through most of these scenes. When I say "scantily clad," I mean that most of these dames wore nothing but a little drapery which fluttered in the breeze, and when they hit the water they generally forgot to wear that. For he who loves to examine the human form, I would recommend "The Sirens of the Sea," because they have quite an assortment on display for quite some length of time. Of course, the flashes which show the girls are very short at times, but they are repeated frequently enough to give most anyone a feeling that they have seen quite enough.

Despite this rather wholesale display of figgers, the production is not what you might call suggestive, because all of these scenes have been photographed in very beautiful exteriors, and the general tone of the production after it hits the fairy stuff is decidedly artistic. The lightings are good and the composition of the exterior scenes was very pleasing, so that the girls lazing around with little or nothing on blend into the picture as a part of the action, rather than as a display of their measurements.

Some of the swimming scenes were as pretty as anything I've ever seen for artistic composition, and many of them registered graceful dives and some interesting trick swimming.

There is supposed to be a story to all of this, but, really, the story is lost in the shuffle, and I can't feel that the average fan is going to worry about the plot in watching this sort of a production.

Louise Lovely as the shero, and Jack Mulhall as the hero were quite satisfactory, their chief job being to lead the rest of the undressed ones through a lot of wild chases over the rocks.

Carmel Myers, who was presented as the wicked wun trying to split up the team of Jack and Louise, seemed very beautiful in a few of her closeups, and then, on other occasions, she didn't photograph to advantage.

The lady who was billed as "The Soul of Sorrow" or some such title—it being registered that it was her tears which made the sea—will catch the eye of quite a large percentage of any audience because she was thinly clad, indeed.

Sydney Dean, Evelyn Selbie, Helen Wright and William Quinn were others in the cast.

The Box Office Angle.

The first of this is rather unimportant as it stands and really could be reduced even more, because it is decidedly poor as compared with the artistic effect registered by the exterior scenes in which the sirens figure.

It would seem to me that this is a pretty safe bet most anywhere because a mermaid picture is a sure-fire drawing card, and this has been artistically photographed so that those who see it will undoubtedly have a good word to say for the beauty of the production, even though they on't care for the wandering story or the modern scenes.

Figured as a State rights special, I would say that this is valuable only as "Undine" or such special productions might be considered valuable, because its only merit is the fact that there are a lot of girls chasing around the beach with little on, and a good many scenes in which they swim in the water with nothing on. It is pretty, to be true, but it has no other merit, since the story is of no consequence whatever. It never registers.

In playing this I would forget the stars and center my attention upon the name of the picture with a display of the sirens in action.

ERNEST STERN, Inc.
THE TITLE MAN
Specializes in
MOTION PICTURE TITLES
OF THE HIGHEST GRADE
110 Seventh Ave., New York - - Phone Bryant 4873

CANADIAN MOVING PICTURE DIGEST
An Exclusive Photoplay Trade Journal.
Published Weekly.
100% Circulation. Orpheum Theatre Bldg. Montreal, P. Q.

RATHER ORDINARY ACTION MELO WITH GOOD UNDERLYING THOUGHT

Roy Stewart and Belle Bennett in

THE BOND OF FEAR

Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Jack Conway
AUTHOR.....Edith Kennedy
CAMERAMAN.....Paul E. Eagler
AS A WHOLE.....Movie meller with flashes of action, helped by underlying psychology
STORY.....Never really impresses but fairly interesting
DIRECTION.....Ordinary movie caliber, except flashes of action
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Just good straight stuff; not exceptional or artistic LIGHTINGS.....A few effects; generally ordinary
CAMERA WORK.....Acceptable
STARS.....Failed to impress; lacked distinctive personality
SUPPORT.....Somewhat actory and ordinary
EXTERIORS.....Mostly desert shots
INTERIORS.....Acceptable; a few very good
DETAIL.....Acceptable
TIME.....Fifty-four minutes (5 parts)

ALTHOUGH there was a suggestion of psychology in the underlying theme of this, the production will register as a movie meller because the players failed to build the characterizations sufficiently well to make them stand out effectively, and the action incidents are given more prominence than the characterization bits.

The story was based on a situation where a judge, who was very severe in dispensing justice, thought he had killed his brother, with the result that he ran away into the desert country.

He and his guide picked up a girl in the desert, and when they afterwards learned that the sherriff was looking for a woman who killed a man, the judge thought that this woman was as guilty as he.

He was going to marry her, until he learned by a newspaper that his brother had not died immediately. Then he turned promptly from the fearful fugitives to the unforgiving magistrate and notified the authorities that the girl they wanted was in the hotel.

Roy Stewart, the guide, then pulled a little bing-bang action and did an exciting getaway with the girl, who was shown to make one of those wild leaps from a window and land on the back of the flying horse ridden by the guide. The guide and the woman were pursued into desert, and then the judge asked the innkeeper about the case in the papers, and the innkeeper told him that he thought the man had died. This converted the judge into a fugitive again, because two men at this moment came to the desk inquiring for him.

The judge fled into the desert and became the victim of a sandstorm, being buried alive at the end. This left the guide and the woman together, and we learned that the woman was not the one the sheriff had been seeking.

The characterization scenes in this missed fire most of the time because the artists were unable to put them over effectively. The flashes of action lifted it a bit, but, considered as a whole, it is only a movie meller of just about "average" caliber.

The Box Office Angle.

I can't see any box office drawing power in the names of either Roy Stewart or Belle Bennett, and certainly "The Bond of Fear" means nothing in the young lives of most of your fans.

If you are playing program stuff this may get by because of the few flashes of action and the fact that the story has an underlying theme—even though the characters have not made the most of it. Of course if you can get something with more box office value, that's the wise thing to do.

In advertising this, if you are going to play it, you might say: "Have you ever noticed what a difference 'point of view' makes? Did you ever stop to figure that you condemn others, whereas if you or yours were concerned in the same situation your opinions would switch suddenly?"

PAINFULLY TIRESOME AND DRAGGY WESTERN MELO, NEEDS CUTTING

Harold Lockwood in

UNDER HANDICAP

Yorke—Metro

DIRECTOR.....Fred J. Balshofer
AUTHOR.....Jackson Gregory
SCENARIO BY..Fred J. Balshofer & Richard V. Spencer
CAMERAMAN.....Antonio Gaudio
AS A WHOLE.....Very tiresome, draggy melo of reforming hero on Western ranch
STORY.....Nothing new, and certainly told in too much detail
DIRECTION.....Failed to find particularly artistic exteriors or lightings, and certainly used twice the footage production deserved
LIGHTINGS.....Some fairly good, but generally poor
CAMERA WORK.....Composition generally rather poor; straight photography satisfactory
STAR.....Rather pleasing hero, but surely "Under Handicap" with excess footage
SUPPORT.....Anna Little very pleasing; others satisfactory
EXTERIORS.....A few good shots; generally ordinary
INTERIORS.....Acceptable
DETAIL.....Much too much
TIME.....One hour and 42 minutes (8 parts)

THEY certainly did put a "handicap" on everyone in this when they got the fool notion to let it run into such excess footage.

I can't figure any reason why this should have been permitted to run in more than 5,000 feet, or even 4,500 feet, because in such footage it would have been an interesting Western melodrama with enough action to carry it through at a nice speed.

Presented in running time of one hour and forty-two minutes, this becomes painfully tiresome and draggy, with the result that every scene and every player is certainly "Under Handicap." The effectiveness of all of the situations was marred by the unnecessary footage.

The story was the rather well-known situation of the young man from the East who landed in the West and had to make good, and the only twist that they developed in this story was the bit of psychology registering the thought that the hero considered himself too good to work with the roughnecks on the ranch at first, but afterwards appreciated the glory of hard work well done.

Of course, Harold Lockwood as the hero had to whip the willunous ranch foreman and do all the routine stuff, including making love to the boss' daughter, with the grand finale of taking charge of the construction of the big dam, which had to be built within a specified time.

To make this a little more intrickut, there was the usual gang of willuns trying to block the building of the dam, and we found that hero's father was back of these willuns. On the finish the dam was blown up by the willuns, without hero's father knowing of it, and so he came in and said it would be all right, that he'd build another dam, and at the same time he welcomed son home again.

Mr. Lockwood made a favorable impression, but he certainly would have had a better chance if only his best scenes had been shown, instead of so much footage that was unnecessary.

Anna Little as the girl was very pleasing. William Clifford played the part of the wicked wun. The remainder of the cast were quite satisfactory.

The Box Office Angle.

Certainly I would urgently request the exchange to do something to this before they sent it on. There is no earthly reason why the production should be more than five reels in footage, and such editing would make it a much better picture. It would be a satisfactory Western melo if properly reduced in length, but in the present form it is so terribly draggy and so filled with unnecessary scenes that I am afraid it would prove rather disappointing to most anyone.

There are very few subjects, indeed, that can run much over an hour, and when it comes to an hour and forty-three minutes, that's coming near to the limit!

You of course know where Lockwood stands in your community, and, naturally, he is a decided factor with this particular subject. If you are going to play it I would mention the presence of Anna Little, however, because you will surely find that she has quite a following, due to the fact that she has played real parts under many big directors for several years.

Don't let anybody tell you that this is a "wonderful special"—because it's just a Western mellerdrammer which will be very satisfactory in reduced footage and very unsatisfactory in the present length.

CONVENIENT HYPNOTISM MELO WELL DONE, STAR IN DUAL ROLE

Fannie Ward in

THE CRYSTAL GAZER

Lasky—Paramount

DIRECTOR	George Melford
AUTHORS	Eve Unsell and Edna G. Riley
CAMERAMAN	Percy Hilburn
AS A WHOLE	Well-played hypnotism melo helped by effective treatment
STORY	Unconvincing twin sister mixup, but interesting
DIRECTION	Made individual scenes effective; kept atmosphere istinctive; handled dual role without double exposures
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally very pleasing; excellent at times
LIGHTINGS	Many very effective—particularly some closeups in dramatic moments
CAMERA WORK	Very good
STAR	Handled dual role satisfactorily; registered some dramatic scenes most effectively
SUPPORT	Excellent; well balanced
EXTERIORS	Satisfactory
INTERIORS	Good
DETAIL	A few good touches
TIME	Forty-eight minutes (5 parts)

WHILE there is nothing unusual or particularly original about this story, the director has provided a sufficient amount of effective atmosphere with good lightings to make the thing seem worth while, and a carefully chosen and very capable supporting cast helped Miss Ward make the situations that were provided seem quite dramatic.

The plot was a combination of various well known situations, the story being one of those "twin sister" things where one is adopted by wealthy people, while the other becomes the victim of a hypnotist who used her as his subject.

There was the hero who got confused between the two because they looked alike, and yet it seemed that no one else paid any attention to the fact that these two girls did look so much alike.

After the well-known scene where the hypnotist appeared in a society event where the other sister was a guest, they sent the society sister away for a while, made the hypnotist-subject sister a guest in society, and then, to get rid of one of the two, they pulled a fire on the finish in which one of the girls rescued the other, being fatally burnt in doing so. This saved the hero the difficult task of deciding which of the two girls he should marry, since he had proposed to both.

Jack Dean as the hypnotist had the best part that he has portrayed in many, many months. It was a character for which his particular type is fitted, and he handled his situations very effectively. Several of his scenes with Miss Ward were particularly well done.

Miss Ward had to wear two different wigs to look like two different people, and, naturally, she photographed to better advantage in some scenes than she did in others. The general impression which she made, however, was a very pleasing one.

Raymond Hatton made a small part effective, and Harrison Ford was quite pleasing as the hero.

The Box Office Angle.

Despite the fact that this has been intelligently played and effectively lighted, I fear that you cannot afford to make much noise about it, because the story is only routine movie stuff of the caliber which the average fan is willing to accept as a program offering. but unwilling to take very seriously.

This sort of film is dead before it starts, because the plot never has a chance of really convincing or registering as real life. As an interesting bit of melo, most any fan will accept this principally because there are some good lightings, a few well played scenes and a general air of distinction about the entire production.

You can safely figure it a good program offering, and in advertising it I would suggest that you rig up a lobby display including an inverted gold-fish bowl planted conspicuously on a pedestal draped in some rich cloth. You might put beside this a big coon in a turban or some similar outfit.

In advertising this you might speak of Fannie Ward as the star who has just recently signed a long term contract with Pathe at a very large salary, because anything like that makes interesting reading to a fan and will give them a little additional interest in the star who is making some sort of a move.

HAROLD LOCKWOOD

Yorke--Metro

STAR A FIND, PRODUCTION ARTISTIC AND IMPRESSIVE

Elsie Ferguson in

BARBARY SHEEP

Artcraft

DIRECTOR.....Maurice Tourneur
AUTHOR.....Robert Hichens
SCENARIO BY.....Charles Maigne
CAMERAMAN.....John Vanderbroeck
SCENIC SETTINGS BY.....Ben Carre
AS A WHOLE.....Very artistically done; beautiful star lifts it decidedly STORY.....Simple "Eternal Triangle" situation, but developed one or two rather dramatic clashes
DIRECTION.....Made atmosphere distinctive and artistic and registered some very effective photographic bits; handled star to advantage
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Very pleasing and artistic
LIGHTINGS.....Many very effective; generally quite pleasing
CAMERA WORK.....Very good
STAR.....Very beautiful and played intelligently SUPPORT.....Excellent
EXTERIORS.....Excellent atmosphere
INTERIORS.....Generally very distinctive and artistic, although two "setty" studio shots used for exteriors
DETAIL.....Some good touches
TIME.....Sixty-four minutes (5 parts)

I THINK Elsie Ferguson is the "find" of the year. She is certainly the most promising of the well-known stars of the stage who have been brought to the screen.

From her first introduction it was evident that she was going to screen beautifully, and the quiet manner in which she played her important scenes proved that she has the intelligence necessary to adapt herself to the needs of the work before the camera.

This story was comparatively simple, dealing with the well-known "Eternal Triangle" situation, the locale being the interesting Barbary country, with an Arab adventurer trying to tempt the wife of an Englishman who cared less for romance in the moonlight than he did for hunting mountain sheep.

The wife never seriously considered the Arab, but she did enjoy the visits to the desert in the moonlight because of the romance connected therewith.

A dream was introduced in which the wife herself entertained the intruder, with the result that her husband came in and killed them both, and this gave her a suggestion of impending trouble, and she therefore suggested that they go back to England.

Hubby, however, wanted to hunt one more day, and the result was that, on this occasion, his guide tried to keep him away over night, and consequently he became suspicious. This led up to the final climax where he hid in the hills to kill the betrayer of his wife, and there was quite a melodramatic clash before he found the willun killed by a madman (who had been lurking in the offing for that purpose). Hubby then forgave his wife, and they quit.

Producer Tourneur provided a decidedly artistic, distinctive and pleasing atmosphere, and this, combined with the presence of Miss Ferguson, who figured in at least two-thirds of the production, assures this being considered a very much worth-while production.

The novel from which this has been adapted is rather well known, and Miss Ferguson has been considered one of the most popular stars of the last few years on Broadway.

In two places the producer semed to have slipped a bi in using studio sets instead of exteriors. One of these was a scene of some characters walking through a set which was cut into Miss Ferguson's introduction, and the other was a studio set representing the desert where Miss Ferguson and Pedro de Cordoba met. This scene came just where the husband decided to return to his home. Most fans are very quick to catch studio exteriors these days, and they jar particularly when cut in with real exteriors supposed to represent the same locale. The studio street scenes were very well done.

Certainly, by her work in this, Miss Ferguson establishes herself as one of the biggest possibilities of the screen. She will undoubtedly become a tremendous favorite with film fans as a result of this one picture.

Mr. Cordoba, as the Arab adventurer, gave one of the best performances I have seen him register on the screen. He fitted this character particularly well, and played with the proper repose to make it impressive.

Lumsden Hare, as the husband, played so quietly and so humanly that this part stood out with particular force, securing all the sympathy without any effort whatever to play for it.

The other types were well chosen and quite satisfactory. In the cast were Alex K. Shannon, Macey Harlan and Maud Ford.

The Box Office Angle.

You can safely afford to make a lot of fuss about this and play it up big as the first appearance of Miss Ferguson on the screen. She is a very beautiful woman and of the refined, intelligent type that will appeal to everyone, so that I believe you will be justified in proceeding at once on a campaign intended to establish her as one of your big favorites.

I would call particular attention to the fact that Miss Ferguson has been considered one of Broadway's most popular stars, and refer to her recent exceptional success in "Outcast."

You can of course strengthen your advertising by referring to the fact that this was produced by M. Tourneur, who has made some of the most successful of the productions in the past few years. You can safely promise that this is particularly artistic and has been very carefully produced. The fact that it has been adapted from Robert Hichens' successful novel is also worthy of some attention in your ads., although it seems to me that you should center the interest upon Miss Ferguson.

HEART STIRRING HAND COLORED PATRIOTIC SLIDES 25c. Each

71. If It's Worth Living Under, It's Worth Fighting For.
54. Americans Must Protect America.
95. We Are With You, Mr. President. One Hundred Million Strong.
53. Your Country Needs You.
28. American Flag.
95. President Wilson & Flag.
60. Geo. Washington.
45. The Birth of the American Flag.
70. Abraham Lincoln.
76. Spirit of '76—Reflects in 1917.
27. If It's Good Enough to Live Under, It's Worth Fighting for.
87. Pledge Allegiance.
68. Star Spangled Banner.
42. My Country 'Tis of Thee (Flag).

EXCELSIOR ILLUSTRATING CO., 219 Sixth Ave. New York City

TABULATED PERCENTAGE REPORTS FROM EXHIBITORS

THE BATTING AVERAGES

These are the averages of the companies having 200 reports or more.

Reports		% P. P.	% B. O.	Repeat
2628	PARAMOUNT	68.4	62.3	397
2349	TRIANGLE	70.6	65.2	434
595	WORLD	67.7	61.5	49
674	METRO	70.8	67.0	57
767	FOX	73.1	70.8	106
233	MUTUAL	72.0	71.1	17
298	BLUEBIRD	62.7	63.5	23
544	VITAGRAPH	68.1	66.2	76

THE NUMBER BEFORE THE NAME OF THE FEATURE INDICATES THE NUMBER OF REPORTS RECEIVED AND TABULATED ON THAT FILM.

THE FIRST COLUMN CARRIES THE PERCENTAGE OF PLEASED PATRONS.

THE SECOND COLUMN SHOWS THE BOX OFFICE PERCENTAGE.

FIGURES IN THE THIRD COLUMN INDICATE THAT MANY REPORTED THE FILM WORTH A RETURN DATE.

All reports in this percentage tabulation have been marked on this scale:

EXCEPTIONAL	100%
EXCELLENT	80%
GOOD	60%
FAIR	40%
POOR	20%
BAD	0%

PARAMOUNT

Reports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
2628	Paramount	68.4	62.3	397
3	In Bishop's Carriage	85	91
2	The Lost Paradise	50	73
8	The Virginian	81	73	2
2	Such a Little Queen	78	78	1
1	Marta of the Lowlands	50	70
3	Where the Trail Divides	93	90	1
11	Wildflower	89	82	6
1	The County Chairman	80	80
1	What's His Name	75	100
5	Behind the Screens	81	78
4	Man from Mexico	88	70	1
1	The Man From Home	70	70
1	Circus Man	91	95
2	Rose of the Rancho	84	77
5	The Bargain	80	74	3
2	Ghost Breakers	60	63
7	The Crucible	92	84	3
1	False Colors	50	80
5	The Sign of the Cross	79	85
4	Cameo Kirby	61	50
8	Cinderella	85	93	4
1	The Million	70	90
5	Girl of the Golden West	79	77	2
3	The Dancing Girl	65	65
3	The Italian	77	67	1
1	No Laughing Matter	90	85
1	Morals of Marcus	60	50
5	The Goose Girl	93	95	4
2	After Five	51	50
1	Mistress Nell	85	95
2	Buckshot John	60	60
3	Her Triumph	80	74	1
3	The Warrens of Virginia	70	71	1
1	Country Boy	60	60
6	David Harem	82	78	1
1	A Gentleman of Leisure	80	70
2	The Caprices of Kitty	63	70
1	Love Route	60	60
1	Sunshine Molly	40	20
1	The Governor's Lady	97	85
3	Gretna Green	100	100	2
3	Are You a Mason?	78	84
1	Pretty Mrs. Smith	65	90
1	The Unafraid	80	75
1	When We Were 21	75	85
4	Snobs	64	52
5	Captain Courtesy	84	86	1
2	Captive	82	87
2	Niobe	75	53	1
3	Help Wanted	80	78
5	The Woman	86	59	1
5	House of Lost Court	81	54	1
4	Fanchon, The Cricket	89	92	3
3	Betty in Search of Thrill	85	87
5	Stolen Goods	78	75
2	Wild-Goose Chase	60	55	1
6	Pretty Sister Jose	84	82	2
5	Jim the Penman	64	61
6	The Dawn of a To-morrow	83	88	1
5	Arab	89	88	2
1	Clarissa	75	80
2	The Dictator	68	48
5	Wild Olive	82	69
6	Chimmy Fadden	91	75	1
4	The Little Pal	76	87
4	Rugmaker's Daughter	40	50
2	The Clue	74	88
6	Kindling	81	82
1	The Running Fight	60	70
3	The Fighting Hope	77	80
5	Kilmeny	75	73
8	Seven Sisters	86	74	1
3	Puppet Crown	83	80
19	Rags	91	93	8
2	Sold	83	72
6	The Secret Orchid	79	74
5	Nearly a Lady	65	75
6	The Marriage of Kitty	76	64
3	Poor Schmaltz	60	57
8	Helene of the North	87	81	2
3	The Majesty of the Law	55	60
3	Heart of Jennifer	50	55
2	Incorrigible Dukane	75	55
4	Esmeralda	89	89	2
2	The Case of Becky	65	65
1	Out of Darkness	60	40
1	Peer Gynt	82	100
4	The Explorers	72	61
4	'Twas Ever Thus	53	65
2	Voice in the Fog	75	97
6	Fatal Card	65	59
4	Zaza	91	67	2
6	The Girl of Yesterday	89	88	3
7	White Pearl	71	75
4	Blackbirds	57	58
7	Chorus Lady	73	68
6	The Secret Sin	69	74	1
7	Yankee Girl	52	57
6	Masqueraders	56	56
12	Carmen	82	83	4
12	Still Waters	94	83	7
8	Madame Butterfly	82	86	3
7	Mummy and Humming Bird	64	56
7	Bella Donna	92	77	4
8	Armstrong's Wife	79	65
8	Chimmie Fadden Out West	83	78	2
8	A Gentleman From Indiana	66	78
10	Prince and the Pauper	92	87	5
10	Mr. Grex from Monte Carlo	84	69	1
9	Jane	75	51
9	The Unknown	76	67	1
18	The Cheat	94	80	12
9	The Reform Candidate	80	54	1
9	The Immigrant	73	62
10	The Old Homestead	85	84	7
8	Lydia Gilmore	81	61	1
10	Temptation	82	77	2
10	The Foundling	78	76	3
6	Tongues of Men	77	53	1
8	Mice and Men	84	80	2
7	The Golden Chance	77	61	2
2	My Lady Incog	50	35
5	Ragamuffins	77	53
5	Call of the Cumberlands	79	64
8	The Spider	87	64	1
10	Puddin' Head Wilson	81	62	4
9	Tennessee's Pardner	65	53
8	Madame Le President	24	46
9	Nearly a King	52	49	1
13	Trail of the Lonesome Pine	75	77	3
8	Fell In Love With His Wife	63	51	1
8	Blacklist	62	52	1
10	Out of the Drifts	80	56	4
8	Diplomacy	53	54	1
14	Poor Little Peppina	88	84	8
16	To Have and To Hold	74	69	4
12	Ben Blair	72	63
10	For the Defense	68	57	1
7	The Code of Marcia Grey	64	59	2
9	The Lost Bridegroom	69	60	2
8	The Saleslady	72	62	1
15	Audrey	73	70	8
9	The Sowers	64	59
11	The Heart of Paula	71	54	1
12	The Race	69	59
8	The Eternal Grind	70	78	3
10	The Love Mask	59	54	2
10	Molly Make-Believe	87	82	6
7	The Red Widow	62	55	1
12	The Heart of Nora Flynn	72	60	4
8	A Moment Before	52	64	1
12	David Garrick	68	46	2
9	The Innocent Lie	56	51
16	Marie Rosa	81	80	4
12	Alien Souls	69	67	1
13	The Feud Girl	60	50
16	Pasquale	78	52	1
16	Sweet Kitty Bellairs	72	62	2
20	Saints and Sinners	51	40
17	Thousand-Dollar Husband	59	62	4
22	A Gutter Magdalene	62	54	1
18	Evil Thereof	44	44
15	The Making of Maddalena	63	57	3
23	Silks and Satins	53	58	10
14	Destiny's Toy	60	51
18	The Clown	72	54	3
20	Susie Snowflakes	69	50	1
16	The World's Great Snare	73	78	4
19	The American Beauty	61	61	1
22	The Dupe	64	64	1
22	The Smugglers	52	50	1
26	The Selfish Woman	72	68	4
29	Davy Crockett	67	67
28	The Dream Girl	65	64	2
28	Under Cover	79	75	5
27	International Marriage	55	51	1
27	Common Ground	64	64	1
35	Hulda from Holland	55	64	23
30	House of Golden Windows	73	64	3
22	A Woman in the Case	72	72	5
25	Little Lady Eileen	87	89	10
23	The Stronger Love	53	52
31	Public Opinion	82	72	4
21	Rolling Stones	67	60	3
21	The Honorable Friend	65	62	1
20	Victory of Conscience	60	50	3
21	Each Pearl a Tear	74	69	2
22	The Parson of Panamint	79	76	7
15	The Big Sister	58	57
14	The Reward of Patience	65	55
15	The House of Lies	73	53	1

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
14 The Daugther of McGregor	56	45
18 Ashes of Embers	85	83	7
16 The Quest of Life	59	61
14 Anton, the Terrible	46	45
17 The Lash	57	55
13 The Storm	75	65	1
19 The Intrigue	81	61	2
16 Her Father's Son	74	68	2
14 Witchcraft	55	55
14 The Kiss	74	68	2
16 The Rainbow Princess	82	74	3
15 Seventeen	85	74	2
14 Miss George Washington	95	95	11
15 The Heir to the Hoorah	82	69	5
16 The Soul of Kura San	80	73	1
12 A Son of Erin	79	73	2
10 Unprotected	53	55	1
11 The Years of the Locust	49	50
12 The Plow Girl	77	63
9 The Yellow Pawn	66	57	1
9 Nanette of the Wilds	50	57	2
7 Martyrdom of Philip Strong	53	55	1
10 The Coney Island Princess	62	63	1
10 The Road to Love	72	59	1
14 Oliver Twist	85	69	6
13 The Victoria Cross	44	54	1
17 The Traveling Salesman	78	60	3
20 The Right Direction	76	61	2
21 Snow White	95	95	13
16 Redeeming Love	63	60	1
21 The Slave Market	74	70	5
13 The Evil Eye	30	44	1
19 Great Expectations	74	55	1
17 Happiness of Three Women	73	58	1
14 Betty to the Rescue	46	48
1 What Money Can't Buy	40	40
16 A Girl Like That	55	51
16 Lost and Won	59	50
19 The Golden Fetter	50	56
19 His Sweetheart	83	57	2
19 The Wax Model	67	56
19 Each To His Kind	62	60
16 Her Own People	72	52
11 The Black Wolf	35	41
17 The American Consul	53	50	1
20 The Fortunes of Fifi	66	77	2
20 On Record	62	56	2
17 Winning of Sally Temple	40	48
18 Those Without Sin	53	52	1
16 Castles For Two	52	49	1
13 Out of the Wreck	60	54
13 Sapho	74	83	3
11 Prison Without Walls	54	54
12 The Dummy	71	54
9 The Spirit of Romance	62	53
8 As Men Love	73	53
10 The Bottle Imp	75	66	2
7 The Bond Between	50	39
8 A School for Husbands	49	46	1
8 The Lonesome Chap	51	44
9 Sleeping Fires	56	63	1
8 The Tides of Barnegat	49	43
8 The Cost of Hatred	40	38
10 The Valentine Girl	73	76
5 Unconquered	28	31
6 The Girl at Home	51	44
9 Heart's Desire	28	36
8 Sacrifice	26	43
7 The Primrose Ring	44	48
8 The Silent Partner	33	36
6 Marcellina Millions	41	30
7 The Highway of Hope	38	33
7 Her Better Self	55	59
7 The Undying Flame	35	47
6 Freckles	70	61
3 The World Apart	42	40
2 Giving Becky a Chance	70	51
3 The Jaguar's Claws	40	47
4 The Inner Shrine	38	58
3 The Roadside Impresario	28	17
3 The Heir of the Ages	23	22
3 Her Strange Wedding	28	34
3 The Little Boy Scout	57	43
3 At First Sight	50	35
3 Big Timber	67	65
5 Love That Lives	70	84
5 Forbidden Pathes	34	37
4 What Money Can't Buy	34	53
1 The Cook of Canyon Camp	20	20
3 The Squaw Man's Son	60	57
3 The Crystal Gazer	20	20
2 A Kiss for Sussie	20	20

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
4 The Amazons	100	100
2 Mysterious Miss Terry	90	60
3 The Law of the Land	20	20
4 The Varmint	80	60
3 Hashimura Togo	80	60

TRIANGLE

2349 Triangle	70.6	65.2	434
10 The Iron Strain	81	66	2
9 The Lamb	84	75	3
8 Old Heidelberg	72	63	1
11 The Coward	84	67	1
9 Martyrs of the Alamo	67	57	2
14 The Disciple	85	76	2
7 Matrimony	81	74	2
5 Sable Lorcha	64	53
6 The Golden Claw	61	72
9 Double Trouble	64	64	2
7 Aloha Oe	63	65	1
5 Lily and Rose	61	53
8 Jordan is a Hard Road	56	52
6 Winged Idol	53	52
1 Fenitents	28	32
11 The Edge of the Abyss	67	61
2 Submarine Pirate	85	78	1
5 Cross Currents	48	45
11 Between Men	72	70	1
14 Let Katy Do It	87	66	6
5 The Corner	56	47
5 The Missing Link	55	43	1
3 Beckoning Flame	65	48
9 The Wood Nymph	54	50	1
8 The Conqueror	71	70
9 Price of Power	55	51
10 The Green Swamp	80	78	1
12 Acquitted	69	51
6 D'Artagnan	59	54
18 His Picture in the Papers	90	75	5
13 Honor's Altar	77	67	2
14 Betty of Greystone	77	65	2
23 Peggy	94	91	15
7 Don Quixote	57	56
9 The Last Act	79	78	1
11 Daphne and the Pirate	71	57	1
18 Heil's Hinges	93	89	11
17 The Flying Torpedo	88	80	8
14 Bullets and Brown Eyes	85	75	3
14 Martha's Vindication	79	72	2
14 Moral Fabric	75	62	1
15 Hoodoo Ann	68	65	1
15 The Raiders	79	70
14 The Habit of Happiness	92	85	5
8 Waifs	70	59	1
8 Little Meena's Romance	64	60	1
17 The Aryan	59	80	6
10 Sold for Marriage	71	72	1
17 Stepping Stones	85	75	2
10 Sunshine Dad	36	48
9 Civilization's Child	68	64	1
14 Children In the House	80	66	2
11 The Beggar of Cawnpore	61	49
19 The Good-Bad Man	90	92	4
12 The No-Good Guy	74	60	3
17 Susan Rocks the Boat	69	63
20 Not My Sister	79	77	4
18 Child of Paris Streets	76	64
22 The Primal Lure	82	76	7
8 Mr. Goode, the Samaritan	53	53
26 The Market of Vain Desire	79	64	5
22 Going Straight	77	78	3
29 The Bugle Call	93	79	9
26 Reggie Mixes In	93	80	11
16 The Sorrows of Love	66	69	1
21 An Innocent Magdalene	71	71	2
18 The Dividend	70	68	1
21 The Wild Girl of Sierras	45	53
25 An Apostle of Vengeance	88	83	4
18 Casey at the Bat	44	48
28 The Phantom	83	72	7
30 Flirting With Fate	87	86	11
31 The Deserter	85	69	11
26 The Little School Ma'am	74	67	2
26 The Eye of the Night	74	58	5
19 Stranded	60	50
27 The Captive God	65	70	2
23 The Halfbreed	72	74	2
22 The Payment	81	70	3
18 The Marriage of Molly-O	48	47
24 Honor Thy Name	87	73	4
22 The Devil's Needle	64	64	1 3
31 Shell "33"	86	69	6
26 Hell-to-Pay Austin	83	66	6
21 Lieutenant Danny, U. S. A.	79	69
16 Pillars of Society	59	56	1
22 Home	91	80	9
16 Gretchen the Greenhorn	64	62	2
21 The Patriot	79	80	6
24 The Social Secretary	89	75	8
17 The Thoroughbred	82	72	1
11 The Little Liar	69	57
19 The Wolf Woman	86	89	6
16 The Dawnmaker	58	78	3
20 Diane of the Follies	71	72	2
27 Manhattan Madness	94	92	12
22 Plain Jane	88	75	3
20 Old Folks at Home	81	64	2
17 The Jungle Child	60	61	1
15 The Rummy	67	54	1
21 The Return of Draw Egan	88	86	7
20 The Vagabond Prince	75	70	3
19 Somewhere in France	76	69	1
18 A Corner in Colleens	88	80	7
12 A Sister of Six	69	64	2
21 Fifty-Fifty	89	83	6
4 War's Women	61	48
12 Atta Boy's Last Race	54	55
16 American Aristocracy	92	89	9
10 The Microscope Mystery	50	43
14 Honorable Algy	76	65	3
14 Jim Grimsby's Boy	68	62	5
15 The Devil's Double	91	77	7
12 The Children Paid	72	63	3
14 Children of the Feud	55	52	1
8 The Criminal	49	45
10 A Gamble in Souls	67	65	3
15 The Wharf Rat	54	55
20 The Matrimaniac	92	94	10
20 The Sin Ye Do	92	85	10
13 Heiress of Coffee Dan's	60	53	2
10 Three of Many	62	53
9 House Built Upon Sand	75	67	3
8 Nina the Flower Girl	51	52
11 The Female of the Species	72	74	2
16 Truthful Tulliver	97	93	9
12 The Weaker Sex	88	83	4
7 The Little Yank	40	52	1
10 The Bride of Hate	78	74	4
11 The Red Bullet	62	55
14 The Americano	90	97	11
10 Chicken Casey	75	56	1
14 Jim Bludso	63	41	1
14 The Crab	83	70	5
10 Girl of the Timber Claims	41	39
16 The Gun-Fighter	76	85	10
13 The Bad Boy	71	54	2
11 The Princess of the Dark	39	41
6 Stage Struck	41	38
12 Last of the Ingrams	45	42
9 Blood Will Tell	64	61
5 A Love Sublime	47	40
8 The Little Brother	51	37	2
14 Back of the Man	90	81	5
10 Betsy's Burglar	59	54
14 The Square-Deal Man	96	95	7
11 The Dark Road	60	49	1
5 A Daughter of the Poor	57	55
9 A Woman's Awakening	61	52
9 Her Father's Keeper	54	48
9 Her Official Fathers	56	48
9 Old-Fashioned Young Man	48	47
10 Sweetheart of the Doomed	74	68	4
10 Paddy O'Hara	62	52	1
11 The Desert Man	92	91	4
9 Cheerful Givers	47	41
10 The Pinch Hitter	96	71	2
5 Hands Up	35	35
8 The Snarl	54	63
4 Might and the Man	25	30
6 Happiness	59	56
4 The Man Who Made Good	45	39
6 Wild Winship's Widow	58	58
6 Soul's Triumphant	30	28
7 The Millionaire Vagrant	78	64
8 Wolf Lowry	93	96	1
6 The Girl, Glory	73	52
7 Bawbs of Blue Ridge	33	51
7 Hater of Men	79	64
5 American—That's All	32	32
7 Love or Justice	75	69
3 Her Excellency the Governor	35	34
6 Paws of the Bear	55	48
3 Madcap Madge	73	48

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
8 The Clod Hopper	98	85	1
4 The Flame of the Yukon	100	94
4 A Strange Transgressor	80	83
4 Time Locks and Diamonds	30	33
4 The Mother Instinct	55	50
4 Sudden Jim	94	93
6 The Sawdust Ring	87	60
6 Borrowed Plumage	48	53
6 In Slumberland	74	31
1 Seeking Happiness	100	60

WORLD

595 World	67.7	61.5	49
4 Hearts Afire	70	78
1 Daughter of the Sea	60	50
8 The Warning	88	48
4 The Little Dutch Girl	80	63
1 The Price of Her Silence	80	90
8 The Master of the House	68	52
1 The Dragon	40	38
1 The Price	80	65
1 Love's Cross Roads	85	40
1 Better Woman	75	48
1 By Whose Hand	60	55
1 Her Great Hour	40	40
1 When it Strikes Home	60	48
8 Circus Romance	65	55
2 Old Dutch	75	30
2 Ballet Girl	82	47
3 Marrying Money	79	63
1 Wishing Ring	94	80
2 The Dollar Mark	55	42
1 Gentleman from Mississippi	60	40
1 As Ye Sow	100	45
1 Stolen Voice	80	80
1 Face in the Moonlight	80	60
1 Women and Wine	60	40
2 Blue Grass	75	68
1 Fruits of Desire	40	50
1 Alias Jimmy Valentine	90	94
7 Trilby	81	68	1
1 Idols	40	40
2 Master Hand	90	80
1 Devil's Toy	57	73
1 Salvation Nell	60	47
1 Family Cupboard	50	57	1
4 Heart of Blue Ridge	84	73	1
1 Butterfly on Wheel	80	70
1 Hearts of Men	80	52
1 Body and Soul	40	45
1 The Ransom	65	41
4 The Labyrinth	66	65
1 Should a Wife Forgive?	90	90
2 The Senator	83	60
1 Hearts in Exile	90	90
1 His Wife's Good Name	25	20
1 The Chain Invisible	90	5
1 The Imposter	80	75
1 Sunday	95	30
1 As In a Looking Glass	60	40
1 Over Night	70	70
1 Sins of Society	76	45
7 Camille	86	79	3
1 The Rack	89	69
1 Fine Feathers	70	40
1 The Clarion	60	75
3 The Woman in 47	74	80
5 The Yellow Passport	82	80	2
1 The Price of Happiness	58	50
2 A Woman's Power	45	50
1 Cowardly Way	60	40
2 Passersby	73	55
1 Man and His Angel	62	45
4 The Supreme Sacrifice	78	69
1 The Struggle	60	60
1 The Hand of Peril	75	67
5 Then I'll Come Back To You	76	66	1
4 The Reapers	75	65
2 The Shadow of Doubt	78	65
2 Social Highwaymen	75	48
3 Closed Road	87	81	1
7 The Feast of Life	61	73
7 Her Maternal Right	58	74
4 Sudden Riches	76	71
2 The Twin Triangle	83	45
6 Tangled Fates	57	55
3 Fate's Boomerang	42	52
5 His Brother's Wife	83	74	1
10 Perils of Divorce	61	63
13 La vie de Boheme	47	50
3 What Happened at 22	82	80
5 Crucial Test	59	58
7 The Weakness of Man	61	60
12 Sally in Our Alley	68	61
14 Paying the Price	70	70	1
12 Miss Petticoats	59	61
14 Woman's Way	75	74	4
13 The Summer Girl	56	57
12 Rail Rider	68	60
10 Husband and Wife	75	63	2
8 Almighty Dollar	76	72	1
13 The Velvet Paw	54	69	1
1 Friday, the Thirteenth	72	70
11 Dark Silence	77	79	2
4 The Revolt	66	63
7 The Gilded Cage	75	70
6 Hidden Scar	77	67
6 The Scarlet Oath	60	62
7 Man Who Stood Still	71	63
8 The Heart of a Hero	59	49
3 Without a Soul	70	85
15 Bought and Paid For	91	91	10
10 The Madness of Helen	57	54
8 Men She Married	58	55
4 The Deep Purple	81	75
11 All Man	59	63	2
7 Broken Chains	50	43
12 The Rise of Susan	79	83	6
6 The World Against Him	52	43
10 Woman Alone	67	65	1
7 On Dangerous Ground	65	71
7 The Man Who Forgot	65	61	1
4 Marriage a la Carte	73	73	1
1 The Unpardonable Sin	40	55
5 The Bondage of Fear	65	63
8 Tillie Wakes Up	79	78	1
8 The Hungry Heart	87	83	2
8 The Square Deal	69	72
3 A Girl's Folly	65	75
5 The Red Woman	49	48
4 The Web of Desire	78	73	1
5 The Family Honor	66	61
8 The Dancer's Peril	77	71	1
5 The Social Leper	65	65
4 Man's Woman	61	61
4 Darkest Russia	71	75
6 Forget-Me-Not	63	69
1 The Bludgeon	87	80
3 As Man Made Her	62	68
5 The Page Mystery	55	57
4 Yankee Pluck	61	48
4 Moral Courage	61	58
4 Mothers of France	66	51
2 Maternity	85	90
2 The Crimson Dove	60	55
3 The False Friend	65	72
2 The Stolen Paradise	50	70
1 Atonement	70	65
1 The Pawn of Fate	85	45
1 The Divorse Game	5	75
1 The Price of Pride	75	60
1 The Brand of Satan	75	60
1 The Golden Lotus	50	50
1 The Native Soul	20	30
1 When True Love Dawns	60	45

METRO

674 Metro	70.8	67.0	57
1 Her Reckoning	60	40
1 Satan Sanderson	70	70
1 Cowboy and Lady	80	55
1 Heart of a Painted Lady	85	75
1 High Road	80	80
4 Shooting of Dan McGrew	81	79
1 Middleman	90	80
1 My Best Girl	60	60
1 Right of Way	70	85
2 Second In Command	77	80
1 The Vampire	80	90
6 Soul of a Woman	93	80	1
2 Silent Voice	77	87
1 An Enemy of Society	60	40
2 Song of Wage Slave	75	70
1 Emmy of Stork's Nest	80	60
2 Final Judgment	80	85
2 Pennington's Choice	92	80
4 Woman Pays	78	52
2 One Million Dollars	78	70
3 Barbara Frietchie	82	73
5 The Yellow Streak	85	64
2 House of Tears	80	65
4 Rosemary for Remembrance	73	68
2 Black Fear	73	57
1 What'll People Say?	80	84
4 The Turmoil	70	55
3 Lure of Heart's Desire	56	56
1 Her Debt of Honor	49	50
6 A Man and His Soul	83	83	2
3 The Upstart	68	72
3 Dimples	52	58
4 Corner in Cotton	61	58
5 The Price of Malice	66	65
6 The Soul Market	83	75	1
2 Blindness of Love	80	85	1
1 Lovely Mary	67	83
1 My Madonna	80	85
6 Her Great Price	80	68	1
8 The Wall Between	78	82	1
6 The Kiss of Hate	62	74
6 Half Million Bribe	69	49
8 Playing with Fire	78	75
11 The Come-Back	75	74	1
1 Snow Birds	80	77
1 A Million a Minute	72	84	1
4 The Spell of the Yukon	79	71
6 His Great Triumph	49	43
10 The Scarlet Woman	73	84	1
10 Dorian's Divorce	74	68
1 Masked Rider	69	68
6 Flower of No Man's Land	58	75
8 The Purple Lady	82	63
10 The Eternal Question	76	83	1
11 The Quitter	69	73
15 The River of Romance	87	76	1
9 A Child of Destiny	53	56
13 The Devil at His Elbow	64	61	1
14 God's Half Acre	71	62	1
14 The Weakness of Strength	68	54
11 The Pretender	80	72	1
7 The Upheaval	57	63
10 The Light of Happiness	67	66	1
10 Mister 44	88	93	4
8 The Wheel of the Law	77	66	1
10 The Dawn of Love	66	60
8 The Iron Woman	44	57
5 Life's Shadows	66	60
13 In the Diplomatic Service	69	83	4
9 The Brand of Cowardice	65	54
13 The Gates of Eden	68	54
11 Extravagance	69	82	3
10 The Wager	78	64
1 My Madonna	80	85
8 The Sunbeam	53	51
11 Big Tremaine	74	82	5
9 The Black Butterfly	70	80	4
8 The Stolen Triumph	56	48
7 Awakening of Helena Ritchie	60	61
11 Pigin Island	68	74	3
12 Vanity	64	53
12 The White Raven	85	81	4
9 A Wife by Proxy	46	41
9 Threads of Fate	41	34
12 Bridges Burned	47	62
9 The End of the Tour	45	44
10 One of Many	66	61	1
8 The Secret of Eve	37	66	1
14 The Promise	82	84	1
6 The Barricade	58	57
7 The Hidden Children	43	62
9 The Mortal Sin	58	58
8 The Waiting Soul	49	61	1
6 The Father's Son	67	62
5 The Power of Decision	51	53
7 A Magdalene of the Hills	51	50
6 God's Law and Man's	49	49
3 The Millionaire's Double	67	60
4 The Call of Her People	63	56
5 Sowers and Reapers	61	48
3 The Soul of a Magdalene	27	34
4 The Beautiful Lie	25	30
4 The Duchess of Doubt	61	62
3 Lady Barnacle	52	47
5 The Haunted Pajamas	84	75
5 The Greatest Power	42	52
4 Alladin's Other Lamp	59	50
2 Somewhere In America	50	50
2 Will o' Wisp	20	20
2 Hidden Springs	40	40
2 Miss Robinson Crusoe	20	20
1 The Empty Soul	40	40
1 The Jury of Fate	20	20
5 The Slacker	99	96	1

FOX

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
767 Fox	73.1	70.8	106
1 Girl I Left Behind Me	0	25
1 St. Elmo	52	92
4 Fool There Was	82	86	3
1 Dr. Rameau	90	87	1
2 Kreutzer Sonata	90	85
1 The Idler	55	65
1 Celebrated Scandal	70	70
2 Clemenceau Case	87	82	1
1 Walls of Jericho	40	35
1 Woman's Resurrection	80	45
1 Anna Kerinina	67	85
2 Life's Shop Window	35	57
2 The Nigger	100	70
4 The Gilded Fool	70	75
3 Devil's Daughter	77	95
4 Should a Mother Tell?	83	76
1 Wormwood	80	80
1 Lady Audley's Secret	90	75
1 Princess Romanoff	60	60
1 Valley of the Missing	50	40
1 Children of the Ghetto	75	40
1 Samson	80	50
1 The Thief	90	40
4 Two Orphans	84	86	3
2 The Song of Hate	92	82
1 Regeneration	77	72	4
4 Wonwerful Adventure	75	77
2 Sin	65	82
2 Little Gypsy	80	74
3 Soul of Broadway	83	78	1
2 The Family Stain	87	64
3 Carmen	82	83
3 Blindness of Devotion	56	53
4 Woman's Past	63	43
3 Broken Law	82	65	1
3 Galley Slave	76	75	1
1 Unfaithful Wife	73	61
3 Her Mother's Secret	73	57
3 A Soldier's Oath	82	70
5 Destruction	86	94	1
3 Green-Eyed Monster	53	74
3 Parisian Romance	65	61
1 Fourth Estate	80	66
6 Serpent	92	92	1
4 Ruling Passion	53	25
3 Merely Mary Ann	52	45
7 Fool's Revenge	45	40
10 Fighting Blood	74	70
4 The Witch	63	59
4 Marble Heart	41	60
18 Gold and the Woman	65	80	1
10 The Bondman	79	64	1
5 A Wife's Sacrifice	55	56
12 Blue Blood and Red	84	70	1
6 Slander	80	70
10 A Modern Thelma	59	49	1
9 Man of Sorrow	63	64	1
9 Blazing Love	70	68
11 The Eternal Sapho	85	87	4
12 Sins of Men	76	61	1
14 Battle of Hearts	63	61
10 The Spider and the Fly	67	72	1
11 Hypocrisy	76	65
18 A Woman's Honor	69	71
16 East Lynne	86	85	9
15 Ambition	71	67
18 Man From Bitter Roots	82	81	2
21 Caprice of the Mountains	69	63	1
15 Tortured Heart	71	67
21 The Beast	87	66	6
26 Under Two Flags	94	92	17
19 The End of the Trail	66	79
19 Sporting Blood	62	57	1
19 Little Miss Happiness	75	68	3
19 Daredevil Kate	74	78	3
14 The Unwelcome Mother	63	66
18 Her Double Life	86	86	6
10 Where Love Leads	69	63	1
14 The Fires of Conscience	65	71	1
12 The Straight Way	67	72
11 The Ragged Princess	77	70
13 The War Bride's Secret	76	71	3
12 Romeo and Juliet	86	86	5
1 Love and Hate	66	60
4 The Mischief Maker	70	70	2
7 Jealousy	63	81
7 The Mediator	73	70	1
5 Sins of the Parents	86	72	3
6 The Battle of Life	67	62
7 The Vixen	59	73
6 The Love Thief	82	80	1
5 The Island of Desire	74	67	1
1 A Modern Cinderella	80	75	1
5 The Price of Silence	82	76	1
3 The Bitter Truth	79	80	1
4 The Primitive Call	58	63
9 The Darling of Paris	67	74
5 One Touch of Sin	65	73
7 The New York Peacock	83	79
2 A Child of the Wilds	85	65
4 The Scarlet Letter	78	69	1
5 The Tiger Woman	72	83	2
6 Sister Against Sister	82	58	1
6 A Tale of Two Cities	93	83	4
3 Melting Millions	80	56
4 The Victim	65	64
4 Loves Law	20	35
5 The Blue Streak	58	60
3 High Finance	77	63
1 American Methods	90	85
3 Her Greatest Love	78	85
2 Tangled Lives	65	65
1 The Derelict	90	45	1
2 Her Temptation	83	59
1 The Final Payment	20	20
1 The Silent Lie	90	90
1 The Slave	20	40
1 The Broadway Sport	55	40
1 Two Little Imps	90	90

MUTUAL

233 Mutual	72.0	71.1	17
1 Buzzard's Shadow	55	50
1 Death Lock	98	85
1 On the Night Stage	75	40
1 The Mating	80	70
1 Enoch Arden	100	100
1 Girl from His Town	65	70
1 Ghosts	80	65
1 Cup of Life	85	40
1 His Wife	70	95
1 House of Scandal	90	75
1 Infatuation	60	50
3 Miracle of Life	83	83	1
1 Inner Struggle	40	20
1 Mill of Floss	75	90
1 The Painted Soul	82	85
1 End of the Road	90	100
1 Father and Son	75	75
1 The Reward	80	50
2 Bird of Prey	85	87
1 Inspiration	70	100	1
2 As a Woman Sows	80	81
1 The Decoy	50	85
1 The Drifter	75	60
1 Life's Blind Alley	50	75
1 Silas Marner	100	100	1
3 The Craving	69	67
1 Law Unto Himself	46	50
1 Heart of Tara	75	75
1 According to Law	65	52
1 Overalls	75	90
3 My Partner	72	70
1 The Bruiser	78	65	1
1 Hidden Law	100	90	1
1 Love Liar	72	81	1
1 Revelations	50	50
1 The Net	90	100	1
1 The Haunted Manor	52	58
2 Feathertop	90	90
1 Lying Lips	60	70
1 Dust	80	80
1 Other People's Money	85	48
1 Isle of Love	80	85	1
5 Whis-peging Smith	64	66
6 Soul Mates	69	63
2 Wasted Years	76	81
2 Far from Madding Crowd	70	67
4 Medicine Bend	74	81
4 Highest Bid	64	66	1
3 Her American Prince	70	67
1 Doorsteps	65	60	1
2 House of Mirrors	77	75
1 Wall Street Tragedy	65	58
7 Youth's Endearing Charms	77	71	1
2 Strength, Donald Mackenzie	75	72
1 Million for Mary	90	90	1
7 Judith of the Cumberlands	68	68
2 A Welsh Singer	60	53
1 Man Who Would Not Die	85	75
1 The Wolf Man	50	50
1 The Painted Lie	40	35
2 Three Pals	73	71
3 Manager of the B. & A.	63	70
9 Pearl of Paradise	68	76	1
8 Dulcie's Adventure	87	83	2
2 And the Law Says	58	64
1 Bluff	85	80
9 Faith	76	72
6 Miss Jackie of the Navy	87	82	1
4 A Dream or Two Ago	81	87
7 The Innocence of Lizette	84	83
4 The Butterfly Girl	75	85
1 The House of Scandal	0	10
1 The Man From Oregon	95	75
1 The Girl From Rector's	40	40
3 The Greater Woman	43	57
3 Where Love Is	52	48
6 The Gentle Intruder	77	78
1 Damaged Goods	40	100
3 Philip Holden-Waster	59	65
2 Redeemed	55	30
1 Lonesome Town	85	85
1 The Love Hermit	78	78
5 The Fighting Gentleman	60	44
1 The Torch Bearer	80	80
2 The Twinkler	92	88
2 East Is East	88	60
1 Immediate Lee	90	82	1
1 Beloved Rogues	95	90
2 The Valley of Decision	69	82
2 The Gilded Youth	60	75
3 The Painted Lie	62	74
2 Motherhood	38	55
3 Sunny Jane	67	65
2 The Devil's Assistant	60	70
3 High Play	48	48
2 The Single Code	50	53
1 The Death	20	20
2 The Wildcat	65	58
3 Whose Wife?	47	47
3 Periwinkle	67	57
1 A Bit of Kindling	60	70
1 Annie-for-Spite	40	40
1 The Mirror	40	20
1 The Checkmate	20	20
1 The Serpent's Tooth	20	20
1 The Dazzling Miss Davidson	40	20
1 Shackles of Truth	90	90	1
3 Environment	57	47
1 The Upper Crust	20	20
1 Pardners	60	20
1 Melissa of the Hills	20	80
1 Bab. the Fixer	40	40
2 A Bit of Kindling	58	50

MUTUAL-CHAPLIN

2 A Night In the Show	80	67	1
5 The Fireman	70	78
4 The Vagabond	55	88
6 The Floorwalker	89	90	2
8 One A. M.	63	81	1
16 The Count	88	86	8
10 The Pawnshop	73	74	2
7 Behind the Screen	89	91	5
8 The Rink	97	99	7
8 Easy Street	95	100	8
14 The Cure	94	95	8
8 The Immigrant	54	59	2

PATHE

195 Pathe	60.9	68.1	19
1 Last Volunteer	80	85
1 The Spender	80	80
3 At Bay	78	81
1 The Galloper	40	90
1 Closing Net	60	80
2 Nedra	55	45
1 Affair of Three Nations	75	80
3 The Beloved Vagabond	76	67
2 Greater Will	50	55
6 Excuse Me!	90	73	1
3 King's Game	56	63
8 Madame X	71	91	3
8 Love Trail	38	52
5 Hazel Kirk	60	55
1 Simon the Jester	60	35
1 The Jockey of Death	68	55

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
A Woman's Fight	70	60
The Life of Our Savior	35	55
New York	80	74	1
Precious Packet	67	[illegible]
Shrine of Happiness	78	72
Woman's Law	68	[illegible]
Big Jim Garrity	42	55	1
Girl with the Green Eyes	[illegible]	72
Matrimonial Martyr.	[illegible]	73	1
Shadow of Her Past	34	81
The Fugitive	75	[illegible]
Little Mary Sunshine	90	78	1
Divorce and the Daughter	78	75
The World and the Woman	85	90
The Shine Girl	73	64
Fear of Poverty	[illegible]	95
The Test	60	[illegible]
Saint, Devil and Woman	44	57
The Light That Failed	70	71	1
Shadows and Sunshine	93	78	3
Prudence the Pirate	54	64
Arms and the Woman	70	53	1
The Challenge	[illegible]	[illegible]
Joy and the Dragon	78	71	1
The Romantic Journey	77	66
Her New York	82	62	2
Her Life or His	72	65
Kick In	78	71	1
Sold at Auction	48	58
Modern Monte Cristo	68	63
The Hidden Valley	65	68
Crime and Punishment	58	63
Her Beloved Enemy	69	71
Pots and Pans Peggy	79	68
Twin Kiddies	82	70
The Image Maker	38	40
Told at Twilight	91	80	1
Mayblossom	40	85
The Hunting of the Hawk	66	55
Mary Lawson's Secret	77	78
Sunshine and Gold	77	76
When Love Was Blind	70	65
Hinton's Double	70	63
The Amateur Orphan	60	40
The Candy Girl	20	60
The Recoil	61	63
Blind Man's Luck	80	20
The Iron Heart	40	40

BLUEBIRD

Bluebird	62.7	63.5	23
Jeanne Dore	27	[illegible]
The Secret Love	38	40
Hop, the Devil's Brew	40	43
Undine	90	87	3
Wrong Door	75	95
Grip of Jealousy	75	[illegible]
Rupert of Hentzau	51	60
Strength of the Weak	76	75
The Yaqui	42	58
The Flirt	44	66
Tangled Hearts	44	[illegible]
John Needham's Double	54	59
The Great Problem	59	66
Gaylord Waring	51	50
Crippled Hand	58	69	1
Gilded Spider	46	64
Elusive Isabel	48	46
The Measure of a Man	63	65
Love Never Dies	65	48
Son of the Immortals	64	71
Eye of God	64	80
Bobbie of the Ballet	67	79
Evil Women Do	60	62
Three Godfathers	68	74	1
Shoes	71	77	3
Broken Fetters	64	56	1
The Love Girl	63	64	1
The Grasp of Greed	71	76	1
The Silent Battle	78	[illegible]
Secret of the Swamp	1	56	2
Love's Lariat	65	64	1
Bettina Loved a Soldier	65	72
Wanted—A Home	74	75
The Chalice of Sorrow	72	65
Little Eve Edgarton	58	61	1
The Girl of Lost Lake	65	60
The Unattainable	51	48
Saving a Family Name	81	68	1
Behind the Lines	62	65
The Social Buccaneer	72	65
Gloriana	69	70
A Stranger from Somewhere	69	67
The Price of Silence	[illegible]	[illegible]
The End of the Rainbow	63	48
The Honor of Mary Blake	58	58
The Right to be Happy	50	40
Black Orchids	75	78	1
Her Soul's Inspiration	55	39
God's Crucible	88	84	2
The Piper's Price	[illegible]	20
The Bugler of Algiers	80	69	1
The Sign of the Poppy	[illegible]	63
Mutiny	58	51
The Mysterious Mrs. M	76	57	1
The Reward of the Faithless	72	81
The Saintly Sinner	48	58
The Boy Girl	58	58
Polly Red Head	61	68
The Gift-Girl	60	75
Susan's Gentleman	62	63
The Clock	77	65
Hell Morgan's Girl	90	88	1
The Devil's Pay Day	71	75
A Jewel In Pawn	71	69
Girl With Checkered Coat	66	63
Little Miss Nobody	30	50
Treason	65	75
The White Lights	70	50
Bringing Home Father	70	60
Kentucky Cinderella	68	55
The Car of Chance	40	40
The Little Orphan	70	60
The Flashlight	68	40
Wife on Trial	60	40
Follow the Girl	60	40
The Little Terror	60	40
The Greater Law	40	40

UNIVERSAL

Little Brother of the Rich	60	[illegible]
Business is Business	50	65
Father and the Boys	20	80
The Frame-up	40	45
Judge Not	70	70
Long Chance	85	[illegible]
Man of Shame	50	55
My Old Dutch	20	[illegible]
Nature Man	95	[illegible]
Under Southern Skies	90	75
Langdon's Legacy	[illegible]	[illegible]
Love's Pilgrimage	62	53
The College Orphan	73	68
Colorado	90	100
The Campbells Are Coming	84	83
Money Madness	67	80

RED FEATHER

Red Feather	64.8	61.6	2
It Happened In Honolulu	[illegible]	[illegible]
The Madcap	70	70
Soul Enslaved	60	80
Knight of the Range	80	4
Beckoning Trail	88	71
Man From Nowhere	75	[illegible]	1
The Path of Happiness	70	50
The Sphinx	50	50
Pool of Flame	70	75
Lords of High Decision	60	40
Black Sheep of the Family	60	63
Autumn	65	[illegible]
Her Bitter Cup	72	71
The Yoke of Gold	45	64
Heritage of Hate	90	[illegible]
Thrown to the Lions	60	[illegible]
Huntress of Men	49	55
The Youth of Fortune	69	63	1
What Love Can Do	50	80
Half a Rogue	78	60
Sons of Satan	[illegible]	40
Two Men of Sandy Bar	72	[illegible]
Folly of Desire	20	40
Brigadier Gerard	50	40
Romance of Billy Goat Hill	75	55
The Target	76	46
Whirlpool of Destiny	62	[illegible]
Narrow Path	82	[illegible]
Drugged Waters	57	50
If My Country Should Call	58	[illegible]
Black Friday	[illegible]	[illegible]
The Place Beyond the Winds	66	55
The Isle of Life	50	43
Kinkaid—Gambler	80	[illegible]
The Mainspring	71	67
Morals of Hilda	80	80
Mixed Blood	70	55
The Bronze Bride	60	75
The Child of Mystery	45	15
Polly Put the Kettle On	45	57
Fighting for Love	69	[illegible]
The Double Room Mystery	55	35
Heart Strings	70	60
Love Aflame	78	80
The Terror	70	[illegible]
The Devil's Bondwoman	40	20
Barriers of Society	40	20
Me and Me Pal	85	70
Mister Dolan of New York	65	70
The Girl and the Crisis	73	73
The Scarlet Crystal	60	78
The Girl Who Lost	50	70
The Gates of Doom	60	70
The Birth of Patriotism	65	70
The Hero of the Hour	55	70

GREATER VITAGRAPH

Vitagraph	68.1	66.2	76
The Battle Cry of Peace	96	81
The Juggernaut	73	73	2
The Island of Regeneration	86	82	5
Sporting Duchess	[illegible]	[illegible]
Sins of the Mothers	[illegible]	[illegible]	1
Crooky	70	[illegible]	2
Playing Dead	75	[illegible]
Dust of Egypt	67	66	2
The Rights of Men	74	85
Turn of the Road	[illegible]	78
The Cave Man	74	60
Heights of Hazard	75	44
A Nation's Peril	86	76
The Man's Making	60	78
Price of Folly	95	[illegible]	2
The Great Divide	80	71	2
Souls in Bondage	100	80	1
Thou Art the Man	72	57
Green Stockings	87	88	2
Milady's Slipper	90	[illegible]
Island of Surprise	87	[illegible]
Gods of Fate	62	62
What Happened to Father?	60	78
The Night Out	85	65	1
The Crown Prince's Double	75	[illegible]
The Writing on the Wall	70	[illegible]
Kennedy Square	88	60	1
For a Woman's Fair Name	80	[illegible]
Hunted Woman	74	54	1
Hero of Submarine D-2	74	71
Dollars and the Woman	75	56	1
Supreme Temptation	60	60
Two-Edged Sword	76	53
Vital Question	80	[illegible]
Flames of Johannis	40	40
Salvation Joan	78	[illegible]
God's Country and Woman	81	85	4
Love's Toll	60	80
The Law Decides	80	70	4
The Ne'er Do Well	91	93	7
Ordeal of Elizabeth	58	50
The Suspect	80	76	2
Lights of New York	70	78
The Destroyers	68	57	1
Redemption of Dave Darcey	90	80
Man Behind the Curtain	85	76
The Shop Girl	78	79	1
The Conflict	67	47
Fathers of Men	71	67
The Tarantula	78	72	3
The Daring of Diana	61	75
Hesper of the Mountains	57	64
The Light at Dusk	85	72	4
The Alibi	69	69
The Dawn of Freedom	0	[illegible]
Footlights of Fate	[illegible]	[illegible]
The Combat	79	81	1
The Kid	60	57
Phantom Fortunes	42	[illegible]
His Wife's Good Name	64	76
Through the Wall	78	63	1
The Chattel	72	83	3
Prince in a Pawnshop	64	67	1
The Blue Envelope Mystery	55	59
The Firm of Girdlestone	31	39

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

WILLIAM F. ALDRICH
FEATURE PRODUCER
Screen Club, 117 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO

ALBERT CAPELLANI
PRODUCER

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

WILLIAM DESMOND
TRIANGLE PLAYS
Culver City, Cal.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
PRODUCING
PATHE PEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

HOBART HENLEY
HOBART HENLEY PRODUCTIONS

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
PRODUCING FEATURES
Ivan Film Corp.

LLOYD INGRAHAM
PRODUCER

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

HARLEY KNOLES
FEATURES DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 D. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

JOSEPH LEVERING
DIRECTOR

O. A. C. LUND

ASHLEY MILLER
Director—Vitagraph Studios
Brooklyn

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE DIRECTOR
FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.

WEDGWOOD NOWELL
TRIANGLE
Friars Club, N. Y. C.

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITIGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

TOM TERRISS
PRODUCER
VITAGRAPH

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
FEATURE DIRECTOR
511 W. 143rd St. Audubon 1941.

JAMES VINCENT
PRODUCER

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

BEN WILSON
DIRECTING AND STARRING
UNIVERSAL

CHESTER WITHEY
DIRECTOR

JAMES YOUNG

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Adress—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM A MAGAZINE—IN FACT A SERVICE
THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM
WID'S
INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS
Always Independent Issued Every Thursday
VOL. III. THURSDAY, SEPT. 27, 1917. NO. 39
25 Cents a Copy $10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

QUESTIONABLE WAR PLOT DOESN'T CONVINCE AND FLOPS AT END

Wallace Reid in

THE HOSTAGE

Lasky—Paramount

DIRECTOR.....Robert T. Thornby
AUTHOR.....Beulah Marie Dix
CAMERAMAN.....Henry Krondale
AS A WHOLE.....Went along as rather interesting until pulled firing-squad and suicide's gun in drawer at finish, which ancient bunk killed it.
STORY.....Seemed designed to prove that war is all wrong, with both sides misjudging each other DIRECTION.....Registered some excellent lightings and a few good scenes, but failed to make dramatic moments get under shirt.
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent
LIGHTINGS.....Many very effective; generally excellent
CAMERA WORK.....Very good
STAR.....Pleasing hero type
SUPPORT.....Good
EXTERIORS.....Quite satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Good; well lighted
DETAIL.....Good staging, but atmosphere seemed unreal
TIME.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

THIS moved along for about four reels and a half, with the director registering incident after incident that held the attention but failed to convince, chiefly because the atmosphere all seemed decidedly unreal. The lightnings were very good and the production was artistic, but the plot was based on one of those imaginary things, with the lowlanders and the mountain folks at war, and it appeared as if the plot was intended to register the fact that in war-time each enemy accuses the other of frightfulness, the same titles being used in this for each side to speak of the other in the same language. If the United States wasn't at war and if Germany hadn't been accused of frightfulness, this suggestion in a film story, that war conditions caused similar accusations, might be more welcome here.

The one dramatic incident in this was secured by having Wally Reid—who was a sort of general on one side —made hostage with instructions from his father that he would have to escape in a week because he (the father) intended to violate all his pledges. The boy swore that he was unarmed, although carrying a dagger, and immediately the question arose as to whether his word would be accepted in war-time. It struck me that a search would have been in order.

Anyway, when it came time to escape, hero had fallen in love with the daughter of the man he would have murdered to do the getaway, and this he couldn't do. As a result of his father's broken pledges then, he was stood up before a firing squad and was about to be shot when the good old trusty messenger, who has done duty, lo, these many years, came chasing in with the message what said that there wuzn't goin' to git together and because these countries were going to git together and lick some other country. It was certainly convenient for that there Wally Reid boy that these countries decided to go in for a little teamwork at just this particular moment.

To top off this little melo with another old-time favorite, they showed the heroine about ready to kill herself because hero was about to be shot, and, by heck! she ran down and got that old revolver out of the drawer where it had been reposing since the last picture, and when they pull this right after the firing-squad you can just bet on it that any audience is going to groan audibly. Maybe some day they'll shoot one of those hero guys who gits lined up in front of one of them there firing-squads, and after that the fans won't be so sure about what's going to happen.

Mr. Reid is one of the most likable hero fellers, and his work in this was very satisfactory, there being a number of bits which he made stand out by little touches.

The supporting cast was quite satisfactory, although they were badly handicapped by the artificial atmosphere which pervaded the plot.

The cast included Dot Abril, Lucien Littlefield, C. H. Geldert, Guy Oliver, Camille Ankewich, Lillian Leighton, Gertrude Short, George L. Spaulding and Noah Berry.

The Box Office Angle

There is a little bit of a question concerning this production, partly because of the war situation. It hardly seems to me that it is particularly tactful at this time to register the fact that each country in a war accuses the other of frightfulness without having any evidence to justify it. Such a plot seems to be an alibi for the Germans, because you can bank on it that your audience is going to immediately separate these imaginary countries into factors in the present war, since a war story to-day must be considered from that angle.

After passing that point the production could be called just an interesting melo that slumps very badly on the finish because of the flop in the plot and the very ancient bits of business used. It never builds to any great dramatic heights, nor does it really convince or register genuine thrills.

I would figure that if they are willing to accept a fair melo, you can sneak this by, particularly if Wally Reid is liked in your community. Certainly I wouldn't figure this worth more than one day anywhere, and I would give a little thought to the matter before playing it one day.

WAR MELO POORLY TIED TOGETHER HAS SOME BAD SPOTS

Edward Earle and Betty Howe in

FOR FRANCE

Vitagraph

DIRECTOR ..... Wesley Ruggles
AUTHOR ..... Cyrus Townsend Brady
SCENARIO BY ..... Will Courtney
CAMERAMAN ..... Jules Cronjager
AS A WHOLE ..... Messy war stuff very badly tied together and never impressive; titles made boobs of Allies, and action showed too many men being killed to please American families to-day.
STORY ..... Was hardly a plot
DIRECTION ..... Acceptable until got into war stuff; then slipped badly; fighting between small detachments very poorly explained.
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Satisfactory; not distinctive
LIGHTINGS ..... Occasionally good; generally ordinary CAMERA WORK ..... Just satisfactory
STARS ..... Pleasing juveniles, handicapped by melo action
SUPPORT ..... A few good bits and many extras
EXTERIORS ..... Acceptable; not unusual
INTERIORS ..... Acceptable
DETAIL ..... Generally unconvincing
TIME ..... Sixty-seven minutes (5 parts)

IT seems to me that one of the most important things to be considered about any productions which have to do with the war is the primary question of whether they present the Allies in a favorable light and whether or not they show scenes which the American people do not care to see at this time, such as views suggesting the wholesale slaughter of men by machine-gun fire, etc.

This production starts out with a few dramatic clashes in Paris before the war, between an American hero and a German spy, and then jumps into the midst of the great conflict where, by the use of many titles, the author tries to explain the presence of several small detachments of troops by stating that a British troop was lost, and then later that some French cavalrymen were lost, with another title stating that, because these Ally forces were lost, the German detachment of extras used in the picture dashed through the opening. Right after this title about "dashing through the opening" we saw the German spy, now a German officer, riding on an old nag at the head of a lot of two-dollar-a-day marchers coming down the road at about a two-mile-an-hour gait. It certainly didn't look "dashing," and it failed utterly to get over the idea that there was a battle or the prospect of a battle anywhere near.

The way this was handled it reminded one very much of the good old Civil War stories where it always "just happened" that a detachment from one side located a detachment from the other, way off from the battle line, at the home of the heroine, so that they could fight and stop to argue whenever they liked without in any way interfering with the more important struggle.

The battle in this instance took place around the home of the shero, she having been nonchalantly moved out here into this section of France from Paris for no apparent reason other than to keep her in the story and provide a place for the battle to be fought.

After much nonchalant maneuvering with many conferences, etc., the detachment of Germans decided to attack the detachment of Tommies which had been sleeping around the heroine's house waiting for morning, when, a title said, the American hero aviator was to go up and look around and try to find their command f- them. Certainly, that's making the British look like sor- boobs when the authors tried to register that these s- diers didn't know where their army was.

After the Germans had started their attack in t- morning—which was the same old movie battle stuff - the British commander sent the same old messenger o- for help and he found the lost French cavalry standi- in a pretty spot selected by the director, awaiting t- call.

The American aviator and the girl were supposed - have a fall in the airplane, the machine seeming to - pretty well smashed up, but we discovered our love- only just scratched by the accident. Previous to th- flight hero had stood around helping shero bake a ca- while the Germans got ready to attack. Some war!

When the Germans were about to charge and annihila- the Tommies, hero rushed in and began to manipula- one machine gun, and, by heck! he was such a manip- lator that he kept all the Germans at bay until t- French cavalry arrived. That guy should surely be ke- in the army; they're lookin' for him now over in Fran-

The entire production was miserably cut. The dr- matic scenes didn't run at a good tempo, and frequent- as in the case of the fall of the airplane, we had a l- of one incident and then about one hundred feet of oth- action before we came back to the first incident, wh- the spacing should have been only a few seconds. Ed- ing could have done much for this.

In one place they had a lot of footage devoted to t- good old junk of willunous enemy officer attacking her- ine in her home, with hero coming to the rescue, on- they pulled rather a bonehead move in this by allowi- the German officer to beat up the American quite son- making his getaway afterwards.

Towards the end, in the battle junk, much detail w- given to men being killed by machine-gun fire. To r- mind, this is not good stuff to show at the present tin- Of course, they gave us a look at the German will- being killed, and also registered the death of the Ge- man officer who had insulted the girl, by having him sh- in the back by one of his men, both of which bits w- probably bring a little applause in the average hou- but, after all, this stuff is pretty cheap and painfu- artificial, and so it is a question as to whether it shou- be encouraged very much.

Edward Earle as the American hero was good, ar- considering the handicaps of the melodramatic action, a- made rather a pleasing impression.

Betty Howe was very pretty at times and genera- satisfactory.

Arthur Donaldson and Eric Von Stroheim, as the Ge- man officers, made these parts fittingly vicious.

The man who did the little French secret service l- made it stand out by a touch where he twisted h- mustache.

Others who appeared were Frank Anderson and Moth- Mary Maurice.

The Box Office Angle

There is nothing about this to justify your boosting it or playing it unless you believe that your people w- stand for the slaughter stuff in it in order to get to t- few flashes of cheap patriotic appeal.

The story is never convincing and the action doesn- get out of the movie caliber routine at any time. T- title listens well, and possibly as a program offering y- can get this by, although it seems to me that the pr- ducers should be prevailed upon to remedy the titl- which make the Allies seem like boobs and cut the acti-

the British slaughtered by the German machine guns. Edward Earle has appeared in a great many Edison productions and recently in some State Rights films, so at he may be known to your fans, and Betty Howe has formerly appeared in Vitagraph and International productions. She screens very well and her photographs in front of the house might add to the business possibilities on this.

BEAUTIFUL WATER STUFF, COMEDY END AND STAR SAVE OLD MELO

Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber in

THE SPINDLE OF LIFE

Butterfly

RECTOR.....George Cochrane
THOR.....Sidney Robinson
ENARIO BY.....Karl Coolidge
MERAMAN.....P. W. Horne
S A WHOLE....Beautiful sea coast stuff redeemed melo of stock exchange battles; some good touches lifted general action
ORY.....Painfully ordinary except treatment on finish
RECTION.....By lightings, locations and intimate touches lifted very ordinary meller decidedly
HOTOGRAPHY.....Some very fine; some just good
GHTINGS.....Some effective bits but didn't always match
AMERA WORK.....Very good
ARS.....He very pleasing; she just acceptable
UPPORT.....Some good types
XTERIORS.....Much wonderfully beautiful shore and surf stuff; generally satisfactory
NTERIORS.....A few very good; generally acceptable
ETAIL....Satisfactory, although stock exchange battle as bewildering as ever for average fan
IME.....Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

I WAS about ready to vote thumbs down on this, when they commenced shooting beautiful water stuff, and then on the finish they pulled a twist that was good for a laugh, with some closeups that will be sure-fire anywhere, so that I think e average audience will walk out on this feeling very tisfied.

The first part of the production is routine stuff, ith the girl that doesn't want to marry mother's choice, ho was being urged on by the gink who had squandered e estate over which he was guardian, and, of course, e had the hero who didn't tell his real identity.

They pulled a stock exchange battle with the usual unch of clerks running around wildly, stock tickers, blackboards, etc., and the average fan will know as much about this one as he has ever known about any of them—which is nothing.

Then they started in on the water stuff, bringing hero and shero together again, and from that time on it picked up so decidedly that with the finish, where hero secretly married the goil and was having a meal with her in her room while mother was downstairs trying to announce daughter's engagement to the other guy, it's sure fire.

To make this certain to register they pulled the old character fisherman, who had been sticking around through several incidents as a feeder for the heroine, into the action with several other types who stood outside the house and serenaded the bride, closeups of the serenaders being cut in between shots of the other party contrasted inside, making this finish very good.

Ben Wilson was very pleasing as the hero in this, because Ben is manly and real. He looks like a reg'lar guy, instead of a haberdasher model.

Neva Gerber, the heroine, wasn't so good. In many places she didn't photograph to advantage, her eyes being a bit bad, and at no time did her personality get over in such a way as to make her one to be remembered.

Others who appeared were Hayward Mack, Ed. Brady, Richard La Reno and Jessie Pratt.

The Box Office Angle.

If you have been playing Butterflys as they come I'd say that this will register very satisfactorily because it builds so well toward the last with the beautiful water stuff and the comedy finish.

Ben Wilson is very well known because of his years of service, and his work in this is quite pleasing because he is the sort of American that everyone likes. His recent appearance in serials has probably added considerably to his following, so that I would count that in also in my advertising.

The name of the production seems very ordinary to me, and I would not give it any attention whatever. Concentrate on Mr. Wilson and talk about the beautiful scenes taken on the California coast.

CANADIAN MOVING PICTURE DIGEST

An Exclusive Photoplay Trade Journal.

Published Weekly.

100% Circulation. Orpheum Theatre Bldg. Montreal, P. Q.

SNAPPY MELO AND BURLESQUE COMEDY IN GOOD ATMOSPHERE PLEASE

Miriam Cooper in

BETRAYED

Fox Film

DIRECTOR.....Raoul A. Walsh
AUTHORS.....Raoul A. Walsh & C. B. Clapp
CAMERAMAN.....Dal Clawson
AS A WHOLE.....Pleasing combination of bing-bang melodrama and rough comedy that was funny
STORY.....Stolen from O. Henry with dream finish
DIRECTION.....Gave excellent atmosphere, swinging action, good laughs and convincing melo
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent, but badly colored, with tints frequently spoiling faces
LIGHTINGS.....Some very beautiful bits; generally artistic
CAMERA WORK.....Excellent
STAR.....Photographed beautifully and played delightfully
SUPPORT.....Excellent; several fine bits
EXTERIORS.....Well chosen for atmosphere; some very pretty—all looked Mexican
INTERIORS.....Good
DETAIL.....Some very good touches
TIME.....Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

WITH Miriam Cooper being photographed so that she was truly beautiful most of the time, and Hobart Bosworth doing the wild-eyed Mexican outlaw willun all over the place, this had a good start, but Producer Walsh definitely put it over by the bing-bang tempo of his melodramatic action and the good flashes of burlesque comedy that he slipped in promiscuous-like all through the production.

The plot was stolen from one of O. Henry's stories having to do with the favorite of a Mexican bandit who decided to betray him when she met another gink, with disastrous results; but they put a couple of twists on it toward the end and finished up as a dream, so that the O. Henry estate probably will be unable to collect, and I'm quite sure that Mr. Fox's conscience never troubles him on such matters.

The photography was generally excellent, and some of the shots were exceptionally beautiful, but it seemed as an effort had been made to see how many tints could be put on this, because many scenes were almost ruined by coloring. The color in some places has been put on in such a manner that the heat has warped the film, making it wave about in a very uncanny manner.

The production was full of pep, however, with some good melodramatic romance and some funny burlesque comedy stuff sprinkled in at just the right time. This combination should prove popular, because, despite its broadness, it has a general appeal.

Miss Cooper has never been photographed to better advantage, and her work was helped by having Hobart Bosworth as the bandit and Wheeler Oakman as the American hero to play opposite her.

Others in the cast were Monte Blue and James A. Marcus.

The Box Office Angle

I believe that you will be justified in playing this up as a stirring melodrama of a Yankee hero in Mexico calling it, possibly, a fast-moving romance of a Mexican girl who dared defy a murderous bandit.

The production is decidedly better than the average program release because it has a lot of laughs and plenty of snappy action, and, in billing it, mentioning the fact that Raoul A. Walsh made "The Honor System" should get business on this.

Miriam Cooper can be billed as a star who appeared in "The Birth of a Nation" and "The Honor System."

STAR'S IMPERSONATION MAKES OLD SITUATIONS SURE FIRE

Julian Eltinge in

THE COUNTESS CHARMING

Lasky—Paramount

DIRECTOR.....Donald Crisp
AUTHORS.....Gelett Burgess and Carolyn Wells
SCENARIO BY.....Gardner Hunting
CAMERAMAN.....Faxon M. Dean
AS A WHOLE.....Pleasing entertainment with novelty angles
STORY.....Rather interesting little Charity "Raffles" idea that holds
DIRECTION.....Gave very good atmosphere and registered some big laughs; worst slip was where detective failed to chase thief in overalls quickly enough
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very pleasing
LIGHTINGS.....A few very effective bits; generally just good
CAMERA WORK.....Quite satisfactory
STAR.....Went over big as novelty fun-maker
SUPPORT.....Some excellent types; Marshall and Elmer fine
EXTERIORS.....Kept atmosphere classy
INTERIORS.....Generally very good; a few only ordinary
DETAIL.....Quite satisfactory
TIME.....Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

JULIAN ELTINGE is known to most everyone as the greatest female impersonator the stage has ever seen. His advent into pictures is worth something right away before any consideration is given to the production.

As a film star Mr. Eltinge registers every bit as satisfactorily as he did on the stage, if not more so, because on the screen it isn't necessary at all to worry about his voice. He wears corsets, high heeled slippers and embroidered lingerie with reckless abandon and certainly gets away with it, because if the average person walked in when the picture was halfway finished without knowing what subject was on the screen, I gamble that they would get an awful shock when Eltinge first slumped from the female into the male. Mr. Eltinge doesn't just "look" like a woman; he is a "pretty" woman, and he has many little mannerisms that in themselves are good for laughs any time he puts them.

The plot of this was nothing to rave over, it having been one of Mr. Eltinge's recent plays, but it served the purpose of a vehicle rather satisfactorily, since it provided considerable action with light comedy touches without anyone at any time worrying very much as to just how the dramatic complications were to unravel.

The entire plot was based on one of those "hero decides to rob wealthy society folk in order to give the valuables to charity" ideas which has been made use of many and many a time. The thought of having Mr. E ge doing the robbing while posing as a woman was new twist, and this will carry it over.

ully Marshall as the doctor friend of Mr. Eltinge, and y Elmer as the detective who was trailing him, e both excellent. They had a few little touches to over that lifted many scenes decidedly.
lorence Vidor as the heroine was right pretty, but very little to do except stick around, since Mr. El- ge was both the hero and the heroine in this.
hey played carefully for laughs with the titles, and le of them were excellent.
thers in the cast were Edythe Chapman, George na, Mrs. Geo. Kuma, Gustave Von Seyffertitz and el Van Buren.

The Box Office Angle.

you go after this properly it would seem to me that should certainly be able to get real money with it. and I think the production has been well enough handled to make it prove very satisfactory to most any audience. It is pleasing light entertainment which doesn't have to be taken seriously at any time.

The female impersonator thing offers plenty of opportunity for freak advertising and you might go after it big with a teaser campaign something like this: "The Countess Charming is coming. HE'S a great guy; watch for her!" etc., with press stories built around the fact that Mr. Eltinge has proved the long disputed question of whether any man knows how to wear women's clothes.

You can safely promise that this is funny, interesting and unusual, but if Eltinge has never played in your town you want to lay it on thick about his being recognized as the greatest impersonator the world has ever known, because many of your regulars may never have heard of him.

OLD SITUATIONS MADE PLEASING DESPITE POSING STAR

Juliette Day in

THE RAINBOW GIRL

American—Mutual

ECTOR.....Rollin S. Sturgeon
'HOR.....Jere F. Looney
A WHOLE.....Fairly interesting, although old situations; had characters talking to themselves too much
RY.....Composer genius saved by optimist girl who sold song for him—that old friend!
ECTION....Played it intimately and had rather good lightings and atmosphere, but permitted entirely too many soliloquies
TOGRAPHY.....Generally pleasing
ERA WORK.....Good
R.....Very camera-conscious, although rather pretty
PORT.....Good
ERIORS.....Satisfactory
ERIORS.....Rather good
AIL.....A few good touches
E.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

MOST fans will recognize the general style of this story immediately and certainly they will all have it doped out at least a reel or two in advance all the way. Nevertheless, this would seem rather good entertainment it for the fact that the characters stood around talked to themselves most of the time, with the ie unfortunately camera-conscious, which seriously ed most of her scenes.

ere was a certain intimacy about the general treat- of the production, which gave a sufficient number seups with good little intimate touches that reg- d, to keep this out of the movie junk classifica- but the camera-conscious shero, the obvious story, he many title soliloquies kept this from registering really worth-while production.

The plot was the well-known basic idea of the young hero genius who was starving and about to commit suicide when the little girl at the house where he was rooming saved his life by playing optimist and afterwards secretly sold his song, so that he became successful and married her on the finish.

George Fisher as the composer was quite pleasing, and the other types were satisfactory—particularly the song publisher's pianist, although the girl's mother must be spoken to for pulling an awful flop supposed to register a faint when the hero's room caught fire. I will, however, compliment whoever is responsible for keeping the fire down to the rather human little blaze which they pulled. Most directors would have had four fire departments on the job.

The Box Office Angle.

Despite the faults of this, it will probably prove pleasing wherever they accept program stuff for one evening, and if you are regularly taking chances on this routine stuff, I believe this one has as good a chance as any to sneak by.

I can't figure that Juliette Day's name is worth a nickel at the box office, and she will not register sufficiently well to mark her as a coming favorite, because she poses and rolls her eyes entirely too much.

If you are trying to have real stuff every night, then dodge this. If you are willing to accept a program production when it is just "good," and has a chance of getting by because of some human touches, then this can probably sneak through.

ou Get the Most Out of Your Features?

BEYNON'S ORCHESTRAL SETTINGS WILL GIVE AN ADDED PUNCH

GEORGE W. BEYNON

IFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY

HAROLD LOCKWOOD

Yorke--Metro

CRANE WILBUR

ART DRAMAS PROGRAM

Eye of Envy — Blood of His Father
Unto the End — Devil McCare
Just Jim

IMPOSSIBLE CHESS BOARD MELO IN CLASSY ATMOSPHERE

Pauline Frederick in

DOUBLE CROSSED

Famous Players-Paramount

DIRECTOR.....Robert G. Vignola
AUTHOR.....Hector Turnbull
SCENARIO BY.....Eve Unsell
CAMERAMAN.....Ned Van Buren
AS A WHOLE.....Old junk of stealing and recovering poipers with melo action registered in classy atmosphere
STORY.....Weak and unimpressive routine cheesboard action melo
DIRECTION.....Provided classy, distinctive atmosphere, but used too many scenes tinted for moonlight and not enough closeups to give intimate touch
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good, except night tinting made expressions indistinct
LIGHTINGS.....Some effective interior bits
CAMERA WORK.....Generally very good; more closeups needed
STAR.....Satisfactory, although had little opportunity to register emotions sufficiently close to camera to be seen
SUPPORT.....Some good types, well handled
EXTERIORS.....Many on pretty estate
INTERIORS.....Very good; generally classy
DETAIL.....Satisfactory
TIME.....Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

CONSIDERING the fact that this entire assortment of footage was devoted to one of those situations where the willunous detective had a written confession made by the hero, and the wife, to secure same, stole a politician's receipt which the detective wanted (all of which is impossible stuff in these days), this gets by in a rather satisfactory manner, because the producer has presented the action in a comparatively classy atmosphere.

In these days when a man has a paper upon which the exposure of a great grafter rests, he doesn't allow this paper to remain insecurely in the drawer of his desk, but promptly has it photographed so that the destruction of the original, if it happened to meet with an accident, would not mean the loss of the evidence.

The same thing is certainly true in an instance where a private detective might have a signed confession which he would keep around for six years to hold over a man whom he might want to use at some time. Surely that guy would have a photograph made of that confession, because in six years' time there would be a beautiful opportunity to wear it out if he carried it around much.

When Miss Frederick's husband nobly refused to steal the graft receipt which the detective wanted, and decided to face being exposed as a thief for having at one time hesitated about returning a very valuable bracelet which he had found, Miss Frederick pulled the heroics and decided to save the day.

She swiped the confession in the middle of the night, pulling the burglar stuff in her nightie, and then nonchalantly called on the detective, handing over the desired receipt before she secured her husband's confession. The willunous detective decided he wouldn't slip her the confession and told her to come around that night. She got a peek at a whiskey bottle and immediately thought about sleeping powders which she used herself, and so agreed to come—taking an awful chance at not being missed from the house party where h "poiper" had been stolen.

She slipped away and called on Mr. Detective, bu caught her in the act of slipping the dope into his gl and then she proved that she wouldn't have needed h dope at all, because she shoved him over in the co and put him down and out, thereby making it poss for her to grab the receipt and the confession and getaway. Why the receipt had not been delivered to h politician during the day was not explained—except course, that this would have made it more difficult o Strong-Arm Pauline to have secured it.

They did pull a laugh on the finish where the de tive called up his boss and told him that six masked had entered the room and taken the "poipers."

At no time did the story really convince, but it made fairly interesting desipte the age of the m dramatic situations.

A majority of the scenes were made for moonl stuff and tinted blue, with rather disastrous results cause a heavy blue tint makes it almost impossibl distinguish the expression on anyone's face. marred a number of the dramatic incidents. The eral excellence of the sets and a few of the exterior s taken on some estate lifted the offering out of the ordinary "bunk" class into the society melo division.

A girl back of me pulled one when Miss Frede was introduced that was too good to keep. The title announced Miss Frederick, and the scene opened the star seated in the center of a very pertty set rea a paper. The girl said: "Oh, isn't that a pretty D I wanted to turn and look at the girl, but first I lo to find the dog. I think it's pretty tough on our when the fans pick out a poodle to admire instea sizing up the appearance of the high-salaried bea when they first loom up on the screen.

Miss Frederick was quite satisfactory in her work was very much handicapped by being kept too far the camera. There were very few closeups, and mar her scenes could have been made much more effe had the proper number of closeups been used.

Crauford Kent as the husband was very pleasin one of those "stick around and wait for the finish" p and Riley Hatch and Joe Smiley looked and acte rough-neck politician and detective very satisfactori

The incident of the dancers on the lawn which wished in to give Miss Frederick a chance to cha town at night and meet the detective, was not near good as it could have been considering the amou footage devoted to it.

Others who appeared were Harris Gordon and ence Handysides.

The Box Office Angle.

Pauline Frederick is worth a certain amount of m anywhere, and in some sections I understand she p real business. The name "Double Crossed" tied up hers, listens like a good production. Consequently should be able to do pretty well with this whereve is a favorite.

The production is decidedly ordinary as to story the atmosphere has enough distinction that the will probably go by most anywhere without serious plaint. Even though your fans groan at the "st the poipers" plot as they watch it, I doubt if they complain particularly when the whole thing is over.

There is nothing about this to justify your mak lot of noise about it, because it isn't big from any Hector Turnbull is credited with the story of this I consider it only one more reason why he should been let out of the scenario department of Paramount many months before he was.

In advertising this I would talk more about the distinctive sets and the beautiful estate where the picture was made than about the plot. Miss Frederick and the atmosphere may get it by for you.

OLD UNCONVINCING PLOT WITH A FEW PLEASING MOMENTS

Shirley Mason in

THE AWAKENING OF RUTH

Edison—Perfection

DIRECTOR.....Edward H. Griffith
AUTHOR.....Lucien Hubbard
CAMERAMAN.....Fred S. Brace
AS A WHOLE.....Ancient situations tied into unconvincing plot with flashes of fine treatment and very bad spots in between STORY.....Variation of hero who sent ragged miss to study for career situation, with usual finish of her triumph saving day when he is broke
DIRECTION.....Had some individual scenes and incidents that were fine, with many bad spots and much that was unconvincing
PHOTOGRAPHY.....At times very fine, but frequently ordinary
LIGHTINGS.....A few very good; generally straight stuff, tints wrong in some cave stuff
CAMERA WORK.....Acceptable
STAR.....Was very pretty at times; generally satisfactory
SUPPORT.....Some very good; Hall rather camera-conscious
EXTERIORS.....Some very pretty water stuff
INTERIORS.....Satisfactory; not distinctive
DETAIL.....A few good little touches
TIME.....Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

THIS started off with a situation which suggested Nazimova's recent play, "'Ception Shoals." Miss Mason was introduced in a one-piece bathing suit which showed her figger quite some, and the wealthy willun found her hanging on to the rudder of a sail boat, he having abruptly left a party on his yacht to go out and sail around a bit because the director told him it was time to introduce the shero.

Shero had been living on a lonely island with her father, who had spent his life trying to find some buried treasure. The city tempter met this maid several times and had things all lined up to come and get her some day, and then her father did a back flip over a cliff, accidentally shooting himself at the same time just when hero was busy discovering some old chests hid away in a cave.

This led us up to the introduction of the real hero, a doctor played by Donald Hall. His introduction was very good. We discovered him at work with a lot of kids around an operating table asking questions as to whether he would have to "cut off a leg," etc., and then we gradually saw that he was busy tying up the foot of a dog that had been hurt, which he turned loose with the happy youngsters.

When called to the rescue, Mr. Hall found the old treasure-seeker beyond recall, and then they pulled a one by allowing several days to elapse in a title before the shero thought about her treasure again. Of course father's dying was no little item, but, just the same, discovering a treasure is no little item, either, and it wasn't logical for her to forget all about it just because father got shot.

Anyway, the minister and the doctor found that the treasure chest contained only gunpowder, but they decided not to disappoint the little orphan, and so the doctor drew all of his coin out of the bank (which was overdrawing the story as much as the bank account) and our hero was sent to the city to cultivate her voice.

Just when she was picked to take a part in a big show which needed saving because the chorus-girl star couldn't do anything, she discovered that the guy backing the chorus-girl was the city tempter who had once told her he would come for her. The chorus-girl got next to the "previous acquaintance" thing and canned our shero quick, but the theatrical manager obligingly came along with a wondeful part in another show and an offer of salary immediately, with a month or two of home study for the part, which sent shero back to the old island where she and Doc got together after the city tempter had showed up and tried to make good, only to be turned down flat.

I know a lot of theatrical folks who would like to meet that manager guy who stands around willing to provide green songbirds with plays in which they may star, at the same time putting up salary during months of advance study, etc., etc. That particular species of managerial bird has been extinct for a long time—if he ever lived on Broadway.

Because of the fact that this story is unconvincing and the fact that the direction is very ordinary in a majority of the scenes, this floats along without making any truly favorable impression.

Donald Hall, as the hero, was unfortunately very camera-conscious at all times, which helped to stiffen the action in which he appeared.

There were enough good spots in this to brighten it up at times, but on the whole it was not a good production.

Miss Mason seemed very beautiful in a good many of her closeups, and she got by satisfactorily with her characterization, although the improbable situations kept her part from convincing.

Among those who appeared were William Hayes, Sally Crute, Ed Elkas, Donald MacClennan, Jessie Stevens and Joseph Burke.

The Box Office Angle.

This story is made up of such old basic situations that I am inclined to believe that your fans will refuse to accept it very cheerfully. It has a few twists, but the director has been unable to lift it sufficiently to have the action take hold and grip in a convincing manner. It just drags along through so much footage as a movie that doesn't get under the surface.

If you are playing ordinary program stuff as it comes, I presume that you can get this by satisfactorily for one evening. I surely would not make any fuss about it if you should decide that you can afford to play it, and by all means dont' try to class this with such pictures as "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship" just because they happen to be released all in a bunch as a new brand called "Perfection Pictures."

VERY ANCIENT PLOT MADE ACCEPTABLE AS LIGHT ENTERTAINMENT

Margarita Fischer in

THE GIRL WHO COULDN'T GROW UP

Pollard—Mutual

DIRECTOR	Harry Pollard
AUTHOR	Harry Pollard
AS A WHOLE	Considering age of plot and frequency of use, treatment makes this satisfactory
STORY	Older sister and mother playing for valet, using master's name, while tomboy shero meets and wins the real guy—familiar? oh, quite some!
DIRECTION	Registered a lot of cute stuff and made it fairly pleasing as light entertainment
PHOTOGRAPHY	Some very pretty stuff and some ordinary shots
LIGHTINGS	Some good effects; much straight stuff
CAMERA WORK	Satisfactory
STAR	Rather cute and worked hard
SUPPORT	Acceptable
EXTERIORS	Some very pretty shots; others ordinary
INTERIORS	Satisfactory
DETAIL	Some good touches
TIME	Sixty-four minutes (5 parts)

THE last time I saw this plot Olive Thomas did it for Triangle under the name of "Madcap Madge." Either the scenario departments got bawled up or maybe somebody slipped over exactly the same script on both of 'em, because they had the same costume ball bit in this.

Of course, you all remember having seen at least a hundred productions of just this selfsame basic idea with occasional variations, and certainly any fan will have it clearly in mind, but, nevertheless, there is an excellent chance of their passing this by as pleasing light entertainment simply because they pulled a lot of cute stuff with Miss Fischer all over the place, and some audiences are willing to accept this tomboy girl stuff as entertainment even though there's no semblance of a plot to tie the incidents together.

They had a little sequence where Miss Fischer and her father played ball with a lot of kids, and stuff like that is sure-fire no matter how rotten the plot may be in which it figures. They also put over the pajama party in boarding school, which has been considered A-1 Hokum since the days of Noah. It is reported that these pajama parties started on the ark.

They got around to the costume ball with the titled hero's valet appearing in his stead and of course mother made an awful play to win the favor of the valet, while the tomboy Miss Fischer was on the hero's boat making good with him.

They finished with the valet's confession that he was only a servant, and the shero's triumph as she presented her hubby, the muchly-sought title bearer.

There were a few closeups of Miss Fischer, but a good deal of the action of this was played at the unfortunate distance, which was neither near nor far. It failed to give the artistic effect of a real distance shot, but still registered too far from the camera to give the audience a chance to catch the expressions of the players. A few of the exteriors shown were very pretty, but some of the shots were quite ordinary and some of the photography was just straight stuff.

The Box Office Angle.

The title of this sounds right good, and Margarita Fischer has had a few good things in her life, with the result that I have a hunch that you can get this over in the average community where they may have only a hazy recollection as to just what Miss Fischer has done. Of course the plot may sink you with the wise ones, but I think you can sneak this by for one day if you will carefully label it as light entertainment based on the adventures of a tomboy. You hardly dare mention the titled hero and his valet, because that immediately sounds like very old junk.

I wouldn't promise much of anything in reference to this except to get what you can out of the star's personality and the interesting sound of the title itself. Don't figure this for more than a possible get-by of one day, and if you are reaching for real productions, pass this.

SOME CUTE KID STUFF AND SOME VERY ORDINARY MELO

Baby Marie Osborne in

TEARS AND SMILES

La Salida—Pathe

DIRECTOR	William Bertram
AUTHOR	Elizabeth Burbridge
SCENARIO BY	Marc Edmund Jones
AS A WHOLE	Had some cute spots mixed in with ordinary routine melo
STORY	Pretty punk and very slender
DIRECTION	Didn't tie action together very well; pulled too many fights and failed to make action convincing; cute stuff rather pleasing
PHOTOGRAPHY	Mostly straight stuff
LIGHTINGS	Generally ordinary
CAMERA WORK	Acceptable
STAR	Cute kid
SUPPORT	Ordinary; pickaninny very funny
EXTERIORS	Some pretty shots in park
INTERIORS	Satisfactory
DETAIL	Acceptable
TIME	Fifty-seven minutes (5 parts)

THIS was a lot of footage, a good part of which was very ordinary routine movie meller which served to fill in between some cute flashes of action in which Baby Marie did some kid tricks. She had the little coon who has worked with her on several occasions to play with, and these two managed to pull a good many laughs while they were on the screen.

A good part of the film slipped by, however, without anything much in the way of plot development, and on the finish they got to a point where Little Mary, who had been adopted, "just happened" to decide to hide behind a lady in the park, and that lady was her own mother.

She arranged to have her nurse fired, and had her mother apply for the job, putting all the other applicants on the bum so that mother would be accepted.

Several times during the action they pulled rough-and-tumble fights that were entirely unnecessary and quite decidedly overdrawn, but those who are making pictures with Little Mary Sunshine seem to have an idea that it is necessary in all kid pictures to put in a lot of cheap junk to make it exciting. I hope someone will get to them one of these days and get this notion out of their head.

At the first of the film we had a pillow fight in which a lot of kiddies in a room batted one another over the head with pillows, out of which the feathers began to fly, and in this scene they labeled a kid with curls Baby Marie. She didn't look like the little star to me, and I certainly think that there is something wrong about this. It appeared as if they might have put this scene in because it was good, figuring that, since the kid with curls didn't get her face around to the camera at any time, they could possibly get her by as the star. Since Baby Marie's hair has been bobbed for quite some time I can't just figure how she would appear wearing curls. I may possibly be mistaken about this, but it certainly looked queer. If you decide to play this, look it over to verify that point, and if I'm right, be prepared for some kicks from your fans with fast eyes.

There is nothing much to distinguish this from other Little Mary Sunshine subjects except that a lot of the scenes were made out in a very pretty park and some of her bits with the little coon were very funny. The plot was about as melodramatic as most of her others have been and quite unconvincing and unsatisfactory.

In the cast were Philo McCullough, Marian Warner and Katherine MacLaren.

The Box Office Angle.

I am inclined to think that Baby Marie is a pretty good box office bet by now, because she has had a number of kid pictures that were cute and rather pleasing. This is certainly far from what it could have been, but, considered as her productions have run, it isn't bad and could probably be put over wherever she is liked.

I wouldn't suggest that you start in to make her on the strength of this sort of a picture, because there is too much melodrama in this, some of it being "melo" enough to overshadow the cute little bits registered by the star. If you have been playing Mary Sunshine pictures, however, I believe that you can get this by very satisfactorily. It's marvelous how little will satisfy our film-going fans sometimes!

ANCIENT PLOT MADE RATHER PLEASING BY TREATMENT

Vivian Martin in

A KISS FOR SUSIE

Morosco—Paramount

DIRECTOR	Robert T. Thornby
AUTHOR	Paul West
SCENARIO BY	Harvey Thew
CAMERAMAN	James C. Van Trees
AS A WHOLE	Old Prince in Disguise plot modernized and fairly well done
STORY	Wealthy hero becomes hod-carrier, loves bricklayer's daughter—how familiar, indeed!
DIRECTION	Kept it rather human
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally satisfactory
LIGHTINGS	A few very good; some ordinary
CAMERA WORK	Satisfactory
STAR	Appealing, pleasing little lady
SUPPORT	Good types
EXTERIORS	Well chosen for atmosphere
INTERIORS	Satisfactory
DETAIL	Generally very good
TIME	Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

HOW many times has the good old Prince in Disguise who married the poor girl that became princess plot been wished into the films in various forms? It's surely one of the old standbys!

This time we have Miss Martin as a bricklayer's daughter and Tom Forman as the wealthy partner of the boss who decided to learn the business instead of going to Newport to play with society as his mother desired.

About the time Tom fell in love with Miss Martin her father was left a fortune, so that we had complications resulting which made it hard for him to win her, since now he seemed poor and she was wealthy.

Of course the bricklayer's daughter found that wealth didn't bring happiness (as they always do in the movies) and so she planned with hero to invest the fortune so that it would be lost.

After this had been done (in the usual stock market method—tickers, etc.) they pulled a finish where hero announced his real identity and explained at the same time that father's fortune wasn't lost after all.

In the handling of this they registered enough little touches to keep it fairly interesting, although of course the plot is such an old one and so obvious that there will never be any doubt in anyone's mind as to just what is going to happen.

Miss Martin was pleasing, as she always is, and the atmosphere of the production was rather good. A number of good little touches were registered which lifted inconsequential incidents.

The Box Office Angle.

Possibly you can sneak this by as a program production, but, take it from me, they're going to get tired of this ordinary "bunk" some day and insist upon having more substantial productions. As compared with much of the melodramatic junk which is being released by the program companies, I'd say that this is more than satisfactory. It has some good comedy touches and is entertaining on account of treatment, without there being any necessity of regarding the story seriously at any time.

Vivian Martin has quite a following, and somehow they seem to like these little golden-haired heroines in stories where they don't do anything in particular.

I don't know what the name has to do with this, but it sounds fairly interesting, and so it may be that the average fan will accept this wondering what the title has to do with it, but feeling that it has been a satisfactory hour as pictures run today.

In advertising this I would center most of my attention upon Miss Martin, and you will have to use your own judgment as to whether you can afford to pull anything such as, "Which would you rather do—Go to Newport for six weeks in society, or become a hod-carrier?"

If you can find sure-enough productions, I would duck this sort of thing, but, since it is light entertainment, you can count on it being as good as, if not better than, the average program production.

ERNEST STERN, Inc.
THE TITLE MAN
Specializes in
MOTION PICTURE TITLES
OF THE HIGHEST GRADE
729 Seventh Ave., New York - - Phone Bryant 8711

ORDINARY WESTERN MELO OF OLD IDEA WITH 'ANSOM 'ERO

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in

THEIR COMPACT

Rolfe—Metro

DIRECTOR	Edwin Carewe
SUPERVISED BY	Maxwell Karger
AUTHOR	Charles A. Logue
SCENARIO BY	Albert Shelby Levino
CAMERAMAN	R. J. Bergquist
AS A WHOLE	Rather ordinary heroic meller that didn't impress or convince
STORY	Eastern woman-hating hero finds real woman in West; quite well known to movie fans
DIRECTION	Gave acceptable atmosphere, but failed to make action convince
PHOTOGRAPHY	Good; not distinctive
LIGHTINGS	A few very good, but generally ordinary
CAMERA WORK	Satisfactory
STARS	He quite heroic, posed at times; she satisfactory
SUPPORT	Satisfactory
EXTERIORS	Fitted atmosphere; not beautiful
INTERIORS	Satisfactory
DETAIL	Acceptable
TIME	Sixty-eight minutes (5 parts)

WHERE' Bushman is still accepted as a matinee 'ansom 'ero this may get by satisfactorily, but I can't feel that there is anything about the production to justify anyone making a fuss over it.

The story is the rather well-known old friend having to do with the Easterner who hated women because one tried to put something over on him, with the result that he landed in the West, where he immediately met Friend Shero, with disastrous results to his woman-hating resolutions.

To make it a little harder in this, they brought in the woman from the East as the wife of a pal (which has also been done in the same story before), and then the Eastern woman flirted a bit with the town bully, causing complications, with the whole thing ending up by having the Eastern woman's hubby fatally wounded and the hero about to be hanged because the town bully had shot the husband and ran away with the wife.

The wounded husband was obliging enough to come to in time to save hero from the mob, and then hero went right out in the desert, after the town bully. The bully tried to make a getaway from the woman, who up and shot him very nonchalant-like, which proved that she must've practised quite some with the revolver.

Did you ever try to hit a target with a revolver? If so, you'll certainly wonder how some of these women pick up guns and nonchalantly plunk the wicked wun without hardly aiming. With a rifle I could understand it, but, believe me, shootin' a revolver is no cinch! Try it out at your shootin' gallery!

The first half of this moved along quietly while they planted the fact that "Bush" was changing from the woman hater to an appreciative admirer of the Western variety of womankind. They pulled a vision of his past, dissolved in over some rough boards to represent his seeing same while looking at the side of a shack, and this was very effective, because it kept one in the West while registering what had happened in the East.

Every once in a while our hero got into a position with one foot on a chair or standing in a window, leaning against it in a nonchalant manner, with the result that he was painfully posey—but I guess there's nothing we can do about it except put up with it.

As usual Miss Bayne had little to do except stick around and look as pretty as possible and give Francis X. a chance to "act."

Harry Northrup was a bad, bad willun, and Mildred Adams was quite satisfactory as the Eastern woman. She looked the part of the trifling female and played it very satisfactorily.

Others who appeared were Joe Smiley, Henry Mortimer, Robert Chandler and Thomas Delmar.

The Box Office Angle.

The only reason why anyone should play this is that in your community Bushman & Bayne may still have some drawing power at the box office. If you know definitely that this pair can get you some money, then I believe the production is good enough to get by. If there is a question as to their box office value, I wouldn't worry about the production, because it certainly does not persent anything particularly new, nor has the action been treated in such a manner as to make the film an unusual one. It's just a lot of footage showing the sort of story that has been done many times, and there is nothing to make it stand out prominently above the average program offering.

In many spots this is quite melo, and the plot is such a well-known one with such obvious, convenient situations that your regulars will probably groan internally a number of times if you play it.

If you should decide to try to sneak this by on the strength of the stars, devote all of your attention to them, and very little to the production or story.

You might say that Mr. Bushman appears as a woman-hating Easterner who has some very exciting adventures in a Western camp.

HEART STIRRING HAND COLORED PATRIOTIC SLIDES 25c. Each

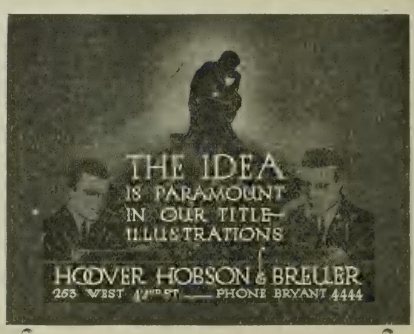
71. If It's Worth Living Under, It's Worth Fighting For.
54. Americans Must Protect America.
95. We Are With You, Mr. President, One Hundred Million Strong.
53. Your Country Needs You.
28. American Flag.
95. President Wilson & Flag.
60. Geo. Washington.
45. The Birth of the American Flag.
70. Abraham Lincoln.
76. Spirit of '76—Reflects in 1917.
27. If It's Good Enough to Live Under, It's Worth Fighting for.
87. Pledge Allegiance.
68. Star Spangled Banner.
42. My Country 'Tis of Thee (Flag).

EXCELSIOR ILLUSTRATING CO., 219 Sixth Ave. New York City



WEAK, IMPOSSIBLE, MESSY PLOT HANDICAPS CLEVER STAR

Gladys Hulette in

A CROOKED ROMANCE

Astra—Pathe

DIRECTOR.....William Parke
AUTHOR.....Tom Cushing
SCENARIO BY.....Marc Edmund Jones
CAMERAMAN.....Albert Richard
AS A WHOLE.....Wandering pipe-dream, sort of melo, painfully unconvincing
STORY.....Girl crook who found baby, lived in store box and earned living as professional lock-picker romance—that hard-to-believe stuff
DIRECTION.....Registered several individual incidents very well but failed to make action ring true partly because of story and partly because of treatment
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Fine bits, but generally ordinary
LIGHTINGS.....Some very effective, but generally ordinary CAMERA WORK.....Acceptable only
STAR.....Seriously handicapped by rather impossible characterization asked of her SUPPORT....Acceptable—although some of them "acted"
EXTERIORS.....Satisfactory—not very beautiful
INTERIORS.....Acceptable
DETAIL.....Acceptable
TIME.....Fifty-nine minutes (5 parts)

GLADYS HULETTE has had some very good and some very poor pictures. I am afraid that this will land with the poor ones in the opinion of most folks, because the story is one of those impossible pipe dreams such as some scenario writers dope out and directors do, apparently, according to the results, without ever having sat back to wonder whether there is any possibility of anyone believing all of this junk.

Miss Hulette is shown as the daughter of a crook, recognized by our young hero when caught in the act of robbing his home. Her father, who was with her, was arrested while she escaped. Then, while father was in jail, she tried to make an honest living because hero told her she should not steal.

The little heroine scrubbed floors and shined shoes and started to live in a store box, all the time admiring babies, until she landed out near Grant's Tomb one day in a storm and prayed for a baby, with the result that a nurse crossing the road on a hill up above her was obligingly knocked down by an automobile so that the baby carriage could come bouncing down the hill, turning over four or five times, the baby being finally planted in front of Miss Hulette, who nonchalantly said that it must have come from heaven.

When writers think they can get away with this sort of stuff, they have another guess coming!

Of course after more footage in which it developed that our shero had built up a lucrative business picking locks, we found some real crooks taking her to the home of the hero to really open a safe, and then she was arrested, the baby was uncovered, with the discovery that the child belonged to hero's family. Now, what's the use?

On the finish they had the nerve to pull the good old junk about shero having been adopted by the crook, and so she wasn't a crook's daughter after all and was perfectly fit to marry the hero guy. If film companies pay money for this sort of junk, then somebody's head needs to be examined. Possibly five years ago this might have been worth $25 as a story, but why anyone should spend any money at all in making this into a five-reel feature is more than I can understand.

There are a few smiles here and there registered by individual incidents, and some of the baby stuff was cute, but no audience can possibly see this and consider it a pleasing bit of entertainment as a whole.

Miss Hulette was so badly handicapped by the sort of character she was asked to play that she can't be blamed severely for failing to register in a very convincing manner.

William Parke, Jr., as the young hero, had very little to do except catch Miss Hulette while out "burgling."

They had a few good types, but all were inclined to overact, with rather unpleasant results.

In the cast were Paul Clerget and J. H. Gilmour.

The Box Office Angle.

If Gladys Hulette has done pretty well for you with some of her better films, it would seem to me advisable to dodge anything like this, because certainly one or two of these would keep fans from taking a chance on one of her productions.

The surest way to kill a near-star is to give them a few bad plots, and you men who expect to get money at the box office because of the presence of a star in a film should consider very seriously the fact that it is necessary for you to pick out the good ones and "can" the bad ones, so that your fans will have only a favorable impression of those who are to pull money for you. That's important not only in the case of Miss Hulette but in the case of any star who can get you any money.

Certainly I would advise you to "can" this.

QUICK ANNOUNCEMENTS FOR YOUR SCREEN

SLIDENE OUTFIT: all complete.....$1.00
6 bottles slide ink; 25 cover glasses; 6 special pens; 2 slide charts

Novelty Typewriter Slides.....$3.50 per 100
Handy Slide Holder and Clip FREE.
NOVELTY SLIDE CO., 115 East 23d St., New York.

Address all letters pertaining to Advertising and Directory cards to

HARRY P. DIGGS
Advertising Manager

WID'S Films and Film Folk, Inc.
510 Times Bldg., New York City

TABULATED PERCENTAGE REPORTS FROM EXHIBITORS

THE BATTING AVERAGES

These are the averages of the companies having 200 reports or more.

Reports		% P. P.	% B. O.	Repeat
2628	PARAMOUNT	68.4	62.3	397
2349	TRIANGLE	70.6	65.2	434
595	WORLD	67.7	61.5	49
674	METRO	70.8	67.0	57
767	FOX	73.1	70.8	106
233	MUTUAL	72.0	71.1	17
298	BLUEBIRD	62.7	63.5	23
544	VITAGRAPH	68.1	66.2	76

THE NUMBER BEFORE THE NAME OF THE FEATURE INDICATES THE NUMBER OF REPORTS RECEIVED AND TABULATED ON THAT FILM.

THE FIRST COLUMN CARRIES THE PERCENTAGE OF PLEASED PATRONS.

THE SECOND COLUMN SHOWS THE BOX OFFICE PERCENTAGE.

FIGURES IN THE THIRD COLUMN INDICATE THAT MANY REPORTED THE FILM WORTH A RETURN DATE.

All reports in this percentage tabulation have been marked on this scale:

EXCEPTIONAL	100%
EXCELLENT	80%
GOOD	60%
FAIR	40%
POOR	20%
BAD	0%

Reports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
2628	Paramount	68.4	62.3	397
4	In the Bishop's Carriage	84	93
2	The Lost Paradise	50	73
8	The Virginian	81	73	3
2	Such a Little Queen	78	70	1
2	Marta of the Low Lands	35	50
3	Where the Trail Divides	93	90	1
11	Wildflower	89	82	6
1	The County Chairman	80	80
1	What's His Name	75	100
5	Behind the Screens	81	78
6	A Man from Mexico	87	72	1
1	The Man From Home	70	70
1	Circus Man	90	95
3	Rose of the Rancho	72	72
5	The Bargain	80	74	3
2	Ghost Breakers	60	63
7	The Crucible	92	84	3
2	False Colors	35	55
5	The Sign of the Cross	79	85
4	Cameo Kirby	61	50
9	Cinderella	84	91	4
1	The Million	70	90
5	Girl of the Golden West	79	77	2
3	The Dancing Girl	65	65
3	The Italian	77	62	1
1	No Laughing Matter	90	85
1	Morals of Marcus	60	50
8	The Goose Girl	95	95	4
2	After Five	51	50
1	Mistress Nell	85	95
2	Buckshot John	60	60
3	Her Triumph	80	74	1
3	The Warrens of Virginia	70	71	1
1	Country Boy	40	40
6	David Harem	82	78	1
1	A Gentleman of Leisure	80	70
2	The Caprices of Kitty	63	70
1	The Love Route	70	90
1	Sunshine Molly	40	20
1	The Governor's Lady	97	85
1	Gretna Green	99	95	2
1	The Commanding Officer	0	39
1	Are You a Mason?	78	84
2	Pretty Mrs. Smith	68	75
2	The Unafraid	70	63
2	When We Were 21	60	56
1	Spanish Jade	20	60
4	Snobs	64	52
1	Captain Courtesy	80	67	1
1	Captive	90	97
2	Niobe	75	55	1
1	Help Wanted	80	75
5	The Woman	86	59	1
5	House of Lost Court	82	54	1
1	Fanchon, The Cricket	89	92	3
3	Betty in Search of Thrill	84	87
5	Stolen Goods	78	75
8	Wild-Goose Chase	80	55	1
6	Pretty Sister Jose	84	83	2
5	Jim the Penman	64	85
6	The Dawn of a To-morrow	83	88	1
5	Arab	80	56	3
1	Clarissa	75	80
2	The Dictator	45	45
5	Wild Olive	82	69
6	Chimmy Fadden	91	75	1
4	The Little Pal	76	87
4	Rugmaker's Daughter	40	50
2	The Clue	74	88
6	Kindling	81	82
1	The Running Fight	60	70
3	The Fighting Hope	77	80
5	Kilmeny	75	73
8	Seven Sisters	86	74	1
3	Puppet Crown	85	85
19	Rags	91	93	5
2	Sold	83	72
6	The Secret Orchid	79	74
5	Nearly a Lady	65	75
6	The Marriage of Kitty	76	64
3	Poor Schmaltz	65	37
8	Helene of the North	87	81	2
3	The Majesty of the Law	56	60
3	Heart of Jennifer	65	55
2	Incorrigible Dukane	75	55
4	Esmeralda	89	89	2
2	The Case of Becky	65	65
1	Out of Darkness	40	40
1	Peer Gynt	32	100
4	The Explorers	72	61
4	'Twas Ever Thus	53	68
2	Voice in the Fog	75	67
6	Fatal Card	65	59
4	Zaza	91	67	2
6	The Girl of Yesterday	89	88	3
7	White Pearl	71	75
4	Blackbirds	57	55
7	Chorus Lady	73	63
6	The Secret Sin	69	74	1
7	Yankee Girl	52	57
6	Masqueraders	56	56
12	Carmen	82	83	4
12	Still Waters	94	83	7
9	Madame Butterfly	82	86	3
7	Mummy and Humming Bird	66	56
7	Bella Donna	90	77	4
8	Armstrong's Wife	79	65
4	Chimmie Fadden Out West	81	70	2
8	A Gentleman From Indiana	86	75
10	Prince and the Pauper	92	87	5
10	Mr. Grex from Monte Carlo	84	90	1
3	Jane	75	81
9	The Unknown	76	67	1
18	The Cheat	94	80	12
9	The Reform Candidate	80	54	1
9	The Immigrant	73	62
10	The Old Homestead	88	54	7
4	Lydia Gilmore	87	61	2
10	Temptation	82	77	2
10	The Foundling	78	76	3
6	Tongues of Men	77	53	1
8	Mice and Men	84	80	5
7	The Golden Chance	77	61	2
2	My Lady Incog	50	35
5	Ragamuffins	77	53
5	Call of the Cumberlands	79	64
8	The Spider	87	64	1
10	Puddin' Head Wilson	81	62	4
9	Tennessee's Pardner	65	58
8	Madame Le President	24	46
9	Nearly a King	52	49	1
13	Trail of the Lonesome Pine	75	77	3
8	Fell In Love With His Wife	63	51	1
8	Blacklist	62	52	1
10	Out of the Drifts	89	86	4
8	Diplomacy	58	58	1
14	Poor Little Peppina	88	84	8
16	To Have and To Hold	74	69	4
12	Ben Blair	72	63
10	For the Defense	68	62	1
7	The Code of Marcia Grey	64	59	2
9	The Lost Bridegroom	69	60	2
8	The Saleslady	72	62	1
15	Audrey	73	70	3
9	The Sowers	64	59
11	The Heart of Paula	71	54	1
12	The Race	69	59
8	The Eternal Grind	70	78	3
10	The Love Mask	59	54	2
10	Molly Make-Believe	87	82	6
7	The Red Widow	62	55	2
12	The Heart of Nora Flynn	72	60	4
8	A Moment Before	52	64	1
12	David Garrick	68	46	2
9	The Innocent Lie	56	51
16	Marie Rosa	81	80	4
12	Alien Souls	69	67	1
13	The Feud Girl	60	60
16	Pasquale	78	53	3
16	Sweet Kitty Bellairs	72	62	2
20	Saints and Sinners	51	40
17	Thousand-Dollar Husband	69	82	4
22	A Gutter Magdalene	62	54	1
16	Evil Thereof	44	44
15	The Making of Maddalena	63	57	3
23	Silks and Satins	85	81	16
14	Destiny's Toy	60	51
18	The Clown	76	54	3
20	Susie Snowflakes	69	80	2
16	The World's Great Snare	73	78	4
19	The American Beauty	61	61	3
22	The Dupe	64	64	1
22	The Smugglers	53	50	1
26	The Selfish Woman	72	68	4
19	Davy Crockett	67	90
28	The Dream Girl	69	64	1
28	Under Cover	79	75	5
27	International Marriage	55	51	1
27	Common Ground	64	64	1
35	Hulda from Holland	95	84	23
30	House of Golden Windows	73	64	3
22	A Woman in the Case	72	72	3
25	Little Lady Eileen	87	89	10
23	The Stronger Love	53	52
31	Public Opinion	82	72	4
21	Rolling Stones	67	60	2
21	The Honorable Friend	65	62	1
20	Victory of Conscience	60	59	3
21	Each Pearl a Tear	74	69	2
22	The Parson of Panamint	79	70	7
15	The Big Sister	50	57

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
14 The Reward of Patience	65	55
15 The House of Lies	73	65	1
14 The Daugther of McGregor.	56	45
18 Ashes of Embers	85	83	7
16 The Quest of Life	59	61
14 Anton, the Terrible	46	45
17 The Lash	57	55
13 The Storm	75	65	1
19 The Intrigue	81	61	2
16 Her Father's Son	74	68	2
14 Witchcraft	55	55
14 The Kiss	74	68	2
16 The Rainbow Princess	82	74	3
15 Seventeen	85	74	2
14 Miss George Washington	95	95	11
15 The Heir to the Hoorah	82	69	5
16 The Soul of Kura San	80	73	1
12 A Son of Erin	79	73	2
10 Unprotected	53	55	1
11 The Years of the Locust	49	50
12 The Plow Girl	77	63
9 The Yellow Pawn	66	57	1
Nanette of the Wilds	50	57	2
7 Martyrdom of Philip Strong	53	55	1
10 The Coney Island Princess	62	63	1
10 The Road to Love	72	59	1
14 Oliver Twist	85	69	6
13 The Victoria Cross	44	54	1
17 The Traveling Salesman	78	60	3
20 The Right Direction	76	61	2
21 Snow White	95	95	13
16 Redeeming Love	63	60	1
21 The Slave Market	74	70	3
13 The Evil Eye	30	44	1
19 Great Expectations	74	55	1
17 Happiness of Three Women	73	58	1
14 Betty to the Rescue	46	48
1 What Money Can't Buy	40	40
16 A Girl Like That	55	51
16 Lost and Won	59	50
19 The Golden Fetter	50	56
19 His Sweetheart	83	57	2
19 The Wax Model	67	56
19 Each To His Kind	62	60
16 Her Own People	72	52
11 The Black Wolf	35	41
17 The American Consul	53	50	1
21 The Fortunes of Fifi	67	77	2
20 On Record	62	56	2
17 Winning of Sally Temple	40	48
18 Those Without Sin	53	52	1
16 Castles For Two	52	49	1
13 Out of the Wreck	60	54
13 Sapho	74	83	3
11 Prison Without Walls	54	54
12 The Dummy	71	54
10 The Spirit of Romance	64	56
8 As Men Love	73	53
10 The Bottle Imp	75	66	2
7 The Bond Between	50	39
8 A School for Husbands	49	46	1
8 The Lonesome Chap	51	44
9 Sleeping Fires	56	63	1
8 The Tides of Barnegat	49	43
8 The Cost of Hatred	40	38
10 The Valentine Girl	73	76
5 Unconquered	28	31
6 The Girl at Home	51	44
9 Heart's Desire	28	36
8 Sacrifice	26	43
7 The Primrose Ring	44	48
8 The Silent Partner	33	36
6 Marcellina Millions	41	30
7 The Highway of Hope	38	33
7 Her Better Self	35	59
8 The Undying Flame	40	52
6 Freckles	70	61
5 The World Apart	42	40
3 Giving Becky a Chance	70	51
3 The Jaguar's Claws	40	47
4 The Inner Shrine	38	58
3 The Roadside Impresario	28	17
5 The Heir of the Ages	23	22
3 Her Strange Wedding	28	34
3 The Little Boy Scout	57	43
5 At First Sight	52	40
3 Big Timber	67	65
6 Love That Lives	70	83
5 Forbidden Pathes	34	37
4 What Money Can't Buy	34	53
1 The Cook of Canyon Camp	20	20
3 The Squaw Man's Son	60	57
3 The Crystal Gazer	20	20
2 A Kiss for Sussie	20	20
5 The Amazons	96	96
3 The Mysterious Miss Terry	87	73
4 The Law of the Land	37	37
4 The Varmint	80	60
3 Hashimura Togo	80	60

TRIANGLE

2349 Triangle	70.6	65.2	434
11 The Iron Strain	80	67	2
10 The Lamb	85	78	3
10 Old Heidelberg	73	64	1
12 The Coward	83	66	1
9 Martyrs of the Alamo	67	57	2
15 The Disciple	85	76	2
8 Matrimony	81	76	2
6 Sable Lorckra	59	57
7 The Golden Claw	57	69
10 Double Trouble	61	65	2
8 Alaho Oe	60	65	1
6 The Lilly and the Rose	63	66
9 Jordan Is a Hard Road	56	54
Winged Idol	53	52
Penitents	18	32
12 The Edge of the Abyss	65	61
Submarine Pirate	85	78	1
6 Cross Currents	49	49
12 Between Men	73	67	1
15 Let Katy Do It	87	63	6
6 The Corner	53	50
6 The Missing Link	52	46	1
4 The Beckoning Flame	56	58
10 The Wood Nymph	51	51	1
9 The Conquerer	74	78
10 The Price of Power	53	53
11 The Green Swamp	77	76	1
13 Acquitted	66	52
6 D'Artagnan	59	54
18 His Picture in the Papers	90	75	5
13 Honor's Altar	77	67	2
14 Betty of Greystone	77	65	2
23 Peggy	94	91	15
7 Don Quixote	57	56
9 The Last Act	79	78	1
11 Daphne and the Pirate	71	57	1
18 Hell's Hinges	93	89	11
17 The Flying Torpedo	88	80	8
14 Bullets and Brown Eyes	85	75	3
14 Martha's Vindication	79	72	2
14 Moral Fabric	75	62	1
15 Hoodoo Ann	68	65	1
15 The Raiders	79	70
14 The Habit of Happiness	92	85	5
8 Waifs	70	59	1
8 Little Meena's Romance	64	60	1
17 The Aryan	59	80	6
10 Sold for Marriage	71	72	1
17 Stepping Stones	85	75	2
10 Sunshine Dad	36	46
9 Civilization's Child	68	64	1
14 Children In the House	80	66	2
11 The Beggar of Cawnpore	61	49
19 The Good-Bad Man	90	92	4
12 The No-Good Guy	74	60	3
17 Susan Rocks the Boat	69	63
20 Not My Sister	79	77	4
18 Child of Paris Streets	76	64
22 The Primal Lure	82	76	7
8 Mr. Goode, the Samaritan	53	53
26 The Market of Vain Desire	79	64	5
22 Going Straight	77	78	3
29 The Bugle Call	93	79	9
26 Reggie Mixes In	93	80	11
16 The Sorrows of Love	66	69	1
21 An Innocent Magdalene	71	71	2
18 The Dividend	70	68	1
21 The Wild Girl of Sierras	45	53
25 An Apostle of Vengeance	88	83	4
18 Casey at the Bat	44	48
28 The Phantom	83	72	7
30 Flirting With Fate	87	86	11
31 The Deserter	85	69	11
26 The Little School Ma'am	74	67	2
26 The Eye of the Night	74	58	5
19 Stranded	60	50
27 The Captive God	65	70	2
23 The Halfbreed	72	74	2
22 The Payment	81	70	3
18 The Marriage of Molly O	48	47
24 Honor Thy Name	87	73	4
22 The Devil's Needle	64	64	1
31 Shell "43"	86	69	6
26 Hell-to-Pay Austin	83	66	6
21 Lieutenant Danny, U. S. A.	79	69
16 Pillars of Society	59	56	1
22 Home	91	89	9
16 Gretchen the Greenhorn	64	62	2
21 The Patriot	79	80	6
24 The Social Secretary	80	75	8
17 The Thoroughbred	82	72	1
11 The Little Liar	69	57
19 The Wolf Woman	86	89	6
16 The Dawnmaker	58	78	3
20 Diane of the Follies	71	72	2
27 Manhattan Madness	94	92	12
22 Plain Jane	88	75	5
20 Old Folks at Home	81	64	2
17 The Jungle Child	60	61	1
15 The Rummy	67	54	1
21 The Return of Draw Egan	88	86	7
20 The Vagabond Prince	75	70	3
19 Somewhere in France	76	69	1
18 A Corner in Colleens	88	80	7
12 A Sister of Six	69	64	2
21 Fifty-Fifty	89	83	6
4 War's Women	61	48
12 Atta Boy's Last Race	54	55
16 American Aristocracy	92	89	9
10 The Microscope Mystery	50	43
14 Honorable Algy	76	65	3
14 Jim Grimsby's Boy	68	62	3
15 The Devil's Double	91	91	7
12 The Children Paid	72	63	3
14 Children of the Feud	55	52	1
8 The Criminal	49	45
10 A Gamble in Souls	67	65	3
15 The Wharf Rat	54	55
20 The Matrimaniac	92	94	10
20 The Sin Ye Do	92	85	10
13 Heiress of Coffee Dan's	60	53	2
10 Three of Many	62	53
9 House Built Upon Sand	75	67	3
8 Nina the Flower Girl	51	52
11 The Female of the Species	72	74	2
16 Truthful Tulliver	97	93	9
12 The Weaker Sex	88	83	4
7 The Little Yank	40	52	1
10 The Bride of Hate	78	74	4
11 The Iced Bullet	62	53
14 The Americano	99	97	11
10 Chicken Casey	75	56	1
14 Jim Bludso	63	41	1
14 The Crab	83	70	5
10 Girl of the Timber Claims	41	39
16 The Gun-Fighter	76	85	10
13 The Bad Boy	71	54	2
11 The Princess of the Dark	39	41
6 Stage Struck	41	38
12 Last of the Ingrams	45	42
9 Blood Will Tell	64	61
5 A Love Sublime	47	40
8 The Little Brother	54	37	2
10 Back of the Man	90	81	5
10 Betsy's Burglar	59	54
14 The Square-Deal Man	96	95	7
11 The Dark Road	60	49	1
5 A Daughter of the Poor	57	55
9 A Woman's Awakening	61	52
9 Her Father's Keeper	54	48
9 Her Official Fathers	56	48
9 Old-Fashioned Young Man	48	47
10 Sweetheart of the Doomed	74	68	4
10 Paddy O'Hara	62	52	1
11 The Desert Man	92	91	4
9 Cheerful Givers	47	41
10 The Pinch Hitter	96	71	2
5 Hands Up	35	35
8 The Snarl	54	63
4 Might and the Man	25	30
6 Happiness	59	56
4 The Man Who Made Good	45	39
6 Wild Winship's Widow	58	58
6 Soul's Triumphant	30	28
7 The Millionaire Vagrant	78	64
8 Wolf Lowry	93	96	1
6 The Girl, Glory	73	52
7 Bawbs of Blue Ridge	33	51
8 A Hater of Men	79	63
5 American—That's All	32	32
7 Love or Justice	75	69
3 Her Excellency the Governor	35	34

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
6 Paws of the Bear	55	48
3 Madcap Madge	73	48
8 The Clod Hopper	98	85	1
5 Flame of the Yukon	96	91
4 A Strange Transgressor	80	83
4 Time Locks and Diamonds	30	33
4 The Mother Instinct	55	50
6 Sudden Jim	89	85
6 The Sawdust Ring	87	60
6 Borrowed Plumage	48	53
6 In Slumberland	74	31
1 Seeking Happiness	100	60
1 Food Gamblers	60	40
1 An Even Break	80	40
1 Madame Bo-Beep	40	40
1 The Ten of Diamonds	80	80

WORLD

595 World	67.7	61.5	49
4 Hearts Afire	70	78
1 Daughter of the Sea	60	50
2 The Warning	70	48
4 The Little Dutch Girl	80	65
1 The Price of Her Silence	50	90
2 The Master of the House	65	55
1 The Dragon	80	30
1 The Price	80	65
1 Love's Cross Roads	85	90
1 Better Woman	75	65
1 By Whose Hand	80	55
1 Her Great Hour	80	40
1 When it Strikes Home	60	65
2 Circus Romance	65	55
3 Old Dutch	80	50
2 Ballet Girl	90	85
4 Marrying Money	82	72
2 The Wishing Ring	82	80
2 The Dollar Mark	56	53
2 Gentleman from Mississippi	69	64
2 As Ye Sow	95	66
1 Stolen Voice	90	90
1 Face in the Moonlight	80	80
2 Women and Wine	45	45
2 Blue Grass	75	60
1 Fruits of Desire	40	50
2 Alias Jimmie Valentine	85	78
7 Trilby	81	68	1
1 Idols	40	40
2 Master Hand	85	80
4 The Devil's Toy	50	68
1 Salvation Nell	80	47
1 Family Cupboard	87	87	1
4 Heart of Blue Ridge	84	78	1
1 Butterfly an Wheel	80	70
1 Hearts of Men	80	52
1 Body and Soul	40	45
1 The Ransom	63	43
4 The Labyrinth	66	65
1 Should a Wife Forgive?	80	90
2 The Senator	80	60
2 Hearts in Exile	75	83
1 His Wife's Good Name	25	20
1 The Chain Invisible	90	5
1 The Imposter	80	75
1 Sunday	95	100
1 As in a Looking Glass	60	40
1 Over Night	70	70
1 Sins of Society	76	65
7 Camille	86	79	3
1 The Rack	85	65
1 Fine Feathers	70	40
1 The Clarion	60	75
3 The Woman in 47	74	80
5 The Yellow Passport	82	80	2
1 The Price of Happiness	58	50
2 A Woman's Power	45	50
1 Cowardly Way	40	40
2 Passersby	73	55
1 Man and His Angel	62	45
4 The Supreme Sacrifice	78	69
2 The Struggle	60	40
1 The Hand of Peril	75	67
5 Then I'll Come Back To You	76	66	1
4 The Reapers	75	65
2 The Shadow of Doubt	78	65
2 Social Highwaymen	75	48
2 Closed Road	87	81	1
7 The Feast of Life	61	73
7 Her Maternal Right	58	74
6 Sudden Riches	76	71
2 The Twin Triangle	83	45
6 Tangled Fates	57	63
3 Fate's Boomerang	42	52
8 His Brother's Wife	53	74	1
10 Perils of Divorce	61	63
15 La vie de Boheme	47	50
1 What Happened at 22	82	70
5 Crucial Test	59	55
7 The Weakness of Man	61	68
12 Sally in Our Alley	68	80
14 Paying the Price	70	70	1
12 Miss Petticoats	59	61
14 Woman's Way	75	74	4
13 The Summer Girl	56	57
12 Rail Rider	68	60
10 Husband and Wife	75	63	2
5 Almighty Dollar	76	72	1
13 The Velvet Paw	74	69	1
1 Friday, the Thirteenth	72	70
11 Dark Silence	77	79	2
4 The Revolt	66	63
7 The Gilded Cage	75	70
6 Hidden Scar	77	67
6 The Scarlet Oath	60	62
7 Man Who Stood Still	71	63
10 The Heart of a Hero	59	49
8 Without a Soul	70	55
15 Bought and Paid For	91	91	10
10 The Madness of Helen	57	54
6 Men She Married	58	55
4 The Deep Purple	81	75
11 All Man	59	63
7 Broken Chains	50	43
12 The Rise of Susan	79	83	6
6 The World Against Him	52	43
10 Woman Alone	67	65	1
7 On Dangerous Ground	65	71
7 The Man Who Forgot	65	61	1
4 Marriage a la Carte	73	73	1
1 The Unpardonable Sin	40	55
8 The Bondage of Fear	65	63
8 Tillie Wakes Up	79	78	1
8 The Hungry Heart	87	83	2
8 The Square Deal	69	72
3 Girl's Folly	65	75
5 The Red Woman	45	48
4 The Web of Desire	78	73	1
5 The Family Honor	66	61
8 The Dancer's Peril	77	71	1
5 The Social Leper	65	65
4 Man's Woman	61	61
4 Darkest Russia	71	75
8 House of Tears	80	65
1 The Bludgeon	87	80
3 As Man Made Her	62	68
5 The Page Mystery	55	57
4 Yankee Pluck	61	48
4 Moral Courage	61	58
4 Mothers of France	66	51
2 Maternity	85	90
2 The Crimson Dove	60	55
3 The False Friend	65	72
2 The Stolen Paradise	50	70
1 Atonement	70	65
1 The Pawn of Fate	85	45
1 The Divorse Game	5	75
1 The Price of Pride	75	60
1 The Brand of Satan	75	60
1 The Golden Lotus	50	50
1 The Native Soul	20	30
1 When True Love Dawns	60	45

METRO

674 Metro	70.8	67.0	57
1 Her Reckoning	40	40
1 Satan Sanderson	70	70
2 The Cowboy and the Lady	55	53
1 Heart of a Painted Lady	85	75
2 The High Road	65	75
4 Shooting of Dan McGrew	81	79
2 The Middleman	60	70
2 My Best Girl	55	55
1 Right of Way	70	55
2 Second in Command	77	80
2 The Vampire	55	80
6 Soul of a Woman	93	80	1
1 Silent Voice	77	87
2 An Enemy of Society	50	50
3 The Song of a Wage Slave	65	67
2 Emmy of Strok's Nest	70	65
2 Final Judgment	80	80
3 Pennington's Choice	78	80
4 Woman Pays	78	82
1 One Million Dollars	78	70
3 Barbara Frietchie	82	73
0 Forget-Me-Not	63	69
5 The Yellow Streak	85	64
5 Rosemary for Remembrance	68	69
1 Black Fear	73	57
5 What'll People Say?	90	84
4 The Turmoil	70	55
9 The Lure of Heart's Desire	55	58
5 Her Debt of Honor	49	50
6 A Man and His Soul	83	90
4 The Upstart	69	71
3 Dimples	52	58
5 A Corner In Cotton	57	56
1 Her Great Match	30	50
1 The Royal Family	40	40
1 Greater Love Hath No Man	45	50
1 The Flaming Sword	20	40
1 Shadows of Great City	30	50
5 The Price of Malice	66	65
6 The Soul Market	83	75
2 Blindness of Love	80	85	1
1 Lovely Mary	67	53
1 My Madonna	80	85
6 Her Great Price	80	68	1
8 The Wall Between	78	82	1
6 The Kiss of Hate	62	74
6 Half Million Bribe	69	49
8 Playing with Fire	78	75
11 The Come-Back	75	74	1
8 Snow Birds	80	77
8 A Million a Minute	72	84	1
4 The Spell of the Yukon	79	71
6 His Great Triumph	49	43
10 The Scarlet Woman	73	84	1
10 Dorian's Divorce	74	68
8 Masked Rider	69	66
8 Flower of No Man's Land	58	75
8 The Purple Lady	82	82
10 The Eternal Question	76	83	1
11 The Quitter	69	73
11 The River of Romance	87	76	7
8 A Child of Destiny	53	56
13 The Devil at His Elbow	64	61	1
14 God's Half Acre	71	68	1
14 The Weakness of Strength	68	54
11 The Pretender	80	72	1
7 The Upheaval	57	63
10 The Light of Happiness	67	60	1
10 Mister 44	88	93	4
8 The Wheel of the Law	77	66	1
10 The Dawn of Love	66	60
8 The Iron Woman	44	57
5 Life's Shadows	66	60
13 In the Diplomatic Service	69	83	4
9 The Brand of Cowardice	65	54
13 The Gates of Eden	68	54
11 Extravagance	69	82
10 The Wager	78	64
1 My Madonna	80	85
8 The Sunbeam	53	51
11 Big Tremaine	74	82
9 The Black Butterfly	70	80	4
8 The Stolen Triumph	56	48
8 Awakening of Helena Ritchie	60	61
11 Pigin Island	68	74	3
12 Vanity	61	53
12 The White Raven	85	81	4
9 A Wife by Proxy	46	41
9 Threads of Fate	41	34
12 Bridges Burned	47	62
9 The End of the Tour	45	44
10 One of Many	66	61	1
8 The Secret of Eve	37	66	1
14 The Promise	82	84
6 The Barricade	58	57
7 The Hidden Children	43	62
9 The Mortal Sin	53	58
8 The Waiting Soul	49	61	1
6 The Father's Son	67	62
5 The Power of Decision	51	53
7 A Magdalene of the Hills	51	50
6 God's Law and Man's	49	49
3 The Millionaire's Double	67	60
4 The Call of Her People	63	56
5 Sowers and Reapers	61	48
4 The Soul of Magdalene	36	40
4 The Beautiful Lie	25	30
5 The Dutchess of Doubt	62	62
4 Lady Barnacle	49	48

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
5 The Haunted Pajamas	84	75
5 The Greatest Power	42	52
4 Alladin's Other Lamp	59	50
2 Somewhere In America	50	50
3 Will o' the Wisp	34	27
2 Hidden Springs	40	40
2 Miss Robinson Crusoe	20	20
1 The Empty Soul	40	40
1 The Jury of Fate	20	20
6 The Slacker	99	97	1
1 The Trail of the Shadow	60	40

FOX

767 Fox	73.1	70.8	106
1 Girl I Left Behind Me	0	25
3 St. Elmo	42	85
5 A Fool There Was	84	97	2
3 Dr. Rameau	73	75	1
3 Kreutzer Sonata	83	73
2 The Idler.	55	45
3 The Celebrated Scandal	67	63
3 Anna Kernina	62	60
3 The Clemenceau Case	81	81	1
3 The Walls of Jericho	30	37
2 Woman's Resurrection	74	58
3 Life's Shop Window	30	62
3 The Nigger	90	66
5 The Gilded Fool	68	70
4 The Devil's Daughter	73	94
5 Should a Mother Tell?	85	75
2 Wormwood	40	45
2 Lady Audley's Secret	70	78
1 Princess Romanoff	60	60
2 The Valley of the Missing	49	35
1 Children of the Ghetto	75	40
2 Sampson	63	50
1 The Thief	90	40
9 Two Orphans	85	87	4
2 The Song of Hate	92	82
7 Regeneration	77	72	4
6 The Wonderful Adventure	75	76
5 Sin	62	62
1 Little Gypsy	80	74
6 The Soul of Broadway	85	80	2
2 The Family Stain	87	64
4 Carmen	81	86	2
1 A Royal Romance	65	80
2 Blindness of Devotion	56	53
4 Woman's Past	63	43
9 Broken Law	82	65	1
8 Galley Slave	76	75	1
3 Unfaithful Wife	73	61
3 Her Mother's Secret	73	57
3 A Soldier's Oath	82	70
6 Destruction	76	90	1
3 Green-Eyed Monster	53	74
3 Parisian Romance	65	61
2 Fourth Estate	80	68
6 Serpent	92	93	1
5 Ruling Passion	53	59
5 Merely Mary Ann	52	45
7 Fool's Revenge	45	49
10 Fighting Blood	74	70
4 The Witch	63	55
4 Marble Heart	41	60
10 Gold and the Woman	65	86	1
11 The Bondman	76	64	1
5 A Wife's Sacrifice	55	56
12 Blue Blood and Red	84	70	1
6 Slander	50	70
10 A Modern Thelma	59	49	1
9 Man of Sorrow	63	64	1
9 Blazing Love	70	68
11 The Eternal Sapho	84	87	4
12 Sins of Men	75	60	1
14 Battle of Hearts	68	61
10 The Spider and the Fly	67	72	1
11 Hypocrisy	76	68
10 A Woman's Honor	69	71
22 East Lynne	86	85	9
15 Ambition	71	67
18 Man From Bitter Roots	82	81	2
21 Caprice of the Mountains	69	63	1
15 Tortured Heart	71	67
21 The Beast	87	66	5
26 Under Two Flags	94	92	17
19 The End of the Trail	66	79
19 Sporting Blood	62	57	1
19 Little Miss Happiness	75	68	3
20 Daredevil Kate	75	76	4
14 The Unwelcome Mother	63	66
18 Her Double Life	86	86	6
10 Where Love Leads	69	68	1
14 The Fires of Conscience	65	71	1
12 The Straight Way	67	72
12 The Ragged Princess	77	70	1
15 The War Bride's Secret	76	71	3
12 Romeo and Juliet	86	86	5
5 Love and Hate	66	60
6 The Mischief Maker	70	70	2
7 Jealousy	63	81
7 The Mediator	73	70	1
5 Sins of the Parents	86	72	3
6 The Battle of Life	67	62
7 The Vixen	59	73
6 The Love Thief	82	80	1
5 The Island of Desire	74	67	1
2 A Modern Cinderella	70	68
6 The Price of Silence	82	77	1
3 The Bitter Truth	79	80	1
4 The Primitive Call	58	63
10 The Darling of Paris	67	74
5 One Touch of Sin	65	73
7 The New York Peacock	83	79
2 A Child of the Wilds	85	65
4 The Scarlet Letter	78	69	1
6 The Tiger Woman	73	83	2
6 Sister Against Sister	82	58	1
6 A Tale of Two Cities	93	83	4
4 Melting Millions	83	65	1
4 The Victim	65	64
4 Loves Law	20	35
5 The Blue Streak	58	60
3 High Finance	77	63
1 American Methods	90	85
3 Her Greatest Love	78	85
2 Tangled Lives	65	65
1 The Derelict	90	45	1
2 Her Temptation	83	59
1 Final Payment	20	40
2 The Silent Lie	85	85
1 The Slave	20	40
1 The Broadway Sport	55	40
1 Two Little Imps	90	90
1 The Innocent Sinner	80	80
1 The Book Agent	70	70
1 She	65	80

MUTUAL

233 Mutual	72.0	71.1	17
1 Buzzard's Shadow	35	40
1 Death Lock	95	85
2 On the Night Stage	68	55
1 The Mating	80	70
1 Enoch Arden	100	100
2 The Girl from His Town	73	70
2 Ghosts	50	63
2 Cup of Life	93	70
1 His Wife	70	25
1 House of Scandal	90	75
1 Infatuation	60	50
3 Miracle of Life	55	41	1
1 Inner Struggle	40	20
1 Mill of Floss	75	90
2 The Painted Soul	81	55
1 End of the Road	90	100
1 Father and Son	75	75
2 The Reward	85	75
2 Bird of Prey	82	81
1 Inspiration	70	100	1
2 As a Woman Sows	80	81
1 The Decoy	50	40
1 The Drifter	75	60
1 Life's Blind Alley	50	75
1 Silas Marner	100	100	1
3 The Craving	69	67
1 Law Unto Himself	45	50
1 Heart of Tara	75	75
1 According to Law	65	52
1 Overalls	75	90
3 My Partner	72	70
3 The Bruiser	75	65	1
1 Hidden Law.	100	90	1
2 Love Liar	72	42	1
1 Revelations	50	50
1 The Net	90	100	1
1 The Haunted Manor	52	53
2 Feathertop	90	90
1 Lying Lips	60	70
1 Dust	50	50
1 Other People's Money	85	80
2 Isle of Love	80	85	1
5 Whispering Smith	64	66
6 Soul Mates	69	63
2 Wasted Years	76	81
2 Far from Madding Crowd	70	67
4 Medicine Bend	74	81
4 Highest Bid	84	66	1
3 Her American Prince	70	67
5 Doorsteps	65	60	1
2 House of Mirrors	77	75
1 Wall Street Tragedy	55	50
7 Youth's Endearing Charms	77	71	1
2 Strength, Donald Mackenzie	75	72
1 Million for Mary	90	90	1
7 Judith of the Cumberlands	68	68
2 A Welsh Singer	60	53
1 Man Who Would Not Die	85	75
2 The Wolf Man	25	30
1 The Painted Lie	40	35
3 Three Pals	77	76
1 Manager of the B. & A.	63	70
9 Pearl of Paradise	68	76	1
5 Dulcie's Adventure	87	83	1
2 And the Law Says	58	64
1 Bluff	85	80
9 Faith	76	72
6 Miss Jackie of the Navy	87	82	1
4 A Dream or Two Ago	81	87
7 The Innocence of Lizette	84	83
4 The Butterfly Girl	75	85
1 The House of Scandal	10	10
1 The Man From Oregon	95	75
1 The Girl From Rector's	40	40
3 The Greater Woman	43	57
3 Where Love Is	52	48
6 The Gentle Intruder	77	78
1 Damaged Goods	40	100
3 Philip Holden-Waster	59	65
2 Redeemed	55	30
1 Lonesome Town	85	85
1 The Love Hermit	78	78
5 The Fighting Gentleman	60	44
2 The Torch Bearer	78	75
2 The Twinkler	92	88
2 East Is East	88	60
1 Immediate Lee	90	82	1
1 Beloved Rogues	95	90
2 The Valley of Decision	69	82
2 The Gilded Youth	60	75
3 The Painted Lie	62	74
2 Motherhood	38	55
3 Sunny Jane	67	65
2 The Devil's Assistant	60	70
3 High Play	48	48
2 The Single Code	50	53
1 The Death	20	20
2 The Wildcat	65	58
3 Whose Wife?	47	47
3 Periwinkle	67	57
1 A Bit of Kindling	60	70
1 Annie-for-Spite	40	40
1 The Mirror	40	20
1 The Checkmate	20	20
1 The Serpent's Tooth	20	20
1 The Dazzling Miss Davidson	40	20
1 Shackles of Truth	90	90	1
3 Environment	57	47
1 The Upper Crust	20	20
1 Pardners	60	20
1 Melissa of the Hills	20	80
1 Bab, the Fixer	40	40
2 A Bit of Kindling	58	50

MUTUAL-CHAPLIN

2 A Night In the Show	80	67	1
5 The Fireman	70	78
4 The Vagabond	55	55
5 The Floorwalker	89	90	1
8 One A. M.	63	81	1
16 The Count	88	86	1
10 The Pawnshop	73	74	2
7 Behind the Screen	89	91	1
9 The Rink	96	99	3
8 Easy Street	95	100	1
14 The Cure	94	95	1
8 The Immigrant	54	59	2

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

WILLIAM F. ALDRICH
FEATURE PRODUCER
Screen Club, 117 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO

REGINALD BARKER
DIRECTING
PARALTA PLAYS
Paralta Studio, Los Angeles, Calif.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
PRODUCER

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

WILLIAM DESMOND
TRIANGLE PLAYS
Culver City, Cal.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

HOBART HENLEY
HOBART HENLEY PRODUCTIONS

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
PRODUCING FEATURES
Ivan Film Corp.

LLOYD INGRAHAM
PRODUCER

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

HARLEY KNOLES
FEATURES DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 D. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

JOSEPH LEVERING
DIRECTOR

O. A. C. LUND

ASHLEY MILLER
Director—Vitagraph Studios
Brooklyn

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE DIRECTOR
FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.

WEDGWOOD NOWELL
TRIANGLE
Friars Club, N. Y. C.

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITIGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

TOM TERRISS
PRODUCER
VITAGRAPH

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
FEATURE DIRECTOR
511 W. 143rd St. Audubon 1941.

JAMES VINCENT
PRODUCER

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

BEN WILSON
DIRECTING AND STARRING
UNIVERSAL

CHESTER WITHEY
DIRECTOR

JAMES YOUNG

WID'S
IS READ
NOT SKIMMED

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Adress—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM

A MAGAZINE—IN FACT A SERVICE

WID'S

INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS

Always Independent Issued Every Thursday

VOL. III. THURSDAY, OCT. 4, 1917. NO. 40

25 Cents a Copy $10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

SMILING DOUG IN ATHLETIC HERO MELLER FULL OF PEP

Douglas Fairbanks in

THE MAN FROM PAINTED POST

Fairbanks—Artcraft

DIRECTOR	Joseph Henaberry
AUTHOR	Jackson Gregory
SCENARIO BY	Douglas Fairbanks
TITLES BY	Anita Loos
CAMERAMAN	Victor Fleming
AS A WHOLE	Fast athletic hero, romantic meller, with occasional smiles, but more action than comedy
STORY	Speedy, snappy treatment of old Western hero meller
DIRECTION	Made old stunts seem new by handling; kept action speeded and slipped in bits of beauty and comedy touches where they helped; slumped occasionally, but generally very satisfactory
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally very good; some beautiful cloud effects
LIGHTINGS	Some artistic interior bits; generally very satisfactory
CAMERA WORK	Registered some good angles
STAR	Pep and personality perpetually popular
SUPPORT	Eileen Percy very pleasing; willun was wicious
EXTERIORS	Good composition, considering cattle country atmosphere
INTERIORS	Satisfactory
DETAIL	Many good bits
TIME	Sixty-four minutes (5 parts)

GETTING away from the straight comedy stuff, back to the athletic daredevil hero, Doug swings through this Western meller with his smile working regularly, but depending more upon the action than anything else for the good will of his followers.

The story, stripped of the Fairbanks element and the excellent treatment which made it hit only the high spots, would be quite ordinary, and the chances are that every fan will have seen the same kind of a plot hundreds of times, because it is only one of those stranger-detective stories with the hero dropping into the cattle country to round up the thieving rustlers.

Just to prove that it was a real old-fashioned meller, they slipped in the scar on the arm, the old feud between the detective and the willun, the kidnapped shero, the fight against odds in the cabin, and similar trimmings.

I have a hunch, however, that it may be a very wise little stunt for Doug to slip over one of those straight hero things occasionally—particularly when he is able to make these athletic fightin' fellers so convincing. It's hard work to be a straight light comedian all the time, and then, of course, there's that good old bugaboo of stories. If you think they are plentiful, ask Doug.

As melo this moves and pleases. There are many smiles, and there are a few laughs. Eileen Percy, the heroine, was shown in only a few scenes, but was photographed to such advantage that she certainly did look beautiful.

Frank Campeau as the willun looked rough and real, seeming a fair enough opponent for Heroic Doug.

With the very first introduction we saw Doug jump a fence and tackle the side of a barn, with the result that he went up at some speed, climbing in a way that no ordinary human would ever think of, landing on top in about three shakes, where he straddled the roof and did a little fancy shootin'. From this time on he did stunts regularly and smiled on occasion.

Considering the fact that this was made in the cattle country where there isn't a wonderful variety of scenic beauty, I think they did quite well in getting artistic atmosphere. There were many pretty cloud effects, with one that was wonderfully beautiful at the end.

The Box Office Angle.

I wouldn't tell 'em anything about this unless you want to say that it's fast and furious, because I think Doug's name is enough to get business most anywhere today, and, unless I am seriously mistaken, most of your patrons will enjoy this very much, even though it is meller rather than straight comedy.

I can't figure that anyone will have a kick coming because Doug is known for his athletic heroics as well as for his smile and comedy, so that it is no more than fair that he should slip one of these over occasionally.

To be true, the story is old, but, at least, it is one of those possible things, and there is no question about the fact that they do like good red-blooded Western action when intelligently handled.

HEART STIRRING HAND COLORED PATRIOTIC SLIDES 25c. Each

71. If It's Worth Living Under, It's Worth Fighting For.
54. Americans Must Protect America.
95. We Are With You, Mr. President. One Hundred Million Strong.
53. Your Country Needs You.
28. American Flag.
95. President Wilson & Flag.
60 Gen. Washington.
45. The Birth of the American Flag.
70. Abraham Lincoln.
76. Spirit of '76—Reflects in 1917.
27. If It's Good Enough to Live Under, It's Worth Fighting for.
87. Pledge Allegiance.
68 Star Spangled Banner.
42. My Country 'Tis of Thee (Flag).

EXCELSIOR ILLUSTRATING CO., 219 Sixth Ave. New York City

STATUESQUE THEATRIC STAR IN TERRIBLE MELLER THAT HAS AWFUL HOLES

Maxine Elliott in FIGHTING ODDS

Goldwyn

DIRECTOR.....Allan Dwan
AUTHORS.....Roi Cooper Megrue and Irvin S. Cobb
CAMERAMAN.....Rene Guissart
AS A WHOLE.....Stately star of some size, beautiful at times and not at others, in terrible meller mess of impossible, ancient situations
STORY.....Much old junk very badly tied together—in fact, at times it wasn't tied DIRECTION.....Failed to bridge gaps between episodes or make action seem reasonable, and slipped in playing for artistic softness by frequently having sets too dark
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Sometimes excellent; sometimes poor
LIGHTINGS.....Some very beautiful, but frequently not enough light on sets
CAMERA WORK.....Varied
STAR.....Very beautiful at times, but occasionally showed age and never convinced as character, being "posing beauty" throughout
SUPPORT.....Quite satisfactory; financial leader excellent
EXTERIORS.....Acceptable
INTERIORS.....Generally very good
DETAIL.....Dozens of loopholes in story
TIME.....Sixty-four minutes (5 parts)

THAT "Advisory Board" of Goldwyn's about which so much has been said in expensible advertising space, should go out some place and hide after putting this story on the screen. Of course, the fact that Irvin Cobb has his name on the Board and is also one of the authors of this may have something to do with their having been misled.

I have a private hunch, however, that the brains of the literary world which came to the films in this Advisory Board had rather a contempt for those who go to movies, with the result that they figured that they should feed 'em on bunk rather than intelligently constructed dramatic situations.

At all events, this story is plain rotten! There's not a new angle in the situations, to begin with, and, to make the crime worse, they have failed to tie the various ancient situations together with any semblance of convincing story construction.

This marks the screen debut of Miss Elliott, and while this far-famed beauty of the stage of yesterday appears to decided advantage in some shots, that old idea of a chain being "as strong as its weakest link" also applies to an impression of a personality; because once you get a flash of a beauty when she isn't a "beauty," you aren't quite as convinced the next time when you see her appear beautiful.

The star has a much worse handicap, however, than having been poorly lighted at times: It was the fact that she seemed absolutely unable to decide what to do with her hands most of the time. Her pet idea seemed to be to fix her hair or to adjust her hat, or to put her hand up to her forehead. This gesture became so frequent, both hands being used in turn, that the result was anything but favorable.

The star had the opportunity to wear some beautiful gowns, and in the final scene where she braved the lion in his den she had a L. & B. H. on that was a beaut! In passing I want to suggest that the general impression will be that she hardly needed any assistance when she went calling on this guy at his home, because she looked big enough to bat him over the head with something and walk away with everything he owned.

The plot was that good old standby, the boob husband—and, believe me, this guy was a boob!—who proved easy picking for the clever financial manipulator, with the result that all of a sudden Boob Husband was trimmed and headed for jail, though innocent, and it was up to beauteous, statuesque Wifey to get this guy and make him admit that he should be in jail instead of poor boob of a hubby.

I believe the plot might have had more of a chance, as bad as it was toward the end, if they hadn't made this husband such an awful simp in the deal whereby he lost everything he owned, and landed in jail. They showed him called into a conference to be made president of the Amalgamated Motors Company, and—bingo! —he'd no sooner signed the contract which made him president, when the other guy took charge of his plant which had been turned in in order that he become president, and at the same time a doctored statement was handed over to him to sign which afterwards landed him in Sing Sing. Any audience feels that if the poor nut had no more sense than to be trimmed in that way, then he deserved his fate.

Although one man had tried to defend Hubby at the directors' meeting where he was trapped, the boob didn't think about this until he was landed in Sing Sing, and then he sent his wife to see this gink. Instead of going with this man to the district tatorney at once, as they did far later in the film, they then proceeded to pull the good old bunk about sending the beautiful wife to trap the wicked, wealthy willun.

Then they pulled a date in Sherry's, and had the star lounging around in a classy apartment, in beautiful gowns, etc.,—the Sherry date, by the way, being slammed through with record-breaking speed—but after the multi-millionaire had made a few calls at the apartment, they pulled the same old ruff stuff that we find in the "shop girl" melos, and this ended up with the beauteous wife going to the district attorney (as she should have done in the first place).

She was then sent on the good old errand to seek the poipers in the willun's vault in his home, and—ah!—but didn't she purty near get 'em, by heck!—when in walked the superintendent from the mill (who had been sticking around with a mob of arm-waving extras who had been on a strike all through the film), and this guy called her "Mrs. Copley," he did, thereby letting the old bird in on the thing that she was not an English widow, after all.

Right here and now I want to ask our esteemed author, Mr. Cobb, how this situation is explained. In the hallway was a servant of the wealthy willun, who, a moment later, we found was a detective. Yet, when the superintendent of the mill blew in, he had to knock this servant down in what was one of the funniest fake blows and falls ever screened before he could break into the room and make his bonehead remark about Mrs. Copley. That fall, by the way, was bad enough to get a real "Ha-ha" from a Strand audience—and, too, this was the first snicker that was pulled at points not intended by the authors.

Anyway, after the superintendent had pulled the "Mrs. Copley" stuff and walked out, the wise willun shoved the statuesque star into the secret vault and locked the door. He then called up his lawyer on the telephone to explain that the combination of the vault was on the fly-leaf of a certain book, this being done so that the servant standing outside the door could come in and release the star preliminary to arresting the willun.

They did pull one laugh on the finish by a title where the Sing Sing guard told the willun that he hoped he would enjoy the cell for the winter, since Mr. Copley had spent a pleasant summer there.

Personally, I can't understand the state of mind which would make it possible to take such a plot as this for a production for Maxine Elliott. Certainly after seeing the film on the screen I wouldn't think that such a production could be released as her first offering.

It is true that the film may get by with 50 per cent. of the fans of the country, who will go to see Maxine Elliott and come away comparatively satisfied, but surely no one can possibly be greatly pleased by this, and there is hardly a doubt but what all the wise fans and the film trade in general are going to have a sinking-of-the-heart spell after observing this third Goldwyn. Charles Dalton, as the financial power, gave a very good performance.

The other members of the cast were satisfactory, but little more. No one was permitted to act very much, and the result was that it became a succession of scenes where people walked in and out.

The Box Office Angle.

You can probably get this by if you haven't promised too much, and possibly only a certain percentage of your patrons will come out and kick strenuously. It seems a pity, however, that such an awful story should be used, with such inconsistent handling of a star allowed to mar her possibilities.

It would seem from this that the star may be decidedly limited in her ability to register emotions, and certainly her gestures were very, very mechanical and theatric, but, nevertheless, by very careful treatment she could have been nursed through a series of pictures, whereas with this as her first I fear that her value at the box office will not be tremendous in the future.

I have tried to give you the best outline I could of this proposition from the technical angle, and must tell you that everything depends upon your local conditions as to how you should handle this matter of booking or advertising. If you value the good will of your fans, however, don't make any noise about the story or production.

It seemed that even the Advisory Board must have realized at the end that this was a bit ancient. Because when they sent the wife to pull the vamp stuff with the willun, they used this title: "All this failing, Mrs. Copley tried the old, old way." Yes, yes; it was old—quite so!

In order to excuse the speed with which they got the vamp wife and willun together, they said after the meeting had been arranged—"It worked like a charm." Yes, it did that!

They let one little item slip by in the title when they addressed a letter to the district attorney and called him "W. T. Carleton," it happening that W. T. Carleton was the real name of the man who played the part. This will pass with fans, but will get a quiet smile from film folk.

WILD WESTERN WITH MOST OF IT MISSING FIRE BADLY

Mary Anderson and Alfred Whitman in

SUNLIGHT'S LAST RAID

Vitagraph

DIRECTOR	William Wolbert
AUTHOR	Cyrus Townsend Brady
CAMERAMAN	Reginald E. Lyons
AS A WHOLE	Serial calibre
STORY	Eastern girl rescued from bandits, with troops-to-the-rescue finish
DIRECTION	Gave loads of action but nothing else
PHOTOGRAPHY	Just straight stuff, with a few good long shots
LIGHTINGS	Little attempt at anything artistic
CAMERA WORK	Good
STARS	She easy to look at; he worked hard
SUPPORT	Satisfactory
EXTERIORS	A few quite good
INTERIORS	Matched action
DETAIL	Good, but seemed unreal
TIME	Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

THIS was much too "serial" like to be accepted by real film fans as good entertainment. It is just routine Western melo.

The story was very similar to a thousand others I have seen of the Eastern girl, played by Mary Anderson, who went West to visit her brother, a rancho, and was captured by Capt. Sunlight, the Mexican bandit. She was rescued by Alfred Whitman, the policeman hero, almost immediately.

Of course, there were lots of captures, escapes and chases following, and the love interest was developed between Miss Anderson and Mr. Whitman, and finally we had the good old reliable finish of Miss Anderson escaping from the besieged cabin of a neighbor to ride for help to the nearby fort.

To be sure, the troops came to the rescue just in time, and after the resultant chase and the scene of Capt. Sunlight rolling down the side of the mountain we came to the good-night clutch.

There were a few good shots in this, but not enough to help it to any appreciable extent, and we do not get into an intimate relationship with the characters, although the director has given us some very good closeups of Miss Anderson.

The titles were quite poor and missed lots of chances to register laughs.

Miss Anderson played her part well, but had little to do except ride. Mr. Whitman was hardly fitted for the type of a lean, hard-riding mounted policeman. Others who appeared were Fred Burns and V. Howard.

The Box Office Angle.

This is quite a little below par for a community house where they expect good pictures, but it may get by with a house where they like meller with lots of riding and shootin'.

I do not believe Miss Anderson's or Mr. Whitman's name will be able to pull you any great amount of business, and if you tell them anything about the story, your regulars will shake their heads and sigh. If you can get something more human I'd advise you to grab it and say good night to this.

CRANE WILBUR

ART DRAMAS PROGRAM

Eye of Envy — Blood of His Father
Unto the End — Devil McCare
Just Jim

MADE IN RUSSIA; HAS PERSONALITIES; AN EXCELLENT NOVELTY

Ivan Mozukin and Mlle. Tanya Fetner in

THE PAINTED DOLL

Russian Art—Pathe

DIRECTOR	Chester Sakinsky
AUTHOR	A. Pausakin
AS A WHOLE	Dominant personalities in surprisingly good settings make this interesting and distinctive
STORY	Eeternal Triangle tragedy made impressive by players
DIRECTION	Made dramatic moments register, but had badly varying lightings
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally very good except where lightings poor
LIGHTINGS	Some very fine; others not good
CAMERA WORK	Good; excellent for foreign film
STARS	Personalities that get you
SUPPORT	Very good
EXTERIORS	Interesting because Russian
INTERIORS	Very good
DETAIL	Interesting
TIME	Sixty-eight minutes (6 parts)

TO begin with, these productions, made in Russia, have a definite interest for Americans in the very fact that they were made in Russia. Some film people have had a feeling that any foreign production could not be received with favor in this country, but to my mind the present international situation has placed Russia in such a position that this country is very much interested in anything which comes from that country.

Ivan Mozukin and Mlle. Tanya Fetner give us screen portrayals as satisfying as anything that has ever been done in this country, so far as straight dramatic work of power and sincerity is concerned. The settings seem surprisingly good when we realize that Russia is not as well acquainted with the possibilities of film studios as we are in this country.

The technique of the story construction was not like our American construction in that we had practically no parallel action and very little use of the cut-and-flash method, but the personalities of the players did manage to hold the interest and the photography made the expressions of the players perfectly clear at all times, even when they were working at a distance of ten, fifteen or twenty feet from the camera.

The chief flaw in this Russian film was in the lighting. There were some excellent effects, but in many places it was noticeable that the studio was poorly equipped, with the result that some of the scenes were flooded with light, while others were lighted unevenly where this was not intended.

Considered as a whole, from the viewpoint of the average audience, I would say that this production will make a decidedly favorable impression.

The story has a twist of the "eternal triangle" and doesn't finish with the American clutch, but it ends logically, and I believe most fans will leave the theatre with a feeling of having seen worthwhile acting. Certainly they will think more of this than they do of 99 out of 100 of the average routine program releases.

The plot of this has to do with the wealthy employer who was attracted by the employee's wife. This resulted in his sending the employee away, regardless of the fact that the employer was also married. When the employee returned and learned of the wife's escapade, he sought his employer, but was tricked into a false position and accused of a murder committed by the employer, so that he could be sent to his death by a quick trial.

The woman who had caused the trouble then came to the employer, but he had tired of her now, and then his conscience began to cause him to feel the fear of a menace, with the result that he finally went mad, while the woman who had sacrificed everything for him found herself deserted and alone with nothing but the furnishings of her apartment to show for the ruin she had caused.

There are a good many very dramatic scenes in this, and they are registered by the personalities of Mozukin and Mlle. Fetner in a manner that will make these players remembered. Mozukin is a dominant type, being a combination hero and villain, and I can best give you an idea as to his appearance and manner of carrying a scene by suggesting that he is a sort of combination of H. B. Warner and Stuart Holmes.

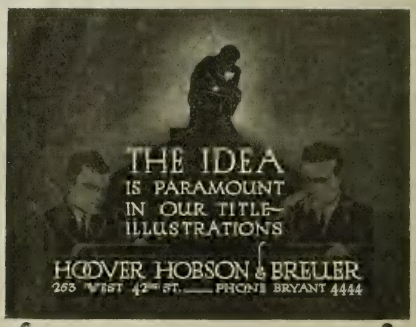
Were Mozukin brought to this country, or if American methods were given the proper opportunity in Russia, I believe he would be one of the greatest of screen favorites in a short time.

Mlle Fetner is a beautiful woman, and in the sympathy vampire part which she plays, she registers a portrayal that will be remembered and favorably commented on by your fans.

The Box Office Angle.

It seems to me that the first thing to be considered about this picture is the fact that it was made in Russia. Personally, I would want no better opportunity to cut loose with some advertising at the present moment. The fact that Mozukin is one of Russia's greatest stars, having been a star in the national theatres of that country, is another asset, and since the production is good enough to please generally, and certainly cannot be severely criticized—since it has been made under conditions different from those prevailing in American studios—it would seem to me that you should be able to do a big business with this and satisfy almost every element of your audience.

I commented above on the fact that, technically, this is not what it could have been had an American producer made it; but I want to impress you with the fact that it is decidedly better than the films you have been accustomed to condemn as "foreign" films, and the acting is so decidedly better than what we generally see, that I think the production will register with the average fan much better than it will with the average person in the film business, who naturally picks out technical flaws that a patron never thinks of.



EXCEPTIONALLY WELL HANDLED FARCE THAT WILL GO BIG

Madge Kennedy in

BABY MINE

Goldwyn

DIRECTORS.....John Stuart Robertson and Hugo Ballin
AUTHOR .....Margaret Mayo
CAMERAMAN .....Arthur Edeson
AS A WHOLE.....Very funny farce played in classy atmosphere by real personalities
STORY.....An old idea made very funny by treatment and development
DIRECTION....Kept it moving; made most of situations; kept it classy
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Excellent
LIGHTINGS.....Splendid, without effects that detracted from action
CAMERA WORK.....Very good
STAR.....Made characterization very real
SUPPORT.....Cumberland excellent; others very good
EXTERIORS ..... Satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Distinctive and impressive—gave tone to it all
DETAIL.....Some very good bits
TIME.....Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

THIS idea has been used before, both on the stage and for screen productions, but no one has ever secured as much real value out of the situations as the author of "Baby Mine" managed to do on the stage and now has succeeded in doing on the screen.

This is excellent farce, very well played, and Goldwyn must be thanked for having placed it in an atmosphere of refinement and distinction that made it all the more different from previous attempts to handle the same idea.

Beginning with the careful planting of the wife who just couldn't tell the truth, not because she was in any way malicious, but just because she slipped and didn't stop to think about it, we found hubby leaving home because of suspicions aroused by this continual series of falsehoods, with kind and well-meaning friends unknowingly suggesting a daring method to bring about hubby's return to his hearthstone.

Hubby had always wanted children, and so they suggested that a child be adopted. Through an error in calculations, hubby was notified a bit too soon and he arrived home before the child which was to be adopted was safely planted in the empty cradle.

This started developments, and they traveled on high speed from that time up until the final finish of the farcical action, wherein we found the father of the washerwoman's twins claiming them, and the dago mother of the third child marching home triumphant. The lying wife's hubby had been informed of the arrival of triplets, the news being imparted to him gradually with each fresh discovery of a youngster which he was supposed not to see.

The action started with smiles, secured for the most part by clever bits of business, and gradually developed into chuckles and real, sure-enough laughs as the speed of the farce increased. In the last reel or two there are several yells.

Madge Kennedy as the little liar who caused all the trouble, registered this characterization perfectly. To watch her in the early reels, it seemed easy to understand her viewpoint towards life. Most of the time it seemed that there was "nobody home"; but, since most of us have seen young females of this species, we can only say that Miss Kennedy has registered a faithful portrayal of the brainless, well-meaning liar who causes so much trouble.

John Cumberland, who played "Jimmie," the unfortunate friend who was picked on to be the "goat" through most of the action, had a sure-enough "fat" part. I don't mean that the character was fat, although in this case he was a little round-faced soul of winning manners, but I mean that the part was a "fat" one in the accepted theatrical term of being rich in opportunity. Mr. Cumberland handled this perfectly. He got more snickers out of bits of business and more earned laughs than any one in the production. Many of these were due to his handling of the part.

The other members of the cast were satisfactory, all being well chosen as to type, but the burden remained with Miss Kennedy and Mr. Cumberland.

The titles were very well written, and some of these added to the sum total of earned laughs.

The lighting generally was excellent, it being noticeable that there was little attempt for effects which sometimes detract from a story, although the lighting on the star was very good in almost every instance.

In the supporting cast were Kathryn Adams, Frank Morgan, Virginia Madigan and Sonia Marcelle.

The Box Office Angle

I would go after this strong and promise that it is the funniest screen production of a stage farce that has ever been made. You can safely play for the highbrow on this production, calling attention to the fact that it was written by Margaret Mayo, and make considerable fuss over the presence of Madge Kennedy, who you can refer to as the star of "Twin Beds."

In advertising this I would say something about Miss Kennedy's personality, as, for instance, referring to her as cute, snappy, full of pep, etc., so that your fans who are unfamiliar with what she has ever done will not get the false impression that she is another of those stately queens who have recently been wished into the film business with disastrous results to every one concerned.

In your advertising you might say that Goldwyn was not contented in this instance with making just a funny farce from a good story, but that they went to the trouble of securing a perfectly balanced cast, and then produced the story in an atmosphere of refinement and distinction at considerable expense.

WHY PAY TAXES?

Beynon's Musical Settings

Can be played without paying any fee to the Authors and Composers Association

Why not take advantage of Beynon's library of 18,000 selections?

It will pay you to inquire.

GEORGE W. BEYNON

505 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

GOOD COMEDY CONTRAST TO MELO MADE THIS ENTERTAINING

Virginia Pearson in

WHEN FALSE TONGUES SPEAK

Fox Film

DIRECTOR.....Carl Harbaugh
AUTHOR.....George Scarborough
CAMERAMAN.....Georges Benoit
AS A WHOLE.....Funny comedy bits and interesting action covered over convenient spots
STORY.....Convenient melo, but kept moving and comedy saved bad situations
DIRECTION.....Registered laughs, good lightings and kept it entertaining
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally pleasing; some effective bits
LIGHTINGS.....Some very fine but occasionally poor; varied a lot
CAMERA WORK.....Good, except one shot from above which was hard to understand
STAR.....Forceful—possibly too much so
SUPPORT.....Some acted too much, but comedy types very good
EXTERIORS.....Satisfactory; very few
INTERIORS.....Good
DETAIL.....Some excellent touches
TIME.....Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

AS a rule, I haven't been very much in favor of the comedy relief which Mr. Fox has injected into many of his productions, but certainly in this instance it is the comedy which saves the day.

This production is a melodrama which would have been entirely too "melo" by itself, and, as it runs now with good comedy planted all the way through the action—generally at points where you would groan over the convenient situations if the comedy were not there—this becomes rather entertaining.

The plot centered around one of those murder mystery situations where they led up to a moment when several people might be justified in killing a guy what needed killing, and then the body was shown, with the audience left to suspect a number of persons. The action then centered around the developments leading up to the final smoothing out of the mystery.

One of the best laughs that I've had in a long time came from a bit of business showing a burglar with eyes closed, shuffling several pages of a magazine, each of which contained some photograph of a wealthy man's home. After carefully shuffling these with his eyes closed, he picked out one which was to be the object of his attack. This entire point was gotten over without a title, and, believe me, it was good comedy! This burglar character, played by William E. Meehan, ran through the rest of the production and provided many sure-fire laughs, there being other characters brought in for no other purpose than the comedy they might provide.

The general treatment of the production was quite satisfactory technically, except that the players handled the dramatic moments with an inclination to overact, registering their emotions with too much vehemence. Miss Pearson slipped somewhat along the same line, her emotional bits seeming rather too violent at times. The general effect, however, was very satisfactory, because the comedy served as a proper balance against the rather emphatic drama, and so the interest was held by the action and laughs were provided by the hokum stuff.

For the most part, the camera angles and composition of scenes were excellent, but there was one shot where the camera was placed directly above the set, shooting down, in order to show what happened in several rooms at the time of the murder, and this was quite unsatisfactory because it was difficult to follow the action of the various characters and know which was which. This important scene would have been much better had it been taken in the regular manner with cutting and flashing from one character to another to show the correlative positions.

A number of the situations were painfully convenient, as, for instance, the fact that both women in the murder mystery took the same train in fleeing from the crime, and the fact that Miss Pearson "just happened" to put her hand on the record of the burglar who had been in the house, just when this man had "just happened" to be arrested, there being no logical explanation as to how Miss Pearson could have picked out this man's record from what she knew of him. But these bad spots are smoothed over by the fact that the audience is carried into a bit of fun-making immediately, with the result that they will not stop to worry about the technical construction of the plot.

On the finish of this they pulled the old rep show stunt of having each character walk across the stage to be applauded by the audience. Mr. Fox evidently decided that there was going to be no question as to the applause in this instance, since he provided his own audience and made them applaud.

In support of Miss Pearson, Claire Whitney was an excellent contrast, because she registered as a weak-willed, easily-misled young thing, which was a good contrast to Miss Pearson's dominant characterization.

William Meehan, as the burglar, gave the best characterization among the men.

Carl Eckstrom, as the newspaperman hero, was entirely too emphatic in his emotions.

Others in the cast were Hardy Kirkland and Director Harbaugh.

The Box Office Angle.

I think this will prove very satisfactory most anywhere because it has some fast interesting action with a certain element of mystery suspense that is nicely balanced, at times being overshadowed by some truly funny comedy.

To my mind, the average audience will consider this very good entertainment, and certainly productions that are entertaining are rare enough to permit of your forgiving the bad spots to accept the general impression.

Without doubt, Virginia Pearson has a large following, and her name as the star should guarantee a certain amount of business for you.

In advertising this you should make it clear that there is a good comedy element running through the production, and you might use some fool lines like this in your ads: "Did you ever know how some burglars select the houses which they intend to rob? See 'When False Tongues Speak.'"

ERNEST STERN, Inc.
THE TITLE MAN
Specializes in
MOTION PICTURE TITLES
OF THE HIGHEST GRADE
729 Seventh Ave., New York - - Phone Bryant 8978

STAR'S PERSONALITY AND FOOL SUPERSTITION STUFF WILL ENTERTAIN

Taylor Holmes in

FOOLS FOR LUCK

Essanay—Perfection

DIRECTOR	Lawrence C. Windom
AUTHOR	Kennett Harris
SCENARIO BY	James Campbell
AS A WHOLE	Personality of star and human bits make this splendid light entertainment
STORY	Slender skeleton used to tie together superstition incidents for laughs
DIRECTION	Centered everything on star—which was right idea
PHOTOGRAPHY	Very good
LIGHTINGS	No attempt for effects, but had some artistic bits
CAMERA WORK	Good straight stuff
STAR	Sure-fire personality
SUPPORT	Satisfactory, but not exceptional
EXTERIORS	Acceptable
INTERIORS	Good
DETAIL	Some very good touches
TIME	Fifty-six minutes (5 parts)

NO longer is there any question in my mind about it—Taylor Holmes is a "find!"

The story of this was not remarkable, it being for the most part a lot of stuff about superstition, the same being tied together around a rather slender skeleton of a romance. I will guarantee to you, however, that most any audience, anywhere, will enjoy this very much, because that Holmes man has an expressive face backed by an intelligence that knows when to put over a point, which means that he slips you a smile at just the right moment, with the result that you are "with" him every time.

The direction of this was good because it was kept human. The setting and atmosphere wasn't elaborate, and the production didn't cost a lot of money, but the situations convinced, and no attempt was made to reach for effects.

For instance, we saw a party of four making a landing from a rowboat, each stepping from the boat to the shore in turn, and the director had the courage to let them all get out without pulling the hokum of overturning the boat or dumping somebody into the lake. People do get out of a boat without accident sometimes, and that little bit of business where the director stayed close to fact helped other parts of the story where he deliberately played for laughs.

The picture started off with an excellent title about superstition, which said that the story was a "darn fool thing" and wasn't to be taken seriously, and the request was made that, if anyone in the audience wasn't a little superstitious, they had better slip out to the box office right away, with a joker on the end in the word "Maybe," which suggested that if they started out, "maybe" they wouldn't get their money. That bit of tomfoolery puts everyone in the right humor right at the drop of the hat, and then all through the production we found titles that were human and well written.

Almost all of the action was centered around Mr. Holmes, and he carried it without batting an eye.

Helen Ferguson as the girl in the case got by satisfactorily until she smiled, and then she slumped. She will do, though, because no one is going to kick about her not being a raving beauty after having had an hour of Taylor Holmes.

After Holmes lost his job the story sagged quite a bit, but finally they lifted it some with the suggestion of a lesson to men who fall by the wayside and wonder why. Some trimming in the last of the offering might have kept this moving a little bit better.

Although no attempt was made to secure what we call "light effects," there were a number of artistic bits, one in particular being very beautiful. This was a shot showing Mr. Holmes at the rail of the steamer upon his return trip the first time from South Haven. It was certainly a beautiful bit of composition.

The cast included John Cossar, Frankie Raymond, Robert Bolder, Ed Cooke and James C. Carroll.

The Box Office Angle.

If you have played "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," I certainly would advise you to grab this quick, because it will surely make good for you despite the little slump in one spot.

Holmes has a personality that "gets" an audience and gets 'em quick—and that's a wonderful asset! Such a man can carry a rotten story over without anyone ever stopping to figure out whether the story is good, bad or indifferent. They have a good time with the comedian and let it go at that.

The fact that this has been adapted from a "Saturday Evening Post" story should be worth something at your box office, so I wouldn't overlook making mention of that fact. You will always find some who think a story must be good if it was ever published in the "Saturday Evening Post." That will help take the curse off of the weak spot in the plot action.

QUICK ANNOUNCEMENTS FOR YOUR SCREEN

SLIDENE OUTFIT: all complete.....$1.00
8 bottles slide ink; 25 cover glasses; 6 special pens; 2 slide charts

Novelty Typewriter Slides.....$3.50 per 100
Handy Slide Holder and Clip FREE.
NOVELTY SLIDE CO., 115 East 23d St., New York.

WANDERING FATHER SEEKING WRONGED DAUGHTER MOVIE

Frederick Warde in

THE HEART OF EZRA GREER

Thanhouser—Pathe

DIRECTOR ..... Emile Chautard
AUTHOR ..... Lloyd Lonergan
CAMERAMAN ..... Jacques Bizeul
AS A WHOLE ..... Ordinary movie meller that never gets under surface
STORY ..... Very convenient and never convincing search for lost daughter
DIRECTION ..... Pulled some good lightings, but occasional crude touches marred impression
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Varied from fine to fair
LIGHTINGS ..... Some excellent; some ordinary
CAMERA WORK ..... Generally good, but slipped in some bad shots
STAR ..... Satisfactory characterization, was handicapped
SUPPORT ..... Camera conscious
EXTERIORS ..... Acceptable
INTERIORS ..... Some good; some poor
DETAIL ..... Very convenient bits and some bad titles
TIME ..... Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

THIS will run along on the screen before the average fan without making any impression whatever except that it is just "movies."

We have much footage of the old father searching for his daughter who has been wronged by the wealthy wun, and there are many of those convenient twists in the plot that "just happen," which lead up to the final result of the girl's father acting as valet to the wealthy guy, with the girl bringing her child to the latter's home to be cared for.

The girl then became a nurse in a hospital, which of course made it clear that the child was going to get caught in an accident on the finish which would bring father, daughter and grandfather together at the bedside, and so it was.

The photography and lightings varied from some very good flashes to some very ordinary bits. We had a few of those bits which are ordinarily termed "big scenes," these including a few cabaret shots, etc., but we had many scenes which were poorly photographed and badly grouped, with the result that these bad spots marred the general effect of the production decidedly.

They pulled a "baby vamp" on us who was funny because of her camera-conscious acting, and it was a general fault of most of the players that they were decidedly aware of the fact that it was expected that they act and that they were being photographed.

Frederick Warde, as the old father of the wronged shero, was quite satisfactory, but didn't register anything remarkable, his part really being one of those things that most any reasonably good character man could do just as well. In one place Mr. Warde was shown to fix a deck of cards with such ease that it appeared ridiculous for him to be acting as a valet. He could have made a fortune manipulating cards.

Those who appeared in support were Leila Frost, Geo. Forth and Lillian Mueller.

The Box Office Angle.

There's nothing about this to lift it out of the ordinary "average program release" rut, and I wouldn't advise that you play it unless you are committed to accept all Pathe productions.

If you must play it, I'd go very easy in making any references to production and story, depending almost entirely upon the possible interest in the work of Mr. Warde, who has had one or two good productions and is generally remembered as having been a prominent figure on the stage.

Don't be misled into boosting the baby vamp, because she is funny, and there is no element except a couple of rather cute kids worthy of any attention.

WILD ACTIN' SHERO IN ORDINARY DANCE HALL GIRL MELLER

Belle Bennett in

ASHES OF HOPE

Triangle

DIRECTOR ..... Walter Edwards
AUTHOR ..... Thomas H. Ince
CAMERAMAN ..... Gus Peterson
AS A WHOLE ..... Ordinary Western dance-hall melo badly overacted, with all the old situations which didn't convince.
STORY ..... Combination of old junk that failed utterly to impress
DIRECTION ..... Permitted bad overacting and registered crude long shots of dance-hall, which marred atmosphere
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Generally ordinary, with occasional good bits of lighting
LIGHTINGS ..... A few excellent, but generally poor
CAMERA WORK ..... Varied from good to poor
STAR ..... Acted violently most of the time
SUPPORT ..... Routine Western melo types
EXTERIORS ..... Satisfactory
INTERIORS ..... Ordinary; some rather crude
DETAIL ..... Not well handled and too many closeups of wounded men
TIME ..... Fifty-six minutes (5 parts)

FROM the fact that Tom Ince is credited with the authorship of this, it would seem that it is possibly one of the left-overs from his regime. Certainly it should have remained on the shelf, because the story is violent Western meller with every situation an "old friend" that fails to impress because it has been badly overplayed.

The chief offender in the overacting was Belle Bennett the star, who seemed to have been given a closeup in almost every one of her scenes, and she sure did rave some at every opportunity. She overreached almost every emotion that she attempted to register.

The plot was one of those things about a dance-hall girl who was the queen of the town, and she made a bet that she could interest a stranger, just arrived.

After having done so, with the usual accompanying fights, the stranger received word that the police back home didn't want him any more, and so he could return East to his wife and baby, with the result that he tries to make a getaway. This peeved the dance-hall lady, so that she went back to the rough life, but the gambler friend went after the deserting gink to punish him for not playing square with the goil.

Instead of "cashing in" when pushed over a cliff, the gink who was trying to beat it back to wife and baby returned to the town and attempted to take all the coin away from the gambler and his friends who were count ing up. They captured him, however, and were going to hang him, but the goil learned about the baby, and so she made it possible for the gink to escape and ease out into the night, the gambler willingly misleading the rest of the party because the girl had promised herself to him providing he would let the father of the baby chase back home.

The general atmosphere of this was not good. There were a number of long shots of the dance-hall which were crude, the extras being apparently "extras," and we also had a great many scenes where the lighting was not good, with the result that these offset the well-lighted bits and held down the general caliber of the production. Even though the atmosphere had been good, the overplaying of Miss Bennett would have ruined the production. She certainly did act!—upon any and all occasions!

In the supporting cast were Percy Challenger, Jack Richardson, Josie Sedgwick and Lack Livingston.

The Box Office Angle.

I would certainly advise you to dodge this one. The dance-hall vamp-willun thing has been handed to us rather frequently of late, so that it would seem to me to be advisable to duck them, unless they are particularly good. Certainly this one is NOT good. When compared with some of Louise Glaum's dance-hall characterizations or with "The Flame of the Yukon," this is a joke!

I can't figure that Belle Bennett's name is worth a nickel at the box office, and so it would seem to me to be advisable to pass this by without argument. If you have to play it for any reason I would do it with my foot shoved hard against the "soft pedal."

LIGHT COMEDY THAT REGISTERS BETTER THAN ROUTINE

Olive Thomas in

BROADWAY ARIZONA

Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Lynn F. Reynolds
AUTHOR.....Lynn F. Reynolds
CAMERAMAN.....Clyde R. Cook
AS A WHOLE.....Light comedy with some action, will undoubtedly prove entertaining to most fans
STORY.....Had one or two good twists, considerable good comedy and was helped by titles
DIRECTION.....Kept things moving, gave interesting atmosphere and made action rather convincing
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally pleasing, although not exceptional
LIGHTINGS.....A few good, but little attempt for effects
CAMERA WORK.....Satisfactory
STAR.....Quite pleasing; photographed to advantage and was good except when tried to cry
SUPPORT.....Chesebro pleasing, and Hernandez gathered laughs, with others satisfactory
DETAIL.....A few good touches; ambulance kidnapping good idea
TIME.....Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

THIS being light comedy that holds the interest all the way and registers a good many laughs mixed in with action that is good without becoming too melo, I believe that most fans will consider the production very good entertainment.

This isn't a film that could be called a sensational success, but it is more than a satisfactory program release figured on the basis of the average program offering.

The plot of this had to do with a chorus girl whose press agent inveigled a Westerner into proposing to her for the purpose of getting a press story out of the engagement which was to be promptly denied. The Westerner didn't appreciate the situation and became rather peeved when he learned that the girl had played him for a goat. He went back home and stuck around until he learned that the lady of the stage was ailing in health, and then he came East and tried to talk her into going to Arizona, his home.

This the lady couldn't see, and so hero and his fat little pal, Uncle Isaac, put over a very neat kidnapping stunt by arriving at the hotel dressed as attendants on an ambulance, carrving the lady out on a stretcher after she had been tied and gagged, the waiting ambulance on the outside carrying her to a private car at an outlying station in which she was spirited away to Arizona.

As a prisoner on the hero's ranch she rapidly regained her health, but very soon came the avenging "ossifiers." There was a battle in the hills when the detective and the posse tried to capture the hero and Uncle Isaac, who were attempting to make a getaway with the girl, and then, after many honest men and true had almost been shot in the battle, the lady calmly told the sheriff that she had not been kidnapped at all, but that she was out here because she was to marry this guy. It was a twist finish that was in a way anticipated, but, by heck!—it seems that she might have told the answer sooner instead of letting 'em shoot at one another so reckless like.

Miss Thomas was very pretty in practically all of her scenes, and, except for one or two occasions when she tried to cry, her work was very satisfactory. As a pleasing little ingenue she should be able to get by nicely, but surely she will never be able to start anything as a dramatic actress.

George Chesebro, as the hero, registered nicely, and George Hernandez, as the fat comedy character, earned many laughs. He was materially assisted by some good titles.

In the cast were Leola Mae, Robt. N. Dunbar, Jack Curtis and Tom S. Guise.

The Box Office Angle.

Since this is comedy most of the way, I believe you can consider it a very satisfactory production, based on the quality of the average program release. The atmosphere and action were interesting and a number of laughs were earned.

Although rather a newcomer, Olive Thomas has been photographed to advantage in a couple of Triangle offerings, so that I have a hunch that she has some friends already. You can safely promise that this is considered her best production, because it really will register as such with most everyone.

If you have been playing Bluebird productions produced by Lynn F. Reynolds, such as "God's Crucible," which was one of his best efforts, you might refer to the fact that Director Reynolds brought some of his old Bluebird players with him to Triangle. It would depend entirely upon how well Bluebird productions have been going as to whether or not you should make any comment on this, because it so happens that today there are quite a number of the Universal directors and players working in the Triangle Studios, this being due to the presence of Mr. H. O. Davis, who was formerly General Manager at Universal City.

In advertising this you might say: "If you had made up your mind to kidnap a girl who had promised to marry you and then turned you down, how would you go about it? The hero in BROADWAY ARIZONA did a neat job!"

DANCE HALL WESTERN SLOW, BUT WILL GET BY

Roy Stewart in

THE DEVIL DODGER

Triangle

DIRECTOR	Cliff Smith
AUTHOR	J. G. Hawks
AS A WHOLE	A little slow, but held fairly well
STORY	Tubercular minister reforms dance-hall owner and girl
DIRECTION	Kept action rather human
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally good
LIGHTINGS	Good
CAMERA WORK	Good
STAR	Fitted type and held sympathy
SUPPORT	Very good, except one camera-conscious spot
EXTERIORS	Good
INTERIORS	Good
DETAIL	Very good
TIME	Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

THE director has made a pleasing human story of this, but, due to the slow actions of both the tubercular minister and the gambler, it dragged in some spots.

The story told of a tubercular "Devil Dodger" of Vermont, who was sent to Arizona by his church, where he met Fluffy, the dance-hall queen, and the owner of the dance hall, played by Roy Stewart.

When the minister got word that his church back in Vermont had been taken away from him and left him penniless, he slapped the gambler in the face, which he had heard was "sure suicide." Fluffy begged for his life, won it through a faro deal, and nursed him back to health, only to have him killed by a visiting bad man who came after Stewart. Stewart and Fluffy reformed, were married and started all over again.

A nice contrast was registered, showing the difference between the Vermont congregation taking the minister's church away from him, and the cowboys who gave him money because he was sick and a friend of Fluffy. This was lightly touched on, and may be overlooked if not given prominence in your ads.

The scene of the girls coming downstairs with only their legs showing was good and brought a laugh, and the three old bar flies were good types, but were very poorly lighted, this bit appearing very "flat."

Roy Stewart was very satisfactory as the dance-hall owner.

Carolyn Wagner as Fluffy made her part stand out and comes almost as far to the fore as the star. Jack Gilbert as the parson looked the part and registered many good bits.

The supporting cast was good, but once, when the cowboys called on the minister, they overplayed decidedly, and it stood out noticeably.

Among those who appeared were John Lince, Ann Dodge and Geo. Willis.

The Box Office Angle.

This is a little slow, but I believe that the ending will carry it over and send your patrons out satisfied.

Roy Stewart's name is not enough to get this over alone, but you can safely boost it as a human-interest play that will please.

In billing this I would mention Carolyn Wagner because she has almost as much to do as Mr. Stewart and her work is good enough to permit of calling attention to it.

A good line for this would be: "Who are the saints and who are sinners?—the church-going people, or the rough, free-handed Westerners?" Or you might say, "Would you slap a man in the face if you knew it was 'sure suicide?'"

POORLY HANDLED BLACKMAILING STORY HANDICAPS STAR

Mme. Olga Petrova in

THE SILENCE SELLERS

Pop. P. & P.—Metro

DIRECTOR	Burton L. King
AUTHOR	Blair Hall
SCENARIO BY	Wallace C. Clifton
CAMERAMAN	Harry B. Harris
AS A WHOLE	Fairly interesting but unconvincing in atmosphere that varied from good to very poor
STORY	Complicated effort to develop mystery about blackmailers to get surprise finish hardly justified lengthy footage
DIRECTION	Kept production in "movie" caliber because of varying atmosphere
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied from good to poor
LIGHTINGS	A few good, but generally poor
CAMERA WORK	Varied; generally only fair
STAR	Personality stood out, but not photographed to advantage and handicapped by surroundings
SUPPORT	Ordinary; rather actory and mechanical
EXTERIORS	Acceptable; very few
INTERIORS	Neither particularly artistic nor well lighted
DETAIL	Acceptable
TIME	Forty-seven minutes (5 parts)

THIS was one of the last (probably THE last) of the Metro-Petrova productions, and it's about in a class with the last few that have been released, there being an atmosphere about the offering which kept it down in the ordinary "movie" classification. For the most part, the lighting were poor and the photography rather muddy, there being many scenes wherein the star was not photographed to advantage.

The supporting cast included Mahlon Hamilton, who was stiff, mechanical and camera-conscious as usual, with other players who failed to register very satisfactorily.

The plot of this had to do with the workings of blackmailers, and it certainly wasn't very strong, because the audience were tipped off as to the surprise finish while the characters were all supposed to be very much up in the air thinking the hero a willun.

Frequently we had entirely too many titles, there being scenes when the players did nothing but stand or sit and talk to one another while title after title was flashed on the screen explaining the story situations. This method of construction made the action very tiresome in many spots.

After we'd had considerable footage devoted to the development of a situation where a careless wife was in danger of being blackmailed by the willun, we found the hero "getting the goods" on him, while the star was nder the impression that the hero was pulling some sort f blackmailing stunt.

An early scene and title, wherein a secret service man ad told hero that he would put him to work, had put he audience "next," so that there was really no actual uspense in the situations.

Mme. Petrova was handicapped by being lighted ather poorly in a number of the scenes, and the support- ng cast pulled the situations down instead of bringing hem out with any strength.

In the cast were Wyndham Standing, Wm. Duncan, Violet Reed, and Myles McCarthy.

The Box Office Angle.

If you are going to be in a position to play either the Paramount-Petrova productions or the new Petrova films, I certainly would not play this. The new productions will be worthy of consideration as big films, and every one of these old Metros which you show simply tends that much more to pull the star down.

It is true that you can possibly get this cheaply and get some money with it, but it seems to me that it would be advisable to consider the future of your house rather than the immediate presence in this instance.

As average program releases go, the film is not altogether impossible, but it certainly isn't good, and, as compared with what Petrova has done, for instance, in "The Law of the Land," this is certainly a poor offering.

It seems a pity that such ordinary films as this should be presented simply because the company dopes it out that they can get them by because of the star's pulling power.

EFFECTIVE ARTISTIC LIGHTINGS FAIL TO SAVE POOR PLOT

Vivian Martin in

THE SUNSET TRAIL

Lasky—Paramount

DIRECTOR	George H. Melford
AUTHOR	Alice McIvor
SCENARIO BY	Beulah Marie Dix
CAMERAMAN	Percy Hilburn
AS A WHOLE	Classy, distinctive atmosphere lifted ordinary story that slumped badly at end
STORY	Moved fairly well until finish, when pulled old misunderstood situation with daughter taking blame to shield mother
DIRECTION	Made atmosphere very classy and kept action interesting; although permitted overplaying and grouped characters badly
PHOTOGRAPHY	Excellent
LIGHTINGS	Generally effective and rather artistic, with some very beautiful bits
CAMERA WORK	Generally excellent
STAR	Pleasing personality; handled situations rather well
SUPPORT	Generally satisfactory; well chosen for types
EXTERIORS	Some very good; one wonderful sunset
INTERIORS	Quite satisfactory
DETAIL	Satisfactory, although development of situations quite convenient, at times lacking explanation
TIME	Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

MOST any audience will be impressed with this production from the viewpoint of distinctive atmosphere, because the lightings are good all the way, with many effects sufficiently artistic to cause particular comment.

The sets and exteriors were good, and the story held he attention sufficiently well to please the average udience until it hit the important moments in the last wo reels, when they led up to one of those situations here innocent daughter found her society-spoiled nother in a compromising position, just about the time hat others discovered the same situation, with the re- ult that the shero took it upon herself to bear the dis- grace of the compromising position in order to shield nother.

This good old standby has been used so many times hat most any fan will see it coming about two hundred r three hundred feet before it arrives, and so it seems handicap to wish such an old situation upon any story.

Of course, the result was that hero doubted shero causing shero to run away into the woods, and then the guilty one confessed, with hero starting out to try and square himself.

In this instance Miss Martin dashed out into the hills and apparently had a good, long start in her attempt to reach the home of her sure-enough father, who had been divorced from her bad-acting mother for several reels. She had traveled through the woods for some time before her father and our hero got together trying to find her, and eventually they walked right down to where she was, the only excuse for their finding her being that a title said they would go over and try the Sunset Trail. Anyway, they got through with the story, and I guess when they get to that point nobody will care much except that they get it over with.

They did pull one wonderful sunset bit that was too beautiful for words, which in a way justified the title, and I presume the average fan will accept this very poor story because of the distinctive manner in which the lightings have been handled ,although no one will ever place this in a class above the average movie—which it seems to me is hardly any credit to an organization which always "admits" that it is the greatest producing organization in the world.

Upon several occasions, as, for instance, where the mother confessed to having been the guilty person in the situation where daughter shouldered the blame, we found the characters very badly grouped before the camera. This happened entirely too frequently.

In the supporting cast, Harrison Ford was rather pleasing as the young hero because he played quietly.

The other characters worked satisfactorily, having been rather well chosen as to type.

In the cast were Henry A. Barrows, Charlie Ogle, Billy Elmer, and Carmen Phillips.

The Box Office Angle.

Although this is more artistic as to lightings than some of Miss Martin's productions of late, I don't believe that the story is as good. When a plot slumps out badly on the finish, it leaves a much more unfavorable impression than if it had gone along in just a fair way up to the last reel and then had developed something worth while.

If you are lined up to use this, I would concentrate entirely upon Miss Martin, if your fans care for her, and upon the fact that the production is artistic.

You might say: "You think you have seen sunsets, but never has such a beautiful sunset been filmed as the one to be seen in THE SUNSET TRAIL. It, alone, is worth your time and the price of admission."

Be careful not to promise much about the story, because it certainly is a "weak sister."

PLEASING HERO IN STORY THAT STARTED WELL AND FINISHED LAME

William Russell in

SANDS OF SACRIFICE

American—Mutual

DIRECTOR.....Edward Sloman
CAMERAMAN.....Joe Morgan
AS A WHOLE.....Not really convincing, but interesting and well done
STORY.....Held attention but didn't really impress
DIRECTION.....Registered good action and excellent locations and sets
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very good; a few bits excellent
LIGHTINGS.....Some very fine; generally good
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR.....Very pleasing personality
SUPPORT....Miss Billington pleasing; others satisfactory
EXTERIORS.....A few very beautiful; generally good
INTERIORS.....Lodge in hills excellent; others satisfactory
DETAIL.....A few good bits
TIME.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

BILL RUSSELL'S personality does much to carry this over, and, while the story is one which never really convinces to the extent of seeming real, still the action is interesting and consequently pleasing.

They started this off with one of those fair-lady-in-distress things, and of course Bill was the hero without knowing just why, and then he decided to ask the girl to marry him, which she did, thereby developing further complications.

Eventually, Bill thought that she had put something over on him, with the result that he and his friend started across the desert to develop some property, with the expected result that they were caught in the sun-parched country—as most men always are in the movies—so that Bill's pard died and Bill barely got through.

Before kicking in, Bill's pal asked him to give the girl a chance to explain, and so Bill did, with the result that he called at her apartment to find her entertaining the willun. It looked pretty black for a minute, and then he learned that she was trapping the willun so as to make him return Bill's fortune which he had stolen—and that y'are!

Bill Russell is one of the few hero types who is near always pleasing, because Bill impresses you as being a man, and he isn't so durned han'som' but what he looks like a human being. I think most everyone likes Bill Russell, and to me he seems to be one of our real favorites among the men stars.

This story provided a few good situations, and the director put in a few good touches, with some exterior shots that were certainly beautiful—particularly one long shot of a winding road. Nevertheless, the plot material wasn't what could be called good, and so the offering must register as one that is just acceptable, and that about all.

Francelia Billington, as the girl in the story, was neat, pretty and pleasing, and the other characters were satisfactory.

Among those who appeared were George Periolat, Joe Gough and Joe King.

The Box Office Angle.

If you have been doing well with Bill Russell stories I think you can get this by satisfactorily, despite the fact that it isn't as good a story as some of his recent productions. If you have never played any of Bill Russell pictures I believe you will be justified in digging some of them up, preferably starting with some other one, and coming to this later—although Bill's work in this is such that your fans would probably like him even though the plot didn't rave over the plot.

In billing this I would be careful not to make any rash promises about the production itself, except to say that it is interesting. This particular production is on about on a par with the average program release, but I think in this instance that you can take into consideration the individual merit of the star, this depending upon his popularity in your own community.

SMILING HERO IN FAIRLY DONE WESTERN MELO IS ACCEPTABLE

Jack Gardner in

MEN OF THE DESERT

Essanay—K.E.S.E.

DIRECTOR.....W. S. Van Dyke
STORY SUGGESTED BY.....Ed Gaylor
SCENARIO BY.....W. S. Van Dyke
AS A WHOLE.....Routine Western helped decidedly by flashes of good action and good titles
STORY.....Not unusual at any time, but helped a lot by titles
DIRECTION.....Made some incidents register, but failed to make general atmosphere distinctive PHOTOGRAPHY.....Good straight stuff, but needed more variation and softening
LIGHTINGS.....A few good; generally very ordinary
CAMERA WORK.....Needed more vignetting and variety of angles and lightings
STAR.....Rather pleasing "smiling hero"
SUPPORT.....Quite acceptable, but not remarkable
EXTERIORS.....Western, but lacked variety and good composition
INTERIORS.....Satisfactory
DETAIL.....A few good little touches
TIME.....Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

FOR the most part, this was just an ordinary Western with the same hard straight photography which has been associated with the Western for several years. There were flashes of good action, however, and some of the titles were particularly well written. These little bits of business were well handled, and the good titles, together with Gardner's personality, which is pleasing, lifted the production sufficiently to make it register as a bit more entertaining than the average program release.

The story was one of those brave-hero and bad-man willun things with hero nonchalantly taking over the position of sheriff because the community seemed to need somebody as sheriff who was willing to do things. The result was that the new sheriff managed to bring in a man who had committed murder, only to get in very bad later on when the bad man's friends came in force, and our sheriff was compelled to make one of those binding getaways.

After wandering for days in the desert, he was rescued by the heroine, who cared for him in a lonesome hut. He was finally discovered there by the willun, by means of the faithful cigarette left in the dust. That in itself is quite an old friend among "story tricks."

Hero did another getaway here, and the regulation nish was in order.

Good titles and nicely handled little touches proved iat the director knew the value of human bits, but the ffering was held down decidedly by the fact that the hotography was straight stuff, too uniform and harsh, ith seldom any vignetting whatever. Had there been ore variety to the lighting and more attention paid the composition of the exteriors, so as to kill the onotonous sameness of the atmosphere, this would have en greatly improved.

Jack Gardner has a good smile, and his work was quite tisfactory, although not so remarkable as to stir up y undue excitement. The supporting cast was satisctory but failed to make any decided individual perinal impressions. Ruth King and Carl Stockdale apeared in support.

The Box Office Angle.

Despite the fact that this is in many ways just an dinary "Western," I believe that the average audience will consider it more entertaining than the routine program offering because there are a number of bits of business introduced which register very satisfactorily, and some of the titles were particularly well written.

Figuring the box office possibilities, I can't feel that Jack Gardner has established himself in the film field yet, so that it seems to me a serious question whether you can do very much business with this. His other productions have not been such as to stand out in the memory of fans, and, consequently, he ranks as just "one of the many" as film stars go.

I believe you will be justified in sneaking this by, but certainly I would not advise your billing it as if, in your mind, it were anything more than a good program offering.

If you want a catchline to use you might say: "Would you take a sheriff's badge from him in a rough Western town and go after a murderer just to prove that the sheriff didn't belong on the job? Think it over, and see MEN OF THE DESERT."

PLEASING STAR IN SLENDER BUT ACCEPTABLE HUMAN STORY

Ella Hall in

THE SPOTTED LILY

Bluebird

IRECTOR	Harry Solter
UTHOR	J. Grubb Alexander
CENARIO BY	Fred Myton
AMERAMAN	Walter Griffin
S A WHOLE	Human interest story with lots of good touches
TORY	Lean, but sufficient
IRECTION	Gave fine atmosphere
HOTOGRAPHY	Very good
IGHTINGS	Fine
AMERA WORK	Good
TAR	Very pleasing
UPPORT	Good
XTERIORS	Fine
NTERIORS	Well lighted and good
ETAIL	Good
IME	Sixty minutes (5 parts)

DIRECTOR HARRY SOLTER has taken this story and made it very human and interesting, even though he had little plot to build on. The ending did not seem complete and left a feeling of having been stopped about 30 feet too soon.

The story started with the prologue of scenes between Miss Hall and Jack Nelson, as French peasants, who were in love, but this was ended by Miss Hall leaving with a nobleman, only to return in a year, broken hearted, with a baby daughter. Meanwhile, Jack Nelson sought solace in the priesthood. The story jumps fifteen years and the priest, now played by Charles Mailes, has taken care of the orphan also, played by Miss Hall. These two with a peasant boy, who is a violinist, are forced to leave hurriedly for America by the invasion of German troops. On their voyage to America they meet Gretchen Lederer, a rich widow, and later in New York, as poverty had forced them down and the old priest has died, the peasant boy went to Miss Lederer to seek his fortune through her social standing, leaving Miss Hall alone. Miss Hall happens to meet them, and the peasant boy returned to her.

Many of the lightings were very beautiful, especially some of the night scenes between Miss Hall and the peasant boy, and the close-ups of Miss Hall were decidedly effective.

It seemed that the introduction of the battle scenes in France were rather dragged in by the heels and the flash of American troops was certainly put in for applause, which it got in only a half-hearted fashion. It certainly did not advance the action of the story. There was one spot that seemed a bit off, it being that a New York apartment door usually has a spring on it which will cause it to slam shut. All I have ever seen act that way, but of course it did leave a path for Miss Hall to get into the apartment without being seen.

Ella Hall certainly plays with sincerity and holds the interest all the way. Jack Nelson as the peasant and later as the priest handled the character nicely. Charles Mailes as the same man in later life made the part stand out.

The Box Office Angle.

This film should get by anywhere and please.

Ella Hall has had some good films lately and her name should be worth quite a little at the box office. I would dwell particularly upon the very fine lightings and the atmosphere provided by Director Solter. There is not very much that you dare tell about the story, and I believe that you will have to center all of your advertising upon Miss Hall, the lightings and the atmosphere.

An Exclusive Photoplay Trade Journal.

Published Weekly.

THE CANADIAN MOVING PICTURE DIGEST

100% Circulation in Canada.

Orpheum Theatre Bldg. Montreal, P. Q.

HAROLD LOCKWOOD

Yorke--Metro

TABULATED PERCENTAGE REPORTS FROM EXHIBITORS

THE BATTING AVERAGES

These are the averages of the companies having 200 reports or more.

Reports		% P. P.	% B. O.	Repeat
2628	PARAMOUNT	68.4	62.3	397
2349	TRIANGLE	70.6	65.2	434
595	WORLD	67.7	61.5	49
674	METRO	70.8	67.0	57
767	FOX	73.1	70.8	106
233	MUTUAL	72.0	71.1	17
298	BLUEBIRD	62.7	63.5	23
544	VITAGRAPH	68.1	66.2	76

THE NUMBER BEFORE THE NAME OF TH FEATURE INDICATES THE NUMBER OF RE PORTS RECEIVED AND TABULATED ON THA FILM.

THE FIRST COLUMN CARRIES THE PER CENTAGE OF PLEASED PATRONS.

THE SECOND COLUMN SHOWS THE BO OFFICE PERCENTAGE.

FIGURES IN THE THIRD COLUMN INDICAT THAT MANY REPORTED THE FILM WORTH RETURN DATE.

All reports in this percentage tabulation have been marked on this scale:

EXCEPTIONAL	100%
EXCELLENT	80%
GOOD	60%
FAIR	40%
POOR	20%
BAD	0%

PARAMOUNT

Reports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
2628	Paramount	68.4	62.3	397
1	In the Bishop's Carriage	84	93
1	The Lost Paradise	50	73
5	The Virginian	81	73	2
2	Such a Little Queen	78	78	1
2	Marta of the Low Lands	35	50
1	Where the Trail Divides	93	90	1
11	Wildflower	89	82	4
1	The County Chairman	80	80
1	What's His Name	75	100
5	Behind the Screens	81	78
6	A Man from Mexico	87	72	1
1	The Man From Home	70	70
1	Circus Man	94	95
3	Rose of the Rancho	72	72
5	The Bargain	80	74	3
2	Ghost Breakers	60	63
7	The Crucible	92	84	3
2	False Colors	35	55
1	The Sign of the Cross	79	85
4	Cameo Kirby	61	50
9	Cinderella	84	91	4
1	The Million	70	80
5	Girl of the Golden West	79	77	2
3	The Dancing Girl	65	65
1	The Italian	77	62	1
1	No Laughing Matter	90	85
1	Morals of Marcus	60	50
5	The Goose Girl	95	95	4
2	After Five	51	50
1	Mistress Nell	88	95
2	Buckshot John	60	60
3	Her Triumph	60	74	1
3	The Warrens of Virginia	70	71	1
1	Country Boy	60	60
6	David Harem	82	78	1
1	A Gentleman of Leisure	80	70
2	The Caprices of Kitty	63	70
1	The Love Route	70	90
1	Sunshine Molly	40	20
1	The Governor's Lady	97	85
4	Gretna Green	99	95	2
1	The Commanding Officer	0	39
3	Are You a Mason?	78	84
2	Pretty Mrs. Smith	68	75
2	The Unafraid	70	63
2	When We Were 21	60	56
1	Spanish Jade	20	60
4	Snobs	64	52
6	Captain Courtesy	80	67	1
3	Captive	87	87
2	Niobe	75	55	1
3	Help Wanted	80	75
5	The Woman	86	59	1
5	House of Lost Court	81	84	3
4	Fanchon, The Cricket	89	92	3
3	Betty in Search of Thrill	85	87
5	Stolen Goods	78	75
4	Wild-Goose Chase	60	85	1
6	Pretty Sister Jose	55	80	3
5	Jim the Penman	64	85
6	The Dawn of a To-morrow	83	88	1
5	Arab	80	86	3
1	Clarissa	75	80
2	The Dictator	45	45
5	Wild Olive	82	80
6	Chimmy Fadden	91	75	1
4	The Little Pal	76	87
4	Rugmaker's Daughter	40	50
2	The Clue	74	88
6	Kindling	81	82
1	The Running Fight	60	70
3	The Fighting Hope	77	80
5	Kilmeny	75	73
5	Seven Sisters	86	74	1
3	Puppet Crown	83	85
19	Rags	91	93	5
2	Sold	83	72
6	The Secret Orchid	79	74
5	Nearly a Lady	65	75
6	The Marriage of Kitty	76	64
3	Poor Schmaltz	63	37
8	Helene of the North	87	81	2
3	The Majesty of the Law	56	60
3	Heart of Jennifer	66	66
2	Incorrigible Dukane	75	55
4	Esmeralda	89	89	2
2	The Case of Becky	65	65
1	Out of Darkness	40	40
1	Peer Gynt	97	100
4	The Explorers	72	61
4	'Twas Ever Thus	53	68
8	Voice in the Fog	75	87
6	Fatal Card	65	50
4	Zaza	91	87	2
6	The Girl of Yesterday	89	88	3
7	White Pearl	71	75
4	Blackbirds	57	55
7	Chorus Lady	73	65
6	The Secret Sin	69	74	1
7	Yankee Girl	52	57
6	Masqueraders	56	56
12	Carmen	82	83	4
12	Still Waters	94	83	7
9	Madame Butterfly	82	86	3
7	Mummy and Humming Bird	66	66
7	Bella Donna	92	77	4
8	Armstrong's Wife	79	65
8	Chimmie Fadden Out West	88	78	1
8	A Gentleman From Indiana	86	78
10	Prince and the Pauper	92	87	5
10	Mr. Grex from Monte Carlo	84	69	1
8	Jane	75	51
9	The Unknown	76	67	1
18	The Cheat	94	80	12
9	The Reform Candidate	80	54	1
9	The Immigrant	73	62
10	The Old Homestead	88	84	7
8	Lydia Gilmore	83	61	2
10	Temptation	82	77	2
10	The Foundling	78	76	3
6	Tongues of Men	77	53	1
8	Mice and Men	84	80	5
7	The Golden Chance	77	61	2
2	My Lady Incog	50	35
5	Ragamuffins	77	53
5	Call of the Cumberlands	79	64
8	The Spider	87	64
10	Puddin' Head Wilson	81	62
9	Tennessee's Pardner	65	31
8	Madame Le President	24	46
9	Nearly a King	52	49
13	Trail of the Lonesome Pine	75	77
8	Fell In Love With His Wife	63	51
8	Blacklist	62	52
10	Out of the Drifts	89	86
8	Diplomacy	88	56
14	Poor Little Peppina	88	84
16	To Have and To Hold	74	69
12	Ben Blair	72	63
10	For the Defense	68	62
7	The Code of Marcia Grey	64	59
9	The Lost Bridegroom	69	60
8	The Saleslady	72	62
15	Audrey	73	70
9	The Sowers	64	59
11	The Heart of Paula	71	54
12	The Race	69	59
8	The Eternal Grind	70	78
10	The Love Mask	59	54
10	Molly Make-Believe	87	82
7	The Red Widow	62	55
12	The Heart of Nora Flynn	72	60
8	A Moment Before	52	64
12	David Garrick	68	46
9	The Innocent Lie	56	51
16	Marie Rosa	81	80
12	Alien Souls	69	67
13	The Feud Girl	60	56
16	Pasquale	78	53
16	Sweet Kitty Bellairs	72	62
20	Saints and Sinners	51	49
17	Thousand-Dollar Husband	60	62
22	A Gutter Magdalene	62	54
16	Evil Thereof	44	44
15	The Making of Maddalena	63	57
23	Silks and Satins	85	88
14	Destiny's Toy	60	51
19	The Clown	79	54
20	Susie Snowflakes	69	59
16	The World's Great Snare	73	78
18	The American Beauty	61	61
22	The Dupe	64	64
30	The Smugglers	53	50
26	The Selfish Woman	72	68
25	Davy Crockett	67	62
28	The Dream Girl	60	64
28	Under Cover	79	75
27	International Marriage	55	51
27	Common Ground	64	64
35	Huida from Holland	95	94
30	House of Golden Windows	73	64
22	A Woman in the Case	72	72
25	Little Lady Eileen	87	89
23	The Stronger Love	53	52
21	Public Opinion	82	72
21	Rolling Stones	67	60
21	The Honorable Friend	65	62
20	Victory of Conscience	60	58
21	Each Pearl a Tear	74	69
22	The Parson of Panamint	79	70
15	The Big Sister	50	57

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
14 The Reward of Patience	65	55
15 The House of Lies	73	65	1
14 The Daugther of McGregor	50	45
18 Ashes of Embers	85	83	7
16 The Quest of Life	59	61
14 Anton, the Terrible	46	45
17 The Lash	57	55
13 The Storm	75	65	1
16 The Intrigue	81	61	2
16 Her Father's Son	74	68	2
4 Witchcraft	55	55
4 The Kiss	74	68	2
16 The Rainbow Princess	82	74	3
5 Seventeen	85	74	2
4 Miss George Washington	95	95	11
15 The Heir to the Hoorah	82	69	5
16 The Soul of Kura San	80	73	1
12 A Son of Erin	79	73	2
0 Unprotected	53	55	1
16 The Years of the Locust	49	50
2 The Plow Girl	77	63
9 The Yellow Pawn	66	57	1
9 Nanette of the Wilds	50	57	2
7 Martyrdom of Philip Strong	53	55	1
0 The Coney Island Princess	62	63	1
0 The Road to Love	72	59	1
4 Oliver Twist	85	69	6
3 The Victoria Cross	44	54	1
7 The Traveling Salesman	78	60	3
0 The Right Direction	76	61	2
1 Snow White	95	95	13
6 Redeeming Love	63	60	1
1 The Slave Market	74	70	3
3 The Evil Eye	30	44	1
9 Great Expectations	74	55	1
7 Happiness of Three Women	75	58	1
4 Betty to the Rescue	46	48
1 What Money Can't Buy	40	40
6 A Girl Like That	55	51
6 Lost and Won	59	50
9 The Golden Fetter	50	56
9 His Sweetheart	83	57	2
9 The Wax Model	67	56
9 Each To His Kind	62	60
6 Her Own People	72	52
1 The Black Wolf	35	41
7 The American Consul	53	50	1
1 The Fortunes of Fifi	67	77	2
0 On Record	62	56	2
7 Winning of Sally Temple	40	48
8 Those Without Sin	53	52	1
6 Castles For Two	52	49	1
3 Out of the Wreck	60	54
3 Sapho	74	83	3
1 Prison Without Walls	54	54
2 The Dummy	71	54
0 The Spirit of Romance	64	56
8 As Men Love	73	53
0 The Bottle Imp	75	66	2
7 The Bond Between	50	39
8 A School for Husbands	49	46	1
8 The Lonesome Chap	51	44
9 Sleeping Fires	56	63	1
3 The Tides of Barnegat	49	43
3 The Cost of Hatred	40	38
3 The Valentine Girl	73	76
3 Unconquered	28	31
3 The Girl at Home	51	44
0 Heart's Desire	28	36
3 Sacrifice	26	43
3 The Primrose Ring	44	48
3 The Silent Partner	33	36
3 Marcellina Millions	41	30
3 The Highway of Hope	38	33
7 Her Better Self	55	59
3 The Undying Flame	40	52
3 Freckles	70	61
3 The World Apart	42	40
2 Giving Becky a Chance	70	51
3 The Jaguar's Claws	40	47
3 The Inner Shrine	38	58
3 The Roadside Impresario	28	17
3 The Heir of the Ages	23	22
3 Her Strange Wedding	28	34
3 The Little Boy Scout	57	43
3 At First Sight	52	40
3 Big Timber	67	65
1 Love That Lives	70	83
3 Forbidden Pathes	34	37
4 What Money Can't Buy	34	53
1 The Cook of Canyon Camp	20	20
3 The Squaw Man's Son	60	57
3 The Crystal Gazer	20	20
2 A Kiss for Sussie	20	20
5 The Amazons	96	96
3 The Mysterious Miss Terry	87	73
4 The Law of the Land	37	37
4 The Varmint	80	60
3 Hashimura Togo	80	60

TRIANGLE

2349 Triangle	70.6	65.2	434
11 The Iron Strain	80	67	2
10 The Lamb	85	78	3
10 Old Heidelberg	73	64	1
12 The Coward	83	66	1
9 Martyrs of the Alamo	87	57
15 The Disciple	85	76	2
8 Matrimony	81	76	2
6 Sable Lorckra	59	57
7 The Golden Claw	57	69
10 Double Trouble	61	65	2
8 Alaho Oe	60	65	1
6 The Lilly and the Rose	63	66
9 Jordan Is a Hard Road	56	54
8 Winged Idol	53	52
8 Penitents	31	32
12 The Edge of the Abyss	65	61
8 Submarine Pirate	81	78	1
6 Cross Currents	49	49
12 Between Men	73	67	1
15 Let Katy Do It	85	83	6
6 The Corner	53	50
6 The Missing Link	52	46	1
4 The Beckoning Flame	56	58
10 The Wood Nymph	51	51	1
9 The Conquerer	74	78
10 The Price of Power	53	53
11 The Green Swamp	77	76	1
13 Acquitted	66	52
6 D'Artagnan	59	54
18 His Picture in the Papers	90	75	5
13 Honor's Altar	77	67	2
14 Betty of Greystone	77	65	2
28 Peggy	94	91	15
7 Don Quixote	57	56
9 The Last Act	79	78	1
11 Daphne and the Pirate	71	57
18 Hell's Hinges	93	89	11
17 The Flying Torpedo	81	80	3
14 Bullets and Brown Eyes	85	75	3
14 Martha's Vindication	79	72	2
14 Moral Fabric	75	62	1
15 Hoodoo Ann	61	65	1
15 The Raiders	79	70
14 The Habit of Happiness	92	85	3
8 Waifs	70	59	1
8 Little Meena's Romance	64	60	1
17 The Aryan	59	80	6
10 Sold for Marriage	71	72	1
17 Stepping Stones	85	75	2
10 Sunshine Dad	36	46
9 Civilzation's Child	68	64	1
14 Children in the House	80	66	2
11 The Beggar of Cawnpore	61	49
19 The Good-Bad Man	90	92	4
12 The No-Good Guy	74	60	3
17 Susan Rocks the Boat	69	63
20 Not My Sister	79	77	4
18 Child of Paris Streets	76	64
22 The Primal Lure	82	76	7
8 Mr. Goode, the Samaritan	53	53
26 The Market of Vain Desire	79	64	5
22 Going Straight	77	78	3
29 The Bugle Call	93	79	9
26 Reggie Mixes In	93	80	11
16 The Sorrows of Love	66	69	1
21 An Innocent Magdalene	71	71	2
18 The Dividend	70	68	1
21 The Wild Girl of Sierras	85	53
25 An Apostle of Vengeance	88	83	4
18 Casey at the Bat	44	48
28 The Phantom	83	72	7
30 Flirting With Fate	87	86	11
31 The Deserter	85	69	11
26 The Little School Ma'am	74	67	2
26 The Eye of the Night	74	58	5
19 Stranded	60	50
27 The Captive God	65	70	2
23 The Halfbreed	72	74	2
22 The Payment	81	70	3
18 The Marriage of Molly O	48	47
24 Honor Thy Name	87	73	4
22 The Devil's Needle	64	64	1
31 Shell "43"	86	69	6
26 Hell-to-Pay Austin	83	66	4
21 Lieutenant Danny, U. S. A.	79	69	1
16 Pillars of Society	59	56	1
22 Home	91	88	8
16 Gretchen the Greenhorn	64	62	2
21 The Patriot	79	80	6
24 The Social Secretary	89	75	3
17 The Thoroughbred	82	72	1
11 The Little Liar	69	57
19 The Wolf Woman	86	89	4
16 The Dawnmaker	58	78	3
20 Diane of the Follies	71	72	2
27 Manhattan Madness	94	92	12
22 Plain Jane	88	75	5
20 Old Folks at Home	81	64	2
17 The Jungle Child	60	61	1
15 The Rummy	57	54	1
21 The Return of Draw Egan	88	86	7
20 The Vagabond Prince	75	70	3
19 Somewhere in France	76	69	1
18 A Corner in Colleens	88	80	7
12 A Sister of Six	69	64	2
21 Fifty-Fifty	89	83	4
4 War's Women	61	48
12 Atta Boy's Last Race	54	56
16 American Aristocracy	92	89	9
10 The Microscope Mystery	50	43
14 Honorable Algy	76	65	3
14 Jim Grimsby's Boy	68	62	3
15 The Devil's Double	91	91	7
12 The Children Paid	72	63	3
11 Children of the Feud	55	52	1
8 The Criminal	49	45
10 A Gamble in Souls	67	65	3
15 The Wharf Rat	54	55
20 The Matrimaniac	92	94	10
20 The Sin Ye Do	92	85	10
13 Heiress of Coffee Dan's	60	53	2
10 Three of Many	62	53
9 House Built Upon Sand	75	67	3
8 Nina the Flower Girl	51	52
11 The Female of the Species	72	74	2
16 Truthful Tulliver	97	93	9
12 The Weaker Sex	88	83	4
7 The Little Yank	40	52	1
10 The Bride of Hate	78	74	4
11 The Iced Bullet	62	53
14 The Americano	99	97	11
10 Chicken Casey	75	56	1
14 Jim Bludso	63	41	1
14 The Crab	83	70	5
10 Girl of the Timber Claims	41	39
16 The Gun-Fighter	76	85	10
13 The Bad Boy	71	54	2
11 The Princess of the Dark	39	41
6 Stage Struck	41	38
12 Last of the Ingrams	45	42
9 Blood Will Tell	64	61
5 A Love Sublime	47	40
8 The Little Brother	54	37	2
14 Back of the Man	90	81	3
10 Betsy's Burglar	59	54
11 The Square-Deal Man	96	95	7
11 The Dark Road	60	49	1
5 A Daughter of the Poor	57	55
9 A Woman's Awakening	61	52
9 Her Father's Keeper	54	48
9 Her Official Fathers	56	48
9 Old-Fashioned Young Man	48	47
19 Sweetheart of the Doomed	74	68	4
10 Paddy O'Hara	62	52	1
11 The Desert Man	92	91	4
9 Cheerful Givers	47	41
10 The Pinch Hitter	96	71	2
5 Hands Up	35	35
8 The Snarl	54	63
4 Might and the Man	25	30
6 Happiness	59	56
4 The Man Who Made Good	45	39
6 Wild Winship's Widow	58	58
6 Soul's Triumphant	30	28
7 The Millionaire Vagrant	78	64
8 Wolf Lowry	93	96	1
6 The Girl. Glory	73	52
7 Bawbs of Blue Ridge	33	61
8 A Hater of Men	79	68
5 American—That's All	32	32
7 Love or Justice	75	69
3 Her Excellency the Governor	35	34

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

WILLIAM F. ALDRICH
FEATURE PRODUCER
Screen Club, 117 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO

REGINALD BARKER
DIRECTING
PARALTA PLAYS
Paralta Studio, Los Angeles, Calif.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
PRODUCER

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

WILLIAM DESMOND
TRIANGLE PLAYS
Culver City, Cal.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

HOBART HENLEY
HOBART HENLEY PRODUCTIONS

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
PRODUCING FEATURES
Ivan Film Corp.

LLOYD INGRAHAM
PRODUCER

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

HARLEY KNOLES
FEATURES DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 D. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

JOSEPH LEVERING
DIRECTOR

O. A. C. LUND

ASHLEY MILLER
Director—Vitagraph Studios
Brooklyn

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE DIRECTOR
FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.

WEDGWOOD NOWELL
TRIANGLE
Friars Club, N. Y. C.

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITIGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

TOM TERRISS
PRODUCER
VITAGRAPH

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
FEATURE DIRECTOR
511 W. 143rd St. Audubon 1941.

JAMES VINCENT
PRODUCER

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

BEN WILSON
DIRECTING AND STARRING
UNIVERSAL

CHESTER WITHEY
DIRECTOR

JAMES YOUNG

WID'S
IS READ
NOT SKIMMED

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Adress—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM

A MAGAZINE—IN FACT A SERVICE

WID'S

INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS

Always Independent
Issued Every Thursday

VOL. III. THURSDAY, OCT. 11, 1917. NO. 41

25 Cents a Copy
$10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

Index from July 12 to October 4, 1917

There will be an index in Wid's every three months following this issue. Each issue containing n index will have a colored cover to make it easily noticeable from the other issues.

PAGE	TITLE	DATE
	SELZNICK PICTURES
8	The Lone Wolf	July 12
	ITALA—RAVER—STATE RIGHTS
7	The Warrior	July 26
	HARRY A. SAMWICK—STATE RIGHTS
5	Whither Thou Goest	July 26
	F. M. MANSON—STATE RIGHTS
6	The Planter	Aug. 2
	FAIRMOUNT—STATE RIGHTS
8	Hate	Aug. 9
	A. H. JACOBS—FRANK G. HALL—STATE RIGHTS
2	Her Fighting Chance	Aug. 16
	IVAN—STATE RIGHTS
8	Babbling Tongues	Aug. 23
	OGDEN PICTURES CORP.—STATE RIGHTS
3	The Lust of the Ages	Aug. 23
	M. PHILIP HANSEN—MARINE FILM—STATE RIGHTS
2	The Lorelei of the Sea	Sept. 6
	AUTHORS FILM—M. H. HOFFMAN—STATE RIGHTS
1	Madame Sherry	Sept. 13
	UNIVERSAL—JEWEL—STATE RIGHTS
3	Sirens of the Sea	Sept. 20
	GOLDWYN
8	Polly of the Circus	Sept. 20
0	Baby Mine	Oct. 4
8	Fighting Odds	Oct. 4

PAGE	TITLE	DATE
	PARAMOUNT
444	The Little Boy Scout	July 12
454	The Cook of Canyon Camp	July 19
489	The Squaw Man's Son	Aug. 2
490	The Inner Shrine	Aug. 2
540	The Law of the Land	Aug. 23
556	The Amazons	Aug. 30
559	The Mysterious Miss Terry	Aug. 30
570	Little Miss Optimist	Sept. 6
586	The Long Trail	Sept. 13
588	The Varmint	Sept. 13
593	Lost In Transit	Sept. 13
605	The Crystal Gazer	Sept. 20
613	The Hostage	Sept. 27
616	The Countess Charming	Sept. 27
618	Double Crossed	Sept. 27
621	A Kiss for Susie	Sept. 27
639	The Sunset Trail	Oct. 4
	TRIANGLE
444	Time-Locks and Diamonds	July 12
453	The Flame of the Yukon	July 19
454	Sudden Jim	July 19
455	The Sawdust Ring	July 19
488	A Successful Failure	Aug. 2
503	In Slumberland	Aug. 9
510	The Food Gamblers	Aug. 9
513	An Even Break	Aug. 9
535	Master of His Home	Aug. 23
554	Golden-Rule Kate	Aug. 30
555	Grafters	Aug. 30
558	Wooden Shoes	Aug. 30
584	Idolaters	Sept. 13
585	Persnicketty Polly Ann (The Little Reformer)	Sept. 13
590	Flying Colors	Sept. 13
597	A Man's Man	Sept. 20
600	Mountain Dew	Sept. 20
601	The Haunted House	Sept. 20
604	The Bond of Fear	Sept. 20
636	Ashes of Hope	Oct. 4
637	Broadway Arizona	Oct. 4
638	The Devil Dodger	Oct. 4

PAGE	TITLE	DATE
ARTCRAFT
440	The Little American	July 12
520	Down to Earth	Aug. 16
582	Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm	Sept. 13
592	Seven Keys to Baldpate	Sept. 13
606	Barbary Sheep	Sept. 20
629	The Man From Painted Post	Oct. 4
BLUEBIRD
460	The Greater Law	July 19
488	The Little Terror	Aug. 2
509	The Cleanup	Aug. 9
519	The Showdown	Aug. 16
534	Mr. Opp	Aug. 23
554	The Charmer	Aug. 30
568	Mother o' Mine	Sept. 6
595	A Stormy Knight	Sept. 13
600	The Mysterious Mr. Tiller	Sept. 20
641	The Spotted Lily	Oct. 4
PATHE
472	Captain Kiddo	July 26
491	The Mad Lover	Aug. 2
504	To-day	Aug. 9
507	The Last of the Carnabys	Aug. 9
524	Streets of Illusion	Aug. 16
541	The On-the-Square-Girl	Aug. 23
587	The Angel Factory	Sept. 13
589	War and the Woman	Sept. 13
620	Tears and Smiles	Sept. 27
623	A Crooked Romance	Sept. 27
632	The Painted Doll	Oct. 4
636	The Heart of Ezra Greer	Oct. 4
MUTUAL
458	The Masked Heart	July 19
476	Melissa of the Hills	July 26
511	Pride and the Man	Aug. 9
524	Mary Moreland	Aug. 16
556	Bab, the Fixer	Aug. 30
590	A Soul in Pawn	Sept. 13
591	Charity Castle	Sept. 13
594	Reputation	Sept. 13
602	Outcast	Sept. 20
617	The Rainbow Girl	Sept. 27
620	The Girl Who Couldn't Grow Up	Sept. 27
640	Sands of Sacrifice	Oct. 4
PERFECTION—K. E. S. E.
459	The Man Who Was Afraid	July 19
473	The Golden Idiot	July 26
474	Knights of the Square Table	July 26
493	Skinner's Baby	Aug. 2
521	One Touch of Nature	Aug. 16
539	Open Places	Aug. 22
540	The Barker	Aug. 23
569	The Lady of the Photograph	Sept. 6
592	Efficiency Edgar's Courtship	Sept. 13
599	Pants	Sept. 20
619	The Awakening of Ruth	Sept. 27
635	Fools for Luck	Oct. 4
640	Men of the Desert	Oct. 4

PAGE	TITLE	DAT
FOX
436	Some Boy!	July
501	The Innocent Sinner	Aug.
514	To Honor and Obey	Aug.
518	Wife No. 2	Aug.
552	Durand of the Bad Lands	Aug.
583	Every Girl's Dream	Sept.
616	Betrayed	Sept.
634	When False Tongues Speak	Oct.
VITAGRAPH
476	Caste	July
490	By Right of Possession	Aug.
507	Richard the Brazen	Aug.
536	Mary Jane's Pa	Aug.
568	Soldiers of Chance	Sept.
588	The Divorcee	Sept.
614	For France	Sept.
631	Sunlight's Last Raid	Oct.
WORLD
441	The Brand of Satan	July
457	The Beloved Adventuress	July
492	When True Love Dawn	Aug.
506	The Iron Ring	Aug.
511	Youth	Aug.
551	The Little Duchess	Aug.
570	Souls Adrift	Sept.
BUTTERFLY
456	Man and Beast	July
456	The Reed Case	July
487	The Double Standard	Aug.
512	A Wife On Trial	Aug.
571	The Lair of the Wolf	Sept.
594	The Little Pirate	Sept.
615	The Spindle of Life	Sept.
ART DRAMAS
439	The Road Between	July
525	The Peddler	Aug.
550	The Eye of Envy	Aug.
584	The Little Samaritan	Sept.
METRO
437	The Trail of the Shadow	July
485	Somewhere In America (Rose of the Alley)	Aug.
492	The Hidden Spring	Aug.
505	Miss Robinson Crusoe	Aug.
523	The Jury of Fate	Aug.
537	The Slacker	Aug.
553	To the Death	Aug.
557	The Girl Without a Soul	Aug.
586	The Lifted Veil	Sept.
604	Under Handicap	Sept.
622	Their Compact	Sept.
638	The Silence Sellers	Oct.

TREMENDOUS SUBJECT WELL HANDLED—PROPERLY ADVERTISED SHOULD PROVE GOLD MINE—HAS UNFORGETTABLE CHARACTERS AND INCIDENTS; HOLDS INTEREST THROUGHOUT

Herbert Brenon's

THE FALL OF THE ROMANOFFS

Brenon Production—A. H. Woods—Special

DIRECTOR ..... Herbert Brenon
SCENARIO BY..Austin Strong and George Edwardes-Hall
SUGGESTED BY ..... Monk Iliodor
TECHNICAL DIRECTOR ..... George Fitch
PHOTOGRAPHED BY ..... J. Roy Hunt and Charles Ritchie
AS A WHOLE ..... Made very interesting by knowledge that it is attempted visualization of actual recent history of international importance
STORY ..... Very melo and filled with rape, sacrilege, treason and a variety of crime; but, nevertheless, held attention because of cloak of suggested authenticity
DIRECTION ..... Gave satisfactory atmosphere generally, and succeeded in making most of scenes impress as real visualization of historical occurrences; occasionally ran a bit wild, but will be generally accepted as satisfying treatment of big subject
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Generally very good
LIGHTINGS ..... Some very effective bits, some sets too uniformly lighted but generally satisfactory
CAMERA WORK ..... Varied but quite satisfactory
STARS ..... Edward Connolly, Alfred Hickman, Nance O'Neil and Ketty Galanta
SUPPORT ..... Good; no weak spots
EXTERIORS ..... Held atmosphere quite satisfactorily
INTERIORS ..... Some very fine; others failed to impress
DETAIL ..... Some very good; some unnecessary and rather objectionable
TIME ..... One hour and forty-five minutes (10 parts)

IT would seem to me that this should prove a remarkably interesting production to anyone, anywhere. I am not able to swear as to the absolute truth of everything which has been suggested by this production which is supposed to visualize recent history in Russia, but since Producer Herbert Brenon has naturally given considerable attention to this, and since the Monk Iliodor, who appears in the picture, is supposed to have all the inside dope on what did happen, then I can emphatically say that most ordinary humans in this country can learn an awful lot that they should know by seeing this film.

Some few may have followed the Russian situation carefully enough to have known the story of Rasputin, but certainly 999 out of 1,000 ordinary Americans know nothing whatever concerning this most remarkable character except what they have gathered in a hazy way from an occasional newspaper article or magazine sketch.

According to this picture, Rasputin was about the most thorough-going scoundrel that history has ever recorded, having arisen to possibly the greatest power yet held by any one person figuring as a "power behind the throne."

The production is episodical, and has only such dramatic strength as comes through the significance of the events as concerned with the tremendous effect of the Russian revolution upon International affairs, but, as a matter of fact, in watching this film it seemed to me that the dramatic incidents which were placed to hold a semblance of a story together, really interfered rather than helped to make the impression better, because anyone will naturally be more interested in the bigger theme of the development of Russia than they will in the problem of what is going to happen to some characters and incidents injected into the action for the purpose of having a plot.

We learn from this production that Rasputin, as a young man, was a drunkard, a wife-beater, a liar, a faker, a hypocrite and a thief. Outside of that I guess he was a pretty good feller. We are shown how he came to a sudden realization of the power in superstitious Russia of making someone else believe that you are able to foretell the future.

He was shown to be traveling through the country posing as a soothsayer, and early in his career we saw him accept into his camp a peasant girl fascinated by his manner, the aforesaid girl seeming to be playing the part of a temptress to this wise bird, who sat back and allowed her to tempt him.

Then came the introduction of the Czar and the Czarina, with the fact registered that they were very anxious to have a son. The Czar was shown to have a vision of a soothsayer prophesying to him that he would have a son, and, since Rasputin had made a pretty good rep in the tour of the country he had been making, he was sent for to appear at the palace.

If the entrance of Rasputin to the Czar's palace actually occurred as shown in the film, I'll say the guy was at least some salesman of himself. He came into the presence of the ruler of many millions, and after prostrating himself on the floor when he first came through the door, he rushed over beside the ruler and slammed his fist down on the table with a bang. Naturally, the Czar jumped. Who wouldn't, to have such a wild-looking thing come in and pound the table in front of you—particularly if you are a meek individual accustomed to having people sent to Siberia if they looked at you cross-eyed.

We then were shown that Rasputin asked the Czar where he had felt that shock. The Czar pantomimed at his heart, and Rasputin said, "From now on you shall rule from the heart—not from the mind!"

We then saw the ascendance to power of this ignorant Siberian faker, and we were shown a scene where a score or so of deformed and degenerate imbeciles were allowed to come before the Czar and tell him how he should run the country. The title stated that the Czar was very superstitious and kept around the palace feeble-minded and insane imbeciles who were supposed to have the gift of spiritual advice.

When Iliodor was introduced we were shown that he discovered that Rasputin couldn't read or write, and he undertook to educate him. Then we saw, with a few instances recorded, that Rasputin was some awful gink with the women, a number of wild parties being registered together with a few individual cases that were shown to make it more emphatic.

Several people attempted to prove to the Romanoffs that Rasputin was all wrong, but he always managed to win the rulers back, with the result that those who dared accuse him were punished.

Finally we saw the Czarina attempting to influence the Czar in the present war, in favor of Germany, with Rasputin helping her ,and then later was sent to see the Kaiser for the purpose of arranging a separate peace.

This led up to a scene where the Czar was about to sign a separate peace, when he learned that Rasputin had been trapped and killed, which had resulted in the people storming the palace. He ordered his soldiers to fire upon the mob, and the soldiers refused, which was immediately followed by the revolution.

The trapping of Rasputin was made quite theatric by the stunt of having a horseman ride into the banquet hall and come down the center of a table, covering Rasputin with a gun, while other masked men came from various parts of the hall to do likewise. They pulled the good old stuff of "Die like a man!" when they handed Rasputin a gun and asked him to kill himself, and I wish they had not attempted this; it savors too much of the old melodramatic junk where the hero hands the willun a pistol and offers to fight him a duel. According to all the dope Rasputin was hard to kill and was given no chance with a gun.

Iliodor was not impressive as an actor, and his presence in the film has no value except to give it the strength of authenticity.

Edward Connolly as Rasputin really carried away the honors for charatcerization, since his work was as fine as anything I have ever seen on the screen. He certainly made the character an unforgettable one.

Nance O'Neil had little to do until the last couple of reels, but there she made her part stand out and justified her presence by handling some big scenes in a truly forceful manner.

Alfred Hickman as the Czar had an excellent make-up and gave a very good characterization.

Another unforgettable face was that of Ketty Galanta. She had a peculiar, starey-eyed countenance that seemed to give a suggestion of her eyes popping out most of the time, but certainly she was decidedly pretty, and she made this characterization real, helping very materially to save many scenes that would have been somewhat ordinary except for her presence.

Pauline Curley handled a small part very satisfactorily, and Charles Craig was pleasing as the Grand Duke Nicholas.

Conway Tearle was satisfactory as the young hero, although he had little to do save stick around and wait for the finish.

The cast was generally very satisfactory, all of the bits being well handled, with the ensemble scenes impressive enough to hold the atmosphere.

Others in the cast were Geo. Denneburg. R. Paton Gibbs, W. Frances Chapin, Sonia Marcelle, Peter Barbierro and Master Law Johnson.

The Box Office Angle.

Properly advertised—and when I say "properly advertised" I mean provided you will get a human note into your advertising that will explain some of the things which this production shows—I believe that this can be made a tremendous money-maker. There has never been a film presented with the same amount of cumulative interest surrounding the subject touched upon.

Russia today is the biggest problem in the world, and one of the biggest the world has ever known. The revolution which followed the fall of the Romanoffs was the turning point in history for many millions of people, and possibly for many nations. There have been few characters in history as unusual as this man Rasputin, and, considering the fact that Iliodor was his confidant and teacher, this production carries a certain amount of intimate connection with actual happenings, which gives it a note of sincerity that could never be gained from a film made only with American players from a story tied together from what can be read in magazines and newspapers.

The production has been well done. It is pretty rough at times, but, nevertheless, it is a big subject done in a very satisfying manner. As a box office proposition it should be sure-fire. No one can have any just complaint, because the only real angle that they can fuss about is the unpleasantness of some of the situtaions and since these situations have been recorded as actual happenings in a tremendously important bit of recent history, then you have a very fine alibi.

I want to particularly suggest, however, that in playing this you should keep your advertising away from the routine announcement of a gigantic spectacle, etc., and center it entirely upon the human element of the influence of this one man upon the history of the world, explaining something of the character of the man and what he accomplished, in your advertising, so as to arouse the interest of a majority of your people who probably never heard of Rasputin, nor have the least idea as to just whom he was or what he had to do with Russia.

It may seem to you that everyone knows about this man, but I'll bet a red apple with you that, if you walk down the street and ask the first ten people you see, to tell you about him, there won't be two in the ten who can give you anything very definite as to his origin and the extent of his manipulations. That's important. The fact that he was a power behind the throne isn't nearly so interesting as the fact that he gained his position after starting as a drunken wife beater, etc., etc. Of course the fact that Iliodor, who was his teacher and advisor, appears in the film is of decided value in your advertising.

It is rather long in footage for a film theatre, but I believe that the present political situation which gives Russia so much importance in international affairs, will justify your making an awful fuss about this and charging additional admission.

All You Live Exhibitors!

who are going to book

"THE LUST OF AGES"

get

The Musical Score

from your Local Exchange

GEORGE W. BEYNON

505 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.

An Exclusive Photoplay Trade Journal.

Published Weekly.

THE CANADIAN MOVING PICTURE DIGEST

100% Circulation in Canada.

Orpheum Theatre Bldg. Montreal, P. Q.

KID'S WONDERFUL AT START, BUT SLUMPS TOWARD END

Francis Carpenter and Virginia Lee Corbin in

ALADDIN AND THE WONDERFUL LAMP

Fox—Standard Special

DIRECTORS.....C. M. & S. A. Franklin
ADAPTED FROM.....Arabian Nights Entertainments
SCENARIO BY.....Bernard McConville
CAMERAMAN.....Harry Gerstad
AS A WHOLE.....Truly entertaining treatment of fairy story, giving combination of pleasing atmosphere and burlesque melodrama, made funny by kids doing it; cutting would have helped; ran too long
STORY.....Followed famous legend with some added meller at end
DIRECTION.....Secured wonderful results with kiddies and gave truly artistic and effective atmosphere, but used too much footage; would have been better in six reels
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Excellent
LIGHTINGS.....Many very fine bits; generally very artistic
CAMERA WORK.....Pleasing
STAR.....Delightful kiddies who registered some truly remarkable expressions
SUPPORT..Very good—particularly Gertrude Messinger
EXTERIORS.....Very well chosen; fitted atmosphere
INTERIORS.....Excellent; generally artistic
DETAIL.....Many excellent touches
TIME.....One hour and forty-five minutes (8 parts)

IN many ways, so far as the acting and the artistry of treatment are concerned, this film is superior to "Jack and the Beanstalk," which means that it is very fine; but I do believe that this is unfortunately too long as it stands at present.

The children are wonderful, the atmosphere is very artistic, some wonderful lightings are presented and much of the melodrama is very interesting, but the story sags a bit in the last half, and the actions of the youngsters begin to lose strength because it was necessary to repeat them too much, doing the same bits of business.

Naturally there is a certain limitation to the range of expression possible for such youngsters as these to register, and, whereas these expressions seemed truly wonderful for a certain length of time, they began to lose their effect when repeated too frequently.

It would seem to me to be very advisable to reduce this in footage to about 6,000 feet, because that would make it more practical for general exhibition purposes, and certainly it would make it a better film, considered as entertainment.

Both Francis Carpenter and Virginia Lee Corbin, the two youngsters who were starred in "Jack and the Beanstalk," were equally as good in this, and, if anything, they had more opportunity, which they ably managed to make the most of.

Another little youngster, Gertrude Messinger, who played the part of lady-in-waiting to the princess, was exceptionally clever, and she did a little dance that was one of the best things of the sort that I have ever seen done by such a young child.

Violet Radcliffe as the "willun" was just as effective as in the Beanstalk picture, because her overplayed emotions registered laughs, as the directors intended.

From start to finish the atmosphere was excellent. There were many exceptionally beautiful lightings and in almost every scene the lighting showed care and appreciation of what really artistic lighting is. The directors managed to hold you in the atmosphere of the story without any difficulty, and made the action interesting by the subtle suggestion of overplaying which the kids could do and make it funny while still holding the thread of the story together.

The latter part of the production slumped a bit despite the fact that it was fast-moving melodrama, because the plot got away from the Lamp somewhat and became straight melo. This portion of the story, particularly, would be benefited if shortened, and I think some good cutting would make this picture fully 50 per cent. better, and it seems to me that when so reduced it can be equally as good as "Jack and the Beanstalk" in many ways, and decidedly better in some.

In the cast were Fred Turner, Alfred Paget, Buddy Messinger, Marie Messinger, Carmen De Rue, Raymond Lee, Lloyd Perl, Joseph Singleton, Lewis Sargent and Elmo Lincoln.

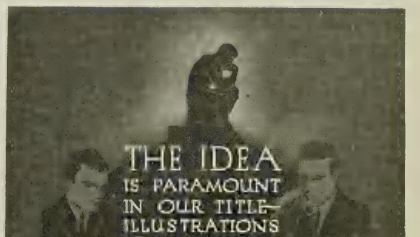
The Box Office Angle.

It would seem to me that if the Fox Company expects to put these kid specials out through the regular film theatres, that they should certainly reduce them in footage somewhat, and surely this would be decidedly so in the instance of this production. The film has been beautifully produced and very intelligently done, but suffers in the last half through a lack of variety in story material, which lessens the effect of the kids' actions, because they have to repeat the expressions and gestures registered in previous scenes.

Even if they didn't touch this, I believe you can safely regard it as a real special worthy of genuine interest and very heavy advertising; because surely we have few enough really worth-while pictures, and when we do find them we should make some noise.

With this, as with "Jack and the Beanstalk," you must consider the fact that it will appeal principally to children, unless you go after the "grownup" business with an advertising campaign that will concentrate upon the novelty of the big film done with kids as stars. I would also make it plain that it is comedy, because the kids' serious acting brings smiles even while it tends to tell the story.

For the benefit of you men who have big orchestras in your theatres, I can tell you that the musical score as played at the Globe for this production was very fine, indeed. I believe this can be secured with the picture, since it is a specially prepared score.



INTERESTING WITH ONE FINE CHARACTERIZATION, BUT STORY JUMBLES HISTORY SOMEWHAT. A MONEY-GETTER

Mon... Julia Dean, Irving Cummings, Arthur ...une Elvidge and Henry Hull in

RASPUTIN, THE BLACK MONK

...less—Brady—World—Special

DIR... Arthur Ashley
SC... E. Richard Schayer
CA...RAMAN ...Jacques Monteran
AS... ...interesting but unconvincing melodrama ...ng with most unusual character, but reg...stering acts unlike history it was supposed

STO... ...ecided interest because of prominence of central character, but failed to become impres... ...emaining only movie melo
DIR... ...Made offering satisfactory melodrama, ...ailed utterly to make it convincing or ...sive
PHO... ...Varied from very good to fair
LIGHTING... ...Some very effective; others poor
CAMERA ...ORK... Varied
STARS... ...Love excellent, dominating action; others satisfactory
EXTERIORS... Satisfactory; not impressive
INTERIORS... Acceptable
DETAIL... ...Acceptable; except story differs from known facts
TIME... One hour and twenty-five minutes (8 parts)

IT is only natural that a comparison will be made immediately between this picture and "The Fall of the Romanoffs," because both attempt to deal with the same subject—that is, the life of Rasputin.

Without question, this is far below the Brenon production as to impressive magnitude in the way of atmosphere, and certainly it lacks the note of authenticity which the presence of Iliodor gives to the Brenon production, the World picture remaining only a movie melodrama from start to finish, because at times it deviates sharply from the facts now known regarding this most unusual man.

The presence of so many "Rasputin" films started me to digging up a bit of dope about this gink, and, from all I can understand, this film is in one way correct where Mr. Brenon's was in error, that being in reference to the woman Anna, who was shown to be a peasant in Mr. Brenon's film, whereas the facts are that she is of a very good family.

The World picture, however, is decidedly different from the accepted facts in several instances, particularly in the one registering the death of Rasputin, where they show that he was lured to his death by a princess, who, according to the facts, was not in the city at the time, and was afterwards killed by a character in the melodrama who had been betrayed by him earlier in his career.

The visualization of Rasputin's death was nearer to the facts in the Brenon picture than in this, in that he was shot by the prince after being invited to his home to a dinner, where they tried to poison him, without success—but he did not die after a horseman had ridden down the center of the table, as Mr. Brenon managed to picture it quite theatrically.

According to the prince who shot him, who has now told the story, they tried to poison Rasputin at a dinner in the basement of the prince's home, feeding him poison that had killed a dog in a few seconds, without this poison seeming to have any effect upon Rasputin. This was followed by the prince shooting him, which seemed to do the deed, except that, to their surprise, after they had sent for an automobile to carry him away, they found that he was still alive. It was then necessary to beat Rasputin and shoot him, and do everything else they could think of to get him into a state of insensibility, after which they hurled him through the ice in a canal, and, according to those who did it, he was still breathing when thrown into the water.

However, you don't care an awful lot about these details, except for the fact that you may find a lot of your fans better posted on this stuff than those who made the picture, due to recent disclosures, and I figure it's pretty good dope to be able to have an alibi ready when your intelligent fans come out and tell you that the production is all wrong. The only thing you can answer to that is,—that the picture was made before these facts became known, and for that reason contains some errors, the basic ideas, however, being true to conditions and history.

As an interesting melodrama this is satisfactory. It never hits any tremendous high spots or thrilling climaxes that really get over, but it does run along in a satisfactory manner and certainly can be called interesting. I would say that the worst thing about the production is the terrible makeup worn by Hubert Wilke, playing the Czar. This surely seems inexcusable, since any school-child knows what the Czar looks like, and I would think that any boob should be able to put on crape hair much nearer to resembling the Czar's beard and mustache than this actor-feller managed to get.

The work of Montagu Love as Rasputin was excellent. His characterization made Rasputin an intelligent man, whereas those who should know insist he was not—but, anyway, the characterization was good, as a characterization.

Julia Dean, as Mme. Vasta, Rasputin's aide in all his conspiracies; Irving Cummings as the hero, and June Elvidge and Arthur Ashley as the peasant couple who helped to bring vengeance because of early injuries at Rasputin's hands were very satisfactory.

Henry Hull did not look like Kerensky and was only on the screen for a short scene. Surely a type much nearer to the present "man of the hour" could have been secured for the part.

Others who appeared were Joseph Granby, Ed Elkas, Robert Fisher, Pinna Nesbit, Florence Beresford, Violet Axzell, Charles Crompton and Frank Beamish.

The Box Office Angle.

Surely you should be able to get money with this, because Rasputin is today a figure that has amazed the world, and we are just now learning what he really accomplished. If you will advertise this properly, you can pull real business, the next essential being that you protect yourself in your advertising by announcing this as a story built around Rasputin, because otherwise you are going to have a good many in your audience question some of the points in the plot construction.

I would not play this against "The Fall of the Romanoffs," because it doesn't compare as a production with the Brenon film, but you can safely book this before or after and get money with it if you have sense enough to advertise it well without referring too directly to the other production—which would mean hat you would be inviting comparison. They will "compare" enough without your urging them to do it.

The fact that you have five or six people in this who have been featured or starred in individual productions, gives you an advertising angle worthy of attention, although, as a matter of fact, Montagu Love has the only truly big part, and his work dominates the production from start to finish.

TREATMENT MAKES OLD SITUATIONS REGISTER RIGHT WELL

Norma Talmadge in

THE MOTH

Joseph M. Schenck—Select Pictures Corp.

DIRECTOR.....Edward Jose
AUTHOR.....William Dana Orcutt
SCENARIO BY.....John B. Clymer and Harry O. Hoyt
CAMERAMEN.....Edward Wynard and Ben Struckman
AS A WHOLE.....Characterization development and titles made this interesting and entertaining despite age of situations
STORY.....The old Eternal Triangle theme very intelligently developed by treatment DIRECTION.....Gave satisfactory treatment to incidents and situations but lighted sets better than individuals
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally satisfactory; occasionally very good
LIGHTINGS.....Generally good on sets; not so good on star and other characters
CAMERA WORK.....Varied from very good to fair
STAR.....Pleasing as youngster and convincing in dramatic moments, but not lighted to best advantage in many of her scenes
SUPPORT.....Hassard Short excellent; others satisfactory
EXTERIORS.....Generally good
INTERIORS.....Some very fine; others too gaudy, giving junky appearance
DETAIL.....Some good touches
TIME.....One hour and twenty-three minutes (7 parts)

CERTAINLY this is the best Norma Talmadge production we have had in a long time. I believe the most credit for this is due to those who developed the scenario treatment of the story idea, providing little bits of business and titles which gave the star and other players opportunities to register characterization touches that were very entertaining.

The plot, stripped of this treatment, was the ancient Eternal Triangle situation, but the many little bits of business introduced and the rather clever titles lift it out of the ordinary rut and make it register as an interesting worthwhile story.

Miss Talmadge was introduced at first as a young girl in search of adventure or a man, and in this first little prologue she will win her audience in a hurry.

She was wished into a marriage with a no-account member of an old family, and then six years later we find her still seeking something, not knowing exactly what.

Our hero was introduced in due course, but a certain cloud was held over him to keep the audience guessing whether he was the hero or the willun, until the time came to take away the screen and say "Behold!"—and when this time did come they put him over quickly and emphatically, with the good old stunt of the insult in the club and the cutting of the cards to prove that hero was a good gambler and also sport enough to return the large sum he had won from the man who had insulted him. This is old stuff but they did it well, and then, immediately afterwards, they announced that hero was an English lord, so that we knew then, without question, he must be the sure-enough hero.

They got rid of the undesirable husband by mixing him up in the society of the vamp, so that he beat it on the finish, leaving everything open for the wife and our hero to get it together.

Although Miss Talmadge was not lighted to advantage in many of her scenes, she gave an excellent portrayal of the butterfly wife who was gradually brought to a realization of life's difficulties, and I think that her performance in this registers much more satisfactorily than anything she has done in a long time. She played sincerely and her important moments rang true.

Hassard Short, as the no-account husband, was excellent. He gave one of the smoothest characterizations of this type of sassiety-simp that the screen has seen in a long time. Mr. Short is well known for his work on the legitimate stage, having played a somewhat similar part for years with Laurette Taylor in "Peg O' My Heart."

The other members of the cast were very satisfactory, although the chorus girl vamp was quite camera-conscious.

While most of the titles were excellent and helped decidedly in the development of the situations, there was one insert where a typographical error got by, and it will probably provide a laugh for many where it was not intended. This was an insert from a book which appeared in the first scene where Miss Talmadge was introduced, which was supposed to be an excerpt from a history telling of Cleopatra and her influence over men. The insert said that she had a remarkable power over men, and had flirted herself to "immorality." It is quite true that Cleopatra did flirt herself to "immorality," but the insert was intended to read that she had flirted herself to IMMORTALITY. This will provide an unexpected laugh unless it is changed.

Eugene O'Brien, Virginia Dare, Adolph Menjou, Maud Allen, Robert Vivian, Donald Hall, Kenneth Worms and Aida Armand were others in the cast.

The Box Office Angle.

You can safely plug this one pretty strong, emphasizing particularly the characterizations which have been developed.

In order to protect yourself against the possible bad impression made by some of the recent productions in which Miss Talmadge has appeared, I believe I would give them a personal assurance that this is one of the best things she has done in a long while.

The general atmosphere is very good, although some of the sets are a little too gaudy and contain too much furniture. You might say, in referring to this, that it is one of the best character developments dealing with a girl, married before she became a woman, and the difficulties she encountered and the mistakes she made, that has ever been screened.

HAROLD LOCKWOOD
Yorke--Metro

DELIGHTFUL TREATMENT AND CLEVER KIDS TRULY ENTERTAINING

Virginia Lee Corbin and Francis Carpenter in

JACK AND THE BEANSTALK

Fox—Standard Special

DIRECTORS.....C. M. & S. A. Franklin
ADAPTED BY.....Mary Murillo
CAMERAMEN.....Frank Good and Harry Gerstad
AS A WHOLE.....Truly entertaining visualization of fairy story with kid-comedy modern introduction
STORY.....Known to all kids—young and old
DIRECTION.....Demonstrated wonderful aptitude for handling children; successfully carried audience into atmosphere of fairy tale; made visualization not only interesting, but truly entertaining
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent; had a few bad spots, but averaged high and registered some very good effects
LIGHTINGS.....Generally very good
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STARS.....Exceptionally clever youngsters
SUPPORT.....Very good, with scores of doll-like kiddies
EXTERIORS.....Some very effective and artistic because of composition, with fairy-tale locations exceptionally well handled
INTERIORS.....Very well done—particularly small sets in Giant's home
DETAIL....Some very fine bits showing praiseworthy care
TIME.....One hour and forty-five minutes (8) parts

IT looks as if the Franklin Boys hit a gold mine for Fox when they decided to do the fairy tale stuff with kiddies.

For Triangle, these same Franklin Boys proved their ability to get results with youngsters, and they also demonstrated that they knew comedy values and how to register little human touches that would appeal to the average audience.

In tackling such a big visualization problem as "Jack and the Beanstalk" they didn't lose sight of the value of registering little human bits of business and comedy touches, and the result is that the production, which is now presented in ten reels, is an evening's show that is one of the few pictures of such footage that most anyone can sit through without being decidedly wearied.

I do believe that, for commercial purposes, it would be better to have this in less footage, and I can't help but feel that it can be shortened to advantage; nevertheless, seeing it in ten reels, I must say that it holds quite well, and certainly will please in any community, because the kids will love it, and most grownups are kids at heart, even if they won't admit it to anyone else.

The two youngsters, Francis Carpenter and Virginia Lee Corbin, were very clever and did remarkably well for children so young. It was apparent at times that they were being directed, but they did so much without this being in evidence—due to the fact that the Franklins by patient methods know how to get results—that I think their performances will be remembered by everyone who sees the film, with such a favorable impression that all the films presenting these two kiddies will find millions ready to hunt them up.

They started this off with a modern story and registered a couple of kids who were enjoying "Jack and the Beanstalk" muchly, as read by a governess. Being neglected somewhat by mothers who preferred pink teas to worrying about children, these two kiddies decided to go hunting for the enchanted forest, and the directors managed to gather dozens of real laughs during the course of this prologue by the manner in which they handled the preparations made by the girl and the boy to do a get away. The girl packed her things like a reg'lar young lady, and the young hero got out his ortermobile and came down to the crossroads to meet her in style.

Of course, this all led up to the lost-in-the-woods stuff with the dream, which started this off into the fairy tale.

Throughout the fairy tale the Franklins added decidedly to the effect of most of their scenes by the intelligent use of closeups. This was particularly the case in registering the kids.

After the sale of the cow and the sudden growth of the beanstalk into the sky, we found Jack discovering the village near the castle of the giant. In this village was the princess, and I want to mention here the fact that this built village looked quite fairy-tale like, with all of the kids dressed up in funny costumes, looking just like a lot of Motoy dolls in action. These round-faced children certainly did remind me of the antics of the animated dolls that are now being shown in short-reel subjects.

The Giant was played by Jack Tarver, and he was some real giant, too—he being a sure-enough freak, especially hired for this production. The setting for his home was well constructed to show the contrast between the little people of the village and the giant, and the fairy story plot was carried out nicely with the well-known details of Jack's theft of the hen that laid the golden egg and the theft of the golden harp.

The assault upon the Giant's castle by the army of the nearby village provided an opportunity for what was rather a novel combination of the semi-spectacular with burlesque comedy, and I think this part of the film will appeal particularly to the kids as a combination of laughs and thrills. Of course, at the end the beanstalk was chopped down by Jack, and the Giant came tumbling to his death, and then the modern parents found the dreaming kids out in the woods.

The Franklins are to be complimented for the results they have secured in putting this fairy story on the screen, because it was no little undertaking, and they have held the atmosphere very satisfactorily.

Some of the kids were very clever, and some of them were very actory, but when they acted it was funny, and the whole production was presented for entertainment purposes, so that there's really nothing for anyone to find fault with.

The Box Office Angle.

It would seem to me that this is an exceptional proposition where you can afford to play a production of this footage, depending for a good part of your audience upon kids. I have a hunch that most of the grownups who might come would enjoy this, but it may be a difficult matter to get all the grownups you would like to have into your theatre, because some of them may think that this isn't the sort of a production they would want to see.

I would suggest that you emphasize particularly the fact that the entire production is played by kids—exceptionally clever kids—with one giant as opposition. Of course, there are a number of adults in the cast, but the story is really built around the kiddies and the giant.

There's little question in my mind as to this being a pleasing bit of entertainment for any audience, but I think you should give serious consideration to the problem of whether or not your theatre is so situated that a fairy tale will bring you capacity. In some sections I would say that this should be good for a "run;" whereas in other communities I would think a while before play ing it for one night unless you advertise it intelligently. Much depends upon your location and the type of patron that you go after.

Certainly if you are going to play it you should emphasize the kid angle for all it's worth. You might also call attention to the fact that this was produced by the men who made the famous Triangle kid pictures, such as "Let Katy Do It," etc.

TREATMENT AND ARTISTRY MAKE OLD IDEA ENTERTAINING

Harold Lockwood in

PARADISE GARDEN

Yorke—Metro

DIRECTOR.....Fred J. Balshofer
AUTHOR.....George Gibbs
SCENARIO BY.....Fred J. Balshofer and Richard V. Spencer
CAMERAMAN.....Antonio Gaudio
AS A WHOLE.....Classy and rather artistic atmosphere, excellent photography and rather interesting treatment made slender story idea quite interesting
STORY.....“Model young man raised under guard, innocent of sex and sin, turned loose on the world” idea
DIRECTION.....Saved many scenes by plenty of closeups, and gave distinctive atmosphere
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Very fine
LIGHTINGS.....Some quite artistic; generally good
CAMERA WORK.....Excellent—particularly closeups
STAR.....Pleasing and looks like “ideal specimen” type
SUPPORT.....Both girls excellent; other types well handled
EXTERIORS.....Generally artistic; well chosen for composition
INTERIORS.....Good
DETAIL.....A few good touches
TIME.....Seventy minutes (5 parts)

A LITTLE bit of story was spread a long way in this, but it was done neatly, with many incidents stretched into footage by intelligent use of closeups and good titles, so that, on the whole, the process was quite satisfactory, the story seeming quite sufficient because the action was so handled as to make the points without dragging too much.

There was no great merit to the plot, because almost as soon as they announced that a young cub was to be reared on an estate where no woman was to be permitted to come near, in the hope of bringing him up innocent of sex and sin, we knew that when he did get out he was going to bump into some wicked wamp who would try awful hard to tempt him, with the clean minded heroine sticking around and waiting for the finish.

To make it quite evident that the real heroine was to be on hand when needed, she was introduced first, there being a broken rod in the gate over a stream flowing from the estate, which made it possible for her to sneak into the forbidden grounds and meet the hero.

Vera Sisson as the shero was quite pleasing, and a nice contrast to the soulful temptress selected to play the part of the wamp.

Virginia Rappae as the wicked beguiler did her durndest to make Harold slip out of pure deviltry and a desire to make him do something he had never done before, and she was most attractive. She gave promise of being able to do some really worthwhile things along similar lines and needs to be kept tab on as a screen possibility.

Considerable footage was devoted to the efforts of this fair lady to teach Harold how to make love, there being several incidents where she insisted upon being kissed, with some discussion when Harold failed to register just the sort of kiss she wanted the first time. I am afraid the Pennsylvania censors will object to a few of these love sessions, since I understand that they have a rule that you can kiss only for “so many feet.”

Anyway, Harold thought the vamp was wonderful and wanted to marry her, and then of course he had to see her kissing some other guy, which busted up the party. He went back to the woods and Bill Clifford, who had been doing an excellent characterization of the tutor who had trained this “ideal specimen,” chased out and dug up Miss Sisson and brought her into the woods, so that Harold could see her again as he had first seen her, with the result that Mr. Clifford's efforts as Cupid proved very successful.

Cameraman Antonio Gaudio is deserving of considerable credit on this production because there were many exterior scenes where artistic composition and good lighting helped decidedly in making a favorable impression, and in scores of the incidents the perfectly focused closeups made the characterizations stand out with an intimacy that impressed.

Mr. Lockwood was quite pleasing as the innocent hero, and Lester Cuneo as his friend did what was to be done, very satisfactorily.

I have already mentioned the other three important characters, Miss Sisson, Miss Rappae and Mr. Clifford. Others who appeared were G. Spotti and Catherine Henry.

The Box Office Angle.

I believe that this is far more satisfying and really better entertainment than any Lockwood production you have had in some time. This is a fact despite the slender skeleton of a story used, because the main situation is an interesting one and has been very well treated. All of your fans will appreciate the excellent photography and the rather well written titles, of which there were many, without seeming to be too many.

I would center my advertising upon Mr. Lockwood and the fact that he plays, in this, the part of a young man reared on a secluded estate until he was twenty-one, so that he could face the world without having “seen a woman.”

You might mention the presence of Vera Sission, who has appeared for a long time in program productions, and I would call particular attention to the girl vamp in this, Miss Virginia Rappae, using her photographs before the theatre. Men heroes are all right, but, just the same, I consider it a good hunch to play up the girl in any “man” picture wherever possible.

HEART STIRRING HAND COLORED PATRIOTIC SLIDES 25c. Each

71. If It's Worth Living Under, It's Worth Fighting For.
54. Americans Must Protect America.
95. We Are With You, Mr. President. One Hundred Million Strong.
53. Your Country Needs You.
28. American Flag.
95. President Wilson & Flag.
60. Geo. Washington.
45. The Birth of the American Flag.
70. Abraham Lincoln.
76. Spirit of '76—Reflects in 1917.
27. If It's Good Enough to Live Under, It's Worth Fighting for.
87. Pledge Allegiance.
68. Star Spangled Banner.
42. My Country 'Tis of Thee (Flag).

EXCELSIOR ILLUSTRATING CO., 219 Sixth Ave. New York City

VERY UNCONVINCING PLOT MAKES CRUDE APPEAL TO PATRIOTISM

Dustin Farnum in

THE SPY

Fox—Standard Special

DIRECTOR.....Richard Stanton
AUTHOR.....George Bronson Howard
CAMERAMAN.....J. D. Jennings
AS A WHOLE.....Over-reaching, unconvincing melo full of lightings and situations that missed fire as drama, but will register with those who always try to prove patriotism by cheering.
STORY.....Ridiculous as to basic situations, apparently being aimed only to prove Germans boobs and brutes
DIRECTION.....Played for light effects all the time, but had characters register actions so slowly at times, in attempt to be impressive, that missed fire badly
PHOTOGRAPHY....Some excellent bits, but many places where closeup lightings didn't match long shots, and some lightings were too harsh
LIGHTINGS.....Many very fine, but excessive use of lightings detracted from dramatic action
CAMERA WORK.....Generally good
STAR.....Satisfactory hero, although never registered as anything except movie star
SUPPORT.....Just acceptable, with makeup so plain it frequently marred scenes
EXTERIORS.....A few very good shots; generally satisfactory
DETAIL.....Some that was unnecessary, being too brutal to be entertaining
TIME.....Seventy minutes (8 parts)

IN sections where the wave-the-flag stuff has always been "patriotic," even when rather crudely handled and a bit too cheap in its appeal to register with the more intelligent, this should go over very big. Because of the present situation, which makes it legitimate in the minds of many to prove the Germans to be anything unspeakable, this may register satisfactorily anywhere.

Certainly, however, in considering this production from the standpoint of a dramatic story, I would say that it's very cheap junk.

From start to finish light effects were used with great regularity, and some of them were very effective; but at other times the lighting was harsh, with the result that in many of the closeups the makeup worn by the chief of the German secret service and by the shero was very much in evidence, which tended to mar the possible effectiveness of the action.

Unfortunately, also, the director tried to make the actions of the characters impressive by the slow dignity of their movements, permitting this to be overdrawn, and as a consequence the slowness was unnatural, making the scenes register even more artificially. It was plainly "acting."

According to the plot of this, the Germans—particularly the head of the German secret service—were awful boobs. This chief of the secret service was also shown to be a sort of messenger who sneaked around and listened to what suspected Americans might be saying to one another, hiding in the bushes of the conservatory like any old ordinary "movie" willun.

They registered scenes where this chief of the secret service accepted without question an American who had drifted into the country, deciding to make this American a spy against his own country. They took this American—who, of course, was our hero working for his own government—into their confidence, immediately showing him a complete list of all the spies in America, this having been done before any test whatever had been applied to this stranger's attitude towards his country and Germany.

Whatever else the Germans are, we must admit that they're not boobs! At least, it's rather funny for Americans to say that the German secret service chief is a boob when it is pretty generally known that the German secret service has been one of the most comprehensive and efficient the world has ever known.

Of course, the German secret service has done a lot of fool things which have been uncovered by this country, but it seems to me to be a proposition of underestimating our enemies when they are shown to be such fools as to willingly welcome a stranger into the innermost councils without checking him up carefully as to past performances.

The general action of this was very, very ordinary melodrama. Dustin Farnum, as The Spy, left the ambassadors' ball to go steal the poipers from the home of the secret service chief, who had obligingly told him that they would be in his home that night, and somehow hero Dusty just walked right into that home without anybody attempting to stop him, and he managed to blow open the safe without interruption, only to find the shero suddenly present when he finished the job, after which discovery he stopped to argue with her a bit, saying good-bye, while a young army suddenly arose outside to come in and capture him. No safeblower—spy or otherwise—in real life would ever stop to argue after having blown open a safe under such circumstances.

Then, in order to keep Hero Dusty in the action, the German chief of the secret service ordered that he be captured alive, instead of being killed—as would have been the natural procedure, since they had no way of knowing that he had slipped the poipers to a confederate.

Then, after the poipers were gone, they proceeded to register much footage of brutal torture, in which the Germans were attempting to force the hero to tell where the precious book of names might be. Since there had been ample time for anyone to have copied the list of names many, many times, I can't see of what importance it was to the Germans to know where the book might be. Anyway, this plot excuse provided the producers with a reason for many, many closeups of the tortured hero before they finally took him out with the shero and stood him up against a stone wall to be shot.

I don't feel that it is unpatriotic to fuss about such productions as this, because it seems to me that these unconvincing melodramas tend to cheapen the really wonderful things that are being done by brave men for this country. The general idea of an American winning his way into the confidence of the secret service of Germany was all right, but certainly in this production they don't make it convincing,

In the efforts to get light effects they occasionally gave us a closeup against a black drop in a set which was fully lighted. This is always bad.

Dusty Farnum was a typical theatric movie hero all the way, acting too much at all times to register as a sure-enough human being might under similar circumstances. Most of the other players seemed burdened with the fact that they were trying to appear like very important personages, without having the least idea as to how said important personages might act. This artificial "dignity" was very unconvincing.

Winifred Kingston as the shero was satisfactory except that in many of her closeups her makeup was very much in evidence.

In the cast were William Burress, Wm. E. Lowry, Chas. Clary and Edward Gaye.

The Box Office Angle.

This is rather a good title, and the advertising in connection with the production promises the film to be a revelation of the Kaiser's methods in this country, which would probably be enough to get business anywhere.

The question to be considered is whether or not you have the sort of patrons who care for this cheap melodramatic appeal when the story and action is unconvincing. In some communities and in some theatres this should go very big, because the American hero triumphs all the way, the Germans are proven to be awful boobs, and they torture the hero inhumanly and finally shoot him, which is enough to make some men want to go out and enlist.

I fear that well informed people will resent the crudeness of this, but again it is possible that they will accept it and pass it by with the thought that it might do some good in arousing those not so well informed.

It is too bad that the efforts for lightings and the players in this were not used in a similar sort of a production with a more convincing plot development.

TREATMENT HELPS TO LIFT ROUTINE NORTHWOODS MELO

Margery Wilson in

WILD SUMAC

Triangle

DIRECTOR	William V. Mong
AUTHOR	Elaine Sterne
SCENARIO BY	Jack Cunningham
CAMERAMAN	Eddie Gailer
AS A WHOLE	Director made it interesting and human, and some of characters quite forceful
STORY	Northwest story of stolen girl
DIRECTION	Gave many good little touches
PHOTOGRAPHY	Good
LIGHTINGS	A few good
CAMERA WORK	Fair
STAR	Very human and pleasing; looked well in burlap dress
SUPPORT	Good types; Frank Brownlee fine
EXTERIORS	Fitted atmosphere
INTERIORS	Satisfactory
DETAIL	Very good; one sequence needs cutting
TIME	Sixty minutes (5 parts)

ALTHO not presenting any really big scenes, this did suggest in some ways having come from "The Barrier." We had the halfbreed girl who turned out to be white and a character such as Mitchell Lewis did in "The Barrier."

This story concerned a roughneck halfbreed, Frank Brownlee, who was bootlegging liquor into a railroad camp in the Northwest. He started a card game with the son of a mine owner who was building this spur railroad and was found cheating, which started a fight in which the son was shot.

The halfbreed blamed the murder onto his daughter, played by Margery Wilson, and incited a mob, who thought she was a witch, to take her out of jail and burn her at the stake.

She was rescued by the happy-go-lucky French-Canadian, then we learned that the girl was not the daughter of the bootlegger, but was really a niece of the mine owner, the girl having been stolen when a mere child.

The finale was a love scene between the girl and the French Canadian.

The director provided many good little touches and made his players human and pleasing.

George Chesebro, who did the French-Canadian, gave a very pleasing characterization.

Frank Brownlee certainly made the willun a wicked wun.

Miss Wilson was decidedly well fitted for the type of the halfbreed girl, and the burlap dress that she wore added to her beauty rather than detracted. If she is given some good productions her name may become worth real money to you.

Edwin J. Brady, as the Mounted Police sergeant, had poise and repose, and he gave a more human characterization than we usually find in such portrayals.

Others who appeared were Percy Challenger, Wilbur Higby and Ray Jackson.

The fight between the French Canadian and the halfbreed lost quite a bit of its effectiveness by not being cut properly. It pulled a laugh where not intended, and I believe a few feet less would have helped materially.

The Box Office Angle.

This is good enough to please, and the characterizations of all the players were very satisfactory. I would lay particular stress upon Mr. Brownlee's portrayal of the halfbreed villain.

I would suggest that, in your billing, you use a line something like this: "Would you shoulder the blame for a murder which your brute father had committed, and still hold to it if you were to be burned at the stake? Or, you might say: "Do you know how to cheat at cards? Margery Wilson will give you a pointer or two in 'Wild Sumac.'"

You will be able to say that this is a human story that gets over, and you will not have any kicks coming when they came out.

CRANE WILBUR

ART DRAMAS PROGRAM

Eye of Envy
Unto the End
Blood of His Father
Devil McCare
Just Jim

ERNEST STERN, Inc.

THE TITLE MAN

Specializes in

MOTION PICTURE TITLES
OF THE HIGHEST GRADE

729 Seventh Ave., New York - - Phone Bryant 8711

UNIMPRESSIVE FOREIGN PRODUCTION HELPED BY LIGHTINGS AND CLOSE-UPS

Emmy Lynn in

THE TORTURED SILENCE

French Production—Pathe

AS A WHOLE....Attempt to register American technique quite satisfactory, but overplaying and weak story kept this from being good
STORY....Combination of old situations, including blackmail, question of child's parentage and husband suspecting wife, with result that he kidnaps baby
DIRECTION....Gave very effective lightings and plenty of good closeups, but permitted too much overplaying
PHOTOGRAPHY....Generally very good; some bits very fine
LIGHTINGS....Many excellent closeups in dark sets, and effective lightings that registered well
CAMERA WORK....Generally very good
STAR....Overplayed
SUPPORT....Inclined to act too much
EXTERIORS....Satisfactory, except one weird idea of riding wife past cemetery to impress death of her child
INTERIORS....Good; mostly dark sets well lighted
DETAIL....Were many letters which seemed confused
TIME....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

THIS was a foreign subject which will not impress generally in this country because the players acted entirely too much and the story failed to develop anything that was very new, with the old situations registering as just "movie stuff."

The foreign director, however, gave an excellent example of what may be accomplished when they apply American methods to their studios, because we found many closeups and the American method of effective lightings in dark sets in evidence. If this technique is followed generally in foreign films, we should get some excellent productions from the other side in the course of the next year or so.

Aside from the fact that the story situations didn't convince or impress, the players over-reached too much in their acting, and so this will hardly register anywhere as a convincing bit of drama.

The Box Office Angle.

Figured as a routine filler, this may get by satisfactorily, although it has the drawback which has kept foreign films generally from proving popular in this country in recent years, that being the emphatic overplaying of most of the characters.

The general atmosphere of the production is distinctive, and there are many excellent lightings and some good closeups, so that the general impression made by the film is surely as good as that made by 50 per cent of the program offerings that are being presented by the various second-rate producers.

The story is rather confusing at times, there being such stunts as a bit where the husband wrote a letter to his wife and then carried it to her himself. This indicates that the story has been changed over here in arranging American titles, or else the postal service in France is in very bad condition. Perhaps the husband was afraid to tell her what he thought for fear that he might not remember it all, and so presented it in letter form. Anyway, such stunts mar a film for American audience.

DOPE VICTIM CHARACTERIZATION SHOWING HER REFORM

Edna Goodrich in

QUEEN X

Empire All-Star—Mutual

DIRECTOR....John B. O'Brien
AUTHOR....Edwin M. Stanton
AS A WHOLE....Morbid, but good characterization of dope user
STORY....Dope plot did not convince
DIRECTION....Kept it interesting if unconvincing
PHOTOGRAPHY....Varied from good to fair
LIGHTINGS....Generally pleasing
CAMERA WORK....Good
STAR....Excellent characterization
SUPPORT....Good and fair
EXTERIORS....Satisfactory
INTERIORS....Good and fitted atmosphere
DETAIL....Good
TIME....Sixty-four minutes (5 parts)

THIS is a rather morbid story with all the raids, third degree, and trial scenes that ever occurred, but rather a good ending. It dealt with Miss Goodrich as a drug addict, who was captured in a raid, her subsequent imprisonment, third degree ordeal and trial where she was convicted. She was then recognized by the sister of the assistant district attorney and sentence was suspended. Miss Goodrich was put in the assistant's care and sent to the country, where they fell in love, and through her information the opium gang was arrested. Then came the clutch.

Miss Goodrich, as the "dope," played that part well and her change to the normal state was registered beautifully. The compact of her stopping the habit and the assistant stopping smoking and coffee was well handled.

The director got in a couple of good twists when he let the chink, who had threatened to kill Miss Goodrich, escape and where Miss G. found the wire from the district attorney. The director let people guess and then went straight to the clutch.

There was too much raid and courtroom stuff, but the atmosphere was kept classy with good sets.

The Box Office Angle.

Miss Goodrich properly advertised may pull some business, and her work in this is splendid, the cast is good and if you figure that you can run a dope story that starts morbidly but ends well, go to it.

If you must use it, talk about the acting of Miss Goodrich and forget to mention the character of the story.

WID'S IS READ NOT SKIMMED

NUT CHARACTERIZATION BRIGHT SPOT IN ROUTINE MOVIE

Roy Stewart in

ONE-SHOT ROSS

Triangle

DIRECTOR	Clifford Smith
AUTHOR	Lambert Hillyer
CAMERAMAN	Cap Crane
AS A WHOLE	Very melo—doesn't impress or convince
STORY	Man with reputation goes to another town, captures bandit gang and wins girl
DIRECTION	Gave lots of action
PHOTOGRAPHY	Just good
LIGHTINGS	No attempt to secure them
CAMERA WORK	Straight stuff
STAR	Rides well and looks rough and ready
SUPPORT	Western types
EXTERIORS	No attempt for composition
INTERIORS	Acceptable for atmosphere
DETAIL	Acceptable
TIME	Sixty minutes (5 parts)

HERE we have just so much footage taken up with riding, shooting, murder and arrests. Roy Stewart gave rather a good characterization of a "nut."

The story has to do with a bad man who restored order in his town, whereupon he left after the excitement had died down. The stage on which he was a passenger was held up by bandits and the chest containing gold stolen. During the mixup Mr. Stewart was injured by the stage upsetting and was taken to the home of the heroine, where he was cared for.

Stewart decided to play "nutty" in order to obtain information concerning the bandits, and he finally broke up their raid across the border and won the shero after a fight with the chief of the "ruff" outfit.

Stewart put this characterization over without overdoing the part, and he looked it, too. The place where he kissed the ear of a horse was a little touch that ought to register.

The fight between the girl and the willun was well enough staged as such fights go, but this has come to be looked upon as "old stuff," and you can't expect to raise much enthusiasm on it. The place where the girl yelled and distracted the attention of the willun was very convenient and showed clearly that directions came from the sidelines.

Among those who appeared were Josie Sedgwick, Jack Richardson, Leo Willis, William Ellingford and Louis Durham.

The Box Office Angle.

This is just fair and will do to put on your program on an off night when you can afford to play something that has no great punch in it, but be sure you can afford to do this.

The only thing to feature is the part of the nut, put over by Mr. Stewart. You might say: "How crazy do you think a man would be to kiss a horse's ear? See Roy Stewart in ONE-SHOT ROSS."

I don't think Roy Stewart's name is as yet well enough established for you to be able to cash in on it. He has had a few mediocre films which were not good enough to have placed him up front as a favorite with film folk.

LITTLE TOUCHES AND CHARACTERIZATION HELP WEAK STORY

Walt Whitman in

THE TAR-HEEL WARRIOR

Triangle

DIRECTOR	E. Mason Hopper
AUTHOR	J. G. Hawks
CAMERAMAN	Charles Stumar
AS A WHOLE	Human bits helped rather weak plot
STORY	Saving the old mortgaged home
DIRECTION	Gave lots of good little touches
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally very pleasing
LIGHTINGS	Very good
CAMERA WORK	Good
STAR	Looked the part of fine old man; played with sincerity
SUPPORT	Quite good
EXTERIORS	Some good shots
INTERIORS	Fitted atmosphere
DETAIL	Acceptable
TIME	Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

WALT WHITMAN as a Southern gentleman who was in very straitened circumstances, had placed a heavy mortgage on his plantation, which would fall due in thirty days. So Mr. Whitman went to New York to raise the money.

Meeting with no success, in desperation he misappropriated money he had been entrusted with. He lost this money via the ticker route, and, thinking he had ruined his granddaughter's future, he left a note of explanation and stated that he intended to commit suicide, in an attempt to wipe out the stain.

Meanwhile, the market changed, and the husband made his "killing," and, after getting the old Colonel's note, they left immediately for the South, arriving just in time —as they always do in the movies.

Director Hopper has given us lots of little human touches in this, and Walt Whitman has made the old Southern gentleman very human. Two old niggers helped the plot quite a little, having been given very good titles throughout.

The photography and lightings were excellent, and these points helped a rather elementary story into the class of worth-while offerings.

There was one place in this where the action didn't ring true, it being where the granddaughter, when she left for the South, did not wire in place of trusting to the trains to get there in time.

There were too many shots of the tops of buildings and of the brokerage office of the husband. If these had been cut a little shorter it would have helped the dramatic action of these scenes.

In the supporting cast were Ann Kroman, Wm. Shaw, J. W. McLaughlin, Dorcas Matthews, Wilbur Higby, Clara Knight, Tom S. Guise, John P. Lockney and George West.

The Box Office Angle.

This is a very weak plot, but it may prove pleasing to your patrons because of the human playing of Mr. Whitman. I would emphasize his good work and say that it is a very human characterization.

I would not say very much about the story, because it is old, old stuff, but you can say that there are some appealing human moments.

ORDINARY FEATURE HELPED BY STAR, IS JUST FAIR

Shirley Mason in

AN APPLE-TREE GIRL

Edison—Perfection

DIRECTOR.....Alan Crosland
AUTHOR.....George Weston
CAMERAMAN.....Philip Canura
AS A WHOLE.....Kept everyone running; did not register convincingly
STORY.....Poor girl who made good
DIRECTION.....Too much running
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Good
LIGHTINGS.....Very good
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR.....Some runner, but looked good
SUPPORT.....Fair, except old Scotchman was good
EXTERIORS.....Good; nicely tinted
INTERIORS.....Good antiques
DETAIL.....Fair
TIME.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

SHIRLEY MASON looked good in this and her part as a running, jumping girl full of life and high spirits certainly suited her, but the director made all the cast run, through the entire five reels, and in a few places it seemed a bit weird.

This started with Miss Mason as a country girl who was left some money, which was lost just when she finished high school, and from there on with her life as a school teacher at home, where she tried to attain her three wishes,—to be liked, to be well known, and to marry a millionaire.

She did the first at home, the second by winning a golf tournament, and then turned a millionaire down to marry a poor young doctor.

The girl who was supposed to be the town beauty was certainly far from it, some of her close-ups showing her to very poor advantage.

The idea of having an international golf tournament with only about twenty-five spectators flopped pretty hard, and in the scenes of the high school the pupils were too old for high school boys and girls. The name "An Apple-Tree Girl" didn't have anything to do with the story after the first two or three scenes.

Raymond McKee as the young doctor is a nice looking boy and helped his scenes considerably. The aunt played with quiet reserve that stood out. The old Scotchman on the links was very good.

The Box Office Angle.

Although this is better than some of Miss Mason's pictures and has an air of lightness to it, still it will not stand much boosting. Some of the lightings are quite good, a few detract from it and the cast did not impress as a whole.

This will do to fill in your program on an off evening, but be careful how you advertise it. The best point to bring out is, "Could you do these three things: 1. Become well liked. 2. Become well known. 3. Marry a millionaire?" See Shirley Mason try them in "An Apple-Tree Girl."

STAR'S CHARACTERIZATION MARRED BY CRUDE COMEDY (?) SPOTS

Lew Fields and Madge Evans in

THE CORNER GROCER

Peerless—World

DIRECTOR.....George Cowl
AUTHOR.....Adolph Phillips
SCENARIO BY.....Lawrence T. McCloskey
CAMERAMEN.....Lucien Tainguy and Alex Nilson
AS A WHOLE.....Had a few good spots, but many very bad ones
STORY.....Grocer who became rich to lose all through son
DIRECTION.....Allowed some overacting and left much to be desired
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Fair; varied decidedly
LIGHTINGS.....Some good
CAMERA WORK.....Some good; some bad
STARS.....He had some good moments; she overacted
SUPPORT.....Looked like Keystone burlesque
EXTERIORS.....Good
INTERIORS.....Flat was good; house atmosphere belonged to Keystone
DETAIL.....Fair
TIME.....Sixty minutes (5 parts)

THE director has given us in this several spots which registered quite humanly, and then he immediately turned around and made his comedy so broad that it looked almost like a Keystone.

The plot had to do with Lew Fields as a small grocery storekeeper living in the rear of his store, in a homey little flat. His son and Madge Evans, a girl they had adopted, were fast friends from childhood up to the time the son left for college. During this time the grocery store was very profitable, and during the son's college career Mr. Fields bought a larger establishment, which also made good.

Upon the son's return from college he had his father move into a larger home and he himself started to work in a bank. Later he forged a check on his father, and his father had to sell his home and store to pay the money on the check, to keep his son from prison. There were complications of a murder, which finally cleared up, and it ended with the son making good in a mining district.

The "corner grocer" character was an excellent opportunity for Mr. Fields, but he was given comedy that didn't register, and this marred the human spots.

I must say that the home Mr. Fields moved into was certainly "some" home for an ordinary grocer. The scenes of the banquet held here were awful. They certainly smacked of Keystone.

Madge Evans as the adopted daughter overacted quite a little in a good many of her scenes. She is a cute kiddie and can register well if properly directed.

Others who appeared were Nick Long, Jr., Wm. Sherwood, Lillian Cook, Geo. Cowl, Pinna Nesbit, Viva Ogden, Justine Cutting and Stanhope Wheatcroft.

The Box Office Angle.

Lew Fields' name would probably bring you some business except that he has had some very bad films. It seems too bad that he can't get a fair chance on the screen.

If you must play this I would dwell particularly upon Mr. Fields' characterization. He gets this over at times so that it will win any audience, only to lose them a few minutes later by the very absurdity of some of the other action that follows.

If you don't have to play this you can safely let it slide. It will never be missed by anyone.

ORDINARY ROUTINE MOVIE WITH SOME VERY BAD SPOTS

Ruth Stonehouse in

THE PHANTOM HUSBAND

Triangle

DIRECTOR ..... Ferris Hartman
AUTHOR ..... H. O. Davis
SCENARIO BY ..... George DuBois Proctor
CAMERAMAN ..... Elgin Lesly
AS A WHOLE ..... Ordinary movie, unconvincing and unimpressive
STORY ..... Old idea of girl who pretended to have husband, writing letters to herself, with kidnapped-by-fortune-teller adventure towards the end
DIRECTION ..... Registered a few acceptable incidents, but generally crude and repeated badly in some sets
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... A few good shots, but generally flat
LIGHTINGS ..... One or two good bits; generally poor
CAMERA WORK ..... Acceptable
STAR ..... Fails to impress or gain sympathy
SUPPORT ..... Ordinary; some of it bad
EXTERIORS ..... Acceptable
INTERIORS ..... Ordinary
DETAIL ..... Much too much
TIME ..... Fifty-seven minutes (5 parts)

"ORDINARY MOVIE" is about the label for this, it being a comparatively crude visualization of an old idea, with some unconvincing melodrama tacked on at the end.

They started off with a lot of footage registering the desire of the shero to receive mail. We had many, many scenes in the village post-office, in all of which the characters were terribly overdrawn. Every small town in the country will resent this very crude attempt to picturize village life. The idea is a human one, but certainly it was poorly registered in this and has been done before much more satisfactorily.

The plot had to do with Miss Stonehouse beginning to write herself letters in order to appear important in the village where she had been very much neglected, and this finally developed to a point where she claimed to have been proposed to, and she left for the city to be married.

In the city she went to a fortune-teller and was locked in a room for several days, but at the end of this time she was calmly allowed to go free because a white slaver who stopped in said she wasn't the sort of a girl he wanted.

She then read about an unidentified body at the morgue and went down there to claim this person as her husband. Later the brother of the dead man loomed up to settle his estate with the widow, and finally she confessed that she had never been married, and the brother married her himself.

Miss Stonehouse didn't register such a charatcerization as to justify her being starred, and most of the extras in the cast overplayed so badly that the production didn't get over very satisfactorily at any time.

Charles Gunn slipped in at the finish as the brother of the dead man, but he had very little to do.

The Box Office Angle.

You can possibly sneak this by if you have been playing ordinary junk released by many of the programs nowadays, but certainly I would advise you to dodge this sort of a production if you expect to keep your fans lined up for any length of time.

I can't say that this is any worse than some of the recent Triangle productions or some of those made by other programs, but surely it isn't a good film, and you fellers must get away from the idea of being lulled to security through thinking that one of these is no worse than the other. You must remember that your fans do not see every picture, and when they do stop in, if they continue to see bad ones, they're going to hunt up some other feller who tries to have a good one occasionally.

QUICK ANNOUNCEMENTS FOR YOUR SCREEN

SLIDENE OUTFIT: all complete $1.00
6 bottles slide ink; 25 cover glasses; 6 special pens; 2 slide charts

Novelty Typewriter Slides ..... $3.50 per 100
Handy Slide Holder and Clip FREE.
NOVELTY SLIDE CO., 115 East 23d St., New York.

The Big Idea

is to keep your name alive.

The best way to do this is to carry a card in

"WID'S"

Wid's can be found on every executive's desk, and they are the men to reach.

Address all letters pertaining to Advertising and Directory cards to

HARRY P. DIGGS
Advertising Manager

WID'S Films and Film Folk, Inc.
510 Times Bldg., New York City

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

WILLIAM F. ALDRICH
FEATURE PRODUCER
Screen Club, 117 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO

REGINALD BARKER
DIRECTING
PARALTA PLAYS
Paralta Studio, Los Angeles, Calif.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
PRODUCER

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

WILLIAM DESMOND
TRIANGLE PLAYS
Culver City, Cal.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

HOBART HENLEY
M. P. D. A.
HOBART HENLEY PRODUCTIONS

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
GOLDWYN

LLOYD INGRAHAM
PRODUCER

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
M. P. D. A.
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
M. P. D. A.
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

HARLEY KNOLES
M. P. D. A.
FEATURES DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 D. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

JOSEPH LEVERING
DIRECTOR

O. A. C. LUND

ASHLEY MILLER
M. P. D. A.
Director—Vitagraph Studios
Brooklyn

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE DIRECTOR
FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.

WEDGWOOD NOWELL
TRIANGLE
Friars Club, N. Y. C.

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITIGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

TOM TERRISS
PRODUCER
VITAGRAPH

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
511 W. 143rd St. Audubon 1941.

JAMES VINCENT
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

BEN WILSON
DIRECTING AND STARRING
UNIVERSAL

CHESTER WITHEY
DIRECTOR

JAMES YOUNG
M. P. D. A.

WID'S
IS READ
NOT SKIMMED

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Adress—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM — A MAGAZINE — IN FACT A SERVICE

WID'S

INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS

Always Independent
Issued Every Thursday

VOL. III. THURSDAY, OCT. 18, 1917. NO. 42

25 Cents a Copy
$10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

WILL REVIEW STATE RIGHT SPECIALS FIRST IN FUTURE—AND SAY, FELLERS—YOUR "OFFICE BOY" WANTS A RAISE! WILL YOU DO YOUR BIT?

I took an hour the other day to go sit in a corner and think over the situation in reference to my work, and I don't know whether I have been properly repaid for tearing my shirt in the past two years the way I have been doing in my efforts to help exhibitors, producers and the industry in general by the service of criticism I have been giving.

I came to several rather important decisions. The first of these was to give more attention to covering State rights Special productions as early as possible after announcement, since I can readily realize that every exhibitor and every State rights buyer is more interested in knowing about productions which are offered to him as special attractions, than he is about films which he has already booked and must take or lay on the shelf, according to the condition of his bank account.

Where a man is compelled to play program releases good, bad and indifferent, I have been trying to guide him as to whether or not he should make a noise about them, but, of course, that service is really not as essential in dollars and cents to the average man as the information regarding the merits of some special film which is offered at a high rental by a salesman whom he has possibly never seen or heard of.

For the past three years—the first being on THE EVENING MAIL in New York, and the last two being on this wild-eyed sheet of mine—I have been seeing an average of 15 features a week, sometimes seeing more than 20. I would be willing to gamble that no other person in the world has seen in the last two years one-third as many films as I have.

It has been a wonderful education, and, coming after years of newspaper work and several years of practical executive experience in every branch of the film business, it has naturally given me some knowledge of film values.

I'm not trying to insist that I'm great, but I do want to emphasize that I'm a darn good "errand boy," figured on the basis of 25c a week. Just figure me as a boy who can be sent down to see a picture that you want to know about and bring back an honest and comparatively intelligent—or possibly I'd better say "experienced"—opinion on it. That's mighty low-priced help—I say!

Now, it isn't so much that I need quarrel with any of you fellers who are now subscribers, about the value of my work to you, because I'm sure there's not a single subscriber on my lists who has not at some time or other in the past two years registered emphatic approval of what I've been trying to do, there being thousands of wonderful testimonials in my files—all unsolicited.

The point is this: I have been so busy in the past two years seeing films that I have allowed this publication to grow a natural growth without ever putting over an exploitation campaign worthy of the name.

At one time in the first year I sent out some sample copies, and soon found that when a publication was selling for real money, and the average filum gink got one for nothing once in a while, he decided that he would be a poor boob to pay for it ever. He always figured that he would get another one for nothing next week if he was just a patient waiter. For that reason I quit sending out samples.

I am glad to be able to report to my friends that there has been a steady, consistent growth in the subscription list of WID'S in the past two years. I don't believe it is necessary for me to tell you that 80 per cent. of the best theatres now receive it. You know that by talking with your friends. If you don't know it, I do, and so do the exchange men.

The point is just this: WID'S is needed more by the "just good" or the "poor" theatre manager than by the "best" theatre manager—because most of you fellers can run your showshop without any advice, only you have sense enough to figure that another feller's opinion is mighty cheap at 25c. a week.

I am going to ask you now, every one of you, to get busy.

I am going to send each of you a few sample copies, and I am going to ask you to pick out the men who need WID'S most and send these copies to them, writing them a personal letter at the same time.

It won't be necessary to send samples to the best theatres. Practically all of them subscribe now. What I want is the great majority of "so-so" and "worst" theatres—although there are, of course, a lot of real fellers not yet on my lists.

For the first time since WID'S has been in existence, I have put in charge of my business office a man who has nothing to do but worry about why we haven't more subscribers. That feller is going to work regular hours and work hard, but I want your help. I don't want you to forget this; I want you to do something about it!!!!

It may sound to you like I'm an awfully sassy guy, but this is about the way the situation sums up. I have spent two years of my sweet young life battling for the good of the exhibitor, and have put a lot of real money —and it was hard-earned money—into this pet idea of mine.

Naturally, it was a long time before we commenced to break even, and I suppose if I had had "good sense" I would have quit a long time ago, figured purely from a business viewpoint—but then they say it's the fellers that haven't got any sense who succeed.

Anyway, I kept plugging at this thing because I felt that some day it was going to make a lot of money, and I conscientiously felt and soon learned to know from the word of others that there was a decided need for just the sort of service I have been trying to give.

The exhibitor, of course, has benefited more than anyone else because he is called upon to pay more for a film for one day than the subscription to my service amounts to in a year, this meaning that if he dodges one bad boy in a year, he has made money.

But I am glad to say that the producers, the individual directors, the stars, the cameramen and practically every element in the industry has enthusiastically endorsed the work I have been trying to do as something that has helped the industry.

Very frequently—oh, yes, every once in a while—some good friend among the directors, or the producers, or the stars doesn't agree with me about what I think of some production; that is to be expected, but I am very glad to say that none of them question my sincerity and honesty.

Of course, the chances are that you have had salesmen and those in smaller positions explain that I am eight kinds of a horse-thief because I said something they didn't like about some production, but hundreds of exhibitors have told me that they always noticed that that same salesman came back with an entirely different attitude when he had a production which had reecived a favorable review.

Well, it's unnecessary for me to argue here about that angle, because I think it's pretty thoroughly understood on all sides. Some people have told me very emphatically in the past six months that I'm a poor nut to continue working my head off in this way when there are so many big things to be done that would pay me so much more money, but, you know—I'm a little bit like a kid who has a pet or—to be "poetic," like a mother with her favorite child. I have gone through a lot to put this publication over, and now that it is over and making money I'm not in any way inclined to give it up, no matter what might be offered me, because I feel that it is doing a lot of good.

I am taking this occasion, however, to tell you fellers who are in a way my "Boss" that I want a "raise"—get me?

I have been plugging along pretty hard, staying up nights and working eighteen hours a day very frequently to keep this old service going, all at the messenger-boy's price of 25c. a week to you.

Now, I'm not considering raising the price—at least, not now—because I don't think that need be necessary at all. What I do want, however, is some thorough cooperation from you fellers in bringing into the fold those who have intended to subscribe to WID'S for a long time, but have never done it.

I also want ten bucks from those birds who have come in and "borrowed" your copies. That ain't fair, boys; think it over!

In addition—and I want you to get this: IT'S IMPORTANT!!! I want every one of you fellers to make it your business, when you go into the exchanges and meet the exhibitors you know, to ask them if they have sent in their ten iron men.

The book is making some money, fellers, and I'm not going to pull any threat about leaving you flat, because I don't think that's necessary, and most of you know that I wouldn't do it if we were still just breaking even. The point is, I am doing too much work for the money I am getting, and it's up to you fellers who are in the position of Boss, if you think my work has any account, to come through with a RAISE. It will be some time at the present rate before I get back all the money I have put into this service for you fellows and I don't want to have to wait that long. I don't think YOU want me to wait! What d'ye say?

Wid Gunning

P. S.—Remember, I told you at the first of this session that I'm going to pay my first attention to special productions from now on, trying to get them the moment possible so as to give you the dope when it will do you some good.

This may mean that I will be unable to see a few of the program productions; but, unfortunately, I'm only one gink—not six. In the past, I'll admit that I have covered the program pictures first, because as a rule it is easier to see them at stated times each week, whereas it frequently means a lot of extra time and extra work to hunt up the specials.

I know the importance to you, however, of getting a line on the special productions, and I am going to take care of it. If there's anything that you boys—any of you—have to suggest about what the service needs, let me know. I'll do my bit if you will go out and do yours.

IT'S UP TO YOU!!!!

"Brighten the Corner Where You Are"

VERY BARE BARA AS HISTORICAL VAMP WITH EXCELLENT, MASSIVE AND ARTISTIC BACKGROUND. IMPRESSIVE AS SPECTACLE, INTERESTING AS DISPLAY OF STAR, BUT NEVER REGISTERS AS DRAMA.

Theda Bara in

CLEOPATRA

William Fox Special Production

DIRECTOR.....J. Gordon Edwards
ADAPTED FROM.....Shakespeare's "Antony and Cleopatra"
SCENARIO BY.....Adrian Johnson
CAMERAMAN....Rial B. Schellinger and John W. Boyle
AS A WHOLE....Massive spectacle that impressed, with Theda muchly undressed most of the time, which combination was very interesting; although situations seldom registered as drama
STORY.....Decidedly interesting because of historical angle, but failed to impress as drama; editing could assist decidedly in building final climax
DIRECTION.....Registered excellent spectacular scenes and very artistic and impressive atmosphere from start to finish; necessary repetition of vampire situation detracted from dramatic effect, and anticipatory titles following battle marred final climax
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent, with some very artistic effects
LIGHTINGS.....Many excellent bits with some truly artistic effects; Miss Bara shown to wonderful advantage most of the time, but occasionally not well lighted
CAMERA WORK.....Splendid
STAR.....Wore many marvelous creations which left her much undressed; had time of her life vamping; if authorities let it get by, will certainly register as her greatest bit of multiple love-making
SUPPORT.....Very good and nicely balanced
EXTERIORS.....Some massive exterior sets, with atmosphere splendidly maintained; a little trimming at times would have made general impression even better
INTERIORS.....Artistic, effective and in keeping with atmosphere
DETAIL.....Very good
TIME.....Two hours and five minutes (11 parts)

PRODUCER J. GORDON EDWARDS has certainly delivered in the matter of providing a superb background for Theda Bara's supreme attempt at vamping.

As spectacle this is excellent, although not supreme, and Miss Bara's "baring" of quite considerable of herself on most every occasion will prove most interesting generally if the authorities decide that it's all right because Cleopatra did it.

As drama this doesn't make much of an impression. It fails to stir and never hits a tempo that brings you to the edge of your seat to watch the swinging action. The one opportunity for this, which was the battle of Actium and the scenes showing the rushing Roman troops hurrying to Alexandria, was killed utterly by a number of titles which anticipated what was to come, so decidedly that there was no interest whatever in the scenes, except to see that they used a lot of people.

The first of these errors came immediately after the title "The Battle of Actium." We naturally expected to see a scene of action following that title, but instead had a long shot showing a lot of boats which seemed unreal, because we hadn't been started into the atmosphere of this naval battle. Following that first title we expected action, and if we had immediately been given a closeup scene of crews of two ships battling, with the other scenes following, which showed Cleopatra's boat and the long shots of the entire battle, the effect would have been decidedly better.

Then, beginning with the title which told of Cleopatra's flight, we had a number of titles registering the fact that all was lost and that the Romans were victorious, after which we had a lot of very effective stuff showing the battle still on, which of course was discounted by the titles which had said that it was all over. Then we had the situations of Cleopatra thinking Antony dead, with his return, followed by the scene where he was told that she was dead, which caused him to commit suicide.

During all of this action the Roman army had been rushing upon Alexandria, but the titles told us that it was all over but the shouting. If this entire last sequence had been so titled as to hold the question as to the success of the naval battle until the end, and then keep in the minds of the audience the fact that Cleopatra and Antony might withstand the Roman army at Alexandria, the suspense would have been decidedly better, and then it could have been explained that the death of Antony, robbing his and Cleopatra's army of a leader, caused easy defeat.

Of course, I understand that this situation is history, but I'll tell you that not one in a thousand knows the details of it, and certainly it is legitimate to create an element of suspense by showing your action without telling what is going to happen in titles which kill any interest in the scenes except as considered from a spectacular viewpoint of seeing thousands of extras chasing around.

I don't suppose that anybody really cares whether this is good drama or not. It shows Miss Bara quite bare, in a wonderful background, and, despite the fact that the action slumps very decidedly at times, the production is big enough to make anyone feel that they have surely seen an unusual and decidedly distinctive production.

The death of Cæsar was rather well handled, and some of the dramatic situations were well played, but there was that unfortunate and unescapable repetition of Cleo's love-making, which tended to weaken the effect of the various individual scenes.

The supporting cast was more than satisfactory. It was decidedly well balanced and all of the parts were played in such a manner as to please anyone. It was quite noticeable that Albert Roscoe, who played the part of Pharon, had been wearing a modern cut bathing suit this summer, because when he appeared before Cleopatra for the first time, stripped to the waist, two well-defined streaks of tan were in evidence. Surely something should have been done to offset this, because his tanned shoulders will make everybody think of the beach, losing entirely the atmosphere of Cleopatra's riding thru the streets.

In the cast were Herschel Mayall, Thurston Hall, Fritz Leiber, Hector V. Sarno, Art Acord, Henry de Vries, Genevieve Blinn, Dell Duncan and Dorothy Drake.

The Box Office Angle.

This will undoubtedly make a mint of money. It is big enough as to atmosphere and spectacular effects to register as a production, and it will only be necessary to announce Theda Bara as Cleopatra and show a few of the costumes which she wears to guarantee business. Many may say that it's awful, but the chances are that they will go back a second time so that they will be able to detail fully to their friends why the aforesaid friends should not go.

Of course the historical story is a wonderful alibi and provides the necessary dignity to offset much criticism. It is a very long production, running over two hours, and consequently it will probably have to be handled as an evening's entertainment unless some change is made when they are ready to place it in the film theatres.

I believe that this will get by, however, as a special road show, because the presence of Miss Bara, a modern vamp, offsets the costume element, and the fact that it is a story of Cleopatra dignifies it sufficiently to pull many who would turn up their noses at an ordinary Bara production.

There are many places where editing would help, because at times, at the end of a scene, the crowd was allowed to close in, so that we saw how many extras were working; whereas trimming would cut this before the bare places showed—I mean the bare places on the ground—which would have made a better impressio generally. The same thing is true in this of Miss Bara' work; because there were a few scenes in which sh didn't screen to advantage. These naturally discounte some of her better scenes, and if the poorer ones coul be eliminated it would leave a much better impressio on the whole.

Be sure that you don't play up too strongly the snak death of Cleo, because this is a decided anti-climax Everyone is waiting to see the big death scene, an they of course expect Theda to let the snake crawl al over her just to prove that she's a real vamp. As it i handled, the snake is hardly in evidence to the eye— at least, I couldn't see him; and I looked pretty hard— and that gives a touch of artificiality to what shoul have been a very big dramatic climax. I'm telling yo this simply so that you won't make too much nois about that particular scene, thereby centering the attention upon it, which would result in your patrons coming out and kicking about some little thing like that whereas if you talked about the points that you know are right, centering the attention upon them, the weak spots will never be noticed.

FAMOUS RUSSIAN OPERA IS INTERESTING AT LEAST. STAR FINE.

Ivan Mozukin in

THE QUEEN OF SPADES

Russian Art—Pathe

DIRECTOR.....Y. A. Trotozanass
AUTHOR.....A. S. Pushkin
AS A WHOLE.....Atmosphere and acting make it interesting, but dramatic scenes didn't grip
STORY.....Adapted from famous Russian opera; interesting, but unconvincing
DIRECTION....Good for foreign work, although lightings at times caused bad shadows on faces
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good; except handicaps of insufficient light-equipment
LIGHTINGS.....Some very effective for sets; sometimes excellent on faces, but frequently shadows not good
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR.....Forceful personality
SUPPORT.....Some fine types; generally satisfactory
EXTERIORS.....A few very good
INTERIORS.....Some sets very fine; generally good
DETAIL.....Satisfactory
TIME.....Fifty-five minutes (5 parts)

THE fact that this is based on an opera which has been one of the favorite productions of Russia for years gives an advertising angle which helps this decidedly, particularly if you have any Russians in your community.

The story is not particularly convincing as screened, because one is inclined to sit back and admire the acting of the players rather than be convinced by the situation they are portraying.

Mozukin, who appears as the star, is a very forceful personality who dominates most any situation in which he figures. There were several very pretty girls in the supporting cast and a number of splendid types.

The plot centers around an old lady who was said to possess a wonderful secret for success at cards. We find Mozukin attempting to secure this secret from her, and when she refused to tell it he frightened her so that she died from shock. Later her spirit appeared to him and told him to play three cards in order—the three, the seven and the ace—but to play only twice, since the third time would bring misfortune.

Mozukin, at this spiritual tip, won much money in two sessions at the gaming table, and on the third he picked a card and thought that he had won again, only to find that the card which he had chosen, thinking it was an ace, was really the queen of spades. That is where the production gets its name.

It finished with Mozukin in the madhouse as a result of his experiences.

I saw this production originally in Washington, D. C., when it was shown to the Russian Commission. I can tell you that these gentlemen considered it a very, very fine production, because they appreciated particularly the fact that it was a screening of a Russian classic. The film was not in good shape at that time, however, since it was too long in footage and had some very poorly written titles. Since then the Pathe Company has cut the production and re-edited it, and, as a consequence, the impression made is decidedly better. Some of the titles were not as good as they could have been, and not exactly in keeping with the atmosphere of the production, but the general effect was very satisfactory.

The Box Office Angle.

Considering the fact that this is the second Russian production released by Pathe, and feeling that you will surely have success with this one, I think you can very safely play it up, paying all of your attention to the presence of Mozukin and the fact that this is a picturization of a famous Russian opera. This fact about the story, if plugged hard enough in your advertising, will serve as an alibi, and Mozukin makes a favorable enough impression to carry the entire offering without allowing the interest to lag.

This is different from American films in many ways, but it is also decidedly more interesting than the average American program offering, because of the atmosphere, the artists and the mere fact that it has been made in Russia. This is not as good a film as "The Painted Doll," but it is good enough to play most anywhere providing you handle the advance ads properly.

CRANE WILBUR

ART DRAMAS PROGRAM

Eye of Envy — Blood of His Father
Unto the End — Devil McCare
Just Jim

STORY AND DRAMATIC MOMENTS MISS FIRE. IT WON'T STIR THEM

Clara Kimball Young in

MAGDA

C. K. Y. Co.—Select Pictures

DIRECTOR ..... Emile Chautard
AUTHOR ..... Herman Suderman
SCENARIO BY ..... Margaret Turnbull
CAMERAMAN ..... Jacques Bizeul
AS A WHOLE....Will impress a few because of author; but majority, unfamiliar with plot, will not enthuse
STORY.....As presented, it fails to ring true or grip
DIRECTION.....Gave good foreign atmosphere and made some bits very satisfactory, but permitted overplaying with consequence that almost all important scenes missed fire
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Generally good
LIGHTINGS.....A few good effects; generally too uniform
CAMERA WORK.....Good; not distinctive
STAR.....Will impress generally, although not always photographed to advantage and frequently missed fire in big moments
SUPPORT.....No individual registered; some, by overacting, marred important scenes
EXTERIORS ..... Satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Very good for foreign sets
TIME.....Fifty-five minutes (5 parts)

TO those who have no respect for age—and, unfortunately, a very large majority of film patrons are rather opposed to the age idea when it comes to stories for the screen—this will not register as an excellent film because the dramatic moments miss fire in almost every instance, with considerable of the action painfully convenient for purposes of the plot.

The average film patron does not know or care much about who the author was if the story is familiar and too convenient. This certainly had its bad spots, considered from that viewpoint, and the scenarioist has done things to the old classic — some very unsatisfactory things.

Briefly, the plot shows Miss Young, ordered from her home after a quarrel with her father, studying to become a great singer in a city. Somehow, that thing of always going to be a great singer seems to be wished on Miss Young with great regularity.

Anyway, there "just happens" to be in an apartment next to which Miss Young was visiting some friends, a man who was from her home town. They promptly fell in love, with the result that after he told her that their marriage was a fake, she had to go out and sing on the streets to get something to eat for herself and for the chee-ild.

Later, while singing in a music-hall, two men who had at one time promised her a great future, "just happened" to be there, and they discovered her, the result being that she promptly became very famous and wealthy.

In passing, I want to say that the man of these two who played the piano in one scene was certainly an awful actor!

Thus famous and wealthy, Miss Young returned to her home town, there being a title which said: "Magda receives an invitation . . . " Since it was very evident by the subsequent action that she received an invitation, I want to again object to these "this is a chair" titles.

Naturally, all the folks were much surprised to see Magda honored by the governor, and her father asked her to come home, while the willun who had been father of her chee-ild and was now a leading official of the town, came to bring her flowers and friendship. Hearing of her wealth he wanted to marry her, but she said no, unless he would admit that he was the child's father.

After learning about the child and hearing that she had refused to marry this man, Magda's father started to shoot her, but flopped before he could make good, and then Magda walked from this scene into another room and told Thomas Holding, who had been standing around waiting for the finish in the part of a minister, that some day maybe she would marry him.

The atmosphere of the entire production showed that a lot of care had been used in having the sets and costumes right, but unfortunately the producer was anable to make the dramatic situations ring true. This was particularly so of the important scenes between Miss Young and her father, Edward Kimball.

Mr. Kimball as the father, missed fire with great regularity, and frequently Miss Young overplayed by being too emphatic.

In some of the scenes Miss Young was wonderfully beautiful, as she should have been in all, but unfortunately the lighting was not well arranged at times and she didn't show to the best advantage.

In the cast were Madame Valkyrian, Kitty Baldwin, Maude Ford, Edward Fielding and George Merlo.

The Box Office Angle

The very fact that Clara Kimball Young has been away from the screen for a few months should make it possible for you to get money with this production. It isn't as bad as "The Foolish Virgin," and it will undoubtedly give general satisfaction because of her presence, despite the fact that it falls far short of what it could have been had the director made the dramatic moments ring true. There are many big scenes in this which could have been made very effective despite their comparative familiarity.

I believe it is a safe bet for you to play this, and in advertising it I would be very careful to center all the attention upon the fact that this production marks Miss Young's return to the screen with her own company, in conjunction with the greatest producing organization in the world, etc., figuring that all of this bunk will be sufficient to create an atmosphere around this film that will make your fans afraid to criticize.

It would also be advisable to register very emphatically the fact that "Magda" was written by the famous author, Herman Suderman, because if you get this over properly you will offset a lot of criticism which would come if they had no idea as to who the author might be. Don't take it for granted that everybody knows who wrote Magda, because a large percentage of your patrons will probably have no idea as to its origin.

HEART STIRRING HAND COLORED PATRIOTIC SLIDES 25c. Each

71. If It's Worth Living Under, It's Worth Fighting For.
54. Americans Must Protect America.
95. We Are With You, Mr. President, One Hundred Million Strong.
53. Your Country Needs You.
28. American Flag.
95. President Wilson & Flag.
60. Geo. Washington.
45. The Birth of the American Flag.
70. Abraham Lincoln.
76. Spirit of '76—Reflects in 1917.
27. If It's Good Enough to Live Under, It's Worth Fighting for.
87. Pledge Allegiance.
68. Star Spangled Banner.
42. My Country 'Tis of Thee (Flag).

EXCELSIOR ILLUSTRATING CO., 219 Sixth Ave. New York City

MUCH TOO LONG PROPAGANDA MELLER THAT DRAGS BADLY

Enid Markey in

THE CURSE OF EVE

Corona Cinema Co.—State Rights

DIRECTOR.....Frank Beal
AUTHOR.....Wycliffe A. Hill
SCENARIO BY.....Joseph Anthony Roach
CAMERAMAN.....William C. Thompson
AS A WHOLE....Much, much, much too long, which made action very draggy and kept production from registering; could be made interesting problem melodrama in greatly reduced footage
STORY.....Starts with birth of the world and Adam and Eve, and then becomes "No mother to guide her" melo, with plea for legalized abortion on finish
DIRECTION.....Provided some good atmosphere touches and kept most of action within bounds, but had so much footage that sequences dragged very badly; prologue was excellent, and other spots were very pleasing
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally satisfactory, although not exceptional
LIGHTINGS.....A few good effects, but frequently just straight stuff
CAMERA WORK.....Prologue excellent and some pleasing bits; generally good
STAR.....Just routine ingenue
SUPPORT.....Satisfactory, not remarkable
EXTERIORS....Some good shots which probably would seem better if excess footage were omitted
INTERIORS.....Some very good; generally satisfactory
DETAIL..Much too much of it; a few weak spots in plot
TIME.....One hour and forty minutes (10 parts)

THE "Curse" of this is footage. I can't for the life of me understand why they blamed it on to Eve.

If about two-fifths of the excess filum were removed, leaving the production in an hour's running time, the thing would have an excellent chance of getting by; because it starts off with some good prologue stuff and deals with a problem which will interest many, providing the authorities permit it to remain in the film.

I can't feel that the production as it stands is going to work any wonderful reform along the lines suggested by its final plea, principally for the reason that it fails to ring true as drama; and I have a private hunch that those who made the production are much more interested in the possibilities of attracting the curious to the box office than they are in the possible effects of their preachment. Consequently, reduction in footage would simply make it possible to market this, where it seems to me that it is in almost impossible form at the present time.

I can't conceive any good reasons why theatre owners should want to book an hour and forty minutes of this film, since in an hour and forty minutes it would become very, very painful to almost everyone.

The first reel, which is a picturization of the book of Genesis from the Bible, has been very well done. The allegorical scenes suggesting the creation of the world register effectively, and the flashes of Adam and Eve are rather well handled, there being enough of Eve undraped to give the manager who likes to do so a chance to flash a "still" in front of his theatre.

Despite the Biblical reference attached thereto, I can't help but feel that the chief idea in presenting Eve is to make this still picture possible, because there's really no reason, according to the plot of the modern story which follows, to call this "The Curse of Eve." The modern story proves that it was the girl's mother who was entirely at fault in the matter, although it is a bit doubtful whether even a watchful mother might have saved daughter from the willunous wicked willun who lured the shero to his yacht, doped her and left her to the well-known scene of the morning after—which generally accompanies such delightful bits in similar film productions.

Although in the first two or three reels of the modern story nothing happened except the introduction of a lot of characters who continued to jockey for position, we finally got that good old favorite, the "intercepted letter" situation, and then, in turn, came the "misunderstood situation," then the "lured to the yacht," and finally the visits to the doctor's office, etc., with the big finish centered on our good old friend the trial scene, wherein the doctor and the hero were being held for the criminal operation.

Doctor and hero pleaded guilty and served their term, with the finish coming where hero joined shero when he got out of the "private home for criminals."

From start to finish this was a dyed-in-the-wool "no mother to guide her" plot. The mother in this instance was shown to be devoting her time to mission and settlement work instead of paying the proper attention to her own daughter, and, to make it more emphatic, they had mother adopt one of the mission girls, on whom she lavished her attention while she allowed her own daughter to go without advice or protection.

Considering the fact that this was really nothing more than melodrama from start to finish, so far as the modern plot was concerned, it seems to me that the players have done very well, and the director also, in making the situations acceptable. Of course, the fact that the action drags so miserably was due to the presence of almost twice as much footage as was necessary.

I can't feel that anyone will stand up for the intercepted letter situation. I'm sure that there's nothing new about the mother-neglecting-her-daughter idea. One of our oldest "regulars" is the willun luring the girl to her ruin, and surely the day is past when the courtroom scene impresses for the finish. Consequently, it would seem that the story is more to blame than anything else for the fact that this becomes very tiresome.

The usual inconsistencies developed, as, for instance, the fact that the jealous female saved all of the letters which she intercepted and kept them in a convenient place where she could present them to the hero when accused.

For some reason the innocent chee-ild shero didn't seem alarmed, after being lured to the yacht by a statement that a party of older folks were having dinner there, to learn upon arrival that there was no one on the yacht but the willun's servants. This would have made the normal female very suspicious of any drink offered her.

The real blow, however, came in the situation where we were supposed to find a prominent doctor and a well-known engineer held for an illegal operation on the evidence of only one woman, who didn't produce or identify the victim of the operation. Certainly this was impossible as a situation, and when the trial continued on this basis it didn't have a chance to register as drama. It might have been possible in such a situation to have carried on the trial without the shero appearing in person as a witness, but the district attorney and the judge would have had to have knowledge of her identity and some evidence more than the statement of one woman, which was not by any chance enough to convict.

Because of the fact that the drama misses fire, it is a serious question whether the plea at the finish for the legalization of abortions under certain circumstances will strike a responsive chord with many audiences.

The bit of atmosphere registered by the visit to the Japanese restaurant was the best thing in the production. Generally considered, the producer's work was very good, and this, edited to proper footage, possibly would make a decidedly different impression than what it does at the present time, although it could never be such a film as to register as "big."

Among those who appeared were Clarissa Selwynne, Ed Coxen, Jack Standing, Elsie Greeson, Wm. Quinn and Eugenie Besserer.

The Box Office Angle.

In the present form I would certainly advise that you should not play this. It surely doesn't justify giving up an hour and forty minutes to, and there are many changes needed to make the plot register more acceptably.

If this should be reduced in footage very decidedly and some of the rather emphatic situations eased off a bit by titling, you might play this to good business. Under no circumstances would I play it in a very high-class house where they cater exclusively to families or discriminating patrons.

None of the stars are big enough to justify your featuring them, and it would be necessary to depend almost entirely upon the name, the problem attacked (if you consider this advisable), the "No Mother to Guide Her" thought and the still pictures of Eve as she first roamed in the Garden.

WILD MIXTURE OF BURLESQUE

Franklyn Farnum in

ANYTHING ONCE

Bluebird

DIRECTOR.....Joseph De Grasse
AUTHORS.....Isola Forrester and Mann Page
SCENARIO BY.....William Parker
CAMERAMAN.....Jack Mackenzie
AS A WHOLE.....Wild combination of action meller farce and hokum burlesque
STORY.....Old situations tied together with farce and melodramatic twists that gummed it up quite some DIRECTION.....Sort of go-as-you-please style
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally satisfactory; a few good effects
LIGHTINGS.....Satisfactory, although not consistent
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR.....Very good in nut character
SUPPORT.....Quite satisfactory because of burlesque action, which excused weird stuff
EXTERIORS.....A few good shots; generally satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Some good; some ordinary
DETAIL.....Nobody will care much
TIME.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

THIS is a wild catch-as-catch-can, set-em-up-in-the-other-alley, shoot-em-quick-before-he-turns-the-corner sort of melodrama with farcical twists sticking out all around to give it a touch of mystery-burlesque which excused most anything that happened, because if you weren't thrilled you could laugh and think it was supposed to be funny. There were scads of action and quite a few good laughs, with the general result satisfactory for the fan who is willing to take the movies as they come, without being too critical as to the fine points.

Franklyn Farnum, as the nut who inherited a Western ranch provided he married the girl he loved, etc., learned about all the wild willuns who would kill him if he went after it, but still he was willing to take a chance, with the result that he had some exciting adventures upon his arrival in the West.

I won't attempt to describe the story, because it was decidedly messed up. Suffice it to say that on the finish he and the shero did the clutch and everyone else was made happy by the final unwinding of the very much tangled plot which had caused all the excitement.

The bit where they set off a wagonload of fireworks was rather a plain plant for this purpose, but it will get some laughs—which justifies its use. This reminded me somewhat of a bit of business I saw in a Western town some months ago, where a cowboy held off an attacking force from his position in a fire tower by shooting fireworks at them.

Marjory Lawrence, as the shero, tried so hard to be cute all the time that she registered very unsatisfactorily.

Claire Du Brey, as the mysterious Spanish willuness, blew into the action early, with such overplaying that she seemed to be a comedy character burlesquing for effect, but later we discovered that she was supposed to be a sure-enough Spanish girl, which discounted her early work.

However, figuring this from the general viewpoint, as I said before, it will get by with the average fan because it provides something doing and quite a goodly number of laughs.

Among those who appeared were Mary St. John, Raymond Wells, William Dyer, Frank Tokunaga, Lon Chaney, Sam De Grasse and H. M. Thurston.

The Box Office Angle.

As Bluebirds run, you can get this by if you will make it very plain that it is a wild burlesque melodrama having to do with a young man of the East who went West to take possession of an estate with his mind made up to take a chance at "anything once," because he had been told that it would be a dangerous undertaking.

It is possible that Franklyn Farnum has made some friends, and certainly any who have seen him will be more likely to consider this a good story for him than most anything he has appeared in, because he registers as a sort of nut who might tackle such an undertaking.

If you will play it up you may get the spirit of the daredevil into the minds of your fans strong enough to make 'em like this as it runs, even though they do think it's a lot of bunk before they get through. I have a hunch that your regulars will accept it as reasonably good entertainment.

It would be a good idea to lead up to the booking of this by a little teaser campaign, saying: "Would you try ANYTHING ONCE?" Just use that for several days in advance, and see if you don't start some discussion, putting the ANYTHING ONCE in capital letters each time when you use it.

FARCE MELLER WILL GET BY

HAROLD LOCKWOOD

Yorke--Metro

OLD BASIC IDEA MADE ENTERTAINING BY TREATMENT

Bryant Washburn and Virginia Valli in

THE FIBBERS

Essanay—Perfection

AUTHOR.....James W. Adams
AS A WHOLE.....Plot that held interest and had human spots; rather nicely presented
STORY.....One of those double misunderstood-situations with good twists at end; human treatment of incidents discounted age of idea
DIRECTION.....Quite satisfactory, although allowed much unnecessary footage
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally pleasing, although few effects
LIGHTINGS.....Frequently too uniform, but satisfactory as straight stuff
CAMERA WORK.....Good, without effects
STARS.....Pleasing
SUPPORT.....Some good types
EXTERIORS.....Satisfactory; no attempt for beauty or composition
INTERIORS.....Good
DETAIL.....A few bad spots
TIME.....Fifty-six minutes (5 parts)

CONSIDERING the number of times we have had the misunderstood situation between husband and wife wished upon us, it seems that an author would hardly attempt this as a basic idea for a story, and you would be inclined to think that if they did attempt it they would have trouble getting away with it. Nevertheless, in this instance we find that human touches introduced into various sequences with a nice little twist on the finish, somewhat suggestive of O. Henry's style, brings this up to the caliber of good story material, and the treatment given it along the lines Essanay has followed recently in light comedy makes the offering a very satisfactory one, which can surely be marked as decidedly better than the average program release.

Bryant Washburn and Virginia Valli were very good as the husband and wife who misunderstood one another, and the supporting cast was quite satisfactory, one or two types being good.

The plot was based on one of those things where Hubby and Wifey came to a misunderstanding of one another through the accidental presence in their home of a tramp who was taken from a freight train that had been wrecked. This individual was a dope fiend and his doctor bills were running into considerable money, while Mr. Washburn's bank account was running low.

Mr. Washburn and Miss Valli had already been planted as a young couple who were inclined to tell fibs to one another, this including Mr. Washburn's having a check book where he listed his bank account in the thousands, while, as a matter of fact, it was fictitious, it being done to keep wifey from worrying.

They tried awfully hard to keep the injured dope from settling his claim against the railroad, but the claim agent slipped in and secured a settlement for $100. Since the dope had caused them about $400 in expenses Mr. Washburn became quite some peeved.

Then Miss Valli dug up an old play from a trunk, the dope revised it and it was immediately accepted for production, while, at the same time, a lady suddenly appeared at Mr. Washburn's office and asked him to lay out the plans for her new home, which was a very big commission for him.

Mr. Washburn saw his wife with the man who was to produce the show, and she saw him with the woman who was to have the plans made, which made each suspicious of the other, and so they proceeded in secret. There were a number of incidents developing this misunderstanding, and then finally we came to the blow-off on the finish. The night the show was produced the newspaper printed the fact that the play had been written by the wife of the architect who had recently built such a beautiful home, this newspaper item smoothing out complications for both. The taxi finish was well handled, and I think will register as a good bit.

There were several slips in this which most anyone will question. The first was the item as to whether any railroad company would consider paying a claim to a tramp stealing a ride on a freight train who had been injured in a wreck. I'm no lawyer, but I have a hunch they wouldn't.

In the second place, the newspaper insert announced that the critics thought the show was going to be a great success, when, as a matter of fact, the newspaper was shown to the wife on what was supposed to be the opening night, before the play had gone on. Nothing was said of a preliminary performance, and it would have been just as satisfactory had the insert referred to the opening of the play without any comment as to what the critics had said, because the manger afterwards came along and pantomimed what a success it had been.

The third slip was the fact that the exterior of the theatre where this first-night performance was being held had posters announcing another show. It surely should have been easy to have found a theatre where no posters would have appeared, because most any fan will catch this slip.

There's one item that will probably trip up most anyone, particularly those familiar with the theatrical business—as it did me. We saw the man who was supposed to be the leading producer of the country read a letter and register much joy, whereupon he immediately dug out the manuscript submitted by the wife. The natural assumption was that this was the letter she had written accompanying the manuscript, and everyone will say that they usually register anything but joy at the receipt of a new manuscript from an unknown author. This point was covered, however, on the finish by the knowledge that the letter was from the dope who had revised the play, it appearing that the dope was a very well-known author of some time back who had been in such a position that the producer was very much in his debt because of some event in his life before he went wrong.

The sudden appearance of the female at the office of the architect to hand him such a large commission was also explained by the fact that she was the daughter of the dope, who had spent much money trying to reform him and now didn't know where he was, the inference being of course that he had sent word to her to do something for the architect.

The Box Office Angle.

As program releases go, I would say that this is excellent compared with the average. Frequently there seemed to be unnecessary footage, but the average fan will never question this, because there are enough bright spots to carry the production along. The story is old stuff as to basic idea, but it has been humanly handled, and I believe will be pleasing, particularly because the twist at the end will send them out with a feeling that they have seen something new.

Bryant Washburn's name should get you some money because of his previous pictures, unless you happen to be in a section where his prestige was injured by his recent trouble with the exemption boards. You will of course know whether or not this has affected your community. Personally, I am inclined to believe that it will not interfere with his drawing power.

Since Virginia Valli is co-starred in this, I think you should call to the minds of your patrons the previous pictures in which she has figured, these being "Filling His Own Shoes" and one or two others in which she worked with Mr. Washburn.

In advertising this in advance you might use lines something like this: "Did you ever lie to your wife?" Carry that for several days before you say anything about "The Fibbers." You might also say: "What is the difference between a FIB and a LIE?" mixing these two lines up. It is rather essential that you use this FIB reference so that the name "THE FIBBERS" will register when you pull it.

MECHANICAL OBVIOUS MELLER THAT FAILS TO IMPRESS

Ethel Barrymore in

LIFE'S WHIRLPOOL

Rolfe—Metro

DIRECTOR	Lionel Barrymore
AUTHOR	Lionel Barrymore
CAMERAMAN	John M. Bauman
AS A WHOLE	Unconvincing meller of obvious story fairly well handled
STORY	Husband of convenience proved cruel, with result that wife is suspected when he is murdered
DIRECTION	Generally satisfactory, but slipped at times
PHOTOGRAPHY	Satisfactory; not distinctive
LIGHTINGS	A few good effects, but generally ordinary
CAMERA WORK	Satisfactory, but varied
STAR	Will get by
SUPPORT	Some overplayed; none stood out
EXTERIORS	Satisfactory; a few beautiful shots
INTERIORS	Satisfactory
DETAIL	Some scenes badly handled; generally acceptable
TIME	Fifty-three minutes (5 parts)

THERE was a serious handicap hung on to this from the start, in that the story was an obvious, ordinary mellerdrammer, almost mechanical in its development and certainly unconvincing as to dramatic strength. The situations were handled reasonably well except in a few instances, but the thing hasn't a chance to register as forceful drama with the more intelligent patrons.

Those who care for meller may consider this quite satisfactory, because we have a murder with the heroine suspected, and several clashes between husband and wife, with other scenes where unkempt brutes menace the heroine.

Left alone by her father's death, Miss Barrymore married a wealthy neighbor for convenience sake, but she soon learned that he was harsh and rather cruel.

Almost immediately they planted the abused tenant, who we knew would later return and kill the husband so as to make room for a clutch between the young doctor and the wife, since the young doctor went away to France, because he loved the girl who had married.

The murder came in due course, following the scene between Miss Barrymore and her husband, from which she fled, carrying her child. Then she was suspected of the murder, with a posse in pursuit.

Asking a ride from a couple of drunken roughnecks, she was taken to a house in the woods and attacked, with the result that she shot and killed one of the men just as the posse came up. Meanwhile, her tried-and-true friend, who had loved without avail, found the hat which the murderer had conveniently dropped as he climbed out of the window, and, wandering about the city, he "just happened" to stop in front of a saloon where the murderer was inside, in a drunken condition, yelling for his hat.

They had a very bad mob scene in front of the jail where Miss Barrymore was brought in, the extras behaving very poorly, and then of course the madman was dragged in and a confession forced, which made it possible for the freed wife to greet the young doctor who had just returned from France for the finish.

This sort of a plot reminds me of the days when they used to sit down after dinner and write the story that they were going to go out and "shoot" the next day, with speed as the main object. Certainly most any fan will be two or three reels ahead all the way—which is bad business!

There's nothing sufficiently distinctive about the offering to offset this story defect, and Miss Barrymore lacks a certain something which would make her personality register on the screen in a manner to win a larger following. Her work is inclined to be cold and mechanical, the suggestion being that she may be thinking her part but surely not feeling it.

Reginald Carrington, as the husband, overplayed rather decidedly in his more important scenes, and while the others were satisfactory, there was little for them to do.

Alan Hale, as the young doctor, had a half-dozen scenes, his being one of those stick-around-for-the-finish parts.

Others who appeared were Paul Everton, Ricca Allen, Frank Leigh.

The Box Office Angle.

Ethel Barrymore's name may pull you some business, although it is impossible for me to advise you regarding that, since she had done very well in some Metros, and not so well in others. This production will never build her any following, it being plain movie meller, and so it would seem to me to be quite advisable to pass this by for something better in case you are able to reach out and grab something.

After patrons have been stung a certain number of times by these stars of the stage they lose considerable respect for them as screen artists.

The story is so ordinary that it would hardly be advisable to say anything about it or the production, in the event that you intend to play it. The wise thing to do would be to "soft pedal" decidedly and talk only of the star.

ERNEST STERN, Inc.
THE TITLE MAN
Specializes in
MOTION PICTURE TITLES
OF THE HIGHEST GRADE
729 Seventh Ave., New York - - Phone Bryant 8973

CHARACTERIZATION IN BURGLAR WHITE SLAVE MELO WELL HANDLED

Dick Rosson in

CASSIDY

Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Arthur Rosson
AUTHOR.....Larry Evans
CAMERAMAN.....Roy Overbaugh
AS A WHOLE.....Interesting "Redlight district" action with good characterizations
STORY.....Rough criminal plot that interested
DIRECTION.....Put over points strongly and gave lots of good bits that registered
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Some good rainy night scenes that showed "some" rain
LIGHTINGS.....Very good—which added much to atmosphere
CAMERA WORK.....Very good
STAR.....Took the part of a T. B. and surely looked helpless
SUPPORT.....Very good throughout—especially the dog
EXTERIORS.....Mostly rain shots
INTERIORS.....Very good
DETAIL.....Usually good; allowed a slip or two
TIME.....Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

CASSIDY was a boy who was sick and broke in San Francisco. He wanted to get back to New York and Mamie before he cashed in. He decided to rob a house, and, as he was an amateur at the game, he picked the wrong house to start with—that of the district attorney, who happened to be waiting up for his daughter.

Cassidy was captured in the house, and when the district attorney learned that he was sick and that he was trying to get home before he died, he provided him with sufficient funds to go.

In the meantime the daughter took a taxi at the station and was taken to the saloon of the boss of the tenderloin, where she would have been murdered were it not for Cassidy's intervention. He rescued the girl and took her home, dying from a wound received in the fight before morning.

There were a number of good touches in this, and, taken as a whole, it was a good film with interesting characterizations. It is a question if most of your patrons will appreciate this because of the robbery, the white slave stuff and the death of the sympathy character on the finish.

There were many night scenes registering "some" rain. It came down in sheets and torrents and it surely did make Dick Rosson look bedraggled and wo-begone, and, although he did quite a lot of coughing, I don't believe he overacted his part. He did overplay somewhat while in the home of the district attorney, but I believe this will be overlooked without comment.

There were a couple of bad detail spots. The wire from the daughter to her father was printed instead of typewritten, and Cassidy didn't see the district attorney, who was seated in a chair within four or five feet of him.

The types were well chosen throughout, Dick Rosson carrying the burden with a very fine characterization of the poor sick boy without friends or money. The ward boss, the bartender and the cadets were all "real," and the black-and-tan dog of Rosson's certainly added a lot to the general atmosphere.

Among those who appeared were Frank Currier, Pauline Curley, Mac Alexander, Eddie Sturgis and John O'Connor.

The Box Office Angle.

I believe that the name "Cassidy" is good enough to pull some business if you will play up the fact that Cassidy was a New York boy who had never been given a chance until he was nearly dead from hunger and T. B.

Even though you are able to create some interest in this picture, it is a question as to whether your patrons will be greatly pleased with it. It is certainly full of scenes that hardly go with the idea of light entertainment, which is in demand now.

The fight in the saloon will pass, because fans have come to expect such things in present-day films; it has become customary and I don't believe anyone will mind if this is rough.

You surely ought to know if you can play such an offering.

FOREIGN PRODUCTION OF OLD CLASSIC THAT WILL PLEASE

Helene Hesperia in

CAMILLE

Foreign Production—Hanover—General Film Co.

AUTHOR.....Alexandre Dumas
AS A WHOLE.....Creditable presentation of well-known story in foreign atmosphere by foreign players
STORY.....Screen version is combination of book and play
DIRECTION.....Followed foreign technique, but held attention and registered some good scenes
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Good straight stuff
LIGHTINGS.....No attempt for effects
CAMERA WORK.....Good—although without American technique
STAR.....Beautiful woman; a little bit large but gives excellent characterization
SUPPORT.....Well balanced cast played satisfactorily
EXTERIORS.....Satisfactory; not distinctive
INTERIORS.....Good; not exceptional
DETAIL.....Acceptable
TIME.....Sixty-seven minutes (6 parts)

SEVERAL years ago Hesperia, who has been one of the famous beauties of Europe, appeared in a number of foreign films which were released by Warner's Features, Inc. She is practically unknown, however, to present-day fans.

"Camille" is of course an old standby that has been played and played by rep shows, stock companies, etc. for many years. Undoubtedly the cast of French players making this production in France present it with the proper atmospheric touches.

Except for the absence of American technique, effective lightings, closeups, etc., this is a very good picturization of the old classic. Figured from the viewpoint of the average patron, I believe this will be a satisfactory offering, although it will not register as favorably as it would have had the production technique been nearer what the fans are accustomed to.

Hesperia is a beautiful woman, but is somewhat large which fact detracts somewhat from the first impression although she manages to overcome this as she develops her characterization, so that on the finish anyone is sure to admit that she is a very capable actress.

The cast was rather inclined to use French gestures—which, of course, is only natural—and this, to a certain extent, decreases the effectiveness of the offering in this country. There are some dramatic moments that register very satisfactorily, however, and on the whole I believe that this production is one that can get by anywhere, providing you make it clear that it is a foreign film featuring a European star.

I would not attempt to play this against the Theda Bara "Camille" on a basis of suggesting that the production is as good, but you can of course go as far as you like in speaking of the individual work of Hesperia, because there's bound to be a difference of opinion as to the characterizations, and Hesperia certainly does very well considering the handicap of production methods.

The Box Office Angle.

The fact that this production of "Camille" has been kept under cover until another has been placed on the market gives it additional value according to results in the past under similar conditions. We have had several instances, such as the "Romeo and Juliet" and "Carmen" clashes, where Mr. Fox figured, and in both cases I think each concern did more business with its respective productions than they would have done had they come out alone. For that reason I can't see that this film can help but benefit by the fact that it is being offered at this time when the Bara "Camille" is just out.

I would suggest that you concentrate all of your advertising upon Hesperia.

LIGHTINGS, ATMOSPHERE AND STAR IN MOVIE PLOT

Vivian Martin in

THE TROUBLE BUSTER

Pallas-Paramount

DIRECTOR.....Frank Reicher
AUTHORS.....Tom Forman and Gardner Hunting
SCENARIO BY.....Gardner Hunting
CAMERAMAN.....James C. Van Trees
AS A WHOLE.....Fairly interesting but unreal, being action with no characterization
STORY.....Girl-boy newsie makes funny statue which brings fame and fortune; one of those "do it in the movies" things
DIRECTION.....Gave artistic lightings and generally satisfactory atmosphere, but failed to make action ring true
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent
LIGHTINGS...Some very effective and generally artistic
CAMERA WORK.....Pleasing
STAR.....Pleasing little personality handicapped by unreal situations
SUPPORT.....Extras very artificial; principals inclined to "act"
EXTERIORS.....Satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Generally very good
DETAIL.....Satisfactory
TIME.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

THE customary pleasing lightings and artistic atmosphere of a Pallas production are in evidence in this, and we also get the winsome personality of Vivian Martin, who has become a favorite in many localities despite the fact that most of her productions have had the same fault—the stories have been painfully unreal.

In this Miss Martin, a foreign waif left alone in this country by the death of her father, puts on boy's clothes and sells papers, living in a store-box with a young roughneck newsie, who befriended her.

They introduced the well-known "lured to the room and attacked by the willun" situation, after which the boy chum was beaten up by the wicked wun, which sent him to the hospital, with the result that he became blind.

Meanwhile Miss Martin had molded a funny little statue, which she took to the art exhibit, where it immediately won for her fame, fortune and much publicity. Thinking that the blind boy needed the money more than she did, since a kind-hearted lady had adopted her, Miss Martin gave the credit for the statue to her blind chum and disappeared, supposedly in fear of a hard-faced "charity woman" who showed up at the home of her benefactress.

They then used a lot of footage before the boy recovered his eyesight and returned to find Miss Martin, who was traced by the fact that she had moved the old piano box in which they had lived out to the place where she now worked as maid.

To make it a little harder they had brought the crook back into the story, and he was levying blackmail, such as it was, from Miss Martin, in order that it be not known that she had made the statue, which had brought fame to her friend.

I would say that the average audience would sit through this and enjoy some of the lightings and a few bits of business without ever having any impression other than "Don't they do queer things in the movies, and why do they always have the same sort of situations for the villain to figure in?"

Miss Martin played, as she generally does, with some little cute tricks and always photographed charmingly, but the support didn't ring true at any time.

The Box Office Angle.

This is about on a par with the sort of production you used to get on the regular Paramount program, because it has the same old weakness of unconvincing plot. To be true, the atmosphere and lightings were better than many other producers deliver, but the thing doesn't register as anything except a lot of footage.

It depends entirely upon the attitude of your patrons to Miss Martin, whether or not you can afford to play this. In case you are going to use it, you might stir up a little interest by lines of this sort: "Did you ever own a Billiken? Then you should see 'The Trouble Buster' that Vivian Martin has made."

I may be all wrong, but I have a hunch that if those little statuettes can be made cheaply enough, the thing could be put over as a novelty because of the advertising received through this picture, particularly if some nimble liar was willing to say that Miss Martin had really made the thing. I don't feel that the statue could bring fame and fortune as shown in the picture, but I do think that the advertising it could receive through the connection with the production and through the suggestion that Miss Martin had made it, would sell a lot of them. If you think so, maybe the Paramount Office will do something about it.

QUICK ANNOUNCEMENTS FOR YOUR SCREEN

SLIDENE OUTFIT: all complete.....$1.00
6 bottles slide ink; 25 cover glasses; 6 special pens; 1 slide charts

Novelty Typewriter Slides.....$3.50 per 100
Handy Slide Holder and Clip FREE.
NOVELTY SLIDE CO., 115 East 23d St., New York.

HUMAN TOUCHES AND TWISTS MAKE THIS PLEASING

Alma Rueben and Walt Whitman in

THE FIREFLY OF TOUGH LUCK

Triangle

DIRECTOR.....E. Mason Hopper
AUTHOR.....J. G. Hawks
CAMERAMAN.....Charles Stumar
AS A WHOLE.....Story twists and characterizations make old basic situations entertaining
STORY.....Registered some excellent touches and remained interesting, giving old stuff new twists
DIRECTION.....Handled situations nicely to make this a somewhat different mining-camp story
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Just good; never distinctive LIGHTINGS.....Satisfactory; little attempt for effect
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STARS.....She, pretty and appealing personality; has excellent possibilities... He, excellent characterization
SUPPORT.....Very good
EXTERIORS..Fitted atmosphere; some quite well chosen
INTERIORS.....Satisfactory
DETAIL.....A few very good touches
TIME.....Fifty-seven minutes (5 parts)

WE have had a good many stories centered around the Western mining camps in the last year, but this one has some new twists that makes it different. While it isn't a remarkable film, it certainly is an entertaining subject, and, because of the treatment of certain scenes, I think it is decidedly better than the average program release.

Alma Rueben is a very pretty girl who has an appealing personality and the sort of face that lingers in your memory, so that she should, if given the opportunity, become a favorite in a short time. Walt Whitman gives an excellent characterization of an old desert-rat who believed that he knew where gold was, so thoroughly that he finally found it, and with these two carrying the burden of the story, many of the scenes were decidedly worth-while.

The plot had to do with a little dancer who lost her job and was offered a position in a mining camp out West, with the result that when she landed at her destination we knew that she was headed for a deserted town which had no other inhabitant than the old desert-rat who insisted that some day the old burg would come back into its own through the discovery of gold nearby.

The dancer left a no-account husband in the East, and the author dropped a hero from a private car, in a stewed condition, so that hero could find the dancer unconscious from thirst in the desert and carry her into the deserted town, where both were rescued by the desert-rat upon his return.

We had some good scenes between these three before a gold discovery nearby brought a new population to the town, which was followed by the discovery of gold by the old man, which gave them all an interest in the mine.

I want to register that I think the discovery of gold as handled in this was by far the best treatment of such a situation that I can remember from any film. It seemed real and wasn't one of those things where they stick a pick in the side of the hill and then throw up both hands and say: "We're millionaires!"

When things got going beautifully, with the town a'humming, they brought in the no-account hubby from the East, and again I want to thank the director for not having Miss Rueben, who was on the stage when hubby entered, recognize him at once with a dramatic start. That's what they generally do, and that is one of the many reasons why I say this is different.

Finally hubby got nasty, however, and then tried to steal some ore, and, as a consequence he was ordered out of the town. The girl insisted that she must go with him into the desert, and so they started out together. In the night the no account hubby stole what money the girl had, took the water supply of both and tried to do a getaway, with the result that he landed in a canyon infested with rattlesnakes, where he came to a fitting end after friends had discovered the deserted heroine, which made it all regular and provided the customary clutch between hero and widow.

The faith of the old desert-rat in his deserted town, the little show given by the friends in the deserted opera house and similar touches made this entertaining. There was considerable comedy, and I believe the entire production registers very satisfactorily. The young husband was rather actory, and Charles Gunn missed fire on one or two of his scenes, although for the most part he was a very pleasing hero.

J. G. Hawks, the author, deserves credit for taking this old atmosphere and giving it some new twists, and certainly the director and the stars helped it along.

The final bit of sending Miss Rueben away with her husband into the desert, is probably a dramatic twist, but it didn't really ring true, since it seemed that when they get that far most everyone will have the finish doped out, and this was only trying to fool 'em a little bit longer.

The Box Office Angle.

As program productions go, I would say that this is decidedly better than the average. Miss Rueben has done some very good work in Triangle releases in the past, and you will probably find that a number of people have been impressed a little by the recent characterizations of Walt Whitman.

The thing you'd best do on this is to talk about these two personalities and then center the attention upon the story idea, in a line something like this: "Supposing everyone deserted a mining town and you still had faith in the possibility of finding gold near—would you have nerve enough to stick there alone? See THE FIREFLY OF TOUGH LUCK."

WHAT THEY ALL SAY!

(Excerpt from letter of C. F. Mensing Amusement Co., October 1, 1917)

"The score thing is a big success and adds much to the picture, and most of all, a variety of selections that a country leader has not available."

Beynon's Service Will Help You Too!

WRITE RIGHT NOW.

GEORGE W. BEYNON

505 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

TRULY DELIGHTFUL; ONE OF BEST CLARK'S EVER MADE

Marguerite Clark in

BAB'S DIARY

Famous Players—Paramount

DIRECTOR.....J. Searle Dawley
AUTHOR.....Mary Roberts Rinehart in S. E. P.
SCENARIO BY.....Martha D. Foster
CAMERAMAN.....Lewis W. Physioc
AS A WHOLE.....Delightful light comedy; a "smiley," "chuckle" film
STORY.....Made up of human touches hung together by satisfactory thread of farce developed around old situation
DIRECTION.....Gave classy atmosphere, excellent lightings, delightful little touches and centered attention upon clever star
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Excellent; really distinctive LIGHTINGS.....Artistic; some quite effective
CAMERA WORK.....Excellent
STAR.....Very pleasing indeed
SUPPORT.....Good
EXTERIORS.....Satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Very good
DETAIL.....Some nice touches
TIME.....Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

CERTAINLY this is the sort of film that will pull 'em away from the fireside, and I know that that's the sort needed today.

Marguerite Clark is always clever, but I can't remember of having seen any better vehicle than this—even "Miss George Washington."

Based upon the quaintly misspelled statements of the Sub-Deb who refused to remain subservient to the older sister, we found action developed in this which was delightfully farcical and at the same time kept from becoming too broad to be refined and capable of being classified as light comedy.

In almost every one of the excerpts from the Diary we found at least one misspelled word, and the proof of the success of this method of securing laughs rests in the fact that not a single one of them got by without that ripple which runs through a house, quietly registering the fact that the point has gone over.

Truly, this was a "chuckle film"—one of the "smiley" kind that makes you feel like the world is worth while again, no matter how grouchy you might have been when you arrived at the theatre.

The central situation of the adventure recorded in this has to do with the idea of Miss Clark talking about an imaginary lover to stir up the family a bit. This idea has been used quite frequently before, but the author has given it a twist by providing a friend who recognized the fake photograph being used by Miss Clark, with the result that he dug up the original and hired him to pretend to be the imaginary personage that Miss Clark had told her family was to be her husband.

This brought complications, which ended with Miss Clark running away from a dance at the country club to enter the apartment of the impersonator of the imaginary person in an effort to recover a letter she had written. After getting into the wrong apartment and having an amusing mixup with another nice man, the two were caught by the accidental setting-off of a burglar alarm, and the little star was carried home in an ambulance after having been ducked in a bathtub.

The police did show up very, very suddenly after the burglar alarm got in action, but since the thing had become farce by that time this is excusable. Except for that point, the action dovetailed very nicely all the way.

This film was really almost a solo for the star, and her admirers will appreciate this fact very much, because when they like a star they generally want to see them on the screen most of the time. The atmosphere provided was surely artistic, and the lightings were excellent.

The supporting cast was well balanced and satisfactory, but none of the characters stood out decidedly. It was Miss Clark's picture from first to last, her bits of business being helped materially by the very clever titles and inserts.

There was one back drop which loomed up for a minute where Miss Clark came home after buying the violets, which should be and could be eliminated. It is a scene where she opens a door, and it is entirely unnecessary. Such little touches are only technical errors, but it is surprising how many people will pick them out, and in such a beautiful picture as this there's surely no need of using such a flash.

In the cast were Frank Losee, Nigel Barrie, Leonora Morgan, Isabel Madigan, George Odell, Jack O'Brien, Richard Barthelmess, Helen Green and Guy Coombs.

The Box Office Angle.

I can tell you that this is one of the best Marguerite Clark productions that has ever been made. I think it is as good as "Miss George Washington," and in some ways better, and you know that that's "going some!" The thing holds from start to finish, with enough smiles, chuckles and laughs to keep you in constant good humor, with the result that the general effect is wonderful.

Since the "Sub-Deb" stories have had Saturday Evening Post circulation, I would think that this should be a sure-fire S. R. O. proposition. You can certainly go to it strong in your advertising, and if anybody doesn't like this you ought to refuse to allow 'em in your theatre again—because they're just nacherally joy-killers!

There's one place where "The Rosary" figures in the action, and you should tip your organist regarding this, so that he will be ready to take proper advantage of the situation, playing "The Rosary" all the time where Miss Clark is supposed to be hearing it from a Victrola.

I don't have to tell you anything about Marguerite Clark. You know what you can do with her if you have a production around her, and I can guarantee to you that this is "some" production. It's the sort of film which will make new friends for the film business and rescue some of the thousands who are beginning to feel that producers have forgotten how to make worthwhile stuff because they have happened to see a lot of bad ones in a row.

"Brighten the Corner Where You Are"

BING BING MELLER DISCOUNTS EXCELLENT HUMAN BITS

William Duncan and Carol Holloway in

DEAD-SHOT BAKER

Vitagraph

DIRECTOR ..... William Duncan
AUTHOR ..... Alfred Henry Lewis
AS A WHOLE....Wild meller at first and last, with some good human stuff in between STORY.....Provided excellent characterizations and some splendid titles, but as screened had very poor situations
DIRECTION....Failed to make dramatic clashes convince, which cheapened production
PHOTOGRAPHY....Satisfactory for Western; not artistic
LIGHTINGS..... Acceptable; frequently only fair
CAMERA WORK..... Satisfactory
STARS.....He, typical Western sheriff; she, pretty but overacted
SUPPORT..... Some excellent types
EXTERIORS..... Several good Western shots
INTERIORS ..... Satisfactory
DETAIL..... A few good touches
TIME..... Fifty-seven minutes (5 parts)

FROM the few flashes of intelligence registered by the scenes that put over characterization bits, it would seem that the Wolfville stories have some excellent material in them, but in this instance we find the picture jazzed in the first reel by a lot of wild melodrama that was very impossible, so that it took some time for the good bits of business that followed to counteract this impression. Then, unfortunately, on the finish they went right back to wild melodrama with a few more impossible bits, so that the net result after seeing the offering will be an impression that it was just a Western.

In the very first of the film we find a hold-up where a man is shot so that he staggers and falls down a great embankment, the natural inference being that he is dead, and yet this man climbs back up and runs on foot several miles, keeping up with a lot of horsemen who are pursuing the bandits.

This is followed by the situation where the heroine immediately recognizes an old bum as her father when this bum is shot, despite the fact that a previous title stated that she thought she was being kept in school by a very wealthy, worth-while parent.

Such things as this give a production a black eye at the start, and it took about two or three reels of rather pleasing human bits to commence to win back with this story. There was nothing new about any of the situations from start to finish, but we had a lot of little bits of business that were good, and some of the titles, taken from the book, were excellent. Other titles—surely not from the book, were very poor.

On the finish we had one of those wild-riding chases, with the hero surrounded in the cabin at the end, from which he killed most of the bandits by emptying one repeating rifle after another at them. For some reason these extras all approached the cabin from immediately in front of the door, so that they could be shot in turn, there seeming to be no thought in their minds that they might surround the place. I haven't read the Wolfville stuff for a long time, but I'm quite sure that Alfred Henry Lewis wouldn't wish such a situation as that on a well-meaning public.

William Duncan was satisfactory as the sheriff, although there was nothing about his performance to distinguish it particularly from many other similar characterizations, and the chief credit for any entertainment value must go to the few little situations which registered a laugh because of the treatment and the titles, most of these having to do with extra types.

Carol Holloway was quite satisfactory as long as she only had to look pretty and stick around, but in a few dramatic situations she overplayed very decidedly.

Others who appeared were R. L. Rogers, Otto Lederer, Charles Wheelock, J. W. Ryan and S. E. Jennings.

The Box Office Angle

You may be able to get this by, by announcing it as a picturization of one of Alfred Henry Lewis's "Wolfville Stories," but I wouldn't go too strong in talking about the production, because it is just average melodrama of the Western type There's action at the start and finish that moves but doesn't register, and the whole thing will get by but no one will ever enthuse over it.

It would seem that these stories would have provided excellent material for Bill Hart if there are many little touches in them similar to the few recorded in this. At first the action and the situations were time honored, but there were a few bits of business and some titles that will register anywhere.

PATRIOTIC COSTUME PRODUCTION RATHER WELL HANDLED

Alice Brady in

BETSY ROSS

Peerless—World

DIRECTORS..... Travers Vale and George Cowl
CAMERAMAN ..... Max Schneider
AS A WHOLE..... Good for costume play
STORY..... Sister marries without proofs; husband to be shot and saved by star DIRECTION..... Made it fairly human
PHOTOGRAPHY..... Fine
LIGHTINGS ..... Fine
CAMERA WORK..... Very good
STAR.....Helped the production and photographed to advantage
SUPPORT..... Very good
EXTERIORS.....Good except studio "exterior" of shop
INTERIORS..... Good for atmosphere
DETAIL..... Left chair in one scene that hurt
TIME..... Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

WE have in this a very good costume play which has been produced along historical lines in a manner which will bring quite a little popular applause, due to the appearance of the flag, and the excellent portrayal of George Washington by George McQuarrie.

The story told of Miss Brady as Betsy Ross, and of her sister who married an officer in the British army secretly. When their father found out that the sister was soon to become a mother and that she had no wedding certificate to prove that she had been married, he cast her out of his home. She went to the shop of Miss Brady and was there cared for.

In the meantime her husband had resigned his commission in the British army and was trying to get in touch with the Colonial forces, all of which time he was taken for a spy. Finally he arrived at the house of Betsy Ross and was concealed there. General Washington received a letter designating the resignation of the husband, and so he immediately enlisted with the American army and cleared up the points involved.

All of the sets were quite good, especially the shop presided over by Miss Brady. It had lots of good furniture of the period desired, and the only bad thing that I saw in these scenes was the bit showing the studio exterior with the chair standing in front of the shop, which looked very much as if it had been left there carelessly by someone.

The lightings generally were very beautiful, showing Miss Brady to excellent advantage.

Miss Brady has here one of the best productions she has been given recently, and the supporting cast was much better than we usually find in World films.

Among those who appeared were Justine Cutting, Nellie Fillmore, Victor Kennard, John Bowers.

The Box Office Angle.

I think that you will find this very pleasing to most of your patrons. It has atmosphere, good lightings, a good title and quite a capable cast.

Miss Brady's name should pull business, because she is very well known, and this is probably the best thing she has made since "Bought and Paid For."

I would certainly make mention of "Bought and Paid For" in my advertising, because many people may remember some of the pictures Miss Brady has recently appeared in that haven't been as good. Also talk about Miss Brady having recently signed with the Select company, to be starred in her own producing organization.

This is made up for patriotic appeal, and you can go after that end of it to bring in quite a lot of business. I don't believe it will be necessary to tell most of your patrons who Betsy Ross was, but it might be a good idea to mention the fact that she was the woman who made the first American flag.

The local Daughters of the Revolution and Sons of Veterans should be particularly interested in this film, because it holds close enough to historical facts for you to boost it to them as a special attraction.

CRIPPLED PLOT AND OVERPLAYING KEEP THIS DOWN

June Elvidge and Arthur Ashley in SHALL WE FORGIVE HER?

Peerless—World

DIRECTOR ..... Arthur Ashley
AUTHOR ..... Charles Sarver
CAMERAMAN ..... Jacques Monteran
AS A WHOLE ..... Muchly used story, poorly done
STORY ..... Betrayed girl who is blackmailed finally finds happiness with husband
DIRECTION ..... Allowed cast to overact and added nothing new to the story
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Just fair
LIGHTINGS ..... Nothing to speak of
CAMERA WORK ..... Acceptable
STARS ..... She, good; he, overacted too much
SUPPORT ..... All overacted
EXTERIORS ..... A few good
INTERIORS ..... Did not add to the production
DETAIL ..... Some slips
TIME ..... Fifty-six minutes (5 parts)

IN this production we have a lot of old junk that we've all seen time after time, and there's absolutely no chance for it to ever get under your shirt or make any one feel any sympathy for the girl who is misused. We certainly don't get into intimate relations with any of the characters, and although Miss Elvidge tried hard to put her part over she was dragged down by the exaggerated emotions of the rest of the cast.

Miss Elvidge was the innocent country girl who went to meet her lover, Arthur Ashley, in the West, and found him changed from the boy whom she was engaged, to a drunken ruffian. She escaped and was later married, only to have the first man spring up for blackmail. Of course, he finally told the truth about Miss Elvidge, and she found happiness with hubby.

This story is certainly old enough to need a pair of crutches, and the handling isn't good enough to warrant any plugging on your part to get any one into your theatre to see it. The dramatic scenes were marred by the overplaying of nearly all the members of the cast, and I must say that the hand-to-the-throat emotions registered by most of the principals got tiresome after a few repetitions.

They had one funny point where a poor thirst-craving miner was found by Miss Elvidge, he having three small bags of gold-dust, and they stated in the title that he was going to establish himself in business in New York with this gold-dust. Later we found that he had a brokerage office, and if he was able to start on this small capital, I'll say that he surely must have been SOME businessman!

In the first of this film where Miss Elvidge was a country girl, the scenes were laid in present-day atmosphere, but we found Miss Elvidge curtsying to a man there. I may be wrong; they may do it in some parts of the country, but from where I come, country girls don't do that any more'n they do it here.

In the fight between Miss Elvidge and Ashley she hit him over the head with a bottle, and he certainly went to sleep easily from that light tap! It didn't convince. There's one more point that I want to mention, that being the place where the maid gave the baby an overdose of medicine—as they stated in the title, INTENTIONALLY. I couldn't for the life of me see how they figured it as "intentional." There was no explanation given on that point at all.

In the supporting cast were John Bowers, Richard Collins, Captain Charles, Arthur Matthews, Herbert Barrington, Katherine Johnston, George MacQuarrie and Alexandria Carewe.

The Box Office Angle

This is certainly a good one to pass by. If you have a discriminating audience I would never consider this for their entertainment. It lacks all the intimate touches necessary to make it ring true, and the story is certainly not there.

If you are compelled to play this one I would certainly slide it through without any noise, and be prepared to hide in the bushes while your patrons are coming out. If they don't kick on this, you're certainly in a position where you can run almost anything and get away with it.

An Exclusive Photoplay Trade Journal.

Published Weekly.

THE CANADIAN MOVING PICTURE DIGEST

100% Circulation in Canada.

Orpheum Theatre Bldg. Montreal, P. Q.

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

WILLIAM F. ALDRICH
FEATURE PRODUCER
Screen Club, 117 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO

REGINALD BARKER
DIRECTING
PARALTA PLAYS
Paralta Studio, Los Angeles, Calif.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
PRODUCER

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

WILLIAM DESMOND
TRIANGLE PLAYS
Culver City, Cal.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING
PATHE PEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

JACK HARVEY
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
M. P. D. A.
HOBART HENLEY PRODUCTIONS

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
GOLDWYN

LLOYD INGRAHAM
PRODUCER

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
M. P. D. A.
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
M. P. D. A.
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

HARLEY KNOLES
M. P. D. A.
FEATURES DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 D. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

JOSEPH LEVERING
DIRECTOR

O. A. C. LUND

ASHLEY MILLER
M. P. D. A.
Director—Vitagraph Studios
Brooklyn

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE DIRECTOR
FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.

WEDGWOOD NOWELL
TRIANGLE
Friars Club, N. Y. C.

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITIGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

TOM TERRISS
PRODUCER
VITAGRAPH

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
511 W. 143rd St. Audubon 1941.

JAMES VINCENT
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

BEN WILSON
DIRECTING AND STARRING
UNIVERSAL

CHESTER WITHEY
DIRECTOR

JAMES YOUNG
M. P. D. A.

WID'S IS READ NOT SKIMMED

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Adress—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM A MAGAZINE—IN FACT A SERVICE

THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM

WID'S

INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS

Always Independent
Issued Every Thursday

VOL. III. THURSDAY, OCT. 25, 1917. NO. 43

25 Cents a Copy
$10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

EXCELLENT HUMAN TREATMENT AND GREAT KID STUFF PUTS THIS OVER

Winifred Allen in

THE MAN HATER

Eastern Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Albert Parker
SUPERVISED BY.....Allan Dwan
ASSISTED BY.....Thomas F. Tracey
AUTHOR.....Mary Brecht Pulver
CAMERAMAN.....Roy Vaughn
AS A WHOLE....Excellent human touches and delightful kid stuff make this truly entertaining
STORY.....Characterizations centered around slender thread of developing love in wife who had married for bargain by arousing jealousy
DIRECTION....Registered some very fine human touches, both pathetic and humorous, and had plenty of delightful bits of kid stuff
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very pleasing, with some effective bits
LIGHTINGS....Several excellent; generally satisfactory
CAMERA WORK.....Very good
STAR.....Pretty and decidedly pleasing
SUPPORT.....Several excellent characterizations; kids very funny
EXTERIORS.....Good village atmosphere
INTERIORS.....Several very effective; generally satisfactory
DETAIL.....Some good touches
TIME.....Fifty-two minutes (5 parts)

ALTHO this is a "Saturday Evening Post" story, we must realize that this is one of the best recent examples of the fact that more can be accomplished on the screen with characterization than with action.

Stripped down to the skeleton, the plot of this had to do with the daughter of a drunkard who left her home when her mother died, and agreed to marry a blacksmith who had offered to wed her under any conditions. She took her older sister along and bargained to wed without giving any love. The blue-shirt hero eventually won her by making her jealous thru two fake letters, and the coincidence of an old friend moving back to town whose name was Lucy. He had signed the name of Lucy to the letters and did take his friend to a church sociable, which aroused the love which had been slowly developing in the man-hater's heart.

Certainly this was a slender thread to build a five-reel production on, but the treatment has lifted it so decidedly that no one will worry about the lack of action and dramatic situations. Considerable footage is used leading up to the death of the drunkard's wife and the agreement of the man hater to marry the blacksmith. All of this was very effectively handled. A number of kids figured in various sequences, which took up considerable footage and will certainly bring many laughs and scores of chuckles from any audience. The youngest of these kiddies, who was put thru several stunts in eating, was surely a bird. He will win anybody—even if he did look at the camera once in a while.

We find in the part of the oldest of the children the daughter of Anna Lehr, who is well known as a star, and this youngster is the happy possessor of a pair of dark eyes very suggestive of her mother. She played very naturally in a number of comparatively difficult scenes.

Miss Allen in the part of the drunkard's daughter who became a "man hater" because she judged all men by her father was decidedly effective. I believe it is the best thing she has done, and certainly it will win for her quite a following. She was photographed to advantage and appeared very pretty in almost every scene. Many difficult little touches were registered with just the proper expression to make them ring true.

Jack Meredith as the village blacksmith did an excellent bit of work. He kept the character manly and at the same time bashful, without overplaying at any time.

The remainder of the cast was quite satisfactory. Those who appeared were Jessie Shirley, Robert Vivian, Harry Neville and Marguerite Gale.

The Box Office Angle.

You may have to plug this somewhat in order to stir up extra business, because Winifred Allen has not had enough good films to permit of her having a large following, but you can safely tell them that it is a decidedly enjoyable and exceptionally human little small-town story which will surely please. The kid stuff alone will lift this and justify it with most anyone, because, to my mind, a dozen sure-enough hearty laughs is good measure in most any routine program five-reel film.

There are a number of human touches which will register, and the general treatment of the situations and characters is such as to send the average audience out with a feeling of having seen a pleasing little story. I would emphasize particularly in my advertising the fact that this has been produced from the "Saturday Evening Post" story of the same name, by Mary Brecht Pulver. You will find that that carries considerable weight, and if you will back this up with the statement that it has some very funny kid stuff and some human characterizations, it should pull right well.

This is another one of those productions which will help you register, in a campaign of advertising, your own theatre as always having a good show if you are so situated that it is impossible for you to get many of the big stars.

HAROLD LOCKWOOD
Yorke--Metro

ARTISTIC, HUMAN AND IMPRESSIVE BUT TOO LONG AND SLIPPED IN SPOTS

William Farnum in

THE CONQUEROR

Fox—Standard Special

DIRECTOR.....Raoul A. Walsh
AUTHOR.....Henry Christeen Warnack
SCENARIO BY.....Chester B. Clapp
CAMERAMAN.....Dal Clawson
AS A WHOLE.....Entertaining and very impressive at times but excess of hokum and detail errors in war stuff weakened general effect; could be trimmed to advantage
STORY.....Planted hero as historical figure; then dwelt too much upon immaterial incidents, with battle scenes registering detail errors
DIRECTION.....Registered artistic and impressive atmosphere, scores of very human bits and made spectacular scenes decidedly impressive, but permitted some detail errors
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent; many very artistic shots with fine composition for exteriors and artistic lightings on interiors
LIGHTINGS.....Showed presence of artistic eye
CAMERA WORK.....Very fine
STAR.....Forceful, dominant personality fitting character
SUPPORT.....Some excellent types; generally very satisfactory; Dog a dandy
EXTERIORS.....Some very artistic shots with particularly pleasing composition
INTERIORS.....Maintained atmosphere, and generally pleasing
DETAIL.....Generally excellent but bad in battle scenes, with one or two other slips
TIME.....One hour and thirty minutes (10 parts)

PERSONALLY, I feel quite sure that the average theatre owner prefers productions which do not run an hour and thirty minutes if it is possible to keep them under that footage, and I think that this film will be much more pleasing if reduced somewhat in length.

As it stands it is entertaining and decidedly impressive at times, but there is one basic weakness in the fact that preliminary titles explain that the hero, Sam Houston, was one of the nation's prominent figures, and then we find that there is an excess amount of footage devoted to attempts to register comedy business, mixed in with scenes developing Mr. Houston's career up to the point where he saved Texas from the Mexicans on the finish.

One of the early titles says that that story is supposed to explain the mystery of his affair with Eliza Allen, but that it is based on fiction—not fact—which excuses the fact that most of the action in which Mr. Farnum figures might relate to any character of that period; but this title doesn't excuse the too frequent attempts at comedy relief.

I believe everyone enjoys comedy relief when properly handled, and in this an excellent percentage of it registers; but the fault was that the laughs came too often. Producer Walsh follows the technique of working entirely by episodes, which is very fine, but there seemed to be too much attention paid to getting laughs, which frequently detracted from the main thread of the story. This would have been most satisfactory if the production had not been centered around an historical character, or if the film didn't run an hour and a half. But with those two thoughts in mind, I believe it would be advisable to trim out some of the comedy bits and hold more closely to the development of the career of Houston.

The general atmosphere was impressive and quite artistic. In most of the scenes the detail was very good and the composition decidedly artistic. There were excellent types and we had enough action to hold the interest nicely.

In the battle scenes we found some very effective spectacular bits, but even the average school-child will be rather shocked to see the excessive use of high explosives throughout these clashes. In the days which were being pictured they used cannon which fired cannonballs, and didn't employ high explosives as pictured. There were one or two other slight errors which may never be noticed, one of these being the presence of what certainly appeared to be an upright piano.

The story, aside from the historical points, was rather slender. Stripped of the very fine treatment given it by Producer Walsh, it would have been wofully weak. The author, on the finish, led up to the good old faithful situation of willun trapping shero in a room, where they struggled while hero came to the rescue. It seems that this situation works into about two-thirds of the films being made at present, and I do hope they'll find some substitute for it soon.

The long shots showing the sweeping charge of the Indians in the battle sequences were quite effective, and the scenes of the nuns assembled in the convent were exceptionally artistic as to composition. From a spectacular viewpoint some of the night battle scenes were exceptionally well handled for effect.

In the early part of the offering we had a great many scenes in which a yaller dog figured. He was a wonder! He registered all of his stunts without a hitch and certainly will win any audience.

Some coon characters gathered a few laughs, but in one place we had about 150 or 200 feet in a sequence having to do with one of these coons and a lot of animals. While it gathered a few laughs, it seemed to run too long without a break, since there was absolutely no connection between this hokum and the story itself.

The general selection of types was very pleasing, and Mr. Farnum made his characterization stand out as he always does, because his forceful personality dominates most any situation.

Charles Clary, as the blue-blooded willun, was very satisfactory, although it was quite a jolt to find him suddenly switched down into Mexico as the leader of the bandits, in order that he could be kept in the story.

Jewel Carmen was pretty and gave a characterization of the selfish heroine quite in keeping with the part.

The Box Office Angle.

By explaining that this is a story of the life of Sam Houston, one of the most picturesque characters in American history, you should be able to do a splendid business, because William Farnum, who portrays this part, is a favorite most everywhere. The combination of Mr. Farnum's name and the historical connection, and the fact that this was produced by Raoul A. Walsh, who made "The Honor System," should guarantee results at the box office.

I would particularly emphasize, however, the fact that this is a story of Houston, because that gives an historical touch which at the present time should be decidedly valuable. Our country is at this moment greatly interested in American patriots, and the man who saved Texas from the Mexicans certainly registers as one of our great Americans.

You might prepare them to receive this in the proper frame of mind by emphasizing in your advertising that this production shows the human side of the mysterious romance in the life of this great patriot as presented by the author, Henry Christeen Warnack.

I know that you could do more business with this in the average film theatre, were it reduced somewhat in footage; but, even in the present length it should please, particularly if you emphasize the Houston angle.

Be prepared for some criticism on the use of explosives in the battle scenes, but the chances are that a goodly majority of your fans will never think of such an item, and they will likely consider the spectacular scenes "great stuff."

Reference to Raoul Walsh's big film, "The Honor System," should help plant the proper impression in advance of this offering.

GOT AWAY TO FINE START, BUT FLOPPED AT THE FINISH

Juliette Day in

THE CALENDAR GIRL

American—Mutual

DIRECTOR.....Rollin S. Sturgeon
AUTHOR.....Julian Louis Lamothe
AS A WHOLE.....Had enough smiles to get it by, but plot weakened sadly towards end
STORY.....Early situations delightful, but threat to expose misunderstood escape jarred against light comedy action
DIRECTION.....Generally pleasing; little attempt for effects
LIGHTINGS.....Generally good on close-ups and satisfactory on long shots
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR.....Pretty and pleasing at times, but rolled her eyes and played to camera too much
SUPPORT.....Several good types
EXTERIORS.....Bathing scenes interesting; generally satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Good
DETAIL.....Satisfactory; some good touches
TIME.....Fifty-five minutes (5 parts)

THE first three or four reels of this was very pleasing, because it ran along as light comedy with a touch of romance that held the attention, and if it had been continued in that strain instead of shifting into the melodrama with the willun who threatened to expose shero's supposed escapade, it would have been a very pleasing offering. This threat upon the part of the willun shifted the action from semi-farce into rip-and-tear meller quite suddenly, and, unfortunately, it was given no opportunity to recover.

The story centered about a poor but blue-blooded shero who was sent to the beach by a shrewd lady for whom she posed as a clothes-model, to show off a fetching bathing-suit. She attracted quite some attention and was chased about by a reporter and a persistent young man who wanted to sell her boss some calendars, for which he was trying to get a picture of shero in the bathing-suit.

Shero, in escaping, took refuge in an auto which "just happened" to belong to hero, and he calmly drove away with the machine while she was hiding therein. Upon announcing her presence, he told her that he knew she was there all the time, and asked her where she lived. Shero pretended to live in the first house, and was let out there. This caused hero to write to that address and request an audience with the owner, who happened to be an old maid.

Shero's boss then "just happened" to send her to this house with the old maid's dress. In passing I want to say that the old-maid character was badly overplayed and badly made up—which was unnecessary, since the girl doing the part could have looked it without any make-up at all.

When hero arrived, shero did an escape by a window, which was seen by willun, who had been conveniently sent to the spot by his mother, the shero's boss.

With the issuance of the calendars we found hero hunting for shero, and then the Jane that hero had jilted was told by willun about shero's supposed escape when he saw her climbing from a young man's window. The jilted Jane told hero of this, but shero explained, as did the embarrassed and very bashful young man through whose room shero had made her hurried exit when hero arrived at the old maid's house, and so all was lovely for the clutch on the finish.

This was light comedy with a touch of farce that provided quite a goodly number of smiles and chuckles up to the time that they pulled in the accusation against shero. That caused it to slip very decidedly, because this was played seriously, with the willun trying to pull some doity woik.

Miss Day is rather pretty when lighted to advantage, and she had some very good close-ups, but unfortunately she showed a decided tendency to roll her eyes and play to the camera.

Lamar Johnstone, who will be remembered by you old exhibitors as one of the most promising of our leading men six or seven years ago, when he was starring for Eclair with Barbara Tennant, appeared as the han'som' willun. It is quite a puzzle to me that Mr. Johnstone has never advanced, because he certainly has "appearance."

Ashton Dearholt as the wealthy young hero was quite satisfactory.

Others in the cast were Clarissa Selwynne, Ruth Hanford, Fritzi Ridgeway, Cora Drew, Kathleen Kirkham, Sherry Hall and John Gough.

The Box Office Angle

The manner in which they led up to the planting of the shero's picture on the calendar, which made it possible for the hero to start in search of her, made this sufficiently pleasing to have it register as a satisfactory program offering. The slump at the end can't keep it from pleasing the average audience.

If Miss Day could be kept from working the camera in a self-conscious manner so much, I believe she might be developed into a good program star. As yet I doubt if her name is worth anything at the box office, and so I cannot see that this has any value except as a possible filler.

As a query on this, you might say: "Did you know that you could sue any one who used your photograph for money-making purposes against our will?" Use that for several days and you will surely start some arguments.

"Brighten the Corner Where You Are"

VERY WELL HANDLED DRAMA THAT SLUMPED AT END

Emily Stevens in

THE SLEEPING MEMORY

Rolfe—Metro

DIRECTOR.....George D. Baker
AUTHOR.....E. Phillips Oppenheim
SCENARIO BY.....Albert Shelby Le Vino
CAMERAMAN.....Ray Smallwood
AS A WHOLE.....Started out wonderfully, but slumped at end; treatment of first half exceptionally good STORY.....Held perfectly until hit reincarnation visions and then slumped, although interesting throughout DIRECTION.....Generally effective, with treatment of some incidents exceptional; allowed final sequences to miss fire
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very pleasing; some decidedly effective
LIGHTINGS.....A few very effective and artistic bits; generally good
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR.....Excellent, registering dual characterization quite effectively
SUPPORT.....Very good; Mills excellent
EXTERIORS.....Generally well chosen; a few quite distinctive
INTERIORS.....Very good
DETAIL.....Good, although vision scenes unimpressive
TIME.....Seventy-seven minutes (5 parts)

BY the handling of the very first incident in this, Producer George Baker wins you, and for the first three or four reels Miss Stevens and the entire cast make a decided impression. The treatment of this portion of the production is excellent, and the scenes register very effectively.

Unfortunately towards the end the plot sags because it becomes rather obvious and decidedly melo. There are several visions which aren't really impressive as pictured, and the action of the story proper registers a number of violent incidents that miss fire somewhat because of this violence.

The general impression will be that this is quite a worthwhile offering, because it has been produced in a rather distinctive atmosphere, with a good cast and a story that dealt with an important problem, even though it did miss fire towards the end.

The treatment given the various incidents by Producer Baker helped decidedly in creating this favorable impression.

Opening with a situation where Miss Stevens found herself an orphan, with her father a suicide after having misappropriated funds, we see her giving up the money which had been placed in her name, to take a position in a department store. We then had the well-known attack by her employer, followed by her joining the down-and-out club rather than accept the invitation from a very wealthy customer who had told her that if she was tired of life he wanted her to come to him, if she was willing to gamble for the luxuries that wealth might provide.

This wealthy man (Frank Mills) was a millionaire surgeon. Her distress finally caused her to give up and come to his home, only to learn that he didn't want a mistress but a subject for a surgical operation which was a dangerous experiment. This operation was an attempt to make the patient lose her memory in the hope that, by hypnotism, reincarnation could be proved.

A friend from England having sent his daughter to the surgeon, and aforesaid daughter having been lost on a torpedoed ship, Mr. Mills introduced Miss Stevens as the young lady from England. The operation was successful, and when her former fiance and a man who had fallen in love with her while she was at the store, called her by her own name, she couldn't remember them.

By this time Mr. Mills had fallen in love with Miss Stevens, which brought difficulties. He refused to go ahead with the hypnotic experiment, but another surgeon did, with the result that we saw in visions how Miss Stevens related of three former existences. Since these previous lives had been decidedly strenuous, the agony of telling about them was quite trying upon the young lady, and when Mr. Mills discovered what was going on he indignantly denounced his surgeon friend. This man, however, announced that he intended to carry on his experiments, and we found him as the menace forcing Miss Stevens to do his will.

The gink from the department store who had fallen in love with Miss Stevens now served as the proper tool to rid her of the surgeon who was hypnotizing her, and we saw these two fall from a cliff to their death, which liberated Miss Stevens from the hypnotic influence.

Then they pulled a French surgeon into the action, and he performed another operation which restored to Miss Stevens the memory of everything preceding the first operation, without any recollection of what had happened since. That made room for the clutch.

Up to the time when we found that the original fiance of Miss Stevens was only a blackmailer—which of course took him out of the running as a possible lover—the production was excellent, since the story was holding beautifully. From that time on the end was obvious and the rather violent melodramatic incidents did not impress particularly.

Being called upon to portray a dual personality characterization, Miss Stevens had considerable emotional work to register, and she did this very satisfactorily. Mr. Mills was excellent, and the scenes between these two were decidedly pleasing.

The treatment of the time-honored bit of the employer's attack was good and it took away somewhat from the old routine. In the visions of the previous existences the action failed to impress, and in the Viking scenes particularly, the tights worn by the star and other young ladies sort of detracted from the effect.

Mario Majerone was impressive, and the man in the role of the floorwalker madly in love with the shero, made his part stand out.

The Box Office Angle

Emily Stevens has done some decidedly worthwhile dramatic productions, and I believe that you can do some business with this on the strength of her reputation from past performances. It would be advisable to mention the presence of Frank Mills, because he has played many satisfactory leads and undoubtedly has many friends. Mention of Producer George D. Baker, the director, with reference to one or two of his better productions, such as "The Tarantula" and "The White Raven," would certainly help.

There is plenty of advertising material here, if you want to build this as a sort of mystery subject, since you can conduct a teaser campaign along several lines. Use for several days the question: "Do you believe in REINCARNATION?" Again, you might say: "Do you know that by hypnotism scientists have been able to have persons tell of previous existences? See 'The Sleeping Memory.'" You might say: "What would you do if you had performed a dangerous scientific experiment upon a girl, causing her to lose her identity and her soul, and then discovered that you were in love with her?" Fortunately, they have omitted the unnecessary detail of hospital scenes, to which many people object. Because of the fact that this offering slumps off quite a bit towards the end, I would not play it up too strong, but certainly the generaly treatment has made it register as somewhat better than he average routine program "movie."

GOOD CHARACTERIZATIONS CARRY THIS UNTIL UNNECESSARY BAD ENDING

THE STAINLESS BARRIER

Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Thomas N. Heffron
AUTHOR.....Louis Schneider
SCENARIO BY.....Jack Cunningham
CAMERAMAN.....R. E. Irish
AS A WHOLE.....Quite pleasing because of human, convincing treatment up to arrest of crooks and murder of promoter; then missed fire because of unnecessary situation
STORY.....Operations of a Wallingford with assistance of young dupe in small town, with bad twist at end where sacrificing sister falsely confessed
DIRECTION.....Made action interesting, convincing and entertaining by human touches and treatment up to arrest sequence; unable to make trial register
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Good, straight stuff
LIGHTINGS.....Few attempts for effects
CAMERA WORK.....Very good
ACTING.....Well balanced cast, registering good characterizations
EXTERIORS.....Fitted atmosphere
INTERIORS.....Very good
DETAIL.....Some fine little touches
TIME.....Fifty-five minutes (5 parts)

THIS thing demonstrated beautifully for four reels what intelligent treatment and good characterizations can do with a well-known situation.

We found the Wallingford willun and the weak-willed dupe entering a small town to trim the dupe's friends, put over in such a manner as to make it convince because of the little touches and human bits of characterization. It went along beautifully until the time came for the getaway, which developed into a fight in which the weak-willed youth killed the Wallingford character. The other crooks were captured, and then we had a trial scene with the boy charged with murder.

This seemed absolutely all wrong to me, since it was known that he had shot the Wallingford character because that worthy was trying to do a getaway with the money of his friends, which certainly should have justified the killing on the same grounds that anyone would be justified in killing a burglar. No reference whatever was made to this, however, and we found the defense offered by the sacrificing sister that the dead man had ruined her.

This brought a verdict of "not guilty" from the jury, and then arter the young district attorney, who was in love with the sister, finally discovered the truth by making the boy confess, he allowed him forty-eight hours to escape, and they pulled the clutch.

Certainly this would be a much more satisfying picture if the entire trial episode were omitted, with the production ending with the capture of the crooks and the scene showing the brother going away to make good because he realized that it would be hard for him to immediately regain the confidence of his friends in the village, whom he had betrayed once because he feared that the willun would turn him over to the postal authorities thru having mixed him up in a previous illegal promotion plan.

The general atmosphere was quite satisfactory, altho there was little attempt for distinctive artistry or unusual photographic effect. The photography was good straight stuff, and the attention was concentrated upon the players, their characterizations and the situations, rather than he atmosphere iself.

Rowland Lee as the weakling handled this part effectively, making it decidedly convincing. The other principals were all quite satisfactory, with Henry A. Barrows making the Wallingford type stand out.

Others in the cast were Tom S. Guise, J. Barney Sherry, John Lince, Kate Bruce, Jack Livingston and James Farley.

The Box Office Angle.

This will probably please despite the bad twist at the end, which some people may accept without questioning why the two crooks who had been arrested were not quizzed as to why the boy had shot the promoter. The first four reels are human enough to put everyone in a frame of mind which will justify and excuse the trial scene at the end, in case they do object to it.

You have no personality to star in this, and consequently I cannot feel that you can afford to use it as anything except a filler. The public is not yet educated to the point of turning out in droves to see just a picture when there is no star, director or story to bill heavily.

Of course, if you have built your theatre reputation—as you certainly should do!—to the point where they expect a good show always, you can safely use this without worrying about the lack of a so-called "star." To my mind, there are only a few stars who actually pull a lot of extra money to the box office of an established theatre in these days.

CRANE WILBUR
ART DRAMAS PROGRAM
Eye of Envy
Unto the End
Blood of His Father
Devil McCare
Just Jim

Beynon's Scores Will Solve Your Musical Problems. Reasonable. Untaxable.
Write
GEORGE W. BEYNON
505 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

PLEASING STAR IN COMEDY MELLER WITH UNFORTUNATE BACKGROUND

Billie Burke in

ARMS AND THE GIRL

Famous Players—Paramount

DIRECTOR.....Joseph Kaufmann
AUTHORS.....Grant Stewart and Robert Baker
CAMERAMAN.....William Marshall
AS A WHOLE.....Satisfactory as light entertainment if audience willing to forgive comedy set in atmosphere of German invasion of Belgium
STORY.....Adapted from unsuccessful play based on forced marriage of shero to hero to escape Germans; combination of meller and farce that was marred by tragic memories of Belgium
DIRECTION.....Kept action moving without excess incident, and registered goodly number of laughs, but was working under handicap
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very pleasing
LIGHTINGS.....Some good effects, sometimes too uniform
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR.....Pleasing in light comedy, but seemed absolutely unaware of supposed atmosphere of story
SUPPORT.....Quite satisfactory, although comedy General rather uncanny
EXTERIORS.....Satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Good; railway station well handled
DETAIL.....Satisfactory
TIME.....Fifty-five minutes, 5 parts

IT seems rather unfortunate, in a way, that this should be presented with so much comedy in evidence, in consideration of the fact that this story was laid in Belgium just as the Germans were advancing. To be sure, there was a bit of melodrama injected, but the general trend of all the action was comedy, this being particularly true because Miss Burke registers in light comedy without ever at any time being very convincing in melodrama.

Nearly everyone thinks of Belgium and the German invasion with the feeling of considering it one of the world's greatest tragedies. It seems rather bad taste to make fun of this in any way, and certainly the character of the German general here is straight comedy, which jars most decidedly when we consider the fact that the German generals in Belgium were anything but comedians.

The plot had to do with Miss Burke being stranded in a Belgian village by a misunderstanding as to when her train left, with the result that a Russian spy stole her passport and escaped, leaving her in an inn, where lived an American engineer, when the Germans arrived. The American tried to obtain the Russian woman's passport and was caught in the act, which threw suspicion upon him. Miss Burke was saved by the fact that one of the German officers had been head waiter at the Ritz, so that he recognized her, and then she tried to save the American by saying that he was her fiance.

The German general made them marry at once, and then we had some comedy business in reference to their being sent to the same room. The real fiance arrived, which brought complications, and then the hero pulled a little meller by killing the guard to get his uniform and then binding the fat German general so that he was helpless.

They were discovered as they were about to escape, and the American was shot as the Germans moved on, but was only wounded in the arm, and he found an automobile which the Germans had left in the village, with which he rode in safety to France with his suddenly acquired wife. I have a hunch that no automobiles were left loose by the advancing Germans when they came through Belgium.

Miss Burke was pleasing, in that she was photographed to excellent advantage in most of the scenes, but she certainly slipped near the end when she donned a porter costume, presumably a disguise, because she couldn't resist the temptation to pull a little hair down on each side so that it would show from under her cap. This was in keeping with the musical comedy characterization which she gave throughout. At no time did Miss Burke seem to realize that she was supposed to be playing scenes in the midst of a great tragedy. She had the smiling self-confidence of the musical comedy star at all times.

George S. Trimble as the fat German general registered the comedy business required very satisfactorily, but surely it was a mistake to make this character a comedian. Thomas Meighan was very satisfactory as the hero who had to stay in the background as much as possible in order to give the star the proper opportunities.

The general atmosphere was satisfactory, and the treatment of the railway station was excellent, since it registered as a sure-enough foreign station. Unfortunately, the opening scene was one which has been used at least 100 times in various productions, it being the well-known little dam, which has a water wheel on a small structure at one end. The minute you see it, you will remember it. I think most fans will recognize it at the first glance, which of course is bad, because it certainly does not make you think of Belgium when you are trying to remember the last picture in which you saw this particular location. The very last scene in the production did not help Miss Burke's score any, because she was not lighted to advantage and did not appear nearly as beautiful as she had in the other parts of the film.

In the cast were: Louise Adele Bates, Malcolm Dunn, A. Bower and William David.

The Box Office Angle.

This is rather a weird proposition, because it is not particularly successful as a farce and is certainly not thrilling as melodrama. The comedy element discounts the possibility of referring to the historical connection of the German advance across Belgium, and while you can probably play this and get it by without serious criticism, I am quite sure that your audiences will have a feeling that those responsible should have had a little better judgment than to place comedy situations in the midst of the most tragic event of this great war, which we are now involved in.

It is pretty hard to bill this as anything but comedy, because it is known that Miss Burke is a comedienne and plays almost altogether in comedy productions, and so it would seem to me that you are taking your choice of letting it ride as just a film with Miss Burke starred, or concentrate upon it being a comedy melodrama, dealing with some of the confusion which occurred at the beginning of the war. This has been adapted from a play which appeared on Broadway, but the play was not enough of a success to make very much noise about. I would state, however, that it is a picturization of a play, because that may alibi you to a certain extent on the story itself.

INTERESTING MELLER WITH MYSTERY AND SURPRISE TWIST AT END

Evart Overton in

THE BOTTOM OF THE WELL

Vitagraph

DIRECTOR.....John S. Robertson
AUTHOR.....Frederick Upham Adams
SCENARIO BY.....Eugene Mullin
CAMERAMEN.....William McCoy and Jules Cronjager
AS A WHOLE.....Interesting melo mystery centered around old idea of capitalist living with laborers to understand demands, with surprise finish
STORY.....Has action and good final situation where millionaire is on trial for having murdered himself
DIRECTION.....By good lightings and generally satisfactory treatment held interest, keeping surprise well under cover for ordinary fan; allowed a few slips
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good; had some fine spots and some poor spots
LIGHTINGS.....Many effective; generally very satisfactory
CAMERA WORK.....Varied, but satisfactory
STAR.....Satisfactory hero
SUPPORT.....Very good; Cooper's disguise a decided change
EXTERIORS.....Satisfactory, altho home didn't look English
INTERIORS.....Good
DETAIL.....Satisfactory
TIME.....Fifty-nine minutes (5 parts)

WITH considerable action necessary to build up to the final situation, this seems a little slow at times, but fortunately it builds towards the end into a dramatic situation which, by a twist, is completely explained, permitting of our well-known happy ending.

For the wise fans who know Bigelow Cooper from having seen him in quite some film productions, there will not be so much mystery to this, because they will immediately recognize him as the wealthy capitalist when he shows up in the club of the workmen. I have a hunch, however, that the average patron will not spot him so readily, and in that case the finale will have a good surprise punch.

In any case, this can certainly be considered as an interesting melodrama which holds satisfactorily because of the personalities of the players and the treatment given certain incidents by the director. Unfortunately there are a lot of scenes registering people walking in and out, but these will be accepted because they are all building to the ultimate clash between the capitalists and the workmen.

Ned Finley and Herbert Pryor, as the two old men who cared for Evart Overton when he was a youngster, gave excellent characterizations, and Bigelow Cooper gave a splendid performance as the crabbed old capitalist who finally decided to investigate conditions among the workmen for himself.

Mr. Overton was a satisfactory hero, but I must fuss seriously about the fact that in one place he rushed in to call a couple of young ladies out of a house which was to be blown up, and we saw him promptly don his hat in the house after giving them the warning. Why he should have done this, or should have been permitted to do it, I can't understand.

The general atmosphere was satisfactory, and occasionally we had some good lightings, but there was little that could be called distinctive artistry, and there were not many attempts for effects. The exterior shots which were supposed to register a home in England were rather pretty but didn't look like England, the grounds being typically American in appearance.

As the plot developed and the workmen blew up the capitalist's home, we found our friends all arrested for the capitalist's murder, since a charred body was found in the ruins. After the jury had brought in the verdict of guilty, we discovered that one of the accused was the missing capitalist himself. He explained the presence of the body by the statement that he had been working on surgical experiments for some time and for this purpose had secured a corpse from a hospital. Some people may object to this means of planting circumstantial evidence of the death of the missing man, but it is not given undue prominence and surely isn't nearly so bad as a number of similar thoughts which have been worked into recent releases.

It was also disclosed at the trial that the hero was not the son of the smuggler, as had been thought, but the son of a wealthy banker from Boston, from whose home he had been kidnapped as a child. Truly an original thought!

Among those who appeared were Agnes Ayres, Adele de Garde, Alice Terry and Robert Gaillard.

The Box Office Angle.

Certainly I wouldn't say that Evart Overton's name will pull particularly at the box office, but I believe that you can get some business by mentioning him together with Bigelow Cooper, Ned Finley and Herbert Pryor, all of whom are old favorites.

As program releases go, this is quite satisfactory, because it is interesting as melodrama and has a mystery twist which justifies much of the rather ordinary action leading up to it.

If you will bill this along comparatively mysterious lines you should get by very satisfactorily. For instance, you could use a week of teasers asking: "Do you believe in Circumstantial Evidence? See 'THE BOTTOM OF THE WELL.'" "Would you vote for the death penalty on circumstantial evidence? See THE BOTTOM OF THE WELL."

If you will build a campaign along those lines and then mention Cooper, Finley and Pryor along with Evart Overton, the chances are that you will get some business on this and send your patrons home satisfied.

An Exclusive Photoplay Trade Journal.

Published Weekly.

THE CANADIAN MOVING PICTURE DIGEST

100% Circulation in Canada.

Orpheum Theatre Bldg. Montreal, P. Q.

RATHER GOOD ATMOSPHERE AND NEW STAR HELP SLENDER STORY

Julia Sanderson

THE RUNAWAY

Empire All-Star—Mutual

DIRECTOR	Dell Henderson
AUTHOR	Michael Morton
CAMERAMAN	Frank Bangs
AS A WHOLE	Kept interesting by atmosphere and treatment
STORY	Narrative of girl's life, lacing real dramatic situations
DIRECTION	Kept it interesting by the use of intelligent lightings and good atmosphere
PHOTOGRAPHY	Very good
LIGHTINGS	Usually very good; some too harsh for star's makeup
CAMERA WORK	Good, but not many closeups
STAR	Very good looking, but seemed too old for the part at first
SUPPORT	All very good
EXTERIORS	Good; suited atmosphere
INTERIORS	Very good
DETAIL	Usually good
TIME	Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

I MUST say that Julia Sanderson looked as well in this production as she appears on the stage, and, with very few exceptions, her closeups were decidedly pleasing. In one instance, however, the lighting was harsh and showed her to decided disadvantage.

The plot of this—if we can call it one—was simply the narrative of a young girl's life. It started with Miss Sanderson showing artistic ability in a small Vermont town, where the folks thought that any sort of artistic temperament wasn't the correct thing.

Here she was treated with scant courtesy by her aunt and uncle, who wanted to marry her off to a fat young villager, and, in her desperation, she ran away to New York, to the studio of an artist.

She fell in love with the artist, and then, through the jealousy of the fiancee, ran away again, and got a job as chorus girl.

Her rise from chorus girls to star was a matter of a few scenes and one or two titles. Then we had the clutch between Miss Sanderson and the artist.

At first where Miss Sanderson was supposed to be an unsophisticated country girl—well, she didn't look it. But later—and especially after her advent to the stage—she was certainly beautiful.

The general atmosphere was excellent. The Vermont home was bare, and, to say the least, unhomelike. The artist's studio apartment and the back stage scenes of the theatre were certainly well handled.

There were a few bad spots, but I believe they will be generally overlooked on account of the pleasing impression made by the production as a whole. The first of these slips was the fact that Friend Artist wore suspenders. It may be done, but it sure does detract from the glamor generally surrounding an artist's life. And then, from all that I've seen and read anent this subject, I have never yet seen one chorus girl so well liked that the others would applaud and be pleased when she was given a real part in the show. Here they applauded and seemed glad that Miss Sanderson was so quickly pushed to stardom.

They showed an insert of a telegram which was printed instead of typewritten. This seems to be a common failing with many of the program productions.

The director registered a pleasing atmosphere, held the interest and made the characters decidedly real, all without the use of many closeups. I believe it would have helped to have used more, but he did hold the interest as it was.

The Box Office Angle.

Julia Sanderson's name should be able to pull you quite a little business, because she is known everywhere. Even in our smaller towns, people know of her and of her work with Cawthorn and Donald Brian on the stage. I would mention some of their recent successes, such as "The Sunshine Girl," "The Sirens" and "The Arcadians." They have all been Broadway successes.

There is one thing about this production that I would emphasize. It is clean from start to finish. It is just light entertainment, and you might suggest that it tells the story of Miss Sanderson's career.

VERY ANCIENT PLOT HELPED BY PLAYERS AND LIGHTINGS

Ethel Clayton in

THE WOMAN BENEATH

Peerless—World

DIRECTOR	Travers Vale
AUTHOR	Willard Mack
CAMERAMAN	Max Schneider
AS A WHOLE	Kept interesting by star and hero
STORY	Old: Westerner marrying society bud, with visit to willun's apartments at night
DIRECTION	Allowed some slips and a few bad spots
PHOTOGRAPHY	Fine
LIGHTINGS	Very pleasing
CAMERA WORK	Good
STAR	Beautiful; very pleasing personality
SUPPORT	Quite good as whole, but slipped once or twice
EXTERIORS	Some very beautiful shots; all good
INTERIORS	Good; some too setty
DETAIL	Could have been better
TIME	Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

WE certainly get an old friend here, with the society mother and the willun and the midnight call of the heroine, with the misunderstanding husband and the final confusion of the willun—and all this without any bloodshed. But the presence of Miss Clayton and her lead, Curtis Cooksey, pulled this out of an awful hole that it would certainly have been dumped in except for the players.

Miss Clayton as a New York society bud who married a rich Western mine owner, Curtis Cooksey—not because she loved him, but because it was the thing to do—found out that she did not love him, so he decided that he would pretend to lose his money and see if she would fall in love with him or divorce him. When she found out that they were broke she decided that she did love him, and so took a flat in Harlem and finally after a midnight call on the willun, in which he was forced to flee, they had the reconciliation.

The director allowed a few slips that hurt quite some. The eyebrows of the willun were certainly made up too heavy, and he looked truly wicked. In several scenes the tops of the heads were cut off. This surely could have been helped if a little care had been exercised, or else they could have omitted these scenes, because they did not advance the plot.

They pulled a few scenes of the stock exchange and registered the point desired, but these stock-exchange shots have certainly become a fixture in World releases. They showed us a cancelled letter with a terrible postmark. Someone left a New Jersey license on the Flivver while these people were supposed to be living in Harlem. Of course this film was probably made over at Ft. Lee, but that is no great reason why they should have used the N. J. license.

The introduction was particularly well lighted, and this pleasing photographic effect was carried through the entire production. Most of the exteriors were well chosen. The interiors were satisfactory except for a few shots which were too "setty," but there was not enough of this to detract from the good atmosphere of the production as a whole.

The titles were well written and registered many laughs. They helped decidedly.

I wish someone would kill this idea of shero going to the apartment of the willun at midnight to accuse him of some crime. It isn't done.

Miss Clayton appeared to better advantage in this than in any production she has had recently. The lighting brought out her beauty, and she played with just the proper shadings to be effective.

Curtis Cooksey as the Westerner had poise and repose. He was decidedly pleasing. Only once did he seem to overplay, it being where the wife confessed that the willun was her lover.

The other members of the cast were quite acceptable. Among those who appeared were Isabelle Berwin, Frank de Vernon, Crauford Kent and Eugenie Woodward.

The Box Office Angle.

I believe this has been well enough produced to please, and the work of Miss Clayton helps a lot, while Curtis Cooksey is quite likeable.

It isn't a great production, and you can't boost it to the skies, on account of the age of the story, but you can say that it will please.

Miss Clayton has a very big following, and if you can tell your patrons that it is as pleasing a production as she has had in a long time, I believe that you can pull some cash.

A good line would be: "If your husband lost his money, would you divorce him? See Ethel Clayton in 'The Woman Beneath.'" "Would you marry a man if you didn't love him, just because society said it was right? See Ethel Clayton in 'The Woman Beneath.'"

UNIMPRESSIVE SITUATIONS HANDLED SO AS TO GET BY

Ethel Clayton in

THE DORMANT POWER

Peerless—World

DIRECTOR	Travers Vale
AUTHOR	Florence C. Bolles
SCENARIO BY	Clara S. Beranger
CAMERAMAN	Max Schneider
AS A WHOLE	Rather well done problem play that didn't convince
STORY	Girl accepts marriage for invalid father
DIRECTION	Registered some good points and some bad ones
PHOTOGRAPHY	Hazy
LIGHTINGS	Good
CAMERA WORK	Good
STAR	Very good and looked beautiful throughout
SUPPORT	Very good
EXTERIORS	Some very good
INTERIORS	Quite good
DETAIL	Not clear
TIME	Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

THERE was nothing very new in this story of the young girl marrying a wealthy man so that she could take proper care of her invalid father, only to have father die soon, so she could realize that she never could love her husband, and that the only man she ever had loved was now beyond her reach.

This is certainly old stuff, and I must say that some of the points were not entirely clear, the director giving us quite a chance to jump at conclusions.

The photography was a bit hazy—not disagreeably so, but enough to prevent it from standing out with the clear definition we should have.

When Miss Clayton's father was shot and fell from his horse, he rolled down a little embankment. In the next scene, when he was picked up, he was on top of the embankment. Of course, this is merely a detail, but your close observers will surely notice the discrepancy.

I want to mention here one of the funniest things that has come to my attention in some time. We had a young Westerner coming to New York, and we saw him reach the entrance of the Penn Station and look down the street. Immediately after that they cut in a shot of Times Square, with the Times Building in evidence, which was supposed to register what this Westerner was looking at. He certainly must 've had more than one pair of eyes to look in the direction he apparently did, and see the Times Building.

They had a scene of Miss Clayton taken against a background which didn't match the lighting in the picture at all, but it was a remarkably pretty shot.

When they got to the point where they wanted to kill Montagu Love, they had Miss Ostriche shoot him from an adjoining room, and it must have been at least 18 to 20 feet from where Miss Ostriche was when she fired, to where Mr. Love was when he fell. Still, they immediately found the pistol lying right beside Mr. Love. They gave no explanation of how the gun got there.

They had a night watchman who came into Mr. Love's room after he had gotten rid of a poor inventor, and this man immediately picked up the inventor's hat, walked over to the window and found a piece of cloth from his coat hanging on a hook. It seemed funny that an ordinary night watchman would be such an observing cuss.

Among those who appeared were George Morgan, Ed T. Langford and Joseph Herbert.

The Box Office Angle

I certainly would not book this if there was any chance of getting away from it. The story is very old, and the playing of Miss Clayton and Mr. Love is the only redeeming feature. The remainder of the cast failed to impress at any time.

I certainly wouldn't raise a hulabaloo about this one, because there is no reason for any one really being pleased with it. You would probably have several well grounded kicks if you do yell very loud about it.

PRESENCE OF STAR ONLY EXCUSE FOR RELEASING THIS

Mary Miles Minter in

HER COUNTRY'S CALL

American—Mutual

DIRECTOR ..... Lloyd Ingraham
AUTHORS ..... Charles Turner Dazey and Frank Dazey
SCENARIO BY ..... Daniel Frederick Whitcomb
AS A WHOLE ..... Poorly handled; was clean plot that didn't get over STORY ..... Daughter of bootlegger saves town from border raiders
DIRECTION ..... Handled scenes ineffectively and made action appear superficial
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Good
LIGHTINGS ..... Some showed star to excellent advantage
CAMERA WORK ..... Some poor angles
STAR ..... Worked mighty hard, and only "got over" once or twice
SUPPORT ..... Quite poor
EXTERIORS ..... One or two good shots
INTERIORS ..... Acceptable
DETAIL ..... Some bad spots
TIME ..... Seventy minutes (5 parts)

THIS Mary Miles Minter picture will not add anything to her following, and I don't see that there is any reason why this was ever released. It isn't good enough to please and the only excuse is that Miss Minter is presented as the star.

The story told of an old bootlegger in Arizona who was arrested. His daughter, Miss Minter, was taken to the home of the captain of the National Guards, who had been educated in the East.

Later Miss Minter saved the town from a raid by Mexican bandits and was the "pride of our village," and of course all ended happily, with the bootlegger revealing that she wasn't his daughter but the daughter of the old colonel who was the boss of the town.

The director allowed several of his players to overact and didn't make his scenes impress. He used a few scenes of Revolutionary times showing the Spirit of '76, etc., and these were poorly done.

There was a title which said that the soldiers were the pride of the town, but, believe me, town pride didn't run very high there. These sojers were certainly poorly trained and all of their movements were ragged.

The captain, Alan Forrest, ran around in front of his company in a manner that was anything but proper etiquette for the commanding officer—and another funny thing—there were no lieutenants in this company. That's the first time I ever saw a company without lieutenants, especially now that they have six. The captain made a patriotic speech, and he sure did talk with his hands a lot—in fact, it looked almost like a burlesque.

The old bootlegger was the only member of the supporting cast who seemed human. He played very commendably and really registered as an old roughneck who had come to love this daughter of his.

The title cards in this were very poorly done, and the titles were not well worded.

In the cast were Ashton Dearholt, Spottiswoode Aitken, Nellie Widen, George Periolat, Henry A. Barrows and Margaret Shelby.

The Box Office Angle.

You can probably do some business with this, but I wouldn't advise you to attempt it, because it won't please, and the only applause will come from the patriotic-appeal scenes of the soldiers. Now, let me say right here that patrons very often applaud patriotic scenes such as were used in this without really enjoying the picture, due to the fact that they figure they should make a noise when the flag or soldiers are shown on the screen. That won't keep them from leaving the house dissatisfied with the picture.

If you have to play this, slide it by on Miss Minter's reputation, but keep stepping hard on the "soft pedal."

PRETTY STAR IN SLENDER PLOT THAT NEVER GETS ANYWHERE

Ann Murdock in

THE BEAUTIFUL ADVENTURE

Empire All-Star—Mutual

DIRECTOR ..... Dell Henderson
CAMERAMAN ..... Frank Bangs
AS A WHOLE ..... Slender story that never gets anywhere, rather mechanically produced
STORY ..... Old hen separated lovers, who discovered deception, ran away and were eventually married
DIRECTION ..... Seemed mechanical shooting of routine scenario; sadly lacking in human touches
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Frequently fuzzy and lacked clean-cut qualities; marred by too much soft lighting
LIGHTINGS ..... Occasionally good for sets, but failed to register faces to best advantage
CAMERA WORK ..... Just good; wasn't best technique
STAR ..... Cute at times, but not always photographed to advantage
SUPPORT ..... Satisfactory; not particularly pleasing
EXTERIORS ..... A few good; some only acceptable
INTERIORS ..... "Gingerbready"; too full of furnishings
DETAIL ..... Acceptable
TIME ..... Seventy minutes (5 parts)

CONSIDERING the title of this, the story fails utterly to live up to its promises. It wanders along through much footage without ever getting anywhere in particular and always with the suggestion that something was going to happen, but unfortunately that "something" never developed.

The atmosphere and general treatment of incidents was rather ordinary in many ways, and, because of this story weakness and lack of distinction in treatment, I am afraid that the average audience will consider this just a "movie"—and not a very good movie at that.

The plot registered our good old friend the intercepted letters as a means of separating two lovers, with the old hen who held up the letters—she being the boy's stepmother—arranging a match between his sweetheart (Miss Murdock) and a poor nut who was wealthy, because she thought that both the girl and her son should marry money instead of one another.

Suspecting the deception, the boy's father sent for him, and he came rushing in on the date of the wedding and carried the bride away to her grandmother's lonely cottage. The grandmother had failed to depart as she had intended to, and welcomed the young couple as the honeymooners, refusing to give Miss Murdock a chance to explain.

They used much footage then registering the embarrassment of the young couple, who were ordered to bed, and then ended up the next day with the arrival of the jilted bridegroom, who was finally made to undertsand that the intended marriage had been a mistake.

In a few scenes Miss Murdock was shown to decided advantage, but generally she was not well photographed, and the impression on the whole was not nearly so good as it should have been.

David Powell as the hero was quite pleasing, and Carl Sauerman as one of those impossible boob characters will get some laughs, although the character assisted materially in keeping this from registering as anything but a movie.

The other characters were satisfactory, but little more.

Because of the slender plot the production drags very decidedly in many of the incidents. There was always the feeling that they were building to something and yet they never got anywhere. The grouping of the characters was decidedly mechanical, there being many situations where several characters were lined up before the camera in the good old fashion of some years ago.

There was no logical reason why Mr. Powell should have gone out on the grounds to sleep when he had a nice bed at his disposal. In fact, there was no reason why he should not have requested Miss Murdock to return to her room, so that he might again assume his bunk in the easy chair where he had been slumbering when disturbed by the well-meaning grandmother.

There was an insert of an envelope shown when Miss Murdock handed a letter to her maid to be mailed, and we saw on this a faked cancellation of a foreign stamp. I don't know why the stamp should have been cancelled before the letter was mailed.

In the supporting cast were Kate Sergeantson, Ada Boshell and Ada Fuller Mellish.

The Box Office Angle.

After Miss Murdock's very pleasing production of "Outcast" I fear that this will be quite a slump. Certainly there is nothing about this production to really please anywhere. It just wanders along thru considerable footage without developing any new situation or really ever arriving at what might be justly called any situation.

If you are taking program stuff as it comes you may be able to sneak this by, but certainly I would soft-pedal with it because the name sounds like something is going to happen and the plot fails to deliver. If you can reach out and grab something human, you will surely be justified in forgetting this. This would be particularly advisable if Miss Murdock has made a favorable impression with your audiences in such productions as "Captain Jinks" and "Outcast," which might make it possible for you to do well with her when you get another good one.

UNIMPRESSIVE STORY THAT WILL NOT INTEREST

Alice Brady in

THE MAID OF BELGIUM

Peerless—World

DIRECTOR	George Archainbaud
AUTHOR	Roy L. McCardell
SCENARIO BY	Adrian Gil-Spear
CAMERAMAN	Philip Hatkin
AS A WHOLE	Not a pleasing production, with little sympathy going to Miss Brady
STORY	Sterile mother tries to get child in home to pleased husband, with "lost memory" situation
DIRECTION	Allowed some bad groupings and did not give sympathy where would expect
PHOTOGRAPHY	Fair to good
LIGHTINGS	Some very good
CAMERA WORK	Only good
STAR	Had a few good scenes but was held down by story
SUPPORT	Millionaire husband and wife good
EXTERIORS	Some good shots
INTERIORS	Some of scenes much too crowded
DETAIL	Allowed some slips
TIME	Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

ALICE BRADY does some good work in this, but she has a part that doesn't gather any sympathy for her. As a matter of fact, nearly all of the sympathy goes to the millionaire husband and wife who took her into their home.

We saw in the first few scenes Miss Brady as a poor, demented Belgian girl who was picked up off a country road by the rich wife of an American millionaire. She was taken to their home and cared for.

The American millionaire wanted children, and, since his wife was not capable of bearing them, she decided to take the child which was to be born to Miss Brady shortly and claim it as her own, this being done by sending Friend Hubby to Rio de Janeiro.

Miss Brady had sufficient intellect to realize that the child was hers, and she stole it in the middle of the night and ran away, it appearing from evidence left that she had drowned with the baby.

With the belief that the bodies might be found, they dynamited the lake, and this brought Miss Brady's memory back again. Then wifey told hubby that it wasn't her baby, and everything ended happily, with Miss Brady's husband coming to her.

This story was a mixture of lost memory and barren wife, both of which we have come across rather frequently of late, and there is no point in it that really justifies it being billed big.

Some of the principals were pleasing, and Miss Brady did her work well, but of course the part of demented girl is hardly one that will please your patrons.

They gave us a garden party in this which had a few good-looking exteriors, but I must say that the Grecian dancers were far from graceful, and the grouping of the guests was terrible. It appeared as if they had quarreled among themselves and had separated from each other everywhere as much as possible. The hostess of this party appeared in a dark-colored gown that was in marked contrast to the rest of her guests, who were attired in afternoon frocks.

When hubby decided that he had to go to Rio de Janeiro, he went there in one title, and then we had a scene in South America, with his return in another title. That's some fast travelin'—even for the movies!

When Miss Brady stole the baby from its crib in the middle of the night, it seemed very, very peculiar to me that the baby should have been put to bed with all its clothes on, including shoes and stockings. I never saw any one do this, but I presume they knew that Miss Brady was going to take the child out into the night air, and so they thought it would be better to have it dressed rather than have Miss Brady dress it before the camera.

One other thing—although it may be a matter of taste: We observed that Miss Brady, although dressed in mourning, showed an inch or two of white stocking. I don't believe that it is considered good taste to wear white stockings with mourning clothes.

The director had many of his sets very much overcrowded. Shooting all scenes from practically the same angle made this appear as if there was only one corner of a couple of rooms used on the interiors.

The action of the entire offering was decidedly slow. All of the cast, including Miss Brady, moved with such deliberation that it allowed the interest to lag very often. Editing would have helped it very decidedly. As it stands now it is rather tiresome.

Louise de Rigney and George MacQuarrie as the wealthy couple played their parts very creditably, making their characterizations stand out throughout the entire production.

Others who appeared were Richard Clarke, Lotta Burnell and Anthony Merlo.

The Box Office Angle

There is some popular appeal in this, due to the fact that they introduced a few flashes of fighting in Belgium, but I don't believe there is enough to make it a worthwhile production. The name, of course, will draw, but I would be very, very careful about what I said concerning this. There is nothing in the story that will stand heavy exploitation.

Should you run this, you might mention some good lightings and attract some attention by saying that Miss Brady has the part of a girl whose mind was shattered by the German horrors in Belgium.

To my mind it would be wise for you to pass this without any compunction because it'll not please generally. There is little war atmosphere, and the story is so obvious that all of your regulars will have it guessed even before it has gotten under way.

PLEASING CHARACTERIZATIONS AND TREATMENT MAKE THIS ENTERTAINING

Rupert Julian and Ruth Clifford, with Monroe Salisbury,

in

THE DESIRE OF THE MOTH

Bluebird

DIRECTOR	Rupert Julian
AUTHOR	Eugene Rhodes
CAMERAMAN	Ed Kull
SCENARIO BY	Elliott J. Clawson
AS A WHOLE	Very interesting, with good characterizations and good twists; kept quite human by treatment and work of principals
STORY	Western story with lots of action and plenty of laughs
DIRECTION	Very fine; developed characters wonderfully
PHOTOGRAPHY	All very artistic
LIGHTINGS	Fine
CAMERA WORK	Very good—especially introductions
STARS	He wonderful; she very pleasing, but with little to do
SUPPORT	Salisbury fine; others quite acceptable
EXTERIORS	Some beautiful shots; all good
INTERIORS	Suited action
DETAIL	Well handled
TIME	Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

WE have come to expect very good work from Director Rupert Julian, because lately he has "humanized" his work. In this we are not disappointed. He has given us one of the best characterizations that I have seen. Besides this, he has a story that is decidedly good, and I believe that it has been adapted from one of the old S. E. P. series by Eugene Rhodes which ran about a year ago. I don't believe that the title is the same.

The story opened with Monroe Salisbury as a bandit, who was captured in the house of an old Virginia colonel out West. Because Salisbury was a Virginian by birth the colonel did not prefer charges against him, but let him go, whereupon he made good and fell in love with Miss Clifford, who was the daughter of the colonel.

Salisbury ran for sheriff of the county and had as opposition the former sheriff, who was the "heavy," and here was where Julian entered the action. He interrupted a killing and prevented bloodshed and had the part of a thinking old codger who put things over without worry or blood, making his adversary appear like a fool.

Then in order to prolong the story a little, they pulled a murder and accused Salisbury of it, and he left to fight it out in an old cabin, where he eventually was rescued by Julian.

Mr. Julian, as John Wesley Pringle, had a splendid part to portray, and he put it over with excellent work. He certainly made the part hit home.

Monroe Salisbury, as the hero, took advantage of all there was in it.

Ruth Clifford, as the daughter, was very pleasing, but had little to do except stand around and look pretty.

The lightings were excellent and helped the atmosphere decidedly. The camera work gave us some beautiful shots at the first of the production—especially that of the riders taken across a valley.

The interest was held by leading the audience to suspect that Julian was a lover of Miss Clifford, and then, when he was finally introduced, only to find him to be an old friend of the family, who didn't figure in the running as a lover at all.

Salisbury carried all the sympathy during the early reels, and then he divided it with Julian on the finish. The Director, in fact, threw his sympathy wherever he pleased, and carried the audience with him.

They registered one closeup of a hand with blood dripping from it, and I believe it would have been much better had they used a long shot in this instance.

The titles were excellent. Some have probably been taken from the original story. They pulled lots of laughs. I remember one that stuck out particularly, it being: "I feel like a lion in a den of Daniels."

Among those who appeared were Milton Brown, W. H. Bainbridge and Al Sears.

The Box Office Angle.

I would say that you should go ahead with this and make some noise about it, because it certainly will stand some.

I don't mean to convey the impression that this is a great big film, but I do say that it will please generally, and that caliber is somewhat rare.

I would talk particularly about the beautiful photography and lightings, and also say that the story has a number of good twists. You can give them your personal assurance that it will please.

You might, in your advertising, make mention of some of Mr. Julian's recent productions. Your patrons will remember him better if you will remind them of "Mother O' Mine" and "Kentucky Cinderella."

EXCEPTIONAL CHARACTERIZATIONS AND TREATMENT MAKE OLD PLOT GO BIG

Charles Ray in

THE SON OF HIS FATHER

Ince—Paramount

DIRECTOR.....Victor L. Schertzinger
AUTHOR.....Ridgwell Cullum
CAMERAMAN.....Paul E. Eagler
SUPERVISED BY.....Thomas H. Ince
AS A WHOLE.....Unusually effective treatment and star's excellent characterization lifted old story, making it remarkably entertaining
STORY.....Good old stuff of father sending son out to make good, with result that he trims father thru accidental clash
DIRECTION.....Made every incident human and kept beautiful balance between action and comedy relief
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Remarkably fine
LIGHTINGS.....Excellent on characters; generally satisfactory
CAMERA WORK.....Particularly fine; made figures stand out without killing background
STAR.....Wonderful at just such "reckless youth" characterizations
SUPPORT.....Some fine types; generally very pleasing
EXTERIORS.....Satisfactory; fitted atmosphere
INTERIORS.....Very good
DETAIL.....Some good touches
TIME.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

IT would seem an impossible task to take the good old plot of reckless son sent out into the world by father to make good, with the result that he put one over on dad, and twist it into an entertaining photoplay. It is certainly to the credit of the star and director that this has been accomplished so successfully, because truly this is surprisingly pleasing as a bit of entertainment.

From the very first scene it was evident that the treatment was going to lift this and put it over. The little touches, the excellent titles and the photography which made the characters stand out clean-cut without killing the background, made this ditsinctive from the start.

There were many laughs well earned, and even the good old stunt of blindfolding the hero and letting him pick out a place on the map to go to, went over because of the way it was handled. The crap game on the train was beautifully worked up to, and the convenient bit of having hero thrown off the train at a lonely station in the West, befriended by the man whose daughter he was to fall in love with the next day, was made to seem human because of the way it was handled.

When they began to talk about land-booms and railroad stations, we immediately had a hunch that his father would be mixed up in the deal, and yet the manner in which this was slipped in and put over made it more than acceptable. The incident where Bob McKim as the wicked willun—and he was as wicked as usual—attacked the shero in her home without her screams attracting the attention of any of the servants, was a weak spot; but I think this will get by without serious criticism, because of the manner in which the struggle has been developed.

There were good laughs at regular intervals, and the action kept things moving fast enough to hold the interest every minute. Surely any audience will get a yell out of the scene where the Chinaman discovers the wrecked furniture and registers a trick title which shows the explosive character of his language. This Chink also provides a real laugh when his wink tips off father to the fact that the hero's rescue stunt was all a frame-up.

Of course the burden of the characterization work was with Charlie Ray, who handled it perfectly, but all of the cast were splendid. One little touch where Mr. Ray thought he had killed Bob McKim in the fight, and immediately showed anxiety to the extent of carrying him over to a water-trough to revive him, registered with a bang when he found that McKim was still alive, with the result that he dropped him into the trough for a good ducking.

Vola Vale, as the shero, was quite pretty and exceptionally vivacious. She was allowed to register just enough to keep it from being overdone, the result being that the scenes in which she appeared left an impression of a very much alive, very attractive young lady.

Others who appeared were John P. Lockney, George Nicholls, Charles K. French and George Hoffman.

The Box Office Angle.

This is certainly far superior to the average Paramount release because of the characterization treatment, the handling of the human incidents, the titles and the photography. Without the excessive striving for effects which marks most of the Lasky releases, we had excellent photography and saw an old plot made most human.

I think Charlie Ray is a big favorite everywhere, and you should be able to do remarkably well with this, particularly if you will explain that this is his first picture under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince in association with the Paramount Company.

I consider this a sure-fire winner. If your fans don't enjoy it you have a hopeless proposition. I wouldn't say much about the story, because it will sound ancient and familiar. Concentrate on the presence of Mr. Ray and refer them to some of his past successes, such as "The Coward," "Sudden Jim" and "The Clodhopper."

Motion Picture Titles of the Highest Grade. Titles for "The Freedom of the World" just completed by

ERNEST STERN, Inc.,

The Title Man

729 Seventh Ave. Bryant 8973

"Brighten the Corner Where You Are"

EDITORIALS

SEPARATE TAX TICKETS SEEMS BEST SOLUTION —WHAT'S YOUR IDEA?

The suddenness with which the new tax dropped from the sky on the theatre owners jarred everyone quite some.

We have had many lengthy opinions from many people who have devoted considerable time to trying to figure out the why and wherefore. The important question to you now is—HOW SHALL THE TAX BE COLLECTED?

So far as I can figure, the tax should certainly be paid by the public, and I believe the most practical way to do this is to have separate tax tickets, which shall be sold at a separate window, since this will make it a much easier process and will also take care of any who come into your theatre without paying.

Be careful about raising your admission prices now. If you do so—by all means charge the tax also, or your patrons will think that you are collecting the tax and a little side graft for yourself at the same time. Think it over!

If any of you boys have suggestions in reference to this tax, let me have them quick.

Many exhibitors have sent in by wire and letter real protests against the exchanges hanging a 15-cent tax on each daily booking. The exchanges in that way are trying to pass onto the exhibitor the tax on positive film, although, so far as I can understand, it has not been definitely decided whether the intention of the bill was to tax every booking or to tax only the positive film once. I'm quite sure that the original intention was to tax the positive film only once. It is quite possible, however, that as soon as the supposedly wise men in Washington learn enough about the film business which they have just taxed, to realize that films are leased every day, then they will want to insist that the bill was intended to tax every lease, whether daily or once in a hundred years.

If the exchanges are determined to hang it onto the exhibitor, I presume the exhibitor will have to stand for it, just as he has had to stand for everything else which has been hung onto him, and will continue to have to stand for it until he gets the right kind of organization, local and national, to effectively combat such impositions.

LOOK OUT FOR THOSE SAMPLES—AND DO YOUR BIT!

Remember, you're my boss—or rather my bosses—and I want a RAISE!

You will receive sometime in the next few days an envelope containing five sample copies of WID'S, and I want you to see that those samples get to live prospects—men who should be reading this dope of mine.

That "prospect" may be an exhibitor who should have better pictures; he may be a director; he may be a cameraman, or he may be a manufacturer—that's up to you. Pick out men whom you know are not subscribers now, and send them a sample which I want you to accompany with a personal letter telling them why they should be subscribers.

You've had a little time to digest the dope I shot at you last week on this question of giving me a "raise," and I have had some wonderful letters in response to it.

Now, I want to ask every one of you boosters to do your bit and see to it that the right people get these samples. Remember also that a sample without a personal letter from you is only doing part of your share.

Give that friend of yours a reason why he in particular should send ten iron men to your "office boy" down here in New York.

GO TO IT!

THE HIGH COST OF EXHIBITING.

Complaints still come in regarding the Paramount Artcraft method of politely making it necessary for an exhibitor to book a lot of stuff he doesn't want in order to get the few stars he does want.

Mr. Zukor and Mr. Lichtman of Paramount-Artcraft defend their methods by admitting that it was an error to ever have called their plan "Open Booking." They insist that it is necessary for them to book all of their attractions where possible, and of course no one can deny the fact that, from their viewpoint, this is highly to be desired.

I claim that the exhibitors would be very willing to pay top prices for the few stars they want if they might refuse those they don't want—but Mr. Zukor says it would not be practical for him to go on to the Open Market, because he has contracts with some stars whose pictures must be released as they are produced.

Mr. Zukor has said to me personally that he doesn't want to force any exhibitor to take any star he doesn't want, in order to get another star; but as the conversation developed I was given to understand that they of course prefer to place all of their stars where possible—which means to the exhibitor that if you don't want them, possibly somebody else does—which practically makes it necessary for you to do business on all or none, unless you have your local situation "sewed up."

Mr. Zukor declared that he didn't want any theatre that had been playing Paramount for years to be shut off by the new deal, but undoubtedly this has happened in many cases, since I have had several instances brought to my attention.

If any of you boys have had decidedly raw deals along this line due to the sudden shifting of exchange managers or other causes, I will be glad to take your particular case up personally with Mr. Zukor or Mr. Lichtman, if you will send me the facts and figures. It may not do any good, but it will place the proposition up to the real boss, so that we will know whether the exchange men who have been pulling these stunts have been doing so contrary to the desires of the main office.

If you figure that I can accomplish anything for you by taking your case direct to headquarters, tell me about it.

Meanwhile, get ready for a battle, because Paramount and Artcraft are undoubtedly signing up enough big exhibitors to give them exceptional strength if they deliver—and if they don't deliver under the circumstances, they should be shot, the point being that if they do deliver they are going to be in a very, very powerful position to dictate terms within a few months. Think it over!! And while you're thinking plan your defense!

THE ROLL OF HONOR!!

These features have at least five reports, and all have a combined average for Pleased Patrons and Box Office of 80 per cent or more.

In the case of several Features having the same percentage, we have placed the one with the higher percentage of repeats first.

Reports	Features	Company	% P. P.	% B. O.	Repeats
7	The Birth of a Nation	Griffith	100	100	6
14	The Americano	Triangle	99	97	11
6	The Slacker	Metro	99	97	1
5	Down to Earth	Artcraft	96	100
8	Easy Street	Mutual-Chaplin	95	100	8
9	The Rink	Mutual-Chaplin	96	99	8
15	Poor Little Rich Girl	Artcraft	97	97	11
5	The Amazons	Paramount	96	96
14	The Square-Deal Man	Triangle	96	95	7
5	The Goose Girl	Paramount	95	95	4
21	Snow White	Paramount	95	95	15
14	Miss George Washington	Paramount	95	95	11
16	Truthful Tulliver	Triangle	97	93	9
9	Wild and Woolly	Artcraft	95	95	4
8	The Little American	Artcraft	95	95	2
35	Hulda from Holland	Paramount	95	94	23
14	The Cure	Mutual-Chaplin	94	95	8
7	The Eternal City	Paramount	93	96	4
8	Wolf Lowry	Triangle	93	96	1
7	The Rough House	Artcraft	95	93	2
5	The Flame of the Yukon	Triangle	96	91
26	Under Two Flags	Fox	94	92	17
20	The Matrimaniac	Triangle	92	94	10
27	Manhattan Madness	Triangle	94	92	12
23	Peggy	Triangle	94	91	15
6	The Serpent	Fox	92	93	1
10	The Iron Claw	Serial	93	92
10	The Ne'er-Do-Well	Selig	91	93	7
10	Rags	Paramount	91	93	5
11	The Desert Man	Triangle	92	91	4
8	The Clodhopper	Triangle	98	85	1
9	Shielding Shadow	Serial	91	92
5	Liberty	Serial	91	92
15	Bought and Paid For	World	91	91	10
18	Hell's Hinges	Triangle	93	89	11
15	The Devil's Double	Triangle	91	91	7
16	American Aristocracy	Triangle	92	89	9
10	Mister 44	Metro	88	93	4
5	A Fool There Was	Fox	84	97	2
7	Behind the Screen	Mutual-Chaplin	89	91	5
10	Skinner's Dress Suit	K. E. S. E.	95	84	7
10	The Prince and the Pauper	Paramount	92	87	5
14	The Battle Cry of Peace	Vitagraph	96	83	5
6	The Floorwalker	Mutual-Chaplin	89	90	2
5	Hell Morgan's Girl	Bluebird	90	88	1
12	Still Waters	Paramount	94	83	7
20	The Sin Ye Do	Triangle	92	86	10
6	The Girl of Yesterday	Paramount	89	88	3
12	The Habit of Happiness	Triangle	92	85	5
25	Little Lady Eileen	Paramount	87	89	10
6	A Tale of Two Cities	Fox	93	83	4
7	The Crucible	Paramount	92	84	3
15	Broadway Jones	Artcraft	94	82	5
9	Cinderella	Paramount	84	91	4
10	Out of the Drifts	Paramount	89	86	4
5	Green Stockings	Vitagraph	87	88	2
14	In Again—Out Again	Artcraft	87	88	5
19	The Wolf Woman	Triangle	86	89	6
6	Tess of the Storm Country	Paramount	88	87	2
6	The Easiest Way	Selznick	80	87	2
18	The Cheat	Paramount	94	80	12
16	The Count	Mutual-Chaplin	88	86	[illegible]
21	The Return of Draw-Egan	Triangle	88	86	7
6	Sudden Jim	Triangle	89	85
23	Silks and Satins	Paramount	85	88	15
26	Reggies Mixes In	Triangle	93	80	11
30	Flirting With Fate	Triangle	87	86	11
16	The Common Law	Selznick	83	90	5
6	The Soul of a Woman	Metro	93	80	1
10	The Old Homestead	Paramount	88	84	7
8	My Official Wife	Vitagraph	90	82	4
9	The Two Orphans	Fox	85	87	4
14	Poor Little Peppina	Paramount	88	84	[illegible]
12	Romeo and Juliet	Fox	86	86	5
18	Her Double Life	Fox	86	86	6
29	The Bugle Call	Triangle	93	79	9
21	Fifty-Fifty	Triangle	89	83	6
19	The Good Bad-Man	Triangle	90	82	4
5	The Price of Silence	Bluebird	87	85
11	Wild Flower	Paramount	89	82	6
22	Home	Triangle	91	80	9
22	East Lynne	Fox	86	85	9
11	The Eternal Sapho	Fox	84	87	4
8	Shadows and Sunshine	Pathe	93	78	3
12	The Weaker Sex	Triangle	88	83	4
14	Back of the Man	Triangle	90	81	5
6	Dawn of a To-morrow	Paramount	83	88	1
25	An Apostle of Vengeance	Triangle	88	83	4
6	Womanhood	Vitagraph	86	84	2
8	Dulcie's Adventure	Mutual	87	83	2
8	The Hungry Heart	World	87	83	2
10	Molly Make-Believe	Paramount	87	82	6
7	Bella Donna	Paramount	92	77	4
6	Miss Jackie of the Navy	Mutual	87	82	1
17	The Flying Torpedo	Triangle	88	80	8
18	A Corner In Colleens	Triangle	88	80	7
18	Ashes of Embers	Paramount	85	83	7
9	Madame Butterfly	Paramount	82	86	3
8	Helena of the North	Paramount	87	81	2
8	Little Mary Sunshine	Pathe	90	78	1
5	A Dream or Two Ago	Mutual	81	87
9	Island of Regeneration	Vitagraph	84	83	5
9	A Reckless Romeo	Artcraft	89	78	2
10	The Pinch Hitter	Triangle	96	71	2
7	The Innocence of Lizzette	Mutual	84	83
10	God's Country and Woman	Vitagraph	81	85	4
12	The White Raven	Metro	85	81	4
6	A Man and His Soul	Metro	83	83	2
6	The Prince of Graustark	K. E. S. E.	85	81	2
6	Pretty Sister of Jose	Paramount	84	82	2
14	The Promise	Metro	82	84	3
6	Destruction	Fox	76	90	1
6	Chimmie Fadden	Paramount	91	75	1
6	The Little Girl Next Door	Anti Vice	77	88	3
7	Camille	World	86	79	3
8	Undine	Bluebird	79	86	3
12	Carmen	Paramount	82	83	4
6	The Soul of Broadway	Fox	85	80	2
18	His Picture in the Papers	Triangle	90	75	5
8	Mice and Men	Paramount	84	80	5
5	Chimmie Fadden Out West	Paramount	88	76	2
24	The Social Secretary	Triangle	89	75	5
5	The Sign of the Cross	Paramount	79	85
5	What Will People Say?	Metro	80	84
8	Gentleman from Indiana	Paramount	86	78
5	The Yellow Passport	World	82	80	3
12	The Rise of Susan	World	79	83	6
15	The River of Romance	Metro	87	76	7
10	The Lamb	Triangle	85	78	3
6	Excuse Me	Pathe	90	73	2
8	Where Are My Children?	Universal	79	84	2
22	Plain Jane	Triangle	88	75	5
18	Man From Bitter Roots	Fox	82	81	2
6	Kindling	Paramount	81	82
6	Madame X	Pathe	71	91	3
13	Trail of the Lonesome Pine	Paramount	75	87	3
6	The Love Thief	Fox	82	80	1
7	The New York Peacock	Fox	83	79
8	The Silent Battle	Bluebird	78	84
16	The Gun Fighter	Triangle	76	85	10
7	The Libertine	Mammouth	81	80	4
16	Maria Rosa	Paramount	81	80	4
15	The Disciple	Triangle	85	76	2
13	Patria	Serial	84	77
16	Gloria's Romance	Serial	78	83
14	Bullets and Brown Eyes	Triangle	85	75	3
24	Honor Thy Name	Triangle	87	73	4
17	Stepping Stones	Triangle	85	75	2
6	David Harem	Paramount	82	78	1
8	Seven Sisters	Paramount	86	74	1
8	The Wall Between	Metro	78	82	1
18	The Combat	Vitagraph	79	81	1
5	Should a Mother Tell?	Fox	85	75

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

WILLIAM F. ALDRICH
FEATURE PRODUCER
Screen Club, 117 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO

REGINALD BARKER
DIRECTING
PARALTA PLAYS
Paralta Studio, Los Angeles, Calif.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
PRODUCER

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

WILLIAM DESMOND
TRIANGLE PLAYS
Culver City, Cal.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

JACK HARVEY
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
M. P. D. A.
HOBART HENLEY PRODUCTIONS

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
GOLDWYN

LLOYD INGRAHAM
PRODUCER

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
M. P. D. A.
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
M. P. D. A.
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

R. H. KELLY
STUDIO MANAGER
Empire All-Star Corp. & Mutual Corp.
Glendale, L. I.

HARLEY KNOLES
M. P. D. A.
FEATURES DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 D. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

JOSEPH LEVERING
DIRECTOR

O. A. C. LUND

ASHLEY MILLER
M. P. D. A.
Director—Vitagraph Studios
Brooklyn

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE DIRECTOR
FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.

WEDGWOOD NOWELL
TRIANGLE
Friars Club, N. Y. C.

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITIGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

TOM TERRISS
PRODUCER
VITAGRAPH

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
511 W. 143rd St. Audubon 1941.

JAMES VINCENT
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

BEN WILSON
DIRECTING AND STARRING
UNIVERSAL

CHESTER WITHEY
DIRECTOR

JAMES YOUNG
M. P. D. A.

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Adress—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM — A MAGAZINE — IN FACT A SERVICE INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS

WID'S

Always Independent Issued Every Thursday | VOL. III. THURSDAY, NOV. 1, 1917. | NO. 44 | 25 Cents a Copy $10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

DON'T TIE UP WITH ANY BRAND ON ADVERTISING. PLUG YOUR OWN THEATRE

A very important situation confronts many exhibitors right now. You must make up your mind whether you are to develop your theatre for yourself or for some producer.

I mean this: DON'T ADVERTISE ANY BRAND. ADVERTISE YOUR THEATRE.

Don't put yourself in the position of standing sponsor to live or die on a brand, because if the brand goes bad you lose, and if it goes good it may be handed to your opposition.

There is no doubt that Paramount-Artcraft at the present time are making some excellent pictures. So are some other organizations. At the same time, each of these organizations is making some bad pictures. It happens that Paramount-Artcraft is in the limelight because they have a formidable array of stars, directors, etc., and they are right now spending a million dollars in advertising, according to their announcements, and they are asking exhibitors to tie up with this advertising by stating that Paramount and Artcraft films are played in their theatres.

I WOULDN'T DO ANYTHING OF THE KIND!!! Not because Paramount and Artcraft aren't making some good films, but because it isn't safe for you to tie your theatre to any brand.

There are two important reasons for this: The first of these reasons is one which has caused me to say on several occasions that a national advertising campaign to the public on a brand has not been practical in the film business because we have never had a standardized product under any brand name. This has been proven in many instances.

You only have to look over the past three years to realize this fact. There have been several big campaigns, but no one of the advertisers has ever managed to standardize their brand or keep it anywhere near a standard. A little sober thought will make that apparent to you.

The second very important reason why you should not tie up with a national advertising campaign and spend your money to help make a brand is that if this brand should be standardized or made successful there is every possibility that it would be taken away from you and your theatre at about the time it became truly successful.

If you have not had personal experience along that line you need only ask some of your exhibitor friends to realize that that has happened in this very Paramount-Artcraft organization as well as in many others during the past year.

Advertising is a wonderful means of getting business. I'm certainly in favor of it, and every producer to my mind SHOULD spend money to help the exhibitor sell his goods to the public.

BUT—I insist that the producer should advertise CERTAIN PARTICULAR PICTURES which are to be shown by the theatre, instead of asking the theatre man to tie up with a campaign to make valuable a trade-mark when the product sold under that trade-mark varies so decidedly in quality.

Anyone who tells you that the national advertising campaign in this business is similar to one in any mercantile business is ALL WRONG! You can't make films by pattern or mold; and we have never yet found a company willing to throw away the bad ones and so reach even a certain degree of "standardization."

I recommend that you men advertise just as much as you can afford to—and possibly considerably more than you think you can afford to—NOW. If you will give it some serious thought and talk with men who know advertising, you will probably realize that money intelligently spent on advertising will nearly always bring a splendid profit in return.

HOWEVER—the important thing for every exhibitor to do is to advertise his own theatre. Establish the atmosphere of quality which makes your patrons feel in their hearts that you always have a good show.

HARRY CRANDALL is one of the most successful exhibitors in this country. He has in the last few years, starting from little or nothing, risen to the point where he controls a chain of very beautiful theatres in Washington, D. C., and is in a position to get millions at any time, for any proposition which he says is right. In Washington, D. C., he has established the slogan ALWAYS A GOOD SHOW—and he has made good on it with his theatres.

A lot of you fellers think it is impossible to run longer than one day. I know a gink in Oskaloosa, Iowa—and, say, that's a town; not a joke!—who ran "The Slacker" for a week, "A Daughter of the Gods" for two days, and "The Spy" for five days, and got away with it. The population of Oskaloosa is given as 9,466 in the last census. Think it over and commence to give the money-getters a chance.

It makes you feel good to read of Joe Farnham being elected president of the Screen Club. It takes you back to the good old days when the newspaper gang sat around the Round Table at the Club at lunch-time. Nearly all of those boys have gone up quite some since then. I hope Joe manages to rally the good old gang back to the Club. I think he can do it.

WHY LET THE GOOD ONES DIE?

It has been frequently commented on by intelligent exhibitors that the producers seem to think only of the new films and release dates.

Many have been the complaints from exhibitors of the producer's failure to make the most of the few good productions that happen to stand out. This applies particularly to program releases but also registers with companies who have made State rights productions and have failed to do any advertising after the territory has been disposed of.

I'm not talking about advertising in the trade papers—because, for the most part, I think that the money spent on trade-paper advertising is an absolute waste and an undeniable imposition upon the exhibitor, who of course pays the advertising bills, since all of that expense is charged up against productions under that all-enveloping word, "Overhead."

The complaint which comes from the exhibitors is that the producers don't seem to realize the fact that occasionally they have an excellent production which could be developed far beyond the routine of "so many days" booking which is always secured on an ordinary program release.

Part of this lack of development rests upon the shoulders of the advertising department, which seems anxious to talk only of "next week's release," or the coming productions; and part rests upon the shoulders of the exchange man or the distributor and his salesmen, who begin to lose interest in a production as soon as it has passed the stage where they get "top" money. The average film salesman or distributor seems unable to realize the possibilities of developing a good picture, the tendency being to give all of the attention to the new things which come along, whether they be good, bad or indifferent.

I want to say that the Essanay and Pathe people do attempt to keep fresh the older productions in some of their advertising matter, but to my mind this is a very very important question which seriously affects every department and every organization.

We all admit that we have too many pictures today and too few good ones. Then, isn't it common sense that we should concentrate more upon the good ones and keep them alive as long as possible without trying to kid ourselves into the very bad business method of pushing the new stuff as it comes, and allowing the old stuff to die whether it be good, bad or indifferent?

Generally speaking, I believe any thinking film man will agree with me that from 20 to 30 per cent. more gross business could have been done on every exceptional feature which has been made in the past year had it been given some special attention to keep it alive, both by advertising and by intelligent sales promotion work, instead of allowing it to die after a certain length of time because new things were coming up.

Every thinking film man admits that it is a very hard problem to deliver exceptional productions with any real degree of regularity under present conditions existing in producing organizations. Then why in heaven's name, when we get a few good ones, don't we pay enough attention to them to get a maximum amount of business from them without allowing this eternal grind of the industry to force us to let them sink into oblivion, the same as all the junk which really had no reason for being shown in the first place.

Give that a little thought and shoot a letter to the New York offices, giving your ideas. Tell them that you are willing to repeat on some of the good ones if they will give you the proper co-operation.

HE SAYS IT EMPHATIC LIKE!

A SAMPLE OF THE HUNDREDS OF LETTERS I HAVE RECEIVED ON THE NEW ART-CRAFT—PARAMOUNT BOOKING PLAN

Mr. Wid Gunning,
Editor, "Wid's,"
Times Building,
New York.

My dear Wid—Bully for you, old chap; you're all right. Your article in WID'S entitled "Open Booking That Isn't" is certainly some class, and I want to congratulate you, and I am tickled to death to think there is one man in the entire game that has the nerve, the backbone and the brains to come out and say exactly what he thinks and hits the nail smack on the head.

And, Wid, when you said they were raising the price from 50 to 100 per cent. on their service you certainly let them off easy, for they are getting from 100 to 50 per cent. more in this town than before.

Wid, I have been using their service ever since they were in existence, and have been damn fool enough to name my theatre "Paramount," and did not even get a chance at their service at that price.

When I built my new theatre I was getting service from Salt Lake and was assured by them that I was to be protected, but since the "open booking" (?) started they switched my account to Seattle, and fired the white man from that office and put in a hold-up man, and my competitor, being a personal friend of his, got the service—and all of it, too—and I didn't have a look-in.

It is just as you say—there is lots of service on the market, and good service, too—just as good as Paramount and Art-of-Graft, and some a lot better. And if the exhibitors throughout the country allow them to rob them in this way, then they ought to get stuck.

During the last four months I have shelved not less than eight Paramount pictures which I paid for and which put quite a hole in the profits at the price I was paying, and I am wondering what this poor boob up the street is going to do with his "lemons" that he gets on the "open booking." (?) at one to five hundred per cent. more than I have been paying, and he has announced a raise in admission on all of the stuff he has bought.

The way a picture is "put over" is 55 per cent. of an exhibitor's success, and there is a wonderful lot of stuff on the market now that is perfectly good and that one can get at a reasonable figure, and any so-called exhibitor who falls for this graft has my sympathy.

Very truly yours,
A. H. HILTON,
Proprietor and Manager.

Lewiston, Idaho. Paramount Theatre.

THE SMILE ALWAYS WINS

K. C. B. of the New York American, one of the most popular newspaper writers, pulled this the other day. Read it and then THINK IT OVER.

MR. S. L. Rothapfel.
* * *
RIALTO THEATRE.
* * *
NEW YORK City.
* * *
MY DEAR Sam.
* * *
ONE NIGHT.
* * *
A LONG time ago.
* * *
I WENT to your theatre.
* * *
AND THERE was a long line.
* * *
LEADING TO the box office.
* * *
AND I got in it.
* * *
AND STOOD there.
* * *
AND WAITED.
* * *
AND LOOKED around.
* * *
AND WAITED.
* * *
AND STOOD there.
* * *
AND RIGHT ahead of me.
* * *
THERE WAS a big man.
* * *
AND HE never moved.
* * *
AND I couldn't understand.
* * *
IF HE was dead.
* * *
WHY HE didn't fall over.
* * *
AND AFTER a while.
* * *
I DISCOVERED.
* * *
I WAS standing in a crowd.
* * *
THAT WAS looking.
* * *
AT SOME funny hats.
* * *
IN THE millinery store.
* * *
NEXT TO your theatre.
* * *
AND I left them.
* * *
AND WENT to the box office.
* * *
AND BOUGHT a ticket.
* * *
AND THE girl smiled.
* * *
AND I wondered.
* * *
IF SHE'D seen me.
* * *
IN FRONT of the hat store.
* * *
AND WAS kidding me.
* * *
AND THE next week.
* * *
I WENT back again.
* * *
AND BOUGHT my tickets.
* * *
AND THE girl smiled.
* * *
AND LAST week.
* * *
I WENT back again.
* * *
AND THE girl smiled.
* * *
AND I said to myself.
* * *
"SHE WASN'T kidding me.
* * *
"SHE KNOWS me.
* * *
"SHE READS my column."
* * *
AND THEN I saw.
* * *
THAT SHE smiled.
* * *
AT A little old lady.
* * *
WHO WAS back of me.
* * *
AND AT a big fat man.
* * *
WHO CAME next.
* * *
AND I watched her.
* * *
AND NO matter.
* * *
WHO IT was.
* * *
SHE ALWAYS smiled.
* * *
AND JUST because.
* * *
YOU NEVER buy tickets.
* * *
AT YOUR theatre.
* * *
I HAD an idea.
* * *
THAT MAYBE.
* * *
YOU DIDN'T know.
* * *
ABOUT HER smile.
* * *
AND I want you to know.
* * *
AND I want you to tell her.
* * *
IF IT ever happens.
* * *
THAT A strange man.
* * *
WITH A new Fedora hat.
* * *
PUTS HIS hand.
* * *
THROUGH THE little wicke..
* * *
THAT SHE mustn't shoot.
* * *
SHE MUST just take the hand.
* * *
AND SHAKE it.
* * *
IT'LL BE mine.
* * *
I THANK you.
* * *

Somebody ought to be kicked for booking two pictures into the New York Theatre the other day—one called "The Unforseen" and the other "Behind the Mask." Both stories had the same plot idea, with the exception that in one the hero was blind, and in the other the shero was. It's bad business at any time to play two features in one day, and is a proposition of going back to the stone age; but certainly if two were to be played, some care should have been given to the selection.

A distributor headed an ad. in the trade papers last week with a wonderful picture of disaster, using the wording, "Let us come to your rescue." What's the idea. Who wants to admit that they have met with disaster?

From some of the advance advertising it looks like Farrar may be after Bara's "bare" Cleopatra honors.

Viola Dana has gone to the Coast with her hubby, John Collins, who directs her for Metro.

I noted that the honorable president of the National Association, Mr. Brady, was advertising "ten reels for one price" up at the Park not long ago. Hardly a good example to set, I'd say!

Elizabeth Risdon, the beautiful young lady who plays the part of an aged mother in George Tucker's feature, "Mother," has written a book on photoplay makeup and character study.

HAS GREAT MOMENTS, BUT DRAGS. BE BIG WINNER IF EDITED

Walker Whiteside and Valentine Grant in

THE BELGIAN

Sidney Olcott Players, Inc.—State Rights

DIRECTOR.....Sidney Olcott
AUTHOR.....Frederic Arnold Kummer
CAMERAMAN.....George K. Hollister and Al Liguori
AS A WHOLE.....Excess of unimportant scenes marred effectiveness of production; would be very good in much less footage
STORY.....Theme relating to Belgium, as expressed in foreword, very fine; but unimpressive action affecting sculptor hero's career kills off important sequences
DIRECTION.....Gave excellent atmosphere, but didn't use enough closeups, and marred tempo of big moments by slowing down to unimportant incidents
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied from fine to fair
LIGHTINGS.....Some very effective; some only fair
CAMERA WORK.....Varied
STARS.....He lacked opportunity; she good at times, but frequently over-reached
SUPPORT.....Anders Randolf very effective; other types good
EXTERIORS.....Many very beautiful and atmosphere generally well maintained; some effective battle scenes
INTERIORS.....Good
DETAIL.....Very good; some touches excellent
TIME.....One hour and thirty-two minutes (10 parts)

THIS started off wonderfully and finished with a whoop—but—between the start and the finish we had some decidedly contrasting sequences. Some were remarkably effective and others were painfully weak, unnecessary and injurious to the general impression to be made by the production as a whole.

As this stands, it runs an hour and a half. If it were reduced in running time to an hour, it could be wonderfully improved, and since it so happens that exhibitors everywhere with a picture such as this would rather have only an hour than an hour and a half, because of the money they can get into their house, it seems a pity that this was permitted to run so long.

The foreword seemed an inspiration. It was a statement regarding the invasion of Belgium, finishing up with the stirring words that in future generations the proudest boast of any man would be, "I am a Belgian." That foreword was enough to keep you sort of sitting on the edge of your seat for a while, but when we drifted along thru forty minutes of footage, all of which was devoted to the gradual introduction of many characters and the explanation of their correlation, things began to drag.

We didn't even get the benefit of working out the mystery touches, because they promptly labeled the villain as a German spy when he was first introduced. Each additional spy brought into the action was also labeled—which was certainly bad titling, since the mystery connected with these characters might have helped somewhat in holding up the draggy scenes that were concerned with the romance.

Walker Whiteside was presented as the star, and he certainly was not given the right opportunities. Only once before has Mr. Whiteside appeared on the screen, that having been in "The Melting Pot"; but he is very well known over the country because of his years as a star in various legitimate productions, and it seems that he was given too little to do which would justify the boast "I am a Belgian." Of course he did go out with the first troops, but there had been too much of his visit to Paris, where he fell in love with another woman after fooling around making statues. His final return to the firing line lifted the character, but he ran too long without sympathy.

There were three high spots in this: the foreword at the beginning, the symbolic bit showing the shadow of a boot stepping upon the cross, which came about halfway down, and then the finish depicting the troops of many nations coming to the rescue of Belgium. Unfortunately, the assembling of the sequences failed to give the proper tempo to the action, with the result that after the very effective symbol of the boot and the cross, we found ourselves sunk a minute later with a lot of action having to do with the sculptor's affairs, which certainly were not stirring.

Some battle scenes which came toward the latter part of the film were very well handled and quite effective, but these could have been made wonderfully more effective had the production been so assembled as to keep the tempo swinging properly at this part of the offering.

The lack of closeups was decidedly noticeable, and the characters were allowed to act with their hands and bodies too much, rather than to register expressions with their faces. The atmosphere throughout was excellent, with many very beautiful shots which helped to give a distinction to the production, considered from the "atmosphere" angle.

Unfortunately, neither Mr. Whiteside nor Miss Grant managed to register humanly enough to really make their scenes hit home, and Sally Crute and Anders Randolf as the German spies managed to make their respective parts stand out, if anything, stronger than the two stars.

There were many titles which were entirely unnecessary, among them being a couple which stated that Miss Crute thought that possibly she was being tricked when the French officers laid a trap for her. Surely there was no reason to plant a title announcing that she thought that possibly she was being tricked. It was noticeable in this particular incident that a camera was used to photograph some plans in a room where there was very little light. Most people know today that this is almost impossible. This detail could have been very easily arranged to better advantage.

In the cast were Georgio Majeroni, Henri Leone Blanche Davenport and Arda La Croix.

The Box Office Angle.

The fact that this started off big, slumped badly picked up for a minute, with another big smash, and then dropped again to stay there until the "hurrah" finish makes this a doubtful proposition as it stands despite the fact that the title should be good for money at the box office—particularly with the name of Walker Whiteside, who is known everywhere because of his having traveled with many road shows, and the name of Valentine Grant, who has appeared in a number of features in the past few years. Had this been edited so as to bring it down to about one hour in running time, with much of the unnecessary footage eliminated so that the tempo could have the proper swing, I would say that this would be a smashing big success. As presently constituted it doesn't give a truly favorable impression, because it slumps so badly between the effective sequences.

If you have a house catering to transient business you can probably get money with this even as it stands now; but if you have a community house where you have to deliver pretty regularly, I would be rather careful, because your people will probably get that sinking feeling several times, with the result that they will not be so very enthusiastic about the production as a whole.

In advertising this don't elaborate too much about the expose of the German Secret Service or the wonderful smash of the German army thru Belgium, in case you try to live up to your advertising; because the production now devotes too much attention to the rather ancient situation of the young sculptor who goes to Paris, makes a couple of statues and then falls in love with a countess, forgetting his old sweetheart, and then finally goes home and is shot and blinded, with his old love taking care of him and the countess throwing him down flat.

If you can get the wording of the foreword used at the beginning of the film, part of it would be excellent advance advertising.

EXCELLENT ATMOSPHERE MELO WITH GOOD HUMAN BITS

William F. Russell in

THE SEA MASTER

American—Mutual

DIRECTOR	Edward S. Sloman
CAMERAMAN	Joe Morgan
AS A WHOLE	Effective as melo, with some excellent human touches that registered
STORY	Shero rescued from dance hall attack, forced to marry captain of boat where mutiny constantly threatened
DIRECTION	Gave swinging action that gripped and little bits of pathos that got over; very good atmosphere
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally excellent; a few very fine bits
LIGHTINGS	Some very effective; generally satisfactory
CAMERA WORK	Very good
STAR	Dominant; human; forceful
SUPPORT	Pleasing and satisfactory; some excellent types
EXTERIORS	Mostly good stuff; quite well done
INTERIORS	Good
DETAIL	Some nice touches
TIME	Fifty-seven minutes (5 parts)

I SURE believe they'll all like Bill Russell in this, because it's a combination of swinging melo that stirs and effective pathos that rings true, which should prove very pleasing in a community house or with any class of patrons.

They started off with a slam-bang fist fight in a dance hall, which was exceptionally well handled, this smash being worked up to by some nice touches of pathos having to do with the death of the dance-hall girls.

Francelia Billington, the woiking goil shero who had come to see her dying dance-hall chum of former days, was rescued from the clutches of the owner of the hall by Mr. Russell, which precipitated the fight. A bottle of whiskey which had been placed in Miss Billington's bag without her knowledge caused Bill to believe her to be an inmate of the dance hall, and he forced her to stay on his boat where they had taken refuge from the police, and compelled a minister who had been rescued at the same time to marry them.

Later Bill discovered his error and tried hard to win forgiveness, but without success. From this time on up to the finish we had the constantly present menace of a mutiny on board the ship. It was forestalled upon several occasions, first by the birth of the captain's son and afterwards by incidents affecting the baby. When it finally did come, Mr. Russell won out after a battle, and then when he wanted to send his wife away, thinking she was in love with the minister, he found that she had learned to love him.

The atmosphere throughout was very fine, with the characters making their parts thoroughly convincing. There were some human touches well played and effectively registered, and occasionally we had light touches of comedy that tended nicely to relieve the tense drama.

There were several very effective and artistic bits of photography, there being one very unusual shot showing Miss Billington silhouetted against an exceptionally effective cloud background. A sequence played with night stuff in what seemed to be a terrific storm was particularly well handled, with the exception of the fact that Mr. Russell, who went ashore to get a doctor for the baby, stumbled upon one too conveniently.

There was one title which said that they were five days out of port, which seemed badly placed, since it was followed by a bit of business where Mr. Russell wore his hat to the table and seemed surprised when the minister asked the blessing. Surely in five days' time he would have bumped against this point much sooner. This title could be changed very easily, and should be.

Bill Russell has had some good and some ordinary stories lately, and while this incorporates some well-known situations, it gives him a splend'd opportunity for characterization and I think will prove a very popular vehicle for this aggressive young star.

Francelia Billington was more than satisfactory as the shero, since she was able to hold the sympathy all the way, making her characterization easily understood in each situation as it developed.

George Fisher, as the minister, was very good, and we had some excellent types among the crew.

Others who appeared were Joe King, Clarence Burton, Helen Howard, George Ahern, Rena Carlton and Perry Banks.

The Box Office Angle.

Bill Russell has been coming forward rather rapidly and you can afford to make considerable fuss about him in this and rest assured that it will go over anywhere. It has that pleasing combination of stirring action and human pathos that appeals to most audiences, with an atmosphere around him that is always interesting and frequently very artistic and effective.

Hammer the star as your big drawing card on this, promising personally that the production will please, because it is distinctive in atmosphere, stirring in action and appealing in dramatic situations.

Francelia Billington and George Fisher are well known because of having appeared in many Mutual productions, and you might mention them to advantage.

In billing this you might say: "What would you do if a big, handsome hero made you prisoner on his boat headed for the South Seas and forced you to marry him? See BILL RUSSELL in THE SEA MASTER."

HAROLD LOCKWOOD

Yorke--Metro

STAR AND TREATMENT MAKE FINE PRODUCTION OF OLD STORY

Dorothy Dalton in

THE PRICE MARK

Ince—Paramount

DIRECTOR.....Roy Neill
AUTHOR.....John B. Ritchie
SUPERVISED BY.....Thomas H. Ince
AS A WHOLE.....Star, treatment and photography made old theme and familiar situations decidedly effective
STORY.....Too much attacking of girls for quiet family consumption, but treatment made action distinctive and may get ruff stuff by DIRECTION.....Distinctive atmosphere, intelligent use of closeups and tempo made well known and rather rough situations decidedly impressive
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Excellent
LIGHTINGS.....Very artistic, and still did not mar humanness of offering
CAMERA WORK.....Very fine
STAR.....Beautiful and wonderfully effective—particularly in closeups
SUPPORT.....Very good
EXTERIORS.....Good
INTERIORS.....Excellent
DETAIL.....Some good little bits, with a few slips
TIME.....Sixty-one minutes (6 parts)

FOLLOWING immediately after the Charlie Ray picture, "The Son of His Father," we get here from the Ince Studios another example of what can be accomplished by excellent treatment of old situations when you have a real personality to build your action around. Dorothy Dalton has been winning her way rapidly, and certainly this production is going to help her establish a permanent position for herself mighty close to the top.

Stop to consider for a moment the idea of making a good feature out of the time-honored stuff about the villain attacking the girl, with the girl afterwards marrying villain's best friend, with the result that villain compelled her to come to his apartment for fear he would tell of their previous relations.

This production was that old friend, and, just for good measure, they threw in a little prologue which showed another victim of the villain, and added an unnecessary, gruesome bit showing the villain making love to this victim's corpse, her brother having killed her before trying to trap the wicked wun.

For coincidences they had the man who saved the villain's life in this prologue "just happen" to be on the scene when Miss Dalton's car ran over a boy, which resulted in their acquaintance and eventual marriage, although she was living with the willun at the time. Then, after the willun came to his friend's house and discovered the wife and forced her to come to his studio, the doctor husband "just happened" to call the willun's house on the phone when wifey and willun were having a terrible struggle.

The prologue was inserted for the purpose of furnishing the character who was to kill the willun. He was the brother of the Egyptian girl the willun had ruined, and stood around as the willun's servant for a long time before the director told him that he had five reels and it was time now for him to kill the wicked guy.

I would like to say in passing that it isn't customary to finish a picture with a murder involving several of the characters, without some reference as to what the authorities did, but I've seen that done once or twice lately in the "filums."

After chewing over this plot a bit it would seem that this is a pretty rotten story; but it's all the more to the credit of the star and producer that they have developed out of this material a worthwhile production except for the ruff stuff.

Dorothy Dalton has a personality that holds the attention and dominates the action to the extent of making it possible to get away with most anything, as long as she is shown in plenty of closeups, in beautiful gowns, etc. The entire cast was well balanced and played intelligently, William Conklin, the willun, being forceful and effective, while Thurston Hall was decidedly pleasing as the husband because he was more of the full grown man type than so many of our heroes are.

The sets and atmosphere were very pleasing and quite distinctive. As a matter of fact, it was this combination of personality and production fine points that put over this poor plot.

It was decidedly noticeable, if the technique of the action were studied, that the situations were played upon the faces of the principals. When the principals can carry the situations, that is excellent technique.

They pulled one title which read: " . . . When an hour has PAST," and they spelled "passed" P-A-S-T—for which somebody needs a good thumping—because it's that sort of thing which gives the intelligent scoffer a chance to argue that moving pictures are the product of the ignorant, for the ignorant. The repetition of the phrase, "The days that follow" and "In the months that followed," jarred just a little.

Among those in the cast were Edwin Wallock, Dorcas Mathews, Adele Farrington and Clio Ayres.

The Box Office Angle.

The first thing for you to consider about this is the fact that, from start to finish, it is a study in situations involving attacks upon girls. We have a prologue wherein the willun is almost killed by the brother of an Egyptian girl he has ruined, and then we find him ruining the shero and afterwards laughing at her and forcing her to become his mistress, with his reformation followed by her falling in love and marrying another man, and the finish showing his forcing her to come to his apartment under the threat that he would tell her husband. If you are in a neighborhood where they stand on their left ear over such stories, because of the moral effect, I would be careful about this. Most of those who make the loudest complaint would like to see the picture and might come, but there would be some who would object to it, and the general effect might be bad because of the opportunity it gives to arouse criticism. So far as the production itself is concerned, it has been beautifully played and handled. Dorothy Dalton would certainly bring you money, and if you haven't discovered that fact it is time for you to get busy and realize "who's who."

It would be a very difficult matter to advertise this and not label it as a very ancient story; and for a community theatre, if you play it, it would seem desirable for you to depend principally upon advertising Miss Dalton, since the name of the story suggests the type of plot.

In advertising this you might lay emphasis on this sort of a question: "When a woman marries, should she force her husband to listen to her past?" "How many PASTS have ruined FUTURES?"

If you will dodge any direct statements as to the strength of the story, you can go as far as you like in proclaiming the excellence of the porduction and the beauty and ability of the star.

ORDINARY PLOT WITH GOOD AND BAD SPOTS CAN SNEAK BY

Betty Brice in

LOYALTY

Oro Pictures—Bernstein Productions—State Rights

DIRECTOR ..... Jack Pratt
AUTHOR ..... Ray Lewis
SCENARIO BY ..... Beatrice Moss and Rosalie Ashton
CAMERAMAN ..... Arthur Powelson
AS A WHOLE ..... Although fairly interesting, never grips; exteriors at end counteracted somewhat poor interiors at first STORY ..... Slender thread of girl who married for spite, sticking with dope fiend hubby to reform him
DIRECTION ..... Failed to get intimate characterizations by use of sufficient close-ups, and made atmosphere artificial at first by setty interiors and arm acting; last reel lifted it quite a bit
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Varied from fine to just good
LIGHTINGS ..... Some very poor, being entirely too uniform; others good; general effect only fair
CAMERA WORK ..... Not enough vignetting; was too much straight, old-fashioned work
STAR ..... Very pretty at times and generally pleasing
SUPPORT ..... MacQuarrie good; others rather actory
EXTERIORS ..... Those at finish very pretty; others satisfactory
INTERIORS ..... A few very good; many setty
DETAIL ..... Acceptable
TIME ..... Sixty-eight minutes (5 parts)

THIS gets away to a bad start because of a number of scenes which are played in interiors that are decidedly setty and badly lighted. The hero and his mother were also very much inclined towards overacting, which weakened many of the early scenes.

When Betty Brice got into the story she helped it quite some, and Murdock MacQuarrie was a good theatrical manager, although he was inclined to be a bit too emphatic at times.

The story had to do with the arrival of Miss Brice from the West and her engagement right off the bat to take the place of the temperamental leading lady, with the result that she became a star over night.

Having met the young hero who was the spoiled son of a fool mother—and a dope fiend, at that—she married him suddenly because mother had snubbed her. The announcement of the marriage caused mother to disown the boy, and the manager to fire his newly-made star.

They tried to live in the slums and found unhappiness to such an extent that the wife finally accepted the offer from her husband's mother of $5,000 in case she would leave town.

We then had some scenes taken on that beautiful coast in California where you get a shot of the waves rolling in, taken from a height, and this part of the production lifted the entire offering right up out of the rut.

We saw the struggle to conquer the dope habit, with the final victory, and then the girl left a note and started away, but the boy got her in time to register the final clutch.

The elimination of quite a lot of objectionable and unnecessary scenes which tend to weaken this and cheapen it would help the production quite a bit, but it will never become anything exceptional, because the same story has been done many, many times and there's nothing sufficiently distinctive about the treatment, the personality of the players or the atmosphere of the production to justify it being presented as a State Rights release. Had the original intention of the producers been followed out, which was to put these productions out as seven 5-reel features under the name of "The Seven Cardinal Virtues," with an advertising campaign back of it like "The Seven Deadly Sins," then this might have gotten some money. As it stands, however, it's just "movie," and, except for the final scenes, isn't very unusual movie.

Betty Brice was quite pleasing in many of her scenes, but occasionally she was not photographed to advantage.

Except for the fact that he used his hands too much, which was possibly due to the lack of close-ups, Murdock MacQuarrie was very satisfactory as the theatrical manager.

Jay Morley as the hero was stiff and actory and rather inclined to overplay.

Jean Hathaway as Mr. Morley's mother was crude from start to finish. She never registered satisfactorily.

The worst sets were those found in the home of the hero's mother. Nearly all of these were bad, and they persisted in showing one shot where a back drop was plainly in evidence, which was supposed to be a garden showing through some windows. The back-stage stuff was interesting and rather pleasing.

A number of the titles were badly worded, and it was noticeable that the name of one of the characters, "Randall," was spelled that way in some titles, and" Randell" in others. Surely such things are inexcusable when there has been plenty of time to make corrections.

The Box Office Angle

You can probably get this by as a routine offering because the final scenes are rather pleasing, which results in giving a better impression than the first of the offering did.

To be sure, there's nothing unusual about this from any angle, and I am afraid that Betty Brice has had so few pictures in the past year or two that her name will be worth very little at the box office. Since there has been no campaign of advertising on "The Seven Cardinal Virtues" I wouldn't refer to this as being one of them, because your fans might in some way connect this with the campaign on "The Seven Deadly Sins," which they found to be bad stuff.

If you are booking your house carefully, trying to get the best you can find at all times, you can very safely pass this over because it certainly is not worth hunting up. But if you like to shoot in a moderate-price offering once in a while, figuring that it will sneak by and make you a little money, then there's every possibility that you can figure this as one which you can "soft pedal" through without any serious complaint. Because of the fact that the production varies decidedly in different parts it cannot be said to be altogether weak, and on the whole it is quite as satisfactory as the average program release of the various companies.

"Brighten the Corner Where You Are"

CLEAN LIGHT COMEDY THAT SHOULD PLEASE ANYWHERE

George Hernandez in

UP OR DOWN

Triangle

DIRECTOR AND AUTHOR	Lynn F. Reynolds
CAMERAMAN	Clyde R. Cook
AS A WHOLE	Human and cleverly handled
STORY	Interesting; well twisted
DIRECTION	Registered some good comedy
PHOTOGRAPHY	Good
LIGHTINGS	Good
CAMERA WORK	Good
STAR	Got over
SUPPORT	Good—especially youngster
EXTERIORS	Very well chosen
INTERIORS	Not many
DETAIL	Good
TIME	Fifty-one minutes (5 parts)

WE have been given a story here that is decidedly good. It has twists that will keep your audience guessing and plenty of comedy has been spilled through this so that they will certainly be in good humor when they leave your theatre. The titles were very good.

This started with Hernandez as an ex-convict who was just leaving prison, having in his possession a five-spot, a new suit of clothes which was too big for him, and a shaved head. He met a young author, Jack Gilbert, who was short on ideas, and they formed a compact to go West.

Hernandez was the goat on all work, and Gilbert was his loved child. They stopped near the heroine's home to camp, and while away from their wagon the brother of the heroine started it rolling down a hill, with the result that it was smashed to pieces. The heroine offered to pay the damages, but they came to a satisfactory agreement by letting the author stay at her house to write, while Hernandez took a job as one of the men on the ranch.

To get new ideas for Gilbert, Hernandez committed several thefts, and the blame was laid on "Texas Jack," an outlaw. When Texas Jack finally came to that locality he was captured and put in prison. Hernandez allowed him to escape, and in this way he gave the author the necessary ideas for his book.

Hernandez had an excellent part, grabbing all the sympathy and holding it. He committed a robbery and made you like it. The young boy, Elwood Bredell, was fine. He pulled all the stuff, and more besides, that the ordinary youngster usually wants to try.

I must say that the book which the author was working on appeared like a joke. There was very little stress laid upon that, and when it was mentioned it caused a smile; but you can go after this and say that it is good light comedy that will certainly please.

The detail was very good, and some of the lightings and exteriors proved that the director had gone out and hunted for what he wanted.

In the cast were Fritzi Ridgeway, Jack Curtis, Graham Pette and Eddie Burns.

They had a black cat that was brought into the plot as "good luck," and it was sure some cat!

The Box Office Angle

Go to this and tell them they will like it. The comedy will surely please.

I would mention some of George Hernandez's other pictures, because I believe he is rather well-known and his work in this is excellent.

There is not much you can say about the plot, but I would dwell on the fact that it is good, clean comedy. This is not big, but it should please any audience.

You might say: "If you had a friend who was an author who was short on ideas, would you rob him to help him with his book? Would you let him capture a band of outlaws single-handed with an empty gun so that he could finish his book? See George Hernandez in 'Up and Down.'"

This is a good title. You might use a teaser campaign by simply using a line for a few days as follows: "Have you ever been up and then down?" and then linking up the line with your theatre.

LIGHTINGS AND PLAYERS UNABLE TO SAVE OLD PLOT

Fannie Ward in

ON THE LEVEL

Lasky—Paramount

DIRECTOR	George H. Melford
AUTHOR	Charles Kenyon
SCENARIO BY	Marian Fairfax
CAMERAMAN	Percy Hilburn
AS A WHOLE	Very ancient, well known plot with production of movie caliber
STORY	Dance-hall shero rescued hero, with mother reclaiming him, a la Camille, and forgiveness and clutch on finish
DIRECTION	Had some good lightings but generally just routine production
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied from fine to fair
LIGHTINGS	Some very fine; others just good
CAMERA WORK	Good
STAR	Generally pleasing
SUPPORT	Hero good; others satisfactory
EXTERIORS	A few very good; generally satisfactory
INTERIORS	Acceptable
DETAIL	Satisfactory
TIME	Fifty-one minutes (5 parts)

FIGURED as a routine program movie that is to be used as a filler, I suppose this can get by despite the fact that the story is painfully weak. It's the old, old stuff of the weak hero who is a dope, being rescued by the dance-hall goil who reclaimed him, only to have his Ma step in and pull the Camille stuff by trying to buy the goil off. When son learned that mother was trying to bribe the goil, he bucked, and they had a clutch on the end.

There were some rather good lightings in this and the atmosphere generally was satisfactory, altho at no time did the production register as anything except "just movie stuff" rather well done as to atmosphere.

The star was pleasing, as she always is, and Harrison Ford as the dope hero was quite impressive because of his quiet, forceful manner. The others were satisfactory.

Among those who appeared were Jack Dean, Edythe Chapman, Jane Wolff, Lottie Pickford, James Neill and James Cruze.

The Box Office Angle.

Figured as a filler this may sneak by, but it would seem to me to be decidedly advisable for you to look for productions rather than "movies." Of course, if you are changing every day, it is probably good business to slip in a light one once in a while, provided you can get them at a price which is sight.

I certainly would not pay regular money for this sort of thing, however, because if you are going to pay real money for a production, you are entitled to a good one. Films of this strength can be had at a very low rental if you will only look for them.

ATMOSPHERE AND TREATMENT MAKE THIS PLEASING

Jane Cowl in

SPREADING DAWN

Goldwyn

DIRECTOR ..... Larry Trimble
AUTHOR ..... Basil King
CAMERAMAN ..... Philip E. Rosen
SCENIC EFFECTS BY ..... Everett P. Shinn
ART DIRECTOR ..... Hugo Ballin
AS A WHOLE ..... Atmosphere, sets and lightings make very slender plot and ineffective star register right well
STORY ..... Very ancient situations tied to slender thread, but one of those "beautifully sad" things some women will like to weep over
DIRECTION ..... With distinctive lightings, very good sets and interesting atmosphere touches, ordinary situations were made to seem worthwhile
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Generally very effective and artistic LIGHTINGS ..... Excellent for sets, although not always to best advantage for star
CAMERA WORK ..... Splendid
STAR ..... Failed to make much of an impression
SUPPORT ..... Good but not remarkable
EXTERIORS ..... Some very artistic shots
INTERIORS ..... Very good
DETAIL ..... Pleasing
TIME ..... Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

IT is being demonstrated very frequently these days what can be accomplished by taking old plot situations—at least old in the films—and making them into pleasing productions for the screen by treatment in the provision of distinctive atmosphere and lightings.

Here we find a story, the slender thread of which is based on a couple of misunderstood situations, and, just because it is laid in the time of the Civil War, with the quaint costumes which the women will love and many artistic lightings and rather pleasing sets, I think it is going to register as a pleasing production.

Miss Cowl is shown as a gray-haired old lady, and her diary is being read by a young woman, with the various scenes referred to in the diary unfolding as the picture. Of course, this construction is always wrong in many ways, because things are shown on the screen which the character who is writing about them couldn't, or didn't, know about. However, it is generally accepted and no one will quarrel over that fact.

Despite the age of the plot idea I have a hunch that most of the women will think it is very good because it is "se beautifully sad."

Personally, I can't see Miss Cowl for screen work—at least not from this production. She isn't beautiful, is apparently rather difficult to light, because in some scenes she surely didn't show to advantage—and she failed to register enough personality to mark her as a big possibility. In other words, if the average fan were to see her without knowing who she might be, she would be proclaimed very ordinary. Miss Cowl's reputation as a Broadway star will carry her over in this production, and possibly in later work we may find that she has something which is needed for the screen.

The fire-in-the-theatre sequence, which seemed to be like one of those things which they wish in a story which lacks material, was very well handled and probably the most effective sequence in the entire production.

The supporting cast was quite satisfactory, but none of the players stood out particularly. The atmosphere and lightings dominated the offering.

In the cast were Orme Caldara, Harry Spinger, Florence Billings, Alice Chapin, Helen Blair, Mabel Ballin and Edmond Low.

The Box Office Angle

This is a good, safe bet if you will plant in the minds of your patrons beforehand the fact that it is a sweet, sentimental story of a shattered romance. At the end of the film we have a scene suggesting the union of the lovers in "the spreading dawn," and this would be wonderfully effective if you could persuade the Goldwyn people to, in some way, eliminate the bit where the young lovers in the story proper walk out so nonchalant-like upon Miss Cowl after she has just died. They don't seem to be in the least bit concerned about the fact that the old lady has cashed in, and this jars to such an extent that it detracts decidedly from the effectiveness of the finale.

I would center all of the attention upon the fact that this is Miss Cowl's first appearance for Goldwyn, but be sure not to say that it's her first appearance on the screen—because it isn't. She appeared in a production released by Universal many months ago. Make it plain that the story has been very artistically produced, and, in catering to the ladies, emphasize the fact that it is a tale of crinoline days.

In your advance billing you might arouse interest by a heading—"Did you ever keep a diary?" If you will run this for a few days and then tie it up with the "Spreading Dawn," it may start something. In the production all of the titles are registered in the form of the diary written by Miss Cowl as a young lady.

SID OLCOTT'S "THE BELGIAN"
Illustrated by
ERNEST STERN, Inc.,
The Title Man
729 Seventh Ave. Bryant 8973

An Exclusive Photoplay Trade Journal.
Published Weekly.
THE CANADIAN MOVING PICTURE DIGEST
100% Circulation in Canada.
Orpheum Theatre Bldg. Montreal, P. Q.

VERY OLD SITUATIONS IN GOOD ATMOSPHERE MAY GET BY

Olive Tell in

THE UNFORSEEN

Empire All-Star—Mutual

DIRECTOR	John B. O'Brien
AUTHOR	Capt. Robert Marshall
SCENARIO BY	G. Whittaker
CAMERAMAN	William Crolly
LIGHT EFFECTS BY	Frank Bangs and R. H. Kelly
AS A WHOLE	Should have been cut; is much too long at present
STORY	Painfully ancient
DIRECTION	Gave good atmosphere, but couldn't save story
PHOTOGRAPHY	Fine
LIGHTINGS	Well handled
CAMERA WORK	Quite good
STAR	Looked good; David Powell was really the star
SUPPORT	Good
EXTERIORS	Beautiful
INTERIORS	Good
DETAIL	Slipped several times
TIME	Seventy minutes (5 parts)

THIS should have been a pleasing picture, but it ran seventy minutes, which was quite some too much. It could be cut to fifty minutes and be decidedly better.

Olive Tell, the daughter of a rich senator, fell in love with a New York clubman and ran away to be married, only to have the man lose his money before the ceremony was performed, wherewith he quit cold on the proposition.

That night the clubman committed suicide, but before this he had met a friend and had introduced Miss Tell as his wife. Later Miss Tell married David Powell, who was a blind author, and for a few years they lived very happily. Later the friend of the first man came upon the scene and recognized Miss Tell as the woman he had met. This he told Powell, and when Powell's sight was restored through an operation, he also recognized his wife as the woman he had seen with the other man.

This caused a misunderstanding, which was cleared up through a letter received by a friend, sent to him by the suicide just before he had committed the deed. This letter had followed the friend around the world and was just delivered to him at that time. This plot is surely an old friend.

We were given some beautiful shots in this, and the lightings were decidedly effective. The photography was much above par.

David Powell, as the author, troubled with his eyes, was able to see parades, read and do anything that an ordinary man can do with his eyes, and then at times he seemed to be very badly afflicted with bad vision. This didn't convince. One thing that seemed particularly bad to me was where Mr. Powell wrote the dedication of his book to Miss Tell, and they flashed on the screen an insert showing everything thereon typewritten save the word "Dedication," which we saw in bold, black type at the top of the sheet, giving one the impression that this dedication sheet was a blank form that could be filled in when the author had completed a work and wished to dedicate it. There was also a very bad newspaper insert.

Miss Tell as the heroine was certainly good-looking.

David Powell, to my mind, should have been starred in this, since he had the burden of work on his shoulders, and, as he usually does, carried it to advantage.

Others in the cast were Warburton Gamble, Lionel Adams, Fuller Mellish, Eileen Dennis and Helen Courtney.

The Box Office Angle

In this production there was a swan dance that may be worth some money to you. It was well handled, and the girl who did it was an artiste. There was not much of this, but still it may be good to make note of it in your ads.

I would lay particular stress upon Olive Tell as a Broadway star. Your fans may be hardened to that phrase, but it often helps you get by. I believe Dave Powell has many friends among your regular patrons. In this he was decidedly pleasing, and, combining his work with Miss Tell's beauty, your audiences will probably be pleased with the production. It moves too slowly —that's sure—but on the whole I believe you can get away with it.

SCENES SHOWING FRENCH MILITARY SYSTEM VERY INTERESTING

FRANCE IN ARMS

French Production—Pathe—War Scenic

AS A WHOLE	High grade news-weekly with some thrillers
STORY	None
PHOTOGRAPHY	Excellent
CAMERA WORK	Great
STARS	Showed Joffre and Pershing at beginning and end
SUPPORT	French army and munition workers
EXTERIORS	Camps and battle front
INTERIORS	Munition plants
TIME	Fifty minutes (5 parts)

THIS started off with a shot of General Joffre and General Pershing in their respective uniforms talking together in the open, with some titles that will be sure-fire for the patriots in your audience. From there we went to scenes showing several notables of the French Government, including President Poincare and General Petain, with scenes showing the workings of the military forces in France.

We then had some very interesting bits showing many different types of guns used in the present war, from rifles to 13-inch howitzers and all grades and sizes of intermediate guns. Then we saw the training of the troops, the handling of all equipment, and the manufacture of observation balloons and airplanes. They gave us many bird's-eye views taken from airplanes in flight, which were indeed very unusual and decidedly interesting. Here we had one of the most remarkable shots that I have ever seen for a thriller, it being that of a crippled airplane falling to earth from a high elevation. The cameraman who photographed this had the presence of mind to follow the fall of the plane with his camera until it practically struck the ground.

There were also several very wonderful feats of flying shown that will certainly be considered worth while by anyone. There were only a few scenes of wounded soldiers with dressings, bandages, etc. A trench hospital and a base hospital were shown, but there was hardly enough of this to make it in any way objectionable or give one the impression that they are gruesome. There was, in all, only about 100 feet of this stuff, and the company had the good sense to eliminate any scenes that might tend to annoy.

The production ended with a scene similar to that at the introduction, with General Joffre and General Pershing conversing.

Some of the exterior shots were decidedly fine. Some were hazy and not distinct, on account of being taken in early morning light or in the evening at nightfall. A few were harsh, but, allowing for the conditions under which these were taken, and in comparison with recent war scenics from the front found in the newsweeklies, this is indeed very commendable.

The Box Office Angle.

There are quite some statistics registered in the subtitles, but I don't believe that they will cause any disturbance among your patrons. It would be an excellent plan in conjunction with this picture to have someone bring out those points touched upon that are of especial interest. They appear so fast and are over so quickly that if your patrons aren't prepared they will miss many of them.

In showing the range of guns, in titles, they gave all measurements in terms of yards. Most people are not accustomed to thinking in "yards," but if your lecturer can say that 3,000 yards is about 2 miles, etc., etc., I think that your audiences will be able to appreciate this film much more.

As an authentic film showing the workings of the French military system this should be a winner.

VERY ANCIENT STORY LIFTED A LITTLE, BUT DRAGGED TOO MUCH

Catherine Calvert in

BEHIND THE MASK

U. S. Amus. Corp.—Art Dramas

DIRECTOR	Mme. Alice Blache
AUTHOR	Charles Turner Dazey
SCENARIO BY	Frederick Rath
CAMERAMAN	John G. Haas
AS A WHOLE	Slowed action by too many and too long titles
STORY	Ruined father avenged by daughter; old blind situation
DIRECTION	Allowed extras to "act," but kept atmosphere good
PHOTOGRAPHY	A little fuzzy, but not bad
LIGHTINGS	Varied from good to fair
CAMERA WORK	Rather lazy
STAR	Looked like a real girl—not beautiful, but pleasing
SUPPORT	Principals good; extras poor
EXTERIORS	Decidedly good
INTERIORS	Good
DETAIL	A bad double exposure
TIME	Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

ALTHO Catherine Calvert isn't what one might call a beautiful woman, she is certainly delightfully natural on the screen, and we found as the production progressed that Miss Calvert held her audience more and more.

The story was the old idea of the young girl, whose father had been ruined by a business associate becoming this man's secretary, with revenge resulting. Miss Calvert learned that this man had caused all the trouble, and so she decided to revenge her father by marrying the man who was supposed to be engaged to the financier's only child. This she did and then found that she hated the man, and finally left him.

Later, after her child was born, Miss Calvert became blind, and her husband, playing the part of a friend of her father's from the West, had an operation performed on Miss Calvert, which resulted in her sight being restored, and everything ended just as we expected.

There were a good many beautiful outdoor shots, and I believe the director must have put in some time picking out these locations. They certainly showed care in composition. The interiors were very good.

The worst feature of this production, I believe, were the subtitles. There were many that were entirely unnecessary, and also a great many more that were decidedly too long. This slowed up the action and caused it to drag badly.

They showed scenes of the death of the father with entirely too much detail, which is always bad.

The daughter of the financier was far from a good looking girl, but she handled her part—that of a self-willed, selfish daughter of a rich man—very satisfactorily.

When the hero picked up Miss Calvert after she had been assaulted by a tramp, he certainly did have his hands full. It looked as if he could hardly stagger.

It seemed rather funny that they should have accused the husband of Miss Calvert of being a brute because he kept his wife home on the first night after their marriage. I don't believe this is generally considered brutish. The baby born to them was shown for a period of two years, but in all that time the child displayed no development at all. But it was some cute little youngster.

They brought in a comedy touch that got quite a generous chuckle. It came where Dick Tucker sat down on a box in front of a cabin door and unhappily sat upon a nail. This was slapstick stuff, but it brought the desired comedy relief at the proper moment and sent a ripple thru the entire house.

In the cast were Flora Nason, Charles Halton, Charles Dungan and Kirke Brown.

The Box Office Angle.

This is not a particularly pleasing picture and I wouldn't say much about it if I were to run it, except to mention the fact that Miss Calvert is a new star you are sure your patrons will like. If you don't have to play it, I think it would be advisable to pass it by, since it is quite draggy at times.

Piedmont Pictures Corporation

FELIX MALITZ, General Manager.

729 Seventh Avenue

Confidential Buying and Selling Agents for United States and Foreign Countries.

Beynon's Scores Will Solve Your Musical Problems. Reasonable. Untaxable.

Write

GEORGE W. BEYNON

505 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

ACTION MELO WITH GOOD AND BAD SPOTS NEVER CONVINCES

Mary Anderson and Alfred Whitman in

THE FLAMING OMEN

Vitagraph

DIRECTOR.....William Wolbert
AUTHOR.....Andreas de Segurola
CAMERAMAN.....Reginald E. Lyons
AS A WHOLE.....Fairly interesting but unconvincing and unimpressive melo
STORY.....Held attention but never really registered
DIRECTION.....Gave some very good atmosphere and stirring bits of action, but failed to make characterizations effective
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent, except makeups brought out too plainly at times
LIGHTINGS.....Some very effective; generally satisfactory
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STARS.....Quite satisfactory as movie hero and shero, but failed to make characterizations intimate and human
SUPPORT.....Acceptable, altho rather actory
EXTERIORS.....Some very fine; well chosen for atmosphere
INTERIORS.....Good
DETAIL.....Acceptable
TIME.....Fifty-nine minutes (5 parts)

THIS was rather a weird story having to do with Peruvian Indians, the Incas, the situation being developed from an Englishman having deserted the Indian mother of his son, with the son afterwards adopted by an English lord when the mother committed suicide.

Twenty years later this adopted son became an English lord and fell in love with the daughter of his father by a second marriage. About that time a Peruvian girl came to England to school, and he became interested in her. Whenever he talked with his English half-sister he saw a vision of an Indian woman killing herself before an image, which finally caused him to go back to Peru for his health.

Then the author obligingly brought all the characters to Peru and they pulled one of those Western melodramatic finishes with the Indians on the warpath surrounding the little party of characters, with the result that someone had to ride to the rescue, etc., the finale being that the father of the boy and girl was killed, the girl who was the hero's half-sister was also killed and the lovers were left to do the clutch.

During this final melodrama they brought the dying father who had deserted the hero's mother to the foot of the image where she had killed herself, and there we found this man, who had been drinking heavily, fondling the skull of the woman who had died twenty years before. Certainly this was a pleasing thought—I don't think!!

They gave us a few very pretty exterior shots, and the general atmosphere was classy, as were the English and Peruvian sequences.

Mr. Whitman, as the Indian who had trouble with his visions, was satisfactory, and Miss Anderson, as the dark-skinned lass, was very pretty and rather pleasing in her characterization.

Louella Smith, as the half-sister of the hero, was good, and Clara King made the part of the heros' mother effective. The remainder of the cast were inclined to overplay, this being particularly true of the man playing Watkins, whose makeup was very bad upon almost every occasion.

In the cast were Otto Lederer and S. M. Jennings.

The Box Office Angle.

If your people like action and wild meller with a little bit of romance that doesn't have to be real, you can probably get this by as a very satisfactory offering. Never at any time will it really ring true, but it keeps moving fairly well and has been done in a somewhat different setting.

I wouldn't figure this as more than a one-night filler and it's about on a par with the recent productions in which Mary Anderson has been presented. If you have been able to get these by satisfactorily, then this one can go thru.

I would bill it as a melodrama of Peru. I think you will do just as much business if you call it that, and certainly that gives you an alibi should any one try to kick.

CHARACTERIZATION HELPED VERY ORDINARY MOVIE PLOT

William Desmond in

FIGHTING BACK

Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Raymond Wells
AUTHOR.....Harry Shumate
SCENARIO BY.....Alving H. Nietz
CAMERAMAN.....Pliny W. Horne
AS A WHOLE.....Good characterization by star
STORY.....Lost nerve when drummed out of army
DIRECTION.....Allowed a few slips, but generally very good
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied from fine to fair
LIGHTINGS.....Good
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR.....Gave good characterization
SUPPORT.....Routine Western types
EXTERIORS.....Some very good
INTERIORS.....Good
DETAIL.....Acceptable
TIME.....Fifty minutes (5 parts)

HERE is a characterization plot that has been nicely worked up to, but it dragged at times. If this were trimmed a little it would be much more pleasing.

Starting with William Desmond as an officer who had been drummed out of the army because he had lost some papers, the remainder of the plot told of his "fighting back" to self-respect with the aid of a dance-hall girl and his final triumph of having his name cleared because his Mexican servant had really stolen the poipers and afterwards confessed.

We had several scenes of a 4th of July celebration in this, and they were very interesting, altho they didn't advance the plot to any extent. After this celebration they had a rodeo, and some of the touches in this were very good. The shell game was especially realistic, and, altho it was just a short scene, I believe that most of your men will appreciate this bit.

At the rodeo there was too much applause and jumping up and down. This bunch of extras was being directed too much.

They used a "double" for the bucking broncho exhibition, but he was "some" rider. We had some very nice looking exteriors in this, toward the end of the film, and I would mention them in my advertising.

Mr. Desmond's characterization of the man who had lost his nerve was decidedly good, and his change back to real manhood was well handled.

Jack Richardson as "China Mex" registered with nice shadings, and without the great show of brutality that we very often find in such characterizations.

Others in the cast were Claire McDowell, Curley Baldwin, Tom S. Guise, Josie Sedgwick, Pete Morrison, Thornton Edwards and William Ellingford.

The Box Office Angle.

This film will slide by, but I would not argue very much about it. It is just "good." As it stands it is a little slow, and if you have an audience who likes action, I would advise you to pass it by. If your patrons like character studies, I believe that you can play this to advantage.

It might be well to mention Claire McDowell's name. She has quite a prominent part and is very good. I believe that she is rather well known over the country.

I wouldn't say anything about the story, because if you mention the plot most of your patrons will know it by heart.

INTERESTING AND FAIRLY WELL DONE. WILL SATISFY

Mme. Olga Petrova in

MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY

Pop. P. & P.—Metro

DIRECTOR	Burton L. King
AUTHOR	Mme. Petrova
SCENARIO BY	Emma B. Clifton
CAMERAMAN	Harry B. Harris
AS A WHOLE	Interesting action story centered around star
STORY	Unwritten law applied to man and woman, developed by contrast
DIRECTION	Gave good lightings and some pleasing atmosphere, keeping action interesting
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied from fine to only fair, but was generally good
LIGHTINGS	Many very effective; generally good
CAMERA WORK	Good
STAR	Distinctive personality helped carry situations; occasionally not lighted to advantage
SUPPORT	Good
EXTERIORS	Satisfactory
INTERIORS	Good
DETAIL	Satisfactory
TIME	Fifty-four minutes (5 parts)

WE have come to look with suspicion upon Metro-Petrova productions, but this one gets by very satisfactorily, with the exception of some closeups of the star wherein she was badly lighted. I can't understand why these were not omitted, since they certainly were not essential.

The story is one which tells of Petrova marrying a young alwyer who successfully defended a case with the "unwritten law" as the defense. Later we find Petrova in the position of discovering that her home was being broken up by a woman, and she killed her husband, with a trial scene following wherein she seemed to be in a stupor.

When the attorney made a plea for mercy she arose and stated that she didn't want mercy, but justice—that the unwritten lay should apply to a woman as well as to a man.

At this point we found that Petrova had been writing a play, and that all of the action from the time of her husband's successful defense of one of their friends up to the present had been a part of the play, so that she really hadn't killed him at all.

This surprise twist thing on the end—in dream, story or play form—has been done quite extensively in pictures, and so isn't the novelty that it proved on the stage when George M. Cohan pulled it in "The Seven Keys to Baldpate." As a matter of fact, Mr. Cohan was simply taking motion picture construction and applying it to the stage at that time. Nevertheless, it serves.

At the first of this they had a very effective scene showing a little dinner party, with the various guests introduced by closeups, and this scene was distinctive and unusual because of the lightings employed. Unfortunately, however, the closeups of Mme. Petrova shown in this sequence were bad. They certainly should be eliminated. At other times there were a few closeups that were not good, but generally she looked truly distinctive and beautiful, with her dominant personality carrying over many situations that, except for her presence, would have been ordinary.

Mahlon Hamilton as the young husband was quite satisfactory, and Violet Reed, the little blonde who wrecked the star's home in the play she wrote, looked very pretty in many of her closeups.

The Box Office Angle.

This isn't nearly so bad as some of the other Petrova-Metro pictures have been, altho it has weak spots. I believe that you can safely play it, and surely no one will have a genuine kick on it, because the story is melodrama, holds right well, and Petrova as a star is certainly distinctive and beautiful enough to satisfy anyone.

With any pictures of Petrova to be played at this time I would make mention of the fact that she now has her own company and has finished her first big production for the First National Exhibitors Circuit, which has been named "A Daughter of Destiny."

The whole story of this builds up to the final speech made by the star—"Shall there be one law for the woman and another for the man?" I would center all of my advertising on that one point, tying it up with the billing of the star.

If a few of the closeups of Petrova were removed, this would make a decidedly more pleasing impression.

CRANE WILBUR

ART DRAMAS PROGRAM

Eye of Envy — Blood of His Father
Unto the End — Devil McCare
Just Jim

"Brighten the Corner Where You Are"

ACTION MELO WITH TWISTS THAT WILL INTEREST

Herbert Rawlinson in

THE MAN TRAP

Bluebird

DIRECTOR ..... Elmer Clifton
AUTHOR ..... Waldemar Young
CAMERAMAN ..... Virgil E. Miller
AS A WHOLE ..... Plenty of action
STORY ..... Wrongly imprisoned boy escapes and clears name
DIRECTION ..... Kept it interesting, although only a movie
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Good
STAR ..... Pleasing hero
SUPPORT ..... Good
EXTERIORS ..... Well chosen
INTERIORS ..... Matched atmosphere, although some sets showed cheap construction
DETAIL ..... Very good
TIME ..... Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

THIS started out with several prison scenes and some "emotional" stuff, but later became an action melodrama which was interesting and speedy.

We found Herbert Rawlinson as a convict in prison. He had been wrongly convicted of a crime that had been committed by the editor of the paper on which he was the star reporter. He escaped from prison to wreak vengeance on the politician who had double-crossed him.

That night the editor was murdered, which saved Rawlinson the trouble of "getting square." Later it developed that the political friend had murdered the editor, and Rawlinson found papers proving his innocence, in the possession of the poltician. The man who had eloped with the hero's sweetheart proved himself to be a coward, and so we have the clutch between Rawlinson and the girl.

They had a trial in this, but I am glad to say that it occupied very little footage, and we didn't have the burdensome detail that we are accustomed to see.

In the fight between Rawlinson and the politician, Rawlinson used his fists in a way that didn't allow for the fact that he had been shot through the arm

There was one very bad spot in the story. It was where Rawlinson escaped from prison and went immediately to his home. His home was guarded by a couple of plainclothesmen, but Rawlinson got in and out without being seen. In the first place, I don't think a man would go to his home after escaping from prison, since he would know that it was being watched, and, if he did go and it was being guarded as it was in this case, he would certainly have been captured. Any fan will kick about this.

Frank MacQuarrie as the crooked politician was certainly "willunous." Others in the cast were Ruby De Lafayette, Sally Starr, Jack Nelson and Marc Fenton.

The Box Office Angle

Taken as a whole, this production will please as action melo. There is speed to it, plenty of thrills, and the twists will keep any audience guessing.

Herbert Rawlinson has had some good films lately If you have shown any of his stuff I would certainly mention it in my advertising. I believe that he has quite a following.

You might say: "How would you elude bloodhounds if they were trailing you? See 'The Man Trap.'" "Do you believe in circumstantial evidence? See 'The Man Trap.'"

CUTE KID STUFF MAKES THIS PLEASING LITTLE OFFERING

Mary McAlister in

YOUNG MOTHER HUBBARD

Essanay—Perfection

DIRECTOR ..... Arthur Berthelet
AUTHOR ..... Charles Mortimer Peck
AS A WHOLE ..... Entertaining, clean kid picture with a gulp or two STORY ..... "Child welfare" rapped too much DIRECTION ..... Handled kids nicely
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Clean-cut, with no attempt for effects
LIGHTINGS ..... No attempt for anything out of the ordinary
CAMERA WORK ..... Good
STAR ..... Is some reg'lar kid
SUPPORT ..... Children fine; others overdrawn in some bits
EXTERIORS ..... Very good, but nothing exceptional
INTERIORS ..... Suited atmosphere
DETAIL ..... Good
TIME ..... Fifty minutes (5 parts)

LITTLE Mary McAlister has a splendid opportunity in this and gets it over without bad overplaying such as we very often find with kid stars. Mary is a very cute kiddie, and she has been held nicely within the bounds of what an ordinary child might do under certain circumstances. The little girl playing Mary's sister resembled her a great deal, and her work through the entire production was very commendable.

The kiddie playing Mary's brother, who is a dark-haired youngster, didn't register nearly so well as either of the girls, he not having nearly so engaging a smile as the other two kiddies.

The story of this was very simple, but it was sufficient to hang the work of the children on. It showed us four orphans whose stepfather was a poor farmer who rented a farm from a rich land-owner. The stepfather decided to make a break, and one night he left the children flat.

We were then given a sequence showing the kiddies being taken before the Children's Welfare League, where they were placed in the care of certain people. Since this would have broken up the entire family, they hitched up their horse that night and all four got aboard and started for "somewhere."

They all went to sleep and the old horse walked into the barnyard at the home of the rich land-owner. They were taken in by his housekeeper. In the morning they finally convinced the rich man that he needed them around him, and we saw the kiddies legally adopted by him.

The scenes of the Children's Welfare League were certainly badly handled, and if you have such a society in your town it will arouse a great deal of criticism. I suppose there may be some places where these children's societies are carried on after the manner of the one shown, but I don't really believe that it is common. I fear that this point will cause some antagonism among your patrons. Usually, in these societies they investigate the people who take the children. In this one, although they showed that the kids didn't like the people who were going to care for them, still no one made any objection. It looked like one of the old slave markets. The members of the society were somewhat overdrawn in their characterizations, and in one or two places they showed that they were receiving direction.

In passing, I also want to mention that I have never seen a farmer who came down to breakfast in a black velvet smoking-jacket, and believe me—I've seen some!

The four kiddies were good all the way. One scene showed them in their nightclothes. The boy's was particularly good, it being a nightshirt which hit him about the knees.

There was one point in construction worthy of comment. It was where Little Mary told the housekeeper how they had come to run away. In place of the usual cut-backs that some directors register, they simply flashed a title that read: " . . . And that's why . . . we're here."

In the cast were Russel MacDermott, Bobbie Bolder, William Clifton, Carolyn Irwin and Greenville Bates.

The Box Office Angle

There are several gulps in this, and I figure that your audiences will be more than pleased with the work of these kiddies, because none of them overacted and all were very pleasing. The grown-ups in the production were overdrawn to some extent, but I don't believe you will get any serious kick on that score.

The only possible kick that I can see will come from the Welfare League. In this they certainly do rap them, and if you have any strong feeling in your locality along these lines, it would probably be advisable to square it with them by a personal alibi.

INVOLVED MECHANICAL MELLER MYSTERY HOLDS ATTENTION

Mrs. Vernon Castle in

THE MARK OF CAIN

Astra—Pathe

DIRECTOR.....Frank Hall Crane
AUTHOR.....Carolyn Wells
SCENARIO BY.....Philip Bartholomae
CAMERAMAN.....Arthur C. Miller
AS A WHOLE....Moved and he'd attention, but never got beyond movie caliber; did not convince STORY.....Mechanical mystery plot marred by willun's careful planting of alibi which tipped off finish
DIRECTION.....Provided action and some good sets, but failed to make situations ring true
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally pleasing
LIGHTINGS.....Some good effects; generally satisfactory
CAMERA WORK.....Good
EXTERIORS.....Satisfactory; no attempt for artistic composition
INTERIORS.....A few good; generally satisfactory
DETAIL.....Too much at times
TIME.....Fifty-six minutes (5 parts)

THIS never gets beyond the movie meller stage, because it is action from start to finish with little or no attempt at characterization.

The plot is one of those mechanical murder mysteries, and it might have been rather interesting if the willun had not been so persistent about planting his alibi early in the film, since this action on his part will make it very clear to most every one that he is the guy what did the doity deed.

It was one of those "willun wants to marry the heroine and secure the fortune" plots, and, to do this, he killed the old gink and changed his victim's will. Suspicion was thrown upon the young hero, who had been favored by shero as a prospective bridegroom, and hero did a daring escape when accused.

The willun afterwards tried to poison hero, unsuccessfully, which was followed by the hero working out the mystery and causing the willun's arrest.

In passing, I want to note that directors should be careful when using parallel action to have it match. We found Tony Moreno doing a wild and daring escape at one point in this, with many officers pursuing him, and while this chase was on they cut back to the room from which he had escaped, and there Mrs. Castle and other characters were talking as calmly as if they hadn't seen the hero that day. This was, of course, all wrong.

This picture receives its name from the fact that the willun killed the old man with a sword-cane, and the dying man had said that "cane" killed him. The hero's name was "Kane," and that was supposed to be one of the strong bits of evidence against Tony Moreno, who did the hero thing.

Mrs. Castle moved gracefully through the five reels and looked rather pretty on occassion, but she never seemed to leave the role of the dancer being photographed, and this was another item in making the offering unconvincing as drama.

The Box Office Angle

If you can play ordinary mechanical movie mellers and get by with them when the same is supposed to have a touch of mystery, you should be able to get some money on the strength of Mrs. Castle's name. This isn't poorly done; it's just routine action melo. The average audience will consider it interesting, and with Mrs. Castle starred and Tony Moreno as the hero you can probably get this by without any trouble

Statement of the Ownership, Management, Circulation, etc., required by the Act of Congress of August 24, 1912, of "Wid's," published weekly at New York, N. Y., for October 1, 1917, (State of New York, County of New York), ss. Before me, a Notary Public, Queens County, certificate filed N. Y. County, in and for the State and county aforesaid, personally appeared F. C. ("Wid") Gunning, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is the Editor of the "Wid's" and that the following is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management (and if a daily paper, the circulation), etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, embodied in section 443 Postal Laws and Regulations, printed on the reverse of this form, to wit: 1. That the name and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor, and business managers are: Publisher, "Wid's" Films & Film Folk,1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.; Editor, F. C. ("Wid") Gunning, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.; Managing Editor, None; Business Manager, G. H. Fickardt, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y. 2. That the owners are: "Wid's" Films & Film Folk, Inc., 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.; F. C. ("Wid") Gunning, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.; John Harvey, 117 W. 45th Street, New York, N. Y.; G. H. Fickardt, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.; F. J. Seng, 1450 Dayton Street, Chicago, Ill.; Fred Desberg, 322 Euclid Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio; Joe Brandt, 1600 Broadway, New York, N. Y. 3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent. or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: None. 4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company but also, in cases where the stockholders or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by him. 5. That the average number of copies of each issue of this publication sold or distributed, through the mails or otherwise, to paid subscribers during the six months preceding the date shown above is..... (This information is required from daily publications only.) (Signed) F. C. "Wid" Gunning, editor. Sworn to and subscribed before me this 13th day of October, 1917, Frank S. Stanley [seal] Notary Public, Queens County. (My commission expires March 30, 1918.)

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

WILLIAM F. ALDRICH
FEATURE PRODUCER
Screen Club, 117 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO

REGINALD BARKER
DIRECTING
PARALTA PLAYS
Paralta Studio, Los Angeles, Calif.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
PRODUCER

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

WILLIAM C. DOWLAN
PRODUCING METRO FEATURES
Current Release—"THE OUTSIDER"
With Emmy Wehlen.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

JACK HARVEY
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING PATHE PLAYS

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
GOLDWYN

LLOYD INGRAHAM
PRODUCER

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
M. P. D. A.
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
M. P. D. A.
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

R. H. KELLY
STUDIO MANAGER
Empire All-Star Corp. & Mutual Corp.
Glendale, L. I.

HARLEY KNOLES
M. P. D. A.
FEATURES DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 D. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

JOSEPH LEVERING
DIRECTOR

O. A. C. LUND

ASHLEY MILLER
M. P. D. A.
Director—Vitagraph Studios
Brooklyn

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE DIRECTOR
FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.

WEDGWOOD NOWELL
TRIANGLE
Friars Club, N. Y. C.

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITAGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

TOM TERRISS
PRODUCER
VITAGRAPH

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
511 W. 143rd St. Audubon 1941.

JAMES VINCENT
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

BEN WILSON
DIRECTING AND STARRING
UNIVERSAL

CHESTER WITHEY
DIRECTOR

JAMES YOUNG
M. P. D. A.

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Adress—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM A MAGAZINE—IN FACT A SERVICE
THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM
WID'S
INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS
Always Independent
Issued Every Thursday
VOL. III. THURSDAY, NOV. 8, 1917. NO. 45
25 Cents a Copy
$10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

A Problem the Industry Must Solve.

I have raved a number of times about the importance of getting the bulk of your audience in while the feature is NOT on the screen.

I want every one of you boys to sit back and give that five minutes thought, right now!

How many of you are willing to look at a picture starting with the fourth reel, seeing the end of it, and then see a lot of short stuff before you see the first three reels of the feature? Do you realize that that ruins the best picture ever made, figured as entertainment?

There is another angle worthy of careful attention for you fellers who watch the box office. Just remember that all of your patrons who come into the house while the feature is on are going to stay quite a bit longer in seeing the first part through and making it dovetail with the finish, than if they had come in while some short subject was on about which they didn't need to worry their brains.

That item right there means a lot of money every week, providing you are doing business—and of course you ought to be doing business. Possibly if you aren't doing business you should give twenty minutes to go off in a corner and find out why you aren't doing business.

There are two big fundamental things that I think should be remedied immediately in the general handling of the exhibition of pictures. Both of these can be, and should be, taken care of by every real exhibitor at once, but in order to protect his own wares I think the producer is a poor boob if he doesn't do something. He spends many hundreds of thousands of dollars on productions and then allows them to make an unfavorable impression because of the manner in which they are screened.

The two things which need attention immediately are these: First, the item just referred to, that being the question of arranging your program and admission to the house so that patrons would not come in while the feature is on the screen; and the other, an arrangement which would definitely guarantee the speed at which a picture is projected.

Any film can be ruined as entertainment by being run too fast or too slow. Either extreme will kill it. I have suggested in the past, and I am more emphatic today than ever about it, that the producers, as a matter of self-protection, should see to it that a law is passed in every State providing that films be run at a certain speed, with automatically registering speedometers placed upon every projection machine, and sealed to avoid tampering, to register just what speed the machine has been operated.

This is not a complicated proposition; it is a perfectly simple one, and if our producers would take the trouble to provide some intelligent legislation of this character, they might be able to get the worthwhile members of every Legislature—and they're not all crooks!—to a position where they would realize and appreciate the fact that the film industry is no longer a roughneck business in a class with street-fakers and freak sideshow attractions.

I think there is a little food for thought in the above. I have said it before, but it seems that some things have to be said a great many times before anything is done. Those who read say: "Yes, that's a fine idea," and then they proceed to forget all about it. I guess that's what makes life so interesting, but, nevertheless, the film business, probably more than any industry in the world today, needs executives who will sneak off in a corner and inspect themselves and their operations frequently enough to know why things happen that should not.

Francis Ford, the Uni-wersal willun, is going to direct Harold Lockwood, alternating with Fred Balshofer. Things do happen in the film business!

Harry Revier is making "The Grain of Dust" for Ogden, featuring Lillian Walker, here in the East.

The latest is the announcement of Dr. Shallenberger associated with Bob Priest as Sales Agents under the name of Shallenberger & Priest, handling Mr. Schlesinger's Mayfair production, "Persuasive Peggy." Doc Shallenberger was the money back of Thanhouser for many years, and still has quite some. This is the first time that his name has ever appeared, and so some of you fellers might want to know whom he is. I'm givin' you the hunch. Doc was also the money back of Arrow Films.

Mme. Blache is making Bessie Love's first Pathe over in Jersey. They call it "The Spring of the Year." Whad'ye mean, "Spring" in November and December?

Sure enough, those "modest" ads gave us the right hunch. This week Paralta admits that Mr. Hodkinson is great, and W. W. 'fessed up to the fact that he thinks Paralta has made some wonderful pictures.

Herb Brenon is going to pull a picture of "The Lone Wolf's Return," which is a sequel to "The Lone Wolf" now being published in The Saturday Evening Post under the name of "False Faces." It ought to be a great film, and since I understand they have cut the "Lone Wolf" quite a lot, you are probably getting money with it now, with this as a good follow-up.

EXCEPTIONAL ATMOSPHERE AND PLAYERS PERSONALITIES MADE THIS IMPRESSIVE DESPITE STORY AND DETAIL SLIPS

Geraldine Farrar in

THE WOMAN GOD FORGOT

Lasky—Artcraft

DIRECTOR	Cecil B. De Mille
AUTHOR	Jeanie Macpherson
CAMERAMAN	Alvin Wyckoff
ART DIRECTOR	Wilfred Buckland
AS A WHOLE	Wonderfully distinctive and impressive atmosphere, and personalities put this over despite plot
STORY	Gave background of very interesting atmosphere, but had very poor and ancient situations
DIRECTION	Made it quite impressive and had many artistic effects, creating convincing atmosphere
PHOTOGRAPHY	Excellent
LIGHTINGS	Many very effective and generally artistic
CAMERA WORK	Splendid
STAR	Very pleasing, but not made up dark enough
SUPPORT	Very good; made even weak situations register
EXTERIORS	Sets massive and looked real; locations very fine
INTERIORS	Some very fine; generally held atmosphere nicely
DETAIL	Generally very impressive, except conversed too freely
TIME	Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

THE elaborate atmosphere provided for this will put it over with a bang anywhere. Quite some money was spent in providing exterior and interior sets to make this seem real, and the director has certainly succeeded from that viewpoint. Naturally, the attention was focused upon Farrar, and she carried her part in a most satisfactory manner, exhibiting quite some of the bareness which has made Bara's Cleopatra notorious, the only real fault with Farrar's characterization being that she evidently decided that it would be too much trouble to have her skin darkened every time she played a scene, and, as a consequence, she was startlingly white as contrasted with her father, the other Aztecs and even Wally Reid, who was supposed to be a white man. Since Farrar did at least approach Bara's Cleopatra costumes, it would have been quite some problem to apply the paint for each scene, but I have a hunch that her failure to do so is going to be commented on very, very freely everywhere. Be that as it may, I don't think it will keep any nickels away from your box office.

The story was decidedly ordinary. We had a wonderful lot of elaborate atmosphere and a famous star and director fiddling around with a plot which amounted to this:

The Spaniards landed in Mexico and one was sent to see Montezuma, with the result that he was made a prisoner. At first glance Montezuma's daughter fell for him, and so she shielded him in her boudoir (as they used to do in the good old Civil War stories).

When he was discovered later the Spaniards had to come to the rescue, and we had a big battle all over the exterior set and thru the interiors, with it resulting in Montezuma being made a captive. When the old Kink discovered that daughter had betrayed him, he delivered a curse on her head that was quite some little swear. Then they had some more battle, with a title telling us that it lasted several days, until finally the Spaniards' horses and gunpowder turned the tide in their favor.

We then saw Farrar as the last of the Aztecs freed by the Spaniards, and she drifted out into a very, very beautiful exterior, in front of a waterfall, where Wally Reid who had been floating around in armor thru all the footage, came up and said he was going to stick around. I kept waiting to see the effect of the curse that old man Montezuma had wished onto his daughter, but, by heck!—it looked to me like she was going to live in some Paradise, according to the finish.

It was a great idea to make this big story of the Spaniards conquering the Aztecs, because such a costume production affords opportunity for the spending of a lot of coin which would provide an atmosphere worthy of such a star as Farrar. Nevertheless, it seems to me that it would have been decidedly advisable to have taken a little bit of the coin and spent it on the preparation of a real story.

It was painfully noticeable from start to finish that these Spaniards had no trouble whatever in talking with the Aztecs, and we also found the Mexicans experiencing no difficulty whatever in making themselves understood without resorting to the sign language. Surely it will seem that the Aztecs were "civilized."

Except for the fact that she was such a fair-skinned Aztec—which may have been due to the fact that she wanted to live up to her name of being "fairer" (who let that feller in?), the star certainly was pleasing.

Wally Reid was a very good hero, being the type loved by most of the ladies, and Theodore Kosloff as the willunous Aztec was quite graceful in most of his maneuvers, if he did pose a little bit too much once or twice.

Hobart Bosworth was a dominant Cortez, and Raymond Hatton seemed a real monarch.

The remainder of the cast were very satisfactory, Walter Long being particularly wicious lookin' as the big guy who bossed the sacrifices.

The Box Office Angle.

Of course you can get real money with Farrar in a De Mille production—particularly when you show them stills registering the size of this. I would be careful, however, to center the attention upon the spectacular feature, the interesting historical connection and the star and director, rather than to allow them to think about the actual story, which is pretty poor. The name itself sounds good and can be plugged hard.

In building your campaign on this you might arouse considerable interest by such lines as—"Who was Montezuma? Do you know the story of his downfall? Do you know that the Aztecs, who ruled Mexico centuries ago, were civilized to the extent of using finger bowls?" A campaign along that line, which should get people talking about the Aztecs, would be a good preliminary hit to use before you announce the title of the production or Farrar's connection with it.

Certainly you should get big business with this, and the production will surely please.

"Brighten the Corner Where You Are"

TOOK TOO LONG TO GET TO VERY GOOD FINAL SCENES

Carlyle Blackwell in

THE BURGLAR

Peerless—World

IRECTOR.....Harley Knoles
UTHOR.....Augustus Thomas
ENARIO BY.....Virginia Tyler Hudson
AMERAMAN.....Andre Barlatier
S A WHOLE....Final sequences based on famous sketch very good; but much too much footage to get to that point
TORY.....Situations building to finale very old and convenient, with Jimmie Valentine flavor
IRECTION.....Gave good atmosphere and made some incidents very effective
HOTOGRAPHY.....Varied from fine to fair
GHTINGS.....Some excellent; others varied
AMERA WORK.....Varied
TAR.....Satisfactory up to finish and effective in final scenes
JPPORT.....Satisfactory; didn't stand out
XTERIORS.....Some very beautiful; generally good
TERIORS.....Some excellent; generally good
ETAIL.....Very convenient, with errors in titles
ME.....Eighty-three minutes (7 parts)

BASED on the famous little sketch "Editha's Burglar," we find that they have given entirely too much footage to the situations leading up to the finale in this, there being too much of the flavor of "Jimmie Valentine" about these uations, with several rather bad coincidences present. Carlyle Blackwell, thinking he had killed a police- in in a rough-house, fled to another city, where he came a bank employee and married the banker's ughter. Just as he was all set, the man who had ally killed the policeman "just happened" to drop in, response to a message from friends who wanted to b the bank.

Blackwell was then compelled to assist in the robbery, ring the filming of which they used the shooting-from- ove technique, showing the action in many rooms at e same time, which Producer Tourneur used in "Jim- e Valentine."

The robbery was a flivver and Blackwell was sent Sing Sing. He escaped but was reported killed, and friend of the family identified the body which had been scovered as Blackwell's, in order to ease the m his wife, who had been prostrated by the disgrace. Five years later, with Blackwell's wife married again d their child grown up so that Little Madge Evans uld play the part, we found Blackwell robbing his n house, his wife having moved to another city, and re is where the sketch "Editha's Burglar" came in. ese final scenes were very effectively handled.

The coincidences in this jarred quite a lot, particu- ly the convenient arrival of the man who had killed e policeman originally. Had these early coincidences en omitted, the final one of Blackwell robbing his own use would have passed much better.

Since this ran eighty-three minutes when I saw it, ere is no question but that it is about twenty minutes too long. The first 4,000 feet could be reduced decidedly, with the cutting making the story more effective.

The general atmosphere was very satisfactory, with some very beautiful exteriors and generally pleasing sets. There was a little bit of kid stuff introduced, but more could have been made of this.

Madge Evans in the final scenes was very pleasing.

Mr. Blackwell gave one of the best performances he has ever registered, and if the first four reels were reduced in footage his final scenes would have even more strength.

Evelyn Greeley was very pretty at times, but in other scenes didn't show to advantage.

There were a number of errors in the titling, as, for instance, the title which said "A year later," when they showed a baby that was at least seven months old. The title could have just as well been "Two years later"—and, believe me, the folks do check up those things! Another title said that it was after midnight, and we found the editor of a newspaper still at his desk, with the title coming a very few feet afterwards which said: ". . . When morning came." Had this title, "When morning came," been moved before the phone conversation between the police official and the editor, this would have been perfectly all right.

The titles referring to the idea of keeping the news out of the newspapers when a bank official was caught in a robbery and sentenced to twenty years, was truly ridiculous—particularly when one of the illustrations labeled the paper which did print the article, "yellow."

As a burglar the star seemed very nonchalant about turning on the electric lights in the home he was robbing.

In the cast were Victor Kennard, Rosina Henley, Jack Drumier, Richard Clake, Harry La Motte, Justine Cutting and Frank Mayo.

The Box Office Angle.

Unfortunately there is a tremendous amount of unnecessary footage which tends to make this somewhat tiresome before it gets to the effective scenes. If it were trimmed the production would be wonderfully improved.

Considered as it stands, most audiences will like this because of the pathos which registers right well at the end. I would bill this as an adaptation from Augustus Thomas's famous playet, Editha's Burglar," and say in my advertising that it is a story like "Jimmie Valentine" with an exceptionally human and dramatic finale.

Madge Evans has a sufficiently important part at the end to justify your calling attention to her presence, despite the fact that she is not in evidence until almost the end of the picture.

Since this is the 400th picture in which Carlyle Blackwell has appeared, that fact should be a human-interest element worthy of calling attention to.

There are some scenes in this taken in Sing Sing, which may be worthy of some slight mention in your billing. For a catchline you might say: "Would you go to Sing Sing if you were paid $500 a week for it. Carlyle Blackwell did to make THE BURGLAR."

HAROLD LOCKWOOD
Yorke--Metro

Charles France's "THE NATURAL LAW"
Titles by
ERNEST STERN, Inc.,
The Title Man
729 Seventh Ave. Bryant 8973

CHARACTERIZATION IDEA DEVELOPED INTO MOVIE MELLER

Carmel Myers and Kenneth Harlan in

THE LASH OF POWER

Bluebird

DIRECTOR.....Harry L. Solter
AUTHOR.....J. Grubb Alexander
SCENARIO BY.....Fred Myton
CAMERAMAN.....Roy H. Klaffki
AS A WHOLE....Good idea and interesting but too meller
STORY.....Characterization study turned into action meller of ordinary movie caliber
DIRECTION.....Gave some impressive atmosphere and made some scenes very effective, but allowed most of it to become unconvincing movie
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very good
LIGHTINGS.....Some fine; generally good
CAMERA WORK.....Varied but generally good
STARS.....She, pleasing and has emotional register; Harlan excellent, except too emphatic at times
SUPPORT.....Overplayed frequently
EXTERIORS..Some very pleasing; generally satisfactory
INTERIORS..A few—particularly one big set—decidedly impressive, altho big set too vast to seem real
DETAIL.....Satisfactory
TIME.....Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

BASED upon an idea developed from the word "Power," the letters of which were used to form the words "Possession," "Oppression," "Wealth," "Energy" and "Ruin," we had unfolded a tale of a youth whose small-town girl taunted him about being unwilling to go to the city to try for big things. We saw this young man take his place in the business world and come into possession of a secret explosive formula by an accident, which afterwards made him tremendously wealthy, with the result that he became such a menace that financial leaders ordered him assassinated.

Meanwhile, his girl had asked that he get social position, and then married another when he failed to do this fast enough to suit her.

Following the explosion which destroyed the young billionaire and his menace, we found that it was a dream. They sure did make this boy some wealthy, and we ha the usual lot of scenes about a stock market battle whic have lost most of their power to convince in the film thru excess usage.

There was one tremendously large room shown t prove what a big mansion this young gink possesse and while the set was impressive, it was so large as t seem unreal as a part of any one's home.

The basic idea was a very good one, since it provide studies in characterization; but as screened, we find tha too much attention has been given to the action, thereb making it a movie meller.

While Carmel Myers is pretty and has an importan part, the story is really centered around Kenneth Harla as the young man who becomes the financial power. M Harlan was very pleasing except that he became tc emphatic in spots. Miss Myers registered very well an showed decided possibilities.

Gertrude Aster had a small part, which stood ou because of her exceptional beauty.

The other characters were too melodramatic, many c them overplaying very decidedly.

In the cast were Helen Wright, Charles Hill Maile Jack Nelson and T. D. Crittenden.

The Box Office Angle

As program stuff goes, this is a satisfactory mel drama, because the story is more or less interesting, du to the basic idea of developing the words from the le ters P-O-W-E-R. There is no chance of the film regi tering as anything except a movie meller because of th excess of action and minimum of characterization. Th introduction of the anarchists and the plot to kill th billionaire fostered by other financial men was decided too melodramatic.

You might arouse some interest by a little contes stating that you will give a prize to the person guessir the five words formed by the letters P-O-W-E-R developing this story. You might say: "What do P-O-W-E-R mean to you?" "What would you do you suddenly came into possession of half a millic dollars?" You might say: "Is wealth worth while running a little teaser campaign just before you a nounce the name of the picture.

WEIRD VISION FARCE AND STAR'S CHANCE TO DANCE PUT THIS OVER

Olive Thomas in

INDISCREEET CORINNE

Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Jack Dillon
AUTHOR.....H. B. Daniels
SCENARIO BY.....George Elwood Jenks
CAMERAMAN.....Thomas Buckingham
AS A WHOLE.....Interesting light, fast comedy with some good characters
STORY.....A bored society girl in search of adventure
DIRECTION....Kept action fast and atmosphere pleasing
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Not exceptional
LIGHTINGS.....Some fine
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR.....Very good looking
SUPPORT.....Good
EXTERIORS.....Satisfactory; not many
INTERIORS.....Suited atmosphere
DETAIL.....Some groupings not good
TIME.....Sixty minutes (5 parts)

A FOREWORD at the beginning of this offerin sort of prepared us for what was coming.

Olive Thomas was introduced as a socie girl bored with her lot, who was in a romant state of mind and wanted a "past." She start out with her French maid hunting adventure.

They found an ad in the papers calling for two you girls who had had a past, and Miss Thomas interview the company and related her "past" to them. It was su "some" past!

In getting this job Miss Thomas was to work in o position to Josie Sedgwick trying to get a young Sou American millionaire in her power. Both girls tri this and the production ended with Miss Thomas marr ing the gink.

There were certainly a lot of good lightings in th and the interiors were generally classy, keeping the a mosphere right. The subtitles were well worded and h good comedy touches that will be sure-fire laughs f any audience.

Where Miss Thomas told of her past, this was shov on the screen, and it was indeed a most lurid past. Sl was shown dressed as a Siren, and I must say that it was decidedly alluring.

While on the job Miss Thomas was masked in a cabaret and had a chance to pull a couple of very good dances. After she had made the millionaire curious about her she got in trouble with the police, and we had what was nearly a Keystone chase of machines. In one place it surely was "Keystoney" because of the mixups.

Miss Thomas was very pretty, having plenty of pep, and her dancing was certainly "par excellence." Of course, dancing was once her regular job.

George Chesebro, as the South American millionaire, registered a very pleasing personality, and I believe that he will add to his following by his work in this.

The old toothpick millionaire over-reached his points and really was the only jarring note in the production.

Among those who appeared were Joseph Bennett, Annette De Foe, Lillian Langdon, Tom Guise, Lou Conley, Harry Rattenberry, Anna Dodge, Thornton Edwards and Edwin J. Brady.

The Box Office Angle.

This is quite pleasing on the whole. I think you can bank on it as being well worth booking. It isn't big, but it will send them home satisfied.

In advertising this you should lay much stress on the name of Olive Thomas, saying that she does a barefoot dance and an Egyptian dance which are certainly delightful. I would bring to the minds of my patrons the fact that she was formerly of the Ziegfield Follies, and I believe that your fans know that Flo Ziegfield is quite some picker when it comes to good-looking girls. I would also mention Mr. Chesebro, because I believe he is winning a following.

In your ads, a line like these might help: "Have you an interesting PAST? See Olive Thomas in 'Indiscreet Corinne.'"

ORDINARY MELO ROMANCE MADE PLEASING BY STAR AND TREATMENT

Alice Joyce in

THE FETTERED WOMAN

Vitagraph

DIRECTOR	Tom Terriss
ADAPTED FROM	Robert W. Chambers's "Anne's Bridge"
SCENARIO BY	Garfield Thompson
CAMERAMAN	Joseph Schelderfer
AS A WHOLE	One situation developed into much footage, made acceptable by beautiful scenes and pretty closeups of star
STORY	Romance resulting from hero alone answering shero's ad for summer boarders
DIRECTION	Saved it by beautiful exteriors, good closeups and business of dog and parrot
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied from very fine to fair
LIGHTINGS	Many very beautiful but some ordinary
CAMERA WORK	Generally excellent; occasionally only fair
STAR	Very beautiful; appealing personality
SUPPORT	Satisfactory; some hokum comedy types
EXTERIORS	Many very beautiful shots with artistic composition
INTERIORS	Satisfactory
DETAIL	Satisfactory
TIME	Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

DESPITE the fact that the name of the author promised an excellent story, we found here some old melo and then one situation, dragged into too much footage. To be true, it was rather a good situation, but hardly worthy of the footage used.

We found Miss Joyce left alone, possessed of nothing but what seemed worthless land, advertising for summer boarders, with the result that hero alone applied. This resulted in a typical Chambers romance, ending with the clutch after the hero had very easily discovered the evidence proving the shero innocent of a crime which had caused her disgrace.

The first part of the offering had presented the good old stuff of rather in financial difficulties and man who could assist him wanting to marry his daughter, with father committing suicide and daughter lured away by the wicked wun with the result that she was attacked by him, which resulted in a man being shot.

By perjured testimony the shero was sent to a reformatory for the death of this man. Then came the summer-boarder romance, which occupied most of the footage.

Preceding the romance we had about 500 feet of hokum comedy introducing a lot of types on a railroad train, which had nothing whatever to do with the story, but may provide a few laughs. In the country stuff they had a great many beautiful exteriors, some of these being particularly artistic because of the composition.

There were many beautiful closeups of Miss Joyce, and the hero was quite satisfactory. Webster Campbell played this part.

A beautiful dog, and a parrot who was given the comedy line of "Plenty of trouble!" helped quite a lot in breaking up the many love scenes which made up the last half of the production.

In the cast were Donald McBride, Lionel Grey and Templer Saxe.

The Box Office Angle.

With the combination of Alice Joyce and Robert W. Chambers you should do some business with this, and it will probably please as a routine production, because it is beautiful in spots and because Miss Joyce has a decidedly appealing personality which lifts the production all the way. The planting of the one lone boarder at her home is a typical Chambers situation, and the producer has held the attention remarkably well in the last half of the film, considering the small amount of story there was to tie to.

Don't go too strong in your promises on this, but figure it as just a good program production, realizing that it is good principally because it is beautiful on the whole.

Beynon's Scores Will Solve Your Musical Problems. Reasonable. Untaxable.

Write

GEORGE W. BEYNON

505 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Piedmont Pictures Corporation

FELIX MALITZ, General Manager.

729 Seventh Avenue

Confidential Buying and Selling Agents for United States and Foreign Countries.

ATMOSPHERE HELPS OBVIOUS PLOT; WILL PLEASE GENERALLY

Edna Goodrich in

A DAUGHTER OF MARYLAND

Empire All-Star—Mutual

DIRECTOR.....John B. O'Brien
AUTHOR.....Joseph Franklin Poland
CAMERAMAN.....William Crolly
AS A WHOLE.....Started with good characterization but ended with melo
STORY.....Northern boy wins Southern girl
DIRECTION.....Handled scenes nicely but let audience guess situations a reel or two ahead
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Beautiful
LIGHTINGS.....Generally good; often better on sets than on faces
CAMERA WORK.....Good at times; lazy at others
STAR.....Face chalky at times but beautiful in most shots
SUPPORT.....Very good
EXTERIORS.....Very good
INTERIORS.....Excellent
DETAIL.....Good
TIME.....Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

WITH the beautiful atmosphere of this production and the well-chosen exteriors and fine sets shown, I believe it will be good enough to please anywhere.

The story tells of an old Maryland plantation owner who wanted to have a landscape gardener fix up his home. The daughter strenuously disapproved of the Northerner who came to do the work.

We had the willun who ruined the overseer's daughter but was finally made to marry the girl, and who late needing money, murdered the plantation owner. Th guilt was thrown on an old squatter, but this was finall cleared and the willun was shot in the fight. Of cours we had the clutch between the Northerner and the plar tation owner's daughter.

They had several scenes in this of Revolutionary time showing the same interior, and this registered nicely th difference in furniture between the two periods depicte There were several shots of a bunch of pickaninnies tha will be sure-fire.

They gave us a fire with the same old stunt of flashin to it until the building fell, to "prove" it.

In the fight between the willun and the Northerner crowd was standing around, all of whom knew right we that the willun was the guilty man. It seemed funn that nobody else should try to overcome the wicked guy

Miss Goodrich was pleasing as the Southern girl, bu she was given too much light, which made her face stan out chalky white. Had the lightings been toned down, i would have helped the entire offering. In fact, many o the lightings were decidedly too harsh for the faces.

Carl Brickett, as the Northerner, registered very wel He is a very pleasing young hero.

Others in the cast were Helen Strickland, Fred (Truesdell, Wm. Carlton, Myra Brooks, Helen Stricklanc S. J. Burton, Charles Martin and Jack Hopkins.

The Box Office Angle.

Compared with routine program offerings this is de cidedly pleasing as to atmosphere and exterior and in terior shots. The story is not new, but the cast carrie it nicely. It will please.

Center the attention on the star and promise you fans some pleasing bits of atmospheric beauty.

FAST AND CLASSY COMEDY-DRAMA SHOWS STAR TO FINE ADVANTAGE

Constance Talmadge in

SCANDAL

Constance Talmadge Corp.—Select Pictures

DIRECTOR.....Charles Giblyn
AUTHOR.....Cosmo Hamilton
CAMERAMAN.....Hal Young
AS A WHOLE.....Fast light comedy drama that certainly brings star out
STORY.....Holds attention and provides basic ground for good touches
DIRECTION.....Gave distinctive, classy atmosphere, kept action moving and developed best characterization of star since "Intolerance" mountain-girl
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent; some very effective bits
LIGHTINGS.....Generally good; some particularly pleasing
CAMERA WORK.....Excellent
STAR.....Registered pep, personality and screened very beautifully
SUPPORT.....Very good, although subordinate to star
EXTERIORS.....Classy and good composition
INTERIORS.....Very good; gave air of distinction
DETAIL.....Some good touches
TIME.....Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

AFTER the mountain-girl part in "Intolerance," Constance Talmadge slipped rather decidedly in the productions which followed, but here we find her registering a pep and personality that is quite delightful, with the producer giving her such lightings as to make her very, very beautiful a times.

Older sister Norma is going to have to step alon some if Constance is handled in this manner regularly Norma's last picture, "The Moth," was rather pleasing but certainly I believe Constance, in this offering, ferent type of picture from "Panthea," or even "Th she has had her own company. Of course, this is a dif ferent type of picture than "Panthea," or even "Th Moth," but with those points aside and considering th two sisters, I certainly feel that Constance looks prettie and shows more personality of the sort that pleases tha Norma has lately—which is certainly partly due to th fact that Norma has been at a disadvantage because o handling, since both of these girls have proved in th past that they have that which is necessary to registe satisfactorily on the screen.

While there is some drama in this story, it is reall a comedy based upon the fool adventure of a muchl spoiled young woman who aroused some scandal thr a self-willed desire to do things which she shouldn't, wit the result that she deliberately lied herself into the posi tion of the wife of a man she knew only fairly well.

Suddenly finding himself in this startling position, th hero accepted the situation and proceeded to treat th star as if she were his wife. We had some very interest ing scenes on a yacht after hero had kidnapped his sup posed-to-be wife, and finally after an explosion whic registered his bravery, we had her really agreeing t marry him on the finish.

The story held the interest but wasn't what could b called convincing, because there were a number of ver improbable situations, with the accident to show the hero's bravery coming at the proper moment, and the convenient murder of the willun drifting in at just the right spot to remove him as a scandal-monger obstacle to the marriage of hero and shero.

The average fan will not fuss about story points, however, as long as the production itself moves rapidly, provides some good comedy bits and registers an atmosphere of distinctive class with a very pretty star who has pep.

The supporting cast was very satisfactory, altho the action was so decidedly centered around Miss Talmadge that none of the other characters really demanded attention to any great extent.

Harry C. Browne as the hero was supposed to be one of those self-reliant ginks who has "shot big game," etc., and he played the half-embarrassed but game victim of a fool situation very satisfactorily.

J. Herbert Frank as the willun was quite wicious, but served the purpose as such.

The Box Office Angle

If you have played Constance Talmadge in the Fine Arts productions I would go after this emphatically as her first film under new management and new direction. It will create considerable interest if you stir up the idea of a little friendly rivalry between the two sisters as to who has the best productions, because that has a human angle that will arouse some talk.

You can safely say that this is a distinctive, beautifully presented production, and the name of Cosmo Hamilton as the author of what was a successful novel should help somewhat.

The fact that Charles Giblyn, the producer, has made such productions as "The Phantom," "Peggy," and "The Price She Paid" should help, because I think the fans are beginning more and more to pay attention to who directs a production.

As catchlines you might say, "What would you do if the wealthiest girl in the country suddenly proclaimed to her family that you were her husband? Would you make her live up to it? See 'Scandal.'"

REAL STAR IN PLOT THAT PROVIDED ALL THE SURE FIRE STUFF

William S. Hart in

THE COLD DECK

Ince Production—S. A. Lynch—State Rights

DIRECTOR ..... William S. Hart
AUTHOR ..... J. G. Hawks
CAMERAMAN ..... Joe August
ART DIRECTOR ..... Robt. A. Brunton
AS A WHOLE..... Has barrels of action, some good pathos, sufficient romance, and is a sure winner
STORY..... Had a little of everything, making fine background for star
DIRECTION..... Kept dramatic scenes tense with good pathos touches and splendid tempo to action; atmosphere was very good
PHOTOGRAPHY..... Varied from fine to fair; generally satisfactory
LIGHTINGS..... Mostly straight stuff; little attempt for effects
CAMERA WORK..... Varied; generally satisfactory
STAR..... The one and only Bill Hart
SUPPORT..... Some excellent types and good characterizations
EXTERIORS..... Many beautiful shots with very good composition
INTERIORS ..... Satisfactory
DETAILS..... Good touches; situations convenient
TIME..... Seventy minutes (5 parts)

PRODUCED under the old Ince-Triangle regime, this was held out by the new Triangle owners and made a State Rights production.

The story provides a background of most everything that could be expected in a Hart melodrama, from card games to hold-ups, with a couple of clashes between the hero and willun when the wicked wun attacked some female.

There was a very convenient twist where the hero decided to hold up the same stage that the willun had picked out, in the very same location, which resulted in willun shooting the messenger, with hero accused of it. Eventually hero escaped in the wild chase and "just happened" to pick out the same redwood tree (of all the thousands in the woods) in which the willun had hidden the express box taken from the stage coach.

Bill captured the willun at the end when he went to take the money from the express box, and rode into the town with the coin and the guilty wun, being proclaimed by the villagers as a real guy.

There was an effective streak of pathos running thru this, having to do with a sister of the hero who didn't know he was a gambler, and the hero's decision to hold up the stage came thru his knowing that his sister was dying and needed a doctor, while he was cleaned out of cash because the vamp who had tried to make him love her had slipped a "cold deck" into the game when Bill had refused to pay her the attention she desired.

I don't need to tell you about Bill Hart, and the only thing you need know in this instance is that the story, despite its convenient spots, has sufficient action mixed with pathos and romance to hold the attention all the way, with the star as the center of most of the situations and the story bad spots sufficiently covered up by treatment that few will worry about them.

There were several scenes in the woods—particularly those in and out of the redwood trees—which were printed entirely too dark.

Alma Rueben as the vamp was quite some attractive, and Mildred Harris as Mr. Hart's sister made a pathetic contrast. Sylvia Bremer as the daughter of the express messenger had a number of emotional scenes in which she occasionally seemed to be hitting on high too much, but I believe the general impression will be satisfactory.

The remainder of the cast was very satisfactory, with some good types. Among those who appeared were Edwin N. Wallock, Chas. O. Rush and Joe Knight.

The Box Office Angle

I think the combination of effective, artistic exteriors, fast, interesting action, some pretty girls, and the one and only Bill Hart makes this an excellent offering. Since the new Hart-Artcraft picture has been held up by the courts, you should be able to make a clean-up on "The Cold Deck" right now, it being the only new Hart offering in many weeks. While the story weaknesses will be caught by the best fans, the treatment of the entire offering is sufficiently good to keep any one from worrying much over the coincidences.

You might, in this, add a little interest to the offering by using Alma Rueben's picture along with that of Bill Hart, and some catchlines. Under Miss Rueben's picture say, "Could you refuse to love her?"; and under Bill Hart's ipcture say, "He did!" Then use the line, "See 'The Cold Deck.'"

ORDINARY WESTERN THAT FAILS TO START ANYTHING

Roy Stewart in

THE MEDICINE MAN

Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Clifford Smith
AUTHOR.....Jack Cunningham
SCENARIO BY.....Alvin Nietz
CAMERAMAN.....Cap Crane
AS A WHOLE.....Western in ordinary atmosphere
STORY.....Unknown heiress cheated out of inheritance with hero to rescue
DIRECTION.....Kept action interesting
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Not good
LIGHTINGS.....Good on faces in closeups
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR.....Good for this type character
SUPPORT.....Very good—especially Challenger
EXTERIORS.....Some very fine
INTERIORS.....Routine Western stuff
DETAIL.....Good
TIME.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

WE see Roy Stewart this time as a Westerner who came to a bad town and was later elected sheriff. He found a mine robber who developed into the willun.

A medicine-wagon show came to town. The willun recognized the "doctor's" supposed daughter as the daughter of the man whose mine had not been worked for a long time but which was very rich, and he schemed with the "doctor" to get possession of the mine. Stewart came in and broke up their plans, finally marrying the girl.

The exteriors were better than what we have been seeing in recent Triangles of the Western type. The lighting on the faces of the characters was very good, but, as a whole, the photography was much below par. We had a lot of comedy titles, and the old constable made his part stand out.

The interior sets in this were about the usual run in "Westerns"—in keeping with the atmosphere.

Roy Stewart was good as the Western sheriff, but he had scant opportunity.

Ann Kronan, the girl, was certainly good looking, but she appeared to be about fourteen or fifteen years old—decidedly too young to marry Stewart.

Others who appeared were Carl Ullman, Wilbur Higbee, Aaron Edwards and Percy Challenger.

The Box Office Angle.

I wouldn't go after this if I could possibly get away from it. It is just passable and you probably would not have a great many kicks on account of it, but surely it would not win any praise. It's just a routine movie.

If you must play it I would not mention the story. Just say that it has plenty of action and some good riding.

Pass it if you can.

REMARKABLY EFFECTIVE CHARACTERIZATION AND HUMAN TOUCHES THAT HIT

Elizabeth Risdon in

MOTHER

George Loane Tucker Production—McClure—State Rts.

DIRECTOR.....George Loane Tucker
AUTHOR.....Eden Phillpotts
CAMERAMAN.....Ernest Palmer
AS A WHOLE.....Exceptionally human moments carry central theme in delightful distinctive atmosphere
STORY.....Centered about mother's influence upon her boy
DIRECTION.....Provided very pleasing atmosphere and made human moments hit hard; was some overplaying by supporting cast
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Excellent
LIGHTINGS.....Some very effective bits; generally good
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR....Truly remarkable characterization; exceptionally human and effective
SUPPORT.....Some good types but rather inclined to stiffness and overplaying, as most English artists are EXTERIORS.....Many very beautiful and decidedly interesting locations
INTERIORS.....Very good
DETAIL.....Some excellent little touches
TIME.....Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

IF your patrons enjoy good human touches and excellent characterization this will register as a most enjoyable little production. The atmosphere of the entire offering is decidedly different, since it is English, and most of the locations are very artistic as to composition, because they were picked by Producer George Tucker.

I have seen few characterizations on the screen that rank with the work done by Elizabeth Risdon in this, in the part of the little English mother who felt it her duty to do as much as she could for her boy, who was inclined to go wrong. It is almost unbelievable that this little old lady could be the beautiful, very-much-alive young shero of "The Manx-man" and the present Broadway success, "Misalliance."

The story has some exceptionally human moments, but it also has some melodrama, and, unfortunately, in England, good film actors and actresses aren't as plentiful as they are in this country. For that reason there are a few spots where the playing overreaches, and others where it is a bit stiff.

Considered on the whole, however, the production is a decidedly pleasing one and certainly one which should be joyfully welcomed, because it is human, and decidedly different in many ways. I believe that the average fan will be very much pleased to see a production like this produced in an atmosphere different from that which marks most of our productions made in California and New York. We have no locations in this country like these English scenes, and to my mind the very fact that this has been made on the other side is quite an asset, considered from the standpoint of atmosphere touches.

The main thread of the story develops around a situation where the little mother has strength enough to send her dearly-beloved boy to jail when she finds that he is a thief. This idea is different from most stories and just as effective as it is different. A romance is developed, with the near-calamity of an elopement with another's wife, but all thru the action we find the situations eventually turning to where the mother was the deciding factor.

Certainly this production is a triumph for Miss Risdon and is another proof of Producer Tucker's ability to register human touches and atmosphere. I believe most patrons anywhere would welcome it because of the very effective touches of pathos and the different atmosphere of it all.

The Box Office Angle.

The fact that this is a George Loane Tucker production, and has as star Elizabeth Risdon, the heroine of "The Manx-man" and "Misalliance," should make this a box office asset. You can safely guarantee that it is an exceptionally human study of the relations between mother and son. Because of it being an English film I think some of the stiffness and overplaying of the supporting cast will be overlooked, particularly since the very human bits in which Miss Risdon figures come frequently enough to keep the production hitting on high most of the way.

Backed by McClure publicity—which is certainly effective—I would say that this is a very good bet. It isn't a tremendous film but it is a pleasing human production that registers an exceptional characterization and has enough human touches to make most anyone leave your house with a feeling of having seen something worth UNSUITABLE PART FOR STAR, BUT HAD BEAUTY AND SPEED. SURE B. O.

Eva Tanguay in

THE WILD GIRL

Tanguay Pictures—Harry Weber—Select Film

DIRECTOR.....Howard Estabrook
AUTHOR.....George M. Rosener
CAMERAMAN.....Frank G. Kugler
AS A WHOLE.....Pretty production of poorly selected story for star, but big box office winner
STORY.....Gypsy tomboy who is lost heiress
DIRECTION.....Did wonders with star by lighting and gave excellent atmosphere, lifting story by beauty spots
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent
LIGHTINGS.....Of star, very fine; generally very good
CAMERA WORK.....Very good
STAR.....Registers right well despite unsuitable part
SUPPORT.....Very good, with one or two minor bad spots
EXTERIORS.....Generally pleasing; some very beautiful
INTERIORS.....Good
DETAIL.....Good
TIME.....Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

THE first thing to consider about this production is the fact that it should be a tremendous box office winner anywhere. Everyone, everywhere, has heard of Eva Tanguay, altho she has been playing only in the more important cities in recent years. She is generally considered to be the biggest drawing card in vaudeville, and, because of her muchly-advertised eccentricities, she has been talked of everywhere. This is the first time she has been presented on the screen, and that ought to mean real money.

Unfortunately, the story selected by Miss Tanguay for her first screen appearance does not present her in the sort of character that 99 out of 100 will expect. Everyone will expect to see her as an actress or in some similar character. Instead of that, she is presented as a youthful tomboy gypsy who was a lost heiress.

Producer Howard Estabrook has given us some excellent lightings, and many of Miss Tanguay's closeups are beautiful indeed, but she is not youthful or of the type associated with gypsy boy parts. She was just Eva Tanguay in a film.

The story made it possible to register many exterior scenes, and a score or more of beautiful shots helped the offering decidedly. Some effective melodrama with rather good "night" stuff was sprinkled thru the offering, so that the interest is held rather nicely right up to the finish.

At no time, however, does this production really convince, and it is only the fact that it moves rapidly, has beauty spots, and some interesting action that makes it satisfactory as an offering that will get by and get the money.

At the very first we find some introductory scenes which present Miss Tanguay in some costumes from her famous vaudeville act, and this will serve to satisfy any who feel a bit disappointed in the type of story which has been used.

Stuart Holmes, as the wicked gypsy willun, was effective as the wicious wun, and Tom Moore was a pleasing juvenile hero. Herbert Evans, as the gypsy lover of Miss Tanguay, had enough power to be rather impressive. John Davidson made a small part stand out. These men made the dramatic scenes register and kept the action interesting.

The other players were satisfactory except for two or three minor parts who were a bit stiff and actory. Real gypsies were used in the gypsy scenes and the atmosphere of the gypsy camp was rather interesting.

Among those who appeared were Valerie Bergere, Dean Raymond and Norah Cecile.

The Box Office Angle.

This is good enough that you can afford to go after the money with it anywhere.

As a box office proposition this should bring you capacity, because most everyone will be very anxious to see Miss Tanguay on the screen. Don't promise too much in your billing, but concentrate all of your attention upon the star and the fact that the production is a beautiful one, presenting the famous eccentric comedienne in the part of a tomboy gypsy girl. That should sound interesting enough for anyone.

On the side, you might mention the fact that Miss Tanguay is introduced wearing her wonderful, costly and elaborate vaudeville wardrobe, and I believe I would mention the presence of Stuart Holmes, Tom Moore and John Davidson, because these boys have a lot of friends, Mr. Holmes and Mr. Moore having been starred in productions. They have an exceptionally large following among the regular screen patrons.

CRANE WILBUR
ART DRAMAS PROGRAM
Eye of Envy
Unto the End
Blood of His Father
Devil McCare
Just Jim

"Brighten the Corner Where You Are"

MYSTERY FARCE OF MOVIE CALIBER WITH NOVELTY OF STAR'S CHANGES

Julian Eltinge in

THE CLEVER MRS. CARFAX

Lasky—Paramount

DIRECTOR.....Donald Crisp
AUTHORS.....Hector Turnbull and Gardner Hunting
SCENARIO BY.....Gardner Hunting
CAMERAMAN.....Faxon M. Dean
AS A WHOLE.....Interesting action farce very good movie novelty
STORY.....Provided complications to keep things moving; was a pursuit of the poipers
DIRECTION.....Gave satisfactory atmosphere, but permitted overplaying
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied; generally satisfactory
LIGHTINGS.....Some very good; some ordinary
CAMERA WORK.....Varied
STAR.....Some girl, and a fast worker
SUPPORT.....Generally satisfactory; heavy overplayed
EXTERIORS.....Considerable good boat stuff
INTERIORS.....Good; not exceptional
DETAIL.....Satisfactory farce mixups
TIME.....Fifty-five minutes (5 parts)

AS a novelty the Eltinge pictures should be a very good proposition once in a while, particularly if they keep him in this sort of a melodramatic farce which provides a combination of mystery action meller with farcical twists, which excused overplaying in the dramatic situations.

The pursuit of the poipers occupied most of the footage in this, there being incidentally a romance in which Mr. Eltinge, originally introduced as a cynic who didn't like women because he "knew too much about 'em," fell in love with the granddaughter of the loidy who lost the precious poipers.

I wouldn't say that this is uproariously funny, but most anyone will get a few laughs, and certainly a dozen laughs are hard to find in the average evening's entertainment in film theatres.

There was the same very frequent changing on the part of Mr. Eltinge from dresses to trousers, and it seemed that possibly we had a little too much of his registering in the mannish touches while wearing skirts.

In the cast were Daisy Robinson, Noah Beery, Rosita Marstini, Jennie Lee, Fred Church, Fred De Shon and Mrs. Wise.

The Box Office Angle.

Of course considerable will depend upon how the first Eltinge went over with you as to whether or not you want this one, but it seems to me that this "female impersonator" idea has enough novelty to make the production different from the routine program movie—particularly when it is tied up with a mystery farce.

I would talk about Eltinge being the most famous female impersonator, and you might start a little discussion that might pull you some business by inserting his picture made up as a girl, in the newspaper, for several days, with the question under it: "Who is SHE? SHE is coming to the ———— Theatre on such and such a day." After running that for several days, you might say: "SHE is THE CLEVER MRS. CARFAX; what is her other name?" Finally stating that "SHE isn't a SHE, after all, but a HE—What do you think of that?"

OLDEST KIND OF FEUD STORY PLAYED WITH ALL OLD FRILLS

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in

THE ADOPTED SON

Rolfe—Metro

DIRECTOR.....Charles J. Brabin
AUTHOR.....Max Brand
SCENARIO BY.....Albert Shelby Le Vino
CAMERAMAN.....R. J. Bergquist
AS A WHOLE.....Dead Shot Dick type of hero bustin' up mountain feud
STORY.....Old favorite; has seen much service
DIRECTION.....Made action rather effective by good closeups and several stunts, with pleasing exteriors, providing good atmosphere
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very good
LIGHTINGS.....Satisfactory; one sequence badly handled
CAMERA WORK.....Satisfactory
STARS.....Hero of unerring aim, and gingham-clad shero
SUPPORT.....Good for type of story
EXTERIORS.....Generally pleasing; a few very effective
INTERIORS.....Quite satisfactory
DETAIL.....Showed SOME shootin'!
TIME.....Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

EVER try to shoot a revolver? Say, boy, they had hero "Bush" pluggin' 'em with either hand in this, at a speed that was funny. No attempt was made to have this seem real. They just made it a movie of the good old-fashioned kind with a story that was ages old.

Every schoolchild knows backwards the good old plot of the Kentucky feud situation, with stranger from out there who came in and met the shero, with the result that he fought on her side, of course winning the feud.

When the final truce was declared, hero announced that he was a McLane, which meant that he had been fighting his own family because he wanted to defend the goil, since his life among civilized folk had taught him that feuds were all wrong. The McLane and the Conover were married, and so the feud ended.

I have seen this plot personally about fifty times with very little, if any, variation. No effort was made to characterize in this, but a few beautiful exteriors were dug up, there being several very effective waterfall shots and some good distance perspectives.

Jack W. Johnston was the heavy, and he had to be vicious, while Bush was heroic. The two clashed at the county fair, where they shot at strings to break them in order to win the prize of kissing the shero, who was queen of the fair. Of course Jack was the champion of years, and he did some wonderful work with the rifle, but Bush, he came along and tore loose with a revolver in either hand, doing much better work than the willun had with the rifle. That settled it right then. We knew that Bush was going to have to pull a little shootin', and the willun was goin' ter have to kidnap the goil, with Bush rescuing her, so that the feud could be ended after this clash.

They had the usual number of men dodging behind trees to shoot at one another, and they pulled the old trusty stunt of having hero take the short cut when the willun kidnapped the goil. I never have been able to figure out why the pursued one never takes the short cut. For some reason he always leaves that to the pursuer.

After dropping the shero by the wayside when closely pressed, we saw the willun's horse do a runaway, and then they shot a dummy horse over a tremendous cliff.

All of this was handled in a manner that was rather effective, except that the entire picture had lost the ability to impress.

In one little love sequence we had Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne walking around carrying lamps, but the light from these lamps was much stronger than the flames of the lamps, which could be very plainly seen inside the lamp chimneys. This was a bad effect, since it was entirely unnecessary to show the source of light, and if it was to be shown at all, it should have been sufficient to account for the light used.

In the supporting cast were Leslie Stowe, John Smiley, Gertrude Norman and Pat O'Malley.

The Box Office Angle.

There is a certain percentage of those who seek entertainment who undoubtedly like these old bromides with the Dead Shot 'ansom' 'ero, the gingham clad shero and the wicious willun. For patrons of this caliber, the fact that the mountain feud story is an old, time-honored one will make no difference except possibly to please them, because they all know about it. The atmosphere of this and a few of the very obvious melodramatic situations have been well enough handled to be quite interesting, so that I would say that you can get this over very satisfactorily anywhere that Bushman is considered an attraction.

I certainly would advise you to say nothing about the story of this, because many may prefer not to see it again, but you can safely tell them that Bush is shown as a Dead Shot Dick 'ero, who has some thrilling adventures.

LIGHT COMEDY ROMANCE WITH ONE SITUATION THAT HITS

Mary Miles Minter in

PEGGY LEADS THE WAY

American—Mutual

DIRECTOR ..... Lloyd Ingraham
AUTHORS ..... Charles Turner Dazey and Frank Dazey
AS A WHOLE ..... Pleasing little comedy drama based on one good situation
STORY ..... Took long time to arrive at high spot, but pleased when did DIRECTION ..... Gave some beautiful exteriors and made simple little situations register satisfactorily
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Varied from very fine to fair
LIGHTINGS ..... Some excellent; generally satisfactory
CAMERA WORK ..... Varied
STAR ..... Very pleasing, indeed
SUPPORT ..... Good
EXTERIORS ..... Some fine bits of composition; generally satisfactory
INTERIORS ..... Good
DETAIL ..... A few good touches
TIME ..... Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

BECAUSE of the presence of one excellent little comedy idea this will register as a very satisfactory program release.

It took considerable footage of comparatively ordinary movie situations to build up to the one point desired, but when they hit that point it went over big, with the result that the final impression was rather a favorable one.

Miss Minter's personality, presented as a sweet little lady who helped her dad in his village store, managed to carry the offering thru the early scenes that were centered around the rather shop-worn situations of parents trying to force their children into a loveless marriage, which was being made impossible by the meetings of the boy and the heroine, who was not the choice of the scheming parents.

After a number of clashes between the boy's father and Miss Minter, the undesired one, we found the villagers who were being ordered off the estate from which they had gathered wood and caught fish for years, ready to attack the new owner, with Miss Minter coming to the rescue and halting them just before they reached the house.

Then suddenly a storm left the wealthy landowner and his guests without food, supplies or help, since the servants had deserted at the first sight of the attacking party. Compelled to search for food, the landowner tried to buy some from Miss Minter at her father's store, and was met with a reply that he had given to the villagers. He had said, "The land is mine. . . . . I'll do with it as I please!" Miss Minter now said that the supplies in her father's store were theirs, and that they would sell them at the prices which they chose to put them. The result was that a ham and some cheese and crackers cost just $1,086.

When the wealthy man returned with his priceless eatables and found that his guests couldn't cook, he commenced to see life from a different angle, and when he finally discovered that his son had gone to the village and earned a meal by sweeping out the store, he succumbed also, and we had the clutch.

A little scene showing the scheming mother of the girl who had been the first choice of the boy's father, wading thru the mud with her daughter, headed for the train back to the city, will certainly get a howl from most any audience, because the characters had been worked up to the point where any one will like to see them in such a state of discomfort.

Miss Minter's personality lifted this from start to finish and made very simple, unimportant situations rather pleasing.

Alan Forrest as the young hero was very satisfactory, and Miss Minter's sister, Margaret Shelby, as the original choice of the hero's father, was very good, except that she tried too hard at times to seem mean and spiteful.

The Box Office Angle

While this is rather slow at first, the one situation will get some laughs and lift the production sufficiently to get it by as a program offering. Mary Miles Minter's name will pull you some money at the box office, and I believe you can figure that the offering will satisfy, altho it is little more than a routine filler.

There's an excellent chance to use a little trick advertising on this by emphasizing the one situation where Miss Minter boosted prices on food. For instance, you might say: "Would you be willing to pay $1,086 for a ham and some cheese and crackers? See MARY MILES MINTER get those prices in 'Peggy Leads the Way.'" You might say, "You may think you are paying high prices for food, but just see how MARY MILES MINTER shoots prices skyward in 'Peggy Leads the Way.'" "Do you feel that when you buy something you may do what you like with it, regardless of how your action affects others? If so, see MARY MILES MINTER in 'Peggy Leads the Way.'"

TABULATED PERCENTAGE REPORTS FROM EXHIBITORS

THE BATTING AVERAGES

These are the averages of the companies having 200 reports or more.

Reports		% P. P.	% B. O.	Repeat
2628	PARAMOUNT	68.4	62.3	397
2349	TRIANGLE	70.6	65.2	434
595	WORLD	67.7	61.5	49
674	METRO	70.8	67.0	57
767	FOX	73.1	70.8	106
233	MUTUAL	72.0	71.1	17
298	BLUEBIRD	62.7	63.5	23
544	VITAGRAPH	68.1	66.2	76

THE NUMBER BEFORE THE NAME OF THE FEATURE INDICATES THE NUMBER OF REPORTS RECEIVED AND TABULATED ON THAT FILM.

THE FIRST COLUMN CARRIES THE PERCENTAGE OF PLEASED PATRONS.

THE SECOND COLUMN SHOWS THE BOX OFFICE PERCENTAGE.

FIGURES IN THE THIRD COLUMN INDICATE THAT MANY REPORTED THE FILM WORTH A RETURN DATE.

All reports in this percentage tabulation have been marked on this scale:

EXCEPTIONAL	100%
EXCELLENT	80%
GOOD	60%
FAIR	40%
POOR	20%
BAD	0%

Reports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
	PARAMOUNT
2628	Paramount	68.4	62.3	397
4	In the Bishop's Carriage	84	93
2	The Lost Paradise	50	73
8	The Virginian	81	73	2
2	Such a Little Queen	78	78	1
2	Marta of the Low Lands	35	50
3	Where the Trail Divides	93	90	1
11	Wildflower	89	82	6
1	The County Chairman	80	80
1	What's His Name	75	100
5	Behind the Screens	81	78
6	A Man from Mexico	87	72	1
1	The Man From Home	70	70
1	Circus Man	94	95
3	Rose of the Rancho	72	72
5	The Bargain	80	74	3
2	Ghost Breakers	60	63
7	The Crucible	92	84	3
2	False Colors	35	55
5	The Sign of the Cross	79	85
4	Cameo Kirby	61	50
9	Cinderella	84	91	4
1	The Million	70	90
5	Girl of the Golden West	79	77	2
3	The Dancing Girl	65	65
3	The Italian	77	62	1
1	No Laughing Matter	90	85
1	Morals of Marcus	60	50
5	The Goose Girl	95	95	4
2	After Five	51	50
1	Mistress Nell	88	95
2	Buckshot John	60	60
3	Her Triumph	60	74	1
3	The Warrens of Virginia	70	71	1
1	Country Boy	80	80
6	David Harem	82	78	1
1	A Gentleman of Leisure	80	70
3	The Caprices of Kitty	63	70
1	The Love Route	70	90
1	Sunshine Molly	40	50
1	The Governor's Lady	97	85
4	Gretna Green	99	95	2
1	The Commanding Officer	0	39
3	Are You a Mason?	78	84
2	Pretty Mrs. Smith	68	75
2	The Unafraid	70	63
2	When We Were 21	60	56
1	Spanish Jade	20	60
1	Snobs	64	52
4	Captain Courtesy	80	67	1
3	Captive	82	71
2	Niobe	75	55	1
3	Help Wanted	80	75
5	The Woman	86	59	1
3	House of Lost Court	84	84	1
4	Panchon, The Cricket	89	92	3

Reports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
5	Betty in Search of Thrill	83	87
5	Stolen Goods	78	75
2	Wild-Goose Chase	60	60	1
6	Pretty Sister Jose	84	82	2
5	Jim the Penman	64	65
6	The Dawn of a To-morrow	83	88	1
5	Arab	89	56	1
1	Clarissa	75	80
2	The Dictator	45	45
5	Wild Olive	82	69
6	Chimmy Fadden	91	75	1
4	The Little Pal	76	87
4	Kugmaker's Daughter	40	50
2	The Clue	74	80
6	Kindling	84	82
1	The Running Fight	60	70
3	The Fighting Hope	77	80
5	Kilmeny	75	73
8	Seven Sisters	86	74	1
3	Puppet Crown	83	85
19	Rags	91	93	5
2	Sold	83	72
6	The Secret Orchid	79	74
5	Nearly a Lady	65	75
6	The Marriage of Kitty	76	64
3	Poor Schmaltz	63	37
8	Helene of the North	87	81	2
3	The Majesty of the Law	56	60
3	Heart of Jennifer	68	55
2	Incorrigible Dukane	75	55
4	Esmeralda	89	89	2
2	The Case of Becky	65	55
1	Out of Darkness	60	40
1	Peer Gynt	82	100
4	The Explorers	72	61
4	'Twas Ever Thus	53	55
2	Voice in the Fog	75	67
6	Fatal Card	65	59
4	Zaza	91	67	1
6	The Girl of Yesterday	89	88	3
7	White Pearl	71	75
4	Blackbirds	57	55
7	Chorus Lady	73	65
6	The Secret Sin	69	74	1
7	Yankee Girl	52	57
6	Masqueraders	56	56
12	Carmen	82	83	4
12	Still Waters	94	83	7
9	Madame Butterfly	82	86	3
7	Mummy and Humming Bird	64	56
7	Bella Donna	92	77	4
8	Armstrong's Wife	79	65
8	Chimmie Fadden Out West	88	76	1
8	A Gentleman From Indiana	86	78
10	Prince and the Pauper	92	87	5
10	Mr. Grex from Monte Carlo	84	69	1
9	Jane	75	51
9	The Unknown	76	67	1
18	The Cheat	94	80	12
9	The Reform Candidate	80	54	1
9	The Immigrant	73	62
10	The Old Homestead	88	84	7
8	Lydia Gilmore	82	61	2
10	Temptation	82	77	2
10	The Foundling	78	76	3
6	Tongues of Men	77	53	1
8	Mice and Men	84	80	5
7	The Golden Chance	77	61	2

Reports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
2	My Lady Incog	50	35
5	Ragamuffins	77	53
5	Call of the Cumberlands	79	64
8	The Spider	87	64	1
10	Puddin' Head Wilson	81	62	4
9	Tennessee's Pardner	65	58
8	Madame Le President	24	46
9	Nearly a King	52	49	1
13	Trail of the Lonesome Pine	75	77	3
8	Fell In Love With His Wife	63	51	1
8	Blacklist	62	52	1
10	Out of the Drifts	89	86	4
8	Diplomacy	58	56	1
14	Poor Little Peppina	88	84	8
16	To Have and To Hold	74	69	4
12	Ben Blair	72	63
10	For the Defense	68	62	1
7	The Code of Marcia Grey	64	59	2
9	The Lost Bridegroom	69	60	2
8	The Saleslady	72	62	1
15	Audrey	73	70	3
9	The Sowers	64	59
11	The Heart of Paula	71	54	1
12	The Race	69	59
8	The Eternal Grind	70	78	3
10	The Love Mask	59	54	2
10	Molly Make-Believe	87	82	6
7	The Red Widow	62	55	2
12	The Heart of Nora Flynn	72	60	4
8	A Moment Before	52	64	1
12	David Garrick	68	46	2
9	The Innocent Lie	56	51
16	Marie Rosa	81	80	1
12	Alien Souls	69	67	1
13	The Feud Girl	60	56
16	Pasquale	78	53	3
16	Sweet Kitty Bellairs	72	62	2
20	Saints and Sinners	51	49
17	Thousand-Dollar Husband	69	62	4
22	A Gutter Magdalene	62	54	1
10	Evil Thereof	44	44
15	The Making of Maddalena	63	57	3
23	Silks and Satins	85	88	10
14	Destiny's Toy	60	51
19	The Clown	79	51	3
20	Susie Snowflakes	69	59	2
16	The World's Great Snare	73	78	4
19	The American Beauty	61	61	3
22	The Dupe	64	64	1
22	The Smugglers	53	50	1
26	The Selfish Woman	72	68	4
29	Davy Crockett	67	62
28	The Dream Girl	69	64	2
28	Under Cover	79	75	5
27	International Marriage	55	51	1
27	Common Ground	64	64	1
35	Hulda from Holland	95	94	23
30	House of Golden Windows	73	64	3
22	A Woman in the Case	72	72	3
25	Little Lady Eileen	87	89	10
23	The Stronger Love	53	52
21	Public Opinion	82	72	4
21	Rolling Stones	67	60	2
21	The Honorable Friend	65	62	1
20	Victory of Conscience	60	58	3
21	Each Pearl a Tear	74	69	2
22	The Parson of Panamint	79	70	7
15	The Big Sister	50	57

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
14 The Reward of Patience	65	55
15 The House of Lies	73	65	1
14 The Daugther of McGregor	56	45
18 Ashes of Embers	85	83	7
16 The Quest of Life	59	61
14 Anton, the Terrible	46	45
17 The Lash	57	55
18 The Storm	75	65	1
19 The Intrigue	81	61	2
16 Her Father's Son	74	68	2
14 Witchcraft	55	55
14 The Kiss	74	68	2
16 The Rainbow Princess	82	74	3
15 Seventeen	85	74	2
14 Miss George Washington	95	95	11
15 The Heir to the Hoorah	82	69	5
16 The Soul of Kura San	80	73	1
12 A Son of Erin	79	73	[illegible]
10 Unprotected	53	55	1
11 The Years of the Locust	49	50
12 The Plow Girl	77	63
19 The Yellow Pawn	66	57	1
9 Nanette of the Wilds	50	57	2
7 Martyrdom of Philip Strong	53	55	1
10 The Coney Island Princess	62	63	1
10 The Road to Love	72	59	1
14 Oliver Twist	85	69	6
13 The Victoria Cross	44	54	1
17 The Traveling Salesman	78	60	3
20 The Right Direction	76	61	2
21 Snow White	95	95	13
16 Redeeming Love	63	60	1
21 The Slave Market	74	70	5
13 The Evil Eye	30	44	1
19 Great Expectations	74	55	1
17 Happiness of Three Women	73	58	1
14 Betty to the Rescue	46	48
1 What Money Can't Buy	40	40
16 A Girl Like That	55	51
16 Lost and Won	59	50
19 The Golden Fetter	56	56
19 His Sweetheart	63	57	2
19 The Wax Model	67	56
19 Each To His Kind	62	60
16 Her Own People	72	52
11 The Black Wolf	35	41
17 The American Consul	53	50	1
21 The Fortunes of Fifi	67	77	2
20 On Record	62	56	2
17 Winning of Sally Temple	40	48
18 Those Without Sin	53	52	1
16 Castles For Two	52	49	1
13 Out of the Wreck	60	54
13 Sapho	74	83	3
11 Prison Without Walls	54	54
12 The Dummy	71	54
10 The Spirit of Romance	64	56
8 As Men Love	73	53
10 The Bottle Imp	75	66	2
7 The Bond Between	50	39
8 A School for Husbands	49	46	1
8 The Lonesome Chap	51	44
6 Sleeping Fires	56	63	1
8 The Tides of Barnegat	49	43
[illegible] The Cost of Hatred	40	38
10 The Valentine Girl	73	76
5 Unconquered	28	31
6 The Girl at Home	51	44
9 Heart's Desire	28	36
8 Sacrifice	26	43
4 The Primrose Ring	44	48
8 The Silent Partner	33	36
6 Marcelina Millions	41	30
7 The Highway of Hope	38	33
7 Her Better Self	55	59
8 The Undying Flame	40	52
6 Freckles	70	61
5 The World Apart	42	40
2 Giving Becky a Chance	70	51
3 The Jaguar's Claws	40	47
4 The Inner Shrine	38	58
3 The Roadside Impresario	28	17
5 The Heir of the Ages	23	22
3 Her Strange Wedding	28	34
3 The Little Boy Scout	57	43
5 At First Sight	52	40
3 Big Timber	67	65
6 I Love That Lives	70	83
5 Forbidden Pathes	34	37
4 What Money Can't Buy	34	53
1 The Cook of Canyon Camp	20	20
3 The Squaw Man's Son	60	57
3 The Crystal Gazer	20	20
2 A Kiss for Sussie	20	20
5 The Amazons	96	96
3 The Mysterious Miss Terry	87	73
4 The Law of the Land	37	37
4 The Varmint	80	60
3 Hashimura Togo	80	60

TRIANGLE

2349 Triangle	70.6	65.2	434
11 The Iron Strain	80	67	2
10 The Lamb	85	78	3
10 Old Heidelberg	73	64	1
12 The Coward	83	66	1
9 Martyrs of the Alamo	67	57	[illegible]
15 The Disciple	85	76	2
8 Matrimony	81	76	2
6 Sable Lorckra	59	57
7 The Golden Claw	57	69
10 Double Trouble	61	65	2
8 Aloha Oe	60	65	1
6 The Lilly and the Rose	63	66
9 Jordan Is a Hard Road	56	54
6 Winged Idol	53	52
[illegible] Penitents	31	32
12 The Edge of the Abyss	65	61
[illegible] Submarine Pirate	85	78	1
6 Cross Currents	49	49
12 Between Men	73	67	1
15 Let Katy Do It	87	63	6
6 The Corner	53	50
6 The Missing Link	52	46	1
4 The Beckoning Flame	56	58
10 The Wood Nymph	51	51	1
9 The Conquerer	74	78
10 The Price of Power	53	53
11 The Green Swamp	77	76	1
13 Acquitted	66	52
6 D'Artagnan	59	54
18 His Picture in the Papers	90	75	5
13 Honor's Altar	77	67	2
14 Betty of Greystone	77	65	2
23 Peggy	94	91	15
7 Don Quixote	57	56
9 The Last Act	79	78	1
11 Daphne and the Pirate	71	57	1
18 Hell's Hinges	93	89	11
17 The Flying Torpedo	88	80	8
14 Bullets and Brown Eyes	85	75	[illegible]
14 Martha's Vindication	79	72	2
14 Moral Fabric	75	62	1
15 Hoodoo Ann	68	65	1
15 The Raiders	79	70
14 The Habit of Happiness	92	85	[illegible]
8 Wall Street	70	59	1
8 Little Meena's Romance	64	60	1
17 The Aryan	59	80	6
10 Sold for Marriage	71	72	1
17 Stepping Stones	85	75	2
10 Sunshine Dad	36	46
9 Civilzation's Child	68	64	1
14 Children In the House	80	66	2
11 The Beggar of Cawnpore	61	49
19 The Good-Bad Man	90	92	4
12 The No-Good Guy	74	60	3
17 Susan Rocks the Boat	69	63
20 Not My Sister	79	77	4
18 Child of Paris Streets	76	64
22 The Primal Lure	82	76	7
8 Mr. Goode, the Samaritan	53	53
26 The Market of Vain Desire	79	64	5
22 Going Straight	77	78	3
29 The Bugle Call	93	79	9
26 Reggie Mixes In	93	80	11
16 The Sorrows of Love	66	69	1
21 An Innocent Magdalene	71	71	2
18 The Dividend	70	68	1
21 The Wild Girl of Sierras	45	53
25 An Apostle of Vengeance	88	83	4
18 Casey at the Bat	44	48
28 The Phantom	83	72	7
30 Flirting With Fate	87	86	11
31 The Deserter	85	69	11
26 The Little School Ma'am	74	67	2
26 The Eye of the Night	74	58	5
19 Stranded	60	50
27 The Captive God	65	70	2
23 The Halfbreed	72	74	2
22 The Payment	81	70	3
18 The Marriage of Molly O	48	47
24 Honor Thy Name	87	73	4
22 The Devil's Needle	64	64	1
31 Shell "43"	86	69	6
26 Hell-to-Pay Austin	83	66	6
21 Lieutenant Danny, U. S. A.	79	69
16 Pillars of Society	59	56	1
22 Home	91	80	9
16 Gretchen the Greenhorn	64	62	2
21 The Patriot	79	80	[illegible]
24 The Social Secretary	89	75	8
17 The Thoroughbred	82	72	1
14 The Little Liar	69	57
17 The Wolf Woman	86	89	6
16 The Dawnmaker	58	78	3
20 Diane of the Follies	71	72	2
27 Manhattan Madness	94	92	12
22 Plain Jane	88	75	5
20 Old Folks at Home	81	64	2
17 The Jungle Child	60	61	1
15 The Rummy	67	54	1
21 The Return of Draw Egan	88	86	7
20 The Vagabond Prince	75	70	3
19 Somewhere in France	76	69	1
18 A Corner in Colleens	88	80	7
12 A Sister of Six	69	64	2
21 Fifty-Fifty	89	83	6
4 War's Women	48	48
12 Atta Boy's Last Race	54	55
16 American Aristocracy	92	89	9
10 The Microscope Mystery	50	43
14 Honorable Algy	76	65	3
14 Jim Grimsby's Boy	68	62	2
15 The Devil's Double	91	91	7
12 The Children Paid	72	63	3
14 Children of the Feud	55	52	1
8 The Criminal	49	45
10 A Gamble in Souls	67	65	3
15 The Wharf Rat	54	55
20 The Matrimaniac	92	94	10
20 The Sin Ye Do	92	85	10
13 Heiress of Coffee Dan's	60	53	2
10 Three of Many	62	53
9 House Built Upon Sand	75	67	3
8 Nina the Flower Girl	51	52
11 The Female of the Species	72	74	2
16 Truthful Tulliver	97	93	9
12 The Weaker Sex	88	83	1
7 The Little Yank	40	52	1
10 The Bride of Hate	78	74	4
11 The Iced Bullet	62	53
14 The Americano	99	97	11
10 Chicken Casey	75	56	1
14 Jim Bludso	63	41	1
14 The Crab	83	70	5
10 Girl of the Timber Claims	41	39
16 The Gun-Fighter	76	85	10
13 The Bad Boy	71	54	2
11 The Princess of the Dark	39	41
6 Stage Struck	41	38
12 Last of the Ingrams	45	42
9 Blood Will Tell	64	61
5 A Love Sublime	47	40
8 The Little Brother	51	37	2
12 Back of the Man	90	81	5
10 Betsy's Burglar	59	54
14 The Square-Deal Man	96	95	7
11 The Dark Road	60	49	1
5 A Daughter of the Poor	57	55
9 A Woman's Awakening	61	52
9 Her Father's Keeper	54	48
9 Her Official Fathers	56	48
7 Old-Fashioned Young Man	48	47
10 Sweetheart of the Doomed	74	68	4
10 Paddy O'Hara	62	52	1
21 The Desert Man	92	91	4
9 Cheerful Givers	47	41
10 The Pinch Hitter	96	71	2
5 Hands Up	35	35
8 The Snarl	54	63
4 Might and the Man	25	30
6 Happiness	59	56
4 The Man Who Made Good	45	39
6 Wild Winship's Widow	58	58
6 Soul's Triumphant	30	28
14 The Millionaire Vagrant	78	64
8 Wolf Lowry	93	96	1
6 The Girl, Glory	73	52
7 Bawbs of Blue Ridge	33	51
8 A Hater of Men	79	63
5 American—That's All	32	32
7 Love or Justice	75	69
3 Her Excellency the Governor	35	34

Reports	P.P.	B.O.	Repeat
6 Paws of the Bear	55	48
6 Madcap Madge	73	48
6 The Clod Hopper	98	85	1
5 Flame of the Yukon	96	91
4 A Strange Transgressor	80	83
4 Time Locks and Diamonds	30	33
4 The Mother Instinct	55	50
6 Sudden Jim	89	85
6 The Sawdust Ring	87	60
6 Borrowed Plumage	48	53
6 In Slumberland	74	31
1 Seeking Happiness	100	60
1 Food Gamblers	60	40
1 An Even Break	80	40
1 Madame Bo-Beep	40	40
1 The Ten of Diamonds	80	80

WORLD

595 World	67.7	61.5	49
Hearts Afire	70	78
1 Daughter of the Sea	60	50
1 The Warning	88	45
The Little Dutch Girl	80	60
1 The Price of Her Silence	80	90
2 The Master of the House	68	33
1 The Dragon	60	80
1 The Price	80	65
1 Love's Cross Roads	85	60
1 Better Woman	75	45
1 By Whose Hand	60	55
1 Her Great Hour	60	40
1 When it Strikes Home	60	45
2 Circus Romance	65	55
3 Old Dutch	80	50
2 Ballet Girl	82	62
4 Marrying Money	82	72
2 The Wishing Ring	82	80
3 The Dollar Mark	56	53
2 Gentleman from Mississippi	69	64
2 As Ye Sow	95	66
1 Stolen Voice	80	80
1 Face in the Moonlight	80	60
2 Women and Wine	45	45
2 Blue Grass	75	68
1 Fruits of Desire	40	50
2 Alias Jimmie Valentine	85	78
7 Trilby	81	65	1
1 Idols	40	45
3 Master Hand	80	80
4 The Devil's Toy	50	68
3 Salvation Nell	60	47
3 Family Cupboard	50	47	1
4 Heart of Blue Ridge	84	73	1
1 Butterfly on Wheel	80	70
1 Hearts of Men	80	52
1 Body and Soul	40	45
1 The Ransom	63	41
4 The Labyrinth	66	65
3 Should a Wife Forgive?	90	90
2 The Senator	83	60
2 Hearts in Exile	75	83
1 His Wife's Good Name	25	20
1 The Chain Invisible	90	5
1 The Imposter	80	75
1 Sunday	95	30
1 As In a Looking Glass	60	40
1 Over Night	70	70
3 Sins of Society	76	65
7 Camille	86	79	3
3 The Rack	89	69
1 Fine Feathers	70	40
1 The Clarion	60	75
3 The Woman in 47	74	80
5 The Yellow Passport	82	80	2
3 The Price of Happiness	58	50
3 A Woman's Power	45	50
1 Cowardly Way	60	60
3 Passersby	73	55
3 Man and His Angel	62	45
4 The Supreme Sacrifice	78	69
3 The Struggle	60	60
3 The Hand of Peril	75	67
5 Then I'll Come Back To You	76	66	1
4 The Reapers	75	65
2 The Shadow of Doubt	78	65
3 Social Highwaymen	75	45
2 Closed Road	87	81	1
7 The Feast of Life	61	73
7 Her Maternal Right	58	74
6 Sudden Riches	75	71
2 The Twin Triangle	83	45
6 Tangled Fates	57	43
1 Fate's Boomerang	42	53
1 His Brother's Wife	85	74	1
10 Perils of Divorce	61	63
13 La vie de Boheme	47	50
1 What Happened at 22	75	85
5 Crucial Test	59	55
7 The Weakness of Man	61	68
12 Sally in Our Alley	85	81
14 Paying the Price	70	70	1
12 Miss Petticoats	59	61
14 Woman's Way	75	74	4
13 The Summer Girl	56	57
12 Rail Rider	68	60
10 Husband and Wife	75	63	2
8 Almighty Dollar	76	72	1
13 The Velvet Paw	74	69	1
8 Friday, the Thirteenth	72	70
11 Dark Silence	77	79	2
4 The Revolt	66	63
7 The Gilded Cage	75	70
6 Hidden Scar	77	67
6 The Scarlet Oath	60	62
7 Man Who Stood Still	71	63
8 The Heart of a Hero	59	49
3 Without a Soul	70	81
15 Bought and Paid For	91	91	10
10 The Madness of Helen	57	54
6 Men She Married	58	55
4 The Deep Purple	81	75
11 All Man	59	63	2
7 Broken Chains	50	43
12 The Rise of Susan	79	83	6
6 The World Against Him	52	43
10 Woman Alone	67	65	1
7 On Dangerous Ground	65	71
7 The Man Who Forgot	65	61	1
4 Marriage a la Carte	73	73	1
1 The Unpardonable Sin	40	55
5 The Bondage of Fear	65	63
8 Tillie Wakes Up	79	78	1
8 The Hungry Heart	87	83	2
8 The Square Deal	69	72
3 A Girl's Folly	65	75
5 The Red Woman	49	48
4 The Web of Desire	78	73	1
5 The Family Honor	66	61
8 The Dancer's Peril	77	71	1
5 The Social Leper	65	65
4 Man's Woman	61	61
4 Darkest Russia	71	75
8 House of Tears	80	65
1 The Bludgeon	87	80
3 As Man Made Her	62	68
5 The Page Mystery	55	57
4 Yankee Pluck	61	48
4 Moral Courage	61	58
4 Mothers of France	66	51
2 Maternity	85	90
2 The Crimson Dove	60	55
3 The False Friend	65	72
2 The Stolen Paradise	50	70
1 Atonement	70	65
1 The Pawn of Fate	85	45
1 The Divorse Game	5	75
1 The Price of Pride	75	60
1 The Brand of Satan	75	60
1 The Golden Lotus	50	50
1 The Native Soul	20	30
1 When True Love Dawns	60	45

METRO

674 Metro	70 8	67.0	57
1 Her Reckoning	80	48
1 Satan Sanderson	70	70
2 The Cowboy and the Lady	55	53
1 Heart of a Painted Lady	85	75
2 The High Road	65	75
4 Shooting of Dan McGrew	81	79
2 The Middleman	60	70
2 My Best Girl	55	55
1 Right of Way	70	85
2 Second in Command	77	80
2 The Vampire	55	80
6 Soul of a Woman	93	80	1
1 Silent Voice	77	87
2 An Enemy of Society	50	50
3 The Song of a Wage Slave	65	67
2 Emmy of Strok's Nest	70	65
1 Final Judgment	80	88
3 Pennington's Choice	78	80
4 Woman Pays	78	52
1 One Million Dollars	78	70
3 Barbara Frietchie	83	73
6 Forget-Me-Not	63	69
5 The Yellow Streak	85	64
5 Rosemary for Remembrance	68	69
1 Black Fear	73	57
1 What'll People Say?	80	84
4 The Turmoil	70	55
9 The Lure of Heart's Desire	55	58
5 Her Debt of Honor	49	50
6 A Man and His Soul	83	82	1
4 The Upstart	69	71
3 Dimples	52	58
5 A Corner In Cotton	57	56
1 Her Great Match	30	50
1 The Royal Family	40	40
1 Greater Love Hath No Man	45	50
1 The Flaming Sword	20	40
1 Shadows of Great City	30	50
5 The Price of Malice	66	65
6 The Soul Market	83	75	2
2 Blindness of Love	80	85	1
3 Lovely Mary	67	83
1 My Madonna	80	85
6 Her Great Price	80	68	1
8 The Wall Between	78	82	1
6 The Kiss of Hate	62	74
6 Half Million Bribe	69	49
8 Playing with Fire	78	75
11 The Come-Back	75	74	1
8 Snow Birds	80	77
8 A Million a Minute	72	84	1
4 The Spell of the Yukon	79	71
6 His Great Triumph	49	43
10 The Scarlet Woman	73	84	1
10 Dorian's Divorce	74	80
8 Masked Rider	69	68
6 Flower of No Man's Land	58	75
8 The Purple Lady	82	63
10 The Eternal Question	76	83	1
11 The Quitter	69	73
15 The River of Romance	87	76	7
9 A Child of Destiny	53	56
13 The Devil at His Elbow	64	61	1
14 God's Half Acre	71	62	1
14 The Weakness of Strength	68	54
11 The Pretender	80	72	1
7 The Upheaval	57	63
10 The Light of Happiness	67	66	1
10 Mister 44	88	93	4
8 The Wheel of the Law	77	66	1
10 The Dawn of Love	66	60
8 The Iron Woman	44	57
5 Life's Shadows	66	60
13 In the Diplomatic Service	69	83	4
9 The Brand of Cowardice	65	54
13 The Gates of Eden	68	54
11 Extravagance	69	82	3
10 The Wager	78	64
1 My Madonna	84	85
8 The Sunbeam	53	51
11 Big Tremaine	74	82	5
9 The Black Butterfly	70	80	4
8 The Stolen Triumph	56	48
8 Awakening of Helena Ritchie	60	61
11 Pigin Island	68	74	3
12 Vanity	61	53
12 The White Raven	85	81	4
9 A Wife by Proxy	46	41
9 Threads of Fate	41	34
12 Bridges Burned	47	62
9 The End of the Tour	45	44
10 One of Many	66	61	1
8 The Secret of Eve	37	60	1
14 The Promise	82	84	3
6 The Barricade	58	57
7 The Hidden Children	43	62
9 The Mortal Sin	53	58
8 The Waiting Soul	49	61	1
6 The Father's Son	67	62
5 The Power of Decision	51	53
7 A Magdalene of the Hills	51	50
6 God's Law and Man's	49	49
3 The Millionaire's Double	67	60
4 The Call of Her People	63	56
5 Sowers and Reapers	61	48
4 The Soul of Magdalene	36	40
4 The Beautiful Lie	25	30
5 The Dutchess of Doubt	62	62
4 Lady Barnacle	49	48

Motion Picture News Studio Directory

The Fourth Edition Will Be Out In December. Arrange to Have Your Copy Before the Edition Is Exhausted.

It Is the Only Reference Work Containing All the Information About Players Wanted by Casting Directors, Newspaper Photoplay Editors, and the Exhibitors Throughout the Country.

Every Exhibitor Needs a Copy of the Directory for the Preparation of Reading Notices In His Local Paper.

The 1918 Edition is to be bound in heavy cloth.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS, INC.,

729 SEVENTH AVENUE, NEW YORK.

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO

REGINALD BARKER
DIRECTING
PARALTA PLAYS
Paralta Studio, Los Angeles, Calif.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
PRODUCER

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

WILLIAM C. DOWLAN
PRODUCING METRO FEATURES
Current Release—"THE OUTSIDER"
With Emmy Wehlen.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

JACK HARVEY
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING PATHE PLAYS

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
GOLDWYN

LLOYD INGRAHAM
PRODUCER

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
M. P. D. A.
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
M. P. D. A.
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

R. H. KELLY
STUDIO MANAGER
Empire All-Star Corp. & Mutual Corp.
Glendale, L. I.

HARLEY KNOLES
M. P. D. A.
FEATURES DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 D. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

JOSEPH LEVERING
DIRECTOR

O. A. C. LUND

ASHLEY MILLER
M. P. D. A.
Director—Vitagraph Studios
Brooklyn

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE DIRECTOR
FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.

WEDGWOOD NOWELL
TRIANGLE
Friars Club, N. Y. C.

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITAGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

TOM TERRISS
PRODUCER
VITAGRAPH

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
511 W. 143rd St. Audubon 1941.

JAMES VINCENT
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

BEN WILSON
DIRECTING AND STARRING
UNIVERSAL

CHESTER WITHEY
DIRECTOR

JAMES YOUNG
M. P. D. A.

WID'S IS READ NOT SKIMMED

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Adress—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM A MAGAZINE — IN FACT A SERVICE
THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM
WID'S
INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS
Always Independent Issued Every Thursday VOL. III. THURSDAY, NOV. 15, 1917. NO. 46 25 Cents a Copy $10.00 a Year
Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

What Do You Say?---Is It Quality, or Footage?

I WANT SOME EXPRESSIONS TO SAVE "THOUSANDS" FOR PRODUCERS.

I BELIEVE the sentiment in reference to the length of features should be crystallized immediately. From all the conversation and correspondence I have had with exhibitors from every section of the country, I find that they prefer that a feature should run approximately one hour, with an hour and fifteen minutes as about the limit.

They don't want them to run an hour and fifteen minutes unless it is absolutely essential to the intelligent and proper telling of the story, and wherever it can be shown to advantage in a few minutes under an hour, they prefer it that way.

I believe this information is effectively exploding that unfortunate theory that no State rights production can be sold unless it runs from 6,000 to 10,000 feet in length.

A number of people have learned, at considerable cost in time and money, that "footage" doesn't make a State rights feature. Many more would be saved from similar experiences if the State rights buyers would consult with their exhibitors and then make a few statements to the effect that it is not necessary for the future to have "footage" as much as it is to have quality and advertising possibilities.

I wrote an editorial about this a few weeks ago. I would now like to have from some of the representative buyers and exhibitors throughout the country an expression in reference to this, and I will carry in a little chart the opinions on this very important matter.

Certainly a decision on such a point will save thousands of dollars—even hundreds of thousands!—in the course of the next few months.

LET'S HAVE CENTRAL SHIPPING OFFICES, BUT INDIVIDUAL SALESMEN

A long time ago I sat down and wrote out a long "speel" about the advisability of having a central shipping office in each exchange center, equipped with plenty of projection rooms and separate offices for the sales organizations of the different companies, the big idea being that this would make it easy for everyone to do business more effectively without in any way hindering the sales ability of the various organizations.

Gradually we are tending towards that very desirable ultimate goal, but I think a few kicks in the right spot will boost this thing along and cut a little of the excess weight off of Old Man Overhead.

If you exhibitors will just sit down with your pencil sharpened and figure a little bit you will soon realize that you are the fellers who are paying the overhead that all of the various companies make necessary by the establishment of beautiful offices, separate shipping departments, projection rooms, etc.

You all know that it takes you much valuable time to jump from one to the other, and certainly it would be nothing but common sense to have some centralization to this distribution problem.

I have never yet heard any good argument against this idea of a central shipping office and showrooms that would be convenient for everyone, but, nevertheless, the various concerns go right along without batting an eye, continuing to hire relatives and friends and open beautiful offices, with the simple process of charging the exhibitor a little more for his films to pay for this evidence of their being a substantial concern.

You fellers who have seen many of these elaborate outfits come and go know that the answer is always the QUALITY OF THE FILMS AND THE PUNCH BACK OF THE SALES CAMPAIGN.

Now, why can't we get a little more concerted action? Tell the producers where they get off, and insist upon this reduction of overhead—which would reduce very decidedly the film rental bugaboo that's now worrying most of us quite some.

Whenever these questions come up we always find the live wires saying, "Yes, that's a great idea!—but nobody ever does anything.

Of course, these problems always come back to the same elementary principle. The exhibitors need an effective business organization, and all the efforts of all the sincere, enthusiastic and hard-working live wires in the world isn't going to bring about such an organization until the men who are actually concerned wake up in sufficient numbers to get something done.

When, oh, when, will that day come?

As I have said before, one of the best ways to get action, until we have organization, is to sit down and write an EMPHATIC letter to the producers whose pictures you are playing. And, make it EMPHATIC!!!

EXCEPTIONALLY WELL DONE SPECTACLE AND VERY TIMELY STORY SHOULD GO BIG

Enid Markey and Howard Hickman in

THE ZEPPELIN'S LAST RAID

Ince Production—U. S. Exhib. Bkg. Corp.

DIRECTOR.....Irvin V. Willat
AUTHOR.....Charles Gardner Sullivan
PHOTOGRAPHED BY.....Irvin V. Willat
AS A WHOLE.....Intensely interesting because of effects and spectacular stunts
STORY.....Practically same story as "Civilization" but much more effective now because of hoped-for revolution in Germany
DIRECTION.....Provided impressive spectacle, kept story interesting and gave remarkable effects
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Excellent; perfect double exposures
LIGHTINGS.....Many very effective; generally very good
CAMERA WORK.....Excellent
STARS.....Quite satisfactory
SUPPORT.....Some good types
EXTERIORS.....Generally good; many exterior sets destroyed
INTERIORS.....Quite satisfactory; Zeppelin exteriors excellent
DETAIL.....Very good
TIME.....Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

WITH London being bombarded almost every night and all the United States hoping fervently for a revolution in Germany, this certainly seems to be about as timely an offering as any one could possibly present at this moment.

Instead of being "one of those things" that has been thrown together hurriedly to meet an emergency, it so happens that this film is one which was made in the Tom Ince plant at the time the directors of Mr. Ince were making "Civilization," and so this production has the benefit of the impressive spectacle that could only have been secured at tremendous expense had the producers attempted to build and wreck the exterior sets and in other ways provide big scenes such as are in this film for this one production alone.

As a matter of fact, this is, in a way, a sequence that was taken for "Civilization." There is the same story idea, and we find Howard Hickman as the commander of a Zeppelin instead of the commander of a submarine, with Enid Markey leading the women of the country and other members of the peace party into a revolution, the purpose of which is to stop the war.

I would not have you think, however, that this production is disjointed or that it seems to be cut-outs put together, or anything of that sort, because the story carries perfectly as it stands. Certainly, in view of present conditions, the story is very much more effective at this time than the story of "Civilization" was when it was presented. This is not as elaborate a spectacle as "Civilization," but it is an interesting story with plenty of spectacle and an exceptionally novel angle in the introduction of the Zeppelin into the film.

Irvin V. Willat, who is responsible for this film, has certainly put over some of the best effects I have ever seen on the screen. I'll gamble with you that 99 per cent. of your audiences will think that the Zeppelin scenes showing the monster brought from the hangar and returned to the hangar will figure that these are actually scenes of a Zeppelin. As a matter of fact, they are wonderfully clever double exposures arranged by Mr. Willat.

Mr. Willat also introduced a number of other very good effects, among them being a shot thru a window of what was supposed to be the officer's quarters of the moving Zeppelin, which showed the lights of the city over which they were passing in the night.

At the end, just for good measure, we had a nice little bit of double exposure in which Friend Irvin wished in a number of perfectly good stars into a sky, so that Miss Markey could come out and stand in the moonlight. It would seem that there is no limit to what these fellers are going to do with the camera before they get thru.

At the end, where we saw the wrecking of the fast monster of the air by Mr. Hickman, who refused to allow the crew to hurl bombs as per orders, since he had received a wireless message announcing the revolution, we had more remarkable effects, with the falling of the burning airship, a truly realistic bit.

It is a question if the others on the Zeppelin would have waited as long as they did before starting after Mr. Hickman when he announced his intention to refuse to carry out orders, but this may be excused as that thing they call "dramatic license," since he very soon pulled his "ace in the hole" by announcing that he would wreck the ship if they tried to come near him. That caused one of the men to shoot him, but before he died he pulled the electric switch, which sent them all to their death.

Howard Hickman and Enid Markey were very satisfactory, and there were a number of excellent types, but the production really centers upon the spectacular features. While the story carries nicely, the interest is centered upon the bigness of the whole rather than upon the individual characterizations.

The Box Office Angle.

Properly handled this should get oodles of money. It could not be more timely and you can safely go a long ways in promising that it is thrilling, impressive, etc. The novelty of the Zeppelin in action can be played up in a big way and you can tell about the destruction of cities and finally the destruction of the German monster. I would also speak of this being a visualization of the revolution which every patriot hopes will come to Germany—because that is something which is in the minds of most every one these days.

If you can't get real money with this, it would seem to me that you should go out and have a heart-to-heart talk with yourself and find out what's the matter. The showman who tells me that he "didn't get money" on a good picture or a picture which has advertising possibilities isn't making any impression on my mind in reference to that picture, but is giving me an impression that he, the showman, doesn't know his business. There are few enough films that have advertising possibilities and can make good on them, and it seems to me to be decidedly advisable to take advantage of every one that is offered.

HAROLD LOCKWOOD
Yorke--Metro

Watch the next issue of WID'S for complete announcement about "Brighten the Corner Where You Are."

DISTINCTIVE PRODUCTION INTERESTS AND STAR WILL PLEASE

Mae Murray in

THE PRINCESS VIRTUE

Bluebird

DIRECTOR.....Robert Z. Leonard
AUTHOR.....Louise Winter
SCENARIO BY.....Fred Myton
CAMERAMAN.....Albert G. Gosden
AS A WHOLE.....Distinctive production with one good dramatic clash and pleasing finish; should register anywhere
STORY.....Interesting but unreal; only one spot really got over
DIRECTION.....Made it distinctive but used too many dark sets; held characterizations rather satisfactorily
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Distinctive but frequently too contrasty, making faces chalky in long shots
LIGHTINGS....Good, except chalky faces; some beautiful exteriors and effective interiors
CAMERA WORK.....Excellent, except faces in some long shots
STAR.....Very attractive and held nicely to characterization
SUPPORT....Oakman very good; others quite satisfactory
EXTERIORS.....Well chosen; some very artistic as to composition
INTERIORS.....Satisfactory
DETAIL.....Quite satisfactory
TIME.....Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

THIS picture is different in two essentials: It has an atmosphere of distinction which lifts it above the ordinary routine, and it presents a very attractive little star in a characterization which leads the audience to a desire to spank her, up until the finish, when she becomes human and pulls the good old clutch with the hero.

Producer Bob Leonard has given us some excellent and artistic lightings, interiors and exteriors, but some one slipped on many of the medium and long shots in the exteriors, by getting a light which was too contrasty, with the result that the faces of the star and many of the supporting cast appeared very chalky and spotty. This does not seriously mar the general effect, but is to be very much regretted because of the otherwise excellence of the artistic side of the production.

Miss Murray is presented as a little American girl who has been made into an utterly vain, self-loving, admiration-gathering female from the effects of having been reared in Paris. She is shown receiving attentions from several men, and the audience is given the opportunity to understand her attitude towards these men.

The young hero — American, of course — played by Wheeler Oakman, expected to find a very different sort of girl, and as his acquaintance with her lengthened, he became very much disgusted, but very much interested.

Thru being played in the false position of her escort when she desired to visit a notorious cafe where her fiance was giving a dinner in honor of a wicked woman, our hero was forced to fight a duel. There had already been one duel, which had demonstrated the ability of the willun to shoot, and we now had the good old stuff of shero rushing to the rescue with her declaration that she loved the willun stopping the duel. Then came the prompt twist after this of hero en route back to America, discovering that the little lady had also taken the same boat to return to her own land with the man she really loved, who had been saved by her manoeuver at the duel from certain death.

The story has been handled in such a manner as to create a certain element of suspense, and the finish may be a surprise to many. The one dramatic clash where the willun was giving the dinner to the notorious vamp was beautifully handled and became real enough to hit home.

The other portions of the story were rather unreal, but interesting, because of Miss Murray's characterization registering the influence of environment upon an otherwise likeable young American miss.

Miss Murray was very pretty in most of her scenes, altho her make-up was too evident at times, and she wore some very daring and some very unusual costumes.

Wheeler Oakman as the hero was execellent. I think he is one of our best young leading men.

The remainder of the cast was quite satisfactory.

The decorations on the title cards were rather crude and certainly not in keeping with the distinction of the production itself. A miniature effect of a ship passing in the night was well handled, and the producer is worthy of particular commendation for having chosen such good exteriors for the few that were used.

In the cast were Jean Hersholt, Lule Warrenton, Clarissa Selwynne, Gretchen Lederer, Harry von Meter and Paul Nicholson.

The Box Office Angle

You can figure this as quite above the program average because it presents characterization, distinction as to atmosphere, and a story that will hold the interest. Miss Murray has a certain following, and her name should be worth quite a bit at the box office. I would make capital of the fact that this is her first production with Bluebird, because there is always a certain amount of interest attached to the first production made by any rather well-known star after a change in managerial connections.

I would make it clear that Miss Murray is still being directed by Mr. Leonard, who made "The Plow Girl," "The Mormon Maid," "The Primrose Ring," and other of her recent films, and if you have had any success with her other productions, I would see to it that that point was thoroly understood.

The name of this will strike some folks as a bit hazy, and so in your advertising you might suggest some lines like this: "What do you think the effect would be of placing a charming American girl in an environment of fast Parisian society? See 'The Princess Virtue.'" That sounds interesting and suggests the main elements of the story.

If you have any idea that your fans are acquainted with Wheeler Oakman, who has appeared prominently in such productions as "The Ne'er-Do-Well," I would call attention to his presence.

MR. PRODUCER

Before Presenting Your Next Feature Give Some Thought to Special Music

Consult

GEORGE W. BEYNON,

505 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City. Phone Murray Hill 9876

VERY PLEASING STAR IN LIGHT COMEDY WITH HUMAN TOUCHES

Taylor Holmes in

TWO-BIT SEATS

Essanay—Perfection

DIRECTOR.....Lawrence C. Windom
AUTHOR.....Gladys Johnston
CAMERAMAN.....Arthur E. Reeves
AS A WHOLE.....Good light comedy that pleases because of little touches
STORY.....Very slender, but satisfactory to provide framework for bits of business
DIRECTION.....Kept it moving along, gave nice little touches and added interest by theatre and amusement park scenes
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally pleasing; little attempt for effects
LIGHTINGS.....Good; not particularly artistic
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR.....Very pleasing personality
SUPPORT.....Marguerite Clayton beautiful and pleasing; others satisfactory
EXTERIORS.....Satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Employer's home excellent; others very good
DETAIL.....Satisfactory
TIME.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

TAYLOR HOLMES has won his way on the screen principally because of a very pleasing smile. He has that stunt of appearing bashful and embarrassed which keeps his playing registering as human and sincere, and because of this ability, I think he has established a following that will turn out for his productions regularly.

There was very little story to this, but the idea was interesting, the whole thought being centered around the fact that the sincere, hard-working young man took a young lady to gallery seats because she insisted upon it, with the aforesaid young man commencing to be badly worried over the fact that his boss might at some time see him coming from the gallery.

This eventually happened, and then, instead of firing him, the boss promoted him, and the result was that they pulled the clutch, and Miss Clayton admitted that she didn't like gallery seats at all, and never had.

Miss Clayton is a very beautiful girl, and sometimes we caught closeups of her that were very fine, indeed.

The remainder of the cast were quite satisfactory, being rather well chosen for type, and, with titles that lifted some of the scenes, the entire production moves along in a very satisfying manner.

Among those in the cast were John Cossar, Alice Carroll and Sydney Ainsworth.

The Box Office Angle.

It seems to me that if you haven't been getting results with Taylor Holmes in the light comedies that Essanay has been providing him with, there must be something wrong with your organization. If you have been getting nice returns from this stuff, you can figure this new production as one which will carry along very satisfactorily.

Personally, I am a strong believer in plugging this sort of thing emphatically and making it very clear to everyone that it is pleasing light entertainment. There are of course certain folks who like drammer and some who like meller, but I think that a large percentage of even those classes enjoy good light entertainment if they are prepared for it when they go to the theatre.

There is nothing big about these light comedies, but certainly they are pleasing, and they provide a goodly number of chuckles, smiles and giggles, with one or two real laughs—and possibly more—depending upon the mental condition of he who watches.

Make a little fuss about these light comedies and see if you don't get results.

ORDINARILY HANDLED STORY OF SOUTH WITH OBJECTIONABLE INCIDENTS

Corinne Griffith in

I WILL REPAY

Vitagraph

DIRECTOR.....William P. S. Earle
ADAPTED FROM.....O. Henry's "Municipal Report"
SCENARIO BY.....William Addison Lathrop
CAMERAMAN.....Jack Brown
AS A WHOLE.....Failed to seem real despite some human situations, and contained objectionable elements
STORY.....Failed to make human touches ring true, and permitted overplaying in meller scenes; gave too much attention to negro dive situations
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Some beautiful shots, but poor in many interiors
LIGHTINGS.....A few excellent, but many ordinary and some poor
CAMERA WORK.....Varied decidedly
STAR.....Rather pretty but unimpressive
SUPPORT.....Mother Maurice and Donaldson excellent; others satisfactory
EXTERIORS.....A few very beautiful; others ordinary
INTERIORS.....Acceptable; some rather poor
DETAIL.....Too much of negroes
TIME.....Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

O. HENRY is noted for the fact that all of his stories have a twist at the end. Unfortunately, in this one they have failed to play up that fact, and in developing it into five reels the scenario work has been poor, causing much unnecessary repetition and emphasizing much that was undesirable.

In the story, "The Municipal Report," from which this was taken, we got the customary twist; but in placing this on the screen it has become very obvious because of changes, and has lost much of the O. Henry flavor.

In developing the characterizations I believe too much stress has been laid upon the scenes in which the whites and negroes were mixed up. I feel that the average audience doesn't care to see even a white willun and a no-account husband of a nice old lady like Mother Maurice making love to a colored girl whose business was to run a negro dive of the lowest order. That sort of thing seems more objectionable when seen on the screen than it might be when read from a book.

The plot of this centered around the fact that a young man had been sent by a publisher to sign a contract with a coming writer. He found her existing on the money earned by an old servant, who drove a hack. Her husband, a drunkard, was taking all the money from her.

After melodramatic complications we found the hero giving back to the old servant the evidence which might have convicted this servant of murdering the drunkard husband and at the same time making a deal with the wife for four times the amount he had been ordered to sign her up for, with the willun disconcerted and the shero ready to be the hero's bride.

There were many, many scenes in the negro dive in which two white men made love to Eulalie Jensen, who was made up as a colored girl, and I am quite sure that these will be rather decidedly objectionable to most audiences. Anyway, it seemed as if some one were trying to get even with those who make so much fuss about the "Southern gentleman" by trying to prove that the South has supposed gentlemen who are decidedly not. This may be true to life, but I've a hunch that that particular sort of truth isn't altogether welcome.

The photography varied decidedly, and, because of this, the atmosphere was not truly artistic or even distinctive. At times it seemed quite ordinary.

The dramatic clash where the colored girl exposed the willun who tried to shift the blame to the hero and pull a misunderstood situation was very poorly handled and painfully theatric. There was plenty of opportunity for human touches in the situations at hand, but the characterizations as handled failed to get under the shirt.

Mother Maurice as the coming writer was a sympathetic old lady, and Arthur Donaldson as the negro servant who drove the hack registered a very good characterization despite the fact that his beard was rather bad at times. The other players were just satisfactory.

Corinne Griffith was pretty, but seemed camera-conscious and not sufficiently impressive to create any stir.

Others in the cast were William Dunn and George J. Forth.

The Box Office Angle

This isn't strong enough as drama to make a dent, and has quite a bit that many may object to, so that it would seem advisable to pass it by. There was plenty of characterization opportunity, but these characters failed to really hit the human note sufficiently to make the action seem real.

The starring of Corinne Griffith means very little in the young life of your fans, and if for any reason you decide to play this, it would seem to me to be decidedly advisable to star Mother Maurice and Arthur Donaldson, who are both much better known than Miss Griffith, and have more important parts than she has in the production.

I have a hunch that this "pretty ingenue" thing is going to get an awful bump in the next few months, because it certainly has been done to death, and I think an intelligent concentration upon characterization by capable people will be decidedly more welcome than the routine guff about the pretty ingenue, except, of course, in the cases of those who are firmly established.

The fact that O. Henry wrote this is the best thing that might be said about it, altho as an O. Henry story this is a disappointment because of the manner in which it has been handled .

Eva Tanguay in "THE WILD GIRL"
Titles by
ERNEST STERN, Inc.,
The Title Man
729 Seventh Ave. Bryant 8973

TAX COSTS BUSINESS.

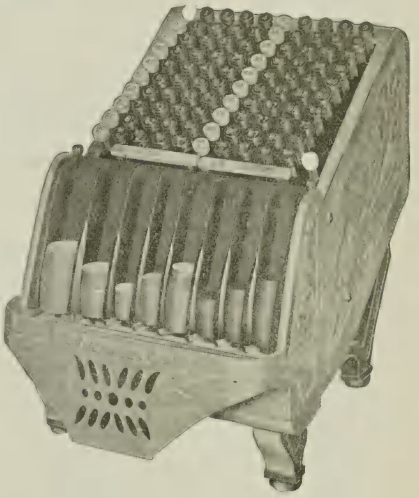
Detroit, Nov. 7.

Phil Gleichman, managing director of the Broadway-Strand Theatre, says he lost $200 last Sunday through people walking away rather than wait in line, all because the box office could not make the right change quickly enough.

He declared there should be some simpler method for handling the tax, especially at the big picture houses.

Mr. Gleichman does not believe in advancing prices on certain seats only, as it is bound to create ill-feeling somewhere. (Variety—Nov. 9, 1917).

Here's the Answer!



Brandt Automatic Cashier

Only ONE operation necessary to make exact change

ONE FINGER—ONE KEY—THAT'S ALL

Correct amount ready instantly. No computing. No mistakes.

NOW is a good time to write for full particulars

Brandt Manufacturing Co.,
Watertown Wisconsin

Eastern Representative, David G. Story,
1 Madison Ave., New York City.

ANOTHER DELIGHTFUL BAB COMEDY, LIGHT BUT PLEASING

Marguerite Clark in

BAB'S BURGLAR

Famous Players—Paramount

DIRECTOR.....J. Searle Dawley
AUTHOR.....Mary Roberts Rinehart in S. E. P.
CAMERAMAN.....Lewis W. Physioc
AS A WHOLE.....Another chapter of Bab's adventures, with some interesting comedy struggles with an auto
DIRECTION.....Registered some good comedy touches, kept atmosphere pleasing and put it over satisfactorily
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Very good
LIGHTINGS.....Some good effects; generally pleasing
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR.....Delightful little minx
SUPPORT.....Good
EXTERIORS..Quite satisfactory; not wonderfully artistic
INTERIORS.....Very good
DETAIL.....Good, with one slip
TIME.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

IF you played "Bab's Diary" you will know what to do about this one, because the same vein of light comedy runs thru, with the same chuckles over the misspelled words, many snickers over little touches and a few sure-enough laughs over some of the stunts.

In one place the producer slipped a little bit, it being where the burglar left his overcoat in Bab's automobile, which overcoat contained a plan of the house, when it would have been more logical had he dropped the plan from his overcoat. It is particularly true that this scene should have been made over, in view of the fact that the supposed burglar arrived at the house wearing the overcoat which we had previously seen him leave in Miss Clark's car. Following this, the fact that the supposed "burglary" was an elopement was tipped off too soon, because this little incident could have been made much more effective had the audience been kept out of the secret a little longer. This idea of telling the audience immediately, however, has been the curse of many a Famous Players production. I understand that they wanted to make "Under Cover" up there by starting out at the first to tell who the mysterious secret service man really was.

If your audience doesn't laugh when Miss Clark starts to manipulate her new car and jams it thru the back of her garage, stopping on the very brink of the lake, then you want to put something in the seats to wake 'em up.

To be true, this is light and the story is slender, but personally I am firmly convinced that a very large percentage of our film patrons are partial to light entertainment at the present time because they have had so much of the vamp and meller stuff.

In the cast were Frank Losee, Isabel O'Madigan, Helen Green, Nigel Barri, Daisy Belmore, Leone Morgan and George Odell.

The Box Office Angle.

You know just how much Marguerite Clark can get you—or you should know! If it isn't enough, maybe it's your fault and worthy of an investigation. The fact that the "Bab" stories ran in The Saturday Evening Post and have been read by the millions, of course adds decidedly to the possibilities, but I would be very careful to prepare them for light entertainment. The success of light comedy depends to a great extent upon the attitude of your patrons when they come to your theatre. Prepare them for farce, and make it clear that this is not drama. Then they should be "with" you.

You might work out some special stunts in connection with this production, applying to the owners of automobiles, since Bab's ownership of a car and the troubles therewith have much to do with this particular offering.

FAST MOVING MELO IN CLASSY ATMOSPHERE WILL INTEREST

Ruth Roland and Milton Sills in

THE FRINGE OF SOCIETY

M. H. Hoffman—State Rights

DIRECTOR.....Robert Ellis
AUTHOR.....Pierre V. R. Key
PHOTOGRAPHED BY.....George K. Hollister, Edward Wynard and H. J. Butler
AS A WHOLE.....Fast moving meller with some classy atmosphere that gives some distinction to production
STORY.....Rather old friends—misunderstood situation and willun attacking hero's wife incidents centered around fight between prohibitionists and liquor interests
DIRECTION.....Kept it moving and held attention; provided some distinctive atmosphere
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very pleasing
LIGHTINGS.....A few very effective and artistic, generally good
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STARS.....Quite pleasing—altho compelled by story to some meller actions
SUPPORT.....Quite satisfactory for meller
EXTERIORS.....Good
INTERIORS.....Excellent
DETAIL.....Quite satisfactory
TIME.....Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

FIGURED from the angle of entertainment, this moves fast, registers some good lightings and some excellent sets, and holds the interest right well, altho the plot is built around some old situations and the action does not grip at the heart and really convince.

Seldom, if ever, have I seen Ruth Roland screen as well as she does in this, and Milton Sills was decidedly pleasing as the newspaper owner hero.

The story centered around an expose of the attempt by the liquor interests to corner the supply of grain, with Mr. Sills collecting evidence for a government investigation which was to precede the introduction of a prohibition bill in Congress.

By the "misunderstood situation" route Mr. Sills got discouraged and then drunk, and landed on the Island for ten days, during which time things happened, with his release coming just in time to provide a lightning-like finish of a reel or so of bing-bang meller which ended up with his turning over the necessary evidence to the Congressional committee and beating up J. Herbert Frank, the willun, who had tried to insult his wife.

In addition to the misunderstood situation which caused the difficulty, we had our old friend of the wife going to the willun's apartment to plead with him, but these bits were rather well handled and will probably get by without much unfavorable comment.

The decidedly distinctive atmosphere—particularly of the interiors—lifts this offering decidedly, and I believe it will register as a satisfactory melodrama most anywhere.

George Larkin was a scrappy little reporter, and J. Herbert Frank was a wicious willun. Leah Baird had a small part as the willun's assistant.

Others who appeared were Tammany Young, Jules Cowles and Ollie Kirkby.

The Box Office Angle.

No attempt has been made to play this up as a propaganda picture, but it might be advisable in some sections, depending upon your local conditions, to explain that the story is centered around a battle between the Prohibitionists and the liquor interests. If they like action in your house, this ought to go over very well, because it has speed and comparative class.

The names of Ruth Roland and Milton Sills should be worth something at the box office, and it would probably help to state that the supporting cast includes such well-known players as George Larkin, Leah Baird, Ollie Kirkby, Tammany Young and Jules Cowles. All of these players are known to a certain percentage of the fans.

As a teaser line on this you might say, "Has a man ever a right to give up?" "After you had disgraced yourself, would you disgrace your family and friends by acknowledging your own name in a police court, or take ten days on the Island and hide your identity?

STARTED GREAT WITH CHARACTERIZATION; FINISHED AS POOR MELO

Mae Marsh in

SUNSHINE ALLEY

Goldwyn

DIRECTOR.....John W. Noble
AUTHOR .....Mary Rider
SCENIC EFFECTS BY.....Everett P. Shinn
CAMERAMAN.....George W. Hill
AS A WHOLE.....Started beautifully and had excellent atmosphere throughout, but meller at end gave it black eye
STORY.....Pitifully weak, with awful melodramatic finish; had it remained sweet characterization, would have been better
DIRECTION.....Registered characterization and very good atmosphere; kept production distinctive despite slender story thread at first and awful meller at end
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally artistic and distinctive; occasionally too hazy
LIGHTINGS.....Many very effective; generally artistic in closeups
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR.....Distinctive personality; very pleasing at first, but handicapped later by story
SUPPORT.....Very good; rather well chosen types
EXTERIORS .....Good
INTERIORS.....Generally very pleasing, altho occasional back drops in evidence
DETAIL.....Satisfactory
TIME.....Fifty-seven minutes (5 parts)

THEY started this off with Mae Marsh in a bird and animal store. What more could one wish for audience stuff?

They had a parrot, a monkey, white mice, dogs, cats, and a little bit of everything. The opening at The Strand was accompanied by many bird calls from the orchestra, which helped quite a bit to get over this atmosphere. Then we had some very pleasing characterization touches running along for quite some footage, with the results very satisfactory despite the fact that the story had not as yet begun to develop.

When they commenced to provide complications we found that the plot was very slender, and it finished with a lot of very ordinary, unconvincing mellerdrammer which certainly didn't belong in the sort of picture that this started off to be.

Miss Marsh's father was injured by an auto in which Bobby Harron was riding, and then Bobby's mother wanted to buy Miss Marsh's pet bullfinch. Finally, pressed for funds, Miss Marsh sold the bird, and then the bird was obligingly taken ill, so that Mae had to go to the house to attend to it.

She put on her grandmother's dress, and it "just happened" that they had a masquerade at the house that night, so that she was accepted as one of the guests temporarily. This was all very nice. Then the plot "sickened." Mae's brother got mixed up with a crook and they demanded money. They had previously tried a little ruff stuff, which had given Friend Bobby a chance to do the hero act, but now they forced Mae to allow them to rob the house.

This was followed by some effective night stuff and the eventual rounding up of the wicked wuns, with Bobby announcing that Mae was to be his wife just about the time she was going to be arrested for having in her possession some of the stolen goods.

The reunion of these old favorites, Miss Marsh and Bobby Harron, will probably be of interest to many of your fans, and you can safely tell them that the production is decidedly more artistic and distinctive than the last few films in which they appeared at Fine Arts. I would be careful, however, not to promise too much on this, because the meller at the end leaves rather a bad taste in the mouth of any who center most of their attention upon the story, and a large percentage of the fans do that.

The supporting cast registered some good types, and there was enough of the animal stuff, with a few touches in which a kid figured to have made this very pleasing, indeed, as a simple little study in human characterization had the story evolved into something that would have seemed real, instead of drifting into the ruff stuff.

In the supporting cast were Dion Titheradge, John Charles, Jack Grey, Isabel Berwin, Will T. Carleton, Ed See and J. A. Furey.

The Box Office Angle.

The chief angle that you can develop in this is the fact that it shows Mae Marsh and Bobby Harron together again. You can probably arouse some interest by telling them that she appears as a quaint little lady who helps her daddy run a bird and animal store, and, by centering the attention upon her characterization, you can undoubtedly get this by very satisfactorily.

You can safely promise that the atmosphere and the production, from the viewpoint of settings, lightings, etc., is a very good one, and if you are in the habit of making alibis in advance to protect yourself against the weak spots in an otherwise good picture, you can say that this finishes as a melodrama without the melodrama discounting the beauty and sweetness of the characterizations registered by Miss Marsh.

COMEDY WITH ENOUGH OF BURLESQUE TO KEEP IT FUNNY

Gail Kane in

A GAME OF WITS

American—Mutual

DIRECTOR	Henry King
AUTHOR	Daniel Frederick Whitcomb
AS A WHOLE	Broad comedy that will get over
STORY	Girl forced into engagement which she successfully breaks
DIRECTION	Made characterizations broad and kept them funny
PHOTOGRAPHY	Clean-cut
LIGHTINGS	Fine
CAMERA WORK	Very good
STAR	Very pleasing
SUPPORT	Aitken fine; others good
EXTERIORS	Beautiful
INTERIORS	Satisfactory
DETAIL	Good
TIME	Fifty-six minutes (5 parts)

DIRECTOR HENRY KING gave us comedy with such broad burlesque characters that it sort of jarred me at first, but he carried it along until we got used to it and then kept the audience wreathed in grins and chuckles for the remainder of the film. He had one shot of Rodin's "The Thinker" and then faded in on Spottiswoode Aitken in a bathing suit, in a similar posture. It went over big.

The story was the ancient stuff of the daughter of a Wall Street broker who was in bad and needed money from Aitken, and to obtain this Aitken offered the proposition that he marry the broker's daughter.

Miss Kane overheard this conversation without their knowledge, and when Aitken proposed to her she accepted him. Immediately after their engagement was announced they all went to the summer home of her father, where Miss Kane put Aitken thru all the paces and nearly killed him. He left after paying her some "heart balm" money, which straightened up her father's business. This put enough comedy into the old situation to get it over very nicely.

The characterization put over by Mr. Aitken was delightful. It was nearly Keystone, but good.

Miss Kane was good to look at in most of her scenes, but she had a secondary part.

Louis J. Cody as the hero was brought in to stand around for some three reels or more, finally coming in for the clutch. George Periolat was good as the father.

The photography was unusually good, and the exterior scenes were well chosen. The closeups were great and certainly showed Miss Kane to advantage.

The titles were written for laughs, and they got them.

There was a double exposure of some "chickens" in this that registered a good laugh. The bathing scenes were pretty and some of the shots of the girls swimming ought to be worth some real money to you. These were just flashes, but if you get them in "stills" it should help pull quite a number of the young bloods.

The Box Office Angle.

I think this will please most any audience. It's broad, but it's good and clean, and the characterization of Spottiswoode Aitken is certainly sure fire.

In the advertising I would talk particularly of Miss Kane and then mention Mr. Aitken and Mr. Periolat. I believe that both of these men have followings.

A good line to use in connection with your billing on this would be—"How much would you pay to escape marrying Gail Kane? See A GAME OF WITS."

EXCESS FOOTAGE AND CRUDITIES DISCOUNT EFFECTIVE SITUATION AT END

Marguerite Courtot in

THE NATURAL LAW

France Films, Inc.—State Rights

DIRECTOR	Charles H. France
AUTHOR	Howard Hall
AS A WHOLE	Painfully draggy and somewhat crude for first five reels, but had strong situation rather well handled at finish
STORY	Wandered around so long, tired you out before got to point
DIRECTION	Gave good atmosphere but permitted some overplaying and injured production seriously by excess footage
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied from fine to fair
LIGHTINGS	Some excellent; some only fair, but general impression satisfactory
CAMERA WORK	Varied
STAR	Sometimes quite pleasing, but overplayed in some scenes and inclined to use "hands over head" gesture too much
SUPPORT	Generally good, except crude extras and some overplaying in high spots
EXTERIORS	Satisfactory; a few good shots
INTERIORS	Some good; some ordinary
DETAIL	Satisfactory—except Larkin's clothes too loud
TIME	One hour and 30 minutes—which is 30 minutes too much

AFTER making you sit thru an hour of rather ordinary movie stuff containing many crudities in the way of poorly played unimportant scenes, they finally got to a situation which is in a way an old friend, but it has been very well handled and is really rather effective despite some overplaying by the star and one or two members of the supporting cast.

The last thirty minutes of this is very good and could be made much better by being properly edited. The first hour is badly in need of reduction to thirty minutes and some new titling which would probably save the entire production and make it a very good film. The present condition of the offering shows some printed telegrams and pasted newspaper inserts. They also had one telegram dated June 20, appearing in the action sometime after one which was dated July 1. The days seemed to be moving backwards. Possibly the feller who dated this had had to sit thru the first five reels a good many times, and the thing was so slow that the hours seemed to be moving in the wrong direction.

After the introduction of our old friend "mortgage on the home," which was given as a reason why Miss Courtot was to consider the courtship of a middle-aged doctor, we found George Larkin bustin' in on things wearing a track suit—which proved that he was an athlete. Then came the situation of Miss Courtot slipping because of her infatuation for the young man, with the result that she later had to apply to the doctor, with the request that he perform an operation. This situation was handled as well as such situations can be handled, and then we had the doctor ready to force the marriage of the girl and the young man.

With Larkin stating that he was ready to do his duty, the girl said she didn't want his "duty," and she refused to marry him. This brought a development of the doctor's interest in Miss Courtot, while they sent George to Europe to win honors in an athletic meet, and brought him back, very much in love with the girl.

When he proposed to her now the doctor made it clear that he would step aside if he proved his love, without George of course knowing anything about the doctor's intentions. The doctor then told him that an operation had been performed, and when George became very indignant the doctor accepted this as evidence of his love and bowed himself out.

All thru the story there was a little blonde who wore her hair in curls—altho she looked like she was old enough not to do so—who tried too hard to be vivacious. To sort of emphasize the fact that the doctor was something of a prospective cradle-robber, we saw a man older than himself winning the rattle-brained blonde for his wife.

Frequently the production was crude, which was rather in contrast to most of the scenes which gave a suggestion of very pleasing atmosphere.

In the supporting cast were Howard Hall, Gordon Grey, Chas. H. France, Jack Ellis and Leah Peck.

The Box Office Angle.

This is of course presented on the hope that a story based upon such a situation as this may have a chance because "Where Are My Children?" and a few other such plots got money.

Figured from that angle, I think the name is a poor one, and, altho the last couple of reels have some good drama which is in decided contrast in playing and handling to the rest of the film, still the production in its present form is a very poor bet. Properly reduced in footage and carefully handled, this can be made a film which will hold the interest and please as drama, altho the question as to the propriety of placing so much emphasis upon the particular situation is a very, very doubtful one. You know how your particular community will feel in reference to that point, and I must leave it to you.

I would be very sure, however, that this has been edited before booking. It is entirely too long for commercial purposes and contains much more footage than the story justifies, so that there is no logical reason why it should remain as it was shown at the private showing.

BING BANG MELLER WITH SPEED, CLASS AND STAR

Irene Castle in

SYLVIA OF THE SECRET SERVICE

Astra—Pathé

DIRECTOR	George Fitzmaurice
AUTHOR	Joseph Traut
SCENARIO BY	Philip Bartholomae
CAMERAMAN	Arthur C. Miller
AS A WHOLE	Bing-bang meller, wild-eyed in spots and certaintly speedy
STORY	Stolen diamond and detectives on job, with much action and little acting
DIRECTION	Showed star in beautiful gowns and made it move, with practically no attempt to make it convince
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally satisfactory; a few good effects
LIGHTINGS	Generally good
CAMERA WORK	Good
STAR	Pretty; wore good clothes
SUPPORT	Quite satisfactory for meller
EXTERIORS	Satisfactory; little attempt for artistry
INTERIORS	Good
DETAIL	Fitted with meller
TIME	Fifty-six minutes (5 parts)

JUST as farce is unreal comedy, so is meller unreal drama.

From start to finish this is a meller. At times it is as fast meller as a Keystone farce, and because of that speed it becomes funny. Nevertheless, this certain brand of meller has a certain amount of interest and entertainment value purely because of the fact that something is happening every minute. I believe that's the secret to the success of the very cheap and rather crude serials that have made money.

In the matter of speed and action and the lack of characterization or convincing dramatic situations, this production was very much like serials. As to general atmosphere and personality of the players, it was to a certain extent rather pleasing. There was supposed to be a mystery element, but no one will have any doubt as to the outcome. They will be concerned, however, in the things which are happening and going to happen before the inevitable ending comes.

Irene Castle as Sylvia of the Secret Service has many wild adventures trailing a band of thieves who are anxious to secure a very large diamond which is being transferred from one point to another by Elliott Dexter, who of course becomes the hero and falls in love with Mrs. Castle in the course of the action.

There is a Scotland Yard detective who makes things a bit more complicated by his rival's attempts to round up the thieves, and of course on the finish Mrs. Castle triumphs and then nonchalantly gives joint credit to the bungling detective who had caused her the trouble.

Several occasions were devised for Mrs. Castle to wear many elaborate costumes, there being one instance where she was deliberately placed upon a platform by the salesman of a gown, with the statement that he would show her a costume, with the different light effects played upon it, which gave excuse for showing her in this costume in different poses, with the film tinted in different colors. As a secret service agent, Mrs. Castle was active, attractive and altogether satisfactory.

Elliott Dexter, as the hero, was 'ansom—and present when needed.

Among those who appeared were J. H. Gilmour, Suzanne Willa and J. W. Perceval.

The Box Office Angle.

If you have a house where they like the wild-eyed stuff as long as it's fast and reasonably well dressed, this should go over very well. If your people are tired of the unreal things and inclined to fuss when you have what they call "movie mellers" then this is not a good bet for you. It depends almost altogether upon the attitude of your patrons to this particular type of production.

CHET WITHEY
DIRECTOR
JUST COMPLETED
"NEARLY MARRIED"
By EDGAR SELWYN
STARRING MADGE KENNEDY

ORDINARY CHARACTERIZATION STUDY WEAKENED BY MELLER ENDING

Dick Rosson and Pauline Curley in

A CASE AT LAW

Eastern Triangle

DIRECTOR	Arthur Rosson
SUPERVISED BY	Allan Dwan
AUTHOR	William Dudley Pelly
CAMERAMAN	Roy Overbaugh
AS A WHOLE	Very good characterizatoin, but hardly pleasing
STORY	"Wet and dry" question
DIRECTION	Good
PHOTOGRAPHY	Ordinary
LIGHTINGS	No attempt to get them
CAMERA WORK	Just good
STAR	He overreached in one sequence; she very appealing
SUPPORT	Fine
EXTERIORS	Very few
INTERIORS	Satisfactory
DETAIL	Good
TIME	Fifty-six minutes (5 parts)

DICK ROSSON started off very nicely with his characterization of a weak willed youngster who got into terrible mixups with booze, but ended with some melo that was too "melo."

The story concerned Rosson's elopment with Pauline Curley. Going to the town where her father had gone years before, because he had lost his reputation thru drinking, Rosson got in with the "wet" population. Miss Curley's father then took care of him, until her father, in trying to save Rosson, decided to clean out the "wets." He did this with a couple of six-shooters and was finally acquitted for the act.

There were a number of excellent types shown in the saloon—"The Tout," played by Ed Sturgis; the saloon-keeper, done by Jack Dillon, and many others who fitted the type of hangers-on.

Dick Rosson has put over a couple of good characterizations lately, but unfortunately when it comes to his big dramatic moments he overreaches. He did in this, and up to that time he had made a very favorable impression.

It seems a pity that this was weakened by the melodramatic ending, and I believe it would have registered very much better had it been kept more in the tone in which it started.

The Box Office Angle.

If you are in a "dry" community I believe you can go after this strong and it should get over. But if you happen to be in a town where they lean the other way, I would certainly pass it up. The characterizations were good, but the melo ending hurt, so keep the soft pedal on if you play this.

OBVIOUS AND UNIMPRESSIVE WITH OVERPLAYING THAT WEAKENED IT

Belle Bennett in

THE FUEL OF LIFE

Triangle

DIRECTOR	Walter Edwards
AUTHOR	Maude Reeves White
SCENARIO BY	Grant Wallace
CAMERAMAN	Gus Peterson
AS A WHOLE	Too much intrigue, and diagrammed in advance
STORY	Concerned the possession of a mine
DIRECTION	Permitted some overplaying
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied
LIGHTINGS	Had too much light in some scenes
CAMERA WORK	Good
STAR	Looked fine in some scenes, bad in others
SUPPORT	Acceptable
EXTERIORS	Usually fine
INTERIORS	Usually quite good
DETAIL	Allowed a few slips
TIME	Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

EVERYTHING in this varied—photography, lightings, playing, and even the makeups. The whole plot was very obvious. They "diagrammed" it from the very first.

Belle Bennett was the wife of a flirtatious Wall Street broker, who cut loose and left for parts unknown, when his wife caught him in the act.

The rest of the plot was taken up with a fight to get possession of the mine, with Miss Bennett working against the willuns. She finally won possession and then married the young mine owner, which smoothed out all tangles.

The ending was quite melo, and, altho it had a chance to get over for the first four reels, the last reel killed it off.

Miss Bennett was pretty in some of her closeups, but in others she had much too much light. She wore several lo' and behold gowns.

Miss Bennett registered occasionally, but overplayed too much to really put over her characterization.

They pulled a good stunt where F. H. Newberry stopped a machine going down hill by getting in front of it with his own machine. This was done quite effectively.

The cast included J. Barney Sherry, Tom Guise, Estelle La Cheur. Margaret Shillingford, Eugene Burr, E. Hayden, Lee Phelps and Lee Hill.

The Box Office Angle.

I think you can safely pass this on by. The plot isn't worth mentioning and the action ordinary.

If you have to play it put the soft pedal on.

The broker's office has been worked to death, and the explosion in the mine is certainly not new any more

CRANE WILBUR

ART DRAMAS PROGRAM

Eye of Envy — Blood of His Father
Unto the End — Devil McCare
Just Jim

Watch the next issue of WID'S for complete announcement about

"Brighten the Corner Where You Are."

AT LIBERTY?

Then why not let the biggest, the most important producers and directors know that your services are obtainable? There is no surer, quicker or better way to do this than to use WID'S. The more important a producer or director is the quicker he grabs for WID'S. And the cost of your card in the "At Liberty" column is but a trifle. There are few "stock companies" these days. Most every one is free lancing and the producers lose track of you. Keep in touch. Larger space, of course, if you wish We would like to tell you more about this newest feature, as well as of our Directory. Call Bryant 2941, or write for details.

WID'S

Times Building
New York.

TABULATED PERCENTAGE REPORTS FROM EXHIBITORS

THE BATTING AVERAGES

These are the averages of the companies having 200 reports or more.

Reports		% P. P.	% B. O.	Repeat
2628	PARAMOUNT	68.4	62.3	397
2349	TRIANGLE	70.6	65.2	434
595	WORLD	67.7	61.5	49
674	METRO	70.8	67.0	57
767	FOX	73.1	70.8	106
233	MUTUAL	72.0	71.1	17
298	BLUEBIRD	62.7	63.5	23
544	VITAGRAPH	68.1	66.2	76

THE NUMBER BEFORE THE NAME OF THE FEATURE INDICATES THE NUMBER OF REPORTS RECEIVED AND TABULATED ON THAT FILM.

THE FIRST COLUMN CARRIES THE PERCENTAGE OF PLEASED PATRONS.

THE SECOND COLUMN SHOWS THE BOX OFFICE PERCENTAGE.

FIGURES IN THE THIRD COLUMN INDICATE THAT MANY REPORTED THE FILM WORTH A RETURN DATE.

All reports in this percentage tabulation have been marked on this scale:

EXCEPTIONAL	100%
EXCELLENT	80%
GOOD	60%
FAIR	40%
POOR	20%
BAD	0%

PARAMOUNT

Reports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
8	The Virginian	81	73	2
11	Wildflower	89	82	6
5	Behind the Screens	81	78
6	A Man from Mexico	87	72	2
5	The Bargain	80	74	3
7	The Crucible	92	84	3
5	The Sign of the Cross	79	85
9	Cinderella	84	91	4
5	Girl of the Golden West	79	77	2
5	The Goose Girl	95	95	4
6	David Harum	82	78	1
7	Captain Courtesy	74	59	1
5	The Woman	86	59	1
5	House of Lost Court	82	54	2
5	Stolen Goods	78	75
6	Pretty Sister Jose	84	82	2
5	Jim the Penman	64	65
7	Dawn of To-morrow	83	88	1
5	Arab	89	56	2
5	Wild Olive	82	69
6	Chimmy Fadden	91	75	1
6	Kindling	81	82
5	Kilmeny	75	73
9	Seven Sisters	84	75	1
11	Rags	91	93	5
6	The Secret Orchid	79	74
5	Nearly a Lady	65	75
6	The Marriage of Kitty	76	64
8	Helene of the North	87	81	2
6	Fatal Card	65	59
6	The Girl of Yesterday	89	78	3
7	White Pearl	71	75
7	Chorus Lady	73	63
6	The Secret Sin	69	74	1
7	Yankee Girl	52	57
6	Masqueraders	56	56
12	Carmen	82	83	4
14	Still Waters	93	90	7
9	Madame Butterfly	82	86	3
7	Mummy and Humming Bird	64	56
7	Bella Donna	92	77	4
8	Armstrong's Wife	79	65
5	Chimmie Fadden Out West	88	76	2
8	A Gentleman from Indiana	86	78
10	Prince and the Pauper	92	87	5
10	Mr. Grex from Monte Carlo	84	69	1
9	Jane	75	51
9	The Unknown	76	67	1
18	The Cheat	94	80	12
9	The Reform Candidate	80	54	1
9	The Immigrant	73	62
10	The Old Homestead	88	84	7
8	Lydia Gilmore	82	61	2
10	Temptation	82	77	2
10	The Foundling	78	76	3
6	Tongues of Men	77	53	1
8	Mice and Men	84	80	5
7	The Golden Chance	77	61	2
5	Kagamuffins	77	53
5	Call of the Cumberlands	79	64
8	The Spider	87	64	1
10	Puddin' Head Wilson	81	62	4
9	Tennessee's Pardner	65	58
8	Madame Le President	24	46
9	Nearly a King	52	49	1
13	Trail of the Lonesome Pine	75	77	3
8	Fell In Love With His Wife	63	51	1
8	Blacklist	62	52	1
10	Out of the Drifts	89	86	4
8	Diplomacy	53	56	1
14	Poor Little Peppina	88	84	8
16	To Have and To Hold	74	69	4
12	Ben Blair	72	63
10	For the Defense	68	62	1
7	The Code of Marcia Grey	64	59	2
9	The Lost Bridegroom	69	60	2
8	The Saleslady	72	62	1
15	Audrey	73	70	3
9	The Sowers	64	59
11	The Heart of Paula	71	54	1
12	The Race	69	59
8	The Eternal Grind	70	78	3
10	The Love Mask	59	54	2
10	Molly Make-Believe	87	82	6
7	The Red Widow	62	55	2
12	The Heart of Nora Flynn	72	60	4
8	A Moment Before	52	64	1
12	David Garrick	68	46	2
9	The Innocent Lie	56	51
16	Marie Rosa	81	80	4
12	Alien Souls	69	67	1
13	The Feud Girl	60	56
16	Pasquale	78	53	3
16	Sweet Kitty Bellairs	72	62	2
20	Saints and Sinners	54	49
17	Thousand-Dollar Husband	69	62	4
22	A Gutter Magdalene	62	54	1
10	Evil Thereof	44	44
15	The Making of Maddalena	63	57	3
23	Silks and Satins	85	88	16
14	Destiny's Toy	60	51
19	The Clown	79	54	3
20	Susie Snowflakes	69	59	2
16	The World's Great Enare	73	78	4
19	The American Beauty	61	61	3
22	The Dupe	64	64	1
22	The Smugglers	53	50	1
26	The Selfish Woman	72	68	4
29	Davy Crockett	67	62
28	The Dream Girl	69	64	2
28	Under Cover	79	75	5
27	International Marriage	55	51	1
27	Common Ground	64	64	1
35	Hulda from Holland	95	94	23
30	House of Golden Windows	73	64	3
22	A Woman in the Case	72	72	3
25	Little Lady Eileen	87	89	10
23	The Stronger Love	53	52
21	Public Opinion	82	72	4
21	Rolling Stones	67	60	2
21	The Honorable Friend	65	62	1
20	Victory of Conscience	60	59	3
21	Each Pearl a Tear	74	69	2
22	The Parson of Panamint	79	70	7
15	The Big Sister	50	57
14	The Reward of Patience	65	55
15	The House of Lies	73	65	1
14	The Daughter of McGregor	56	45
18	Ashes of Embers	85	83	7
16	The Quest of Life	59	61
14	Anton, the Terrible	46	45
17	The Lash	57	55
13	The Storm	75	65	1
19	The Intrigue	81	61	2
16	Her Father's Son	74	68	2
14	Witchcraft	55	55
14	The Kiss	74	68	2
16	The Rainbow Princess	82	74	3
15	The Heir to the Hoorah	82	69	3
16	The Soul of Kura San	80	73	1
12	A Son of Erin	79	73	2
10	Unprotected	53	55	1
11	The Years of the Locust	49	50
12	The Plow Girl	77	63
9	The Yellow Pawn	66	57	1
9	Nanette of the Wilds	50	57	2
7	Martyrdom of Philip Strong	53	55	1
10	The Coney Island Princess	62	63	1
10	The Road to Love	72	59	1
14	Oliver Twist	85	69	6
13	The Victoria Cross	44	54	1
17	The Traveling Salesman	78	60	3
20	The Right Direction	76	61	2
21	Snow White	95	95	13
16	Redeeming Love	63	60	1
21	The Slave Market	74	70	5
13	The Evil Eye	30	44	1
19	Great Expectations	74	55	1
17	Happiness of Three Women	73	58	1
14	Betty to the Rescue	46	48
18	Girl Like That	55	51
16	Lost and Won	59	50
20	The Golden Fetter	48	55
19	His Sweetheart	83	57	2
19	The Wax Model	67	56
19	Each To His Kind	62	60
16	Her Own People	72	52
12	The Black Wolf	35	38
17	The American Consul	53	50	1
21	The Fortunes of Fifi	67	77	2
21	On Record	61	55	2
18	Winning of Sally Temple	40	47
19	Those Without Sin	52	51	1
16	Castles For Two	52	49	1
13	Out of the Wreck	60	54
13	Sapho	74	83	3
11	Prison Without Walls	54	54
12	The Dummy	71	54
11	The Spirit of Romance	64	53
8	As Men Love	73	53
11	The Battle Imp	75	64	1
8	The Bond Between	49	39
9	A School For Husbands	49	45	1
8	The Lonesome Chap	51	44
9	Sleeping Fires	56	63	1
8	The Tides of Barnegat	49	43
9	The Cost of Hatred	42	38
10	The Valentine Girl	73	76
6	Unconquered	23	27
6	The Girl at Home	51	44
9	Heart's Desire	28	36

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
8 Sacrifice	26	43
8 The Primrose Ring	46	49
8 The Silent Partner	33	36
6 Marcelinna Millions	11	30
8 Her Better Self	58	62
9 The Undying Flame	47	53
8 Freckles	69	61
6 The World Apart	46	44
5 The Roadside Impressario	46	32
7 The Heir of the Ages	34	36
6 At First Sight	55	44
7 The Highway of Hope	38	33
6 Love That Lives	70	83
5 Forbidden Paths	34	37
5 What Money Can't Buy	39	54
7 The Amazons	96	96	1
7 The Mysterious Miss Terry	85	79
5 The Law of the Land	11	44
5 The Varmint	76	58
5 Hashimura Togo	70	49

TRIANGLE

11 The Iron Strain	80	67	2
10 The Lamb	85	78	3
10 Old Heidelberg	73	64	1
12 The Coward	83	66	1
9 Martyrs of the Alamo	67	57	2
15 The Disciple	85	76	2
8 Matrimony	81	76	2
6 Sable Lorcha	59	57
7 The Golden Claw	57	69
11 Double Trouble	59	67	2
8 Alaho Oe	60	65	1
6 The Lilly and the Rose	63	66
9 Jordan Is a Hard Road	56	54
6 Winged Idol	53	52
12 The Sdge of the Abyss	65	61
6 Cross Currents	49	49
12 Between Men	73	67	1
15 Let Katy Do It	87	63	6
6 The Corner	52	50
6 The Missing Link	52	46	1
11 The Wood Nymph	51	51	1
7 The Conquerer	74	78
10 The Price of Power	53	53
11 The Green Swamp	77	76	1
13 Acquitted	66	52
6 D'Artagnan	59	54
8 His Picture in the Papers	90	75	5
13 Honor's Altar	77	67	2
14 Betty of Greystone	77	65	2
23 Peggy	94	91	15
7 Don Quixote	57	56
9 The Last Act	79	78	1
11 Daphne and the Pirate	71	57	1
18 Hell's Hinges	93	89	11
17 The Flying Torpedo	88	80	8
14 Bullets and Brown Eyes	85	75	3
14 Martha's Vindication	70	72	2
14 Moral Fabric	75	62	1
15 Hoodoo Ann	68	65	1
15 The Raiders	79	70
14 The Habit of Happiness	92	85	5
8 Waifs	70	59	1
8 Little Meena's Romance	64	60	1
17 The Aryan	59	80	6
10 Sold for Marriage	71	72	1
17 Stepping Stones	85	75	2
10 Sunshine Dad	36	46
9 Civilization's Child	68	64	1
14 Children In the House	80	66	2
14 The Beggar of Cawnpore	61	49
19 The Good Bad Man	90	92	4
12 The No-Good Guy	74	60	3
17 Susan Rocks the Boat	69	63
20 Not My Sister	79	77	4
18 Child of Paris Streets	76	64
22 The Primal Lure	82	76	7
8 Mr. Goode, the Samaritan	53	53
20 The Market of Vain Desire	79	64	5
22 Going Straight	77	78	3
23 The Bugle Call	93	79	3
26 Reggie Mixes In	93	80	11
16 The Sorrows of Love	66	69	1
21 An Innocent Magdalene	71	71	2
18 The Dividend	70	68	1
21 The Wild Girl of Sierras	45	53
25 An Apostle of Vengeance	88	83	4
18 Casey at the Bat	44	48
28 The Phantom	83	72	7
30 Flirting With Fate	87	86	11
31 The Deserter	85	69	11

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
26 The Little School Ma'am	74	67	2
26 The Eye of the Night	74	58	5
19 Stranded	60	50
27 The Captive God	65	70	2
23 The Halfbreed	72	74	2
22 The Payment	81	70	3
18 The Marriage of Molly O	48	47
24 Honor Thy Name	87	73	4
22 The Devil's Needle	64	64	1
31 Shell "43"	86	69	6
26 Hell-to-Pay Austin	83	66	6
24 Lieutenant Danny, U. S. A.	79	69
16 Pillars of Society	59	56	1
22 Home	91	80	9
8 Gretchen the Greenhorn	64	62	2
24 The Patriot	79	80	6
24 The Social Secretary	89	75	8
17 The Thoroughbred	82	72	1
12 The Little Liar	70	58
19 The Wolm Woman	86	89	6
16 The Dawnmaker	58	78	3
20 Diane of the Follies	71	72	2
27 Manhattan Madness	94	92	12
22 Flain Jane	88	75	5
24 Old Folks at Home	81	64	2
17 The Jungle Child	60	61	1
21 The Rummy	67	54	1
21 The Return of Draw Egan	88	86	7
20 The Vagabond Prince	75	70	3
19 Somewhere in France	76	69	1
18 A Corner in Colleens	88	80	7
12 A Sister of Six	69	64	2
21 Fifty-Fifty	89	83	6
12 Atta Boy's Last Race	54	55
16 American Aristocracy	92	89	9
10 The Microscope Mystery	50	43
14 Honorable Algy	76	65	3
15 Jim Grimsby's Boy	67	63	3
15 The Devil's Double	91	91	7
15 The Children Pay	72	64	3
14 Children of the Feud	55	52	1
8 The Criminal	49	45
11 A Gamble in Souls	69	66	3
15 The Wharf Rat	54	55
20 The Martrimaniac	92	94	10
20 The Sin Ye Do	92	85	10
13 Heiress of Coffee Dan's	60	53	2
10 Three of Many	62	53
9 House Built Upon Sand	75	67	3
9 Nina the Flower Girl	52	53
11 The Female of the Species	72	74	2
16 Truthful Tulliver	97	93	9
12 The Weaker Sex	88	83	4
7 The Little Yank	40	52	1
11 The Bride of Hate	78	74	5
12 The Iced Bullet	60	55
15 The Americano	98	97	11
11 Chicken Casey	75	59	1
15 Jim Bludso	65	40	1
14 The Crab	83	70	5
10 Girl of the Timber Claims	44	39
16 The Gun-Fighter	76	85	10
13 The Bad Boy	71	54	2
11 The Princess of the Dark	39	41
6 Stage Struck	41	38
12 Last of the Ingrams	45	42
9 Blood Will Tell	61	61
5 A Love Sublime	47	40
8 The Little Brother	51	37	2
14 Back of the Man	90	81	5
10 Betsy's Burglar	59	54
14 The Square-Deal Man	96	95	7
11 The Dark Road	60	49	1
5 A Daughter of the Poor	57	55
9 A Woman's Awakening	61	52
9 Her Father's Keeper	51	48
9 Her Official Fathers	56	48
9 Old-Fashioned Young Man	48	47
10 Sweetheart of the Doomed	74	68	4
10 Paddy O'Hara	62	52	1
11 The Desert Man	92	91	4
9 Cheerful Givers	47	41
10 The Pinch Hitter	96	71	2
5 Hands Up	35	35
8 The Snarl	54	63
8 Happiness	59	56
6 Wild Winshin's Widow	58	58
6 Soul's Triumphant	30	28
8 The Millionaire Vagrant	78	66
9 Wolf Lowry	91	92	1
7 The Girl Glory	71	53
7 Bawbs of Blue Ridge	38	51

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
8 A Hater of Men	79	63
5 American—That's All	32	32
7 Love or Justice	75	69
6 Paws of the Bear	55	48
9 The Glod Hopper	96	84	1
6 The Flame of the Yukon	95	91
5 The Strange Transgressor	80	75
5 The Mother Instinct	48	44
7 Sudden Jim	90	86
6 The Sawdust Ring	87	69
6 Borrowed Plumage	48	53
6 In Slumberland	74	34

WORLD

7 Trilby	81	68	4
7 Camille	86	79	3
5 The Yellow Passport	82	80	2
5 Then I'll Come Back To You	76	66	1
7 The Feast of Life	61	73
7 Her Maternal Right	58	74
6 Sudden Riches	76	71
6 Tangled Fates	57	63
5 His Brother's Wife	83	74	2
10 Perils of Divorce	61	63
13 La vie de Boheme	47	50
6 The Crucial Test	53	55
7 The Weakness of Man	61	68
12 Sally In Our Alley	68	63
14 Paying the Price	70	70	1
12 Miss Petticoats	59	61
14 Woman's Way	75	74	4
13 The Summer Girl	56	57
12 Rail Rider	68	60
10 Husband and Wife	75	63	2
8 Almighty Dollar	76	72	1
13 The Velvet Paw	74	60	1
8 Friday, the Thirteenth	72	70
11 Dark Silence	77	79	2
7 The Gilded Cage	75	70
6 Hidden Scar	77	67
6 The Scarlet Oath	60	62
7 Man Who Stood Still	71	63
8 The Heart of a Hero	59	49
15 Bought and Paid For	91	91	10
10 The Madness of Helen	57	54
6 Men She Married	58	55
11 All Man	59	63	2
7 Broken Chains	50	43
12 The Rise of Susan	79	83	6
6 The World Against Him	52	43
10 Woman Alone	67	65	1
7 On Dangerous Ground	65	71
7 The Man Who Forgot	65	71	1
5 The Bondage of Fear	65	63
8 Tillie Wakes Up	79	78	1
8 The Hungry Heart	87	83	2
8 The Square Deal	69	72
3 A Girl's Folly	65	75
5 The Red Woman	49	48
5 The Family Honor	66	61
8 The Dancer's Peril	77	71	1
5 The Social Leper	65	65
5 The Page Mystery	55	57

METRO

6 Soul of a Woman	93	80	1
WORLD
5 The Yellow Streak	85	64
5 Rosemary for Remembrance	68	69
5 What'll People Say?	80	84
9 The Lure of Heart's Desire	55	58
5 Her Debt of Honor	49	50
6 A Man and His Soul	83	83	2
5 A Corner In Cotton	57	56
5 The Price of Malice	66	65
6 The Soul Market	83	75	2
6 Her Great Price	80	68	1
8 The Wall Between	78	82	1
6 The Kiss of Hate	62	74
6 Half Million Bribe	69	49
8 Playing With Fire	78	75
11 The Come-Back	75	74	1
8 Snow Birds	80	77
8 A Million a Minute	72	84	1
6 His Great Triumph	49	43
10 The Scarlet Woman	73	84	1
10 Dorian's Divorce	74	68
8 Masked Rider	69	68
6 Flower of No Man's Land	58	75
8 The Purple Lady	82	63
10 The Eternal Question	76	83	1

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
11 The Quitter	69	73
15 The River of Romance	87	76	7
9 A Child of Destiny	53	56
13 The Devil at His Elbow	64	61	1
14 God's Half Acre	71	62	1
14 The Weakness of Strength	68	54
11 The Pretender	80	72	1
7 The Upheaval	57	63
10 The Light of Happiness	67	66	1
10 Mister 44	88	93	4
8 The Wheel of the Law	77	66	1
10 The Dawn of Love	66	60
The Iron Woman	44	57
5 Life's Shadows	66	60
13 In the Diplomatic Service	69	83	4
The Brand of Cowardice	65	54
13 The Gates of Eden	68	54
11 Extravagance	69	82	3
10 The Wager	78	64
8 The Sunbeam	53	51
11 Big Tremaine	74	82	5
9 The Black Butterfly	70	80	4
The Stolen Triumph	56	48
8 Awakening of Helena Ritchie	60	61
11 Pigin Island	68	74	3
12 Vanity	61	53
12 The White Raven	85	81	4
9 A Wife by Proxy	46	41
9 Threads of Fate	41	34
12 Bridges Burned	47	62
The End of the Tour	45	44
10 One of Many	66	61	1
8 The Secret of Eve	37	66	1
14 The Promise	82	84	3
The Barricade	58	57
7 The Hidden Children	43	62
The Mortal Sin	53	58
The Waiting Soul	49	61	1
6 The Father's Son	67	62
5 The Power of Decision	51	53
7 A Magdalene of the Hills	51	50
6 God's Law and Man's	49	49
5 Sowers and Reapers	61	48
The Duchess of Doubt	67	64
6 The Haunted Pajamas	83	74
5 The Greatest Power	42	52
5 Aladdin's Other Lamp	51	50
6 The Slacker	99	97	1

FOX

A Fool There Was	84	97	2
5 The Gilded Fool	68	70
Should a Mother Tell?	85	75
9 Two Orphans	85	87	4
7 Regeneration	77	72	4
The Wonderful Adventure	75	76
Sin	62	82
6 The Soul of Broadway	85	80	2
9 Broken Law	82	65	1
8 Galley Slave	76	75	1
6 Destruction	76	90	1
6 Serpent	92	93	1
5 Ruling Passion	53	59
5 Merely Mary Ann	52	45
7 Fools Revenge	45	49
10 Fighting Blood	74	70
10 Gold and the Woman	65	86	1
11 The Bondman	76	64	1
5 A Wife's Sacrifice	55	56
12 Blue Blood and Red	84	70	1
6 Slander	80	70
10 A Modern Thelma	59	49	1
9 Man of Sorrow	63	64	1
9 Blazing Love	70	68
11 The Eternal Sapho	84	87	4
13 Sins of Men	75	60	1
14 Battle of Hearts	63	61
10 The Spider and the Fly	67	72	1
12 Hypocrisy	73	65
10 A Woman's Honor	69	71
22 East Lynne	86	85	9
15 Ambition	74	67
18 Man From Bitter Roots	82	81	2
21 Caprice of the Mountains	69	63	1
15 Tortured Heart	71	67
The Beast	87	66	6
27 Under Two Flags	95	92	17
20 The End of the Trail	66	76
19 Sporting Blood	62	57	1
19 Little Miss Happiness	75	68	3
21 Dare Devil Kate	74	76	1
14 The Unwelcome Mother	63	66
18 Her Double Life	86	86	6
10 Where Love Leads	69	63	1
14 The Fires of Conscience	65	71	1
12 The Straight Way	67	72
12 The Ragged Princess	77	70	1
15 The War Bride's Secret	76	71	3
12 Romeo and Juliet	86	86	5
5 Love and Hate	66	60
7 The Mischief Maker	69	69	2
7 Jealousy	63	81
8 The Mediator	76	69	1
5 Sins of the Parents	86	72	3
6 The Battle of Life	67	62
8 The Vixen	62	71
6 The Love Thief	82	80	1
5 The Island of Desire	74	67	1
8 The Price of Silence	82	77	1
10 The Darling of Paris	66	73
5 One Touch of Sin	65	73
7 The New York Peacock	83	79
6 The Tiger Woman	73	83	2
6 Sister Against Sister	82	58	1
6 A Tale of Two Cities	93	83	4
5 The Blue Streak	58	60

MUTUAL

5 Whispering Smith	64	66
Soul Mates	69	63
6 Doorsteps	61	62	6
7 Youth's Endearing Charms	77	71	1
7 Judith of the Cumberlands	68	68
10 The Pearl of Paradise	70	74
5 Dulcie's Adventure	87	83	2
10 Faith	76	71
6 Miss Jackie of the Navy	87	82	1
5 A Dream or Two Ago	81	87
8 The Innocence of Lizette	85	84
6 The Gentle Intruder	77	78

PATHE

6 Excuse Me!	90	73	2
6 Madame X	71	91	3
6 New York	80	74	1
6 Woman's Law	68	65
10 Big Jim Garrity	69	55	1
6 Girl with the Green Eyes	65	72
7 Shadow of Her Past	34	81
3 Little Mary Sunshine	90	78	1
7 The Shine Girl	73	64
8 Shadows and Sunshine	63	78	3
7 Joy and the Dragon	78	71	1
5 Her New York	82	62	2
Kick In	78	71	1

BLUEBIRD

8 Undine	79	86	3
5 Crippled Hand	58	69	1
5 Eye of God	64	80	1
9 Three Godfathers	68	74	1
15 Shoes	71	77	3
11 Broken Fetters	61	56	1
3 The Love Girl	63	64	1
6 The Grasp of Greed	71	76	1
8 The Silent Battle	78	84
8 Secret of the Swamp	5	56	2
7 Love's Lariat	65	64	1
8 Bettina Loved a Soldier	65	72
10 Wanted—A Home	74	75
7 Little Eve Edgarton	58	61	1
8 The Girl of Lost Lake	65	60
6 The Unattainable	51	48
13 Saving a Family Name	81	68	1
9 Behind the Lines	62	65
6 A Stranger from Somewhere	69	67
5 The Price of Silence	87	85
6 The Honor of Mary Blake	58	58
5 Black Orchids	72	80	1
5 The Bugler of Algiers	80	69	1
6 Mutiny	60	57
9 Mysterious Mrs. M	78	60	1
5 Polly Red Head	61	68
5 Hell Morgan's Girl	90	88	1

RED FEATHER

5 Fighting for Love	69	65

GREATER VITAGRAPH

14 Battle Cry of Peace	96	83	5
7 The Juggernaut	73	73	2
9 The Island of Regeneration	84	83	5
5 Dust of Egypt	67	6	2
8 The Great Divide	78	74	2
6 Green Stockings	88	88	2
5 Gods of Fate	62	62
9 The Night Out	81	75	1
5 Kennedy Square	85	68	1
5 Hunted Woman	74	54	1
5 Dollars and the Woman	75	56	1
5 Two-Edged Sword	76	53
11 God's Country and Woman	81	86	4
8 Salvation Joan	79	62
9 The Law Decides	80	70	4
10 The Ne'er Do Well	91	93	7
5 The Ordeal of Elizabeth	61	59
10 The Suspect	80	76	2
7 The Destroyers	68	57	1
9 The Shop Girl	78	79	1
7 Fathers of Men	71	67
12 The Tarantula	78	72	3
15 The Daring of Dianna	61	75
11 The Light at Dusk	85	72	4
8 The Alibi	69	69
18 The Combat	79	81	1
5 The Kid	60	57
5 His Wife's Good Name	64	76
13 Through the Wall	79	64	1
14 The Chattel	72	83	3
8 Prince in a Pawnshop	64	67	1
8 The Blue Envelope Mystery	55	59
11 The Last Man	82	81	1
6 The Devil's Prize	49	62
6 The Price of Fame	40	46
8 Dollars and the Law	55	69
9 An Enemy to the King	63	65	2
9 Rose of the South	73	62
9 Whom the Gods Destroy	59	73	3
7 Ninety and Nine	70	69	1
5 Indiscretion	53	61	1
8 The Man of Mystery	69	64	1
8 My Official Wife	90	82	4
11 The Glory of Yolanda	72	70	3
12 The Girl Phillippa	66	73	2
9 The Courage of Silence	70	71	2
8 Money Magic	55	61
5 Blind Justice	63	60
10 Arsene Lupin	67	63
8 Kitty Mackay	57	58	1
5 Intrigue	47	54
7 Aladdin from Broadway	62	67	1
8 The More Excellent Way	71	74	1
5 Babette	68	66
6 Her Secret	60	59
5 Capt. of Grey Horse Troop	58	63
6 Clover's Rebellion	68	75
5 The Message of the Mouse	78	78
5 The Stolen Treaty	55	59

K-E-S-E

7 Graustark	85	91	5
5 The Prince Chap	51	53
9 The Return of Eve	72	71	2
9 Country God Forgot	75	67
6 Prince of Graustark	85	85	2
7 The Cossack Whip	84	61
5 The Traunt Soul	71	74	1
10 Skinner's Dress Suit	95	84	7
5 The Heart of Texas Ryan	62	66
5 Filling His Own Shoes	53	66
6 The Man Who Was Afraid	77	69	1

SELZNICK

16 The Common Law	83	90	5
10 The Foolish Virgin	39	69	2
20 War Brides	76	67	11
9 Panthea	81	76	4
7 The Argyle Case	82	71	2
6 The Easiest Way	88	87	2
UNIV. SPEC.
11 20,000 Leagues Under Sea	66	81	5
10 The Dumb Girl of Portici	51	64
8 Where Are My Children?	79	84	2
5 The Eagle's Wings	76	71
8 Idle Wives	57	88	4
11 Vera the Medium	65	63	2
13 The Price She Paid	76	71	3
6 Poppy	60	75

GOLDWYN

6 Polly of the Circus	93	84

Motion Picture News Studio Directory

The Fourth Edition Will Be Out In December. Arrange to Have Your Copy Before the Edition Is Exhausted.

It Is the Only Reference Work Containing All the Information About Players Wanted by Casting Directors, Newspaper Photoplay Editors, and the Exhibitors Throughout the Country.

Every Exhibitor Needs a Copy of the Directory for the Preparation of Reading Notices In His Local Paper.

The 1918 Edition is to be bound in heavy cloth.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS, INC.,

729 SEVENTH AVENUE, NEW YORK.

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO

REGINALD BARKER
DIRECTING
PARALTA PLAYS
Paralta Studio, Los Angeles, Calif.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
PRODUCER

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

WILLIAM C. DOWLAN
PRODUCING METRO FEATURES
Current Release—"THE OUTSIDER"
With Emmy Wehlen.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING
PATHE PEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

JACK HARVEY
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING PATHE PLAYS

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
GOLDWYN

LLOYD INGRAHAM
PRODUCER

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
M. P. D. A.
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
M. P. D. A.
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

R. H. KELLY
STUDIO MANAGER
Empire All-Star Corp. & Mutual Corp.
Glendale, L. I.

HARLEY KNOLES
M. P. D. A.
FEATURES DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 D. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

JOSEPH LEVERING
DIRECTOR

O. A. C. LUND

ASHLEY MILLER
M. P. D. A.
Director—Vitagraph Studios
Brooklyn

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE DIRECTOR
FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.

WEDGWOOD NOWELL
TRIANGLE
Friars Club, N. Y. C.

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITAGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

TOM TERRISS
PRODUCER
VITAGRAPH

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
511 W. 143rd St. Audubon 1941.

JAMES VINCENT
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

BEN WILSON
DIRECTING AND STARRING
UNIVERSAL

CHESTER WITHEY
DIRECTOR

JAMES YOUNG
M. P. D. A.

WID'S IS READ NOT SKIMMED

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Adress—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM

A MAGAZINE—IN FACT A SERVICE

WID'S

INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS

Always Independent
Issued Every Thursday

VOL. III. THURSDAY, NOV. 22, 1917. NO. 47

25 Cents a Copy
$10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

You Can Get Money If You Have the Goods!

MANY people are yelling murder about conditions being ruinous right now, both in the theatrical field and in the film business, but I want to insist that business is absolutely all right if you have the goods.

In New York theatres many stars have been compelled to shove bum shows into the storehouse after one or two weeks—which is an unheard-of proceeding—but, just the same, the real shows are playing to capacity at unheard-of prices of $3.00 and $3.50 per seat, the speculators getting from five to eight dollars.

Many managers are yelling murder about conditions on the road, where, as a matter of fact, the real productions are getting money on the road, while the bum ones are falling flat.

The answer is that the public has learned to SHOP in buying amusements, because they have commenced to follow the magazines and form opinions as to what is worthless and what isn't.

I have been all thru this road show proposition from the small-town angle, and happen to know definitely that the public to-day throughout this country is more willing than ever to pay to see good entertainment, but is absolutely opposed to being stung!

The people who are yelling murder about the film business are the ones who put out too many pictures with most of them bad. They have kidded the public along for so many years that the public has finally decided to quit being the goat, with the result that they are now picking what they want.

Whenever the ticket-buying folks are sure that a production is right, they turn out en masse. This SHOPPING instinct has been developed particularly all thru the middle West and in the far Western States.

In Denver, Bill Swanson keeps three girls at a private switchboard all day long answering phone calls, giving information regarding the production that is playing his beautiful big theatre there.

There has, of course, been a certain amount of unrest caused by the Liberty Loan payments, the war tax, the high cost of food and the fear that the war is going to cause strenuous measures in the course of the next year or so, but the history of all such times in national life has always shown that the people are more willing to be amused in times of panic than at any other time, because they seek to relieve their minds.

It is certainly true that those who have real entertainment to offer are profiting as never before, and I can't feel any regret over the fact that those who are still trying to get by with bunk are finding it rather difficult.

The thing for you to remember—and believe me, it's important—is that the money is there, but you must DELIVER if you expect to get it.

In other words, you must be more careful every day as to what sort of productions you offer your patrons!

SHOP GIRL PROBLEM FORCEFULLY PRESENTED WITH STRIKING ARTISTRY

Mildred Harris in

THE PRICE OF A GOOD TIME

Lois Weber Productions—Jewel Release

DIRECTORS.....Lois Weber and Philips Smalley
ADAPTED FROM.....Marion Orth's "The Whim"
SCENARIO BY.....Lois Weber
CAMERAMAN .....Duke Hayward
AS A WHOLE.....Story with punch and an excellent underlying thought, beautifully produced as to atmosphere, characterizations and dramatic development
STORY.....Delicately handled discussion of shopgirl problem that remains more entertainment than preachment
DIRECTION.....Gave delightful character development in very artistic and interesting atmosphere, and held interest perfectly
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Excellent; decidedly artistic LIGHTINGS....Many very effective and artistic; always distinctive CAMERA WORK..... Exceptional
STAR.....Appealing personality and gave splendid characterization
SUPPORT.....Harlan excellent; Gertrude Aster beautiful and handled difficult character perfectly; other types well chosen and effective
EXTERIORS.....Well chosen; artistic and interesting
INTERIORS....Exceptionally fine; looked like real thing; home of wealthy hero decidedly artistic and distinctive DETAIL.....Every little touch was right
TIME.....Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

WE have only a few directors who are capable of doing big things in a big way. One of these is LOIS WEBER. Seldom have I seen a subject more deftly handled than this in registering a delicate subject with telling pathos and forceful power, without at any time overreaching in the dramatic moments and without ever losing sight of the fact that after all a picture should first be artistic.

The average director in starting to do a story which dealt with department store life and an affair between a shopgirl and a wealthy young man, would never think of making it an artistic subject. Miss Weber has made every scene distinctive and secured some of the most artistic results in composition and lightings that I have seen in a long time. The shots in the home of the wealthy young hero were exceptionally good, and I have a hunch that all of them were taken in a real home and a very classy, tastefully appointed home at that. I know that one or two of these interiors were real, and it's just that much more to the credit of Miss Weber to say that it was impossible to tell whether they all were taken in a real home or not, since as a rule it is very easy to spot any interior that has been made outside of a studio, because the lighting is always very poor and badly placed.

The story of this was an intelligently handled discussion of the shopgirl problem, with the effect of the environment in the homes of the girls forcefully portrayed. We had a contrast between the girl whose home life was happy and the girl whose home life was unpleasant, and all of this was put over without the production becoming "preachy" at any time.

The basic idea of the plot had to do with a wealthy young man's dissatisfaction when his society fiancée showed coldness and lack of appreciation. In his father's store his attention was directed to one of the girls at a counter. He suddenly asked her if she had ever had a good time, and when she said no, he made a bargain with her that she should go out with him each evening for a week, the only requirement being that she should agree to appreciate the entertainment provided.

Then followed the adventure of this little shopgirl into the wonderland of the wealthy, and at the end of the week came the climax, when she said that she didn't want to go back to the old life.

At this moment her brother, a "soap-box anarchist" type, broke into the boy's house where they were, misunderstood what he saw, and we had a real fight. The police were called in and the girl was of course disgraced, with the boy's marriage to the society girl broken off.

Then in a rather convincing manner the unhappy shopgirl was killed off by accidentally running in front of the hero's automobile. This gave a real kick to the story, being an unexpected twist, and on top of it came the sudden and effective building of the character of the cold society miss who came to the department store and applied for a job because she was dissatisfied with her aunt's ideas of making her a clothes-bearing statue.

There was just a suggestion of the happy ending we saw the hero and his fiancée both headed for Chicago to work in father's store.

You will understand that this was a very hard situation to put over, because of the sympathy that had been created for Mildred Harris as the little shopgirl who suffered death finally as a result of her adventure, but it is all the more to the credit of Miss Weber when I tell you that she has made this ring true and seem real.

Seldom will you see a production which holds together so well, moves along so evenly without waste footage, and retains such a distinctive, artistic atmosphere without losing the human note or missing fire in any of the dramatic moments.

This is truly an unusual production and one which you can be absolutely sure will register. Don't get the impression that this is in any way off-color, because there is no reason in the world why any one should figure that the "good time" depicted in this is anything except what it is shown to be—the idle whim of a wealthy youth.

Mildred Harris as the shopgirl was excellent. She carried the sympathy nicely without overplaying at any time.

Kenneth Harlan was a very likable hero and handled a difficult part with just the proper shadings.

Gertrude Aster was decidedly beautiful and very pleasing as the society girl, and it is to Miss Weber's credit in the selection of types to realize that she picked Miss Aster because of the young lady's ability to seem cold and yet win quickly by the warmth of her smile and her ability to change from the statue to the human, likable American girl.

The entire cast was very well chosen as to type, and there were many little touches that were truly effective.

Among those who appeared were Alfred Allen, Helene Rosson, Adele Farrington and Ann Schaeffer.

The Box Office Angle

Properly handled as to exploitation, this should be a very successful production. It has the box-office value of propaganda appeal with the ability to make good as entertainment, and the prestige of Lois Weber as the producer back of it all. You can safely promise that it is an exceptionally artistic offering, a very human dramatic production and a story that discusses intelligently the effect of environment upon our working girls. The name is one that should pull some business if you don't mistreat it.

I needn't tell you the value of Miss Weber's name—particularly if you will refer to some of her more successful productions.

BEAUTIFUL, PLEASING, ARTISTIC ATMOSPHERE PUT LOVE STORY OVER

Elsie Ferguson in

THE RISE OF JENNIE CUSHING

Artcraft

DIRECTOR ..... Maurice Tourneur
AUTHOR ..... Mary S. Watts
SCENARIO BY ..... Charles Maigne
CAMERAMAN ..... John v. d. Broek
SCENIC EFFECTS ..... Ben Carre
AS A WHOLE ..... Beautiful star with very pleasing personality in love story that holds, presented in artistic atmosphere
STORY ..... One of those romances that prove that nothing but love matters
DIRECTION ..... Gave very artistic atmosphere and by good close-ups kept characterizations of players intimate PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Generally very artistic
LIGHTINGS ..... Many very effective and artistic; generally pleasing
CAMERA WORK ..... Very good
STAR ..... Beautiful and has impressive poise without losing human touch
SUPPORT ..... Dexter very pleasing hero; kids cute other types satisfactory
EXTERIORS ..... Foreign atmosphere registered exceptionally well; composition of most locations very artistic INTERIORS ..... Distinctive and artistic
DETAIL ..... Good
TIME ..... Fifty-seven minutes (5 parts)

THIS will be considered very good entertainment by almost any one, because Elsie Ferguson is a personality. She isn't only beautiful, but she is intelligent and capable of presenting a characterization humanly enough to make it decidedly appealing.

Maurice Tourneur has provided an artistic atmosphere that gives the proper distinction to the entire offering, and he has certainly delivered in the matter of creating a realistic foreign touch to many of his scenes. The bit which showed the French railroad station was exceptionally good, this being another shot of the same set, I think, which was used for Billie Burke's "Arms and the Girl."

Unfortunately, in one scene which was supposed to be outside of a novelty shop, a couple of old men were planted in costume, and these extras had evidently been told to stand there and look wise, because they were so stiff that they looked like dummies. This camera-conscious stiffness on the part of these two "extra" men marred the effectiveness of a rather important sequence, because such a slip takes the attention of the audience from the dramatic action and brings them back to the artificiality of the movie screen.

This was a love story, and it's a pretty safe bet to figure that most audiences like love stories when the lovers are real personalities.

Miss Ferguson was shown as the product of a reformatory, and we found her making her way to the position of maid to a wealthy girl who was having her portrait painted by the artist, who just "couldn't" help but fall in love with Miss Ferguson. She refused to marry him when he asked, because she thought it was unfair to him, and they proceeded to be very happy living together until his family found them in Paris and she left him, thinking it was for his good.

After several years we found her running a little home for orphan children in the country, and after several scenes showing her with the kiddies, in walked the hero. Again she refused him, and it looked like he was goin' ter have ter walk out on her for good, but one of the youngsters had an accident and our hero carried her in to Miss Ferguson, with the result that that beautiful young lady, who had meanwhile changed her mind—as all women are allowed to do—decided not to let him go away another time.

For the most part this is a series of scenes between Miss Ferguson and Elliott Dexter presented in a very artistic atmosphere. Mr. Dexter is a 'ansom' hero and Miss Ferguson a beautiful shero. They were in love. What more should the average fan wish? Of course, there were few dramatic moments, but romance and artistry make up entertainment for a great many folks, and I've a hunch that this will please very generally with those merits, despite the lack of what might be called "dramatic punches."

Among those who appeared were Fania Marinoff, Frank Goldsmith, Isabel Vernon, Sallie Delatore, Mae Mates and Edith McAlpin.

The Box Office Angle

Considerable depends upon how "Barbary Sheep" went with you as to what you should do with this. If you didn't do as well as you expected with "Barbary Sheep" I'd say that it might have been your fault, and I certainly would try again to pull them in on this one. If they liked "Barbary Sheep" you only need to tell them that this is another Ferguson picture. Personally, I feel that Miss Ferguson will be one of our real favorites on the screen, and if you will play up properly the fact that she is one of the best liked stars in New York, you should be able to make them come out and look her over, thereafter leaving the decision up to your fans.

Elliott Dexter has a lot of friends, and I would certainly tell them about his appearance in this.

The fact that this story has been read by a great many people makes up for the fact that it isn't really big, viewed from picture possibilities, and you may be surprised by how much your fans will enjoy a simple romance when artistically presented with two real personalities portraying the important characters.

CRANE WILBUR

ART DRAMAS PROGRAM

Eye of Envy Blood of His Father
Unto the End Devil McCare
Just Jim

EYE-ROLLING STAR IN MELLER THAT WAS RATHER INTERESTING

Juliette Day in

BETTY AND THE BUCCANEERS

American—Mutual

DIRECTOR.....Rollin S. Sturgeon
AUTHOR.....J. Edward Hungerford
AS A WHOLE.....Unreal movie meller with eye-rolling shero
STORY.....Very unconvincing; almost burlesque in spots
DIRECTION.....Overreached in meller spots; failed to make action register
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Some beautiful; generally satisfactory
LIGHTINGS.....A few excellent; many ordinary; some poor
CAMERA WORK.....Varied from excellent to fair
STAR.....Very camera-conscious
SUPPORT.....Acceptable for movie, but overplayed
EXTERIORS.....A few beautiful, generally satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Good
DETAIL.....Acceptable
TIME.....Fifty-two minutes (5 parts)

THIS was a sort of combination "fairy-tale-melodrama" with a story that was very unreal and almost burlesque in some of the characters and situations. Unfortunately, the star insisted upon rolling her eyes wildly upon any and all occasions, with the result that she failed utterly to make a favorable impression.

The plot centered around some wild-lookin' willuns who lured shero's uncle into a fake search for treasure, with the result that they marooned him on an island and took his coin and returned to claim his estate and his niece.

There were three of these wild-eyed willuns in the charge of a captain, and, after returning, the colored member of the trio and the captain were murdered by the other two, and then one of the other roughnecks started to attack the shero. As she flopped on the bed after a rather ridiculous scene where the peg-leg of one of the willuns was used by the other to batter down her door, we found some visions in which our shero saw herself being pursued thru the woods by these ruffnecks, and these scenes dissolved into the finale, where hero and her uncle were beside the bed with the title, "We arrived just in time."

This is all so unreal and wildly mellerdramatic that no one will ever consider it anything but cheap movie, and since the star was so camera-conscious you certainly would be wise to dodge it.

In sizing up the central situation I can't understand why the ruffneck pirates who took the uncle on the treasure hunt should have waited until they got him to the island to hit him in the head and take his money from him, except that it was "necessary" to leave him on an island so that hero could rescue him later. The natural thing for them to have done would have been to "bean" him as soon as they left port, take his coin, and throw him into the ocean and return. That would have left no trace.

At times this was so ridiculous in the melodramatic moments that it was almost like a Keystone Komedy.

In the supporting cast were Joe King, Tote Du Crow, William Kyle, Harold Wilson, Charles Marriott and Gordon Russell.

The Box Office Angle.

I doubt if Juliette Day is worth any money for you at the ticket window, because she hasn't had time to establish any considerable following and certainly this would not help her any if she has gained any friends by her previous work. The story isn't good and the treatment makes it ridiculous in spots.

If you try to make good with your patrons every day I would forget this. If for any reason you must play it, I'd call it a fairy-tale-melodrama. That will be some alibi anyway.

DELIGHTFUL STAR IN VERY ARTISTIC PRODUCTION HAD FUN AND PATHOS

Mary Pickford in

THE LITTLE PRINCESS

Pickford—Artcraft

DIRECTOR.....Marshall A. Neilan
AUTHOR.....Frances Hodgson Burnett
SCENARIO BY.....Frances Marion
SCENIC SETTINGS BY.....Wilfred Buckland
CAMERAMAN.....Walter Stradling
AS A WHOLE.....Delightful bits of pathos and comedy in very artistic atmosphere, with fairy tale scenes giving "bigness" to production
STORY.....Slender plot made delightful by little human touches that mix fun with pathetic bits
DIRECTION.....Superb; gave remarkably artistic atmosphere and made every bit register
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Exceptionally artistic LIGHTINGS.....Distinctive and artistic
CAMERA WORK.....Very fine
STAR.....Delightful and wonderfully beautiful in closeups
SUPPORT.....Very good types; little slavey excellent
EXTERIORS.....Well chosen and artistic
INTERIORS.....Excellent and beautifully lighted
DETAIL.....Very good; some of it made me hungry
TIME.....Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

YOU who have played "Rebecca" are probably all set for this and don't have to be told. The combination of Mickey Neilan and Mary Pickford seems to be sure-fire.

We get again many delightful little bits of comedy with Little Mary, and here and there a touch of pathos, wonderful closeups of the star, exceptionally artistic atmosphere, and Mickey slipped in some "production" scenes that give the offering "size" and a sense of bigness by putting over a visualization of the fairy tale about the Forty Thieves, which runs for about twenty minutes.

The basic plot of the story proper is a simple little thing and rests upon the idea of the little girl who is made to become a slavey when news arrives that she wasn't to receive the great fortune which her guardian had expected she would.

After having a pretty tough time of it for a while, during which she became very chummy with the little slavey, played by Zazu Pitts, who had been doing the rough work around the house, we found at the end that she was an heiress, after all, and then she spurned the mean old thing who had been her guardian, and took with her into the new life the slavey who had been her friend.

I don't know what any one could ask for more than this combination of such a delightful star as Miss Pickford, an artistic atmosphere that was an absolute joy to look at, and a series of little human incidents which registered many good laughs, with here and there a touch of pathos that actually hit home.

In the situation where Little Mary was told of the death of her father, we had some closeups of the star which were about as beautiful as anything I have ever seen on the screen. At other times we had effective bits of backlighting, and never for a moment did we see anything that was inartistic.

The Forty Thieves incident gave opportunity for some "production," and Mickey Neilan, he just went and did it, he did. We had sets and locations and atmosphere and people, and all those things, with the size of these splashes unconsciously registering a dignity which lifted the production out of the category where someone might have referred to it as "a pleasing little thing."

There were some very good titles, and credit is due to Frances Marion for some little incidents which made one forget the fact that the story wasn't big. Several times they pulled titles that were enough to make anyone hungry, and they showed a closeup of a cake that is about as sure to make your mouth water as anything ever screened. Considering the fact that some folks in these wartimes may come to the theatre in a not too overfed condition, this may make some very envious. I'm sure that some of these titles will make people hungry, because the way they talked about good things to eat was simply scan'lous.

Miss Pitts, who had the part of the slavey who worked along with the star thru most of the story, was very good, indeed. Others who appeared were Theodore Roberts, Norman Kerry, Katherine Griffith, Gustave von Seyffertitz, Loretta Blake, Gertrude Short, Ann Schaeffer and William E. Lawrence.

The Box Office Angle.

You can go as far as you like on this, because it looks to me like sure-fire entertainment anywhere. Of course it is a Pickford subject and isn't mellerdrammer, or even drammer—but, oh, boy!—I sure do think it's entertainment. Unless I am greatly mistaken, I believe that our Dear Public wants to see Little Mary in just this sort of thing, and certainly they'll enjoy her characterization in this.

The name of the author may be worth something at the box office, because the story is comparatively well known, and, by all means, I would emphasize with considerable gusto the fact that the same director and same scenario writer were responsible for this as for "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." I would get those names of Marshall Neilan and Frances Marion in the minds of my patrons, because I think the time has come when we must educate our fans to appreciate the work of directors and scenario writers and have them realize that even their favorite "favorites" must have good direction and good stories in order to please them.

Piedmont Pictures Corporation

FELIX MALITZ, General Manager.

729 Seventh Avenue

Confidential Buying and Selling Agents for United States and Foreign Countries.

"Brighten the Corner Where You Are"

Billy Sunday preached that from the pulpit, and he was very successful. It was not the advertising and big newspaper publicity behind his campaign that made his venture a success; it was because Billy Sunday spoke on a subject that was very close to everybody's heart and soul.

The Jaf Film Company has produced a series of seven single-reelers for the A. Kay Company, to be known as The "Glad" Series. Each picture is a gem in itself and sparkles over with happiness. Just as Billy Sunday was a success, so will The "Glad" Series be a success. But in this respect the chances are one better; Billy Sunday preached a sermon, but The "Glad" Series offers entertainment.

Get in touch with the A. Kay Company, 729—7th Avenue, and find out if it can help you.

"Brighten the Corner Where You Are"

GOOD MURDER MYSTERY HELPED BY ATMOSPHERE AND PLAYERS

Earle Williams in

THE GRELL MYSTERY

Vitagraph

DIRECTOR ..... Paul Scardon
AUTHOR ..... Frank Froest
SCENARIO BY ..... Graham Baker
CAMERAMAN ..... Robert A. Stuart
AS A WHOLE ..... Provided interesting complications; early coincidence excused because of good development
DIRECTION ..... Gave excellent atmosphere and held interest by treatment of situations
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Generally very good
LIGHTINGS ..... Some very effective; generally good
CAMERA WORK ..... Good
STAR ..... Pleasing as detective hero
SUPPORT ..... Three girls pleasing; other types very good
EXTERIORS ..... Satisfactory
INTERIORS ..... Good, and mystery atmosphere helped DETAIL ..... Some good bits in treatment
TIME ..... Fifty-five minutes (5 parts)

DIRECTOR PAUL SCARDON can be depended upon to deliver when it comes to mystery melodrama. He generally develops his action so as to hold the interest, and he creates an atmosphere around these mystery productions that gives them the proper tone of distinction.

Earle Williams as a detective hero is very pleasing, because it gives him a chance to look wise and dignified without unnecessary raving.

The early construction of this story presents a coincidence where we find that old friend, two men who look "exactly alike," played by the same artist, and in this instance a woman is married to one, although she loves the other.

She murdered one of them and his body was mistaken for that of the other, which created complications. The girl whom the hero detective learned to love, happened into the room after the murder and picked up the dagger, which brought her fingerprints into the mystery, and, as a result, we had the plot development with several people suspected, and only towards the end does the mystery commence to unravel, due to the third-degree work of Detective Williams.

I believe that most people enjoy a mystery melodrama when the interest is maintained and the atmosphere is satisfactory, and certainly this one comes under that heading.

Miriam Miles, Jean Dumar, and Mabel Trunnelle as the three women involved in the mystery, all handled their characterizations in a most satisfactory manner. The other players were good types and held up their scenes nicely.

Among those who appeared were Bernard Siegel, Robert Gaillard, Denton Vane and Frank Crayne.

The Box Office Angle

As a whole, mystery melodramas with Earle Williams as a detective have been quite successful. I believe that you can figure this a good bet, and I would go after it along the line of commenting upon other mystery melos in which Earle has appeared, such as "Arsene Lupin," "Apartment 29," "The Scarlet Runner," etc., and you might also call attention to the fact that this was produced by Paul Scardon, mentioning the fact that he has made some of the most successful mystery melodramas that have appeared in the screen.

In billing this you might use something along this line: "What would you do if you found the fingerprints of the woman you loved on the dagger involved in a murder mystery which you were investigating? See 'The Grell Mystery.'"

MELO THAT WAS INTERESTING DESPITE UNCONVINCING PLOT

Emily Stevens in

OUTWITTED

Rolfe—Metro

DIRECTOR ..... George D. Baker
AUTHOR ..... Charles A. Logue
SCENARIO BY ..... Mary Murillo
CAMERAMAN ..... Ray C. Smallwood
AS A WHOLE ..... Rather interesting but unconvincing melter of average program quality
STORY ..... Old man educates thief's sister and marries her to hero for revenge, only to learn hero is own son; has seen much service
DIRECTION ..... Atmosphere and personalities kept it interesting, although old story idea made it unreal
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Varied from fine to fair; was muddy at times
LIGHTINGS ..... Generally excellent; sometimes better on sets than on faces
CAMERA WORK ..... Varied but generally good
STAR ..... Personality lifted many scenes
SUPPORT ..... Currier and Truesdell very good; Foxe handled difficult part nicely and made it register
EXTERIORS ..... Good
INTERIORS ..... Gave atmosphere some distinction
DETAIL ..... Satisfactory
TIME ..... Sixty-seven minutes (5 parts)

ONCE again they picked out a story for Emily Stevens in which she was the subject of an experiment, this time Frank Currier selecting her as the means of shaming Earle Foxe, whom he thought to be the son of the man who had stolen his wife from him. Mr. Currier picked Miss Stevens because he thought her to be a thief when he caught her in his house, whereas she was only the sister of a thief.

Instead of sending her to jail, Mr. Currier educated her and brought her up as his ward, and then immediately after she was married to Mr. Foxe, he told all the guests that the young man had married a thief. This of course created quite some stir, and Miss Stevens sneaked away, despite the fact that Mr. Foxe wanted her anyway.

To get even with the old villain, Miss Stevens joined with some friends who had been putting over the crooked spiritualistic graft, and they fixed up an apartment, where Currier was advised as to how to play the market. By doing this they managed to trim him of half a million, and then they laughed at him.

About this time they started a little melo with Foxe, the young hero, determined to kill himself and Currier at the same time. Just as he was about to pull the trick, Fred Truesdell, who had been presented as Mr. Foxe's father, rushed in and informed Foxe that Currier was really his father.

When Currier had driven his wife from him, Foxe had been born, and Mr. Truesdell had agreed to bring him up as his own boy. They then pulled a title and showed us that every one was happy.

Despite the fact that this was a very unconvincing plot, the treatment of the situations kept it fairly interesting, and the average fan will probably accept it as routine stuff.

Miss Stevens has a personality that helps carry the average situation, and Earle Foxe, Frank Currier and Fred Truesdell were all very good. The spiritualistic graft methods were fairly interesting.

In some places the lighting was good on the sets, but not so good on the faces. On the whole the atmosphere was quite satisfactory, with a few bits very artistic. The photography varied, however, to such an extent that we found a few places where it was quite muddy

In the cast were Paul Everton, Ricca Allen and Frank Joyner.

The Box Office Angle

Emily Stevens has had some very good and some very ordinary productions. I would say that this is very little better than ordinary, because the plot doesn't ring true or convince, and there is no great novelty about any part of the production. The "experiment" idea and the spiritualistic graft have both been used in other productions, and, while the melodramatic moments were interesting, they were not big nor gripping.

As a program filler this will register very satisfactorily. If you play it, go easy as to making definite promises about the production. It's far from being exceptional.

SLOW DEVELOPMENT AND LACK OF PERSONALITIES HELD THIS DOWN

Helen Hayes in

THE WEAVERS OF LIFE

Warren Production—State Rights

DIRECTOR.....Edward Warren
AUTHORS.....John B. Clymer and Harry O. Hoyt
CAMERAMAN.....Harry Lyons
AS A WHOLE.....Too slow starting and fails to hit high spots; lacks essentials of personalities or story strength
STORY.....After unwieldy character introductions, developed fairly good situation, but lacked effective dramatic moments
DIRECTION..Gave good atmosphere, but had lightweight cast and failed to make action intimate by use of closeups
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally pleasing
LIGHTINGS.....Some very good; generally satisfactory
CAMERA WORK.....Decidedly lacking in angles, artistic composition and closeups
STAR.....Pretty youngster who has possibilities
SUPPORT.....Schenck and Hunter lacked poise and authority; others satisfactory but not impressive personalities
EXTERIORS.....Some very good, but not photographed to best advantage
INTERIORS.....Excellent, but better camera composition would have helped DETAIL.....Good, but too much at first; some of "fates" should be eliminated
TIME.....Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

UNFORTUNATELY this got away to a very slow start, there being too many characters introduced in the first reel or so, with too much attention given to the introduction of the characters instead of getting the story itself under way and allowing the characters to drift in gradually as they belonged in the plot.

Then the story continued to drag in spots without any really startling developments down to the finish, the entire production suffering quite a little from the fact that there weren't enough closeups and different angles used to keep the various incidents moving at the proper speed. The film lacked a dominant personality capable of carrying ordinary situations, and while there were a few human moments, the youth of some of the players kept these from registering as well as they should have.

The plot was one of those things about a youngster putting on a masquerade dress and in that way bustin' into society, and as a consequence she met a young man who decided that he was in love with her. His folks agreed that she should be brought into their homes for a trial, and of course we had the usual "movie" result of the young woman dissatisfied with sassiety surroundings. If this sort of thing ever happened in real life, I doubt very much if the young lady would be dissatisfied, and I certainly do not believe that the average American miss would pull as many errors as this one was supposed to have done. If she was boob enough to try this "trial" stuff, she would go thru and make good even tho she had to lie a little bit now and then. Of course, later on she saved the day for the wealthy man and showed him real happiness, at the same time deciding to go and marry the poor but honest youth who had been sticking around on the sidelines waiting for her to make this decision.

Helen Hayes is a pretty youngster, and with the proper opportunities should develop into a very good bet.

Earl Schenck and Kenneth Hunter were both rather camera-conscious, and they lacked the poise and authority necessary to carry important dramatic action.

While the grouping of the extras and their general demeanor marred the production somewhat, the chief fault was the lack of good closeups and camera angles. Such treatment of many of the situations would have made this decidedly more effective.

All thru the film we had, ever so often, a flash of the "Fates" spinning, and spinning some more, and I have a hunch that the average audience will get pretty tired of seeing this shot repeated. One title referred to their "endless task," and I'm afraid that the average guy will agree that their job was endless.

The Box Office Angle.

While this has a few human touches that are fairly effective, the general impression is not a favorable one because of the lack of forceful dramatic scenes or truly effective bits of pathos. If there had been one or two dominant personalities and if the director had used more closeups and the cut-and-flash method more generally, this story might have been developed into a pleasing production. As it stands you can play it for a filler and very probably satisfy the average audience. Certainly no one will ever rave over it, and, unless you need something to fill in with, it is hardly worthy of special booking.

Neither the name of the film nor the players' names will mean anything at the box office.

TREATMENT AND STAR MADE THIS REGISTER AS PLEASING

Winifred Allen in

FOR VALOUR

Eastern Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Albert Parker
SUPERVISED BY.....Allan Dwan
ASSISTED BY.....Thomas F. Tracey
AUTHOR.....I. A. R. Wylie
SCENARIO BY.....Robert Shirley
CAMERAMAN.....Roy Vaughn
AS A WHOLE.....Closeups of star and general treatment made this pleasing
STORY.....Old patriotic appeal of girl who couldn't help, but has some effective bits of pathos
DIRECTION.....Lifted action by use of closeups; registered good types and made trench scenes rather realistic
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good; some excellent bits
LIGHTINGS.....Fine in closeups; generally pleasing
CAMERA WORK.....Very good
STAR.....Made character human and appealing; screened beautifully
SUPPORT.....Boy good; others quite satisfactory
EXTERIORS.....Good Canadian atmosphere; trench scenes effective
INTERIORS.....Good
DETAIL.....Held atmosphere commendably
TIME.....Fifty-six minutes (5 parts)

ADAPTED from "Melia No Good," published in "Good Housekeeping," this carries a little prestige which the story needs, because it is rather an obvious little thing of not particularly new situations, despite the fact that it has a few human moments and several nice little touches of pathos.

The fact that the producer has intelligently presented the Canadian atmosphere and registered some rather good trench scenes towards the end helps the offering, and certainly the presence of Miss Allen will lift it sufficiently to have the average fan feel satisfied. Miss Allen was given many closeups and she screened to such advantage that her personality really carries the offering.

The story is a simple plot idea, telling of a girl who was classed as "no good" by her father, who said women had no place in the war. When the Red Cross refused to accept her she began to feel that possibly father was right.

Her "bit," according to the plot, was the twisting of circumstances to force her brother to enlist, and when brother made good and earned the Victoria Cross she had the satisfaction of being commended for her part in sending him.

The trench scenes were good, but the actual bits of action in what was supposed to be a skirmish between the lines would have been much more effective had we seen some machine guns in operation.

The general atmosphere was satisfactory, but there was little attempt for unusual effects. The lightings in the closeups were good—particularly those of Miss Allen.

Richard Barthelmess, as Miss Allen's brother, carried this part very satisfactorily, and the other members of the cast were good, altho not unusual.

Others in the cast were Mabel Ballin and Henry Weaver.

The Box Office Angle.

I wouldn't figure this as anything exceptional, altho the war-time subject given you an opportunity to say that this is a production proving that every woman can do her bit if she wills it so. You might say that Little Melia proved herself capable of helping even tho the Red Cross refused her because she was such a little thing.

Winifred Allen has had several rather pleasing little program pictures lately and possibly has some following in your community which will justify your playing this and featuring her. It is only a "just good" program production. Don't figure it anything beyond that.

GOT GOOD START, BUT FINISHED AS ORDINARY MOVIE

Jack Pickford and Louise Huff in

JACK AND JILL

Morosco—Paramount

DIRECTOR.....William Desmond Taylor
AUTHOR.....Margaret Turnbull
SCENARIO BY.....Gardner Hunting
CAMERAMAN.....Homer Scott
AS A WHOLE.....Interesting boxing scenes at first, but Western finish made it just movie
STORY.....Old idea of boy thinking had killed opponent in fight, becoming fugitive and finally hero
DIRECTION.....Early scenes excellent, but allowed final sequences to slump to movie meller
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good; not exceptional
LIGHTINGS.....Some excellent; many ordinary
CAMERA WORK.....Satisfactory
STARS.....Carry parts, but fail to lift it much
SUPPORT.....Ordinary movie types
EXTERIORS.....A few good Western shots; others ordinary
INTERIORS.....Fight scenes very good
DETAIL.....Acceptable
TIME.....Fixty-six minutes (5 parts)

THEY started this off with some very good stuff registering the development of a young lightweight boxer who wanted to be champion, and the fighting scenes will undoubtedly prove interesting to many, because they were rather well handled. This part of the film moved well and held the interest, but when they broke from this with the situation where our young hero was told that he had killed his opponent, so that the crooks handling the bout could hold out on him and keep the gate money to which our hero was entitled, we drifted into some Western stuff which was quite ordinary and very much a la Movie.

The remainder of the production only served to introduce the rather shopworn idea of the youth who was made courageous by the thought that he had once killed a man. They introduced a few good exterior shots showing some riding, but the last part of the production failed utterly to register as worth-while entertainment.

Of course, Louise Huff, she discovered that the crooks had double-crossed her pal, she did, and after waiting patiently for the letter from Jack, she beat it down to Texas to join him, and upon arrival was attacked by the willunous Mexicans and was rescued by "our hero" and the cowboys.

They introduced a number of titles which were supposed to be funny, and a few of them were, but many of them were not.

As the fightin' little ruffneck Jack carried his part quite satisfactorily, but the story was not one that provided any particular opportunity for characterization, because there was more attention given to ordinary plot development than to human touches. Miss Huff as the flower-selling shero of the slums was satisfactory, but little more.

Others who appeared were Leo Houck, Beatrice Burnham, Colonel Lenone, Hart Hoxie, Don Bailey and J. H. Holland.

The Box Office Angle.

If Pickford and Huff get you any money you may be able to slip this by as a program release, but personally I have a feeling that your intelligent fans will rather resent this, since it fails to get beyond movie caliber. After starting off in rather a promising manner it slumps seriously and the Western stuff misses fire decidedly. They even had the nerve to show us one scene where Pickford was standing outside a Texas saloon with a back drop looming up behind him. Why they will do that sort of thing today is beyond me—because such a shot mars the next few hundred feet of film, since it creates the impression of artificiality.

The title "Jack and Jill" will mean very little in anybody's young life, and unless you have to play this, I think you will be entirely justified in forgetting it.

CUTE KID STUFF AND CHEAP MELLER MIXED IN POOR PLOT

Baby Marie Osborne in

A LITTLE PATRIOT

Diando—Pathe

DIRECTOR.....William Bertram
AUTHOR.....John W. Grey
SCENARIO BY.....Leila Leibrand
CAMERAMAN.....William Nobles
AS A WHOLE.....Some cute kid stuff with patriotic touch and some ordinary, unreal meller
STORY.....Failed utterly to register. Spy discovered by Baby Marie and wealthy man who turned out to be Baby's grandfather; Formula No. 92
DIRECTION.....Made kid stuff and comedy bits funny, but missed badly on meller
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Satisfactory straight stuff
LIGHTINGS.....Ordinary; no attempt for effects
CAMERA WORK.....Acceptable
STAR.....Cute youngster; handicapped by meller incidents
SUPPORT.....Little coon fine; grown folks overplayed
EXTERIORS.....Satisfactory; not exceptional
INTERIORS.....Acceptable; close-ups showed cheapness of sets
DETAIL.....Meller business unreal
TIME.....Fifty-five minutes (5 parts)

BABY MARIE OSBORNE has a certain following which is good for money at the box office no matter what she may appear in. Unfortunately, they are still wishing her into stories which have a lot of cheap melodrama that tends to mar the cute kid stuff, but the average audience will accept these "junk" scenes and let them pass because of the cute bits which are registered in the kid stuff.

I can't understand why Pathe doesn't get a director for this youngster who could make human productions that would really ring true from start to finish. If they ever do, they will be surprised at the response that comes from exhibitors and patrons.

About half of this was taken up with a lot of stuff having to do with Marie organizing a kid army, and there was a little coon who had his father's busted trombone, who registered a good many laughs. This youngster seems very clever and he has helped decidedly in putting over comedy in several recent Mary Sunshine pictures.

The basic part of the story had to do with Baby Marie urging her father to become a soldier and her trapping of a spy who happened to come and room at their home. They insisted upon pulling the old junk of the wealthy man who became interested in Baby Marie, only to learn in the fifth reel that she was the child of his long-lost daughter. If they don't quit pulling that stuff in Baby Marie pictures, somebody should hang a razz-berry on 'em.

All of the melodramatic and dramatic stuff was unreal and rather cheap, but the kid stuff will get it enough laughs to put it over.

Herbert Standing, who is a capable artist, was painfully artificial in his attempts to register pathos in this atmosphere and under this direction. The other grown-ups in the cast were ordinary, Marian Warner doing the part of Baby Marie's mother.

The Box Office Angle.

The fact that this has a touch of the patriotic combined with some cute kid stuff should be enough to get it over with most any one, despite the crudities of the melodramatic incidents. It should be sufficient to sneak this by if you will just announce that Baby Marie organizes an army of her own and rehearses them in the ways of modern warfare in this production. To any one who knows this youngster, that thought should prove promising enough to arouse their interest.

Don't over-reach in talking about this in advance, since it has the same weakness which has marred so many Baby Marie pictures. It's pitifully unreal. The atmosphere generally was satisfactory, but unfortunately when we got close-ups in some of the sets—as, for instance, a closeup of the staircase in the home of a wealthy man—it was appalling because of the cheapness exposed.

On All Paramount Re-Issues

For Open Booking

COMPLETE MUSICAL SCORES

Specially Arranged and Printed

Can Be Obtained From

GEORGE W. BEYNON.

505 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City. Phone Murray Hill 9876

DON'T MISS THESE

MOVIE MYSTERY ROMANCE MADE INTERESTING DESPITE UNREAL STORY

Emmy Wehlen in

THE OUTSIDER

Rolfe—Metro

DIRECTOR.....William C. Dowlan
AUTHOR.....Mary Murillo
SCENARIO BY.....Albert Shelby Levino
CAMERAMAN.....John M. Bauman
AS A WHOLE.....Interesting movie mystery romance, unreal but acceptable
STORY.....Shopgirl masquerading in society wins millionaire
DIRECTION.....Kept it moving and gave considerable beauty
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied from fine to fair
LIGHTINGS.....Some excellent; others seemed well planned but married by laboratory work
CAMERA WORK.....Varied, but generally good
STAR.....Pleasing, although not sure-fire personality
SUPPORT.....Satisfactory; some weak spots
EXTERIORS.....Some very pretty; generally good
INTERIORS.....Some fine; some fair
DETAIL.....Satisfactory; many story points too unreal
TIME.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts"

THE manner in which this was developed made it rather interesting, because the element of suspense was right well maintained, and the action was fast enough to have something doing most of the time.

The plot was our old friend the shopgirl masquerading in society, combined with the social crooks who stole their own jewels to collect insurance. The whole thing was unreal and tended towards the farce-melo with a touch of mystery, but the average audience will accept it as fairly good entertainment.

Emmy Wehlen as the shopgirl went to sleep on the roof of her apartment, got caught in the rain and took refuge in another apartment, which, oddly enough, was the home of wealthy sassiety people, although it was almost next door to the flat of three poor working girls.

She discovered the society crook stealing his own jewels and was made prisoner by him and forced to act as social secretary to his sister in order that their secret be kept.

Then she was brought into a house party where she met the Western millionaire, who promptly fell in love with her—as they always do in the movies—and this was followed by complications due to the arrival of the detective and the efforts of the crooks to incriminate Miss Wehlen.

There was a masquerade ball to provide a little novelty, and in the course of this the crooks kidnapped the wealthy hostess when they thought they were carrying away Miss Wehlen. Of course at the finish Miss Wehlen chased back to her little flat, and our millionaire hero calmly pursued her to that point and pulled the clutch.

The manner in which this was developed helped it a lot because the interest is maintained through the first two or three reels, since we weren't exactly sure as to the status of several of the characters, including Miss Wehlen. In some spots the atmosphere was distinctive and quite beautiful, but frequently it missed and became just "movie stuff." The artificiality of the story itself tended to hold the production down at all times.

In some places the lightning seemed to have been very well planned, but the laboratory work kept it from registering artistically.

In the supporting cast were Herbert Heyes

The Box Office Angle.

As program stuff this will get by despite the fact that the plot is so unreal and so decidedly "movie" as to the main incidents. Miss Wehlen is pretty and rather pleasing, and Herbert Heyes is fairly well-known, so that his presence may help somewhat. I would be careful not to promise much on this, but I believe you can safely sneak it by for one night.

If you dared to, you might pull the old stuff about—"What would you do if you were a shop girl and suddenly found yourself forced by circumstances to play the part of a society girl, with a millionaire ready to propose?"

TREATMENT HELPED OLD JUNK ENOUGH TO GET IT BY

Mildred Havens and Leslie Austin in COURAGE OF THE COMMONPLACE

Edison—Perfection

DIRECTOR.....Ben Turbett
CAMERAMAN.....Fred S. Brace
AS A WHOLE.....Very ancient, obvious plot, made acceptable by treatment
STORY.....Father sends son from college to mine where men strike; he triumphs and wins girl; Formula No. 82
DIRECTION.....Presented interesting Yale scenes and registered good fire stuff; got by with awful story
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good
LIGHTINGS.....Some excellent; others ordinary
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STARS.....He had big part; she only waited for finish
SUPPORT.....Acceptable; routine mining meller types for ruff stuff and comedy
EXTERIORS.....Satisfactory; Yale scenes interesting
INTERIORS.....Acceptable
DETAIL.....Too much at times; end dragged badly
TIME.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

THE very ancient plot of father sending son to a mine where the miners caused trouble, serves as a basis for this, but, despite this handicap, the director has succeeded in making this fairly interesting.

I can't for the life of me understand why Mildred Havens is starred, because she does nothing but stick around for the finish. Leslie Austin as the young hero is the center of all the action, and he handles the characterization in a rather satisfactory manner. At first we found him unsuccessful at college, and then after a disheartening failure he bucked up and came thru with honors.

When sent to the mine by father, hero pulled the human stuff with the miners and won some of them by making good with their kids and the mothers first.

When the menacing ruffnecks brought things to a crisis hero said he would answer them in a few days, and when asked how he was going to do it, he said: "Something must happen!" This was obliging, because, of course, it was within the province of the author to make "something happen"—and, sure enough, it did.

They had a fire in the mine and for considerable footage hero bravely struggled thru the smoking tunnels to rescue the willuns who had been entrapped. Father arrived at the scene and finally hero came out with the last of the miners who had been saved. Then we had the clutch, with President Hadley of Yale making a little speech to students at a reunion, in which he complimented "our hero." The Yale scenes were interesting in that they showed some of the old classmen assembling for the reunion, but the crowd which listened to President Hadley was a little bit skimpy.

There were entirely too many of these final scenes showing the students marching, etc., because when you get to a clutch in any story it's time to quit.

The scenes of the burning mine were rather well handled, and the fight 'tween the hero and the maddened willun was put over in rather an effective manner.

A bit too much attention was given to kids and quarreling mothers and to Eddie O'Connor as a "mick" who worked around the mine office, but, considered as a whole, the producer did rather well with very ancient material.

In the supporting cast were

The Box Office Angle.

The name of the stars will certainly mean nothing to your fans, and the title of the production will hardly pull any money at the box office. The age of the story was somewhat excused by this title, which was brought into the action several times in order to demonstrate that it was the courage to do things as they came up which made men.

As a filler this will get by very satisfactorily, but I would not rave about it from any angle because it is just "good" routine program stuff.

The scenes at Yale may give you an advertising angle, but they're hardly worthy of too much comment, because your fans may be led to expect much more than they will see.

PLAYERS AND ATMOSPHERE MAKE OLD SITUATIONS INTERESTING

Alma Ruebens and Walt Whitman in

THE REGENERATES

Key Bee—Triangle

DIRECTOR.....E. Mason Hopper
AUTHOR.....John Lynch
CAMERAMAN.....Charles Stumar
AS A WHOLE.....Old situations combined in fairly interesting manner players and atmosphere make it register satisfactorily
STORY.....Weak blueblood wrongs servant's daughter while hero wins weak one's fiancé; murder mystery at end with third-degree confession
DIRECTION.....Gave rather pleasing atmosphere and kept action moving right well
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very good
LIGHTINGS.....Some excellent; generally good
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STARS.....She, pretty and appealing; he, impressive old blueblood
SUPPORT.....Very good types; made characters register
EXTERIORS....A few very pretty; generally satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Substantial, except broken chair should have been clue to murder
DETAIL.....Good
TIME.....Fifty-five minutes (5 parts)

CONSIDERING the fact that this is one of those stories where the weak dope fiend who was the last of the race was being forced to marry the shero by the proud old gink, played by Walt Whitman, with the shero falling in love with a red-blooded human being and the customary finish of young willun being killed after marrying the servant's daughter, I would say that this is a very satisfactory production because of the treatment of the situations by the producer, and the personalities of the players.

Alma Ruebens is always attractive, and Walt Whitman handles these dignified old men characters in an impressive manner. The general atmosphere was good, because the sets were substantial and distinctive, and many of the lightings were very pleasing.

The first part of the story was centered around the clash resulting from the old man's desire to have his dope fiend heir marry Miss Ruebens despite the fact that she was a cousin to the boy. The hero was frowned upon, but, nevertheless, he made good with Miss Ruebens.

Then we found the old butler's daughter about to become a mother, and when the baby was born the young dope fiend, who was the baby's father, was found dead.

They banked into this murder in a manner which put it over and created some mystery, and this held the interest up rather nicely until we got to the third-degree confession of the dope fiend servant who had been feeding this stuff to the young victim. Then we learned in the confession that the servant had killed the young man by hitting him over the head with a chair, which blow broke the chair. Since this chair was in the young victim's room beside a window under which his body was found, it was certainly unusual that the detectives didn't immediately suspect the servant instead of trying to wish the crime upon the hero.

At the end they pulled the good old stuff of sending the grandchild to smooth out the trouble with the proud old gink, and of course it worked.

There were a few good kid scenes toward the end, but they took entirely too much footage to register this point which was perfectly obvious to any one.

Darrell Foss as the hero was clean-cut and aggressive, and John Lince as the weak-willed dope fiend put this characterization over in a very satisfactory manner.

The old butler and the dope fiend servant were both good characterizations.

Others who appeared were Pauline Starke, Allan Sears and William Brady.

The Box Office Angle

As a program release this is a very satisfactory offering. The atmosphere and the personalities of the players carry it nicely despite the comparative age of the story situations. If you will emphasize the presence of Alma Ruebens it should help quite a lot, because she has done some very good things lately, and Walt Whitman has won something of a following because of the recent characterizations he has given in several Triangle productions.

There is not much to the story that you can afford to talk about, since it is rather old stuff, and I think it would be advisable to concentrate upon the personalities of the stars without promising anything too much as regards the production as a whole.

HAROLD LOCKWOOD
Yorke--Metro

STAR LIFTED ORDINARY INCIDENTS. FINISHED AS CRUDE MELLER

Norma Talmadge in

THE SECRET OF THE STORM COUNTRY

Norma Talmadge Film—Select Pictures

DIRECTOR.....Charles Miller
AUTHOR.....Grace Miller White
SCENARIO BY.....Courtney Ryley Cooper and Mary Murillo
AS A WHOLE....Star lifted most of incidents; it dragged at times and end was ordinary meller
STORY.....By author of "Tess"; plot covered lapse of many years, which made it ragged and lost the grip
DIRECTION.....Made some scenes pathetic and dramatic, but allowed overplaying which marred general effect
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Good, but not artistic; had some bad spots
LIGHTINGS.....Acceptable; not distinctive CAMERA WORK.....Just good; many pleasing closeups helped STAR.....She lifted all her scenes but was handicapped
SUPPORT.....Welch good in unsympathetic part; others satisfactory
EXTERIORS.....Not artistic; better selection of locations would have helped
INTERIORS.....Satisfactory
DETAIL.....Acceptable; rain effect poor
TIME.....Sixty-seven minutes (5 parts)

THE only reason why anyone will like this is because Norma Talmadge is in it. The first handicap is the fact that the story covers very decided lapses of time without these lapses being properly tied together, and the second decided handicap is the fact that the atmosphere was neither artistic nor distinctive, with some of the spots being decidedly crude. There were a few very dramatic situations, but unfortunately the players were a bit too emphatic in most of these bits, with the result that the scenes missed fire.

Miss Talmadge carried the burden throughout and made practically all of her scenes register—which keeps this a production which can be played, altho you will never find your audiences raving about it or hunting up their friends to tell them to be sure and see it.

The story is by the author of "Tess of the Storm Country." It is a plot that deals with the young girl who is wronged by the wealthy youth, and when she is brought into church and confronted with the fact that she is about to become a mother we had rather a dramatic moment. This would have been very good except that J. Herbert Frank, who was playing the father of the boy who had caused the trouble, overstepped in his acting.

The wealthy youth was married to the girl he didn't care for, because his family wished it, and Tess was brought up by a kind-hearted doctor, who cared for her and her baby.

Niles Welch had the difficult part of the wealthy youth who caused the trouble, and he handled it rather satisfactorily. After he had married the girl he did not care for, we found an old witch taking possession of his child, and then they pulled some rather wild melodrama in which Miss Talmadge rescued Mr. Welch's baby from the fire in the old settlement and so made Mr. Frank, who was Welch's father, sort'uv ashamed of himself. The kindly doctor who had cared for Miss Talmadge, finally proposed, and they gave us the promise of happiness for the shero.

In the scenes toward the end, while the fire was on, they had some storm bits which were very poorly handled. The "rain" was decidedly streaky.

The first part of this production provided an opportunity for some rather good characterization by Miss Talmadge, and we had plenty of closeups of her all thru the offering, which really saved it from being very poor.

The general atmosphere was just "good," because the photography varied decidedly. Some of the sets were very good and others were rather ordinary.

The Box Office Angle.

Because Norma Talmadge is in this and because the story is by the author of the production in which Mary Pickford made one of her greatest successes, you can probably do some business with this. I would be very careful, however, about making any specific promises as to the merit of this film, because it has many weaknesses. The chances are that the average fan will not really be pleased, because the impression isn't altogether a favorable one. The story is one of those sob things with an unhappy shero who has the hope of promised happiness handed to her at the finish, rather too late to offset the sorrows of the preceding reels.

The safe thing to do is to put this one over with all of your attention centered upon the star and the author's prestige, without committing yourself in any way as to the merits of the production.

Niles Welch has done rather well in a number of productions lately and you can probably help this by telling them that he appears in this.

Write me about the conditions in your locality. Maybe I can give you a new angle.

Wid Gunning.

We believe—

Collaboration between the director and photographer is essential to success in photoplay production.

Larry Trimble
Philip E. Rosen.

STAR HELPS AND EARLY DRAMA REGISTERS MOB STUFF MARS END

Mme. Olga Petrova in

EXILE

Paragon—Artcraft

DIRECTOR	Maurice Tourneur
AUTHOR	Dolf Wyllarde
SCENARIO BY	Charles Everrard Whittaker
CAMERAMAN	John v. d. Broek
SCENIC SETTINGS BY	Ben Carre
AS A WHOLE	Star held attention, but unconvincing mob scenes wrecked it
STORY	Elaboration of "Paid in Full" in Arab atmosphere
DIRECTION	Made some excellent moments effective, but let extras run wild
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally excellent; a few bad spots
LIGHTINGS	Many very fine; generally good
CAMERA WORK	Good
STAR	Pleasing; her poise and authority lifted many scenes
SUPPORT	Acceptable; extras poor
EXTERIORS	Registered atmosphere satisfactorily
INTERIORS	Generally very good
DETAIL	Satisfactory
TIME	Fifty-four minutes (5 parts)

THE first part of this gave us some rather good dramatic scenes which were developed around the basic idea of "Paid in Full." After that clash they went into some mob stuff which was quite unreal, and very ineffective—so that the final result was not so favorable.

The general atmosphere, which was that of an Arabian country, was good and some of the interiors were quite distinctive because of good lightings and classy sets.

As usual, Mme. Petrova was able to carry the dramatic scenes in which she appeared most satisfactorily, and in this production her poise and dignity added quite a lot to many incidents that would have been rather ordinary except for her presence.

We found her married to a no-account husband, played by Wyndham Standing, who wrote a letter which incriminated him and then asked her to get it back from the man he'd written it to, who happened to be Mahlon Hamilton, the hero, no matter what she had to do to regain it.

When the star went to the hero's home to give up for the return of the letter, the hero proved himself a gentleman and refused to collect, and then they banged into the mob stuff, during the course of which the willunous husband was beaten up by the angry Arabs, which of course left everything all set for the final clutch between hero and the star.

The incident where Mme. Petrova went to call on Mr. Hamilton was handled rather nicely, there being a bit of business having to do with her hand-bag which helped decidedly in making this situation dramatic. We had the suggestion that she had a revolver in this hand-bag, and the hero watched very carefully every time madame made a move to pick it up.

As a Petrova picture this isn't nearly so good as her other two Paramount productions, but it ranks with some of the better Metro offerings. If the mob scenes hadn't cheapened the picture and lowered the general tone it would have registered rather satisfactorily.

There were some very beautiful close-ups of the star, but at times the photography was rather muddy and some of the scenes were too heavily tinted.

The incident where the hero was supposed to ride past on a galloping horse and pick up Mme. Petrova, is very liable to get a laugh from the average audience, since we aren't accustomed to seeing our dignified star being picked up like a bag of meal after the fashion of the blue-eyed ingenue in the Western mellers. The flash of the hero galloping along with the star resting rather uncomfortably across the saddle was also one which should have been eliminated from the film.

In the cast were Warren Cook, Charles Martin and Violet Reed.

The Box Office Angle

Of course, Petrova is always a good box-office bet, and, while the last part of this isn't so good, you can probably get it by anywhere as a satisfactory program offering.

The name of this film will mean very little in the young life of any of your fans, and I believe it would be advisable to feature just the star and say very little concerning the production, except that it is presented in an Arab atmosphere. Don't make any rash promises on this, because the last part of the picture leaves rather an unfavorable impression.

Going to Join the Allies?

Come on. Do. Help me to help you. You know all about that raise I've been telling you of. Now here's how you can become my ally:

Tell every pal you have; every exhibitor you know (and anyone else you think may be interested) what a good thing WID'S is. Tell him how you depend on it; what it means to you both in dollars and saving.

If "he's from Missouri," send us his name and address, and we'll let him have a sample copy to acquaint himself sufficiently with what I am doing, and why he needs WID'S.

WID'S
Times Building,
New York.

CHET WITHEY
DIRECTOR
JUST COMPLETED
"NEARLY MARRIED"
By EDGAR SELWYN
STARRING MADGE KENNEDY

FAIRLY PLEASING, BUT MARRED BY OVERPLAYING AND ROUGH COMEDY

Peggy Hyland in

PERSUASIVE PEGGY

Mayfair—Shallenberger & Priest—State Rights

DIRECTOR.....Charles J. Brabin
AUTHOR.....Maravene Thompson
CAMERAMAN.....George W. Lane
AS A WHOLE.....Unreal but fairly pleasing light entertainment; overplaying and rough comedy marred general effect
STORY.....Treatise on training an obstinate husband
DIRECTION....Permitted overplaying and rough comedy, but registered some good bits and several beautiful exteriors
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied from fine to fair
LIGHTINGS.....Some excellent; others ordinary
CAMERA WORK.....Varied
STAR.....Generally pleasing, but overplayed at times being "cute"
SUPPORT.....Some acceptable, but many crude spots; gossip was terrible
EXTERIORS.....A few beautiful; generally satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Good but not exceptional
DETAIL.....Several bad slips
TIME.....Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

WHILE the general effect of this is fairly satisfactory as light entertainment, the production is marred very decidedly by some bad overplaying at times and some rough comedy that certainly has no place in such a dainty little production as this should have been.

The plot development was really a sort of a treatise on how an obstinate husband should be managed, and there was a good little basic idea in the thought of having the wife creating the proper foundation of success for her married life by putting one brick after the other around the doorway of her home. These bricks represented Understanding, Co-operation, etc., with the wife adding an additional brick whenever an incident registered that a certain element of success had been successfully negotiated.

This started off with some very beautiful exteriors and a rather whimsical touch that gave promise of presenting some delightful light comedy. Unfortunately, we bumped into some bad overplaying as soon as a certain character, who was sort uv a combination gossip and rival of the wife, came into the production, and this very bad actress appeared frequently, with some Keystone characters that drifted in later, helping to mar the general effect very decidedly.

As the production progressed, Miss Hyland herself overplayed with what seemed to be too much of an effort to register cuteness, and in one or two important scenes William Davidson was painfully theatric. The net result was that at the end the impression wasn't nearly so favorable as had been anticipated from the early scenes.

It was certainly a mistake to play some of the farmhands in as rough comedy bits as were introduced, because these had no place whatever in such a production.

There were a few detail slips, such as one place where Mr. Davidson left the home of his friends with his wife under his arm, wearing a felt hat and arrived at the bank with her wearing a straw hat. The account which he opened for her in the bank was in Buffalo, and yet, when she drew her check it was on a New York bank. Things like that are noticed by every fan, and both errors could have been and should have been covered up.

There was one little scene of a fat Keystone type making love to a telephone exchange girl which was absolutely painful. There was no great interest to the plot development, because the action was comparatively obvious, but the whimsical basic idea would have carried it very well had the treatment been such as to keep the production light entertainment without allowing it to break over into Keystone Komedy and the poor attempt at dramatics.

Among those in the cast were Mary Cecil, Gertrude Norman, Jules Cowles, Charles Sutton and Arthur Houseman.

The Box Office Angle

This may get over very satisfactorily because of Peggy Hyland's presence, if you want to play it on the basis of a program offering, but certainly I wouldn't lead anybody to expect that they were going to see something unusual. The production isn't as good as some in which Miss Hyland has appeared and is unfortunately marred by the bad spots.

You can use in your advertising the idea that this suggests some very good tips to wives who want to get new angles on how to manage husbands, but I would concentrate on advertising of that sort and plugging the star rather than upon any promises as to the merits of the production itself. The bad spots really offset the good ones to such an extent that the final impression is none too good.

Have you sent WID'S your reports on features that you have run lately?

Contrasts

WID'S has the endorsement and support of not only men like Rothapfel of Broadway, but of exhibitors in the smallest town like Oskaloosa.

There must be a reason for this. There is. WID'S is the only publication that gives you honest, straight-from-the-shoulder criticisms regardless of whom or how it affects. That's why owners of over 5,000 picture theatres swear by WID'S. We want just as many more to read and depend on WID'S. With your help we can get them.

WID'S

Times Building, New York.

Motion Picture News Studio Directory

The Fourth Edition Will Be Out In December. Arrange to Have Your Copy Before the Edition Is Exhausted.

It Is the Only Reference Work Containing All the Information About Players Wanted by Casting Directors, Newspaper Photoplay Editors, and the Exhibitors Throughout the Country.

Every Exhibitor Needs a Copy of the Directory for the Preparation of Reading Notices In His Local Paper.

The 1918 Edition is to be bound in heavy cloth.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS, INC.,

729 SEVENTH AVENUE, NEW YORK.

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO

REGINALD BARKER
DIRECTING
PARALTA PLAYS
Paralta Studio, Los Angeles, Calif.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
PRODUCER

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

WILLIAM C. DOWLAN
PRODUCING METRO FEATURES
Current Release—"THE OUTSIDER"
With Emmy Wehlen.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING
PATHE PEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

JACK HARVEY
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING PATHE PLAYS

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
GOLDWYN

LLOYD INGRAHAM
PRODUCER

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
M. P. D. A.
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
M. P. D. A.
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

R. H. KELLY
STUDIO MANAGER
Empire All-Star Corp. & Mutual Corp.
Glendale, L. I.

HARLEY KNOLES
M. P. D. A.
FEATURES DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 D. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

JOSEPH LEVERING
DIRECTOR

O. A. C. LUND

ASHLEY MILLER
M. P. D. A.
Director—Vitagraph Studios
Brooklyn

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE DIRECTOR
FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.

WEDGWOOD NOWELL
TRIANGLE
Friars Club, N. Y. C.

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITAGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

TOM TERRISS
PRODUCER
VITAGRAPH

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
511 W. 143rd St. Audubon 1941.

JAMES VINCENT
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

BEN WILSON
DIRECTING AND STARRING
UNIVERSAL

CHESTER WITHEY
DIRECTOR

JAMES YOUNG
M. P. D. A.

WID'S IS READ NOT SKIMMED

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Adress—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FILM A MAGAZINE—IN FACT A SERVICE
THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM
WID'S
INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS
Always Independent Issued Every Thursday VOL. III. THURSDAY, NOV. 29, 1917. NO. 48 25 Cents a Copy $10.00 a Year
Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

PLEASE, MISTER---LET'S HAVE NEW PRINTS ON THE GOOD ONES

I have had many exhibitors write in and ask me personally why some exchanges never send out new prints of their good films. I have been unable to answer this, except to say that I presumed that it was because the executives in charge didn't know any better.

When we stop to figure that a large percentage of the theatres play productions after they are sixty days old, and when we also realize that the average positive print commences to look like what it shouldn't in a few months, the question comes—Why don't the producers provide new prints on all of the subjects which are fit to be played in worth-while houses many months after release, instead of forcing intelligent exhibitors to present to their patrons "shot to pieces" productions, or else cancel bookings?

There are many hundreds of good exhibitors over the country today who would be delighted to go into any exchange and pick out some of the good subjects that are many months old, if they were reasonably sure that these worth-while productions would be in fit condition to be shown in a good theatre.

This is certainly a matter deserving of very serious consideration, and I would suggest to every producer, for his own good, that he get an immediate accurate report upon the condition of the prints in his own exchanges. And—it would be worth-while to send some one to check this up who would give an unbiased opinion, instead of leaving it to the employees in the various exchanges, who might be adverse to reporting that their prints had been shot to pieces as soon as they have been.

If you are an exhibitor who wants to play some of the old stuff, write a few letters in to the producers and tell 'em about it.

If you are a producer, make a little note on your memo pad and take this up right away with the man who can do what should be done. Never put off till tomorrow what you can do today, because "tomorrow" in the filum business is the same as several months in any other business. You know we do move! Get yours while the getting's good—which means keep your product in marketable condition.

Why I Sent You Old Sample Copies

A few of my good friends have asked me why I sent out comparatively old samples for them to distribute to their friends in an effort to get the "office boy" (which means ME) a raise in salary.

Listen, dear ones, and I will tell thee the reason why I did such a thing.

As you all know, a great many exhibitors do not play films in the first few weeks after they have been released. Some of them don't play them for several months after release. If you were to send a sample to some friend with a lot of reviews of films that he was going to play sometime—or going to see sometime, if he wasn't an exhibitor—the chances are that he would probably read thru the book and then put it to one side and forget about it. What I wanted was to have you send your friends a sample copy containing reviews of pictures that they had seen or played.

When any one in the film business sees any production, they generally form some sort of an opinion concerning it. I wanted your friends to have a chance to check up their opinions with mine. If they agreed with me, the chances are ten to one that they would promptly send in a check for a year's subscription. Of course, if they didn't agree with me, I couldn't expect them to act so quickly.

Now, d'ye get the idea?

And—by the way, what did YOU do with those samples I sent YOU? Have they gone out with personal letters . . . or are they still resting peacefully on your desk, with your "good intentions" still only "intentions?"

Let's Do It Today! WHAT DO YOU SAY?

BEAUTIFUL FAMOUS SKATER IN AWFUL STORY CRUDELY PLAYED

Charlotte in

Commonwealth Pictures Corp.—State Rights

DIRECTOR.....Oscar Eagle
AUTHOR.....Courtland J. Van Deusen
CAMERAMAN.....Jackson T. Rose
AS A WHOLE.....Beautiful skater in awful plot with amateur support; drags fearfully, then finishes with cheap meller
STORY.....Five reels of athletic shero and lurking spies; one reel of very ordinary meller action
DIRECTION....Gave much too much footage to inconsequential action and failed at any time to make it impressive
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Some of it beautiful; some ordinary
LIGHTINGS.....Some fine effects; some poor
CAMERA WORK.....Many good dissolves; really too many; generally very pleasing
STAR.....Beautiful, pleasing and wonderful skater; was camera-conscious and jumped too much
SUPPORT.....Amateurish
EXTERIORS.....Some beautiful shots; generally pleasing
INTERIORS.....Acceptable; some good; some poor
DETAIL.....Too much of it
TIME.....Sixty-four minutes (6 parts)

I AM afraid that many who see this may pass the remark that it might have been better if they had kept Charlotte "on ice." Personally, I feel that it isn't really her fault that this fails to register, but very decidedly the fault of the story and the producers.

For the first five reels we had nothing to the plot except the introduction of a lot of characters, many scenes showing Charlotte in various costumes doing athletic stunts, riding horseback, bathing, doing classic dancing in the woods, etc., accompanied by a lot of "chickens," while German spies lurked around, passed notes to one another and figured out just when they would steal the submarine invention which good friend hero was building in a shed in the woods.

After five reels in which the story didn't advance a bit beyond the point where it started, we had a final reel of wild-eyed mellerdrammer which consisted of the spies stealing the invention, with Charlotte and the hero in pursuit, and a big struggle between hero and the willun on the edge of the cliff, which was ended by the arrival of an automobile full of secret service men.

They gave us rather a lot of pretty exteriors, some of the locations being very beautiful, indeed, and if the first five reels had had any story whatever to justify their presence, this might have been interesting because of the atmosphere and the good looks of some of the "chickens."

Of course they had to let Charlotte skate, and after she had spent several reels wildly jumping around all the time, which became a bit tiresome because the other girls wanted to do it too, they turned her loose in an ice rink, in what was supposed to be the Red Cross bazaar, and there she did some of the famous stunts which made her such a favorite when she appeared at the Hippodrome.

Charlotte is really a beautiful girl and she has quite a "figger." Altho she was camera-conscious at times, I believe that she would have registered very favorably indeed had she had a good story and better direction in this. She can stand closeups and has a countenance that is quite worth looking at.

The supporting cast was decidedly amateurish, and the Assistant Willun, who was also the assistant director, was the chief offender when it came to camera-conscious action. He rolled his eyes sumpin' scan'lous.

There was little rhyme or reason to the plot at any time, but when they got down to the automobile chase in the last reel where the hero and heroine were pursuing the spies who had finally made up their mind to steal the invention, and we found Charlotte boarding a yacht, when she had no reason to know that the willuns were aboard, they gave us a title which said, "Intuition prompts Charlotte to board the yacht"—that was the last straw! I've seen a lot of bum stories palmed onto Fate and other unsuspecting forces that can't defend the accusation, but this stunt of pulling "intuition" on us as an excuse for a slip in a bum mellerdrammer is pretty ruff.

In another part of this film they gave us a title saying that the inventor hero was going to test his invention, and we saw him apparently placing it to shoot it thru the air. Since we had been told that this was a submarine gun, I'd like to have someone diagram how he was going to test a submarine gun by shooting it at a target in the woods.

Entirely too much footage was given to the scenes in the skating rink, preceding and after Charlotte's skating specialty, and these became very tiresome. The same was true of most of the early footage where Charlotte and the "chickens" jumped around thru many scenes.

It was evident that quite a bit of money had been spent on this production, because some of the sets were rather good, but the composition wasn't always as artistic as it should have been to have secured the best results. There were a number of particularly beautiful exterior shots which lifted the offering quite a little.

The Box Office Angle.

At the time this was shown to the press no name had been given to it. Some very funny ones could be given to it if someone wanted to be truthful.

Considerable depends upon just how much your patrons will care about Charlotte being the most wonderful ice skater in the world as to how much business you can do with this. You can safely talk a lot about her being beautiful without fear of contradiction. You can rave about her ability as a skater as much as you like. Possibly your fans may not expect much from her as an actress and she may please very decidedly. Certainly they will hardly care for the story or the supporting cast. The story, particularly, is very bad.

If you are going to play this I believe it would be advisable to tell them frankly that it is a melodrama having to do with German spies seeking an inventor's model, which presents an opportunity for Charlotte to appear doing classic dancing, bathing, and finally as herself, the world's greatest skater. You might also say that she saves the nation's secret by her knowledge of wireless telegraphy, if you figure that anyone will pay any attention to such hokum.

Whatever you do, don't promise that this is a thrilling, compelling story or any such fool talk as that—because it isn't! The story is awful, the supporting cast is as bad, and there's nothing about it to please your fans except Charlotte herself and some pretty scenes.

If this were reduced in footage about one-third it would be decidedly improved from every viewpoint. I believe any exhibitor would be willing to pay more money for this if at least one-third of it should be eliminated.

DISTINCTIVE ATMOSPHERE HOLDS UP EARLY REELS; BIG BATTLES AT END

Violet Heming, Wilfred Lucas and Conway Tearle in

THE JUDGMENT HOUSE

Blackton Production—Paramount

DIRECTOR.....J. Stuart Blackton
AUTHOR.....Sir Gilbert Parker
SCENARIO BY.....J. Stuart Blackton
CAMERAMAN.....Thomas F. Malloy
AS A WHOLE.....Interesting domestic drama in classy atmosphere with Boer War as background
STORY.....Developed good dramatic clash, but sort of slipped when battle scenes came at end
DIRECTION.....Gave distinctive, artistic atmosphere; made dramatic scenes hold until battle started
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very pleasing
LIGHTINGS.....Some excellent; generally good
CAMERA WORK.....Good, with some bits excellent
STARS.....A bit theatric at times, but generally effective
SUPPORT.....Varied; some excellent; others camera-conscious
EXTERIORS.....Some very beautiful; generally good
INTERIORS.....Distinctive—kept atmosphere classy
DETAIL.....Good
TIME.....Sixty-one minutes (6 parts)

THE atmosphere of distinctive class which is registered by the sets and lightings in this gives it sufficient dignity to have this accepted anywhere as a very good production. The drama holds rather well thru the first five reels, but goes to pieces in the sixth, where we have some battle scenes that are very interesting to monopolize the attention.

The first of the film is devoted to a situation centering around a young woman who can't make up her mind as to which man she loves. This fickle young thing married one, after having been sort of tentatively engaged to another, and then she began to feel that she had made a serious mistake, with other near-affairs creeping in on the sidelines.

It wasn't until after the battle scenes that we had a title which said: "Her real self at last"—and I am inclined to believe that that title may get a laugh from some of the members of the audience, who will be somewhat disgusted with the young lady's "mind changing" escapades.

Violet Heming was the wife with the uncertain affections; Wilfred Lucas was the husband who was something of a brute, and Conway Tearle was the disappointed lover who almost caused trouble. In the last reel, after the wife had left her hubby, we got into the battle stuff, and Mr. Tearle and Mr. Lucas were shot; but Mr. Lucas recovered sufficiently to walk to the Red Cross station where Wifey was waiting as a nurse.

All thru the action there was a mysterious servant character who was constantly sticking around looking for trouble, and we found out eventually that he was seeking important information for Oom Paul. He also died on the battlefield when our other principals were shot.

We had some excellent sets in this and the rather classy atmosphere held the production up very nicely. There were some good light effects and several rather unusual title designs which kept the general tone of the production running evenly.

Miss Heming wore a number of L. & B. H. gowns and sometimes was very pretty. Her work on the whole was quite satisfactory.

Mr. Lucas and Mr. Tearle were very satisfactory, altho they were theatric in spots and somewhat camera-conscious. Paul Doucet, playing Mr. Lucas' secretary, who was also an admirer of the latter's wife, was quite camera-conscious.

Crazy Thunder, the Indian who played the part of the servant, made this part stand out—altho it was such a part that almost anyone could have made it seem important.

Others who appeared were Luciel Hamill and Florence Deshon.

The Box Office Angle.

By being able to talk about this as a Sir Gilbert Parker story, which is Mr. Blackton's first production at Paramount, you can probably do some business, and the film is good enough to please generally. There is enough class to the first part of it and enough "size" to the spectacular scenes at the end to make the average fan feel that he has seen something worth while.

Just to prove that you fellers can't afford to bill productions and mention the story in accordance with the press sheets which are issued by the average producing company, I might mention the fact that in this the synopsis contained in the press book tells all about a murder which is supposed to be the central situation in the last half of the production, and, as a matter of fact, the murder never appears on the screen. It is possible that this was made and cut out, or else the scenario may have been changed after the work was begun. The important point, however, is that press matter should never be issued until the production has been viewed. It only goes to show that press agents are expected to sit down and use up all their adjectives about a film that they have never seen. In a way, this accounts for the ineffective advertising matter that accompanies so many films. How can a man write convincing copy about something that he knows nothing of?

Don't go too strong on your recommendation of this production, because some folks may not care for the domestic jumble in the dramatic situations, and it is certainly true that the drama does a flop at the finish, with the bromide clutch being anticipated long before it arrives.

We believe—

Collaboration between the director and photographer is essential to success in photoplay production.

Larry Trimble
Philip E. Rosen.

MYSTERY SUSPENSE THAT HOLDS; HAS GERMAN SPY BASIS

Franklyn Farnum in

WINGED MYSTERY

Bluebird

DIRECTOR	Joseph De Grasse
AUTHOR	Archer McMackin
SCENARIO BY	William Parker
CAMERAMAN	Jack McKenzie
AS A WHOLE	Fast moving mystery melo
STORY	German spy system in U. S.
DIRECTION	Did not make all moves clear
PHOTOGRAPHY	Very good
LIGHTINGS	Good generally but few of them
CAMERA WORK	Same angle in many shots
STAR	Good action hero
SUPPORT	Good
EXTERIORS	One shot particularly good, others satisfactory
INTERIORS	Suited action
DETAIL	Good for this where detail is secondary
TIME	Seventy minutes (5 parts)

THIS is a fast moving mystery suspense melo, and I believe this type of production is in some demand at the present time. Also the fact that it shows the downfall of some German spies in the United States gives advertising possibilities.

The story showed Franklyn Farnum playing dual roles one as a good American citizen in Germany and also as a German officer. In a fight between the two brothers, the American's passport was stolen and the German officer came to the United States as a spy. The American finally got out of Germany, and came over.

At a house party where Miss Theby was the heroine, and Mr. Farnum was a guest, they were invited by a mysterious letter to come to a house and have dinner. When they got to the house, they found that they were prisoners and that they were held for ransom by the German spy system. The police trailed them by pigeons and finally rescued them. There was plenty of action, and although several points were not clear, the suspense obtained was good.

Miss Theby, as the heroine, was snappy and pleasing. She made her part stand out. Franklyn Farnum did not smile as much in this as in several of his other productions and was rather pleasing as the hero.

Others in the cast were Fred Montague, Claire Du Bray, T. D. Crittenden, Charles H. Mailes and Sam De Grasse.

The Box Office Angle.

This has lots of action and carries quite a little suspense; it has decided advertising possibilities because it shows some of the German spy system at work and the hero triumphant with the spies arrested.

I believe that you can bill this and have it please your patrons. Don't say much about the dual role of Franklyn Farnum because this has become old stuff and it may keep some people away.

THEATRIC BUT RATHER SATISFACTORY AS HERO PRODUCTION

Crane Wilbur in

THE BLOOD OF HIS FATHERS

Horsley—Art Dramas

DIRECTOR	Harrish Ingraham
CAMERAMAN	Robert A. Turnbull
AS A WHOLE	Rather theatric
STORY	A family curse which Wilbur overcomes
DIRECTION	Kept audience at a distance
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally good, some fine spots
LIGHTINGS	Delightfully artistic
CAMERA WORK	Good
STAR	Pleasing hero but theatric at times
SUPPORT	"Acted" some but generally acceptable
EXTERIORS	Many beautiful shots
INTERIORS	Decidedly good
DETAIL	A few slips
TIME	67 minutes (5 parts)

THIS opened with Crane Wilbur as a confederate renegade who with his band of roughnecks took possession of a Southern home, killing the father, mother and the sweetheart of the daughter, but letting the daughter and a negro servant live. Wilbur married the girl but later she died after the birth of their son. Before dying, however, she cursed Wilbur, the son and all their descendents.

The action then shifted to the present day with Wilbur as one of the two grandsons of the renegade, a helpless paralitic now. As the grandson Wilbur was a hard drinking but likable boy. Wilbur then married a Northern girl and the same day, thinking that he had killed a man, left for parts unknown where he fought his inclination to booze and tried to regain his self-esteem. Finally he rescued his wife from a gang of bums and then learned that he had not killed the man which plot idea has seen much service.

There were a number of inconsistencies in this, the principle one being the ease with which the brother made Wilbur the "fall guy" time after time. Toward the end these did not get over.

The general trend of the production was more or less theatrical, and although it seemed that nearly every sequence was overdrawn, it was carried in this atmosphere until we were used to it.

Crane Wilbur had a very good makeup in his impersonation of the renegade except that he wore a wig that every one will know as a wig. Most of your audience will like him in this. I am sure the women will.

The exteriors were taken in some beautifully kept grounds and the photography was certainly much above the average. The lightings were unusually good especially where Mr. Wilbur and the greyhound were shown. I would certainly mention this dog in my advertising because he will surely win your audience.

In the cast were Doc Graham, Ruth King, Julia Jackson, Joe Mullaly, Don Bailey and Jeanne Crosby.

The Box Office Angle.

This production is theatric, but I don't believe that you will get many kicks on that account because it is carried in that tone throughout.

If your patrons like Crane Wilbur get this and bill it rather heavily, but if they don't like him I would spend my space on the beautiful exteriors and let it go at that.

I would mention particularly the fact that there is a costume wedding in this, and I believe that you can get quite a goodly number of women in on that point. It might be well to bill this as a stately Southern production and in that way alibi yourself from some kicks.

PIEDMONT PICKS PERFECT PICTURES

Piedmont Pictures Corporation

Exclusive Selling Agent for America's most prominent Producers.

Confidential Purchasing Agent for foreign buyers.

729 Seventh Ave., New York

RATHER ENTERTAINING LITTLE COMEDY WITH CUTE KID STUFF

Zoe Rae in

THE CRICKET

Butterfly

DIRECTOR	Elsie Jane Wilson
AUTHOR	Elliott J. Clawson
CAMERAMAN	Stephen Rounds
AS A WHOLE	Very pleasing light production
STORY	Child brought up by three confirmed bachelors
DIRECTION	Registered some good little touches
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally very good
LIGHTINGS	Few attempted, but those were excellent
CAMERA WORK	Good
STAR	Cute youngster
SUPPORT	Satisfactory
EXTERIORS	None to speak of
INTERIORS	Suitable for story
DETAIL	Acceptable
TIME	Seventy minutes (5 parts)

ZOE RAE is certainly a delightfully clever little youngster, and she makes her part in this stand out—especially the bit where she pulled a tooth out at the table and then laughed and showed the vacant place where the tooth had been. This brought down the house.

The story concerned Little Zoe and her mother, Gretchen Lederer, who were living in rather straitened circumstances, so that when a chance came for the youngster to take part in a child theatrical production her mother permitted her to go ahead.

At these rehearsals Little Zoe met three bachelor actors, and when her mother died these three kind-hearted men adopted her. The actors later became very wealthy, and the girl, now grown up (played by Regina Rogers), married an actor, whereupon the foster-fathers disinherited her. The child of this couple, Little Zoe, brought about a reconciliation between the foster-fathers and her mother and father.

There were several places in this where children were used, these bits bringing lots of laughs. Winter Hall, Fred Warren and Harry Holden, as the three foster-fathers, although slightly overdrawn, were really delightful in their characterizations of men who thought they were doing their duty.

We had several points that did not quite get over because of the fact that they failed to convince, but on the whole this was a pleasing little offering. Some of the interiors were interesting and a few of the lightings of Miss Lederer made her appear really beautiful.

The Box Office Angle.

You can take this, bill it as an interesting little production with some good laughs and some pathos and be sure that it will please. It is certainly much better than the average Butterfly.

I would center my advertising on Zoe Rae, mentioning some of her recent films; I think she is quite well known as a youngster. I would also add that Miss Lederer appears in this, since she has been in enough worth-while films to be rather well known.

Say in your ads that this is the kind of story that the public has been demanding, and promise that it will please.

ROUGH STUFF THAT OVERREACHED AND BECAME FUNNY KILLED THIS

Monte Blue and Claire McDowell in

THE SHIP OF DOOM

Triangle

DIRECTOR and AUTHOR.....Wyndham Gittens
CAMERAMAN.....Allan Davis
AS A WHOLE....Rough meller that overreached and went to pieces at end
STORY.....Never convinced, and became much too melo
DIRECTION.....Gave too much emphasis to ruff stuff; provided rather good atmosphere
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good; some effective night stuff
LIGHTINGS.....Some very effective; generally ordinary
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STARS.....Satisfactory for melo action
SUPPORT.....Good rough types
EXTERIORS.....Some beautiful shots; boat stuff good
INTERIORS.....Satisfactory
DETAIL.....Too much ruff stuff
TIME.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

As program stuff goes, your patrons will probably accept this, unless many of them complain about the last reel or two where the action gets entirely too brutal and unconvincing.

They ran along in a fairly satisfactory manner until they got the characters together on a boat with a real rough gang of brutes, and then they pulled a mutiny with a free-for-all fight, which was followed by the ship being set afire and every one cut loose in boats on the open sea.

We then had two lotteries, with the brutal captain winning each time. The first was to decide who was to be thrown overboard to lighten the boat, and of course the hero was the unlucky one, and the second was to decide who should get the woman, and of course the captain won her.

About this time it began to be funny. The hero and shero both landed on the same island, and the captain, who was with the shero, obligingly walked over into some quicksand and sank out of sight. Then the crew came to rescue the hero and shero, but they said that God must have put 'em there for some reason, and so they were going to stay. Curtain.

The first part of this had to do with some fishing village scenes and a fight between the hero and a ruffneck, which ended with the ruffneck being killed. The hero was to marry the shero, and the ruffneck had boasted of having kissed her.

I'm afraid that the average fan will fail to enthuse over this because it is given up almost entirely to scenes of strenuous strife with many close-ups of battling men and bloody faces. The action on the boat during the mutiny and the fire was rather well cut for speed, but it soon began to overreach, and the boat stuff killed it flat. Some of the scenes when the boat was on fire, which were taken as night stuff, were rather effective. Generally the lightings were ordinary and failed to lift the production particularly.

Monte Blue was a hard-working hero, and Claire McDowell "emoted" all over the place. They did their best but were severely handicapped.

Others who appeared were Arthur Millet, Aaron Edwards and Frank Brownlee.

The Box Office Angle

If you play to audiences that like the "blood-and-thunder" stuff, particularly when there are buckets of blood, this may be approved of, because they surely do battle a lot and, according to some of the subtitles, were truly "wicked wuns." If your audiences are unwilling to believe this sort of ruff stuff I would forget this. It is certainly not what I would call entertainment.

I can't figure that the names of Monte Blue or Claire McDowell will get you any business at the box office.

DELIGHTFUL WILD INDIAN STAR IN FARCE THAT EARNS LAUGHS

Ann Murdock in

PLEASE HELP EMILY

Empire All-Star—Mutual

DIRECTOR.....Dell Henderson
CAMERAMAN.....William S. Crolly
AS A WHOLE.....Pleasing star in farce that earns many laughs
STORY.....Mixup resulting from escapades of wild little lady
DIRECTION.....Gave good atmosphere and played somewhat broadly for comedy; failed to tie some situations together, but farce atmosphere will excuse that
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally pleasing
LIGHTINGS.....Some good effects, others ordinary, but generally satisfactory
CAMERA WORK.....Varied, but generally good
STAR.....Delightful little Indian with personality that will win
SUPPORT.....Some good farce laugh-getters; hero pleasing as contrast
EXTERIORS.....Satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Some very good; generally satisfactory
DETAIL.....Acceptable; some funny bits
TIME.....Sixty-four minutes (5 parts)

FIGURING this as farce, I believe it is a very good bet because the situations will earn many laughs and Miss Murdock as a wild little lady whose escapades keep everyone in hot water will win most any audience because she is such a happy little devil. There were a few places where the story didn't just exactly tie together properly—particularly the matter of time between Miss Murdock's being left alone in a tango resort and her arrival in her bachelor friend's apartment, which was followed too soon by the presence of many of her friends. The lapse of time between night, dawn and mid-morning was not clearly covered. No one will stop to worry very much over story details in this sort of a production, however, because it is pure farce and they will accept it in the spirit of fun.

There were several good farce characters, such as Ferdinand Gottschalk as the fussy little pee-wee who wanted to marry Miss Murdock, the funny old aunt who was supposed to have the mumps and was disinfected when they all got arrested, and the bashful bachelor who was ordered to bring Miss Murdock from the bachelor's bedroom, where she had calmly decided to rest a bit.

In good contrast to these farce characters we found Rex McDougall as the hero working quietly, accepting in a somewhat bored manner the many foolish stunts of our little shero. He was very pleasing. Mr. McDougall is now appearing with Miss Murdock in her new success,

"The Three Bears," which is now playing at the Empire Theatre. He is the cross old Big Bear.

To give you an idea as to the sort of character Miss Murdock has in this, we see her driving wildly thru the streets with a motorcycle cop in pursuit, and after they have raced many blocks, with corners turned on two wheels, she calmly says to him when arrested—"So, you're a policeman . . . why, I thought you were racing me!"

It looked like Miss Murdock was really having a good time all thru this, and that spirit of fun helps to carry the production. Most anyone likes to see a pretty little Indian have a good time while other characters are standing around in great discomfort.

The Box Office Angle.

Personally, I think farce is a good thing to play up just now, and I believe that most any audience will enjoy this very much. You can feature Miss Murdock as a Frohman star, with the announcement that she is now being starred in the new comedy success, "The Three Bears," at the Empire Theatre. If you have played "Captain Jinks" or the "Outcast," I would refer to her having appeared in those productions. Forget the "Seven Sins." Whatever you do, don't mention her appearance there, because it might hurt your business.

Emphasize the fact that "Please Help Emily" was a Broadway success in which Miss Murdock appeared, because many of your fans like to see the shows which have played on the "big alley." Bill it as a farce and have them come prepared to laugh.

As a teaser campaign, you might for several days in advance run a line like this: "Will you help Emily?" Then after a few days change it to "PLEASE HELP EMILY."

PLEASING STAR LIFTS OLD HOKUM OF NEWLY RICH BLACKSMITH

William Desmond in

THE SUDDEN GENTLEMAN

Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Thomas N. Heffron
AUTHOR.....R. Cecil Smith
SCENARIO BY.....Joseph Anthony Roach
CAMERAMAN.....Edward Gheller
AS A WHOLE.....Rather pleasing hero and fairly good atmosphere made very ancient plot idea interesting at least
STORY.....Irish blacksmith left fortune, eventually wins scornful ward and triumphs over blackmailers; old stuff
DIRECTION.....Registered some scenes very satisfactory, but had some bad camera angles and allowed players to become camera-conscious frequently
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good; mostly straight stuff
LIGHTINGS.....A few good effects; generally ordinary
CAMERA WORK.....Mostly straight stuff; some composition bad
STAR.....Pleasing as ruffneck millionaire hero
SUPPORT.....Rather camera-conscious and somewhat stilted
EXTERIORS.....Some very good; generally satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Some shots very pleasing, but a few with bad composition
DETAIL.....Satisfactory
TIME.....Fixty-six minutes (5 parts)

CONSIDERING the fact that this is the very ancient story about the young hero blacksmith in Ireland who inherited many millions, with much attention given to the details of his coming into the fortune, his not understanding table etiquette, etc., I believe that it has been made fairly satisfactory by Mr. Desmond's personality and a comparatively good atmosphere of sets, locations, etc.

There was the usual junk about the ward who scorned the new millionaire at first, only to learn to love him later, and they even pulled in the willun and willuness who tried to frame up the hero and force him to marry the willuness, so that willun could wed hero's ward.

Generally, the sets and locations provided were very good, but every once in a while one of the angles used was bad, with the result that the general effect wasn't nearly as good as it should have been.

Mr. Desmond was pleasing all the way, but Mary McIvor as the shero was quite camera-conscious, and this same fault marred the work of the others in the supporting cast.

The early scenes in Ireland were rather interesting, but were decidedly "comic opera" in their artificiality.

Too much detail was given to some of the inconsequential situations, and, while the old hokum about the new millionaire not knowing what to do with his implements at the table may register with some people, it will pull a groan from a good many.

Some of the titles were very poorly worded, and this fact tended to weaken many of the situations very decidedly.

Among those who appeared were Alfred Hollingsworth, Donald Fuller, Percy Challenger, Jack Richardson, Alberta Lee and Margaret Shillingford.

The Box Office Angle.

As a program release you may be able to get this by satisfactorily if you think they will accept this very old story. Certainly if I were going to play it I would talk about Mr. Desmond and only say that he appears as an Irish Mick who found it necessary to teach some supposed-to-be gentlemen proper manners, instead of going into any details as to the actual story situations.

Figured from program standards, this is neither impossible nor good; it is just acceptable. If your fans are easy-going they may have some good laughs over some of the incidents and accept the rest of it without serious complaint. If your patrons are particularly critical and rather wise as to story values, then it would probably be advisable to dodge this one. Certainly this isn't up to the Triangle standard of the old days, but, then, most of you know that Triangle pictures today, as an average, aren't what they were.

An Exclusive Photoplay Trade Journal.

Published Weekly.

THE CANADIAN MOVING PICTURE DIGEST

100% Circulation in Canada.

Orpheum Theatre Bldg. Montreal, P. Q.

PLEASING STAR CARRIES ORDINARY PRODUCTION OVER SATISFACTORILY

Ethel Clayton in

EASY MONEY

Peerless—World

DIRECTOR	Travers Vale
AUTHOR	Gladys Johnson
CAMERAMAN	Max Schneider
AS A WHOLE	Old plot twisted to hold attention; star lifted it
STORY	Married in name only
DIRECTION	A little too much
PHOTOGRAPHY	Some bad; generally ordinary
LIGHTINGS	A few good; not many
CAMERA WORK	Just straight stuff
STAR	Very pleasing
SUPPORT	Bowers good, others satisfactory
EXTERIORS	Good
INTERIORS	Good
DETAIL	One bad slip
TIME	63 minutes (5 parts)

THIS production is a little better than the recent Ethel Clayton films and she has a part that will get more sympathy.

As a poor young girl in a sculptoring school who wanted to keep on with her work, Miss Clayton married John Bowers, a young man of wealthy grandparents who was in danger of losing his allowance because he wanted to marry an actress. In their marriage they decided to live a life of "married-in-name-only," and thus provide for themselves.

Later Miss Clayton got in a mix-up with Frank Mayo, who was the instructor at the art school, and was rescued by her husband. Of course, this taught her that she loved her husband, and so they really married.

There were very few exteriors in this and those that were shown were of no particular importance. In fact the whole production was somewhat short on atmospheric beauty. There was no attempt for good lightings or anything of the sort, but on the whole it was pleasing—made so by the very likable characters of Miss Clayton and Mr. Bowers. John Bowers, as a happy-go-lucky spendthrift, was developed as a man who could care deeply for his wife, but was not given an opportunity until the end. Miss Clayton was a girl so wrapped up in her work that she had not wanted married life, and had disliked Bowers and herself for the commercial marriage she had made. The Vampire was a little too strenuous in her ravings and detracted somewhat from the production.

The situation where Miss Clayton was locked in the house with Frank Mayo and after trying several windows and doors decided that she could not escape, was made funny by having her husband come along and calmly open the shutters that were supposed to have been locked.

Mr. Bowers injected some comedy in this that got by, and it lightened a somewhat heavy production.

The Box Office Angle.

Ethel Clayton has been given several mediocre plots lately, but I believe that she has carried most of them by her own personality. This is a little better than the others, and if you are on the World program and the others have slipped over, I think that you can get this one by nicely. I wouldn't go out of my way to get it because there are no real advertising points. If you play it center all the attention on Miss Clayton.

SMALL TOWN NEWSPAPER STORY THAT BECAME ORDINARY MELLER

Gladys Hulette in

OVER THE HILL

Astra—Pathe

DIRECTOR	William Parke
CAMERAMAN	Albert Richard
AS A WHOLE	Small-town newspaper story that became ordinary melo
STORY	Started with good characters, but lost effectiveness
DIRECTION	Did not lift it above ordinary melo routine
PHOTOGRAPHY	Only fair
LIGHTINGS	Ordinary
CAMERA WORK	Just acceptable; not good
STAR	Pleasing at times, but not as good as has been
SUPPORT	Just acceptable; some camera-conscious
EXTERIORS	Ordinary
INTERIORS	Acceptable for routine offering
DETAIL	Acceptable
TIME	Fifty-two minutes (5 parts)

AT first this showed promise of presenting some good character study, since it was a story of small-town newspaper life, with Chester Barnett as the young hero being given an opportunity to make good by putting a paper "over the hill." It very soon developed into ordinary melodrama, however, and the characterizations were lost in the action of developing situations.

Miss Hulette was presented as the granddaughter of a minister who was forced to become a book agent, and when her grandfather died she drifted into the newspaper office and there tried to help our young hero secure the advertising contract necessary to put his paper over as a success.

William Parke, Jr., was the son of the man who owned the papers, and, as usual, he was one of those weak sons who was willing to be a willun in order to win the woman.

The daughter of the man from whom the advertising contract was sought, had an affair with a baseball player and eloped with him about the time Miss Hulette discovered that the baseball player was married. She managed to get hold of the girl's father and stop the elopement, but the young willun, son of the newspaper owner, got next to the story and printed it.

Miss Hulette discovered the morning edition carrying the scandal on the first page and she promptly burned the entire edition and battered up the plates and type with a hammer. When the girl's father learned of this he handed over the advertising contract, which saved the paper, and the owner blew in in time to learn that his son was no-account, and so they ended with a clutch.

There was little attempt for effective, or distinctive, or artistic lightings, and thru most of this it just ran along as so much footage. As program stuff goes, this may be acceptable where they are willing to take action in place of characterization, but certainly there is little strength to the situations, because they absolutely fail to convince.

Miss Hulette was acceptable in this, but she didn't seem to register in as pleasing a manner as she has in most of her productions.

Chester Barnett was at satisfactory hero except that he was rather camera-conscious. The other members of the cast were only acceptable. They certainly did not lift the offering at any time.

Among those who appeared were Dan Mason, Richard Thornton and J. H. Gilmour.

The Box Office Angle.

If you are playing routine program stuff and trying to get by with it as it comes, this may sneak thru. Personally, I am afraid that very much of this ordinary action junk may seriously affect your patronage and cause you to commence to wonder in a few weeks what has happened to your regulars. If you can dodge this I would advise you to do so, because it lacks the human quality and isn't wild enough as melodrama to please those who love the straight mystery-suspense stories. There is no personality which lifts the production, and it fails to register as anything except just ordinary "movie."

If Gladys Hulette is a favorite in your community it would probably be advisable not to play this, because it might hurt her prestige.

PLEASING MIXTURE OF FARCE AND MELLER KEEPS LIKEABLE HERO BUSY

William F. Russell in

SNAP JUDGMENT

American—Mutual

DIRECTOR.....Edward S. Sloman
AUTHOR.....Edward S. Sloman
CAMERAMAN.....Joe Morgan
AS A WHOLE.....Snappy action and farcical touches discounted unreality and made artistic Western melo interesting
STORY.....Coincidences forgiven because of farce situations; action centered around hero whose double was outlaw
DIRECTION.....Gave very artistic atmosphere and pleasing comedy bits; kept melo moving
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very good; composition excellent
LIGHTINGS.....Some very effective; generally pleasing
CAMERA WORK.....Generally excellent; doubles perfect
STAR.....Very pleasing, both as outlaw and hero
SUPPORT.....Girls good; excellent types among men
EXTERIORS.....Many very fine; some particularly effective
INTERIORS.....Very good
DETAIL.....Several good touches
TIME.....Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

WHEN you learn that this is a combination of the story about the young man who was rather wild and was ordered out of the house by his father, and the old friend Coincidence which discovered a double for our hero, you may be inclined to feel that this is a "bad boy." But I want to assure you that the manner in which it has been handled redeems the story element to such an extent that I would almost bet on this proving very pleasing most anywhere. They titled this just enough in the direction of the farce to excuse the coincidences, and they kept the action moving fast enough that it proves very entertaining as a combination of farce and melodrama. Add to this the fact that they picked out many beautiful exterior locations and shot them from angles that made them very effective with good composition, and you have the high spots listed.

Of course, Bill Russell is a pleasing hero, and in this we find him doing the wild youth of the city and the rough but human outlaw of the West, most satisfactorily, and I am glad to say that Bill was able to hold the sympathy perfectly for both characters, which is sometimes not an easy task.

Francelia Billington and Ada Gleason as the two young ladies who were in love with the two Bill Russells were both pleasing, and we had an assortment of comedy characters and Western types that provide both fun and action in good measure.

The farcical twist to the story gave this a touch of comedy all the way, with the result that the average audience will enjoy the wild riding and the melodramatic thrill stunts that much more, because when they laugh it will be "with" the film and not "at" it.

The action provided all the well-known Western stunts from holding up the saloon, to dropping out of the tree on to the willun who pursued on horseback, and I can't help but feel that this combination of action and fun will register as good entertainment with most any audience.

There was a cute little kiddie who will make good in the few scenes in which she appears.

In the supporting cast were Charles Newton, Ashton Dearholt, Perry Banks, Harvey Clark, Clarence Burton and Bull Montana.

The Box Office Angle

I believe you can get some money with this because Bill Russell has been growing in popularity, and certainly I'd say that this is a pretty safe bet most anywhere, because the combination of farce and action will get over in many houses where straight meller wouldn't have a chance.

Fortunately they didn't rely upon double exposures very often, and so the idea of there being two characters is maintained very satisfactorily. The few "doubles" which are used were excellent, and you will be surprised at the number of patrons who are more or less regular who don't really know how these double exposures are taken.

I think you can still stir up interest in this idea by asking your fans if they believe that there is another man in this country who looks just like Bill Russell. You might ask that, and see "Snap Judgment" and find out. Of course, if you take this line of thought you shouldn't mention in any of your advertising the fact that Bill plays two parts.

I would be careful to promise them plenty of laughs, thrills and action, because I think the average audience is reaching for just that sort of entertainment these days —particularly the laughs.

Complete Musical Scores For All Paramount Re-Issues

Reasonable Rental

GEORGE W. BEYNON.

505 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City. Phone Murray Hill 9876

STAR AT DISADVANTAGE IN UNSYMPATHETIC DOMESTIC TANGLE

Pauline Frederick in

THE HUNGRY HEART

Famous Players—Paramount

DIRECTOR ..... Robert G. Vignola
AUTHOR ..... David Graham Phillips
SCENARIO BY ..... Charles Maigne
CAMERAMAN ..... Ned Van Buren
AS A WHOLE ..... Drama of domestic mix-up that missed fire most of time
STORY ..... Busy husband who neglected wife, repented and divorced her to prove that he was more worthy than rival; has seen much service
DIRECTION ..... Gave good atmosphere, but permitted some overplaying and failed to make dramatic situations really impress
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Generally pleasing, altho not always to best advantage for star
LIGHTINGS ..... Generally good in sets but frequently poor on faces
CAMERA WORK ..... Varied
STAR ..... Failed to hold sympathy and didn't look good in many lightings
SUPPORT ..... Just acceptable; failed to lift scenes
EXTERIORS ..... A few very pretty shots; generally satisfactory
INTERIORS ..... Very good
DETAIL ..... Satisfactory
TIME ..... Fifty-two minutes (5 parts)

SOMEHOW this rather missed fire as a Pauline Frederick subject, because we had the star in a character which was decidedly unsympathetic, and it seems to me to be a mistake anyway to place Miss Frederick in the part of a woman who is unable to keep a lot of men at her feet.

The story of this was the old situation of neglected wife who accepted the attentions of her husband's friend and assistant, with the result that hubby discovered his error and wanted to repent, only to be told that his wife wanted a divorce.

Feeling that he knew her, hubby granted the divorce and then came back and asked her to work with him on a chemical experiment, which brought them together and developed a new interest. The willun drifted in again and hubby proved that the willun was a coward by offering to kill them all at once by an explosion, and then Miss Frederick decided that she would remarry her one-time hubby.

There is certainly little sympathy in this character, and I think it would be much better to put Miss Frederick in a vampire part where you are expected to hate her character, rather than to play her in weak parts where she is unable to hold the sympathy.

While the lighting was generally very pleasing in the sets, and the atmosphere for the most part was distinctive, there were many scenes in which Miss Frederick was not lighted to advantage and thru at least half of the film she certainly did not screen well.

The supporting cast was only acceptable, and surely the players were unable to lift any of the situations. Both the hero and the willun were rather theatric at times.

In the cast were Helen Lindroth, Eldean Stuart, Robert Cain and Howard Hall.

The Box Office Angle

If Pauline Frederick is a good bet with you and you can do it, I think I would dodge this, because it is certainly a "weak sister." If you play them for one night only you can probably get it by without serious complaint.

Undoubtedly they will not like this, but they may not know just why, and, for that reason, you may be able to get it thru with the soft pedal on. Whatever you do, if you are going to play it, go easy on promises. The story never really gets under your shirt.

DELIGHTFUL DOUG MAKING FUN OF KING BUSINESS SUCCESSFULLY

Douglas Fairbanks in

REACHING FOR THE MOON

Arteraft

DIRECTOR ..... John Emerson
AUTHORS ..... John Emerson and Anita Loos
ART DIRECTOR ..... Wilfred Buckland
CAMERAMEN ..... Victor Fleming and Sam Landers
AS A WHOLE ..... The irrepressible Doug in funny farce centered around the unpleasant features of being a king
STORY ..... Clever elaboration of good farce idea, helped by titles
DIRECTION ..... Kept it moving and hit some real high spots
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Generally pleasing; some very good effects
LIGHTINGS ..... Some excellent; generally good
CAMERA WORK ..... Very good
STAR ..... The Favorite of the millions
SUPPORT ..... Some funny types and a pretty shero
EXTERIORS ..... Good
INTERIORS ..... Very good; one excellent set showing deck of ship
DETAIL ..... Some funny bits
TIME ..... Fifty-seven minutes (5 parts)

IT'S very hard to compare Fairbanks Films, because in a way they're always the same, and yet there is such a decided difference in some of the stories that it is hard to say just who is going to like "which" the best, except when they are remarkably fine or unusually weak. Certainly this had a splendid basic idea and has enough real action and sure-fire laughs to please most anybody anywhere.

Starting off with Doug as a clerk in a button factory who had a desire to be someone, we saw him practicing concentration with the pretty little lady he loved, and then suddenly he discovered that he was the long lost king of one of those funny little kingdoms of Europe, which in this case they called Vulgaria.

Then Doug's troubles began, and he certainly had some exciting adventures on account of the spies, hired assassins and others who wanted to get him out of the way. The situation on the boat where he couldn't talk to anyone and couldn't eat the food that was served to him because it was poisoned, is sure-fire stuff. In passing I want to comment on a set showing a deck scene which was very well put together. Such effects are pretty hard to put over.

Finally, after many wild adventures, Doug fought a duel with the Chief Willun, who was a contender for the throne, and, since our hero knew nothing about the regulation methods of killing a man in Vulgaria, he found himself on the edge of a cliff which was about 'steen miles high, with the willun poking a neat little rapier thru his tummy. Doug fell backwards over the cliff, and kept on falling for quite some time before he awoke, tumbling out of bed in his boarding house. Then he decided that after all he didn't want to be a king, anyway, and went over to play a nice little scene with "the girl," who had been concentrating all this time upon a home in Jersey with Doug, and while our hero said that the "concentration" stuff was all bunk, she said she believed in it because what she wanted was coming true.

From start to finish we had a lot of those clever subtitles which our 82-lb. "bantamweight champion of the world title-writer," Anita Loos, is noted for. One of the best of these came in the scene where Doug had just been told what he might do on the ship because of the presence of spies, when he sized up the situation by saying—"I'm a helluva king!" This was followed in rapid-fire by a title from the spies who were on the other end of a dictagraph, who said—"Ah! He admits it!"

They took hold of the situation by saying that Doug was to take up the carefree and easy-going life of other monarchs, such as Czar Nick and Kaiser Bill. I believe that this thought of making fun of the "king" business will be a popular one at this time, and certainly the producer has kept the action fast enough and the atmosphere interesting enough to provide Doug with an atmosphere which will put this over in a most satisfactory manner.

Doug had a chance to do a few stunts, pull a lot of funny little bits of business and register that personality of his as he always does, and while Arline Percy wasn't in evidence very much, she was certainly very pretty and decidedly pleasing in her scenes.

The supporting cast was more than satisfactory. It included Frank Campeau, Richard Cummings, Millard Webb and Eugene Ormonde.

The Box Office Angle.

I would say that this is sure-fire. Certainly Doug is one of our best box office bets, and I can't think of anything you would want more than a chance to tell them that this is a story which makes fun of the king business. Just ask 'em if they can picture Doug as the King of Vulgaria, and promise that he has an exciting time. You might say: "Which would you rather be: A clerk in a button factory, or King of Vulgaria? Each job has its difficulties. See Our Doug's adventures holding down one after the other.

ATMOSPHERE AND JAPS MAKE THIS INTERESTING

Sessue Hayakawa in

THE CALL OF THE EAST

Lasky—Paramount

DIRECTOR	George H. Melford
AUTHOR	Beulah Marie Dix
ART DIRECTOR	Wilfred Buckland
CAMERAMAN	Percy Hilburn
AS A WHOLE	Interesting atmosphere and treatment
STORY	Depicting the call of the East to one who has the blood in his veins
DIRECTION	Handled most scenes satisfactorily
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally beautiful, a few shots indistinct
LIGHTINGS	Usual Lasky lightings
CAMERA WORK	Good
STAR	Played with his usual poise
SUPPORT	Satisfactory, especially Jap players
EXTERIORS	Beautiful; nicely tinted
INTERIORS	Interesting
DETAIL	Good
TIME	55 minutes (5 parts)

DIRECTOR George Melford has given us a distinctive production due to fine atmosphere and photographic effects.

The exteriors were wonderfully beautiful. One scene in particular showing Jack Holt coming to the island to see Tsuro Aiko, who was the sister of Hayakawa, was an exceptional shot.

Of course, this love affair terminated disastrously for the girl and Hayakawa started to revenge himself on Holt; through Holt's sister, he finally realized that he loved her and due to the fact that she had Japanese blood, they were married and this cleared up the points in question.

There was a street scene showing a carnival in Tokyo that was very good. It showed many Japanese youngsters that will interest most of your audience.

I suppose that most of this atmosphere is due to Mr. Buckland, and he certainly is to be commended on his work. He has taken a rather ordinary subject and made it wonderfully artistic throughout. There were a few points that didn't get over exactly right. One being the rather convenient point of having Jack Holt drop his bill case in a fight with one of Hayakawa's servants so that Hayakawa would know who had taken his sister. The other was the fact that the foster mother of the brother and sister was not a Japanese woman or if she really was she did not look it.

The close-ups were beautifully lighted, and although Miss Loomis looked much better in long shots than close-ups, still this did not detract to any extent from the general effect.

In the cast were Tsuru Aiko, Jack Holt, Margaret Loomis, Jas. Cruze and Ernest Joy.

The Box Office Angle.

I would get this and make some fuss about it. It is quite worth while. I would dwell particularly on the exteriors and the beautiful scenic effects obtained. Talk about the star and his wife, Tsuro, stating that they are the only Jap stars in this country.

HAROLD LOCKWOOD
Yorke--Metro

CHET WITHEY
DIRECTOR
JUST COMPLETED
"NEARLY MARRIED"
By EDGAR SELWYN
STARRING MADGE KENNEDY

TOO MUCH DOPE FIEND DETAIL FOR IT TO BE ENTERTAINING

Brownie Vernon in

FEAR NOT

Bluebird

DIRECTOR	Allen J. Holubar
AUTHOR	J. Grubb Alexander
SCENARIO BY	Fred Myton
CAMEAMEN	Al Cawood and uke Hayward
AS A WHOLE	Too much dope stuff
STORY	Treatise on hereditary failing
DIRECTION	Kept production gruesome
PHOTOGRAPHY	Good
LIGHTINGS	Some beautiful of Miss Vernon and Frank Borzage
CAMERA WORK	Quite good
STAR	Very appealing
SUPPORT	Good types throughout
EXTERIORS	Acceptable
INTERIORS	Good
DETAIL	Good
TIME	Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

ALLEN HOLUBAR has given us several very beautiful lightings in this, and, for that reason alone, I believe this will get by satisfactorily.

The story had to do with Miss Vernon living with her father and uncle, who were both dope fiends. The plot showed that what they thought was a hereditary failing was simply imagination. Of course it ended with a clutch between Miss Vernon and Frank Borzage.

There was too much of the trembling dope-crazed father and uncle, and altho the very beautiful camera work used will do much to dispel this, it will still leave a bad taste.

There was one situation that was peculiar. The father of Miss Vernon, as the judge, had his brother brought before him on a dope charge, and then, stating that the man was his brother, said he could not judge him, and that he would resign his judgeship. He immediately walked out with the prisoner. I don't think they do it that way.

In the cast were Murdock McQuarrie, Joe Girard and Mr. McGreade.

The Box Office Angle.

If you are on the program for this, you may be able to get it over by stating that it is a production that will prove that taking dope is not hereditary. If you will talk about the beautiful lightings and the scientific experiments shown, it will help to arouse interest.

Of course, it will depend more or less upon how your patrons will take the dope stuff as to whether you can do business with this or not. If you are not on the program, forget this.

STAR AND ATMOSPHERE LIFT THIS; HAS PROPAGANDA POSSIBILITIES

Zena Keefe in

SHAME

Noble Production—Duplex Films—State Rights

DIRECTOR	John W. Noble
AUTHOR	John W. Noble
CAMERAMAN	Herbert O. Carleton
AS A WHOLE	Interesting, rather well played melo plea for recognition of illegitimate children
STORY	Provided some beauty bits and handled characters sufficiently well to make ordinary situations interesting
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally pleasing; some bits excellent
LIGHTINGS	A few excellent; some ordinary; generally good
CAMERA WORK	Very good
STAR	Pleasing; created sympathy and held it
SUPPORT	Generally very good; Welch and Davidson stood out
EXTERIORS	Many beauty spots; generally good
INTERIORS	Good
DETAIL	Satisfactory
TIME	Sixty-eight minutes (5 parts)

IF your people are willing to stand for advertising which makes this sort of a propaganda picture based on a plea for the relief of illegitimate children from shame due to the errors of their parents, then this should be a pretty good bet for you.

As a production this depends almost entirely upon the personalities of Miss Keefe, Niles Welch and John Davidson for the fact that the interest is maintained, because the story is quite ordinary and comparatively obvious. Producer Noble has provided many very beautiful exteriors and very good photography, so that the atmosphere lifts the production sufficiently to make it register as one that has been well made.

In some places the story was weakened by coincidences, and from start to finish there was very little suspense, since the ultimate development was comparatively obvious.

Since many people will probably be interested in a plea for illegitimate children, if this is properly handled in your campaign, I have an idea that this might be developed into a propaganda production of some strength. Figured only as melodrama, the story has little weight; but the fact that there is an underlying plea back of the situations helps to give a certain amount of dignity to it.

Miss Keefe at first is shown to be the sweetheart of a soldier, and we find her hurrying to Cuba to wed him, with the tardy arrival of a minister permitting her soldier lover to die just before they could be married.

Later we saw Miss Keefe as her own daughter living in an orphan home, from which she was afterwards taken to work for a brutal farmer. Running away from this man's home, she eventually became a nurse in a city hospital, where the young hero who had met her in the country was a doctor. He wanted to marry her, but she was unwilling because of her parents being unmarried, but finally she consented.

There was a hunchback who befriended her at the farm, and he afterwards followed her to the city and remained an unsuccessful suitor. There was a little slip in the scene where she said good-bye to the hunchback, because he told her to go to the city, saying he would find her later, and then made no effort to learn where he might find her. Later we saw him playing his violin in the streets until he happened to play under her window at the hospital. It would have been just as easy for them to have arranged some meeting place for a later time.

The father of our hero in the latter part of the story "just happened" to be the officer who had been present in Cuba when the soldier and his sweetheart were almost married. Everyone will expect him to recognize the girl and understand why her parents weren't married, but they didn't use this scene. In a way that is a good bit, because it will just fool those who have guessed every other point in the story, and it is entirely unnecessary.

Some of the scenes taken before a waterfall, and a good many of the exteriors in the country, were very beautiful. There were plenty of closeups, and these made the characterizations comparatively intimate. Miss Keefe's personality lifted the offering quite a lot, and Niles Welch was very satisfactory as the young hero. John Davidson made a small part stand out, he being the tango lounge-lizard who was trifling with the young lady who was supposed to marry Mr. Welch.

The auto accident in which Mr. Davidson was smashed up was very well handled. It was an effective crash.

There was a little footage in which hundreds of babies were shown, and this may be an attractive bit for your lobby if you can get it. Everyone likes to see babies on the screen.

Among those in the cast were Jack Dunn, Joyce Fair, Dell Boone and Paul Doucet.

The Box Office Angle.

Considering the fact that quite a number of our most famous men were illegitimate children, it is possible that you can develop a good propaganda plea in advertising this, and arouse sufficient interest to make this a good box office bet. The story is comparatively ordinary, but the producer has kept it interesting, the players are comparatively pleasing and some of the exterior scenes are very pretty, indeed.

Zena Keefe is fairly well known because of her work at Vitagraph and Metro, and she has been starred in "Enlighten Thy Daughter" and "One Hour." Niles Welch has had a number of good parts recently. John Davidson as a willun is rather well known. His name will help some.

Don't figure this as an exceptional production, but you can safely play it up as a well done story with a basic idea that is interesting propaganda.

FAIRLY INTERESTING IMAGINARY KINGDOM ROMANCE WITH PLEASING STARS

Alan Hale and Zena Keefe in

ONE HOUR

Rapf Production—M. H. Hoffman—Foursquare

DIRECTORS	Paul McAllister and Edwin L. Hollywood
AUTHOR	Elinor Glyn
SCENARIO BY	Paul McAllister
CAERAMAN	George Coudert
AS A WHOLE	Interesting but held in an air of unreality; stars helped it
STORY	Imaginary-kingdom romance
DIRECTION	Handled scenes nicely but never made characterizations intimate or human
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied from fine to fair
LIGHTINGS	Very good; night stuff excellent
CAMERA WORK	Many shots from the same angle
STARS	Hale impressive; she, pretty and pleasing
SUPPORT	Satisfactory
EXTERIORS	Some beautiful snow scenes
INTERIORS	Good
DETAIL	Too many coincidences
TIME	Sixty-eight minutes (5 parts)

THIS is one of those "imaginary kingdom" romances with many coincidences in evidence. The story, by Elinor Glyn, who wrote "Three Weeks," started in America with the princess of one of these kingdoms living here because of a revolution, in which her father and mother were killed.

Alan Hale was the prince of a neighboring kingdom, also living here, and during the early scenes he rescued Miss Keefe from a pack of wolves and saved her from drowning, and so they became friends and later lovers.

The princess was taken hurriedly back to her country, where she was to be married for political reasons to some old guy—the king of another country—to avert war. When Hale went home again he found that the old guy was his uncle. There was a fight, and the king was killed, so that Hale became king and married Miss Keefe.

There were a couple of places where the action might have been suggestive, but these have been covered up by the direction, and so I don't believe you will have any trouble on that score. One was where Mr. Hale undressed Miss Keefe, and the second was where they spent one hour in Mr. Hale's cabin.

Snow scenes in this were especially good, and, as these constituted the major part of the production and all of the exteriors, I would lay particular stress upon these scenes. The interior sets were satisfactory, altho some of the palace sets were a bit gaudy.

There was one thing that deserves special mention: Mr. Hale tried to catch the train on which the princess had left, and he missed it by a hair breadth. That is so unusual that it will attract attention.

There was one place where a man wore a silk hat up in the Adirondacks and had his trouseds inside of a pair of boots. That should get a laugh.

The photography was very good on all of the snow stuff, but on the interiors it was sometimes quite hazy. Altho considerable care seemed to have been exercised with the lightings, still they were slightly blurred.

In the supporting cast were Ina Brooks, D. J. Flanagan, Herbert Dansey, Warren Cook and Franklyn Hanna.

The Box Office Angle.

Play this up as an Elinor Glyn romance and trust to luck. It is unreal stuff but moves well enough to get by.

I would dwell particularly upon the snow scenes and exteriors, and if you get that firmly impressed in your patrons' minds, I am sure they will appreciate that part of the production very much.

I believe that Alan Hale's name and that of Miss Keefe will bring you some money—especially because Mr. Hale has been a long time in the game, having been a star with Biograph for years.

What are you up against? Tell us your trouble, maybe we can locate a remedy for the trouble.

WID GUNNING.

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO

REGINALD BARKER
DIRECTING
PARALTA PLAYS
Paralta Studio, Los Angeles, Calif.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
PRODUCER

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

WILLIAM C. DOWLAN
PRODUCING METRO FEATURES
Current Release—"THE OUTSIDER"
With Emmy Wehlen.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

JACK HARVEY
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING PATHE PLAYS

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
STAR AND DIRECTOR
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
GOLDWYN

LLOYD INGRAHAM
PRODUCER

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
M. P. D. A.
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
M. P. D. A.
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

R. H. KELLY
STUDIO MANAGER
Empire All-Star Corp. & Mutual Corp.
Glendale, L. I.

HARLEY KNOLES
M. P. D. A.
FEATURES DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 D. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

JOSEPH LEVERING
DIRECTOR

O. A. C. LUND

ASHLEY MILLER
M. P. D. A.
Director—Vitagraph Studios
Brooklyn

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE DIRECTOR
FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.

WEDGWOOD NOWELL
TRIANGLE
Friars Club, N. Y. C.

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITAGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

TOM TERRISS
PRODUCER
VITAGRAPH

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
511 W. 143rd St. Audubon 1941.

JAMES VINCENT
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

BEN WILSON
DIRECTING AND STARRING
UNIVERSAL

CHESTER WITHEY
DIRECTOR

JAMES YOUNG
M. P. D. A.

WID'S IS READ NOT SKIMMED

AUTHORS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Adress—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM A MAGAZINE—IN FACT A SERVICE
THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM
WID'S
INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS
Always Independent Issued Every Thursday VOL. III. THURSDAY, DEC. 6. 1917. NO. 49 25 Cents a Copy $10.00 a Year
Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

Hey--Who Threw That Brick?

From out of a blue sky Stanley Mastbaum, the "Philadelphia Thunderbolt," shoots a message that costs quite some coin to a lot of producers, telling about the tremendous waste due to present methods of distribution and overproduction.

About the same time, Sam Goldfish pulls an interview in which he begs for the coming of the Trust, and then Roxy Rothapfel, just home from the Coast, says he thinks it would be fine to have one grand big organization controlling the film business.

Altho I believe very decidedly in the idea of having distribution centers, which would eliminate a tremendous amount of waste overhead—and I wrote an editorial asking for that a few weeks ago, supplementing several that have gone before in the past two or three years—still I certainly cannot see the advisability of having a Trust of producers. The thought of having one central distribution point, with each company looking after its individual sales troubles is one thing, and the combination of all the producers is quite another.

Sitting on the sidelines, I have a quiet little hunch that Stanley V. of Philly threw that brick with the intention of starting something, and that "something" may not be what it seems to be.

There are just two guesses on this rather unusual situation, and,—like the feller what said he almost had the job, except that the man said "no,"—one of them has to be right. We can figure it out that Mr. Mastbaum, Mr. Goldfish, of Goldwyn, and Mr. Rothapfel, of the Exhibitors' Circuit, have all lined up with Artcraft-Paramount if we want to consider the obvious, and then, on the other hand, if we want to figure that these fellers are smart, we'll dope it out that they realize how near Paramount and Artcraft are getting to a possible monopoly, and so they have started an argument for the purpose of stirring up an uproar.

Mr. Berst for Pathe, in a politely sarcastic reply to the "Philadelphia Thunderbolt," specified the reasons why Pathe for one didn't figure a big combination of producers as a good thing for the industry. I know a whole lot of people who could give a lot of good reasons the same way, and it may have been the intention of the two "Sams" and Stanley V. to stir up some of the hornets when they cut loose with their statements.

Whether that was their intention or not, I believe the hornets are at work registering emphatic protests.

Another possible angle on this situation would be that these gentlemen wanted a combination and felt that there was bound to be some very adverse criticism of such a combination, so that the intention was to get the argument pretty well over with before the announcement of the deal was made.

I've been too busy to go out and find out just exactly what the dope is, but I'll bet a plug nickel that somebody is playing deep politics, because there is no possible chance that these three oracles could have spoken simultaneously by accident. These "coincidence" things happen in the movies where the companies have lousey scenario departments, but we don't bump into 'em with any degree of regularity even in the filum business—even though peculiar things do happen in the filum business!

There's food for thought for anybody, however, in this situation, and, while guessing doesn't get anybody anywhere, I'd advise all of you to keep an ear to the ground and watch your step!

JAP IN SPY STORY INTERESTING, BUT NEEDLESS SAD ENDING

Sessue Hayakawa in

THE SECRET GAME

Lasky—Paramount

DIRECTOR.....William C. De Mille
AUTHOR.....Marian Fairfax
CAMERAMAN.....Charles Rosher
AS A WHOLE.....Secret Service and spy story with interesting action but unnecessary sad ending
STORY.....Didn't convince, but held interest as action melo
DIRECTION.....Held attention and gave rather good atmosphere but did not make action register as anything except interesting movie
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied from fine to fair
LIGHTINGS.....Some excellent; others only fair
CAMERA WORK.....Varied
STAR.....Quiet; forceful; held attention
SUPPORT.....Satisfactory, not exceptional; Miss Vidor pleasing
EXTERIORS.....Acceptable
INTERIORS.....Some very good; others ordinary; helped by much spot lighting
DETAIL.....Acceptable for movie
TIME.....Fifty-seven minutes (5 parts)

FIGURED as a program movie, this will probably be satisfactory to the extent of being acceptable, simply because it is a spy story that has a certain amount of interesting action presented in a comparatively good atmosphere, made so by some effective lightings. Unfortunately the action moves in rather a mechanical manner, with the result that it never really convinces.

We see Hayakawa working as a Secret Service agent, with his methods causing the young officer hero to consider him a spy. Most of the production is given up to the mystery hokum having to do with the spy and his assistants getting various instructions and attempting to secure information regarding the government transports.

None of this action was kept human enough by careful characterization to have it really impress, and the result was that, while an audience may be interested in the action development, I'm quite sure that they will never take this to heart.

There was one situation where we saw the Jap placing an instrument in a cabinet, which was called a "microphone," and, from the action of several characters, it would seem that this instrument recorded the conversation of any one in the office next door, in a comparatively audible manner; the fact being, according to the action of some of the players, that any one could stand beside this cabinet and hear the instrument at work. It seems rather ridiculous to suppose that any Secret Service agent would plant a machine anywhere, which any individual might hear at work in case he happened to be within two or three feet or it.

Of course there was a love story, with the girl who was in love with our officer hero and was loved by the Jap Secret Service man working as the tool of the German spy, because she had a brother in the German army.

Raymond Hatton, who worked with the spy, was made up as a housekeeper and got away with the "female impersonation" thing rather well.

On the finish where the Jap trapped the girl carrying the decoy message to the German spy, we got rid of the spy by having him killed off, and then someone had the brilliant idea of having the Jap permit the spy's assistant to shoot him in order that he might be removed from the picture to make way for the hero and shero to get together for a clutch.

Since the Jap had been the central figure all the way, I can't in any way see the advisability of having this character practically commit suicide in order that the hero and shero might get together—because it would certainly have been just as reasonable to have allowed the clutch with the Jap devoting his life to the Secret Service work and still retaining a certain element of sympathy. This unhappy ending is going to disappoint a great many people in this film. It is absolutely illogical to figure that a successful Secret Service man, a Jap, should permit himself to be shot just because a white girl wanted to marry an American officer. That was certainly a bad break.

As usual, Hayakawa was quiet, forceful and able to dominate every scene in which he appeared. He is an artist.

Jack Holt, as the American officer, was quite satisfactory, and Florence Vidor as the shero, was very pleasing, particularly because she has an expressive, intelligent face that suggests strength of character. This was quite necessary for this part, because she worked as a spy thru most of the offering and yet had to hold the sympathy of the audience.

Others in the cast were Charlie Ogle and Mayme Kelso.

The Box Office Angle.

Altho there are some good lightings in this, the atmosphere of the production as a whole isn't nearly so good as other productions in which the Jap had been featured, such as "The Bottle Imp," but you can very probably get this by as a program offering because you can bill it as a story of the American Secret Service combatting the German spy system. Of course we have had a flood of these stories, but that doesn't alter the fact that they are almost sure-fire whenever you have a popular star about whom the action is centered.

In some sections Hayakawa is a big favorite, and I have been told that he doesn't pull any business in other communities. You have certainly had time to know what he will do in your town.

I wouldn't advise you to figure on this as anything more than a one-day proposition where you are playing program stuff regularly. That about let's it out! And I wouldn't dig it up if I could sidetrack it without inconvenience.

FERDINAND EARLE
Artist-Director
Blackton Productions, Inc.

Complete Musical Scores For All Paramount Re-Issues
Reasonable Rental
GEORGE W. BEYNON.
505 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City. Phone Murray Hill 9876

JUMPY STORY MISSES FIRE; STAR AND ATMOSPHERE LIFT IT SOME

Edna Goodrich in

THE AMERICAN MAID

Empire All-Star—Mutual

DIRECTOR	Albert Capellani
CAMERAMAN	Davide Calcagni
AS A WHOLE	Tiresome popular appeal that became melo
STORY	Too jumpy; dramatic scenes did not convince
DIRECTION	Failed to make story register, but gave some interesting atmospheres
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally good
LIGHTINGS	Some very good
CAMERA WORK	Used same angle in too many scenes
STAR	Beautiful in some scenes; poorly handled in others
SUPPORT	Acted quite some
EXTERIORS	Trench scenes unconvincing; others satisfactory
INTERIORS	Generally very good
DETAIL	Unconvincing
TIME	Seventy-one minutes (5 parts)

IF this production had been properly edited and reduced in footage it could have been made pleasing. As it stands it is certainly much too long and becomes tiresome.

The story started with Miss Goodrich as an American Red Cross nurse in one of the front-line base hospitals "over there," showing all of the different nationalities in the Allied Army, with the American soldier as the hero.

This hospital was broken up by a drive of the Huns, and all the men capable of bearing arms were sent to the trenches. The hospital and nurses were removed to the rear. This broke up the love affair between Miss Goodrich and the hero, and, since they had not learned each other's names, they were unable to locate one another afterwards.

Then Miss Goodrich received a wire that her father was very ill in Washington, and she left for home.

Our hero was wounded in a battle, and later, when discharged from a hospital, was relieved from duty as a soldier because of physical disability. Hero, too, returned to America, and there he saw Miss Goodrich as the daughter of a millionaire senator. Seeing that the gap in social standing separated them, hero immediately left for the West, where he took up a mining claim, of which he was robbed by the willun.

Then our hero held up a stage and took the gold from "his" mine because he could see no wrong in it—just as Bill Hart does in "The Silent Man." The willun then committed several robberies and wished them onto the hero, who was known as "Lonesome" at that time.

Of course, later, Miss Goodrich met him out West, and after an arrest and later the discovery of the willun's activities, our hero was released and married the heroine.

This production at first registered a lot of popular appeal stuff, getting over the "melting pot" idea. We saw the maids of the various European countries coming to America and finally developing into the real staunch American patriot—the supreme combination of the various nationalities of Europe. These scenes showed life in Ireland, France, Russia and Holland, and they were decidedly interesting and well staged. In this sequence there were quite a number of scenes showing the Statue of Liberty, which received quite some applause, and I'm sure you can count on them as sure-fire.

In many places the producer seemed averse to moving his camera. He made the players come up to the foreground. and in one place they made a sick man move, instead of moving the camera and changing the angle.

The general tone of the first part of the production, in the hospital scenes, was too depressing. We saw too many injured men with blood-soaked bandages. To my mind, this is poor business, on account of the impression that will be made upon your audiences. Had these been cut to a flash or so, the same idea could have been registered.

The trench scenes were very bad. We had bits depicting men with their heads sticking up above the ground—which is contrary to my impression of trench life from what I have read concerning modern warfare. The demeanor of both soldiers and officers was far from what we have been led to believe is their accustomed etiquette, as to saluting, etc.

The exterior scenes taken around Washington were indeed beautiful, and in the Western scenes we had a few good locations.

The Box Office Angle.

You can probably do some business on this if you want to take a chance, and if the Mutual people will cut this to the necessary length to make it move properly, I believe it ought to go over satisfactorily. It has rather a good basic idea to start with, but this idea is lost in the Western melo on the end. Of course Edna Goodrich will pull you some business if you will bill her, but I doubt if it will be very pleasing to most of your patrons as it stands. The production is at times depressing, lacks interest, and seems more or less theatric. If you have to run this, play up the star and the "melting pot" idea and let it go at that.

We believe—

Collaboration between the director and photographer is essential to success in photoplay production.

Larry Trimble
Philip E. Rosen.

SNAPPY, CLASSY SUSPENSE ACTION WITH CLEVER STAR

John Barrymore in

RAFFLES, THE AMATEUR CRACKSMAN

L. Lawrence Weber Production—Hiller & Wilk—State Rights

DIRECTOR.....George Irving
AUTHOR.....Eugene W. Presby
DRAMATIZED BY.....Eugene W. Presbrey
SCENARIO BY.....Anthony P. Kelly
CAMERAMAN.....Harry B. Harris
AS A WHOLE.....Snappy, interesting crook suspense melo presented in classy atmosphere by players who put it over
STORY.....Held interest all the way with nice twists; is well known crook classic
DIRECTION.....Made it distinctive; kept it moving; made big scenes register
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent
LIGHTINGS.....Effective and artistic; much spot lighting
CAMERA WORK.....Excellent
STAR.....A personality that wins; much stronger without moustache
SUPPORT.....Very good; Perry excellent
EXTERIORS.....Well chosen; blended with atmosphere
INTERIORS.....Massive and impressive; well lighted for class
DETAIL.....Some good touches
TIME.....Sixty-seven minutes (7 parts)

TO all those of you who remember the Barrymore who worked in several productions that were more or less comedies—principally "less"—I want to explain right away that Mr. Barrymore has shed his moustache. That makes a wonderful difference. It used to be mighty hard for him to get away with anything serious, because everyone expected him to be funny. Without the cute little hirsute adornment on the upper lip, John looks very manly and decidedly serious without having lost that little twinkle in his eye which puts over a comedy moment when necessary.

Most of you know about "Raffles." To everyone, the name of Raffles means—Master Crook, and it brings an eye-picture of a very clever pickpocket dressed in "soup an' fish." The combination of as well-known a star as John Barrymore and such a well-known story as "Raffles" should be a good bet most anywhere.

Producer George Irving has provided an atmosphere that fits the story beautifully. The settings are impressive because they are sufficiently massive to look like real stuff, and they have been lighted so that nearly all the way we have dark backgrounds and effective spotlightings. The general effect is artistic and distinctive, and some of the lightings made the scenes doubly effective.

The cast on the whole is decidedly satisfactory, with Frederick Perry as the detective standing out, and Christine Mayo a very substantial, ever-present semi-vampire.

Mike Donlin as a burglar proved that he didn't die when he quit playing baseball. Mike got away with the burglar thing very satisfactorily. I don't want Mike to take offense when I say that he "looked the part."

They started this off with some action from the drop of the hat, and the first reel was devoted to an incident on a steamer where our friend Raffles got away with a beautiful pearl, in a rather exciting bit of thievery and daring escape.

Finishing with this prologue, which served as a means of proving that Miss Mayo would be able to identify Raffles when she met him later, we came to the incident having to do with the theft of a necklace at a house party, which was the main thread of the balance of the production. It was clearly registered that Raffles was stealing because he loved the excitement, instead of because he needed the money, and in a number of titles it was planted that he stole from the rich and gave to the poor. In this particular instance it was made clear that he really took the necklace because he just couldn't resist the temptation, and also because he wanted to help a friend who needed 150 pounds (which is $750), which money he won from the detective on a bet that the detective would not be able to apprehend Raffles and recover the necklace by midnight.

The production moved along rapidly and held the interest all the way with enough twists to the action to keep it very interesting right up to the final scene, where our gentleman thief made his getaway. I feel pretty sure that most any audience will enjoy this thoroughly. It is really good entertainment.

Among those who appeared were H. Cooper Cliffe, Kathryn Adams, Nita Allen, Frank Morgan and Mathilda Brundage.

The Box Office Angle.

This ought to be a sure-fire bet anywhere—particularly if you will make it clear that John Barrymore has established himself in "Justice" and "Peter Ibbetson" as one of the most popular stars in New York. Also tell them he has shaved his moustache.

Most anyone knows about "Raffles." By tying up story and star you should have real business. Since most of this production is centered upon little scenes between Mr. Barrymore, Frederick Perry and Christine Mayo, I would mention the presence of Mr. Perry and Miss Mayo, because both have appeared in worth-while productions and are comparatively well known.

You can state emphatically that the production has been beautifully produced, because the lightings and general atmosphere have sufficient class to set this above any of the average releases.

CHET WITHEY
DIRECTOR
JUST COMPLETED
"NEARLY MARRIED"
By EDGAR SELWYN
STARRING MADGE KENNEDY

An Exclusive Photoplay Trade Journal.

Published Weekly.

THE CANADIAN MOVING PICTURE DIGEST

100% Circulation in Canada.

Orpheum Theatre Bldg. Montreal, P. Q.

NEW RUSSIAN STAR AND DIRECTION THEATRIC, BUT INTERESTING

Vera V. Colodna in

HER SISTER'S RIVAL

Russian Art—Pathe

DIRECTOR.....A. Arkatov
AS A WHOLE.....Interesting because Russian, but not as well directed or played as Mozukin stories; titles lowered it decidedly
STORY.....Provided some good situations in domestic tangle of two sisters who both loved same man
DIRECTION.....Permitted overplaying but made some incidents rather dramatic; provided very good atmosphere, altho lighting caused lavish interiors to appear somewhat setty
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied from fine to fair
LIGHTINGS.....Some beautiful effects but generally not well placed—particularly in large sets
CAMERA WORK.....Mostly straight stuff without enough angles
STAR.....Pretty and impressive generally, but overplayed at times
SUPPORT.....Rather camera-conscious and theatric
EXTERIORS.....Some very interesting scenes
INTERIORS.....Generally massive and impressive but not always well lighted
DETAIL.....Good—but titles not in keeping with atmosphere and characters
TIME.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

ALTHO this is naturally interesting because of it having been made in Russia, it is not as good a production as those in which Mozukin has appeared, due to the fact that it very evidently has been produced in another studio by another director and we find a new company of players. There are some elaborate sets used and some of these are decidedly impressive, but frequently the lights have not been well placed, with the result that the interiors appear rather setty—which detracts somewhat from the general impression.

Colodna, who is starred in this, is a little black-haired girl of a type not frequently seen on the screen to date, and her work is particularly pleasing, except that she overplays at times. The other players lack that vital "something" which we call personality which would make them stand out or convince. They were without exception camera-conscious and inclined to be theatric and stiff, and, as a consequence, their actions kept this from becoming tense drama of the realistic character that we found in some of the previous Russian offerings.

Despite all the sense of artificiality, however, I believe that this, as an offering, because of it having been made in Russia with Russian artists, is decidedly more to be desired than the average American ordinary melodrama that lacks in interesting atmosphere.

The story has some good dramatic situations developed from the fact that the older of two sisters married a young nobleman who sought her wealth, while he was really in love with the younger sister, who was madly in love with him.

Out of spite, the younger sister married a banker, and then we had complications due to the younger sister persisting in her affair with the older sister's husband.

When the mother of the two girls learned that the nobleman who had married her older daughter for her money, had been squandering this wealth, she went to him and suggested that he kill himself. When he refused to do this, she calmly shot him and announced to the servants that he had committed suicide. She did this because it had been discovered that he had committed a forgery for which he was about to be sent to prison, and she said she would have no son-in-law of hers in a prison cell.

The picture closed with the two girls over the body of the dead spendthrift, with the mother sadly considering the jumble which they had made of their lives. Altho this has a tragic ending, that does not particularly interfere with the impression made by the picture, because it will be viewed more as an interesting novelty because of its Russian origin, rather than a realistic drama, due to the fact that the players are unable to make this ring true as the other Russian company did with "The Painted Doll."

Unfortunately the titles which have been written to go with this are decidedly not in keeping with the atmosphere and characters of the production. They tend to cheapen the offering and certainly mar the general effect. Some of them are so trite and typically American that they jar painfully when presented in this Russian atmosphere. This is something which should certainly be remedied, since the right sort of titles could make this at least 25 per cent. more effective than it is at the present time.

The Box Office Angle.

If you play productions for only one night, I believe that you can very safely put this over—particularly if you have already played the Mozukin-Russian productions.

In announcing this, however, I would be very careful to emphasize the fact that this has been produced in another studio with an entirely different company. In your announcement, that will give this a touch of novelty and attract just as much interest, while it will also serve as an excellent alibi when they come out and tell you that it isn't as good as the Mozukin film. In that way you are also protecting yourself againts having this in any way mar the effect of future Mozukin productions.

Colodna is rather a beautiful girl, and, since she had made comparatively worth-while progress on the Russian stage before the revolution, you might make a little fuss about her. She has personality, and stands out very decidedly from the supporting cast in this offering.

If you can show a still picture or two of one of the large sets used in this, they would probably tend to attract many who might be inclined to the belief that anything Russian was made up of Cossacks, log huts and snow.

With the Russian revolution as the biggest news source today, anyone who can't do a worth-while business playing real Russian dramas ought to be spanked. The American people are more anxious today to get some real information about the Russian people than they have been for many generations. They are much more willing to gain this information from the screen than they are by digging it up from reference books. Play up that angle.

ORIGINALS

JACK CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer
Triangle Studios, Culver City, Calif.

CONTINUITY

ADAPTATIONS

EDITORIAL

CRUDE ORDINARY MELLER THAT REMAINED IN RUT

Irene Castle in

VENGEANCE IS MINE

Astra-Pathe

DIRECTOR.....Frank Hall Crane
AUTHOR.....John A. Moroso
SCENARIO BY.....H. L. Young
CAMERAMAN.....Harry Wood
AS A WHOLE....Ancient meller idea ordinarily presented
STORY.....Daughter of suicide seeking revenge against business man who falsely accused father as embezzler; Formula No. 103
DIRECTION.....Made it routine, ordinary meller; unreal as to characterization, concentrating upon action
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied from good to ordinary
LIGHTINGS.....Some good effects; generally ordinary
CAMERA WORK.....Varied
STAR.....Looked pretty, worked hard and danced
SUPPORT.....Dexter pleasing; others ordinary
EXTERIORS.....Ordinary
INTERIORS.....Satisfactory but had setty appearance
DETAIL.....Acceptable meller stuff
TIME.....Fifty-five minutes (5 parts)

SOMEHOW it seems that these Pathe mellerdrammers can't get away from the curse of "serial" direction. There is no real attempt made for characterization at any time and everything seems to be centered upon the idea of providing plenty of action, with the usual assortment of robberies, thrilling escapes, etc. Of course, we knew that sooner or later Mrs. Castle would have to dance, and so they finally planted her in a cabaret where she could do her arm-waving, foot-moving exercises.

Every school child knows this plot. The father commits suicide when accused of an embezzlement, and the daughter seeks out those wicked wuns in the world of business who framed up poor old father.

Of course, shero in her search always bumps into hero, and generally (as in this case) after getting the goods on the guilty wuns she says she will not take vengeance, but will let the Lord repay. Since in this it happened that the hero's father was one of the guilty wuns, it may be that that had something to do with shero's decision to put it up to the Lord.

In passing, I want to say that the man playing the father of Mr. Dexter looked decidedly as if he were more accustomed to play butler parts than doing the millionaire stuff. Somehow he always seemed about ready to bend his back and take somebody's hat.

While there were a few good lightings in this, the general effect was only ordinary, and it was decidedly too much of an action story to permit of it ever being convincing. It's meller movie—that's all!

Frank Sheridan was the most wicked willun.

The Box Office Angle.

If you play these Pathe mellerdrammers for one night and can get away with 'em as a rule, I presume that this one will get by also, simply because you have Irene Castle and Elliott Dexter appearing in it.

Certainly there is no reason why anyone should consider this very ancient plot worth while, except that they may sit in a theatre for an hour and see a lot of people running around on the screen, which may be enough to concentrate an idle mind upon.

I certainly would go very easy in playing this, and, unless you are taking the Pathe stuff regularly, I can't figure why you should reach out for it—unless it may be because Mrs. Castle hasn't worn out her "welcome" in your community. Some people are willing to excuse an awful lot of bad acting in an ordinary production in order to look at somebody that they know is famous—particularly if that person happens to be a dancer who does a few steps before the camera.

STARTED WITH GOOD SWING, BUT DIED IN LAST HALF

Harry T. Morey and Corinne Griffith in

WHO GOES THERE?

Vitagraph

DIRECTOR.....William P. S. Earle
AUTHOR.....Robert W. Chambers
SCENARIO BY.....A. Van Buren Powell
CAMERAMAN.....Jack Brown
AS A WHOLE.....Acceptable spy mystery but wanders too much and lacks real punch; doesn't hit straight
STORY.....Rambles all over the place and so misses fire after an excellent start
DIRECTION.....Made some moments impressive but failed generally to make important scenes ring true; allowed action to wander too much
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good; not exceptional
LIGHTINGS.....Some very good but others ordinary
CAMERA WORK.....Varied
STARS.....He dominant; she rather negative
SUPPORT.....Donaldson excellent; others satisfactory
EXTERIORS.....English atmosphere excellent; generally good
INTERIORS.....Good
DETAIL.....Some very good bits but too much at times
TIME.....Sixty-six minutes (5 parts)

AFTER getting away to a rather good start as a mystery-suspense story having to do with an American caught in Belgium who was sent to London to bring back a girl who was supposed to be the daughter of a German general, this slumped badly when about halfway thru because it began to ramble.

The American discovered the fact that the girl was a spy, translated her secret papers and then calmly went to sleep, so that she could steal the documents from him. An attendant on the boat looked thru the keyhole while the girl was getting away with the papers, and told the hero about it, but, according to a title, that didn't make any difference, because he had retained the translation of the messages.

From that time on the story went to pieces. They had a lot of stuff about their arrival in Belgium and we were given to understand that the hero turned over his translations to the English consul, so that the papers dropped out of the action and the problem became one of whether the girl would marry the hero instead of the German general, because we now learned that she wasn't the general's daughter but his fiancee.

They showed a few scenes of German Uhlans persecuting Belgian peasants, with the Belgians wanting to fight back and the Americans telling them not to, and then they had a rather mysterious title or two stating that the Belgians were going to cross some mountain pass to join the Belgian army. I'd like to have someone explain to me how these Belgians could penetrate the German lines back of which they were, in order to join the Belgian forces. It would seem to me to be rather a hard trick.

Finally, after considerable footage, the German general arrived in an auto accompanied only by one aide, and he was confronted by our hero, who fought a duel with him for the shero. Of course the general was fatally wounded, and all the time this battle with cheese knives was being fought inside, the aide heard nothing of the disturbance.

After the general was fatally wounded, shero told him that she loved our hero, and asked for a safe conduct thru the German lines. Before cashing in the general told hero to call in an aide, and he wrote out a pass for hero and shero. I believe that most any audience will be with this heart and soul right up to the time where the hero goes to sleep and lets the goil steal the poipers. From that time on it does an awful flop!—and when they get to the finish, I fear that most folks will be feeling rather peevish over having wasted their time.

Harry Morey, as the American of Belgian parents, was a very satisfactory hero, but Corinne Griffith failed to register in a manner that really pleases. She seemed to lack force, was not particularly attractive, and failed to impress as of sufficient importance to justify our hero risking so much for her.

Arthur Donaldson, as the German general, was very good—altho he created a little more sympathy for this character than the average film patron will care to see at this time. I can't beileve that Americans today are anxious to see stories in which any German is given any sympathy.

Mother Maurice had a small part that registered.

The Box Office Angle.

The name of this sounds good, and you can probably play it for one day most anywhere and get it by satisfactorily. I certainly would not figure it as worth more than that, because the story goes to pieces badly after the papers drop out, and, while the average patron will sit thru the rest of it and be fairly interested, they certainly will not be sufficiently impressed to cause them to become in the least enthusiastic.

Harry Morey is rather a favorite in many sections, and his name combined with the title of this will probably justify your putting it over for one night.

I cannot figure that Corinne Griffith will pull you any business, and so it would probably be advisable to concentrate upon Mr. Morey. Since Arthur Donaldson is rather well known, he being one of the real old-timers, who has kept up with the procession in characterizations, I believe I would mention his presence.

ORDINARY WESTERN WITH DEAD SHOT DICK SORT OF HERO

William Duncan and Carol Holloway in

THE TENDERFOOT

Vitagraph

DIRECTOR.....William Duncan
AUTHOR.....Alfred Henry Lewis
AS A WHOLE.....Unreal Western of meller action; never really impresses, but fairly interesting
STORY.....Old, obvious situations with dead-shot hero who made Injuns bite the dust
DIRECTION.....Gave too much action with himself as dime-novel hero; unreal atmosphere not artistic; characterizations given little opportunity
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Satisfactory straight stuff
LIGHTINGS.....No attempt for effects except night stuff, which was satisfactory
CAMERA WORK.....Acceptable
STAR.....Satisfactory roughneck hero
SUPPORT.....Good—altho society girl "acted"
EXTERIORS.....Ordinary Western stuff
INTERIORS.....Acceptable
DETAIL.....Too much at times
TIME.....Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

IF it were not for the fact that this is one of Alfred Henry Lewis's "Wolfville" stories you can gamble that everyone would have their thumbs down hard. Despite the certain amount of prestige which attaches to the name of such a well-known author, most everyone will label this as an ordinary movie Western and fail to become in the least enthusiastic.

The story presents no element of real novelty and is rather an obvious one, with nothing about it to really justify its use as a five-reel production.

Producer Duncan is presented as one of those dead-shot heroes who stops a tribe of Injuns by shootin' one after the other with his trusty rifle in the first reel, with frequent other occasions to prove his unerring aim as the action progressed.

We had that well-known assortment of haughty Eastern beauty, lovable Western shero and wicked willun who flirted with the loidies, and of course it drifted around to the point where the wicked willun and the hero were to fight a duel. Then our shero, she put blank cartridges into the willun's gun while drinking with him, she did. This hasn't been done in the movies more than 886 times.

After the willun got thru blazing away with his blank cartridges the hero, he pitched in and knocked the stuffin' out'n him with his fists, and then the cold-storage beauty from the East, went back East, and the two sure-shot Westerners got hitched.

Mr. Duncan, as the hero, was satisfactory as a ruff-neck, rough-and-ready sort 'uv "win the girl" type, and Carol Holloway looked rather good as the Western shero.

Florence Dye, as the Eastern beauty, was decidedly pretty in some lightings, but in others her makeup showed badly and she was somewhat inclined to "act" upon too many occasions.

Others who appeared were Fred Forrester, Charles Wheelock, Walter Rodgers, Hattie Buskirk and Joe Ryan.

The Box Office Angle.

This can get by as a Western movie with the possibility of your doing a little business on it because it is a Wolfville story, if you are willing to take a long chance and boost it. If you have a house where they like the "kill 'em quick" action stories and seem to think that "serials" are entertainment, then this might go over very well.

Mr. Duncan and Miss Holloway have been working in Vitagraph serials of the real wild and woolly Western type and it is possible that in certain communities this sort of thing is liked very much.

Unfortunately there is not enough characterization registered to have this prove pleasing to the average community audience where they want something besides Injuns biting the dust and Western melodramatic action. Unless you have it listed for program booking I would certainly not worry about playing this.

SATISFACTORY WESTERN MELO FOR PROGRAM RELEASE

Louise Lovely in

THE WOLF AND HIS MATE

Butterfly

DIRECTOR	Edward J. Le Saint
AUTHOR	Julia Maier
SCENARIO BY	Doris Schroeder
CAMERAMAN	Friend F. Baker
AS A WHOLE	Very convenient Western melo with some beauty spots
STORY	Shero tames the "wolf"
DIRECTION	Registered some good scenes, but let players "act"
PHOTOGRAPHY	Clean-cut
LIGHTINGS	Some very beautiful
CAMERA WORK	Good
STAR	Satisfactory
SUPPORT	"Acted" some, but generally satisfactory
EXTERIORS	Beautiful
INTERIORS	Suited action
DETAIL	Convenient
TIME	Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

TAKEN as a whole, this was a rather pleasing production. The work of Louise Lovely and Hart Hoxie was interesting, it showing the development of Mr. Hoxie from the roughneck to the man who learned to love his wife and their adopted child.

This started with quite a melodramatic piece of business, but toward the end it developed more into a characterization by Mr. Hoxie, which was rather good.

Miss Lovely and Mr. Hoxie both had claims to a certain piece of property out West, in which the courts upheld Miss Lovely; whereupon Mr. Hoxie made a parson marry him to Miss Lovely so that he could come into possession of the land.

Of course, after some misunderstanding, etc., they found out that they loved each other, and everything was slovely.

Some of the comedy action was overdrawn, and some of the characters marred their sequences by being a little too emphatic, but Miss Lovely helped the production, and the very good lightings gave it a good atmosphere.

Some of the exterior shots were especially commendable, and the lightings were far better than what we have come to expect in Butterfly productions. Every now and then we had some splendid bits of lighting that helped decidedly in raising the batting average of the offering.

There was a little child (Baby French) who appeared in this who will do you some good. She is a cute little youngster.

Hart Hoxie as the "heavy" hero made his part stand out by his poise. He got his characterization over. The remaining cast was acceptable but little more, among them being Hector Dion and Betty Schade.

The Box Office Angle.

I believe you can take this production, bill it as a characterization study of a bad man who reformed due to the influence of Miss Lovely, and be able to get by with it. I would speak particularly of the lightings in some of the exteriors, saying that they are quite beautiful. Even tho this is a little theatric at times, and some of the action is overdrawn, I believe it will go over in good shape as a routine program offering. I would lay most of the stress in my ads on Miss Lovely, and if Hart Hoxie is known, mention him.

KITTY AS "HARD LUCK NELL" STARTS AS STENOG. EH, WHAT?

Kitty Gordon in

HER HOUR

Peerless—World

DIRECTOR	George Cowl
CAMERAMAN	Lewis G. Ostland
AS A WHOLE	Tiresome, but kept in good atmosphere
STORY	Why girls go wrong, with much hard luck for star
DIRECTION	Kept players from being human
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied decidedly; some very good; some poor
LIGHTINGS	Some very good
CAMERA WORK	Fair
STAR	Never seemed to unbend; always the statuesque beauty
SUPPORT	Hardly satisfactory as a whole
EXTERIORS	A few good locations, with others mediocre
INTERIORS	Suited atmosphere
DETAIL	Not convincing
TIME	Eighty-three minutes (6 parts)

KITTY GORDON in this picture is certainly good to look at from the "beauty" point of view, but it showed her in the beginning as a shop girl, which certainly did not impress as a true state of affairs. Later she had a part as a stenographer, which didn't help matters to any great extent. She certainly is not the type to play either of these parts. Can you imagine Kitty as a stenog.

The way this started, with Miss Gordon losing her job in a department store and then, upon reaching her home, finding her mother dead, immediately after which her brother was arrested for murder—made one think that this should have been titled, "Hard-Luck Nell." After her mother died, Miss Gordon got a position as a stenographer in the office of Eric Mayne, and there, thru several very suggestive scenes, they showed her downfall.

Soon after this Miss Gordon left Mr. Mayne's employ, and later we found her as a noted lobbyist in Washington, with her brother now out of prison, acting as her secretary-helper.

Meanwhile Mr. Mayne was running for office and Miss Gordon plotted to avenge her downfall. She was foiled because she wanted to keep her past from "her daughter." Later, before the district attorney, having been called up on a murder charge, she stated that the girl was not her daughter, but the daughter of an old friend. Then Kitty died.

I can't remember a recent "filum" in which there was so much "hard luck" pushed onto one poor female. Poor broad-shouldered Kitty.

The lightings generally were very good. Some of the exterior scenes were good, and the interiors were in keeping with the action.

In the latter part of the film the star wore some very beautiful gowns of the L. & P. H. type, which is something that can always be played up in your ads to decided advantage.

There were many spots in this where we had a muchly "heaving breast," and in some places the action seemed a bit overdrawn. The scenes showing the downfall of Miss Gordon with Eric Mayne were decidedly suggestive. They will probably cause some unfavorable comment where you have patrons who dislike such stuff.

There was a lapse of time of several years in this, and still we found the characters looking practically the same in the later sequences as in the earlier scenes. This was especially so in the case of Mr. Mayne and George Morgan, who played the part of Miss Gordon's brother, it appearing as if it had been a lapse of about one week's time instead of eighteen or twenty years, as we were given to understand by the titles.

There was one thing in particular which I am sure many of your patrons will catch, it being where Miss Gordon shot the man who attempted to force his attention upon her daughter. In this Miss Gordon stood at a distance of at least twenty feet away from her victim and fired, instantly killing him with a small revolver. Try to hit something with a little revolver at that distance. I'll bet Kitty can't.

Others who appeared were George McQuarrie and Frank Beamish.

The Box Office Angle.

I wouldn't worry about getting this. It is far from being pleasant and it doesn't convince. There seems hardly a point worthy of consideration as a film production. Of course there are some advertising possibilities, chief among these being Miss Gordon's name, and of course you can harp on the old proposition of "Why girls go wrong" if you have the nerve to call Kitty a girl. If you must play this I would certainly slip it thru without a word about the story.

ANCIENT OBVIOUS PLOT FAILED TO IMPRESS; MEN HELPED IT

Ethel Barrymore in

THE ETERNAL MOTHER

Rolfe-Metro

DIRECTOR	Frank Reicher
AUTHOR	Sydney McCall
SCENARIO BY	Mary Murillo
CAMERAMAN	George Webber
AS A WHOLE	Obvious melo that failed to impress in atmosphere that varied decidedly
STORY	Child Labor plea, with mill-owner's wife finding her child by first marriage in husband's factory
DIRECTION	Failed to make dramatic moments ring true; poor lighting made some scenes messy
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied from fine to poor
LIGHTINGS	In closeups excellent; some fine spot-lighting, but frequently poor in sets
CAMERA WORK	Varied decidedly
STAR	Failed to make dramatic moments grip
SUPPORT	Mills and Johnston excellent; others acceptable
EXTERIORS	Ordinary
INTERIORS	Some good; others ordinary; not well lighted as rule
DETAIL	Acceptable
TIME	Fifty-nine minutes (5 parts)

THIS fails to get under your shirt at any time, because the story is one of those decidedly obvious things that floats along without any big, convincing moments up to the expected ending, and the production is handicapped by the fact that the lighting and photography varied very decidedly. In the closeups we had some good lighting; a few scenes where spot lighting was used were quite good, but there were many bits of poor photography and badly lighted sets which marred the general effect and kept the production from registering as distinctive or classy.

The story was far from being either effective or impressive. We found Miss Barrymore married to Frank Mills, and learned by the "story of her life" method that she had married Jack W. Johnston, who was a no-account brute, and that, according to information which she had, Jack and her child had been killed in an accident.

There had been some suggestion of Mr. Mills being a brutal mill owner who employed child labor, so that we knew of course that she would soon discover her own child in her second husband's factory.

Not to disappoint us, we found a child caught in an accident, and it "just happened" that this child was one that had been protected by Miss Barrymore the day before from her husband's brutal foreman. Of course, this was her own child, and her first husband loomed up to attempt to blackmail the second husband.

Learning that the first husband was alive, Miss Barrymore ran away with the child, but the woman who had been living with Johnston flashed a paper to prove that he had gotten a divorce from Miss Barrymore, so that everything was lovely and they pulled one title and a final clutch showing Miss Barrymore back at home with her child and Mr. Mills.

Mr. Mills and Mr. Johnston were both excellent, and they made a few of the scenes rather effective. Unfortunately, the situations lacked strength because of the rather theatric atmosphere which pervaded the entire offering.

Miss Barrymore looked the henpecked wife and abused mother, etc., upon occasions, but didn't add any great strength to the dramatic situations. It was hardly the sort of production in which to show her to best advantage.

A good many of the titles—particularly those which were given to Mr. Mills to prove that he was brutal —were entirely out of keeping with the character, and these helped to weaken the effectiveness of the more important scenes. A few of the sets were good, but the general impression created was none too favorable.

The Box Office Angle.

You may get this by for one night because Miss Barrymore is the star, but the story is so obvious and ordinary that you will certainly not find any of your fans enthusing over it. The brutal factory owner husband has been rather overworked in the movies, and there was no redeeming feature to this capable of lifting it from the rut.

If you are going to play this, I believe it would be wise to mention the presence of Frank Mills and Jack Johnston, because they have appeared in some rather worth-while productions and have many friends in most every community.

If Child Labor is a issue where you are, that angle may save this despite the fact that it isn't what could be called tense or appealing drama.

PERSISTENT SMILER IN UNCONVINCING MELO COMEDY

Franklyn Farnum in

THE SCARLET CAR

Bluebird

DIRECTOR.....Joseph De Grasse
AUTHOR.....Richard Harding Davis
SCENARIO BY.....William Parker
CAMERAMAN.....King D. Gray
AS A WHOLE.....Melo that lacked interest
STORY.....Redemption of ne'er-do-well
DIRECTION.....Left too much to be wished for PHOTOGRAPHY.....Mediocre
LIGHTINGS.....A few good
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR.....Grinned some more
SUPPORT.....Didn't impress
EXTERIORS.....Some good; others fair
INTERIORS.....Passable
DETAIL.....Fair
TIME.....Sixty-seven minutes (5 parts)

THIS started as a comedy drama that developed into a melo fast and furious. The plot was nothing new, nor was it carried thru in an interesting manner. Hero was ne'er-do-well son of a newspaperman who was in financial trouble. When a note was due at the local bank and enough money had been collected to square this, son was arrested for fighting and took the available funds to pay the costs. Before the judge released him, however, he gave him a good talking to, and son decided to reform and help father. Immediately he went out and collected the remaining back debts and so paid off the note.

The plot then jumped to the cashier of the bank, who found that the president had embezzled $35,000, and when caught red-handed in the bank at night, the president and his son killed the old cashier. He was put in the "Scarlet Car" to be disposed of by the driver.

The daughter of the cashier, whom Mr. Farnum loved, became engaged to the son of the banker, and then it remained for Farnum to incriminate the banker and his son and marry the girl—which he did.

All of the action in this seemed forced. The only bright spot was the rather good local atmosphere of the small town.

The bank shown in this was rather funny. Most banks don't have back doors, but this one did. The exits and entrances were rather confusing.

The comedy injected was somewhat overdrawn, and Mr. Farnum's smile, which he used too generously, marred the general effect very decidedly.

In the supporting cast were Al W. Filson, Howard Crampton, Edith Johnson, Lon Chaney, Sam De Grasse and William Lloyd.

The Box Office Angle

I'd let this one slide. There is no real advertising possibility in it, and the action which goes into meller is not really interesting. The characterization of Franklyn Farnum isn't in an atmosphere that lends conviction, and his smile becomes very tiresome.

If you must play it, you might mention the fact that it is a small-town newspaper story, but I really can't see how it can pull you any business to speak of. I think I would "soft pedal" it thru if I had to run it.

SURE FIRE BILL BACKED BY WELL DONE PRODUCTION

William S. Hart in

THE SILENT MAN

Artcraft

DIRECTOR.....Lambert Hillyer
AUTHOR.....Charles Kenyon
AS A WHOLE.....Classy production with chance for Bill to be bad man with right on his side
STORY.....Willuns steal Bill's mine and then he steals the gold, becoming outlaw; saved at finish by mysterious friend
DIRECTION.....Kept it moving; centered everything on Bill and selected beautiful locations
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent
LIGHTINGS.....Some beautiful back-lighted exteriors
CAMERA WORK.....Excellent
STAR.....A Real Hero
SUPPORT.....Some splendid characters; McKim excellent
EXTERIORS.....Well chosen and lighted for beauty
INTERIORS.....Good
DETAIL.....Some goo dbits; titles very good
TIME.....Sixty minutes (5 parts)

BILL Hart is about as near to sure-fire as anyone could want, and I believe this will register anywhere because the story keeps moving right along and the producer dug up a lot of very pretty locations and caught them in artistic lightings to provide a background worthy of the star.

To get away from the "bad man" idea just a bit and keep the sympathy all with Bill, they started him off as a miner who had his wonderful discovery of gold stolen by a claim jumper. Bill then held up the stagecoach and stole the dust from his own mine, at the same time taking charge of the innocent shero who had just been married by the willun, who already had a wife working in his dance hall.

The rest of the production was taken up with the pursuit of Bill, and he had a couple of exciting clashes with the willun and the posse, finally giving himself up to the shero's kid brother so that he might claim the $2,000 reward.

The courtroom finish registered entirely too much action on the part of the audience, and when the old character who had been a pal to Bill thru most of the film blew in with the announcement that he was an agent of the government ready to arrest the real willun, the scene sort of missed fire. This came at the very end, however, and it wasn't sufficiently off to really detract very much from the general effect. I believe this scene could have been handled to better advantage with gratifying results, but it wasn't—so there y'are!

Whoever picked out the locations for this did a mighty good job of it, and the composition on most of the exteriors was excellent, with some backlighting that certainly was beautiful. They gave us a lot of good closeups of Bill, and somehow that old scout just looks you in the eye and makes you believe it.

Of all the heroes that are gathering coin for saving the sheroes on the screen, I believe Bill Hart comes nearer to convincing every time he does something than any one I know. Possibly much of that is due to the fact that Bill is sincere and works all the time like he means it.

Bob McKim, our good old willun, was more than satisfactory, and they had a number of excellent types who helped things along.

Vola Vale as the frail little innocent shero was pretty and lovable. She didn't have a great deal to do except to be worshipped by Bill.

Many of the titles were very well written, and the bit of explosive cussin' registered by the preacher will get a yell most anywhere.

In the cast were Little Harold Goodwin, John Lockney, Geo. P. Nichols, Milton Ross, Gertrude Claire and Dorcas Matthews.

The Box Office Angle.

A Bill Hart subject in artistic surroundings with enough action to keep things moving ought to be sure-fire most anywhere. Bill holds you nicely in this, and I'd say that it should go big in any community. I wouldn't make too much direct fuss about the title, because it seemed rather odd to me, since Bill talked quite a lot.

You will have to emphasize the fact that this is a new production, because of the reissues now working.

STAR, WATER STUFF AND DOG LIFT VERY WEAK STORY

Mary Miles Minter in

THE MATE OF THE SALLY ANN

American—Mutual

DIRECTOR.....Henry King
AUTHOR.....Henry Albert Phillips
SCENARIO BY.....Elizabeth Mahoney
AS A WHOLE.....Star, water stuff and dog make unreal, elementary romance rather pleasing as light entertainment
STORY.....Certainly awful as to basic situations; so old must have rheumatism
DIRECTION.....Centered attention on pretty star and dog in some beautiful shore-line atmosphere; lifted very ancient plot to acceptable point
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Some excellent bits; generally good
LIGHTINGS.....Some very fine; others ordinary
CAMERA WORK.....Generally good
STAR.....Pleasing personality and made characterization register
SUPPORT.....Satisfactory; not exceptional
EXTERIORS.....Beautiful water stuff; generally good
INTERIORS.....Satisfactory; ;a few very good
DETAIL.....Painfully convenient; dog stuff great
TIME.....Fifty-six minutes (5 parts)

I COULD have readily forgiven the very slender thread of this story had they not wished onto us in the last reel the situation of the nice old man who had befriended the little shero, discovering that he was her long lost father. I'm afraid that that's going to bring a groan from most of your regulars and cause them to have something of a feeling of resentment against this offering which otherwise might have been accepted without complaint, as a pleasing little production—despite the fact that the story was elementary and decidedly light.

The plot (if it can be called such) showed us an old sea-faring man living on a stranded schooner, on a beautiful beach, with a little daughter who was never permitted to leave the boat. By means of visions we were told that her mother had come home and died at her birth, without telling the name of the child's father.

A nice young man wandered into the picture and fell in love with the little girl, and then she chased a three-legged dog into a beautiful mansion and there discovered a white-haired man who became her pal. In the last reel this "nice man" turned out to be her father, and, since he had married her mother and had then been lost in an accident previous to the time the child was born, all was lovely.

For purposes of identifying little Miss Minter as his daughter, it was necessary for this young lady to recognize a photograph of herself which the nice man had, as being the same photograph which her grandfather had. Since this was a photograph of Miss Minter and she certainly looks like herself most of the time, I can't understand why the nice man had to wait until the fifth reel to realize that this was his daughter.

Producer Henry King evidently realized that he was up against an awful lemon so far as story material was concerned, and he devoted most of his attention to getting something in the way of a characterization from the old grandfather and to hold the interest by little sequences in which a three-legged dog and the star were the chief factors. This dog had one leg in a plaster cast, and he was SOME actor! The Director also provided many very beautiful shots of what is generally called "water stuff," and these helped to hold the attention where there was no plot interest.

On the finish, when everyone was happy, he pulled a great laugh by having the three-legged dog and Mrs. Dog come up the gangplank of the yacht, followed by some pups, with the three-legged actor going back and taking hold with his teeth of the tail of one of the pups in order to carry him aboard. This finish will take the curse off of this painfully weak story for many. It will send them out with a laugh and they will forgive the plot in remembering many of the "smiley" incidents and the beauty spots.

Miss Minter had a sure-enough ragamuffin costume that she wore most all the way, it being sort uv a cross 'tween a pair of trousers and a skirt. One leg was gone at the knee and the other got as far as the ankles before it stopped, and it was pretty hard to tell whether the thing was a skirt sewed into the form of trousers, or an old pair of trousers very much torn up. She was very pretty in many of her closeups and decidedly pleasing, because she played with a care-free abandon that made her characterization natural.

Alan Forrest was satisfactory as the young man who stood around and waited for the clutch.

The grandfather (Geo. Periolat) and father (Jack Connolly) were satisfactory, altho grandfather's makeup was noticeably a makeup.

The Box Office Angle.

If you are going to play this I would emphasize particularly that it is a whimsical little character study of a little blonde beauty who had never been allowed to leave a stranded schooner, which had been her home until she was sixteen. You might make a particular fuss about this situation, explaining how her grandfather made her serve as "mate of the Sally Ann," going thru all the motions of the various members of the crew and constantly pretending that they were at sea, despite the fact that the old boat never budged. That particular situation is the only thing to the story, because the old junk about "discovering the long lost father" is so old that it should be given the Osler treatment.

This will probably get by if you prepare your patrons properly, but I wouldn't let 'em expect too much, because certainly it isn't big.

CUTE STAR AS SCATTER BRAIN BRIDE IN SMILEY FARCE

Madge Kennedy in

NEARLY MARRIED

Goldwyn

DIRECTOR.....Chet Withey
AUTHOR.....Edgar Selwyn
SCENARIO BY.....Lawrence McCloskey
ART DIRECTOR.....Hugo Ballin
CAMERAMAN.....Arthur Edeson
AS A WHOLE.....Pleasing farce; not continuous laugh, but funny; cute star and good cast in distinctive atmosphere
STORY.....Foolish notions of young bride cause amusing complications
DIRECTION.....Kept it classy and gathered goodly number of laughs
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very pleasing
LIGHTINGS.....Some bits very effective; generally good
CAMERA WORK.....Very good
STAR.....Delightful little scatter-brain characterization
SUPPORT.....Very good, except vamp not attractive enough
EXTERIORS.....Good; studio street scene night stuff effective
INTERIORS.....Excellent
DETAIL.....Generally good
TIME.....Fifty-seven minutes (5 parts)

MADGE KENNEDY is probably a very sensible little lady, but, believe me, she can put over a characterization of a scatter-brain female in a way to make you believe it. In "Nearly Married" you can sympathize with the husband, even when he gets a little ruff, because Madge pulls some sure-enough light headed debutante nonsense in her decisions in reference to the brother who caused considerable difficulty between the newlyweds.

This is a farce that almost deserves to be called "light comedy," and I believe the classy atmosphere and the personality of Miss Kennedy is going to put it over most anywhere. It isn't uproarious and it won't keep your audience laughing all the time, but it will certainly hand 'em a nice bunch of chuckles and enough good snickers to make 'em agree that it's entertainment.

The plot starts off with the wedding of Miss Kennedy, and then we find her declaring that she will not go on her honeymoon without the fool brother, who almost stopped the wedding by his failure to arrive.

We had one of those "lover quarrel" things which provided a few laughs, and then the husband, taking her at her word, decided to arrange so that she could get a divorce. He hired a vamp who was to provide the reason for the divorce and began taking her around to dinner, which caused quite some commotion with Miss Kennedy.

Their friends arranged for them to meet, explanations followed, and they pulled an elopement. Then brother blew in with a divorce decree, and the friends started on a chase to find the elopers who weren't married now.

The rest of the action was in an inn, where both parties were stopped by an enterprising innkeeper, who put broken bottles in the roadway, and we had some good farce-twists here which provided some laughs. Finally the pair sneaked away in the morning to Jersey to be married.

The sets and lightings were very good all the way, with the exception of the exterior scenes where the couple made their getaway, headed for Jersey, because we had had a terrific rainstorm during the night and there was nothing to show that it was morning; yet we saw a lot of skyline when Miss Kennedy and hubby climbed out of the window, and the roadway showed no signs whatever of having been in a storm. This one little slip, however, won't cause anybody to worry.

The cast was satisfactory, with the exception of Elda Furry as the vamp, who wasn't nearly as attractive as a vamp should be.

The titles were well written and some of these lines earned laughs.

In the cast were Frank Thomas, Mark Smith, Richard Barthelmess and Alma Tell.

The Box Office Angle.

Altho this was a Broadway play, I believe you will be better off if you will depend principally upon the personality of Miss Kennedy to pull you business for this. "Baby Mine" started her well, and, while this isn't as funny, it has been presented in a classy atmosphere and has enough good fun to satisfy generally.

Don't promise too much, but play it for pleasing entertainment that has been well enough produced to justify presentation in any first-class house.

Contrasts

WID'S has the endorsement and support of not only men like Rothapfel of Broadway, but of exhibitors in the smallest town like Oskaloosa.

There must be a reason for this. There is. WID'S is the only publication that gives you honest, straight-from-the-shoulder criticisms regardless of whom or how it affects. That's why owners of over 5,000 picture theatres swear by WID'S. We want just as many more to read and depend on WID'S. With your help we can get them.

WID'S

Times Building, New York.

Have you sent WID'S your reports on features that you have run lately?

AT LIBERTY?

Then why not let the biggest, the most important producers and directors know that your services are obtainable? There is no surer, quicker or better way to do this than to use WID'S. The more important a producer or director is the quicker he grabs for WID'S. And the cost of your card in the "At Liberty" column is but a trifle. There are few "stock companies" these days. Most every one is free lancing and the producers lose track of you. Keep in touch. Larger space, of course, if you wish We would like to tell you more about this newest feature, as well as of our Directory Call Bryant 2941, or write for details.

WID'S

Times Building,
New York.

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO

REGINALD BARKER
DIRECTING
PARALTA PLAYS
Paralta Studio, Los Angeles, Calif.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
PRODUCER

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

WILLIAM C. DOWLAN
PRODUCING METRO FEATURES
Current Release—"THE OUTSIDER"
With Emmy Wehlen.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

JACK HARVEY
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING PATHE PLAYS

ALLAN HOLUBAR
M. P. D. A.
Producing Universal Features.

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
GOLDWYN

LLOYD INGRAHAM
PRODUCER

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
M. P. D. A.
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
M. P. D. A.
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

R. H. KELLY
STUDIO MANAGER
Empire All-Star Corp. & Mutual Corp.
Glendale, L. I.

HARLEY KNOLES
M. P. D. A.
FEATURES DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 D. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

JOSEPH LEVERING
DIRECTOR

O. A. C. LUND

ASHLEY MILLER
M. P. D. A.
Director—Vitagraph Studios
Brooklyn

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE DIRECTOR
FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.

WEDGWOOD NOWELL
TRIANGLE
Friars Club, N. Y. C.

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITAGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

TOM TERRISS
PRODUCER
VITAGRAPH

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
511 W. 143rd St. Audubon 1941.

JAMES VINCENT
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

BEN WILSON
DIRECTING AND STARRING
UNIVERSAL

CHESTER WITHEY
DIRECTOR

JAMES YOUNG
M. P. D. A.

WID'S IS READ NOT SKIMMED

AUTHORS

MONTE M. KATTERJOHN
Staff Author
PARALTA PLAYS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

WIDS IS READ NOT SKIMMED

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Adress—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM

A MAGAZINE—IN FACT A SERVICE

WID'S

INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS

Always Independent Issued Every Thursday | VOL. III. | THURSDAY, DEC. 13, 1917. | NO. 50 | 25 Cents a Copy $10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

Statement by Frederick L. Collins.

I believe the time has come when the exhibitors are going to learn more of the truth about the film business than they have ever known before.

It is not the policy of some "trade papers" to print the truth, provided they feel that it may displease some advertiser, but nevertheless the indications seem to point towards the truth getting out.

I am informed by Mr. Frederick L. Collins, President of the Petrova Pictures Corp., that the following statement issued by him was sent.

The following statement, issued by Frederick L. Collins, president of Petrova Pictures Corporation, was sent to one of the film "trade papers," the Sunday Morning Telegraph, as a paid advertisement, and this paper refused to print it.

Because of this fact I have decided to print it in full just as it was presented to the Telegraph, because I don't believe in suppressing things.

Mr. Collins in the course of his statement refers to "yours truly," but I decided to allow that paragraph to remain, because I didn't want to eliminate any part of it or change the wording in any way.

Mr. Collins' statement, which is self-explanatory, was as follows:

I TAKE full responsibility for what follows:

For I am determined that justice shall be done to a very distinguished woman and gifted artist who is being shamefully slandered by a gang of irresponsible, whelping, scared-to-death hired men.

These creatures are going up and down this country vandalizing the artistic and commercial reputation of a woman who has risen by her own efforts and against untold obstacles to the front rank of dramatic stars.

This is the kind of bare-visaged lie they are propagating;

"Petrova was thrown out by Lasky because the pictures she made for them failed to book."

The facts:

Petrova served notice of her intention to quit before the first of her Paramount pictures was released. She took this action because the publicity clauses in her contract had been violated—and in spite of her employer's protest and regret. She immediately signed with me at twice the money. I know these things to be true.

Here's another stock slander:

"Petrova Pictures will be cheap pictures. That's the only kind she knows how to make."

Was "The Undying Flame" a cheap picture? Was "The Law of the Land" a cheap program picture? Didn't some of her old Metro pictures outsell the Metro program two to one?

Not all of the pictures in which Petrova has appeared have been worthy of her. That is true of any artist. It is especially true of certain pictures which she made under trying circumstances.

I give the facts:

Two months before Petrova's Metro contract expired, six Petrova negatives were destroyed by fire. The loss to her employers was tremendous. What did Petrova do?

She made five pictures in about seven weeks.

These five pictures—wonderfully successful they are under all the circumstances—have been issued in the last few months.

They are not Petrova Pictures.

They are not, and could not be, fair examples of the kind of pictures Petrova knows how to make.

I have not seen these old pictures. They tell me some of them are very good. But I know something about them:

I know that Petrova spent an aveage of ten working days on each of these old pictures; and that the first of the new PETROVA PICTURES has taken just ten weeks to make—that the producers of these old pictures could not have spent, at the outside, more than $20,000 per picture; and that,

"Daughter of Destiny" has cost to date, $110,496.22.

That pictures which have the advantage of five times as much expenditure and ten times as much time, coupled with fair intelligence and backed by unusual publicity, are high-class pictures—that "Daughter of Destiny" which opens Christmas week at the Rialto, New York, and the best theatres throughout the country, is a high-class picture.

I know, because all the wise ones who have seen it—like Stanley Mastbaum, Rothhapfel, and Wid—tell me it is the kind of a picture, that it is "BY FAR THE BEST THING PETROVA HAS EVER DONE," that it is "a greater picture, greater than you know."

TELL, then, what is all the knocking about?

If some one has had the sense to give this woman the time and money and opportunity to make good pictures—and she has done it—why should she be a mark for the hired knockers of rival organizations?

Surely the heads of these organizations cannot be behind such a cowardly campaign?

Certainly not Adolph Zukor, that master of the industry, who, through his agents, sought the distribution of these PETROVA PICTURES.

Certainly not Richard Rowland, who is a prominent member of the Exhibitors' Circuit that is distributing these PETROVA PICTURES.

Certainly not Jesse Lasky, who brought Petrova to this country, signed her for Paramount, tried to prevent her leaving that company, and tried to get her back.

Certainly not Samuel Goldfish, whose offer, up to half an hour before I signed a contract with the Exhibitors' Circuit, was most favorably considered for the distribution of these PETROVA PICTURES.

Certainly not J. A. Berst, who, through his representative, suggested the outright purchase of these PETROVA PICTURES.

Certainly not William Fox, who offered me the advantages of his organization the very day I let the contract for the distribution of these PETROVA PICTURES.

Certainly not Lewis Selznick, who made the very best offer of all for the distribution of these PETROVA PICTURES.

The men I have mentioned are big men—too big to let any motives lead them to such dimunitive tactics as petty slander and Swiss-cheese lies. I absolve them one and all.

BUT to the little fellows, the hangers-on, the time-servers who have nothing better to do than try to tear down the business reputation of a distinguished woman, I have this to say:

You have gone too far.

I don't know who it is that you are after—

Madam Petrova, because she has the nerve to stand alone,

The Exhibitors' Circuit, because it has the nerve to exist,

Or me, because I have the nerve to back them both.

But—

If you want a fight, you're going to get it.

Petrova Pictures are good pictures. They will make money for every exhibitor that runs them. Petrova pictures will play in every high-grade community in this country, in every middle-grade community, in every low-grade community—if I have to turn every program and shatter every alleged open-booking arrangement, if I have to go into the business of manufacturing every kind of photoplay material to replace the stuff that is thrown out.

I have determined—

To put behind these PETROVA PICTURES FOUR TIMES the ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN I have originally planned.

To turn loose the ENGINES of PUBLICITY which I, and no one else in the business, possess.

To make the name PETROVA a household word in the humblest home in this land.

To put over PETROVA PICTURES with a bang that will fill the seats of every picture house that runs them.

Let's Don't Kid Ourselves—The Strong Will Live; the Weak Will Die.

We have had much space devoted to the "amalgamation" junk in the last week or two, and "severial" editorials have been written and many statements issued. Amalgamation has been talked of from many angles pro and con, and of course, as usual, we get nowhere.

Now, why should we kid ourselves? We all know that there's never going to be an amalgamation which will control this business, and we also know that a number of concerns are wobbling; and most of us realize that the real solution is to push some of the wobbly ones over the precipice.

Conditions in the film industry at the present moment are bad because we have too many producers making too many bad films, releasing them under a faulty distribution plan which forces the sale of their product without respect to merit.

That "faulty distribution plan" is getting some awful kicks in the ear, and those who are being kicked are dying slowly, with the death struggles causing quite some rumpus.

When all is said and done, the theatre owners are the only men who have big, substantial, tangible investments, and they are the ones who will have to correct the present faulty conditions by waking up to the extent of picking QUALITY, instead of taking a lot of junk just because some clever salesman shows them how "easy" it will be to know that they are going to have so many pictures a year.

Bless you, there are many times too many pictures to be secured, and the feller who tells you that he is going to insure the possibility of your keeping your house open should be given the merry "Ha-ha."

I don't see why it wouldn't be good business to close your house rather than to play junk; and certainly any exhibitor would make a hit if he ran the good ones two or three times as long as he does now and explained it intelligently to his patrons. That's the one sure way to kill present conditions.

Take good stuff and play it for a long time, but tie to your theatre and not to some other feller's trademark,—because, remember, you own your theatre, and he owns his trademark. Don't work for him!

The dull explosions which have been promised and predicted for some months are about due. Either we will have them, or some sorry attempt at amalgamation, which will really mean a graceful way of bowing out.

Don't be worried over the Calamity Howler or the feller who tells you that the business is going to pot. There are more people going to the films in this country every day than ever before—IF YOU HAVE A GOOD PICTURE.

Why should you worry over the fact that the public is getting wise? If you are intelligent you know that that means a promise of great things. Of course, if you feel that you are unable to pick good pictures, then you have a right to worry.

Enough good pictures are being made to supply all the theatres that we need in this country, and more good pictures will be made just as soon as the exhibitors begin to give the proper support to the good ones which are made. The man who wants to make a good picture today is handicapped by the fact that too many theatres will play his picture only one day at a nominal rental, and pay almost the same rental for a piece of cheese that some program "Sausage-Grinder" manufacturer turns out for about one-tenth the money expended by the producer in developing his worth-while production.

Think it over and decide on QUALITY PICTURES and LONGER RUNS, with deaf ears to the Calamity Howlers. A few explosions will help the industry MUCH!

Many Millions Can Be Saved by Editing the Scripts

While we are having all this hurrah in the trade papers about the tremendous overhead charges that are causing the high cost of film rentals, it's probably a good thing to look a little beyond and size up a few more reasons for the excess overhead that now exists with a great many companies.

Most film folk will tell you that the waste in film studios can't be eliminated because of the human element, and certainly no one understands any better than I do the fact that a certain amount of waste is sure to result when any feature production is made.

I want to go on record very emphatically, however, with the statement that the most important reform needed at the present immediate moment for the reduction of needless overhead waste is the reorganization of most of our scenario departments. There are only about a dozen directors and writers in the industry at the present time who know how to prepare a script so that they will not shoot thousands of feet of film which are absolutely unnecessary. This footage comes out when the production is edited, or it should come out because it slows the production up, and it is certainly dead waste that is inexcusable.

I don't refer to the matter of retakes, because I certainly believe in retakes. There is nothing cheaper than film when it is a question of getting a certain important scene right.

The waste which I refer to is the taking of meaningless scenes and meaningless sequences and incidents which never should appear in any script.

We have too few continuity writers who really know how to prepare a continuity in order to save the director's energy and the producer's coin.

If for no other reason, the few people who are capable of doing this at the present time not only deserve the very high salaries they are getting, but about five times as much; because they save on every production about three times their salary, simply because they are able to prepared a script which eliminates unnecessary scenes and sequences before the damage has been done and the money spent.

I want to recommend to every producer of any consequence the very serious consideration of the need of giving a great deal more time and thought to the preparation of scripts.

Not thousand, but millions, of dollars can be saved if every script is boiled down and carefully analyzed before work is begun. An additional week of preparation will often save one-third the cost of a production.

And remember, boys — THE EXHIBITOR IS THE FELLER WHO PAYS FOR THE WASTED MONEY IN THE LONG RUN! That's why you fellers with theatres have a kick coming.

Let's make a little noise and see if we can get some action. The animals got stirred up a bit over the distribution waste after we started it with an editorial a few weeks ago, and possibly a few letters from you on the Script Problem will cause some of our Swivel Chair Executives to give the matter a little thought, with satisfactory results.

ORDINARY MOVIE WITH BIG FIGHT AND MUCH MELLER AT END

Harry Carey in

BUCKING BROADWAY

Butterfly

DIRECTOR	Jack Ford
AUTHOR	George Hively
CAMERAMAN	Ben Reynolds
AS A WHOLE	Western drammer that slipped hopelessly at end into rather rabid melo
STORY	Girl elopes with willun to be rescued after Keystone fight
DIRECTION	Failed to register action convincingly
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied
LIGHTINGS	A few good
CAMERA WORK	Would have done for serial
STAR	Got away to good start, but was ruined at end
SUPPORT	Just a mediocre cast
EXTERIORS	Some good Western scenes
INTERIORS	Suited atmosphere
DETAIL	Bad
TIME	Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

HARRY CAREY got away to a good start in this and gave rather a pleasing characterization in the first three reels, but, due to the very, very old material of the story and the violent mellerdrammer at the end—especially in the fight on the hotel roof garden—this was dragged down so far that no one will ever enthuse over it.

It started off in the West showing Carey as a range rider who fell in love with the boss's daughter, only to have the slick Eastern willun step in and elope with her.

Of course, Harry followed them and bucked Broadway until he located the two on the roof garden of a swell hotel, and then a fight ensued for about one reel, which killed off the production. Of course, the engagement party of the girl and the wicked wun had to take place at the roof garden of the hotel, where Friend Harry was stopping.

They provided a few little touches in this that will get over as comedy in the broader sense, but there wasn't enough of this, nor are the characterizations sufficiently pleasing to help the offering.

There were some exteriors of Western atmosphere, showing rolling cattle country, that were truly beautiful. A few of the lightings of Molly Malone were also good. Outside of these points you will have some trouble making your patrons feel that this is worthwhile.

In the cast were William Gettinger, Vesta Pegg and L. M. Wells.

The Box Office Angle

Take it from me and let this one ride by you without looking up.

Possibly if you could pick a night with a big snowstorm or when the ice is all over the street, then you might run this for a few dollars. If you cater to the wild meller lovin' folks, this might possibly please them quite some.

PAINFUL THEATRIC VAMP SPY STUFF MISSES BADLY

Lina Cavalieri in

THE ETERNAL TEMPTRESS

Famous Players—Paramount

DIRECTOR	Emile Chautard
AUTHOR	Mme. De Gresac
SCENARIO BY	Eve Unsell
CAMERAMAN	Jacques Bizeul
AS A WHOLE	May be interested in star, but surely production and story will not impress
STORY	Hero becomes forger, spy and traitor for love of temptress, who repents, saves him and then kills herself; finished with coffin—a pleasing sight (?)
DIRECTION	Gave comparatively good atmosphere but failed to lift situations from theatric; players seemed camera-conscious and situations didn't impress
PHHOTOGRAPHY	Generally good but varied from excellent to ordinary
LIGHTINGS	Some very fine effects; generally good
CAMERA WORK	Good
STAR	Beautiful but very camera-conscious and unconvincing
SUPPORT	Dexter and Alan Hale good; several good types
EXTERIORS	Satisfactory; not exceptional; showed "scenic" strip of Rome
INTERIORS	Satisfactory; some rather good
DETAIL	Acceptable, altho some bad spots
CHARACTER OF STORY	Will not appeal to children or adults who object to vampire stuff
TIME	Fifty-nine minutes (5 parts)

MANY may be interested in seeing Cavalieri in an American-made production, but certainly the net result isn't such as to cause anyone to enthuse very much over the beautiful songbird as an actress. She was very easy to look at and wore some beautiful clothes, but at all times seemed decidedly camera conscious and aware of the fact that she was "acting."

The plot provided was certainly not remarkable nor particularly pleasing, since it was the old junk of hero becoming a forger, a spy and a traitor for love of the temptress, who finally decided to save the man she had ruined because she had fallen in love with him, with the result that she trotted over to the willun's house, had a little drink with him, meanwhile throwing hers into the discard (which is about the oldest trick in movies), and then killed him in the struggle for the poipers which followed.

After having returned the valuable poipers to the American ambassador, our shero calmly killed herself, and they faded out on a coffin with the loidy lying in state. This may be someone's idea of entertainment, but, take it from me—it's going to get a groan (either audibly or internally) from at least 90 per cent. of any audience.

Just to prove that they had seen "Camille" at some time or other, those responsible for this had hero rush in with a million lires which he had secured for stealing the poipers for the Autsrians, and, altho I don't know how much this is in real cash, it made quite a bunch of white papers. Hero threw this at the lady who had caused him to do such awful things, with a dramatic speech about selling his soul for her. It was painfully noticeable that this money was still lying scattered around on the floor of this room all thru the rest of the film despite the act that the shero had a maid and that the story was supposed to run for many hours after this particular "money throwing" incident. Possibly a million lires in stage money wasn't worth enough real cash to justify even the maid gathering it together.

We had the usual Paramount dark backgrounds with some effective and artistic lightings, and the sets for the most part were quite satisfactory, with some of them rather impressive.

The story and the star kept this from possibly registering as anything except Cavalieri in action, because never at any time did it convince as real life.

A number of the players in the supporting cast were painfully stilted and theatric, which kept the general atmosphere from being any more impressive than the scenes in which the star appeared.

Elliott Dexter, as the hero, had rather an unsympathetic part because he certainly remained a very weak-willed individual all the way. The statement on the finish that he would enlist with the Allies was hardly sufficient to really build the proper sympathy for the character.

Alan Hale, as the Austrian willun, was quite satisfactory. The work of Mr. Hale and Mr. Dexter really made this comparatively interesting. Without them it would have been pitiful.

James Laffey, as the American ambassador, really looked the part—which seldom happens.

Among those in the cast were Hallen Mostyn, Mildred Conselman, Peter Bariberro, Ed Fielding and Pierre Matteis.

The Box Office Angle.

The chances are that most communities will be comparatively interested in seeing Cavalieri in an American-made film, but, aside from that interest, there is practically nothing that you can count upon here.

If you can get this at a reasonable price and can afford to play it knowing that your people will not really enjoy it, I would protect myself in my advertising by explaining with emphasis that Cavalieri is an opera singer. If you make that strong enough it will serve as a pretty good alibi when they learn that she isn't an actress. You can also make a lot of fuss about her being a great beauty, because she is indeed beautiful.

Be careful that you don't say that this is her "first appearance on the screen"—because it isn't! Some months ago Pathe released a foreign production in which Cavalieri appeared and you must limit your announcement to the fact that this is her first appearance on the screen in a film made in America.

Because of the fact that there are a lot of "temptress" scenes, some of your adults may not care for this, and certainly it is not a production that children will enjoy.

CHARACTERIZATION LIFTS WIFE'S FIGHT FOR HUBBY PLOT

Irene Hunt in

THE MATERNAL SPARK

Triangle

DIRECTOR	Gilbert P. Hamilton
AUTHOR	R. Cecil Smith
SCENARIO BY	George Du Bois Proctor
CAMERAMAN	Thomas Buckingham
AS A WHOLE	Rather interesting treatment of characterizations; should be trimmed at end
STORY	Fight of wife for her husband
DIRECTION	Handled most of scenes very well
PHOTOGRAPHY	Good
LIGHTINGS	Usually very good
CAMERA WORK	Very good
STAR	Made characterization convince
SUPPORT	Good
EXTERIORS	Not many, but pleasing
INTERIORS	Suited changes of circumstance
DETAIL	Good
TIME	Fifty-five minutes (5 parts)

THIS is primarily a vampire picture, but there has been injected into it a lot of cute kid stuff and quite a number of animal scenes that really lift the production out of the rut.

The story told of a happy family living in a small town who moved to the city when business called the husband. And there, because the wife didn't care or didn't appreciate the friends her husband made, she stayed at home and let her husband go more or less his own way.

Hubby met Josie Sedgwick, a vampire, and then came the battle between Friend Wife and Vamp to see who would get Hubby. It ended with the wife triumphant, Hubby having lost his job, with all of them going back to the small town where they had first lived.

Little Joey Jacobs, who played the son was very good, and he would have helped his part very much had he stopped jumping so much. Some directors think a kid must jump all the time to be cute. Of course, Joey had lots of pets—cats, dogs, etc.—and the dog shown here was a mighty clever canine. The camera work at this particular point in the production was especially commendable.

Producer Hamilton gave us a number of home scenes that were truly delightful, and if he could have kept the production in that vein throughout it would certainly have been wonderful. In the vampire scenes the production lost strength and became little short of routine "movie."

There was no attempt to obtain particularly beautiful locations for the exterior shots, and, altho the interiors were pleasing, they were not out-of-the-ordinary.

If I were running this film I would lay all of my emphasis on the kid and animal stuff presented, and say very little about the rest of the production.

There was one point in the plot that should register anywhere. We were given to understand that all women possess the "maternal instinct," not excluding those of questionable character. We had Irene Hunt going to Miss Sedgwick and offering her husband and child to her. This of course started Miss Sedgwick thinking as to whether or not she was capable or the right sort of a person to take care of the youngster, finally deciding to relinquish her hold on Hubby.

In the cast were Edwin Jobson, Frank MacQuarrie, Frank Newburgh and Rowland Lee.

The Box Office Angle.

I don't believe that Irene Hunt has a big enough following in your community to warrant heavy advertising on her name; nor do I think Miss Sedgwick is well enough known to film fans to draw at the box office. If you want to place any advertising on this picture, concentrate on the animal stuff and the cute kiddie who appears.

ORIGINALS — JACK CUNNINGHAM, Staff Writer, Triangle Studios, Culver City, Calif. — CONTINUITY

ADAPTATIONS — EDITORIAL

ORDINARY MOVIE WITH A LION NOTHING TO WORRY OVER

Marie Shotwell in

THE WOMAN AND THE BEAST

Graphic Features Inc.—State Rights

DIRECTOR	Ernest Warde
CAMERAMAN	Wm. M. Zollinger
AS A WHOLE	Provided good atmosphere, but lion scenes didn't convince
STORY	Laid in Italian settlement in U. S.
DIRECTION	Kept it interesting by little touches
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied from fine to poor
LIGHTINGS	Some good; some bad
CAMERA WORK	Varied
STAR	Kept part sympathetic
SUPPORT	Satisfactory
EXTERIORS	Some very good; others ordinary
INTERIORS	Good, but not distinctive
DETAIL	Acceptable
TIME	Seventy minutes (5 parts)

THE opening scenes of this production were laid in an Italian settlement, and the treatment of these scenes was rather interesting.

The action centered around Marie Shotwell as the belle of the Italian settlement. She married Fred Eric, a slow-moving, even-tempered individual who was very hard to arouse to anything but love. Of course, we had the willun, Alphonse Esthor, whom the wife always compared with her husband because this willun was a big, strong, courageous man. We finally had the husband proving his courage by killing a lion and accidentally killing the willun at the same time.

We had a lot of scenes in this showing a lion which had escaped from a circus that was playing a town, and these scenes, altho rather effectively lighted, were not convincing. They showed an arena set that was altogether artificial.

The remaining part of the production was just fair. No one will become enthusiastic over it, but then again I believe you will not have very many kicks on the production in general.

The lightings throughout were fair, some of them being very good—especially one bit where we had a scene with Miss Shotwell against a light background. These lightings helped the production appreciably.

There were a couple of kiddies, who looked like honest-to-goodness urchins, and some of their scenes were decidedly above the average. In a few spots the director had them overreach a little, but not sufficiently to mar the general effect.

The Box Office Angle

I wouldn't go after this, because it isn't good enough to attract people and surely it will not cause any favorable word-of-mouth discussion among your patrons. All of the scenes where the lion was present were entirely too fakey.

I would pass this, unless you figure you can run it on an off evening and can get it at a price that would make it worth your while.

PAINFUL PLOT POORLY PLAYED IN GOOD ATMOSPHERE

Charles Kent, Mildred Manning and Wallace McDonald in

THE MARRIAGE SPECULATION

Vitagraph

DIRECTOR	Ashley Miller
AUTHOR	Cyrus Townsend Brady
SCENARIO BY	A. Van Buren Powell
AS A WHOLE	Fearful story fairly presented; may interest mildly but will not please
STORY	Educating girl to marry wealth, with result marries grocery clerk, who inherits fortune at finish; movie junk of years ago
DIRECTION	Made some situations interesting but could not camouflage plot enough
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied from excellent to poor
LIGHTINGS	Some excellent; others varied from fair to poor
CAMERA WORK	Varied decidedly
STARS	Kent good; others very camera-conscious
SUPPORT	Generally camera-conscious; some bad
EXTERIORS	Some quite beautiful; generally satisfactory
INTERIORS	Satisfactory
CHARACTER OF STORY	Has no objectionable scenes
TIME	Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

IT seems almost pitiful that we should find producers presenting such absolutely inane stories as this at the present time. Certainly it would be impossible for anyone to make this anything except a movie, and when that fact is combined with the presence of two youthful stars who are both painfully camera-conscious all the time, then we can only get a result which brings forth an emphatic cry against over-production.

When sixteen or twenty features a week are being made, this is surely one of the sort that we could very well do without. It only tends to antagonize the faithful who turn out regularly where they are playing program productions, and causes an exhibitor to lose his few regulars, who sooner or later must tire of this sort of junk and either quit coming altogether for a while or seek good films elsewhere.

The plot—if it can be called such—evolved around that time-honored situation of educating a girl in the hope that she would be able to marry wealth, thereby bringing a return on the investment.

Of course the grocery clerk who loved her at first drifted in later on, now a partner in the grocery business, and he disclosed the true identity of the willun who was posing as a foreign nobleman.

If they had let it alone right there by allowing the shero to marry the grocery clerk who had now advanced sufficiently to guarantee comparatively easy life for his bride and the old man who had invested the coin on her education, it might have had some chance; but, lo and behold!—they reached out and pulled the old junk about the gink who died in England sending an attorney for the long lost heir, and on the finish the grocery clerk was discovered to be the heir because he wore his father's ring. Zowie!!

The Producer gave us a number of very good exteriors and a few good lightings, so that the atmosphere generally was rather interesting, but it was an impossible task to take such a plot and make it anything but "movie."

Charles Kent, the faithful old dean of Vitagraph Players, was very good as the old gentleman who invested his money in educating the young lady for possible marriage, but Mildred Manning never at any time ceased to look like she was entirely out of place in her surroundings. She was painfully camera-conscious at all times, rolled her eyes upon any and all occasions and marred the effect of many scenes.

Wallace McDonald, as the grocery clerk hero, who paraded as a count in order to unmask the willun, "acted" too hard most of the time and seemed unable to get into the character and forget the fact that he was being photographed.

Augustus Phillips, one of the old-timers from the well remembered Edison Stock Co., was a wicked willun who had to go thru many situations which never had a chance to get anywhere.

Any audience will be several reels ahead of this plot all the time, and, despite a few beauty spots, I don't consider it entertaining from any angle.

The Box Office Angle.

If you play routine program stuff as it comes and are willing to take a chance on eventually losing most of your regulars by forcing these movies on them when they are hungry for worthwhile productions, then I suppose this will come to you and be shown for one night. I'd advise that you try to dig up something worthwhile, because this certainly is an ancient plot, perfectly well known to any fan and lacking in the important essentials to make it register as a convincing or entertaining offering.

There is no personality among the players that stands out sufficiently to lift the bad spots in the story, and consequently if you feel that you must play this I would certainly advise that you do it with the soft pedal pushed hard.

STAR'S BOOB CHARACTERIZATION CARRIES SLENDER STORY

Taylor Holmes in

THE SMALL-TOWN GUY

Essanay—Perfection

DIRECTOR	Lawrence C. Windom
AUTHOR	Freeman Tilden
SCENARIO BY	H. Tipton Steck
CAMERAMAN	Arthur E. Reeves
AS A WHOLE	Star's characterization carries ordinary plot and production over, registering some good laughs
STORY	Just framework of situations to provide characterization of county boob in hands of city sharpers
DIRECTION	Registered some good comedy, but practically no attempt for effective atmosphere
PHOTOGRAPHY	Just straight stuff; closeups excellent but many of medium and long sots poor
LIGHTINGS	No attempt for artistry or effects
CAMERA WORK	Acceptable for straight stuff
STAR	Delightful boob characterization
SUPPORT	Some very good types
EXTERIORS	Satisfactory
INTERIORS	Acceptable
DETAIL	Satisfactory
CHARACTER OF STORY	Any audience can see it
TIME	Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

TAYLOR HOLMES is a personality. Anyone who has seen this young man in one or two productions is certainly going to enjoy him in most anything, and particularly will they appreciate a production where he has a chance to do the boob character that he puts over so well.

In this we find Mr. Holmes as a clerk in a small-town hotel who watches with wide-open eyes the methods of a couple of slick city fellers who drifted into the town. When they got into a little personal battle, Taylor smoothed things out so that the fight appeared to have been an accident, and thus he won their consideration.

Taken to the city, Holmes was made the solicitor for a "graft," and he soon discovered this and was warned by a detective to beat it back home. Having sent home a photograph showing himself looking like a clothes model, his dying aunt who had hoped that he would some day amount to something, decided to leave her estate to him.

The rest of the production centered around an attempt by the crooks to blackmail Holmes when they found him running a store in the small town.

There's not much plot to this, but Mr. Holmes has some good opportunities for characterization—first, as the boob going to the city, and afterwards as the bashful but fightin' small-town guy capable of meeting an emergency when backed into a corner.

If your fans like Holmes they will undoubtedly consider this satisfactory entertainment. If they don't like him—which I can hardly conceive of, because he certainly has a winning smile—then this will not register very well, since, as usual, we find very little attempt for production effects. The photography is straight stuff, very good in the closeups but ordinary in the long and medium shots, and the sets are nothing to talk about—altho they carry the atmosphere satisfactorily.

There were a number of excellent types in this and the star registered a lot of laughs and a good many chuckles over such incidents as the one where he had his photograph taken to send home to the folks for the purpose of proving that he was progressing in the city.

Among those who appeared were Helen Ferguson, Mark Elliston and Fred Tiden.

The Box Office Angle.

This isn't by any manner of means a tremendous winner, but I believe that it is a good little light comedy that has enough chuckles and sufficient interesting action to make the average audience feel that they had a worthwhile bit of entertainment.

Taylor Holmes has proved himself to be rather a favorite and his characterization in this is in line with what he has done in several other films, so that you can play up the fact that he does some of his famous boob tricks which have brought him to the front as a screen star in a very few weeks.

Always in your advertising you should make mention of the fact that Mr. Holmes has been a star on the "legitimate" and in vaudeville, because that always gives a certain amount of additional prestige with most fans. It is probably true that most of your regulars never heard of him until he came into the films, but that's all the more reason why you should explain to them that he was a star before he began to do comedies for Essanay.

Don't promise too much about this particular production and don't figure it too big. But you can certainly feel safe if you will bill Mr. Holmes and plan to put this over as a pleasing little light comedy.

SOME LIGHT COMEDY STUFF WITH CUTE LITTLE STAR

THE ANTICS OF ANN

Ann Pennington in

Famous Players—Paramount

DIRECTOR.....Edward Dillon
AUTHOR.....Frederic Chapin
SCENARIO BY.....Coolidge Streeter
CAMERAMAN.....Lewis W. Physioc
AS A WHOLE.....Light comedy that suited star
STORY.....Scatter-brain girl and her adventures
DIRECTION.....Satisfactory for light comedy
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied throughout
LIGHTINGS.....A few good
CAMERA WORK.....Varied
STAR.....Very good, cute and pleasing
SUPPORT.....Above the average
EXTERIORS.....Good; one or two well chosen locations
INTERIORS.....Good
DETAIL.....Good
TIME.....Sixty-three minutes (5 parts)

THIS is much better than Ann Pennington's recent productions. She has the same amount of pep and likable personality, but in this her work does not give the same evidence of "direction" as in her previous offerings.

The story told of a young scatter-brain girl who caused her family all kinds of trouble, and, when sent to boarding-school, broke every rule. Of course, after some of her wild escapades she was threatened with suspension, and finally asked to leave.

Upon reaching home she found her sister about to elope with a "fly by night" feller, and, having successfully busted up their plans, Ann herself eloped with Harry Ham.

Some of Ann's escapades were quite far-fetched, but, nevertheless, they will get over—which is the main thing to be considered.

There were a number of spots that will be good for laughs—one in particular, where they showed Miss Pennington gayly hopping and skipping down the veranda of a California hotel in a one-piece bathing suit, with all the old men of the hotel following at her heels. If you will point out to your fans that Miss Pennington as a peculiar habit of running about three steps and walking three and then running again, I think that this should help; because they will certainly catch it in the picture if you call it to their attention. These and many other little mannerisms of the star make this production rather pleasing as a study of Ann, the Broadway favorite.

The supporting cast was good, the work of Ormi Hawley as Miss Pennington's sister being particularly pleasing.

The Box Office Angle.

I believe that you can play this and by calling particular attention to the special points in it, dwelling particularly upon Miss Pennington's popularity as a Broadway star from Flo Ziegfield's Follies, and this year's Century show, put it over. I would mention that Miss Pennington is one of our best little dancers, and that she does a real dance in this.

STAR AS SHIRTWAIST GIRL WITH PEP WILL PLEASE

Clara Kimball Young in

SHIRLEY KAYE

Clara Kimball Young Corp.—Select Film

DIRECTOR.....Joe Kaufman
AUTHOR.....Hulbert Footner
SCENARIO BY.....Margaret Turnbull
CAMERAMAN.....Billy Marshall
AS A WHOLE.....Star's characterization as girl capable of winning business battle will please, and story has pep enough to put it over
STORY.....Comparatively obvious; yet quite interesting because it is snappy; gives star character fans will like DIRECTION.....Provided good atmosphere in well chosen exteriors and pleasing interiors, and made situations rather human
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very good; some beautiful bits
LIGHTINGS.....Generally pleasing; a few excellent effects
CAMERA WORK.....Generally good
STAR.....Quite pleasing and character registers effectively because somewhat different from her recent productions
SUPPORT.....Fawcett great; hero pleasing; others quite satisfactory
EXTERIORS.....Some very pretty
INTERIORS.....Generally good; a few somewhat setty
DETAIL.....Quite satisfactory despite convenience at times
CHARACTER OF STORY.....Should appeal to most anyone
TIME.....Fifty-seven minutes (5 parts)

I BELIEVE there are two very important points very much in favor of this production. The first is the fact that the book is well known and has been read by a large percentage of picture fans, and the second is the fact that this production presents Miss Young in the character of a lovable, capable American girl who wins out in a business battle and finishes the little romance with a clutch at the end.

There is nothing big about the situations of the story and the plot is comparatively obvious; yet I believe most fans will be very much interested in the development because of the manner in which it is handled and because of the personalities of Miss Young, George Fawcett and the hero, Corliss Giles.

Thru posing as her own companion, Miss Young, as Shirley Kaye, manages to secure some ideas from the hero which give her a clue as to how she might save her father in a big business deal. Taking this tip and using as a bait her own social prominence, she goes after the wives and daughters of the stockholders and wins from them proxies to be used in the big stockholders' meeting, where the fight is on for the railroad in which her father is interested.

Feeling that he has been deceived, the hero goes West after Mr. Fawcett, who was the chief opponent of Miss Young's father, signs a proxy for her, because, as he says, she put up a good fight. Then it only remained for Miss Young to go West and tell the hero that the railroad needed him as a general manager, with the result that hero said he'd agree to manage the railroad if she would agree to "manage" him.

In such form the story seems very slender, and it isn't big as to action; but it provides a charming character for the star, and George Fawcett as the wise old man who is opposing the star's father, lifts scores of scenes by his work. His characterization stands out from start to finish and helps decidedly in putting this over.

The hero was also very pleasing, because he looked real and played sincerely without overreaching.

Generally the atmosphere was distinctive, but a few of the interiors were a little bit setty. This was particularly true of the set in which the dance was held.

Claire Whitney had rather an important part as the daughter of Mr. Fawcett thru whom Miss Young won Mr. Fawcett over to her side. Miss Whitney played this characterization of the young lady who was anxious to secure social prominence in a very satisfactory manner.

The Box Office Angle.

While this is a comparatively slender plot, I believe that most of your fans will enjoy it and consider it good entertainment—particularly so if you will play up the fact that it is a well known novel and concentrate the attention upon the central character played by Miss Young, which is an entirely different type from what she has done in the past year or so. I believe many of your fans who are particular admirers of Miss Young will appreciate seeing her in this sort of character for a change.

George Fawcett has had a number of good parts in the films and has just recently appeared in "The Cinderella Man," soon to be released by Goldwyn. His presence is worth calling attention to. Claire Whitney is well known from her many appearances in Fox Films.

Don't say too much about the production itself, but concentrate your advertising upon the fact that this is a picturization of a successful novel presenting Miss Young as a capable, breezy American girl who fights a business battle for her father and beats his opponents at their own game. If you will play it up in that way I think this will give general satisfaction everywhere Certainly this is a very much more pleasing production than "Magda," the first film made by Miss Young with her own company.

FAIRLY INTERESTING MOVIE OF ROUTINE PROGRAM CALIBER

Belle Bennett in

BECAUSE OF A WOMAN

Triangle

DIRECTOR	Jack Conway
AUTHOR	E. Magnus Ingleton
SCENARIO BY	George Elwood Jenks
CAMERAMAN	Paul E. Eagler
AS A WHOLE	Only fairly interesting, with star as semi-vampire
STORY	The Eternal Quadruple
DIRECTION	Permitted interest to lag
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied
LIGHTINGS	Some very good; others ordinary
CAMERA WORK	Satisfactory
STAR	Pleasing
SUPPORT	Quite good, altho at times forced
EXTERIORS	Some very beautiful
INTERIORS	Good
DETAIL	Satisfactory
TIME	Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

THIS production had more or less of a surprise twist on the end, and, really, that is the only point that will register. The rest of it is just plain movie and this twist will hardly prove sufficient to redeem the early reels.

We had Belle Bennett as an innocent semi-vampire, who was looking for a good time in spite of social traditions.

Jack Livingston, because he wished to shield the father of the girl he was in love with, lost himself in the West. Later, when he was able to prove his innocence and also that of the girl's father, he returned home, and, since the girl's father had taken care of his affairs, Mr. Livingston was now a wealthy man.

In the meantime the girl had married George Chesebro, who had really committed the wrong that her father had been accused of, with Chesebro now growing tired of his wife and showing interest in Miss Bennett.

Livingston started a flirtation with Miss Bennett and of course broke up the affair with the willunous Chesebro. After a "lover's quarrel" we had the production ending with the union of Livingston and Miss Bennett as man and wife.

There were a few very good lightings in this, and the exteriors of the Southern home were truly beautiful. We had some scenes of an impending rainstorm, and they were very nicely handled and cut into the action in such a way as to strengthen the later scenes of the storm.

Mr. Chesebro as the weak-willed husband, was a bit too willunous in some of his portrayals. He scowled more than was really necessary to register his points, and marred some of his scene by over-registering his points.

Had this film been ended where it really should have been, the production would have been helped decidedly, but it was about a minute and a half too long and I'm pretty sure that your audience will be on their feet, putting on their coats and hats before the end is flashed.

In the cast were Lillian Langdon, Josef Swickard, George Pearce and Louella Maxam.

The Box Office Angle

You can probably get this by if you pay particular attention to the Southern home scenes and some of the very good lightings shown, but I would forget about the story altogether, just centering the major part of my advertising on Belle Bennett.

If you can skip this one you are certainly justified in doing so. It is not good enough that you should reach out for it.

Complete Musical Scores For All Paramount Re-Issues

Reasonable Rental

GEORGE W. BEYNON.

505 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City. Phone Murray Hill 9876

FERDINAND P. EARLE

Artist-Director

"Within the Law," "Womanhood"

"The Judgment House"

Address: 200 West 72d St., N. Y. C.

VERY ANCIENT PLOT HELPED A LITTLE BY TREATMENT

Harold Lockwood in

THE SQUARE DECEIVER

Yorke—Metro

DIRECTOR.....Fred J. Balshofer
AUTHOR.....Francis Perry Elliott
SCENARIO BY.....Fred J. Balshofer and Richard V. Spencer
CAMERAMAN.....Antonio Gaudio
AS A WHOLE.....Painfully ancient movie plot lifted a by players
STORY.....Old, old stuff of lovers wooing as poor folk, each deceiving the other DIRECTION.....Failed to provide sufficient production or characterization value to offset story weaknesses
PHOTOGRAPHY.....A few good bits but generally ordinary
LIGHTINGS.....Not many effects
CAMERA WORK.....Closeups good but some medium and long shots out of focus
STAR.....Routine hero stuff
SUPPORT.....A few good types but not exceptional
EXTERIORS.....One or two excellent; others ordinary
INTERIORS.....Acceptable; not particularly good
DETAIL.....Generally unreal
CHARACTER OF STORY.....Has no objectionable elements
TIME.....Fifty-eight minutes 5 parts)

IT is easy to understand why we have so many thousands of persons who want to be scenario writers. When they go to the theatre and see this very ancient plot material used again in a production featuring a comparatively popular star they feel that surely the producers would be anxious to get an idea from them which would be a little bit different. It's very hard to understand why companies of the standing of Metro should use such painfully old material as this.

They started this off with Mr. Lockwood as the wealthy idler, and right away pulled the shero, who takes him for a chauffeur. While Pauline Curley isn't unattractive, it seemed rather forced when Mr. Lockwood suddenly exclaimed that he had seen 'em all, but here was THE girl. Anyway, he left a perfectly good car standing in the road and drove away as her chauffeur to be loved for himself alone, and by the time they were about to be married we discovered that the shero was heiress to $100,000. She insisted that this secret be kept, and so the two were wed, each kidding the other about not having any money. How many times have you seen this basic idea for a plot?

Billy Clifford, as the uncle of the shero, and Dora Mills Adams, as Mr. Clifford's wife, provided a few laughs by some overdrawn comedy business, and if an audience comes to your house with the feeling that they are just trying to kill a little time it may be that this will sneak by. If your fans are at all critical they will want to murder you on account of the plot.

Occasionally we had some good photographic bits, but for the most part the production was ordinary. The closeups were good, but many of the medium and long shots were fuzzy and sometimes out of focus. Surely this is not in the same class with some of the recent Lockwood offerings.

In the cast were Dick L'Estrange, Kathryn Hutchinson and Betty Marvin.

The Box Office Angle.

If you want to play this because Lockwood gets you money I would be very careful to explain that it is light comedy about the millionaire who posed as a chauffeur so that you will have some sort of an alibi when they come out to kick about the story. I believe you can safely do this without killing your business, because those who want to see Lockwood will probably go see him even tho you tell 'em in advance that the story is the good old chauffeur stuff.

If you have to deliver regularly with your fans it might be good business to sidestep this one, because if you play it your fans may stay away next time you have a Lockwood offering. Surely this never at any time gets beyond the class of very ordinary movie.

HUMAN COMEDY AND PATHOS TOUCHES MAKE THIS PLEASING

Ella Hall and Zoe Rae in

MY LITTLE BOY

Bluebird

DIRECTOR.....Elsie Jane Wilson
AUTHOR.....Elliott J. Clawson
CAMERAMAN.....Stephen Rounds
AS A WHOLE.....Many laughs and a few lumps in your throat
STORY.....Great kid stuff in Christmassy atmosphere
DIRECTION.....Handled scenes beautifully; made action human PHOTOGRAPHY.....Fine
LIGHTINGS.....Great
CAMERA WORK.....Very good
STARS.....Miss Hall human, interesting and beautiful; Little Zoe delightful
SUPPORT.....Fine—especially Harry Holden
EXTERIORS.....Very fine
INTERIORS.....Good
DETAIL.....Very satisfactory
CHARACTER OF STORY.....Will hit anyone and tickle kids
TIME.....Sixty-eight minutes (5 parts)

ELSIE JANE WILSON, who directed this, is deserving of real credit, and surely this production is going to help her batting average very decidedly. She has injected lots of little bits that get over and has made this a truly worthwhile production.

The plot idea was quite simple. We had the old grouchy uncle who was made into a real human being thru a dream.

All thru the offering the audience was carried either with snickers or sobs and the people 'round me were freely using their "hankies."

The production was carried in a "Christmassy" vein to a great extent and you can book it as a Christmas production and get real money with it. It is one of the few films that I've seen recently that rings true and gets under your shirt, and I would take a shot at this and put in some good hard licks on my ad copy.

There were some beautiful lightings of nearly all the members of the cast, Gretchen Lederer having some exceptionally beautiful scenes.

Miss Hall and Little Zoe Rae as the stars were truly delightful, carrying their characterizations in a human manner that will register anywhere.

Harry Holden, playing "Joe, the Butler," stood out as one of the really big characters of the production. If your patrons are acquainted with Mr. Holden I would be sure to mention his presence here.

Others in the cast were Winter Hall and Emory Johnson.

The Box Office Angle.

If you are not on the Bluebird program I would make an effort to get this. It's worth while. It will please. It is human, with a delightful little story carried out in that vein of humor and pathos which will get to your "hardened sinners" as well as to your family folk.

I think everyone likes a child story where it is well done—and especially a Christmas child story. Get this and bill it big. It means money in your pocket.

TRULY DELIGHTFUL CHARACTERIZATIONS AND ATMOSPHERE A TREAT

Jack Pickford in

TOM SAWYER

Morosco—Paramount

DIRECTOR	William Desmond Taylor
AUTHOR	Mark Twain
SCENARIO BY	Julia Crawford Ivers
CAMERAMAN	Homer Scott
AS A WHOLE	Truly delightful human characterizations in quaint atmosphere
STORY	Immortal Mark Twain's characterizations brought to life with pleasing human touches
DIRECTION	Pleased the eye with atmosphere and gave delightful human touches that kept you smiling and chuckling all the way
PHOTOGRAPHY	Very good; some excellent effects
LIGHTINGS	Many very good bits; generally pleasing
CAMERA WORK	Excellent
STAR	Delightful; best thing he has ever done
SUPPORT	Great types; all pleasing
EXTERIORS	Very well chosen for atmosphere
INTERIORS	Very good
DETAIL	Many good touches
CHARACTER OF STORY	Will be delight to anyone; children will love it
TIME	Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

JACK PICKFORD is made forever by this opportunity to do "Tom Sawyer," because this production is going to please audiences for a long time everywhere. Certainly if anyone needed further proof of the fact that characterizations are more essential than action, this production gives it.

So far as plot is concerned, we have nothing except a few individual incidents typical of small-town life. Of course, these incidents are good, but it is the atmosphere and the characterization touches which make them great. If a producer were registering action alone this same series of incidents could have been made very tiresome, because it is the development of the little touches which makes this offering ring true and hit home.

Every one knows about Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn. The exhibitor who can't do business with this production when he is able to definitely guarantee that it has been delightfully produced should be shot at sunrise!

From start to finish we get a wonderful assortment of types, and those who don't remember the incidents such as the whitewashing of the fence and Tom's adventure as a pirate on the island in the Mississippi River will enjoy the production just as well, because the producer has developed these situations perfectly.

The atmosphere of the early days in the old town on the banks of the Mississippi has been carefully maintained, and the quaint costumes of those days adds additional interest to the production.

The star as "Tom" did the best work he has ever registered on the screen, and as "Huckleberry Finn" looked like the wild devil that "Huck" was. All of the other characters were well chosen ,and the types were such as to assist in maintaining the proper atmosphere all the way.

Possibly a lot of you remember Clara Horton, who in the old Eclair days was a little tow-head youngster doing child parts. Clara appears in this comparatively grown up, and she is certainly pleasing.

In the cast were Sid Hackathorne, Antrim Short and Edythe Chapman.

The Box Office Angle.

Here is an absolute cleanup for anyone. We have had few productions with as sure-fire entertainment value for every class of patronage. Fans everywhere and of all kinds and ages truly enjoy human stories with comedy situations that are sufficiently well done as to convince. This is such a production.

In billing this I would throw more emphasis on the title, "Tom Sawyer," and the author, MARK TWAIN, than upon Jack Pickford's name; because, while Jack has had some good things he has also had some that were only fair, and it would be better business to put this over as TOM SAWYER and let Jack make good in it so that he can be billed in the future, rather than to bill him too strong in such a way as might possibly detract a little bit from the prestige of the author and the story.

If you emphasize that this is a Lasky production of Mark Twain's wonderful story, and personally guarantee the production—which you can safely do—that surely should be sufficient to pack your house.

HAROLD LOCKWOOD

Yorke--Metro

We believe—

Collaboration between the director and photographer is essential to success in photoplay production.

Larry Trimble

Philip E. Rosen.

TABULATED PERCENTAGE REPORTS FROM EXHIBITORS

THE BATTING AVERAGES

These are the averages of the companies having 200 reports or more.

Reports		% P. P.	% B. O.	Repeat
767	FOX	73.1	70.8	106
233	MUTUAL	72.0	71.1	17
674	METRO	70.8	67.0	57
2349	TRIANGLE	70.6	65.2	434
544	VITAGRAPH	68.1	66.2	76
2628	PARAMOUNT	68.4	62.3	397
595	WORLD	67.7	61.5	49
298	BLUEBIRD	62.7	63.5	23

THE NUMBER BEFORE THE NAME OF THE FEATURE INDICATES THE NUMBER OF REPORTS RECEIVED AND TABULATED ON THAT FILM.

THE FIRST COLUMN CARRIES THE PERCENTAGE OF PLEASED PATRONS.

THE SECOND COLUMN SHOWS THE BOX OFFICE PERCENTAGE.

FIGURES IN THE THIRD COLUMN INDICATE THAT MANY REPORTED THE FILM WORTH A RETURN DATE.

All reports in this percentage tabulation have been marked on this scale:

EXCEPTIONAL	100%
EXCELLENT	80%
GOOD	60%
FAIR	40%
POOR	20%
BAD	0%

PARAMOUNT

Reports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
8	The Virginian	81	73	2
11	Wildflower	89	82	6
5	Behind the Screens	81	78
6	A Man from Mexico	87	72	2
5	The Bargain	80	74	3
7	The Crucible	92	84	3
5	The Sign of the Cross	79	85
9	Cinderella	84	91	4
5	Girl of the Golden West	79	77	2
5	The Goose Girl	95	95	4
6	David Harum	82	78	1
7	Captain Courtesy	74	59	1
5	The Woman	86	59	1
5	House of Lost Court	82	54	2
5	Stolen Goods	78	75
6	Pretty Sister Jose	84	82	2
5	Jim the Penman	64	65
7	Dawn of To-morrow	83	88	1
5	Arab	89	56	2
5	Wild Olive	82	69
6	Chimmy Fadden	91	75	1
6	Kindling	81	82
5	Kilmeny	75	73
10	Seven Sisters	84	83	1
11	Rags	91	93	5
6	The Secret Orchid	79	74
5	Nearly a Lady	65	75
6	The Marriage of Kitty	76	64
8	Helene of the North	87	81	2
6	Fatal Card	65	59
6	The Girl of Yesterday	89	88	3
7	White Pearl	71	75
7	Chorus Lady	73	63
6	The Secret Sin	69	74	1
7	Yankee Girl	52	57
6	Masqueraders	56	56
12	Carmen	82	83	4
14	Still Waters	93	90	7
9	Madame Butterfly	82	86	3
7	Mummy and Humming Bird	64	56
7	Bella Donna	92	77	4
8	Armstrong's Wife	79	65
5	Chimmie Fadden Out West	88	76	2
8	A Gentleman from Indiana	86	78
10	Prince and the Pauper	92	87	5
10	Mr. Grex from Monte Carlo	84	69	1
9	Jane	75	51
9	The Unknown	76	67	1
18	The Cheat	94	80	12
9	The Reform Candidate	80	54	1
9	The Immigrant	73	62
10	The Old Homestead	88	84	7
8	Lydia Gilmore	82	61	2
10	Temptation	82	77	2
10	The Foundling	78	76	3
6	Tongues of Men	75	53	1
8	Mice and Men	84	80	5
7	The Golden Chance	77	61	2
5	Ragamuffins	77	53
5	Call of the Cumberlands	79	64
8	The Spider	87	64	1
10	Puddin' Head Wilson	81	62	4
9	Tennessee's Pardner	65	58
8	Madame Le President	24	46
9	Nearly a King	52	49	1
13	Trail of the Lonesome Pine	75	77	3
8	Fell In Love With His Wife	63	51	1
8	Blacklist	62	52	1
10	Out of the Drifts	89	86	4
8	Diplomacy	53	56	1
14	Poor Little Peppina	88	84	8
16	To Have and To Hold	74	69	4
12	Ben Blair	72	63
10	For the Defense	68	62	1
7	The Code of Marcia Grey	64	59	2
9	The Lost Bridegroom	69	60	2
8	The Saleslady	72	62	1
15	Audrey	73	70	3
9	The Sowers	64	59
11	The Heart of Paula	71	54	1
12	The Race	69	59
8	The Eternal Grind	70	78	3
10	The Love Mask	59	54	2
10	Molly-Make-Believe	87	82	6
7	The Red Widow	62	55	2
12	The Heart of Nora Flynn	72	60	4
8	A Moment Before	52	64	1
12	David Garrick	68	46	2
9	The Innocent Lie	56	51
16	Marie Rosa	81	80	4
12	Alien Souls	69	67	1
13	The Feud Girl	60	56
16	Pasquale	78	53	3
16	Sweet Kitty Bellairs	72	62	2
20	Saints and Sinners	51	49
17	Thousand-Dollar Husband	69	62	4
22	A Gutter Magdalene	62	54	1
10	Evil Thereof	44	44
15	The Making of Maddalena	63	57	3
23	Silks and Satins	85	88	16
14	Destiny's Toy	60	51
19	The Clown	79	54	3
20	Susie Snowflakes	69	59	2
16	The World's Great Enare	73	78	4
19	The American Beauty	61	61	3
22	The Dupe	64	64	1
22	The Smugglers	53	50	1
26	The Selfish Woman	72	68	4
29	Davy Crockett	67	62
28	The Dream Girl	69	64	2
28	Under Cover	79	75	5
27	International Marriage	55	51	1
27	Common Ground	64	64	1
35	Hulda from Holland	95	94	23
30	House of Golden Windows	73	64	3
22	A Woman in the Case	72	72	3
25	Little Lady Eileen	87	89	10
23	The Stronger Love	53	52
21	Public Opinion	82	72	4
21	Rolling Stones	67	60	2
21	The Honorable Friend	65	62	1
20	Victory of Conscience	60	59	3
21	Each Pearl a Tear	71	69	2
22	The Parson of Panamint	79	70	7
15	The Big Sister	50	57
14	The Reward of Patience	65	55
15	The House of Lies	73	65	1
14	The Daughter of McGregor	56	45
18	Ashes of Embers	85	83	7
16	The Quest of Life	59	61
14	Anton, the Terrible	46	45
17	The Lash	57	55
13	The Storm	75	65	1
19	The Intrigue	81	61	2
16	Her Father's Son	74	68	2
11	Witchcraft	55	55
14	The Kiss	74	68	2
16	The Rainbow Princess	82	74	3
15	Seventeen	85	74	2
14	Miss George Washington	95	95	11
15	The Heir to the Hoorah	82	69	5
16	The Soul of Kura San	80	73	1
12	A Son of Erin	79	73	2
10	Unprotected	53	55	1
14	The Years of the Locust	49	50
12	The Plow Girl	77	63
9	The Yellow Pawn	66	57	1
9	Nanette of the Wilds	50	57	2
7	Martyrdom of Philip Strong	53	55	1
10	The Coney Island Princess	62	63	1
10	The Road to Love	72	59	1
14	Oliver Twist	85	69	6
13	The Victoria Cross	44	54	1
18	The Traveling Salesman	76	59	3
20	The Right Direction	76	61	2
21	Snow White	95	95	13
16	Redeeming Love	63	60	1
21	The Slave Market	74	70	5
13	The Evil Eye	30	44	1
19	Great Expectations	74	55	1
17	Happiness of Three Women	73	58	1
14	Betty to the Rescue	46	48
16	A Girl Like That	55	51
17	Lost and Won	59	50
20	The Golden Fetter	58	55
19	His Sweetheart	83	57	2
19	The Wax Model	67	56
19	Each To His Kind	62	60
16	Her Own People	72	52
12	The Black Wolf	35	38
17	The American Consul	53	50	1
21	The Fortunes of Fifi	67	77	2
21	On Record	61	55	2
18	Winning of Sally Temple	40	47
19	Those Without Sin	52	51	1
16	Castles For Two	52	49	1
13	Out of the Wreck	60	54
13	Sapho	74	83	3
11	Prison Without Walls	54	54
12	The Dummy	74	54
11	The Spirit of Romance	64	53
8	As Men Love	73	53
11	The Battle Imp	75	64	1
8	The Bond Between	49	39
9	A School For Husbands	49	45	1
9	The Lonesome Chap	49	44
9	Sleeping Fires	56	63	1
8	The Tides of Barnegat	49	43
9	The Cost of Hatred	42	38
11	The Valentine Girl	71	72
7	Unconquered	26	29
7	The Girl at Home	49	44
10	Heart's Desire	31	39

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
9 Sacrifice	29	13
9 The Primrose Ring	48	51
8 The Silent Partner	33	36
6 Marcellina Millions	41	30
8 Her Better Self	58	62
9 The Undying Flame	47	53
8 Freckles	69	61
6 The World Apart	46	44
5 The Roadside Impressario	46	32
7 The Heir of the Ages	34	36
6 At First Sight	55	44
8 The Highway of Hope	38	34
6 Love That Lives	70	83
5 Forbidden Paths	34	37
5 What Money Can't Buy	39	54
8 The Amazons	97	91	1
8 TheMysterious Miss Terry	84	79
6 The Law of the Land	43	49
6 The Varmint	77	65
6 Hashimura Togo	75	48
7 The Hostage	70	59
5 Exile	34	39
5 Doubled Crossed	73	76
7 Bab's Diary	94	92
5 The Call of the East	61	60

TRIANGLE

11 The Iron Strain	80	67	2
10 The Lamb	85	78	3
10 Old Heidelberg	73	64	1
12 The Coward	83	66	1
9 Martyrs of the Alamo	67	57	2
15 The Disciple	85	76	2
8 Matrimony	81	76	2
6 Sable Lorcha	59	57
7 The Golden Claw	57	69
11 Double Trouble	59	67	2
8 Alaho Oe	60	65	1
6 The Lilly and the Rose	63	66
9 Jordan Is a Hard Road	56	54
6 Winged Idol	53	52
12 The Edge of the Abyss	65	61
6 Cross Currents	49	49	1
12 Between Men	73	67	1
15 Let Katy Do It	87	63	6
6 The Corner	52	50
6 The Missing Link	52	46	1
10 The Wood Nymph	51	51	1
9 The Conquerer	74	78
10 The Price of Power	53	53
11 The Green Swamp	77	76	1
13 Acquitted	66	52
6 D'Artagnan	59	54
18 His Picture in the Papers	90	75	5
13 Honor's Altar	77	67	2
14 Betty of Greystone	71	65	2
23 Peggy	94	91	15
7 Don Quixote	57	56
9 The Last Act	79	78	1
11 Daphne and the Pirate	71	57	1
18 Hell's Hinges	93	89	11
17 The Flying Torpedo	88	80	8
14 Bullets and Brown Eyes	85	75	3
14 Martha's Vindication	79	72	2
14 Moral Fabric	75	62	1
15 Hoodoo Ann	68	65	1
15 The Raiders	79	70
14 The Habit of Happiness	92	85	5
8 Waifs	59	60	1
8 Little Meena's Romance	64	60	1
17 The Aryan	59	80	6
10 Sold for Marriage	71	72	1
17 Stepping Stones	85	75	2
10 Sunshine Dad	36	46
9 Civilization's Child	68	64	1
14 Children In the House	80	66	2
11 The Beggar of Cawnpore	61	49
19 The Good-Bad Man	90	92	4
12 The No-Good Guy	74	60	3
17 Susan Rocks the Boat	69	63
20 Not My Sister	79	77	4
18 Child of Paris Streets	76	64
22 The Primal Lure	82	76	7
8 Mr. Goode, the Samaritan	53	53
20 The Market of Vain Desire	79	64	5
22 Going Straight	77	78	3
29 The Bugle Call	93	79	8
26 Reggie Mixes In	93	80	11
16 The Sorrows of Love	66	69	1
21 An Innocent Magdalene	71	71	2
18 The Dividend	70	68	1
21 The Wild Girl of Sierras	45	53
25 An Apostle of Vengeance	88	83	4

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
18 Casey at the Bat	44	48
28 The Phantom	83	72	7
30 Flirting With Fate	87	86	11
31 The Deserter	85	69	11
26 The Little School Ma'am	74	67	2
26 The Eyr of the Night	74	58	5
19 Stranded	60	50
27 The Captive God	65	70	2
23 The Halfbreed	72	74	2
22 The Payment	81	70	3
18 The Marriage of Molly O	48	47
24 Honor Thy Name	87	73	4
22 The Devil's Needle	64	64	1
31 Shell "13"	86	69	6
26 Hell-to-Pay Austin	83	66	6
21 Lieutenant Danny, U. S. A.	79	69
16 Pillars of Society	59	56	1
23 Home	91	80	9
16 Gretchen the Greenhorn	64	62	2
21 The Patriot	79	80	6
24 The Social Secretary	89	75	8
17 The Thoroughbred	82	72	1
12 The Little Liar	70	58
19 The Wolun Woman	86	89	6
16 The Dawnmaker	58	73	3
20 Diane of the Follies	71	72	2
27 Manhattan Madness	94	92	12
22 Plain Jane	88	75	5
20 Old Folks at Home	81	64	2
17 The Jungle Child	60	61	1
15 The Rummy	67	54	1
21 The Return of Draw Egan	88	86	7
20 The Vagabond Prince	75	70	3
19 Somewhere in France	76	69	1
18 A Corner in Colleens	88	80	7
12 A Sister of Six	69	64	2
21 Fifty-Fifty	89	83	6
12 Atta Boy's Last Race	54	55
16 American Aristocracy	92	89	9
10 The Microscope Mystery	50	43
14 Honorable Algy	76	65	3
15 Jim Grimsby's Boy	67	63	3
15 The Devil's Double	91	91	7
13 The Children Pay	72	64	3
14 Children of the Feud	55	52	1
8 The Criminal	49	45
12 A Gamble In Souls	69	67	3
15 The Wharf Rat	54	55
21 The Matrimaniac	92	93	10
20 The Sin Ye Do	92	85	10
13 Heiress of Coffee Dan's	60	53	2
10 Three of Many	62	53
9 House Built Upon Sand	75	67	3
9 Nina the Flower Girl	52	53
11 The Female of the Species	72	74	2
16 Truthful Tulliver	97	93	9
12 The Weaker Sex	88	83	4
7 The Little Yank	40	52	1
11 The Bride of Hate	78	74	5
12 The Iced Bullet	60	55
16 The Americano	98	97	12
11 Chicken Casey	75	59	1
15 Jim Bludso	65	40	1
14 The Crab	83	70	5
10 Girl of the Timber Claims	41	39
16 The Fan-Fighter	74	83	10
13 The Bad Boy	71	54	2
11 The Princess of the Dark	39	41
6 Stage Struck	41	38
12 Last of the Ingrams	45	42
9 Blood Will Tell	64	61
5 A Love Sublime	47	40
8 The Little Brother	51	37	2
14 Back of the Man	90	81	5
10 Betsy's Burglar	59	54
14 The Square-Deal Man	96	95	7
11 The Dark Road	60	49	1
5 A Daughter of the Poor	57	55
9 A Woman's Awakening	61	52
9 Her Father's Keeper	54	48
9 Her Official Fathers	56	48
9 Old-Fashioned Young Man	48	47
10 Sweetheart of the Doomed	74	68	4
10 Paddy O'Hara	62	52	1
11 The Desert Man	92	91	4
9 Cheerful Givers	47	41
10 The Pinch Hitter	96	71	2
5 Hands Up	35	35
9 The Snarl	58	61
6 Happiness	59	56
6 Wild Winship's Widow	58	58
6 Soul's Triumphant	30	28

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
8 The Millionaire Vagrant	78	66
10 Wolf Lowry	91	91	1
7 The Girl Glory	71	53
7 Bawbs of Blue Ridge	38	51
8 A Hater of Men	79	63
6 American That's All	37	37
7 Love or Justice	75	69
6 Paws of the Bear	55	48
9 The Clod Hopper	86	84	1
7 The Flame of the Yukon	96	92	1
5 The Strange Transgressor	80	73
5 The Mother Instinct	48	44
7 Sudden Jim	90	86
6 The Sawdust Ring	87	60
6 Borrowed Plumage	48	53
6 In Slumberland	74	31

WORLD

7 Trilby	81	68	1
7 Camille	86	79	3
5 The Yellow Passport	82	80	2
5 Then I'll Come Back To You	76	66	1
7 The Feast of Life	61	73
7 Her Maternal Right	58	74
6 Sudden Riches	76	71
6 Tangled Fates	55	63
5 The Brother's Wife	83	74	2
10 Perils of Divorce	61	63
13 La vie de Boheme	47	50
6 The Crucial Test	53	55
7 The Weakness of Man	61	68
12 Sally In Our Alley	68	63
14 Paying the Price	70	70	1
12 Miss Petticoats	59	61
7 Woman's Way	75	74	4
13 The Summer Girl	56	57
12 Rail Rider	68	60
10 Husband and Wife	75	63	2
8 Almighty Dollar	76	72	1
13 The Velvet Paw	74	69	1
8 Friday, the Thirteenth	72	70
11 Dark Silence	77	79	2
7 The Gilded Cage	75	70
6 Hidden Scar	77	67
6 The Scarlet Oath	60	62
7 Man Who Stood Still	71	63
8 The Heart of a Hero	59	49
15 Bought and Paid For	91	91	10
10 The Madness of Helen	57	54
6 Men She Married	58	55
11 All Man	59	63	2
7 Broken Chains	50	43
12 The Rise of Susan	70	63	6
6 The World Against Him	52	43
10 Woman Alone	67	65	1
7 On Dangerous Ground	65	71
7 The Man Who Forgot	65	71	1
5 The Bondage of Fear	65	63
8 Tillie Wakes Up	79	78	1
8 The Hungry Heart	87	83	2
9 The Square Deal	66	69
3 A Girl's Folly	65	75
5 The Red Woman	49	48
5 The Family Honor	66	64
8 The Dancer's Peril	77	71	1
5 The Social Leper	65	65
5 The Page Mystery	55	57

METRO

6 Soul of a Woman	93	80	1
5 The Yellow Streak	85	64
5 Rosemary for Remembrance	68	60
5 What'll People Say?	80	84
9 The Lure of Heart's Desire	55	58
5 Her Debt of Honor	49	50
6 A Man and His Soul	83	83	2
5 A Corner In Cotton	57	56
5 The Price of Malice	66	65
6 The Soul Market	83	75	2
6 Her Great Price	80	68	1
8 The Wall Between	78	82	1
6 The Kiss of Hate	62	74
6 Half Million Bribe	69	49
8 Playing With Fire	78	75
11 The Come-Back	75	74	1
8 Snow Birds	80	77
8 A Million a Minute	72	84	1
6 His Great Triumph	49	43
10 The Scarlet Woman	73	84	1
10 Dorian's Divorce	74	68
8 Masked Rider	69	68
6 Flower of No Man's Land	58	75

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
The Purple Lady	82	63
The Eternal Question	76	83	1
The Quitter	69	73
The River of Romance	87	76	7
A Child of Destiny	53	56
The Devil at His Elbow	64	61	1
God's Half Acre	71	62	1
The Weakness of Strength	68	54
The Pretender	80	72	1
The Upheaval	57	63
The Light of Happiness	67	66	1
Mister 44	88	93	4
The Wheel of the Law	77	66	1
The Dawn of Love	66	60
The Iron Woman	44	57
Life's Shadows	66	60
In the Diplomatic Service	69	83	4
The Brand of Cowardice	65	54
The Gates of Eden	68	54
Extravagance	69	82	3
The Wager	78	64
The Sunbeam	53	51
Big Tremaine	74	82	5
The Black Butterfly	70	80	4
The Stolen Triumph	56	48
Awakening of Helena Ritchie	60	61
Fight Island	68	74	3
Vanity	61	53
The White Raven	85	81	4
A Wife by Proxy	46	41
Threads of Fate	41	34
Bridges Burned	47	62
The End of the Tour	45	44
One of Many	66	61	1
The Secret of Eve	37	66	1
The Promise	82	84	3
The Barricade	58	57
The Hidden Children	43	62
The Mortal Sin	53	58
The Waiting Soul	49	61	1
The Father's Son	67	62
The Power of Decision	51	53
A Magdalene of the Hills	53	51
God's Law and Man's	53	53
Sowers and Reapers	57	50
The Duchess of Doubt	67	64
The Haunted Pajamas	83	74
The Greatest Power	42	52
Aladdin's Other Lamp	51	50
The Slacker	98	94	2
The Soul of Magdalene	44	48

FOX

A Fool There Was	84	97	2
The Gilded Fool	68	70
Should a Mother Tell?	85	75
Two Orphans	85	87	4
Regeneration	77	72	4
The Wonderful Adventure	75	76
Sin	62	82
The Soul of Broadway	85	80	2
Broken Law	82	65	1
Galley Slave	76	75	1
Destruction	76	90	1
Serpent	92	93	1
Ruling Passion	53	59
Molly Mary Ann	52	45
Fools Revenge	45	49
Fighting Blood	74	70
Gold and the Woman	65	86	1
The Bondman	76	64	1
A Wife's Sacrifice	55	56
Blue Blood and Red	84	70	1
Slander	80	70
A Modern Thelma	59	49	1
Man of Sorrow	63	64	1
Blazing Love	70	68
The Eternal Sapho	84	87	4
Sins of Men	75	60	1
The Battle of Hearts	63	59
The Spider and the Fly	67	72	1
Hypocrisy	73	65
A Woman's Honor	69	71
East Lynne	86	85	9
Ambition	71	67
Man From Bitter Roots	82	81	2
Caprice of the Mountains	69	63	1
A Tortured Heart	68	66
The Beast	86	68	6
Under Two Flags	95	92	17
The End of the Trail	66	76
Sporting Blood	62	57	1
Little Miss Happiness	75	68	3
Dare Devil Kate	74	76	1
The Unwelcome Mother	63	66
Her Double Life	84	84	6
Where Love Leads	69	63	1
The Fires of Conscience	65	71	1
The Straight Way	67	72
The Ragged Princess	77	70	1
The War Bride's Secret	76	71	3
Romeo and Juliet	86	86	5
Love and Hate	66	60
The Mischief Maker	69	69	2
Jealousy	63	81
The Mediator	76	69	1
Sins of the Parents	86	72	3
The Battle of Life	67	62
The Vixen	62	71
The Love Thief	82	80	1
The Island of Desire	74	67	1
The Price of Silence	82	77	1
The Darling of Paris	66	73
One Touch of Sin	65	73
The New York Peacock	83	79
The Tiger Woman	73	83	2
Sister Against Sister	82	58	1
A Tale of Two Cities	93	83	4
The Blue Streak	58	60

MUTUAL

Whispering Smith	64	66
Soul Mates	69	63
Doorsteps	61	62	6
Youth's Endearing Charms	77	71	1
Judith of the Cumberlands	68	68
The Pearl of Paradise	70	74
Dulcie's Adventure	87	83	2
Faith	76	71
Miss Jackie of the Navy	87	82	1
A Dream or Two Ago	81	87
The Innocence of Lizette	85	84
The Gentle Intruder	77	78

PATHE

Excuse Me!	90	73	2
Madame X	71	91	3
New York	80	74	1
Woman's Law	68	65
Big Jim Garrity	69	55	1
Girl with the Green Eyes	65	72
Shadow of Her Past	34	81
Little Mary Sunshine	90	78	1
The Shine Girl	73	64
Shadows and Sunshine	63	78	3
Joy and the Dragon	78	71
Her New York	82	62	2
Kick In	78	71	1

BLUEBIRD

Undine	79	86	3
Crippled Hand	58	69	1
Eye of God	64	80	1
Three Godfathers	68	74	1
Shoes	71	77	3
Broken Fetters	64	56	1
The Love Girl	63	64	1
The Grasp of Greed	71	76	1
The Silent Battle	78	84
Secret of the Swamp	5	56	2
Love's Larlat	65	64	1
Bettina Loved a Soldier	65	72
Wanted—A Home	74	75
Little Eve Edgarton	58	61	1
The Girl of Lost Lake	65	60
The Unattainable	51	48
Saving a Family Name	81	68	1
Behind the Lines	62	65
A Stranger from Somewhere	69	67
The Price of Silence	87	85
The Honor of Mary Blake	58	58
Black Orchids	72	80	1
The Bugler of Algiers	80	69	1
Mutiny	60	57
Mysterious Mrs. M	78	60	1
Polly Red Head	61	68
Hell Morgan's Girl	90	88	1

RED FEATHER

Fighting for Love	69	65

GREATER VITAGRAPH

Battle Cry of Peace	96	83	5
The Juggernaut	73	73	2
The Island of Regeneration	84	83	5
Dust of Egypt	67	6	2
The Great Divide	78	74	2
Green Stockings	88	88	3
Gods of Fate	62	62
The Night Out	81	75	1
Kennedy Square	85	68	1
Hunted Woman	74	54	1
Dollars and the Woman	75	56	1
Two-Edged Sword	76	53
God's Country and Woman	81	86	4
Salvation Joan	75	60
The Law Decides	80	70	4
The Ne'er Do Well	91	93	7
The Ordeal of Elizabeth	61	59
The Suspect	80	76	2
The Destroyers	68	57	1
The Shop Girl	78	79	1
Fathers of Men	71	67
The Tarantula	78	72	3
The Daring of Dianna	61	75
The Light at Dusk	85	72	4
The Alibi	69	69
The Combat	79	81	1
The Kid	60	57
His Wife's Good Name	64	76
Through the Wall	79	64	1
The Chattel	72	83	3
Prince in a Pawnshop	64	67	1
The Blue Envelope Mystery	55	59
The Last Man	82	81	1
The Devil's Prize	49	62
The Price of Fame	40	46
Dollars and the Law	55	69
An Enemy to the King	63	65	2
Rose of the South	73	62
Whom the Gods Destroy	59	73	3
Ninety and Nine	70	69	1
Indiscretion	53	61	1
The Man of Mystery	69	64	1
My Official Wife	90	82	4
The Glory of Yolanda	72	70	3
The Girl Phillippa	66	73	3
The Carriage of Silence	70	71	3
Money Magic	55	61
Blind Justice	63	60
Arsene Lupin	67	63
Kitty Mackay	57	58	1
Intrigue	47	54
Aladdin from Broadway	62	67	1
The More Excellent Way	71	74	1
Babette	68	66
Her Secret	60	59
Capt. of Grey Horse Troop	58	63
Clover's Rebellion	68	75
The Message of the Mouse	78	78
The Stolen Treaty	66	66

K-E-S-E

Graustark	85	91	5
The Prince Chap	51	53
The Return of Eve	72	71	2
Country God Forgot	75	67
Prince of Graustark	85	85	2
The Cossack Whip	84	61
The Traunt Soul	71	74	1
Skinner's Dress Suit	95	84	2
The Heart of Texas Ryan	62	66
Filling His Own Shoes	54	76
The Man Who Was Afraid	77	69	1
Skinner's Bubble	86	75
Skinner's Baby	91	85	1

SELZNICK

The Common Law	83	90	5
The Foolish Virgin	39	69	2
War Brides	76	87	11
Panthea	81	76	4
The Argyle Case	82	71	2
The Easiest Way	88	87	2
Poppy	64	77
The Law of Compensation	74	70
Vera, the Medium	65	63	2
The Price She Paid	76	71	3

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL

20,000 Leagues Under Sea	66	81	5
The Dumb Girl of Portici	51	64
Where Are My Children?	79	84	2
The Eagle's Wings	76	71
Idle Wives	57	88	4

GOLDWYN

Polly of the Circus	93	88	1
Baby Mine	84	63

Re-ports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Re-peat
MUTUAL-CHAPLIN
5 The Fireman	73	79
5 The Floorwalker	89	90	2
5 One A. M.	63	81	1
5 The Count	88	86	8
5 The Pawnshop	73	74	2
5 Behind the Screen	89	91	5
5 The Rink	96	99	8
5 Easy Street	95	100	8
5 The Cure	94	95	8
5 The Immigrant	54	59	2
PARAMOUNT SPEC.
5 The Christian	81	78	1
7 The Eternal City	93	96	4
SERIALS
4 Patria	84	77
5 Gloria's Romance	78	83
5 Liberty	91	92
5 The Iron Claw	93	92
5 The Shielding Shadow	91	92
5 The Secret of the Submarine	73	79
5 Lass of the Lumberlands	62	63
5 The Great Secret	59	64

Re-ports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Re-peat
METRO SPEC.
14 Romeo and Juliet	78	58	3
Mc CLURE
7 Pride	41	44
8 Envy	40	57
7 Passion	31	41
9 Greed	43	49
8 Sloth	18	24
7 Wrath	31	33
7 Seventh Sin	9	25
ARTCRAFT
19 Less Than the Dust	58	75	5
20 The Pride of the Clan	74	76	8
15 The Poor Little Rich Girl	97	97	11
15 Broadway Jones	94	82	5
14 In Again—Out Again	87	88	5
14 Romance of the Red Woods	73	71	2
10 The Butcher Boy	'75	71	2
9 A Reckless Romeo	89	78	2
8 The Little American	95	95	2
11 Wild and Woolly	96	96	4
8 A Rough House	96	93	2
8 Down to Earth	91	95
7 Seven Keys to Baldpate	75	80
8 Barbary Sheep	83	73

Re-ports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Re-peat
7 Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm	100	100
5 The Man from Painted Post	98	98
6 Oh, Doctor!	82	84
SPECIAL FEATURES
6 The Christian	75	73	1
6 The Fall of a Nation	76	83	1
7 The Birth of a Nation	100	100	6
7 The Libertine	81	80	4
11 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea	66	81	5
6 The Crisis	75	67	1
13 Civilization	73	83	5
7 The Witching Hour	67	64	2
5 The End of the World	20	57
5 The Iron Hand	65	46
6 The Whirl of Life	69	84	3
5 The Melting Pot	78	53	2
7 Ramona	64	64
7 The Eternal City	93	96	4
10 The Dumb Girl of Portici	51	64
6 The Little Girl Next Door	77	88	3
8 Where Are My Children?	79	84	2
5 Alice In Wonderland	76	86	1
5 Beware of Strangers	58	69
6 Womanhood	86	84	2
7 The Barrier	94	84
5 On Trial	88	76
7 Tess of the Storm Country	88	88	2

Contrasts

WID'S has the endorsement and support of not only men like Rothapfel of Broadway but of exhibitors in the small town like Oskaloosa.

There must be a reason for this. There is.

WID'S is the only publication that gives you honest, straight from the shoulder criticisms regardless of whom or how it affects. That's why owners of over 5,000 picture theaters swear by WID'S. We want just as many more to read and depend on WID'S. With your help we can get them.

WID'S
Times Building,
New York.

CHET WITHEY
DIRECTOR
JUST COMPLETED
"NEARLY MARRIED"
By EDGAR SELWYN
STARRING MADGE KENNEDY

An Exclusive Photoplay Trade Journal.
Published Weekly.
THE CANADIAN MOVING PICTURE DIGEST
100% Circulation in Canada.
Orpheum Theatre Bldg. Montreal, P. Q.

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO

REGINALD BARKER
DIRECTING
PARALTA PLAYS
Paralta Studio, Los Angeles, Calif.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
PRODUCER

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

WILLIAM C. DOWLAN
PRODUCING METRO FEATURES
Current Release—"THE OUTSIDER"
With Emmy Wehlen.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

JACK HARVEY
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING PATHE PLAYS

ALLAN HOLUBAR
M. P. D. A.
Producing Universal Features.

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
GOLDWYN

LLOYD INGRAHAM
PRODUCER

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
M. P. D. A.
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
M. P. D. A.
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

R. H. KELLY
STUDIO MANAGER
Empire All-Star Corp. & Mutual Corp.
Glendale, L. I

HARLEY KNOLES
M. P. D. A.
FEATURES DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 D. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

JOSEPH LEVERING
DIRECTOR

O. A. C. LUND

ASHLEY MILLER
M. P. D. A.
Director—Vitagraph Studios
Brooklyn

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE DIRECTOR
FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.

WEDGWOOD NOWELL
TRIANGLE
Friars Club, N. Y. C.

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITAGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

TOM TERRISS
PRODUCER
VITAGRAPH

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
511 W. 143rd St. Audubon 1941.

JAMES VINCENT
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

BEN WILSON
DIRECTING AND STARRING
UNIVERSAL

CHESTER WITHEY
DIRECTOR

JAMES YOUNG
M. P. D. A.

WID'S IS READ NOT SKIMMED

AUTHORS

MONTE M. KATTERJOHN
Staff Author
PARALTA PLAYS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

WIDS

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Adress—Broadway Central Hotel.

IS READ
NOT SKIMMED

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM A MAGAZINE—IN FACT A SERVICE
THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM
WID'S
INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS
Always Independent Issued Every Thursday VOL. III. THURSDAY, DEC. 20, 1917. NO. 51 25 Cents a Copy $10.00 a Year
Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

Am Going On a Trip for New Angles; Daily Service Starts When I Return

Merry Christmas! Your Christmas gift to me, boys, is going to be this. I'm going to take a vacation—yes, sir, a little rest. Well, anyway, it will be a rest from reviewing, and I'm sure it will be a pleasure, because I'm going to take a trip thru the country from coast to coast to freshen my viewpoint and learn what you exhibitors have to say about conditions. I want to get your angles.

For three years now I have been working my head off, sticking pretty close to projection-rooms and New York film offices, with most of my evenings spent in work until they have come to call my office in the Times Building, "The Lighthouse on Broadway" because the light in my window is burning nearly every night, and every one else in the building seems to have a reg'lar job, which means that they don't burn the midnight Mazdas.

I believe you will all agree that I have a little change of atmosphere coming to me, and surely I will be able to do much better work when I get back in harness after this wonderful trip.

WHILE I'M AWAY.

For the next few weeks I must ask your indulgence and hope that the service will be sufficiently satisfactory to carry things along. I have arranged with two men whom I know to be capable, sincere and honest, to cover pictures for me in my absence, and I have explained carefully my methods and impressed upon these boys that, above everything else, the most essential thing for them is to be SINCERE. I believe the work will be handled in such a manner as to guide you intelligently.

NOW FOR A LITTLE NEWS.

When I return from my trip, probably along about the 15th of February, I am going to give you a new and wonderful service. I am going to issue a daily service for you and have worked out an exceptionally efficient plan whereby you will be able to file my reviews ten times better than ever before.

EFFICIENT FILING PLAN.

I am going to have things arranged so that you can file all of the reviews of any one producing or releasing company together—a plan whereby you can file together the reviews of one director or one star; you can file according to the names of the films alphabetically. Boys, this supplementary efficiency filing system which is coming to you with this daily service is real; it has been worked out after months of thought, and has been enthusiastically approved by some of our best exhibitors to whom I have explained my plan.

Daily service—that sounds interesting, doesn't it? Well, I intend to give it the best there is in me!

I'VE BEEN SOME BUSY BOY.

I'll admit that in the past I haven't been able to keep ahead of release date with many of my reviews, but there were good reasons—many of them—which it is unnecessary to explain in detail here.

Many of my best boosters who have come into New York have asked me in rather a confidential tone, "Surely you don't see all of those films yourself?" Well, boys, I do; and often it has been at great personal sacrifice. For instance, it is now 11:30 p.m. Sunday night. I left a wonderful log fire and the Missus and Bill out at Bayside to come to town to see a film, and when I get thru writing this I'm going over to the New York Theatre to catch the midnight show for you. I'll get home and in the hay about 2:30 a.m. And, say, this has happened many and many a time in the past.

Ask good old Herschel Stuart of the Old Mill in Dallas, Texas. Herschel was out to the house to dinner to-night, but he and P. C. Levy of the Fort Worth Hippodrome went to the Winter Garden while I went to see films for you fellers.

Now, I have been carefully selecting men for an organization which will make it possible for me to devote my time exclusively to reviews. I have a real Business Manager now and several men picked out to do the routine work which will greatly ease that end so far as I am concerned.

MORE ATTENTION TO BOX OFFICE ANGLE.

On my trip I hope to engage one or two particularly live, intelligent and aggressive exhibitors or advertising men to join my organization here in New York for the purpose of writing advertising helps and suggestions from the exhibitor's viewpoint, upon the productions which I review.

It is my intention to try to secure men who have made good working on the practical end of exhibition. To have these men sit with me when I review and then give you the benefit of their ideas in conjunction with my own suggestions, which in the past I have never been able to amplify as much as I would prefer to, simply because I have not had the time to give the advertising and exploitation of a film the proper amount of thought.

When I start this daily service in February I will have an organization about me which will make it possible for me to see three pictures a day personally, accompanied by the men who will give advertising suggestions, and, thru having perfected an organization that will be able to take care of all the mechanical detail of the publishing of WID'S, my review work should be much better than it has been in the past, since I will be able to concentrate upon it.

WILL SEE STUFF BEFORE RELEASE.

I also intend to arrange things so that I can see all of the productions in advance of release date and get the reviews to you so that you will know something about a production before it is presented.

TELL YOUR PALS ABOUT THIS.

There are a good many exhibitors, I'm sure, who have been considering subscriptions to WID'S and who have never actually "obeyed that impulse," as "Life" says, and forwarded a check.

Now I want all of you friends of mine, within the next six weeks, to remind these fellers who have not lined up with us, that they should do so. I can give you my word that the service following my return from this trip will be as near ideal as my personal efforts and an intelligent organization can make it.

No one knows better than I do that there have been some things not just as nearly up to the minute as they could have been in the past, and I sincerely appreciate the fact that you men who are paying for this service have never let out yelps because you realized that I was swinging a terrific burden and doing the best I could.

WID'S has reached the point where I feel that I can give you a better service, and I certainly intend to do it.

Now I'm going home for Christmas—home means Ohio—and then I'm going to swing clear around the circle, seeing just as many of you good friends as I can in six weeks. Again, Merry Christmas and a wonderful New Year to you all!

TUCKER MAKES THIN STORY DELIGHTFUL, PROVING DIRECTOR SUPREME

Mae Marsh in

THE CINDERELLA MAN

Goldwyn

DIRECTOR.....George Loane Tucker
ART DIRECTOR.....Hugo Ballin
AUTHOR.....Edward Childs Carpenter
SCENARIO BY.....George W. Hill
AS A WHOLE.....One of most delightful developments of lovable characters I have ever seen; will be big winner
STORY.....Slender thread smothered by character touches which make old idea very pleasing; continuity perfect
DIRECTION.....Kept atmosphere distinctive; made every character stand out and developed action so smoothly it was positively delightful
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Excellent; some very artistic bits
LIGHTINGS.....Very artistic and effective; kept atmosphere distinctive CAMERA WORK.....Exceptionally pleasing
STAR.....Probably most pleasing thing has ever done
SUPPORT.....Wonderful characterizations; exceptionally well-balanced; Fawcett and Moore exceptionally good
EXTERIORS.....Very good; studio exteriors excellent
INTERIORS.....Splendid; held atmosphere perfectly
DETAIL.....Many delightful bits
CHARACTER OF STORY.....A treat for anyone
TIME.....72 minutes (6 parts)

OH, man!—oh, boy!—get this—get it quick!

If you can grab it for the holidays don't let it get by.

The next man who talks to me with tears in his eyes about the fact that stories can't be found will be promptly sent to see this production. If ever there was a wonderful demonstration of what a real director can do with a painfully thin and very ancient plot, this is it.

I have talked at times about the value of character studies, the importance of making scenes real, and the fact that real characterizations and human moments will offset the absence of action. In this production Producer George Loane Tucker has taken a simple little story, familiar to every one from frequent usage, and made it truly delightful by the development of a dozen characters who acted like human beings, to such an extent that you absolutely learn to love them before the producer got to the finish.

Mae Marsh was the center of most of the action and looked better and played better than she has for a long, long time—so much so that I can't remember now of ever having seen her to better advantage. Despite this, it was far from being a picture in which everything was handed to the star; because every single character—even the butlers, the housekeeper, the private secretary, etc.—was made to stand out so beautifully that these parts really seemed important.

The story is that fine old favorite of the wealthy girl who met the poor poet and told him she was her own companion when she discovered that he didn't like wealthy people. Of course they finished in a clutch.

Now, wouldn't you say that that's about as hopeless a plot as anyone was ever handed with which to make screen entertainment in the present day? Well, just beat it and look this over and discover what a real director can do when he writes continuity that is intelligent and develops his plot in proper sequences to hold the interest by little twists and human moments.

I want to recommend this production to every student of continuity as one of the best developed productions on the screen that I have seen in a long, long time. Considering the scant material as basic plot ideas go, I think that this can serve as a real model for most any ambitious writer. There was no wasted footage; all the scenes either advanced the story or developed a character touch, and the whole thing moved so smoothly that it is a technical delight. Of course the average fan isn't worrying about plot construction, but, believe me—the average fan is going to love this film!

Tom Moore has done some beautiful work in the past few years, but I have never seen Tom to better advantage than in this. If you remember "Dollars and the Woman" you know how Tom can make you believe it when he is really playing a scene. Well, boy—he puts over several in this, that I want to say to you that if they don't get under your shirt you'd better take off that chest protector. His treatment of the scenes where he discovers the Christmas presents, his mannish acceptance of Miss Marsh's attention, the wonderful little bit where he and Miss Marsh rehearse a love scene, and, in fact, almost every bit which he registered all thru the production, not only ring true but sort uv reach inside of you and take hold.

George Fawcett, as the father of Miss Marsh, was ideal. He was one of those types very much absorbed in business, who had to be gradually won over by his daughter, and he certainly played it beautifully. If the scene where Miss Marsh gets a pup for Christmas and then allows this pup to tear up a check which her melting father has presented her with doesn't get over with your fans, then you want to walk around and inquire as to who passed the chloroform.

The title with which Mr. Tucker bridged the time and led up to the mother's death was a wonderful touch. The introduction of Tom Moore with the broken milk bottle was delightful. In fact there were so many wonderful touches that I can't begin to enumerate them here.

The three friends of the father, played by Alec. B. Francis, Dean Raymond and George Farren, were made truly lovable by Producer Tucker's treatment of these parts.

Louis Grisel, a friend of the old Eclair days, played a faithful old butler servant in a way that made this bit stand right out. As a matter of fact, the entire cast were exceptionally well chosen as to type and certainly kept beautifully to character.

Bovce Coombs was very well cast as the young man who hoped to marry Miss March because she had money, and this part was well handled, with just the right shadings to keep it from over-reaching at any time. Others who appeared were Harry Scarborough, Mrs. J. Cogan and Elizabeth Ariaans.

The Box Office Angle.

Get to this and go as far as you like in promising delightful entertainment in your billing.

Emphasize in all of your publicity and advertising the human element and the delightful character studies developed by Producer Tucker. You can safely say that this is the BEST THING MISS MARSH HAS EVER DONE—because everyone will love her and pronounce her work delightful.

Talk about Tom Moore's presence and promise a lot from George Fawcett, with the additional explanation that Producer Tucker has given one of the best balanced casts ever seen in the films.

You should make a particular fuss about this being the first film made by Mr. Tucker in this country, after several years as a producer in England, where he made "The Manxman," "The Christian," "I Believe" and many other big films, and you can amplify that statement by announcing that this is different in a way from any of these productions, since it is light comedy with some exceptional human touches of pathos and romance which make it one of the most pleasing films of many months.

Forget all about the story. Don't you dare tell anyone what it's about! Get 'em in on the strength of your personal recommendation, the drawing power of George Loane Tucker and Mae Marsh and, if you wish, tell them that "The Cinderella Man" was a play on Broadway. There is a Christmas touch developed in the film, so that it would be particularly pleasing if played immediately. But don't think for a moment that it's only a Christmas film, because I'm betting that your fans are going to rave about it no matter when you play it. I don't get wild-eyed about a film very often, and, believe me—I've rarely enjoyed anything as thoroughly as I did this!

TIRESOME, PREACHY, SADLY LACKING HUMAN NOTE; FUNNY AT TIMES

Florence Reed in

THE STRUGGLE EVERLASTING

With Milton Sills and Irving Cummings
Harry Rapf Production—State Rights

DIRECTOR.....James Kirkwood
AUTHOR.....Edwin Milton Royle
SCENARIO BY.....Bennet Musson
CAMERAMAN.....Lawrence E. Williams
AS A WHOLE.....Decidedly too long and too preachy, and lacking in the human elements necessary to make it entertainment
STORY.....Allegorical preachment which became funny because of repetition and failed to get anywhere in particular or register any new thought
DIRECTION.....Had a few good lightings, but gave only average atmosphere on the whole, and was unable to offset fearful burden of heavy preachment
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally good straight stuff, with lighting too uniform to have it distinctive, except in a few instances
LIGHTINGS.....Several beautiful bits, but generally too uniform; occasionally bad on faces of players CAMERA WORK.....Good, but not artistic
STAR.....Forceful personality and expressive face lifted tiresome situations decidedly SUPPORT.....Generally satisfactory, but allegorical characters held them down
EXTERIORS.....Some beautiful shots in prologue; practically none in rest of story
INTERIORS.....Acceptable, but didn't register as anything out of ordinary DETAIL.....Much too much at times—particularly as to shero's many lovers
CHARACTERS OF STORY.....Will not do for children or those who object to glorifying fallen woman who reforms and gets shot on the finish; religious touches and alegory can't offset objectionable detail.
TIME.....One hour and 44 minutes (8 parts)

EVERLASTING?—Yes! It did seem so. And it was rather a STRUGGLE to sit thru it!

I don't know just why anyone would want to put this sort of a thing on the screen, but certainly after they got it on they should have realized that it wasn't entertainment.

It's always difficult to put over allegorical preachment on the screen, because the screen portrays real life with real backgrounds, and people want to believe what they see as the acts of human beings rather than the characters who represent something allegorical.

I can't feel that the average film fan wants to go to any theatre and be preached at for an entire evening, particularly when the preacher fails to get anywhere and simply wades thru the old, old story of mind, body and soul, which in this instance gets down to an exposition of the many love affairs of a fallen female who shifts from one to the other with such nonchalance that it becomes funny, and then floats down to the point where the minister pulls the good old speech about the feller who ain't done no wrong should shy the first rock. Then they showed our reformed Jane in a mission where she tried to save the frail from the "slimy thing" and was shot in the struggle, which ended this particular "Struggle." That "slimy thing" label isn't one of my fool phrases, but the actual talk which they hung on one of the characters in this.

In a prologue they had a lot of very beautiful exterior shots showing the sea breaking on rocks taken from a height with action in the foreground, and this started the production off with a lot of dignity. We had the conflict between Milton Sills as Mind, Irving Cummings as Soul, and Florence Reed as Body, with Wellington Playter representing the authorities trying to take Body into court. While some of this prologue could be trimmed up without any trouble, it certainly did start the thing off rather impressively.

We figured then that they would bust into the story and give us some human characters who would act like real people and seem to be real people, but unfortunately they continued to call everyone by their nicknames all thru the production—even going to the extent of having the millionaire send a check to Miss Reed, which check was made out for $10,000 and signed "Banker." That'll be 'bout the same as a kick in the eye to the average film fan, who likes to believe what he is seeing on the screen is real. Why in the name of common sense they couldn't have called these people by regular names after having started the allegory by a prologue is more than I can understand.

To prove further how little regard the producer has for the feelings of fans who are picture-wise and like to think that what they see is sure-enough stuff, they pulled two or three letters which were printed. In the first place, Banker in sending a check to a female for ten "thou" wouldn't send a typewritten letter; but when they print this letter, instead of showing it in typewritten form, that's goin' much too far.

The general atmosphere of the production was only "fair." For the most part the scenes were lighted too uniformly, with the result that the sets didn't seem classy. There were a few bits of lighting which were excellent, the best of these being a shot which caught Miss Reed in an open doorway with side and back lighting. There were several of what the average studio gink calls "big sets." I can see no reason for their having been in except that the producer probably thought a few sech were needed to make it a big film.

The college boy stuff didn't get over, the cabaret scene served no purpose other than to introduce some diving girls' in one-piece bathing suits—which will interest some of the boys—oh, yes!—and the scene in which we saw the millionaire taking Miss Reed out to dinner and pulling a little bit of classical dancing for them alone, was about as funny as anything I've ever seen on the screen. Anyone who can prove to me that a millionaire who is married and keeping a female on the side is going to take that female out to a private dining-room and have ten or twelve dames do an æsthetic dance for their entertainment is entitled to a new hat. That isn't the average millionaire's idea of "entertaining" the one he is putting up for!

When they started with the love affairs of Miss Reed, we stood for the first one or two and remained rational, but when they pulled the third, it got a general snicker, and the fourth and fifth brought laughter from all parts of the house. It had really become funny by that time. When Miss Reed began to be religious the situations were not clearly handled, and there was something of a suggestion that the minister had become her latest lover. This is very bad stuff and will undoubtedly offend many.

Some of the titles were very bad, there being a number of them which were truly awful! As, for instance, when Miss Reed started the religious streak we found Mr. Sills saying to her: "I fear your spirituality was alcoholic." Whoever permitted that to ride should be kicked! When Miss Reed goes to the minister there is a title which says: "God has given her to me"—which is very bad, because this follows too many promiscuous love affairs by our shero, and the audience will subconsciously be thinking that she and the minister are going to get together.

The production is impossible as it stands, and it is a question as to its value after it has been reduced in footage fully one-third—as it certainly must be to be commercially possible. A film must be remarkable to carry thru an hour and forty-five minutes, and certainly this doesn't justify any such footage. The tempo was slow all the way and we didn't have the human element in sufficient prominence to justify it ever being shown in more than sixty or seventy minutes of film.

I am afraid that the producer is going to have trouble with the censors, because of the many love affairs of Miss Reed and the fact that the story never gets anywhere in its exposition of the "fallen woman" proposition, and I think this will be particularly true because Miss Reed dominates the action and makes you believe her wickedness more than anyone else makes you believe anything about the production. The star has a very expressive face and is a real personality.

Those early exteriors and the introduction of the three prominent players promised much, but the promise was never fulfilled. Mr. Sills' work was quite satisfactory, and Mr. Cummings played with satisfactory poise, but the titles and burden of the allegory kept them from really getting over any of the dramatic situations. Never at any time did any scene get to you, and it was fearfully tiresome.

There were hundreds of scenes that could have been and should have been trimmed, and I believe it would be advisable to eliminate some of the incidents entirely.

Miss Reed wore a few good gowns and was inclined to show quite a bit upon the slightest provocation. She wore a string of beads in one scene, and, since her dress was cut much lower in the back than it was in the front, she let the beads hang down her back. Possibly that will start a new fashion in Podunk if this ever gets there.

Wellington Playter as the Champion looked like one, and Albert Hall will be satisfactory as the poet, afterwards actor, to those who don't know poets or our successful Broadway actors.

E. J. Ratcliffe as the Banker was a good type and played well.

Others in the cast were Edwin N. Hoyt, Fred C. Jones, R. Hatteras, Geo. Cooper, Mildred Cheshire and Margaret Pitt.

The Box Office Angle.

I can't see this as entertainment in its present form. Possibly if the prologue is allowed to remain with the balance of the story so arranged as to make it seem more human, with the producer trusting to the intelligence of the audience to remember who is Mind, who is Body, and who is Soul, etc., there will be a chance of getting this over in much less footage.

Because of Florence Reed's success in "Chu Chin Chow," and her recent success in "The Wanderer," her name has a great deal more value than it had some months ago. Milton Sills and Irving Cummings both have many friends, and if you are in a position to promise that this is human, instead of being forced to say that it is an allegorical preachment, there may be a possibility of getting some business.

The program tells us that the author has read this play to many universities and societies in recent years, and the chances are that these folks enjoyed it very much. That doesn't make me believe that the average movie fan is going to consider it entertainment, and, unless something radical is done to it, I would surely mark it off the list.

HAROLD LOCKWOOD
Yorke--Metro

Wishing the Exhibitors and Producers the compliments of the season and success for the ensuing year.

GEORGE W. BEYNON
505 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

We believe—

Collaboration between the director and photographer is essential to success in photoplay production.

Larry Trimble
Philip E. Rosen.

THEATRIC MELLER OF ANCIENT VINTAGE FAILS TO REGISTER

Marion Davies in

RUNAWAY ROMANY

Ardsley Film—Pathe

DIRECTOR.....George W. Lederer
AUTHOR.....Marion Davies
CAMERAMAN.....H. J. Butler
AS A WHOLE....Beautiful star in painfully unconvincing meller with players camera-conscious in most of scenes
STORY.....Gypsy shero proved to be lost heiress by birthmark; Formula No. 22
DIRECTION.....Gave some pretty exteriors early, but had much meaningless footage and failed to make action convincing at any time
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied from fine straight stuff to ordinary LIGHTINGS.....Some excellent; others poor; varied decidedly
CAMERA WORK.....Not good
STAR.....Very beautiful but unable to register emotions
SUPPORT.....Seemed stilted and conscious of direction and camera
EXTERIORS.....Some very pretty; generally satisfactory
INTERIORS.....Varied from very good to poor
DETAIL.....Crude at times but acceptable
CHARACTER OF STORY.....An old favorite; inoffensive except for meller moments
TIME.....Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

WITHOUT question, Marion Davies is beautiful. She screens wonderfully, and, except for the fact that her mouth was made up too heavily in some exteriors, she registered so well that it was a joy to watch her. Unfortunately, Miss Davies failed utterly to prove any ability to act. Her attempts to register motion were rather pitiful upon several occasions—particularly one scene where she was supposed to cry. I would say, however, that Miss Davies may develop into a big screen asset with a little experience and proper opportunities. She certainly is a beauty.

The story of this was awful. According to the press sheet we must blame this on to Miss Davies, but think the principal blame should be laid on whoever agreed to produce it.

It was our old friend centered about the gypsy girl who proved to be the long lost heiress in the last reel, the only bit of camoulflage used being the introduction of a press agent who foisted an actress-adventuress onto the father of the missing heiress as his long lost daughter early in the film.

We generally have had the counterfeit present while the Raggedy Princess suffered thru many reels, but the idea of painting a birthmark on the fake claimant was new so far as I can remember.

We had some rather pretty exteriors in the early part of this, and the photography was excellent; but before the story had gone two reels it was evident that the players were all very decidedly conscious of the fact that they were being directed and photographed. Players like Matt Moore, Pedro De Cordoba and Ormi Hawley, all of whom have done capable work at times, were fearfully awkward and stilted in their actions, with the result that the scenes became plain movie meller.

De Cordoba was the wicked willun who wanted the goil, and Matt Moore was the Western representative of the millionaire who was teaching the gypsy girl to read early in the film—which indicated to us immediately that he would marry her after the clouds had cleared away and she had been acknowledged as the real heiress.

Ormi Hawley was the actress upon whom a birthmark was painted so that she might claim the fortune. Gladden James was the wiley press agent who had the big idea. Joseph Kilgour, as the millionaire father, was just as stilted and actory as any of the other members of the cast, so that the net result was that this tried-and-true "old faithful" plot moved along without at any time making a real impression.

We had a lot of meaningless scenes, and the general continuity construction was anything but excellent. It permitted of too much waste footage and the titles used to tie it together were frequently bad. In one place they had the nerve to pull this: "Destiny moves her puppets to a climax." Poor old Destiny!

When they got down toward the finish it was deemed necessary to pull some action, and they had a fight on a coastline steamer with Matt Moore rescuing shero from Willun De Cordoba; but unfortunately it seemed that the boat remained oddly deserted in the vicinity of the excitement, until after the scene had been finished, and then suddenly from every corner the mob rushed on. In one sequence they showed us what was supposed to be rather a ruff camp, into which our innocent victim wandered in search of evidence, and here we saw a rude young man go over and seat himself at Miss Davies's table. That seemed perfectly natural, but when he reached over and chucked her under the chin, I wanted to kick a hole in the floor. They don't work that way in such joints!

The Box Office Angle.

The name of this has rather a singing sound and may be interesting to many. The fact that Marion Davies is one of the beauties of "Miss 1917," which is playing the Century this year, gives you something to talk about in your advertising.

If you can afford to slip over one of these things every once in a while you can possibly do some business with this, but I must say that you are taking a chance of stretching the good will of your patrons a bit too far.

I understand that a lot of money is being spent to advertise this production. That's all well and good, and should be taken into consideration by you boys who check nothing but the box office each evening, without worrying about the future. If you are trying to hold the confidence of your patrons, watch your step!

Many an exhibitor has told me that he could afford to slip one of these things in once in a while when he does it quietly by talking a lot about everything except the production itself and possibly presents an alibi in advance, thru explaining in some way that the star is making her first appearance in pictures. I'll leave that up to you. It's purely local as to how far you can go.

ORIGINALS JACK CUNNINGHAM CONTINUITY
Staff Writer
Triangle Studios, Culver City, Calif.
ADAPTATIONS EDITORIAL

CHET WITHEY
DIRECTOR
JUST COMPLETED
"NEARLY MARRIED"
By EDGAR SELWYN
STARRING MADGE KENNEDY

UNREAL EPISODICAL OBVIOUS PLOT WITH SOME VERY GOOD SPOTS

Billie Burke in

THE LAND OF PROMISE

Famous Players—Paramount

DIRECTOR.....Joe Kaufman
AUTHOR.....W. Somerset Maugham
SCENARIO BY.....Charles E. Whittaker
CAMERAMAN.....William Marshall
AS A WHOLE.....Comparatively unconvincing, yet had some excellent moments; several characterizations held interest nicely
STORY.....Incident of clash between wife and sister-in-law very good, but other situations very hard to make convincing
DIRECTION.....Lifted "wife in name only" plot very decidedly by developing characterizations
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally excellent
LIGHTINGS.....Some excellent, generally good—without being too prominent
CAMERA WORK.....Excellent
STAR.....Nearest approach to real characterization since "Peggy"
SUPPORT.....Excellent, except Tom Meighan hardly a brute type
EXTERIORS.....Satisfactory but not exceptional
INTERIORS.....Fitted atmosphere
DETAIL.....Some very good bits; generally acceptable
CHARACTER OF STORY.....Husband's attack on wife despite agreement; deep stuff for kids
TIME.....Sixty-seven minutes (5 parts)

ALTHO this story, which is practically in three episodes, is rather unconvincing as to basic idea, a number of the situations have been registered sufficiently well to hold the interest all the way, with several characterizations decidedly worthwhile.

The plot is divided into three sections: the first showing the star disappointed in her expectations of a legacy from her mistress, who passed out in the first reel with too much detail; the second having to do with the star's experiences on her brother's Canadian ranch, where his wife rebelled against privileges being given to the star, while she was forced to work about eighteen hours a day to feed the farmhands and take care of the house. The third episode started when the domestic mixup came to a climax and Miss Burke agreed to marry Tommy Meighan, who had been working as hired man in order to escape her sister-in-law's tongue. This was one of those "married in name only" situations, and it ran along with Billie fixing up the house with cute cretonnes, etc., only to have Hubby pull the brute stuff and attack her on a dark and stormy night when the lightning flashed.

The next morning brother arrived with a check for $2,500, and Billie started away, but the husband told her that his crops had been ruined, and so she changed her mind and decided to stick around.

Unfortunately Tommy Meighan isn't my idea of the brute character that this story calls for. As soon as Tommy walks into the picture everyone will spot him as the hero, and they're all going to anticipate Miss Burke's final agreement to stay on the farm. Mr. Meighan tried hard enough to act ruff, and they handed him some real rude titles to pull, but, nevertheless, we just couldn't believe that he was that sort uv a guy.

The first episode may seem a little objectionable to some people, who will not appreciate what is supposed to be the humor of seeing some relatives sitting around like vultures waiting for an old lady to die so that they can get their money.

Jack W. Johnston, as the brother on the Canadian farm, gave an excellent performance. Mary Alden, as his wife, was perfect in her characterization, presenting the contrast to Miss Burke, and Mr. Johnston and Miss Alden lifted that portion of the film in which they appeared, very decidedly.

I believe Miss Burke came nearer to a characterization in this than she has in any of her screen work since "Peggy." She made you believe some of her scenes and kept within bounds all the time. Occasionally she was very pretty, and she slips over several little bits in a most satisfactory manner.

A number of the types—particularly the farmhands—were good, and the one comedy character slipped in to bring in a bit of relief, managed to pull several very healthy laughs.

The atmosphere on the whole was not exceptional, but the photography was excellent and no one will have any complaint as to the general surroundings. The producer has really taken an old dramatic situation (the "married in name only" thought) and, by good characterizations and the intelligent use of closeups, he has brought it out into a production that is at least interesting.

Some people may object to the prominence given to the scenes where Mr. Meighan attacked Miss Burke, but we've had so much frankness in the theatre and on the screen in recent years that this will not create anything like the stir that it would have kicked up a few years ago.

Among those who appeared were Helen Tracey, Mary Seddon, Walter McEwen, Grace von Studdiford and John Raymond.

The Box Office Angle.

If you have been able to get by with Miss Burke's recent productions it would seem to me that this should have a very good chance. It's far from being big, but there are some good moments and at times the characters put sufficient dramatic punch into the scenes to really impress. You can safely promise that Miss Burke gives the best characterization that she has registered since "Peggy," and incidentally you may say that it is an entirely different part.

It will be a very interesting angle—particularly for the women folk—to call attention to the fact that they will have an opportunity in this to see Miss Burke really perform as a housekeeper. The idea of seeing the wife of Flo Ziegfield, who runs all the big musical shows in New York, cooking ham and eggs, ironing like she knew how, and fiddling around with other housework, should appeal to many as something of a novelty.

Tommy Meighan is quite well known, and Jack Johnston has a larger following than you may know. Mary Alden's work is good enough to deserve special attention, and you can point to her as a former Griffith star, possibly referring to her work as Stoneman's housekeeper in "The Birth of a Nation."

I would concentrate my advertising upon the character played by Miss Burke and the names of the players mentioned, rather than to in any way talk about the story, because the main theme is rather old stuff.

RATHER WELL DONE MELO WITH STAR AND DRESSES

Irene Castle in

CONVICT 993

Astra—Pathe

DIRECTOR.....William Parke
AUTHOR.....Wallace C. Clifton
CAMERAMAN.....Arthur C. Miller
AS A WHOLE.....Comparatively interesting suspense melo that will get over
STORY.....Frameup that cleans up gang of crooks
DIRECTION.....Held suspense in good atmosphere
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Generally very good
LIGHTINGS.....Some good effects; one mirror light that was too evident
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR.....Had chance to wear clothes
SUPPORT.....Well chosen crook types
EXTERIORS.....Ordinary
INTERIORS.....Kept atmosphere good throughout
DETAIL.....Not clear at times but maintained suspense
CHARACTER OF STORY.....Fast enough to please kids; should not offend
TIME.....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

THIS is a good mystery-suspense melo that holds the suspense throughout, and we have the regulation crook characters that Pathe uses in their serials.

The story told of Mrs. Castle being sent "up the river" and of her subsequent escape from prison. While at prison, she became acquainted with Helene Chadwick, who was serving time there and who had been in with a gang of crooks headed by Warner Oland.

After escaping from prison Mrs. Castle furnished a beautiful home and was later seen by Miss Chadwick, who forced her to pay her blackmail and made her invite Warner Oland and some of the others in his gang to a week-end party at her home. Here Oland stole a diamond necklace and was double-crossing his former friends when the whole crew were tipped off by Mrs. Castle.

Altho this didn't seem real at any time, it carried the atmosphere in which it started, and I believe will prove very pleasing to most of your patrons if they care at all for mystery melo.

We had one rather funny incident in this, it being where Harry Benham carried Mrs. Castle, who had twisted her ankle, across the pavement to her waiting car in the business section of the city. For such a distance as this—12 or 15 feet—a man would hardly carry a lady, and, more naturally, would have simply helped her to limp to the car in a busy thoroughfare.

The cast on the whole was very good. Warner Oland, Helene Chadwick and Paul Everton were especially good in their characterizations. Harry Benham, as the millionaire clubman, had a pleasing part, but practically all he had to do was wait around for the clutch.

Others who appeared were J. H. Gilmour, Bert Starkey and Ethyle Cooke.

The Box Office Angle.

This is good stuff for a short run, particularly if your folks like melo. I don't think it would stand up under a week run. Mrs. Castle has the burden of the work and acquits herself quite creditably. Her name and her clothes mean money at the B. O. if you feature them properly.

MURDER STORY WITH DIFFERENT ATMOSPHERE DECIDEDLY SPOTTY

Geraldine Farrar in

THE DEVIL STONE

Artcraft

DIRECTOR.....Cecil B. De Mille
AUTHOR.....Jeanie Macpherson
SCENARIO BY.....Beatrice C. De Mille and Leighton Osmun
ART DIRECTOR.....Wilfred Buckland
CAMERAMAN.....Alvin Wyckoff
AS A WHOLE.....Murder mystery with interesting trimmings; unreal and theatric, but will get over
STORY.....Started slow, picked up thru murder, but slumped at end
DIRECTION.....Was rather spotty, with some atmosphere fine and some ordinary; closeups helped situations decidedly
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied from excellent to ordinary
LIGHTINGS.....Some very fine; some too uniform
CAMERA WORK.....Generally good; doubles excellent
STAR.....Interesting personality; played satisfactorily
SUPPORT.....Marshall excellent; Reed pleasing; Bosworth impressive; other good types
EXTERIORS.....Beautiful water shots at first
INTERIORS.....Some very good; others cheapened by lighting
DETAIL.....Some excellent bits; legend remained rather hazy
CHARACTER OF STORY.....Will hardly offend, despite wife murdering husband
TIME.....Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

THIS was rather an odd combination of a modern murder story, a study in characterization and an attempt to present a legend having to do with a wonderful emerald. The prologue showed Farrar as a queen in the time of the Druids who took what was called the Devil Stone from an old monk and had him shoved from a high cliff after he had pronounced a terrible curse upon her.

Then we came to the modern story, where Farrar was a fisher woman who found the Devil Stone, which was coveted by Tully Marshall, the crafty old owner of the fisheries. He married her to get it and took her to New York.

There were some delightful bits introduced developing Mr. Marshall's characterization, which proved him to be a stingy old gink. Wally Reid was introduced about now as the prospective hero, and after Mr. Marshall had stolen the emerald from his wife and then tried to get a divorce from her, we found a quarrel between Mr. Reid and Mr. Marshall pulled for the purpose of implicating Mr. Reid in the murder that was to come, and then we had it.

Jerry hit Tully over the head with a candlestick, and the coroner tried to hang it onto Wallie. A gink who had secured a light from our hero as he left the house after the quarrel proved an alibi for Wally, and the case remained a mystery until Hobart Bosworth, the famous detective, got busy and after a few microscope investigations decided that Farrar, who had now become Wally's wife, was the guilty goil. He did a little "third degree" work and proved his case, but granted the lady a month's leave of absence, in which time she took the emerald back home and presented it to the priest, who, according to the double exposure, was the same gink from whom Farrar, the queen in the prologue, had taken it; and then when Jerry returned to America, kind-hearted Hobart said that he had realized that she had killed the crafty old Tully in self-defense, and so they faded out on a voluptuous clutch.

To be sure, we did get some interesting atmosphere in this, and I must say that the general effect is that they have presented something that seems a little different. Nevertheless, you get an impression that is a bit jumbled; the situations never seem real, and, while I feel that the average audience will say "all right," no one will ever enthuse over this or recommend it. It lacks the human note.

The first of the film was pretty flat, until Tully Marshall blew in, and I must say that that artist's characterization, which was beautifully done, lifted it decidedly, with the effect that the production seemed very interesting and comparatively human because of the little touches until they killed Miser Marshall.

Hobart Bosworth's work and that of Mr. Reed and Mme. Farrar was good in the last part of the film, and we had some effective lightings and good closeups, but the story was thru and so the remaining scenes didn't hold particularly well.

The early scenes and the few long shots in the home of Mr. Reed after he was married were rather poor because of lighting which was entirely too uniform. Generally, the lighting was distinctive and artistic, and the camera work was very good, because a number of double exposures were handled beautifully.

A black cat was introduced once or twice rather effectively, and several good types were flashed.

The Box Office Angle.

I believe that Geraldine Farrar's name is still good for money at the box office, and your fans may be rather interested in this simply because it is a modern murder mystery rather than a spectacle. I am sure that they will like the work of Tully Marshall and Hobart Bosworth, and mention of these three should mean additional business.

In billing this I would stay away from the thought that the Devil Stone was any mystery jewel, and it would seem advisable to me to forget the part referring to the legend. Call it a detective mystery story and promise that it is unusual as to atmosphere. I'd refer particularly to Mr. Marshall's presence, calling attention to some of the excellent characterizations he has put over in the past. If your fans are interested in freak advertising you might say: "What would you do if you married a multi-millionaire and he refused to allow you to eat eggs because they cost too much? See Geraldine Farrar in 'The Devil Stone.'"

PLEASING PERSONALITIES CARRY LIGHT COMEDY

Carmel Myers and Kenneth Harlan in

MY UNMARRIED WIFE

Bluebird

DIRECTOR	George A. Siegmann
AUTHOR	Frank R. Adams
SCENARIO BY	Doris Schroeder
CAMERAMAN	Roy H. Klaffki
AS A WHOLE	Entertaining comedy after rather slow introduction
STORY	Heroine marries blind man and later wins his love
DIRECTION	Played for comedy and got over
PHOTOGRAPHY	Good, but generally straight stuff
LIGHTINGS	Helped Miss Myers
CAMERA WORK	Acceptable
STARS	She, had likable part and made most of it; he, acceptable
SUPPORT	Suitable but not exceptional
EXTERIORS	Very few
INTERIORS	Suitable
DETAIL	Good
CHARACTER OF STORY	Inoffensive
TIME	Sixty-one minutes (5 parts)

CARMEL MYERS and Kenneth Harlan, who are starred in this, work together with rather pleasing results. It is a question whether their names are sufficient to carry the production, but their recent work in several Bluebirds has been good enough to make them many friends. They have certainly made this an acceptable light production.

In the first few scenes showing Miss Myers as a doctor's assistant, she seemed to be quite camera-conscious and at times she overreached, but later she overcame this tendency and was quite pleasing when made up as an Italian-American working as a servant for Mr. Harlan.

We had the old situation of hero losing his eyesight and marrying the girl while blind, and then, after hero had regained his vision, he was not aware of the fact that the girl who came to his apartment and started to work for him was his wife. He had married Miss Myers simply to help her out of a jam, and never expected to see her again.

Of course, love was developed between this couple, which ended as everybody anticipated two or three reels ahead of time.

We had a number of good comedy touches where Miss Myers had the part of an Italian servant, and I believe that you can play this up in your ads to splendid advantage.

The lightings for Miss Myers were often excellent, and this gave the production considerable class.

Mr. Harlan did not have a lot to do, but he played with poise and repose. He was very forceful and human.

The supporting cast was good but not exceptional. Among those who appeared were Marc Fenton, Beatrice Van, Jack Hutchinson and Patrick Calhoun.

The Box Office Angle

This should prove rather a pleasing offering, and I believe your patrons will enjoy it on account of the very good character work done by Miss Myers as the Italian-American.

I would forget about the plot, but make the fans understand that it is comedy and pleasing light entertainment.

If you have played any Bluebirds in the past wherein Mr. Harlan or Miss Myers appeared and have been able to do well with them, you may take this and bill it as a light comedy production and feel sure that it will please.

SEND "WID'S"

AS A XMAS GIFT TO ANY EXHIBITOR FRIEND, AND SEE HOW GRATEFUL HE WILL BE.

TOO MUCH ACTION, CUT TOO FAST AND POOR LIGHTINGS SPOIL THIS

Florence Deshon and Ruby De Remer in

THE AUCTION BLOCK

Rex Beach Pictures Corp.—Goldwyn

DIRECTOR.....Larry Trimble
AUTHOR.....Rex Beach
CAMERAMAN.....Davide Calcagni
AS A WHOLE.....Barrels of action, much too much, in atmosphere that gave impression of being cheap because of lighting; became tiresome because of numberless incidents
STORY.....Tried to put entire novel on screen, instead of picking best sequences, with disastrous results
DIRECTION.....Played for action instead of characterization, with result action lost value and failed to make atmosphere impressive or distinctive PHOTOGRAPHY.....Some good straight stuff and a few excellent lightings, but scores of scenes marred by bad lighting
LIGHTINGS.....A few beautiful bits, but generally too uniform and frequently very bad
CAMERA WORK..Satisfactory, considering bad lighting
STARS.....Both very pleasing, but smothered by deluge of action
SUPPORT.....Joyner very good, Tom Powers pleasing, with some good types
EXTERIORS.....Satisfactory, not particularly good
INTERIORS.....Many cheapened by bad lighting; some big sets, but none of it particularly distinctive or artistic
DETAIL.....Ten times too much
CHARACTER OF STORY...Too many N. Y. tenderloin incidents for family consumption
TIME.....One hour and 35 minutes (8 parts)

IT seemed that this was finished about ten times before they flashed "The End," and each time that I was ready to reach for my hat they started over with another sequence.

Someone, in preparing this for the screen, attempted to present everything that Rex Beach had in his novel, with results that are somewhat terrifying when one considers the money wasted. In an attempt to get it down to reasonable footage the individual flashes have been cut so short that the thing moves very fast—in fact, too fast—most of the way, with so much happening that it becomes decidedly wearisome.

If many of the scenes that are entirely unnecessary and some of the sequences were lifted out bodily this could be brought down to a feature of reasonable commercial length, which would have enough snap and action to carry it as entertaining melodrama of the gay life of New York's "Tenderloin." In its present form we have so many characters and so many incidents that are more or less divorced from one another that the impression created is that of seeing a very jumpy and sadly un-entertaining series of meller happenings. They give us a little bit of everything. They have blackmail, murder, ruining of goils, raiding of gambling dens, numerous gay and naughty (and rather vulgar) parties, until we almost lose the characters in the mad whirl of events.

Unfortunately someone erred terribly in the arrangement of the lightings. Numerous sets, that could have been made quite impressive and rather classy and distinctive, had they been intelligently lighted, were made to appear objectionably cheap because of halation on the walls which brought out the defects in the material used. This was inexcusable. There were also many of the larger sets which suffered decidedly from the fact that the lighting was too uniform. Occasionally we had some very good lighting, but it was surely "occasionally."

The story for the most part was centered upon two girls and their careers in the caldron of Broadway. One was the daughter of a hunky in the steel mills who had gone to his death at the order of the mill manager, and she was in the city to revenge her father. You have heard of her before. The other was the innocent country miss whose brother, a wicked wun who read the "Police Gazette," got her a job in a Broadway chorus, where they showed us a manager who had a habit of making the girls strip in order to prove to him that they had a right to take a place among his beauties. Of course, if they showed this, it might have made it possible to use their production in a black tent such as generally accompanies a circus, but they only showed us the manager seated in a very muchly carved chair, looking offstage with a very critical eye, from which direction the young lady's arm comes into the picture handing over the dressing gown which she had worn as she made her exit from the screen where she had presumably disrobed.

There was the son of the wealthy man who couldn't get along in the world because he tried to drink all the booze, and of course he had to eventually marry the innocent thing from the country, who, at the instigation of the hunky's daughter, now wise to city ways, had married him while he was under the influence.

After father disowned the boy, and it looked like he might starve for a while, he finally got a job bringing his friends to a tailor on a 10 per cent basis. I can't feel that this is a very "heroic" job for a hero, but nevertheless there it is.

During the progress of all this, which took many reels of action that was for the most part in very short flashes, we found the hunky's daughter with the gink who had caused her father's death keeping her. We had a little blackmail episode, and then the hunky's daughter killed the guy against whom she had been seeking vengeance, and he, like a good sport, said he'd call it a suicide.

They now proceeded thru considerable footage to devote a great deal of time to framing an explanation about this suicide, with no one making any attempt whatever to save the wounded man's life. He himself calmly and nonchalantly fussed around trying to frame up the right kind of a story without even calling for a doctor.

Francis Joyner, who appeared early as an eccentric critic, drifted into the last of the story for some rather good scenes, and, really, he was about the only character in the entire production that seemed genuine and real. His work was quite pleasing.

Ruby De Remer would have had a much better chance if she hadn't been so sadly handicapped by the avalanche of action.

The late Walter Hitchcock gave a very good performance as the mill owner who had caused the death of Miss Deshon's father, and there were a number of good types, but the unreality and speed of the action kept any of the players from registering in a truly satisfactory manner.

You will recognize the names of many capable players in the following cast: Dorothy Wheeler, Ned Burton, Charles Graham, Bernard Randall, Peter Lang, Florence Johns, Alec B. Francis, George Cooper and Tom Powers.

The Box Office Angle.

In its present form I believe that this is a very poor bet. It is entirely too long, entirely too fast, has entirely too much action and too little characterization, and certainly too much plot. There is so much meller that it becomes monotonous, and there are so many bad bits of lighting that the general impression of the atmosphere is a very unfavorable one.

It may be that the producer felt that he should transfer all of the novel to the screen, but I'm sure that the average person who has read the story would have been perfectly satisfied to have some of it told in titles, with a little more attention given to characterization in the sequences screened, instead of making it rapid-fire meller of kaleidoscopic changes.

While the cast is rather well balanced as to type and comparatively well handled, there is no one name big enough to pull business at the box office, and I doubt very much the drawing power of the author's name alone. Many felt that the success of "The Spoilers" was due to the fact that it was written by Rex Beach, but I believe that subsequent productions have demonstrated to a certain extent that the success of the picture is generally due in the long run to the merit of the picture. exclusive of the acknowledged drawing power of stars and a very limited number of directors.

If you value the good will of your patrons, forget this in its present form. It surely is not worth an hour and thirty-five minutes on anyone's screen. If your patrons like the mellerdramatic stuff, particularly if there is a chance to make a fuss about the Broadway Redlight scenes, you may get some money with this, but I question the advisability of playing this up, because I can't feel that it will please.

ETERNAL TRIANGLE WITH SOME XMAS SCENES MIXED IN

Priscilla Dean in

BELOVED JIM

Bluebird

DIRECTOR	Stuart Paton
AUTHOR	Joseph W. Girard
CAMERAMAN	Duke Hayward
AS A WHOLE	Good Xmas touches mixed in with mediocre plot
STORY	Former escapade mixed up happy married life
DIRECTION	Broke thread of story at times
PHOTOGRAPHY	Fine
LIGHTINGS	Usually very fine but a few better on sets than on faces
CAMERA WORK	Very good
STAR	Good, but lost sympathy at times
SUPPORT	Acceptable
EXTERIORS	Very good
INTERIORS	Well lighted and quite acceptable
DETAIL	Helped very much
CHARACTER OF STORY	Good and bad spots mixed
TIME	Fifty minutes (5 parts)

THIS production stars Priscilla Dean, but her part was overshadowed by that of Harry Carter as "Beloved Jim," who made his characterization effective even though he did overreach at times.

The story told of Mr. Carter as a lovable bachelor who married Miss Dean, only to have his nephew, whom he had trusted implicitly, come in and break up his home.

After the first heat of the situation had died down, Carter decided to hear his wife's evidence and made his nephew tell the true state of affairs prior to his marriage. Of course, this exonerated Miss Dean and the nephew was sent out into the cold, cold world.

This was kept in rather a good atmosphere with the use of well chosen locations and impressive sets, and the photography and lightings at times were excellent. In a few spots the lightings were better on the sets than on the faces, but there were not enough of these to mar the general atmosphere.

Mr. Carter picked up an old bum on Christmas Eve and took him to his home, where the next morning we get some comedy out of the situation of the bum taking a bath. This and the bits showing the children's Christmas were practically the only light moments in the entire production, and toward the end the action became very heavy.

To my mind, this would not be the proper sort of a production to offer your patrons at a time when you would like your house to impart the Christmas spirit.

There was one spot where Miss Dean tried to get into a room with a door that was apparently locked, and then, five minutes later we saw Mr. Carter's secretary deliberately open the door without the slightest resistance or trouble and enter the room.

The supporting cast was well chosen, and the children used were quite satisfactory except that we were given no close-ups. We did not feel the intimate touch that would have put these scenes over more effectively.

A false suspense was created in this that I believe will hurt the production to some extent. We found that the director permitted the audience to think that Miss Dean had committed quite an offense against society, and at the end when the blow-up came we found that nothing wrong had been done at all. I believe that most audiences will feel that they have been tricked into an "inconsequential suspense" situation and regard it resentfully.

There was a big white greyhound shown in this which certainly added much to the general production.

In the cast were Sydney Deane, Frank Deshon, Charles Hill Mailes, Joseph W. Girard, J. Morris Foster, Mrs. A. E. Witting and Ed Brown.

The Box Office Angle

If you are on the program for this I believe you might play it without friction, but surely it lacks the "Christmassy" air that we all like to feel at this time of the year.

If you are not on the program forget it, since the plot contains the old "eternal triangle" element which weakens the production very decidedly. It certainly does detract from the spirit in which the offering started.

There were several scenes showing chimes ringing, and the scenes of snow-laden landscapes that followed were truly beautiful; but I don't believe that the production has sufficient appeal to get over.

I doubt very much if Priscilla Dean has any decided following over the country, and surely her work in this is not sufficiently distinctive to warrant your calling special attention to it.

AT LIBERTY?

WHY NOT LET DIRECTORS AND PRODUCERS KNOW IT THRU "WID'S"

COINCIDENCE STORY HELPED BY PLAYERS' PERSONALITIES

Margery Wilson and Walt Whitman in

WITHOUT HONOR

Triangle

DIRECTOR.....E. Mason Hopper
AUTHOR.....Charles Gardner Sullivan
SCENARIO BY.....George Elwood Jenks
CAMERAMAN.....Charles Stumar
AS A WHOLE.....Drama with some good spots, dealing with weak-willed bigamist
STORY.....Rather convenient, but helped by characters
DIRECTION.....Kept atmosphere interesting
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Varied, but generally good
LIGHTINGS.....Bits of star beautiful
CAMERA WORK.....Acceptable
STARS.....He, good as small-town deacon; she, very sympathetic and pretty
SUPPORT.....Very good
EXTERIORS.....Kept in good atmosphere
INTERIORS.....Suitable
DETAIL.....Satisfactory
CHARACTER OF STORY.....May offend some
TIME.....Fifty-five minutes (5 parts)

THE one point in this production that stands out more than anything else is the fact that there are an unusually large number of "Fate" or "coincidence" happenings, which caused it to fall quite a little below what a good picture should be.

We saw Walt Whitman, whose narrow ideas of Christianity drove his son from his home, leaving his wife to seek his fortune in another city. Here he met Margery Wilson, who was engaged in the same business as the son, and later they were married, which made a bigamist of the son.

After the birth of their child Walt Whitman with a sheriff came to prosecute the son, and this was forestalled by Miss Wilson's statement that they had never been married.

Mr. Whitman took his son home, where a little later he was killed, and then we had Miss Wilson coming to the same town to work. Here, finally, a former suitor of Miss Wilson came to the rescue and proved to Whitman that his theories were anything but right.

There were several points in this that will get over, the principal one being the small-town atmosphere that was carried nicely throughout the production.

Some of the locations used here were decidedly good. The interior sets were acceptable for a small-town production, and of course were not elaborate.

Miss Wilson had a very likable character, and the lightings made her appear truly beautiful. She is a remarkably clever girl.

Arthur Moon, as "Breeze" Ballard, the star salesman of the hardware company, carried his part nicely, being a "peppy," talky road man such as we very often meet making the small towns in this country. The bit where he gave the weak-willed son a Bromo Seltzer to straighten him out will get over big with most of your fans, since many of 'em will recall similar experiences.

In the supporting cast were Laura Sears, Ann Dodge, Walter Edwards and Darrel Foss.

The Box Office Angle.

This isn't a big enough production to draw any tremendous amount of patronage to your house, but I do believe it will go over without many kicks. If you are on the program for it, I think you can feel safe, but I would not bill it heavily, since there is nothing of exceptional interest outside of the small-town atmosphere presented. There were so many coincidences and the way of getting the weak-willed bigamist husband out of the way didn't register as honest-to-goodness plot material. C. Gardner must have written this in a hurry. I wouldn't go after this if I didn't have to take it. It will please the non-critical and get by. That's about all.

CHARACTERIZATION HELPS RATHER OBVIOUS PLOT

Roy Stewart in

THE LEARNIN' OF JIM BENTON

Triangle

DIRECTOR.....Clifford Smith
AUTHOR.....Alvin Nietz
CAMERAMAN.....Cap Crane
AS A WHOLE.....Better than the usual Stewart production; kept in interesting characterization rather than melo
STORY.....An execution pardoned at the last minute
DIRECTION.....Helped make old plot interesting by treatment
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Very good
LIGHTINGS.....Some fine
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STAR.....Played with more poise and repose than in former productions
SUPPORT.....Very good
INTERIORS.....Good
DETAIL.....Slipped at times
CHARACTER OF STORY.....Will not offend
TIME.....Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

THIS production was rather pleasing as a whole, but the director has allowed us to guess the plot two or three jumps ahead of the story and has held practically no suspense for that reason.

We had Roy Stewart as a Western ranch owner who had little education. He found Fritzi Ridgeway, who had been lost, camping on his ranch, and Stewart had her come to the ranch house and start a school for his cowpunchers.

Later the sheep men in that locality built a dam across the stream which had watered Stewart's cattle, thus causing him to suffer heavy losses. He immediately got his men together and attacked the dam, finally blowing it up.

In this fight a man was killed and Stewart was indicted as the murderer. Of course good old "Gov" arrived at the last moment and pardoned him.

There were many good touches in this, such as the by-play betwen Stewart and Miss Ridgeway at their first meeting, and one point that I think will get over most any place was that where the half-breed Mexican tried to comb his hair with a curry comb. He did it, but left most of the hair in his comb.

The titles generally were very good. One that stuck in my mind especially was this: "Dawn's Perfume." This title was followed by a closeup of a skillet with some frying bacon.

One point that will get a good laugh from the wide-awake wuns was where the soldiers were sent by the governor to the county seat, where Jim Benton was to be hanged, and, altho these soldiers were garbed in present-day National Guard uniforms, they all carried guns and bayonets of the Civil War vintage. I couldn't see any need for this bad piece of business, because they certainly should have been able to get enough guns for thirty or forty men. Nevertheless, they DIDN'T get them, and it showed up in the picture as a rather bad slip in detail.

Roy Stewart had a very likable character and I believe this is the best characterization he has had recently.

Miss Ridgeway as the girl was quite good looking, and she made her part stand out.

Edwin J. Brady, as the willunous sheep man, William Ellingford, as the sheriff, and Harry Rattenberry, as the governor, were all good types and played convincingly.

The Box Office Angle.

I believe that this is the best Stewart picture that Triangle has shown recently, and that you should be able to take it and bill it as an interesting "Western" that doesn't contain the ordinary routine Western hokum meller. Your patrons will all be a jump or two ahead of the story and will anticipate most of the happenings, but the work of the different characters has been carried in a human, convincing manner that will certainly do much to overcome the other weaknesses of the production.

If your patrons like Roy Stewart and are fond of "Westerns," then you can bill this as a human characterization by Mr. Stewart, carried in an atmosphere that convinces. I would center all of my advertising on Stewart and let it go at that.

MARRIAGE FOR PURPOSE PLOT SHOWS STAR MORE PEPPY THAN USUAL

Ethel Barrymore in

THE AMERICAN WIDOW

Rolfe—Metro

DIRECTOR	Frank Reicker
AUTHOR	Kellett W. Chambers
SCENARIO BY	Albert Shelby Le Vino
CAMERAMAN	George Webber
AS A WHOLE	Light comedy, but very unreal and not terribly funny
STORY	One of those "marriage for a purpose" things with farce twists
DIRECTION	Kept it fairly interesting with average production values
PHOTOGRAPHY	Generally good, but not distinctive
LIGHTINGS	Frequently too uniform, but satisfactory
CAMERA WORK	Acceptable
STAR	Had more pep and was generally more pleasing than usual
SUPPORT	Quite satisfactory—altho characters unreal
EXTERIORS	Acceptable—not particularly artistic
INTERIORS	Satisfactory; not distinctive
DETAIL	Slips probably excused because of farcical twists
CHARACTER OF STORY	Some may object to lightness with which marriage is regarded, altho farce should excuse this
TIME	Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

THIS will probably be called light comedy, and surely it is light, but not particularly comic.

The plot was one of those "get a husband for convenience" things with a few farcical twists, and the customary ending of having the convenient husband prove to be the right one so far as Dan Cupid was concerned.

Altho we have been accustomed to seeing Miss Barrymore in more serious things, and this starts off with her in a very unsympathetic character, because she is shown as an American widow dickering for a title, with the possibility that this may antagonize the audience a bit—I believe that they will soon see that the picture is intended as comedy, and consequently accept the plot without giving it serious consideration.

Certainly Miss Barrymore is more genuinely pleasing in this than she has been in anything in some time, because she plays with some pep and enough smiles to present her as a cheerful personality instead of the long-suffering shero of repressed emotions.

Upon being advised that her husband had left a codicil to his will which stated that if her second husband was not an American she would forfeit her fortune to another, Miss Barrymore promptly arranged to secure an American to act as her second husband, with a divorce to follow, so that she could afterwards marry the English earl without difficulty. As soon as they pulled Irving Cummings on us as the gink who was to be the second husband, the story was over—because even the shop-girl will know that Irv's going to make her love him.

Of course complications arose due to the fact that the vampire hired as co-respondent by Irv wanted to act her part in front of the shero, with the result that we had our well-known misunderstanding, but this was eventually straightened out by conveniently sending all of the characters to the house of Miss Barrymore's guardian up in the country, where they spent a night.

Just to make it more intrickut, we discovered at the finish that the codicil was a forgery, with our old friend the watermark on the paper putting in an appearance. The codicil was dated 1914, and the paper watermarked 1917. This was used to kill off the willun, who had threatened to bring the hero and shero into court for conspiracy to defraud the estate by their marriage of convenience.

An attempt was made to lighten this by comedy titles, and some of them succeeded. Others fell flat. We saw our marriage of convenience performed by a minister who kept insisting that he wanted to go to a ball game, with the result that they had to strap him in a chair in order to hold him. They tried to cover the license-need by a title, telling the minister to bring the license with him, which would have been rather a difficult thing for him to do, since he didn't know the name of the prospective bridegroom, according to the action. If they were going to slip on the license thing, it would have been better to have said nothing about it.

The hero, who was a playwright, afterwards introduced this "marriage under rather unusual circumstances" into his play, which became a success. In other words, the author gave himself credit on the screen with having had a successful idea. That's like carrying your own audience.

Since Miss Barrymore is rather pleasing in this and some of the situations gather a few laughs, I have a hunch that it will be fairly acceptable to the average fan who is more or less accustomed in these days to seeing pretty ordinary stuff as the regular routine.

The Box Office Angle.

It may be if you will make it clear that this is comedy, that that fact may pull you quite a bit of business. You might emphasize that Miss Barrymore decided that she wanted to get away from the "depressing sheroes" that had recently been handed to her, and had decided upon this story, which is light comedy with a suggestion of farce, and find that your fans will welcome the switch.

Irving Cummings is pretty well known and rather well liked all over the country. He is a pleasing hero, altho he has very little to do except stick around.

I would be very careful not to promise anything in particular about the production—because it is only fairly well done and I wouldn't be too extravagant in my statements as to how funny it is.

In advertising this you might use this line: "What would you do for $50,000? See Ethel Barrymore in 'The American Widow.'" "Did you ever see yourself as others see you? See Ethel Barrymore in 'The American Widow' when Irving Cummings has a chance to show her how their marriage looked to him."

MAY GET BY, BUT MISSES FIRE GENERALLY

Margarita Fischer in

MISS JACKIE OF THE ARMY

American—Mutual

DIRECTOR	Lloyd Ingraham
AUTHORS	Beatrice Van and William Parker
SCENARIO BY	Chester Blinn Clapp
CAMERAMAN	Frank J. Urson
AS A WHOLE	Too long! never impressed or seemed real
STORY	Very slim; army officer who sold military secrets
DIRECTION	Allowed too much superfluous action and kept action from being human
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied decidedly
LIGHTINGS	Beautifully carried out
CAMERA WORK	Used same angle too often
STAR	Not photographed to advantage and tried too hard to be cute
SUPPORT	Did not help production
EXTERIORS	Some good locations
INTERIORS	Helped production
DETAIL	Editing would have helped
CHARACTER OF STORY	Inoffensive
TIME	Sixty minutes (5 parts)

MARGARITA FISCHER was not handled nearly so well in this as she has been in some of her previous productions, and her lightings left much to be desired, altho there were some beautiful atmosphere lightings.

She was presented as the daughter of an American army officer who was loved by all the officers and men at the post where her father was stationed. She was especially sought by the hero, Jack Mower, and the willun, L. C. Shumway, who were helping Miss Fischer's father on some rather important military work.

Of course the willun sold the plans to some German sympathizers, being finally discovered by Miss Fischer and our hero.

There were some wonderfully beautiful exteriors in this, and most of the interiors were carried in good atmosphere; but the camera angles were seldom changed thru many of the scenes, which always tends to slow up a production.

The great trouble seemed to be that all the action was forced—not only Miss Fischer's but of all the members of the supporting cast. We had a number of women knitting, and Miss Fischer tried to knit, all of which gave evidence of "direction"; and later, when the girl friends of Miss Fischer were forming the Corps of Joan of Arc, all of the girlish frivolities shown were far from being natural. Miss Fischer, especially, tried hard to be cute and didn't really succeed.

The patriotic appeal that this was evidently made for didn't get over, save for the very first flash of the American flag. Of course, this would bring applause anywhere.

In one place we saw Miss Fischer running for help, and the director had her run straight into a tree. It didn't really seem funny, nor was it natural. It showed simply that they were playing for a laugh. The laugh failed to arrive.

Jack Mower, as the hero, and Hal Clements, as the father, put over very good characterizations and played with poise and repose. L. C. Shumway, as the willun, was kept far from the camera and we never got into intimate touch with him.

The Box Office Angle.

If you can dodge this I'd say that you should aim to do so. There were only a few points that were worthwhile, and these were certainly overshadowed by the very unhuman actions of the star and the girls in the supporting cast.

I don't believe that this offering will give any one the impression that they have seen something worth-while after they have sat thru it. My advice is—pass it. But, if you must play it, I'd hunt up my family almanac and pick out a bad night. There is very little that you can say about this and you don't dare say anything about the story.

Margarita Fischer undoubtedly has some friends in your locality, and if she is well liked where you are I believe you should consider the matter carefully, because this certainly will not add to her following.

CANADIAN MOVING PICTURE DIGEST

An Exclusive Photoplay Trade Journal.

Published Weekly.

100% Circulation. Orpheum Theatre Bldg. Montreal, P. Q.

FAILURE TO REGISTER CHARACTERIZATIONS LEAVES THIS ORDINARY

Peggy Adams and Chester Barnett in

THE SALT OF THE EARTH

Edison—Perfection

DIRECTOR ..... Saul Harrison
AUTHOR ..... Peter B. Kyne in S. E. P.
SCENARIO BY ..... Raymond E. Dakiu
CAMERAMAN ..... Harry Squires
AS A WHOLE ..... Didn't begin to get over original story values STORY ..... Miner cheated by capitalist, followed by capitalist being cheated by miners
DIRECTION ..... Permitted interest to lag and held no suspense
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Varied decidedly from fair to poor
LIGHTINGS ..... Just fair
CAMERA WORK ..... Ordinary
STARS ..... She, good-looking and rather appealing; he, had nearly negative part
SUPPORT ..... Seemed overdrawn and didn't help production
EXTERIORS ..... Some quite good; not exceptional
INTERIORS ..... Suitable
DETAIL ..... Fair
CHARACTER OF STORY ..... Clean; not objectionable in any way
TIME ..... Sixty-five minutes (5 parts)

IN Peter B. Kyne's story in the Saturday Evening Post this was truly entertaining, but the dialogue used in the original story and the characterization touches of "Snowshoe Sam" and his partner were entirely missing in the film production.

The story had to do for the most part with these two old miners and their friendship for Peggy Adams, who was the daughter of another miner who bought a worthless claim which had been "salted" by an Eastern capitalist. The son of this Eastern capitalist, played by Chester Barnett, was in love with the miner's daughter.

When the two old miners heard that the capitalist had swindled their friend, they decided to turn the tables on him, and so they sold him a salted mine in return.

There was an opportunity for some very fine characterizations by the two old miners here, but the men playing these parts failed to realize, and the director allowed the interest to lag, which certainly brought this down to routine movie caliber.

The father of Miss Adams, who had the part of a miner, looked rather funny with his sleeves rolled up and his bare arms showing white. Later, where "Snowshoe Sam" was in the hospital nearly dead with pneumonia, we had him able to jump up and down in bed and use his arms as if he hadn't been sick a day in his life.

The lightings varied a little, some of them being very good, while a few were rather harsh, making the faces almost chalk white. Miss Adams is rather a good-looking, dark-haired girl, and I believe that, if given some good stories and the proper direction, she will develop a certain following. In this she couldn't show to advantage because of the unnatural atmosphere.

The supporting players appeared rather overdrawn, and one or two of the characters seemed made up for comedy.

Those who appeared were Russell Simpson, William Chatterton, Ivan Christie and William Wadsworth.

There was a collie dog which in the story figured for a good, big part, and altho he was good in the picture, he wasn't given as much to do as one would expect.

The Box Office Angle

I don't believe that this production will register nearly so well as the story did, because the direction lacked inspiration, the characterizations were not developed and the atmosphere was not convincing.

If you are on the program for this I would "soft pedal" it, and if you get any kicks on it I would alibi myself on the fact that it is adapted from a story by Peter B. Kyne that ran in the Saturday Evening Post, and that it proved very pleasing in story form.

Of course, if you feel that you can hang one on your patrons, you have the S. E. P. advertising possibilities here, but you know you can't hang it on them often and get away with it.

If you are not booked to get this I would not reach for it, because it will hardly satisfy.

Going to Join the Allies?

Come on. Do. Help me to help you. You know all about that raise I've been telling you of. Now here's how you can become my ally:

Tell every pal you have; every exhibitor you know (and anyone else you think may be interested) what a good thing WID'S is. Tell him how you depend on it; what it means to you both in dollars and saving.

If "he's from Missouri," send us his name and address, and we'll let him have a sample copy to acquaint himself sufficiently with what I am doing, and why he needs WID'S.

WID'S

Times Building,

New York.

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO

REGINALD BARKER
DIRECTING
PARALTA PLAYS
Paralta Studio, Los Angeles, Calif.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
PRODUCER

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

WILLIAM C. DOWLAN
PRODUCING METRO FEATURES
Current Release—"THE OUTSIDER"
With Emmy Wehlen.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING
PATHE PEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

JACK HARVEY
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING PATHE PLAYS

ALLAN HOLUBAR
M. P. D. A.
Producing Universal Features.

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
GOLDWYN

LLOYD INGRAHAM
PRODUCER

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
M. P. D. A.
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
M. P. D. A.
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

R. H. KELLY
STUDIO MANAGER
Empire All-Star Corp. & Mutual Corp.
Glendale, L. I.

HARLEY KNOLES
M. P. D. A.
FEATURES DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 D. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

JOSEPH LEVERING
DIRECTOR

O. A. C. LUND

ASHLEY MILLER
M. P. D. A.
Director—Vitagraph Studios
Brooklyn

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE DIRECTOR
FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.

WEDGWOOD NOWELL
TRIANGLE
Friars Club, N. Y. C.

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITAGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

TOM TERRISS
PRODUCER
VITAGRAPH

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
511 W. 143rd St. Audubon 1941.

JAMES VINCENT
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

BEN WILSON
DIRECTING AND STARRING
UNIVERSAL

CHESTER WITHEY
DIRECTOR

JAMES YOUNG
M. P. D. A.

WID'S IS READ NOT SKIMMED

AUTHORS

MONTE M. KATTERJOHN
Staff Author
PARALTA PLAYS

ANTHONY KELLY

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

WIDS IS READ NOT SKIMMED

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Adress—Broadway Central Hotel.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

IN FORM THE BRADSTREET OF FILMDOM

A MAGAZINE—IN FACT A SERVICE

WID'S

INDEPENDENT REVIEWS OF FEATURE FILMS

Always Independent
Issued Every Thursday

VOL. III. THURSDAY, DEC. 27, 1917. NO. 52

25 Cents a Copy
$10.00 a Year

Published by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc., Times Building, 1475 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
Entered as Second-Class Matter August 17, 1916, at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.
Copyrighted by Wid's Films and Film Folk, Inc.

BREAKING INTO SOCIETY STORY LACKS PUNCH; STARS PLEASING

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Payne in

RED-WHITE-AND-BLUE BLOOD

DIRECTOR.....Charles J. Brabin
AUTHOR.....Shannon Fife
SCENARIO BY.....June Mathis
CAMERAMAN.....R. J. Bergquist
AS A WHOLE.....Ordinary feature for program
STORY.....Impossible situations, and badly told DIRECTION.....Generally good, but failed to connect at times
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Good
LIGHTINGS.....Good in spots
CAMERA WORK.....Good
STARS.....Upheld production
SUPPORT.....Good
EXTERIORS.....Very good
INTERIORS.....Very lavish; looked like the real thing
DETAIL.....Bad in several spots—especially motorboat rescue scene and tenement
TIME.....Sixty minutes (5 parts)

WERE it not for the fact that this picture has two well known stars doing the leading roles, it could hardly be considered worth while.

The story is impossible, and it is not until we are far along into the second or third reel before we really get a line on what it's all about. But, of course, Bushman and Bayne have a lot of fans who are crazy to see them, and so they'll get by on this.

There is one thing about it, and that's production. In this case it will be the exteriors and the wonderful fox-hunt scene that will lift the offering a lot.

The characters are just the usual run. The hero, Bushman, is a young American whose father has made a couple of million in Roaring Gulch or some other camp, and we had the shero, Miss Bayne, whose mother also cleaned up a lot of coin, in the same camp as Bush's father, where she had been running a boarding-house. Of course, hero and shero were only kids while all this was going on.

Having acquired wealth, the two families went their separate ways, and "somewhere in Long Island" there are two tremendous estates. One of 'em is owned by hero's dad, and the other by the mother of our shero —but the two never met—neither mother and father, who knew each other, nor boy and girl, who in the story have or have not met. That's one point that isn't clear.

However, there, out on Long Island, the girl has a brother who falls into the clutches of a designing gambler and crook who is posing as a count. The boy loses money, gives the count "I. O. U.'s," can't pay, and then, to square it with mother (who is crazy about entertaining nobility), brother invites this fake count out to the Long Island home, where the count decided to stop being a crook and henceforth marry money for a change.

Now it's up to our hero to thwart this willunous count, but up to this time he hasn't appeared on the screen. He does return from the West, however, in time to stand out on father's front porch and see a "female in distress" in a motorboat and dash off to rescue her—and, of course, it's the shero. From that time on things moved fast. The count's engagement is about to be announced, when, thru a trick, the count is lifted over the balustrade and is deposited on the floor, and our hero steps into the breach.

Count, then, to even things up, decides that he will rob the safe and make a getaway with this pair. It is only a little more work for the hero, who steps in on the scene. Then we have a very finely rehearsed bit of fightin' that takes place. Hero's shirt is torn, and, ten minutes later, without having time to go upstairs and change it, we see him with a perfectly good shirt on.

I might mention, too, that in another place Bush walks out of a scene wearing one winter outfit, and appears in another scene (supposed to take place but half an hour later) in an entirely different attire. It would not have been so bad, only that the later scenes were in his own rooms, and he walked into a door with a different overcoat on.

In the matter of direction the rescue was very poorly handled. We had two motorboats, supposedly running upstream, and when they come side by side they stop. It was quite noticeable when one watched the shore behind them and the tide running that no man, no matter how clever a navigator he might be, could run a motorboat while hanging over a woman in a faint, who is in the stern looking out over the back of the boat—and still they showed our hero pulling the rescue just as I have diagrammed it.

Of course, shero in this case happened to be very much of a heart-breaker, and hero didn't really mean to make love to her or to fall in love with her, but she had jilted a friend of his, and he thought he'd teach her a lesson by making her fall for him and then throw her over. Shero was heartless—or at least hero believed her to be so—until he takes her into a squalid tenement to show her the drama of life. It was "some" life! A widow with four raggedy, starving urchins clinging to her skirts, a stove that is constantly smoking—no wonder they looked so bad. They must've had smoke in their eyes, ears and mouth for days, and days, and days—because the stove smoked in one scene, and in another, which was quite some time later, it was still smokin'. Anyway, it's safe to suppose that these slips in detail will be overlooked by the Bushman & Bayne enthusiasts.

There is a lot of good atmosphere in the exterior scenes on Long Island. The locations at the country place where the newly-rich millionaires resided were wonderfully well chosen. The fall hunt scene with the gay house-party guests, numbering about a dozen, dashing off on their thoroughbreds behind the hounds, was very well done, and Miss Bayne comes a cropper over a fence in manner quite realistic.

There is plenty of good comedy in the picture which is carried by the father of the boy (played by Wm. H. Tooker) and the shero's mother. There is one scene that will be a sure-laugh-getter. Mother, aroused by the disturbance attending the battle between the bogus count and the hero, comes down a flight of stairs, wearing pantaloon pajamas, and it did pull a roar of laughter when I saw it, as great as anything that Charlie Chaplin ever achieved.

The interiors were substantial in appearance. They were lavish and in very good taste. The hunt-ball set was particularly well done.

Among those in the supporting cast were

The Box Office Angle.

The name of this has an interesting sound, and, since Bushman and Bayne have quite a following in some sections of the country, I think you ought to be able to get this over in good shape and still please your patrons. The film is an interesting one from the viewpoint of the fox-hunt scenes and beautiful locations in which the exteriors were filmed, and I would make capital of this. If you are in a locality where golf-sharks abound, it might be well also to make mention of the fact that we have some bits in this where a game is in progress. It should interest.

By all means don't go strong in your promises of story, because from that angle this does not deliver. Center your advertising upon the two stars and the fox-hunt scenes, possibly with a query as to whether your patrons have ever seen a fox hunt adding we have one in this that will prove worth-while.

PLEASING RUBE COMEDY WITH PLENTY OF LAUGHS

William F. Russell in

NEW YORK LUCK

American—Mutual

DIRECTOR	Edward S. Sloman
AUTHORS	Charles Turner Dazey and Frank Dazey
SCENARIO BY	Chester Blinn Clapp
CAMERAMAN	Joe Morgan
AS A WHOLE	Entertaining melo with star in "Rube" role
STORY	Bill bucking N. Y.—and gets away with it
DIRECTION	Kept things moving and registered lots of comedy
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied from good to poor
LIGHTINGS	Some very pretty, but played for action and comedy, not artistic effects
CAMERA WORK	Very good
STAR	Great in this character; got comedy over
SUPPORT	Some very good; all acceptable
EXTERIORS	Good
INTERIORS	Acceptable
DETAIL	Made points "hit"
CHARACTER OF STORY	Clean comedy; can be seen by all
TIME	Fifty-three minutes (5 parts)

WE have had several of William Russell's productions that were directed by Ed Sloman recently, and they have all been above the average. This one beats the rest. The director certainly made the comedy really funny. The points register as honest-to-goodness stuff.

The story opened with Bill a resident of Hohokus, Maine, where he was station agent. And, say—Bill did look like a station agent!

The first scenes showed Bill reading a book about New York, and we had some fade-in visions of what Bill thought New York would do for him. This started off the comedy, and they kept it going throughout the entire film. The scenes in Hohokus were fine, and altho the characters may have been overdrawn a little, no one will care whether they are or not, because they bring lots of good laughs, and Harvey Clark, who played Mr. Russell's father, put over a little touch of pathos that registered.

A New York motion picture director who had formerly lived in Hohokus dropped off the train when it was on a siding, and he gave Bill his card and told him to look him up when he came to N. Y. Francelia Billington, who was on the same train, lost her handbag when she got aboard, and Bill found it later.

Well, Bill's hopes crystallized and he came to N. Y.—and of course he looked up the director upon arrival and was side-tracked by an office boy. That evening Bill saw Miss Billington and her father go into their home, and he phoned an English nobleman (their cousin) who was also trying to locate them.

It so happened that the butler took Bill for the English nobleman, and Bill played up to the part when he found out that there was some crooked work afoot. Of course when the fake noble, whom Bill had phoned to, came, the butler immediately denounced him, and later when the real nobleman came there was a lively fight between the butler, the crook, Bill and the real cousin. As expected, this ended in a clutch, but it was a twist when the motion picture director walked in the hotel and found that Bill had written this story. Of course he bought it for a thousand beans and gave Bill a reg'lar job. Miss Billington was a motion picture star.

Whoever wrote the subtitles for this certainly has an eye for comedy, and, since one-third of the comedy evolved comes out of the titles, real credit must be given to the one responsible for them.

There were one or two little slips in detail that didn't seem quite natural, but you certainly will not get kicks on them in any way, shape or form..

Others who appeared were Frederick Vroom, Clarence Burton, Carl Stockdale, Ed Peil and Alfred Ferguson.

The Box Office Angle.

Go get this and play it up big. It surely will please!

Bill Russell has been building quite a name for himself lately, and this is almost sure-fire comedy. Call especial attention to Bill himself and mention Francelia Billington, because she is well known, having supported Bill in all of his recent work.

Get busy on some sort of a "teaser" campaign, because it will surely pay. Start out with the idea of asking your fans if they have a lively imagination, carrying the teasers thru that line and finally hooking it up with your theatre.

You can give this your personal recommendation and feel positive that it will come thru. One woman in the theatre almost had convulsions.

ORIGINALS JACK CUNNINGHAM CONTINUITY
Staff Writer
Triangle Studios, Culver City, Calif.
ADAPTATIONS EDITORIAL

FAST MOVING STORY WITH PATRIOTIC PUNCH DECIDEDLY CLASSY

Mme. Olga Petrova in

A DAUGHTER OF DESTINY

Petrova Pictures, Inc.—First Nat'l Exhib. Cir.

DIRECTOR.....George Irving
AUTHOR.....L. Case Russell
CAMERAMAN.....Harry B. Harris
AS A WHOLE....Spy story with patriotic climax showing star to advantage in classy atosphere
STORY.....So developed as to maintain interest
DIRECTION.....Made it distinctive and gave dramatic scenes power; gave beautiful star fitting setting
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Clean cut and brilliant
LIGHTINGS.....Very beautiful effects; generally pleasing
CAMERA WORK.....Very good
STAR.....Played forcefully; screened beautifully
SUPORT .....Types that impressed; Holding surprisingly good
EXTERIORS.....Good; fitted atmosphere
INTERIORS.....Distinctive, massive and classy
DETAIL.....Very good
CHARACTER OF STORY.....Nothing to offend and has patriotic punch
TIME.....Sixty-three minutes (6 parts)

FOR her first production under her own management Mme. Petrova has given her large following a melodrama of intrigue, having to do with the present war.

The production starts off with a smash showing the West Point cadets, with the star and a group of players reviewing the future generals, and in most theatres this will send the production away to a flying start.

The action then develops the fact that Petrova's husband is a German spy who was trying to force her to secure important diplomatic secrets from her father, who was an American ambassador.

Refusing to be his tool, Petrova left him, and the spy then killed a French secret service man who was trying to secure some papers concealed in the house, with the result that after murdering the man he was enabled to create the impression that he himself had been killed, thru placing a ring on the hand of the French officer and burning the house.

Later the story builds to a splendid climax in the kingdom of Belmark, where we found Petrova in love with the prince in this little country which stood in the way of Germany. We found the German chancellor demanding of the diplomats controlling the interests of this country that they permit the passage of German troops, offering the friendship of Germany in the form of an alliance between the German princess and the son of the king.

At this moment the king was advised of the prince's marriage to Petrova, and this brought complications. The prince was summoned and ordered to give up this marriage, which he refused emphatically to do, and then Petrova was summoned, and we had a big scene in which she defied the court, and then, when told that if she would sacrifice her husband it would mean immediate peace, she agreed to give him up.

At this moment the German chancellor pulled a speech about the fact that her decision would make it possible for the German flag to float in Paris, London and Washington, and Petrova came right back with an emphatic denunciation in which she refused to be a party to any such bargain.

The German chancellor then pulled his trump card by introducing her first husband, thought to be dead. At this moment the American ambassador entered with the announcement that this country had entered the war. This news caused an uproar, and the prince stepped to the balcony to speak to his people. His statements were contradicted by Petrova's first husband, but a bomb thrown by German sympathizers from the crowd destroyed the balcony, injured the star and killed the willun. That made the final clutch with Petrova and the prince possible, and we had a title on the finish announcing that they would make the kingdom of Belmark a democracy.

The general atmosphere of this production is excellent, because of some very pleasing lightings, some excellent sets, and has an atmosphere of distinction that continued throughout. This item is worthy of serious consideration, because of the fact that so many Petrova pictures lacked this distinctive atmosphere. While the story of this is only an interesting spy meller for the first few reels, the council-chamber climax hits on high pretty well and comes thru with a smash that will probably please most anywhere. Accompanied by the right sort of music the introduction showing the West Point Cadets and the climax in the council chamber scene will swing an audience with the present state of war existing.

Petrova photographed to advantage and wore some beautiful gowns, her work throughout being quite pleasing, and, from the angle of class, I think every one will be more than pleased.

Thomas Holding, as the hero, was decidedly more pleasing than he has been in most of his appearances, because he carried the characterization of the prince with a dignity that made it seem real, with just enough unbending to keep the character comparatively human. Mr. Holding was more than satisfactory.

Robert Broderick, as the German chancellor, was an excellent type and added considerable strength to the council-chamber scene.

Anders Randolf was a bit inclined to overplay in a few of his early scenes, but on the whole he was quite satisfactory.

The Box Office Angle.

Because of the fact that this is the first of the new Petrova Pictures and realizing that it has a patriotic punch in an atmosphere of class, I believe that everywhere it will be possible to do a lot of real business on this offering. Don't, in your advertising, create the impression that this is a story in foreign atmosphere, or what is generally called a costume production, because there is an American twist to it all the way and you can really emphasize the fact that this has to do with America's entrance into the great European struggle, with assurances that the story will bear you out.

Concentrate upon this war angle in your advertising, and upon the promise that the production is distinctive and has been made at considerable expense.

Most of your fans will undoubtedly be very much interested in seeing the first Petrova Picture made under her new contract.

CHET WITHEY
DIRECTOR
JUST COMPLETED
"NEARLY MARRIED"
By EDGAR SELWYN
STARRING MADGE KENNEDY

UNNECESSARY FOOTAGE SLOWED ORDINARY MOVIE DECIDEDLY

Carlyle Blackwell in

THE GOOD-FOR-NOTHING

Peerless—World

DIRECTOR	Carlyle Blackwell
AUTHOR	A. Alexander
CAMERAMAN	Lucien Tainguy
AS A WHOLE	Just movie that wandered and wandered too long
STORY	Was nothing until last reel, and then far from new
DIRECTION	Gave entirely too much footage to inconsequential incidents; failed to make action convincing or human
PHOTOGRAPHY	Varied from good to very muddy
LIGHTINGS	A few good; generally poor
CAMERA WORK	Varied
STAR	Worked nonchalantly and registered poorly
SUPPORT	Extras badly overdrawn; no one really stood out
EXTERIORS	Acceptable, not good
INTERIORS	Acceptable
DETAIL	Much that was unconvincing
CHARACTER OF STORY	Had considerable emphasis on forcing boy to marry wronged goil
TIME	Seventy-two minutes (5 parts)

THE first of this dragged, and dragged, and dragged. It was supposed to present a lot of smalltown stuff showing Blackwell's experiences in a village where he clerked in the general store. The characters were all badly overdrawn and some of the yokel comedy introduced will be more ridiculous to the film fans in small towns as the city folks' idea as to how they act, than it will be to city folks who look at it, possibly thinking that they do behave that way in the sticks. There is nothing more weird than the attempt of the average $3.00-a-day extra who has never seen a village to act the small town stuff.

In this portion of the film there was one sequence that had to do with Blackwell's being sent out for a wagonload of chickens in crates. This was dragged in by the heels, since he was ordered to leave a dance so that he might meet the train and get the chickens, in order that he should arrive at the station in his mail order dress suit.

About ten times too much footage was devoted to scenes in which Blackwell juggled the crates sufficiently to allow the chickens to escape, and then proceeded to chase them thru the meadows. This wasn't funny. There was no reason for it being in the story, and it certainly became tiresome before it was finished.

Along about the last two reels the story picked up a bit where they got into the old-time situation of the pampered son stealing a bit of jewelry to give to a vamp he was playing with, the result being that of course hero was accused of the theft.

So hero then became a "defective" and "Sherlock Holmsed" around enough to find the vamp wearing the jewels, with the result that he proceeded to keep on the job until he had forced the young man to stick around in a barn about the time he was supposed to marry a wealthy young loidy, Blackwell's purpose being to force the young scamp to marry the wronged goil, who was there at the farm trustfully waiting for the young willun to show up. There's nothing new about this stuff, but it at least proved interesting after they got over with the painful early reels.

Evelyn Greeley was the shero who had to sort'uv wait around for the finish with Carlyle, and Muriel Ostriche was the wronged goil. In the first four reels Muriel had two flashes. In each she came into the office of the young willun and pleaded with him to marry her.

It is possible that, for family consumption, emphasis given this "forced marriage" idea may stir up embarrassing questions.

In the cast were Charles Duncan, Eugene Woodward, Katherine Johnston, Wm. Sherwood and Kate Lester.

The Box Office Angle.

This is really just plain "movie" and rather slow movie at that, with so much excess footage that it will probably tire most fans. It runs about fifteen minutes longer than it should as a program release,

We believe—

Collaboration between the director and photographer is essential to success in photoplay production.

Larry Trimble
Philip E. Rosen.

Resolve

that during 1918 every time you think of a live wire exhibitor friend that you'll tell him what WID'S means to you. Not only in interest, but in dollars and cents.

that you won't forget to do this.

that you will become a life member of WID'S boosters.

that's resolution enough.

WID'S

and of course, so far as story value goes, it might have made a fair one-reel.

If Blackwell is a favorite with your fans you may be able to get by with this, but certainly I would do it with both feet on the soft pedal—because there are no high spots nor bright spots. It just rambles along without at any time convincing or seeming human. The comedy attempts don't stir up any roars of laughter, and the dramatic moments will never cause anyone to swaller hard.

If you are not playing the World program you can safely forget this, and if you are playing the World program and can dodge this, it might be advisable—because such films as this don't help any star.

TOO MUCH PLOT AND EXAGGERATED EMOTIONS SPOIL THIS

James Morrison, Leah Baird, Wilfred Lucas and Barbara Castleton in

THE SINS OF AMBITION

Ivan—State Rights

DIRECTOR ..... Ivan Abramson
AUTHOR ..... Ivan Abramson
CAMERAMAN ..... Marcel A. Le Picard
AS A WHOLE ..... Rather muddled, overacted meller marred by exaggerated emotions and too much counterplot
STORY ..... Mixed domestic tangle that was too involved to hold the interest and failed to make production classy
DIRECTION ..... Allowed players to overreach continually
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Varied decidedly, with night tints too dark and faces chalky
LIGHTINGS ..... Occasionally good on sets, b... generally bad on faces
CAMERA WORK ..... Not good
STARS ..... All overplayed, with some scenes painful because of "acting"
SUPPORT ..... Inclined to "act"; extras rather stiff
EXTERIORS ..... Some pretty shots, but not lighted to best advantage
INTERIORS ..... Satisfactory; not distinctive
DETAIL ..... Acceptable, but titles bad
CHARACTER OF STORY ..... Hardly the sort of plot for family circle
TIME ..... Seventy-eight minutes (6 parts)

IN the early part of this offering they failed to hold the interest because there were too many characters involved, and throughout we had entirely too much plot and counterplot, with the result that none of the situations really registered because of this excess of action.

The director permitted everyone to act all over the place. It was astounding to see how bad some of these people who have done such good work before can be with unfavorable direction.

Barbara Castleton, who has had a number of very good pictures, was made to appear very camera-conscious, almost ghost-like in the chalky appearance of her face, and the manner in which she registered emotions was so exaggerated that it would seem that surely this was not the same girl who had done so well in other pictures.

Leah Baird did not film to advantage, except in a very few closeups, which "just happened" to be well lighted, and, for the most part, her face was as white as chalk, with her makeup showing like a red circle around her mouth, while the lines under her eyes were very much in evidence.

Such good players as Wilfred Lucas, Jimmie Morrison and Anders Randolf also failed to register, because they ""acted" with all the emphasis of the 10-20-30 mellers of the old days.

Madeline Traverse, who had a comparatively important part so far as one of the plots was concerned, looked better, played with more repose and carried her scenes more humanly than did any of the other members of the cast. Possibly this was due to the fact that the director didn't concentrate upon Miss Traverse and insist upon her acting.

Most of the overacting in this was in evidence when we had closeups, and there were so many of these faces on the screen—registering horror, anger, vengeance, etc. —that the film almost seemed like a nightmare at times.

For the exhibitor who talks about action, and for the theatre where they like their "drammer" spread on thick with all the frills and a little over-exaggeration to make it register, this may seem to be a good picture. For the theatre which caters to intelligent patrons and for fans who know something about making a scene human, this will be funny when it isn't pathetic.

The plot was quite a jumbled affair, having to do with Wilfred Lucas as the husband of Leah Baird, who was unhappy because she wanted to go back to the stage under the management of Anders Randolf, who was luring her away from her home. Mr. Lucas was working on a "universal language."

Miss Castleton was the daughter of Mr. Lucas and Miss Baird, and after Randolf had busted up the Lucas home by kissing Miss Baird when Lucas was lookin', Miss Castleton spoiled her mother's plans by making love to Randolf, just to prove that he would be unfaithful if given a chance.

Jimmie Morrison was in love with Miss Castleton, and, of course, he had to be on hand when she was pretending to love Randolf, which provided the necessary misunderstood situation.

Finally Miss Castleton killed Randolf, but they managed to have her released, because it was necessary that she finish the production with a clutch with Mr. Morrison.

All thru this there was a counterplot having to do with an ice company and the need of the poor for ice, with Randolf backing the ice trust, and Miss Traverse in charge of a charity which was fighting the trust. Mr. Lucas was called in to take charge of this charity fight, and he became quite a successful business man all of a sudden.

Just to prove that they could get everything into a picture, they had a run on the bank in the last reel, which afforded an opportunity for the usual mob scenes, with extras clamoring for their coin. There was action galore in this, but nothing that seemed real, and much that was decidedly too meller.

The photography generally was not what could be called good, because the lightings on the faces were very bad for all of the stars. The tinting on the night scenes was entirely too dark, with rather unfavorable results.

The titles were particularly bad. There were dozens of speeches that no human being would ever make, and at one point they pulled this: "The sun, as if unwilling to witness Laurene's grief, sinks low behind the horizon." Someone certainly figured that the whole world worried over the shero's difficulties.

In one spot something seemed to have gone wrong with the acting. Miss Baird was supposed to open in a new play, but failed to ever arrive at the theatre. Yet there were flashes of an audience applauding as if the play was a great success. Incidentally the rehearsal scenes shown would have indicated that the play was better off never to have been produced.

The Box Office Angle.

If you have a theatre which caters to the lurid meller-drammer with much action and considerable overplaying and exaggerated emotions, this may be the sort of thing you want, because certainly they rave quite some.

If you have played some of the more strenuous of the Ivan Films, I presume that you can also get by with this one satisfactorily, but if you are always on the alert to see to it that your patrons are provided with something that is really entertaining—particularly to those who know good pictures when they see them—then I'd certainly sidestep this.

There is an array of names here that should be worth money at the box office, because several of these players are very well known. But there is every possibility that you will seriously injure their drawing power for you in future productions if you play them up in this. Certainly none of them have ever in recent months been seen to poorer advantage than in this.

Should you decide to play this, be careful as to what sort of promises you make concerning the production values. Depend rather upon the title and the names of the players, leaving it up to your fans to say "yes" or "no" regarding the production being good or not.

UNEVEN MELLER, BUT HAS LOTS OF HEART PATHOS

June Caprice in

UNKNOWN 274

Fox Film

DIRECTOR	Harry Millarde
AUTHOR	George Scarborough
CAMERAMAN	David Mills
AS A WHOLE	Heart interest, kiddies and trick dog will be loved by sentimental public
STORY	Little girl separated from father when he is hurt in accident has thrilling adventures before they are reunited
DIRECTION	Good, but overdone in spots
PHOTOGRAPHY	Satisfactory
LIGHTINGS	Average
CAMERA WORK	Adequate
STAR	Pleasing ingenue
SUPPORT	Principals all good
EXTERIORS	Good
INTERIORS	Mostly simple
DETAIL	Much; good
TIME	Seventy-five minutes (6 parts)

THIS feature should go very well with family audiences because it is built up of heart throbs. At first glance it looks like just another loss-of-memory story; but as it develops, it turns out that the aphasia resulting from the accident could have been eliminated without doing any damage. It would have been a good thing to have left it out, too, because people are pretty sick of the old junk.

But "Unknown 274"—which is the number given the heroine at the orphan asylum—is made of elements that will get the crowd from a number of angles. There is the appeal to parenthood; to those who love children; to those who love animals; to those who hate wicked villains and to those who shed tears for pretty but defenceless damsels in distress.

Miss Caprice belies her name by playing a good deal in one key; but she is very wistful and attractive, and, best of all, is brightly animated. She really gets over.

The play would be a lot better if they didn't make too much of a trick Collie. The dog is a fine one, mind you, and, I guess, knows a lot more than some people; but the story and the director give him credit for so much intelligence that what might be a pretty powerful meller suffers from attacks of slapstick.

For instance, when June is whipped at the orphan asylum for something she hasn't done, and is sent to bed without her supper, the dog goes to the ice-box, takes out food and puts it in a basket, not forgetting a bread-knife, and carries the whole shooting-match up to June's bedside. Again, when an old handy man around the place is comforting the girl, the dog notes that the matron is watching and pulls down the shade so she can't see. But the matron has seen enough to convince her something's wrong, and hurries to the room to protest. Whereupon the dog pulls off her dress and she is compelled to retire in embarrassment. Later on, he helps June do the laundry work; fetches a jealous woman to see her male companion hugging a girl; brings the telephone book to suggest calling for help, and finds a stolen violin. Keystone Teddy used to be able to do these things much better for the simple reason that such acts belong to the type of play we know as Sennett Comedy.

June's father, in this picture, is an old music master. He is caught between two automobiles one day and suffers an accident causing the loss of his memory. June is taken away by a friendly neighbor when her father does not come home; and when the neighbor dies, she is sent to an orphan asylum. Ten years later the father's memory returns and he seeks June with ill success,

Meantime June has been taken away by an adventurer and his woman companion, they intending her to pose as their daughter and marry a well-to-do youth for their gain. In the course of events June is taken to her own father to be educated musically, while a number of thrill-

CANADIAN MOVING PICTURE DIGEST

An Exclusive Photoplay Trade Journal.

Published Weekly.

100% Circulation. Orpheum Theatre Bldg. Montreal, P. Q.

HAROLD LOCKWOOD

Yorke--Metro

ng complications transpire before they are reunited.
It is evident that this is pretty much old stuff; but it tands retelling because of its heart-throbs, and because ; is very well acted. Miss Caprice does well; and Tom furroughs acts splendidly as the father. Kittens Reichert lays June as a child "ten years before," and is one of the est infants of the kind I have seen. Dan Mason is one f the best of the crowd as Jim, the old man who loves ildren, at the orphan asylum.

The Box Office Angle.

If you have a good family or neighborhood trade, this feature ought to go big in spite of the fact that there is nothing novel or sensational upon which to hang special pormotion. I wish that it might have been handled a little better, and that it was not so obviously dished up as a vehicle for June; but it has more than a majority of good points, and ought to check up well in the box office.

CONVINCING WAR STORY HAS COMEDY ELEMENT AND WOMAN APPEAL

Alma Ruebens in

THE GOWN OF DESTINY

Triangle

)IRECTOR	Lynn F. Reynolds
AUTHOR	Earl Derr Biggers in S. E. P.
CENARIO BY	Lynn F. Reynolds
AMERAMAN	John Brown
S A WHOLE	Convincing, timely story with some war atmosphere; comedy element good
TORY	A corker that is sure to please
)IRECTION	Good, except on battle stuff
HOTOGRAPHY	Good
AMERA WORK	Varies from fair to good
TAR	Pleasing; looked good and held sympathy
UPPORT	A good company, with feature role a difficult character part
XTERIORS	Some good; others fair
NTERIORS	Good
)ETAIL	Trench scenes not convincing
HARACTER OF STORY	Will not offend; can be seen by all
IME	Fifty-five minutes (5 parts)

THE mere fact that this has been adapted from a story by Earl Derr Biggers that ran in the "Saturday Evening Post" makes certain that it is "there" basically. It carries a new idea, and is away from the bromide hero-and-shero mush tuff that is doled out so regularly. Of course, there nust be love in every story, and there is in this, but ow this love interest is brought about and manufactured hru clothes is the trick.

A little Frenchman who drapes gowns and designs for Fifth Avenue modiste is the heroic figure. Even tho e is one of the wrist-watch, perfume using molly-oddles—that is, he is a mollycoddle until he is laughed nto trying to enlist in the service of France—he appears for his physical exam, but is turned down beause of unfitness.

He rolls and tosses in his bed, humiliated by the shame f being unable to do his bit. Then he is suddenly inspired by a thought. That inspiration works out into marvelous costume creation, which goes forth into he world from the shop and is the means of first bringng an estranged man and wife together again, and ater, when the gown is sent across the country to a ittle niece who is of the "poor relation" sort, it again works its charms.

It sends an English slacker who falls in love with er back to his country to join the colors. He goes over there," wins his commission, and finally, to cap he climax, leads his men into a small French village, n time to rout the Huns as they are about to execute little mayor of the town. It happened to be that this nayor was none other than the father of the boy who riginally designed the gown on the other side of the Atlantic, but of course the designer never found out what his gown had done; but it did bring happiness to an old man whose life was saved, and another old man, in finding his son willing to do his bit, who is buoyed up in the hope of victory, and finally to the little girl who loved the Englishman.

Herrera Tejedde plays the role of the costume designer —perhaps not quite as well as it might have been played, but with sufficient character to make it quite convincing.

Alma Ruebens plays the role of the girl. She looks cute and wins the sympathy of her audience.

Allen Sears is the leading man. Since he finally wins the girl, that's all that is required of him.

That portion of the production wherein the scenes are laid in America are very well done, but the war stuff—especially the scenes in the trenches—don't get over as the real thing. This is war of surprise and attack, and one does not usually find the British Tommies cheering for ten minutes before they go "over the top" for a raid, and another thing—officers, as well as men, are all equipped with shrapnel-proof helmets in the ditches.

In the cast were Lillian West, J. Barney Sherry, Pietro Buzzi, Fred Vroom, Bliss Chevalier, Dorothy Marshall and Kathaleen Emerson.

The Box Office Angle.

Alma Ruebens has quite a large following over the country, having done some excellent work in many Triangle offerings. You can play her up in this, since she has quite an important part and acquits herself well.

Be sure to mention in your billing that the story of this appeared in the "Saturday Evening Post," and that it has been written by Earl Derr Biggers, well known because of his authorship of "Seven Keys to Baldpate," which went big on stage and screen with Georgie Cohan.

This should go over successfully in any community. It is timely, and, even tho this contains the war element, there are no scenes in it that should offend in any way. It is, on the whole, a good picture and one that is bound to please.

TRADE NOTE.

Ernest Shipman announces that the first releases of the W. H. Clifford Photoplay Co., entitled "Denny from Ireland" and "The Snail" are now ready for negotiations. Territorial rights are available under a protective franchise covering the entire series. Outright sales or cooperative basis can be arranged under the scale of percentages as adopted by the First National Exhibitors Circuit.

AT LIBERTY?

WHY NOT LET DIRECTORS AND PRODUCERS KNOW IT THRU "WID'S"

TIMELY STORY, BUT TOO MELODRAMATIC; PADDED TO EXTREME

Dorothy Phillips in

THE GRAND PASSION

Bluebird

DIRECTOR	Joseph De Grasse
SCENARIO BY	Ida May Park
CAMERAMAN	King D. Gray
AS A WHOLE	Too long and draggy; melodramatic and suspense at times
STORY	Interesting, but badly told
DIRECTION	Good in spots, but generally failed to make points hit home
PHOTOGRAPHY	Very good in spots
LIGHTINGS	A few excellent; others fair
CAMERA WORK	Varied
STAR	Overplayed an appealing role
SUPPORT	Good, but very theatric
EXTERIORS	Night scenes fair; others not good
INTERIORS	In keeping with atmosphere
DETAIL	Acceptable; titles bad
TIME	Ninety-three minutes (7 parts)

HAD this production been properly edited and the footage reduced to regulation feature length, it would have worked out to general advantage. As the picture stands now it is far too long and much too draggy and needs absolutely to be retitled.

The story is one that appeared in the "Popular Picture Magazine," and it carried a punch; but as shown on the screen that punch is divided thru the long, drawn-out scenes, and therefore loses its value.

The scene of the play is laid in one of those mushroom villages that has sprung up over night around a munitions plant. In this case I think it is nothing more or less than an elaboration of the old Western mining camps.

William Stowell is the one-man power of the town. He has all the ground under lease, and to him are beholden restaurant, dance hall, dive and bawdy-housekeepers for their existence. He rules with a hand of iron, and, for some unknown reason, decides that he wants to start a newspaper in the town. Perhaps it was another form of shake-down. So Stowell sends to New York and secures the services of a good reporter to run his paper for him. The woman interest is brought about thru the arrival of Dorothy Phillips on the scene, she being the niece of a Greek restaurant keeper.

Then starts a tussle for her affections between Stowell and Jack Mulhall, the latter being city editor. So much is the former impressed with the girl, that he decides that his town, which is called "Little Hell," is unfit for a decent woman. Therefore, he decides to clean up, but the aforesaid ruff-necks who are getting the money in the burg with their dives refuse to be ousted.

A former henchman of Stowell's arouses the gang and leads them against the office of the newspaper, with a long, drawn-out pistol fight. Finally the town starts to burn up. It was a "cleanup," all right, but not the kind that was first reckoned on.

The girl throughout the story seems to give greater consideration to Mulhall's advances, but finally when the big moment comes and she realizes the chances that Stowell has taken, she switches to his arms.

Of course, there's a little "white slave" stuff, dance-hall fights and all the general atmosphere that is in keeping with the "boom burg."

In a role that would have compelled all the sympathy, Miss Phillips overplayed at times.

Mr. Stowell was absolutely too theatric and made too much of gun play throughout the action of the story.

Jack Mulhall gave a convincing characterization, and Lon Chaney as the uncle of Miss Phillips played well the part of an excitable Greek.

The willunous henchman played well in spots, altho there was quite too much of him.

From a production standpoint there is nothing of tremendous importance or outstanding interest. Fires and night scenes are relied upon for the greater extent. The fact that the final of a series of fires is about to blow up the powder works adds some suspense. However, in the matter of direction and handling of crowds in these scenes, they left much to be desired.

In seven parts the picture isn't "there" at all. Chopped to five reels, and then put on a feature program, it will get by. It isn't a "special" by any means.

The Box Office Angle.

With all things considered, and with this picture cut to five reels, you can take a chance on it. Perhaps some local interest can be aroused on this, and perhaps it may be a mirror reflection of the wild and woolly ways that are to be found in some of our West Virginia powder manufacturing towns.

The thing to play up is that it takes a big, tremendous moment to make a woman realize which of two men is the one that she really wants to marry. Of course, the fact that a woman's love can sway a man who was fearless enough to run a town of this sort to make him want to clean it out is also worthy of comment. But, unless cut down and at a price, this doesn't deliver.

TO OWNERS OF CHAIN THEATRES

Why not STANDARDIZE your PICTURE PRESENTATIONS in each of your theatres by using

BEYNON'S MUSICAL SETTINGS.

Let it travel with the film.

GEORGE W. BEYNON,

505 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Going to Join the Allies?

Come on. Do. Help me to help you. You know all about that raise I've been telling you of. Now here's how you can become my ally:

Tell every pal you have; every exhibitor you know (and anyone else you think may be interested) what a good thing WID'S is. Tell him how you depend on it; what it means to you both in dollars and saving.

If "he's from Missouri," send us his name and address, and we'll let him have a sample copy to acquaint himself sufficiently with what I am doing, and why he needs WID'S.

WID'S

Times Building, New York.

FAIRLY PLEASING ARTIFICIAL COMEDY; WILL GET BY

Vivian Martin in

THE FAIR BARBARIAN

Lasky—Paramount

DIRECTOR....Robert T. Thornby
AUTHOR....Frances Hodgson Burnett
SCENARIO BY....Edith M. Kennedy
CAMERAMAN....James C. Van Trees
AS A WHOLE....Comparatively interesting action comedy that never really convinces
STORY....Only series of incidents; could hardly be called plot
DIRECTION....Gave good atmosphere but allowed characters to overplay, thereby missing human note; titles anticipated action
PHOTOGRAPHY....Very good
LIGHTINGS....Some excellent; others too uniform
CAMERA WORK....Good
STAR....Rather pleasing but over-reached at times
SUPPORT....Many characters overplayed—none really convinced
EXTERIORS....Good English atmosphere; not particularly artistic INTERIORS....Sets excellent; lighting not exceptional
DETAIL....Some good, some bad bits
CHARACTER OF STORY....Nothing to offend, unless breaking of church window
TIME....Fifty-four minutes (5 parts)

FIGURED as light comedy, the average fan will probably appreciate this sufficiently to feel that it is worth sitting thru. There is an air of artificiality about the entire offering, and never at any time do the characters convince as real human beings, but this is forgiven after a time and the comedy touches are accepted for what they are worth, with the result that some good laughs are registered.

The chief idea presented is to show the effect upon a quiet English village of the arrival of Vivian Martin as a wild and woolly product of "uncivilized America." She blew in with a real auto and a wagonload of trunks, and when the horse was unable to pull the trunks, she hitched the wagon on behind her machine and drove into town in this rather startling fashion.

Later at a musicale we found her telling weird stories of the Wild West, with vision cutbacks to show what she was telling them, and then they devoted some time to what were supposed to be romances between two young English chaps and Miss Martin and Mae Busch. This romance stuff occupied some footage, but never really convinced, and no one will be surprised when the real hero walks in at the finish and claims the star.

The best thing in the production was a hokum incident brought into the last reel, where Miss Martin took charge of a flock of dogs and started down the street with about eight or ten of these canines, each straining at a leash. They allowed the dogs to come on into a little conference at the home where she was visiting, and we had closeups of a cat making a getaway, etc. This will be good for a laugh most anywhere, and certainly it helps the production despite the fact that it has nothing to do with the story.

While the atmosphere of the English village was registered very satisfactorily and some of the photography was quite artistic, there were many scenes in which the lighting was too uniform, and as a consequence the photography varied decidedly in different sequences.

Scores of scenes were marred and made ineffective by the unfortunate use of titles that anticipated the action. This occurred right thru the production, so that time after time it was only necessary to really read the titles to realize what was to be done on the screen. Some of these title writers should understand that the public is paying to see a picture, not to read a book. There would be no objection to long titles, or short titles, or many titles—as long as they don't discount the value of the scenes to follow.

In the cast were Charlie H. Geldert, William Hutchinson, Alfred Paget, John Burton, Ruth Hanford, Josephine Bonaparte Crowell, Eleanor Hancock, Charles Gerrard, Doug McLaren and Jane Wolff.

The Box Office Angle.

As routine program stuff this will probably be satisfactory in the average theatre figured as light comedy. It certainly is nothing to rave over and the general effect has been very seriously marred by the titles.

If you are playing Vivian Martin productions regularly this will probably be satisfactory compared with her recent films. It wouldn't be advisable to promise too much, because you should remember that it is always better to promise little and give much than to promise much and give little—if you expect to stay in the business.

MOUNTED POLICE MELLER HELPED BY CHARACTERIZATIONS

Pauline Starke in

UNTIL THEY GET ME

Triangle

DIRECTOR....Frank Borzage
AUTHOR....Kenneth B. Clarke
CAMERAMAN....C. H. Wales
AS A WHOLE....Characterization touches lift ordinary "Mounted Police" meller
STORY....Not much
DIRECTION....Made several characters rather human and developed a few sympathy touches, aided by good lightings
PHOTOGRAPHY....Some excellent; generally good
LIGHTINGS....Many effective shots; generally satisfactory
CAMERA WORK....Generally pleasing
STAR....Has personality that wins sympathy
SUPPORT....Some good types—altho some camera-conscious
EXTERIORS....Many very good long shots; generally satisfactory
INTERIORS....Suited atmosphere
DETAIL....A few good bits; generally satisfactory
CHARACTER OF STORY....Meller that has no offending angles
TIME....Fifty-eight minutes (5 parts)

WHILE this was a very ordinary story so far as the plot thread was concerned, the producer has managed to develop several of the characters rather well, with the result that he has made some of the situations convincing and human.

The fugitive, and Miss Starke as the little runaway who aided him, were both good characters, and in some of their more important scenes the director gave closeups which lifted the action and made it register humanly. There were many very good titles, which, for the most part, were written in a vernacular which assisted in keeping the audience in the atmosphere.

There is nothing remarkable about this, and, because of the slender thread of the story, many of your fans may consider it rather ordinary. The characterization touches have lifted it out of the rut, however, and if you will make it a point to call attention to these little scenes which really register, when billing it, your fans will probably have a much more favorable impression of the film as a whole. It is frequently necessary to guide the judgment of your patrons by picking out things worthy of praise and calling especial attention to them before the film is shown, so that they will not be overlooked or underestimated.

Miss Starke had a comedy costume early in the offering which was supposed to be a dress that she had outgrown since coming from an orphanage several years before. There were a number of little touches which will register laughs because of her difficulties with this outfit.

The intelligent use of closeups helped quite a bit and the general effect should be more than satisfactory as program offerings go.

The supporting cast was good but not remarkable. Some were rather stiff. Those who appeared were Joe King, Jack Curtis, Wilbur Higbee, Ann Dodge and Walter Perry.

The Box Office Angle.

This title breathes melodrama, and most of your regulars will have a hunch as to what sort of a film this is going to be—so that it would be advisable to explain carefully the fact that the producer has developed two or three lovable characters, in order to have them understand that this isn't just plain, routine blood-and-thunder meller.

Pauline Starke has done a number of interesting small parts, but she probably means nothing in the young life of the average fan, and so you cannot figure this as a production that will pull very heavily at the box office on its own account.

BEAUTIFUL PRODUCTION COULD NOT SAVE PLOT MARRED BY TITLES

Dorothy Dalton in

LOVE LETTERS

Ince Production—Paramount

DIRECTOR.....R. William Neill
SCENARIO BY.....R. Cecil Smith
AUTHOR.....Shannon Fife
AS A WHOLE.....Artistic and distinctive atmosphere, but all the players were made mechanical by ancient situations marred by bad titles
STORY.....Eternal Triangle with wife of district attorney killing man who had compromising letters; Formula No. 37
DIRECTION.....Gave exceptionally artistic lightings and atmosphere and played some scenes very well, but failed utterly to strike human note and allowed mechanical spots to spoil general effect
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Very fine
LIGHTINGS.....Remarkably artistic
CAMERA WORK.....Excellent
STAR.....Attractive personality but badly handicapped by story and titles
SUPPORT.....Good but not remarkable
EXTERIORS.....Several bits of exceptionally artistic composition
INTERIORS.....Distinctive; artistic
DETAIL.....Titles very bad; were stilted, and anticipated action
CHARACTER OF STORY.....Matrimonial mixup that many will not approve of; too much detail of murders shown
TIME.....Sixty-two minutes (5 parts)

JUST as if to prove the importance of every department in the making of a really worthwhile film, we find here an offering which has a pleasing star, beautiful production values—such as lightings, sets and general atmosphere—with a story that might have been acceptable despite this very ancient basic idea, had the director gone to more pains to make it human and believable.

The weakness of this particular film is principally in the titles. It would seem that something had happened to Tom Ince's titling department, because surely the titles in this could not have been written by the same men who used to do such wonderful work in "Thomas H. Ince Productions." It was the Ince and Griffith Studios at Triangle that originally discovered what could be done with a subtitle. I cannot in my wildest fancy imagine any of the old Ince subtitle department putting over some of these speeches, as for instance: "You cad . . . how dare you! . . . my husband shall hear of this!"

The plot of this was that very ancient thing about the girl who writes fool letters and almost slips before the willun attacks her and she learns that she had misjudged him. Then she marries the district attorney and afterwards beats the willun over the head when he attacks her again, and leaves his house, thinking she has killed him. Oh, yes . . . she went back to his house to get the old love letters—as usual (in the movies).

There was the usual character of the old gardener who was crazed because Friend Willun had ruined his daughter, and on the finish we learned that he had really killed the gink. Universal did this same story several months ago, and the various situations have been used any number of times in different productions. They will be familiar indeed to the average fan.

Despite the age of the situations this could have been put over by the artistic atmosphere and even with the scenes as played at present if the titles hadn't been so very stilted. Most of them anticipated the action, and there was something about them which in nearly every instance kept them from fitting smoothly into the atmosphere.

If you want to realize how old some of the situations in this plot were, I can tell you that the wife who batted the willun over the head with a weapon (which certainly should have killed him) rushed from the room without ever looking around to find her scarf, this making it possible for Hubby to locate the scarf later on.

Dorothy Dalton registered very satisfactorily, so far as the lightings were concerned, and her playing in some scenes was very good; but she failed to lift the plot out of the rut sufficiently to make it impress.

William Conklin, as the willun, played quietly and with impressive repose. Thurston Hall was satisfactory as the husband. Unfortunately the scenes did not impress sufficiently to create any certain amount of sympathy for any of the characters.

Among those in the cast were Dorcas Matthews, Hayward Mack and Wm. Hoffman.

The Box Office Angle.

Can afford to put this over and take a chance on it not being liked? Dorothy Dalton's name should be worth money at the box office, but can you afford to disappoint your fans? Unfortunately, in this case your fans may by unable to put their finger on the thing which they don't like, but it's a pretty safe bet that they will not be particularly pleased with the production and will probably blame it onto the story or the players.

In any case, you should understand that it depends almost entirely upon how keen a sense of appreciation your patrons have for production values, as to whether or not you can play this. If your fans are always impressed by settings, lightings and general atmospheric touches, this may go over like a shot despite the ancient story; but if your folks hold story first then you should be very careful about doing anything with this one. It has whiskers.

HUSKY STAR PLEASES IN CLUMISILY WRITTEN MELLER

William Farnum in

THE HEART OF A LION

Fox

DIRECTOR	Frank Lloyd
AUTHOR	Ralph Connors
CAMERAMAN	Billy Foster
AS A WHOLE	Star in play that paralyzes long arm of coincidence but has couple of punches
STORY	Poor farmer stays that way to educate ungrateful younger brother who reforms just in time
DIRECTION	Average; plays for sob stuff in cheap audiences
PHOTOGRAPHY	Satisfactory
LIGHTINGS	Good; no special effects
CAMERA WORK	Well done; good long shots
STAR	Works hard; also sincere
SUPPORT	Younger brother good; women principals lightweights; heavy villain does it well; some good bits
EXTERIORS	Satisfactory, including brand-new logging camp
INTERIORS	Conventional, but adequate
DETAIL	Exaggerated
TIME	Fifty-six minutes (5 parts)

HERE is a meller made pretty much after the fashion of the House-that-Jack-built, which is to say, a lot of more or less related incidents strung together with a beginning and an end. The main thing that holds the story together is the part played by William Farnum in his huskiest manner. The character he straddles is that of Barney Kemper, a worthy farmer lad who denies himself development of his amazing talent for surgery in order to put his younger brother, Dick, through college. He keeps it consistent by hammering home the idea of tremendous strength, held in check by greater patience, and so makes himself the easiest remembered figure of the lot.

Barney's mind works a bit too slowly for him to see his good luck, as a natural born doctor, in having a pretty girl, Margaret, with an inherited talent for nursing, in love with him. He prefers the affection of Iola Hammond, a summer boarder. So, in a way, it serves him right when he visits the city later to make sure of his brother's debts before selling the old homestead to pay them, to find Iola in his brother's arms. The upshot of this is that Barney denounces them and says he never wants to see them again.

Dick is sorely troubled at this, for he thinks the world of his brother, after all, so he goes for advice to Mar-

Resolve

that during 1918 every time you think of a live-wire exhibitor friend that you'll tell him what WID'S means to you. Not only in interest, but in dollars and cents.

that you won't forget to do this.

that you will become a life member of WID'S boosters.

that's resolution enough.

WID'S

garet. She tells him to work hard and be patient, as she has been, and maybe the Lord will provide.

Two years later Dick graduates as a parson and is assigned to chasten his soul by cleaning up a lumber camp in the west. Margaret says she will go along because they need a hospital. The girl certainly is gifted with foresight, because subsequent developments prove that they need one very badly.

They don't know it immediately, but this camp is the very hangout of Barney, who, as a gruff frontier doctor, is trying to forget his past. Barney is called upon presently, both as doctor and brother, when Dick is compromised by the owner of the local honkey-tonk and shot to prevent him from delivering next Sunday's sermon. Barney cinches matters by delivering the sermon himself, and, when he finds his brother dead, by killing the dirty gambler who did it, not to speak of his realization that he has been an awful boob in passing up Margaret for so long.

Doubtless by this time you have suspected that this is all ten, twenty and thirty melodramas; and if you don't believe it now, you will when you see the subtitles, for they have all the earmarks of having been manufactured in the lighthouse by the sea. The plot is as full of holes as the collender that hangs under the sink; but as long as your audience hits just the high spots of the story, they'll get innocent amusement out of it, and won't stop to ask what happened to the next camp where the men are ""dying like flies" with the fever; or how Dick continued at college for two years when his brother cut off his allowance, or why on earth Margaret accompanied Dick to the lumber camp with the curious idea of starting a hospital when she loves Barney, or even why these three persons, separated by so many things, should have chanced all to strike the one place among several hundred boom towns, at the same time.

But William Farnum is healthy, and so is melodrama—even if it is carelessly done now and then.

Wm. Courtleigh, Jr., who plays brother Dick, comes second with the acting honors. The two girls are not particularly good, but they both may use the alibi that their parts didn't give them a chance. Truth to tell, the parts didn't. But there were some good bits among the hoi polloi, a fair specimen being an old man chewing tobacco without any teeth in a closeup in the frontier church.

The Box Office Angle.

"The Heart of a Lion" is primarily a man's play. The feminine interest in it is not strong; and the masculine angle is worked out in a way that seems to show brotherly love more powerful than sex. This fact may be absolutely true, but it will not make a hit with women theatregoers, although they'll stand for it as part of the week's photoplay grist. The biggest appeal will be made to cheap audiences. As to the advertising angle, the biggest thing to be plugged is the name of William Farnum. People who wouldn't come to see the play will come to see him.

PUNCH SLOW STARTING AND IN WRONG PLACE, BUT IT GOT THERE

Tom Moore in

BROWN OF HARVARD

Essanay—Perfection

DIRECTOR.....Harry Beaumont
AUTHORS.....Rida Johnson Young and G. P. Coleman
SCENARIO BY.....Harry Beaumont
AS A WHOLE.....Fair plot clumsily handled to make average feature; two reels getting started
STORY.....Gambler tries to queer boat-race by having stroke-oarsman chase hero as supposed seducer of sister; incidents good, but badly tied together
DIRECTION.....Ordinary; stagey handling of mobs
PHOTOGRAPHY....Average; cheap printing kills quality
LIGHTINGS.....Ordinary; no effects
CAMERA WORK.....Acceptable
STAR.....Personality gets over
SUPPORT....Wronged girl emotes well; cardboard acting of others doubtless due to uneven story
EXTERIORS.....Satisfactory; not exceptional
INTERIORS.....Acceptable, but cheap
DETAIL.....Conventional
TIME.....Seventy-five minutes (6 parts)

IN this production you will find a meller that several years back did a big business as a legitimate attraction, and that has played in almost every stock house from Portland to Portland with success. The only difference is that the stage version was knit together so that it didn't creak, whereas this version is full of noises.

That is proved by the fact that it is so darned hard to tell the story after having seen the film. The director put everything in his continuity, only he got a little mixed in the order. The result is that you don't walk straight through the plot to the finish, but keep doubling back on your tracks trying to make connections.

You find a certain amount of interest after two reels of clumsy introduction of the members of the cast, by seeing the college-boy hero getting into hot water with his girl because the young woman secretly married to her brother, by chance is found in his rooms at embarrassing moments. You think that this must be the story until it develops that everybody's happiness depends on the outcome of the Yale-Harvard boat-race, a gambler going to determine the betting odds by getting the Harvard stroke-oarsman to desert at the last minute. The oarsman is a brother of the secret wife and doesn't know she is married; so when the gambler tells him she expects a baby, he hotfoots it after Brown, the hero, thinking, because she has been found in Brown's rooms, that he must have seduced her.

In other words, you get pretty well tangled up in a family tree because a man who wasn't a genealogical expert gave you the wrong start.

Therefore, you lead up to a great scene that looks like the climax, with the finish soon to follow. In this scene, Brown entertaining his sweetheart, her mother and a number of rah-rah boys, sees his girl's brother coming up drunk. To keep the girl and her mother from learning the boy's condition, he shoos them into an adjoining room and then hides the lad in a box-couch. The drunk's wife then appears and is caught, through circumstantial evidence, in Brown's arms by Brown's sweetheart and her mother. This is really the biggest scene in the play. The thrill you ought to get when the race comes on is tame by comparison.

If you are looking for a picture with a lot of suspense in it, forget this. Better handled it might have been a big box office success; but as it stands it is just an ordinary feature that will entertain the patrons you already have by some amusing incidents, but that won't bring out a new crowd or stir up drawing population in the outlying districts.

Tom Moore has a pleasing personality that goes well with women. He is good-natured about everything he does, so one may forgive him now and then if he's careless and awkward with his arms and legs.

There's a little girl whose name I don't know, who does some mighty good work in the sob role of Marian Thorne, the secret wife. Her characterization is consistent and well-rounded. Hazel Daly, in the part of Brown's sweetheart, gives an outline impression; but that is probably all she can do with a colorless engagement. She tries hard, and at times is strikingly pretty. Warner Richmond did some acceptable work as a wholly unnecessary room-mate of Brown, while others worthy of mention are Kempton Greene, as the cad husband, and Sidney Ainsworth, as the gambler.

The Box Office Angle.

Tom Moore, although one of the three Moores known to movie fans as Tom, Owen and Matt, has been playing too long in support of female stars to count just yet as a star in his own right. In short, while he has excellent possibilities, and has done some wonderful things in the past, his name alone won't make a manager put out his S. R. O. sign for the time being.

Considerable value should be got out of the fact that this is the screen version of a one-time Broadway success of the speaking stage. You may also attract some persons who have seen the play in stock season after season. Play up the title for all it is worth.

TABULATED PERCENTAGE REPORTS FROM EXHIBITORS

THE BATTING AVERAGES

These are the averages of the companies having 200 reports or more.

Reports		% P. P.	% B. O.	Repeat
767	FOX	73.1	70.8	106
233	MUTUAL	72.0	71.1	17
674	METRO	70.8	67.0	57
2349	TRIANGLE	70.6	65.2	434
544	VITAGRAPH	68.1	66.2	76
2628	PARAMOUNT	68.4	62.3	397
595	WORLD	67.7	61.5	49
298	BLUEBIRD	62.7	63.5	23

THE NUMBER BEFORE THE NAME OF THE FEATURE INDICATES THE NUMBER OF REPORTS RECEIVED AND TABULATED ON THAT FILM.

THE FIRST COLUMN CARRIES THE PERCENTAGE OF PLEASED PATRONS.

THE SECOND COLUMN SHOWS THE BOX OFFICE PERCENTAGE.

FIGURES IN THE THIRD COLUMN INDICATE THAT MANY REPORTED THE FILM WORTH A RETURN DATE.

All reports in this percentage tabulation have been marked on this scale:

EXCEPTIONAL	100%
EXCELLENT	80%
GOOD	60%
FAIR	40%
POOR	20%
BAD	0%

PARAMOUNT

Reports		% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
8	The Virginian	81	73	2
11	Wildflower	89	82	6
5	Behind the Screens	81	78
6	A Man from Mexico	87	72	2
5	The Bargain	80	74	3
7	The Crucible	92	84	3
5	The Sign of the Cross	79	85
9	Cinderella	84	91	4
5	Girl of the Golden West	79	77	2
5	The Goose Girl	95	95	4
6	David Harum	82	78	1
7	Captain Courtesy	74	59	1
5	The Woman	86	59	1
5	House of Lost Court	82	54	2
5	Stolen Goods	78	75
6	Pretty Sister Jose	84	82	2
5	Jim the Penman	64	65
7	Dawn of To-morrow	83	88	1
5	Arab	89	56	2
5	Wild Olive	82	69
6	Chimmy Fadden	91	75	1
6	Kindling	81	82
5	Kilmeny	75	73
10	Seven Sisters	84	83	1
11	Rags	91	93	5
6	The Secret Orchid	79	74
5	Nearly a Lady	65	75
6	The Marriage of Kitty	76	64
8	Helene of the North	87	81	2
6	Fatal Card	65	59
6	The Girl of Yesterday	89	88	3
7	White Pearl	71	75
7	Chorus Lady	73	63
6	The Secret Sin	69	74	1
7	Yankee Girl	52	57
6	Masqueraders	56	56
12	Carmen	82	83	4
14	Still Waters	93	90	7
9	Madame Butterfly	82	86	3
7	Mummy and Humming Bird	64	56
7	Bella Donna	92	77	4
8	Armstrong's Wife	79	65
5	Chimmie Fadden Out West	88	76	2
8	A Gentleman from Indiana	86	78
10	Prince and the Pauper	92	87	5
10	Mr. Grex from Monte Carlo	84	69	1
9	Jane	75	51
9	The Unknown	76	67	1
18	The Cheat	94	80	12
9	The Reform Candidate	80	54	1
9	The Immigrant	73	62
10	The Old Homestead	88	84	7
8	Lydia Gilmore	82	61	2
10	Temptation	82	77	2
10	The Foundling	78	76	3
6	Tongues of Men	77	53	1
8	Mice and Men	84	80	5
7	The Golden Chance	77	61	2
5	Ragamuffins	77	53
5	Call of the Cumberlands	79	64
8	The Spider	87	64	1
10	Puddin' Head Wilson	81	62	4
9	Tennessee's Pardner	65	58
8	Madame Le President	24	46
9	Nearly a King	52	49	1
13	Trail of the Lonesome Pine	75	77	3
8	Fell In Love With His Wife	63	51	1
8	Blacklist	62	52	1
10	Out of the Drifts	89	86	4
8	Diplomacy	53	56	1
14	Poor Little Peppina	88	84	8
16	To Have and To Hold	74	69	4
12	Ben Blair	72	63
10	For the Defense	68	62	1
7	The Code of Marcia Grey	64	59	2
9	The Lost Bridegroom	69	60	2
8	The Saleslady	72	62	1
15	Audrey	73	70	3
9	The Sowers	64	59
11	The Heart of Paula	71	54	1
12	The Race	69	59
8	The Eternal Grind	70	58	3
10	The Love Mask	59	54	2
10	Molly Make Believe	87	82	6
7	The Red Widow	62	55	2
12	The Heart of Nora Flynn	72	60	4
8	A Moment Before	52	64	1
12	David Garrick	68	46	2
9	The Innocent Lie	56	51
16	Marie Rosa	81	80	4
12	Alien Souls	69	67	1
13	The Feud Girl	60	56
16	Pasquale	78	53	3
16	Sweet Kitty Bellairs	72	62	2
20	Saints and Sinners	51	49
17	Thousand-Dollar Husband	69	62	4
22	A Gutter Magdalene	62	54	1
20	Evil Thereof	44	44
15	The Making of Maddalena	63	57	3
23	Silks and Satins	85	88	16
14	Destiny's Toy	60	51
19	The Clown	79	54	3
20	Susie Snowflakes	69	59	2
16	The World's Great Enare	73	78	4
19	The American Beauty	61	61	3
22	The Dupe	64	64	1
22	The Smugglers	53	50	1
26	The Selfish Woman	72	68	4
29	Davy Crockett	67	62
28	The Dream Girl	69	64	2
28	Under Cover	79	75	5
27	International Marriage	55	51	1
27	Common Ground	64	64	1
35	Hulda from Holland	95	94	23
30	House of Golden Windows	73	64	3
24	A Woman in the Case	72	72	3
25	Little Lady Eileen	87	89	10
23	The Stronger Love	53	52
21	Public Opinion	82	72	4
21	Rolling Stones	67	60	2
21	The Honorable Friend	65	62	1
20	Victory of Conscience	60	59	3
21	Each Pearl a Tear	74	69	2
22	The Parson of Paramint	79	70	7
15	The Big Sister	50	57
14	The Reward of Patience	65	55
15	The House of Lies	73	65	1
14	The Daughter of McGregor	56	45
18	Ashes of Embers	85	83	7
16	The Quest of Life	59	61
14	Anton, the Terrible	46	45
17	The Lash	57	55
18	The Storm	75	65	1
19	The Intrigue	81	61	2
16	Her Father's Son	74	68	2
14	Witchcraft	55	55

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
14 The Kiss	74	68	2
16 The Rainbow Princess	82	74	3
15 Seventeen	85	74	2
14 Miss George Washington	95	95	11
15 The Heir to the Hoorah	83	69	5
16 The Soul of Kura San	80	73	1
12 A Son of Erin	79	73	2
10 Unprotected	53	55	1
11 The Years of the Locust	49	50
12 The Plow Girl	77	63
9 The Yellow Pawn	66	57	1
9 Nanette of the Wilds	50	57	2
7 Martyrdom of Philip Strong	53	55	1
10 The Coney Island Princess	62	63	1
10 The Road to Love	72	59	1
14 Oliver Twist	85	69	6
13 The Victoria Cross	44	54	1
18 The Traveling Salesman	76	59	3
20 The Right Direction	76	61	2
21 Snow White	95	95	13
16 Redeeming Love	63	60	1
21 The Slave Market	74	70	5
13 The Evil Eye	30	44	1
19 Great Expectations	74	55	1
17 Happiness of Three Women	73	58	1
14 Betty to the Rescue	46	48
16 A Girl Like That	55	51
16 Lost and Won	59	50
20 The Golden Fetter	48	55
19 His Sweetheart	83	57	2
19 The Wax Model	67	56
19 Each To His Kind	62	60
16 Her Own People	72	52
12 The Black Wolf	35	38
17 The American Consul	53	50	1
21 The Fortunes of Fifi	67	77	2
21 On Record	61	55	2
18 Winning of Sally Temple	40	47
19 Those Without Sin	52	51	1
16 Castles For Two	52	49	1
13 Out of the Wreck	60	54
13 Sapho	74	83	3
11 Prison Without Walls	54	54
12 The Dummy	71	54
14 The Spirit of Romance	64	53
8 As Men Love	73	53
11 The Bottle Imp	75	64	1
8 The Bond Between	49	39
9 A School For Husbands	49	45	1
9 The Lonesome Chap	49	44
9 Sleeping Fires	56	63	1
8 The Tides of Barnegat	49	43
9 The Cost of Hatred	42	38
11 The Valentine Girl	71	72
7 Unconquered	26	29
7 The Girl at Home	49	44
10 Heart's Desire	31	39
9 Sacrifice	29	43
9 The Primrose Ring	48	51
8 The Silent Partner	33	36
6 Marcellina Millions	41	30
8 Her Better Self	58	62
9 The Undying Flame	47	53
8 Freckles	69	61
6 The World Apart	46	44
5 The Roadside Impressario	46	32
7 The Heir of the Ages	34	36
6 At First Sight	55	44
8 The Highway of Hope	38	34
6 Love That Lives	70	83
5 Forbidden Paths	34	37
5 What Money Can't Buy	39	54
8 The Amazons	97	91	1
8 TheMysterious Miss Terry	84	79
6 The Law of the Land	43	49
6 The Varmint	77	65
6 Hashimura Togo	75	48
7 The Hostage	70	59
5 Exile	34	39
5 Doubled Crossed	73	76
7 Bab's Diary	94	92
5 The Call of the East	61	60

TRIANGLE

11 The Iron Strain	80	67	2
10 The Lamb	85	78	3
10 Old Heidelberg	73	64	1
12 The Coward	83	66	1
9 Martyrs of the Alamo	67	57	2
15 The Disciple	85	76	2
8 Matrimony	81	76	2
6 Sable Lorcha	59	57
7 The Golden Claw	57	69
11 Double Trouble	59	67	2
8 Alaho Oe	60	65	1
6 The Lilly and the Rose	63	66
9 Jordan Is a Hard Road	56	54
6 Winged Idol	53	52
12 The Sdge of the Abyss	65	61
6 Cross Currents	49	49
12 Between Men	73	67	1
15 Let Katy Do It	87	63	6
6 The Corner	52	50
6 The Missing Link	52	46	1
10 The Wood Nymph	51	51	1
8 The Conquerer	74	78
10 The Price of Power	53	53
11 The Green Swamp	77	76	1
13 Acquitted	66	55
10 D'Artagnan	59	54
18 His Picture in the Papers	90	75	5
13 Honor's Altar	77	67	2
14 Betty of Greystone	77	65	2
23 Peggy	94	91	15
7 Don Quixote	57	56
9 The Last Act	79	78	1
11 Daphne and the Pirate	71	57	1
18 Hell's Hinges	93	89	11
17 The Flying Torpedo	88	80	8
14 Bullets and Brown Eyes	85	75	3
14 Martha's Vindication	79	72	2
14 Moral Fabric	75	62	1
15 Hoodoo Ann	68	61	1
15 The Raiders	79	70
14 The Habit of Happiness	92	85	5
8 Waifs	70	59	1
8 Little Meena's Romance	64	60	1
17 The Aryan	59	80	6
10 Sold for Marriage	71	72	1
17 Stepping Stones	85	75	2
10 Sunshine Dad	36	46
9 Civilization's Child	68	64	1
14 Children In the House	80	66	2
11 The Beggar of Cawnpore	61	49
19 The Good-Bad Man	90	92	4
12 The No-Good Guy	74	60	3
17 Susan Rocks the Boat	69	63
20 Not My Sister	79	77	4
18 Child of Paris Streets	76	64
22 The Primal Lure	82	76	7
8 Mr. Goode, the Samaritan	53	53
20 The Market of Vain Desire	79	64	5
22 Going Straight	77	78	3
29 The Bugle Call	93	79	8
26 Reggie Mixes In	93	80	11
16 The Sorrows of Love	66	69	1
21 An Innocent Magdalene	71	71	2
18 The Dividend	70	68	1
21 The Wild Girl of Sierras	45	53	4
25 An Apostle of Vengeance	88	83	4
18 Casey at the Bat	44	48
28 The Phantom	83	72	7
20 Flirting With Fate	87	86	11
31 The Deserter	85	69	11
26 The Little School Ma'am	74	67	2
26 The Eye of the Night	74	58	5
19 Stranded	60	50
27 The Captive God	65	70	2
23 The Halfbreed	72	74	2
22 The Payment	81	70	3
18 The Marriage of Molly O	48	47
24 Honor Thy Name	87	73	4
22 The Devil's Needle	64	64	1
31 Shell "43"	86	69	6
26 Hell-to-Pay Austin	83	66	6
21 Lieutenant Danny, U. S. A.	79	69
16 Pillars of Society	59	56	1
23 Home	91	80	9
16 Gretchen the Greenhorn	64	62	2
21 The Patriot	79	80	6
24 The Social Secretary	89	75	8
17 The Thoroughbred	82	72	1
12 The Little Liar	70	58
19 The Wolm Woman	86	89	6
16 The Dawnmaker	58	78	3
20 Diane of the Follies	71	72	2
27 Manhattan Madness	94	92	12
22 Plain Jane	88	75	5
20 Old Folks at Home	81	64	2
17 The Jungle Child	60	61	1
15 The Rummy	67	54	1
21 The Return of Draw Egan	88	86	7
20 The Vagabond Prince	75	70	3
19 Somewhere in France	76	69	1
18 A Corner in Colleens	88	80	7
12 A Sister of Six	69	64	2
21 Fifty-Fifty	89	83	6
12 Atta Boy's Last Race	54	55
16 American Aristocracy	92	89	9
10 The Microscope Mystery	50	43
14 Honorable Algy	76	65	3
15 Jim Grimsby's Boy	67	63	3
15 The Devil's Double	91	91	7
13 The Children Pay	72	64	3
14 Children of the Feud	55	52	1
8 The Criminal	49	45
12 A Gamble In Souls	69	67	3
15 The Wharf Rat	54	55
21 The Matrimaniac	92	93	10
20 The Sin Ye Do	92	85	10
13 Heiress of Coffee Dan's	60	53	2
13 Three of Many	62	53
9 House Built Upon Sand	75	67	3
9 Nina, the Flower Girl	52	53
11 The Female of the Species	72	74	2
16 Truthful Tulliver	97	93	9
12 The Weaker Sex	88	83	4
7 The Little Yank	40	52	1
11 The Bride of Hate	78	74	5
12 The Iced Bullet	60	55
16 The Americano	98	97	12
11 Chicken Casey	75	59	1
13 Jim Bludso	65	40	1
14 The Crab	83	70	5
10 Girl of the Timber Claims	41	39
16 The Gun-Fighter	76	85	10
13 The Bad Boy	71	54	2
11 The Princess of the Dark	39	41
6 Stage Struck	41	38
12 Last of the Ingrams	45	42
9 Blood Will Tell	64	61
5 A Love Sublime	47	40
8 The Little Brother	51	37	2
14 Back of the Man	90	81	5
10 Betsy's Burglar	59	54
14 The Square-Deal Man	96	95	7
11 The Dark Road	60	49	1
5 A Daughter of the Poor	57	55
9 A Woman's Awakening	61	52
9 Her Father's Keeper	54	48
9 Her Official Fathers	56	48
9 Old-Fashioned Young Man	48	47
10 Sweetheart of the Doomed	74	68	4
10 Paddy O'Hara	62	52	1
11 The Desert Man	91	82	4
9 Cheerful Givers	47	41
10 The Pinch Hitter	96	71	2
5 Hands Up	35	35
9 The Snarl	58	61
6 Happiness	59	66
6 Wild Winship's Widow	58	58
6 Soul's Triumphant	30	28
8 The Millionaire Vagrant	78	66
10 Wolf Lowry	91	91	1
7 The Girl Glory	71	53
7 Bawbs of Blue Ridge	38	51
8 A Hater of Men	79	63
6 American That's All	37	37
7 Love or Justice	75	69
6 Paws of the Bear	55	48
9 The Clod Hopper	96	84	1
7 The Flame of the Yukon	96	92	1
5 The Strange Transgressor	80	73
5 The Mother Instinct	48	44
7 Sudden Jim	90	86
6 The Sawdust Ring	87	60
6 Borrowed Plumage	48	53
6 In Slumberland	74	31

WORLD

7 Trilby	81	68	1
7 Camille	86	79	3
5 The Yellow Passport	82	80	2
5 Then I'll Come Back To You	76	66	1
7 The Feast of Life	61	73
7 Her Maternal Right	58	74
6 Sudden Riches	76	71
6 Tangled Fates	57	63
5 His Brother's Wife	83	74	2
10 Perils of Divorce	61	63
13 La vie de Boheme	47	50
6 The Crucial Test	53	55
7 The Weakness of Man	61	68
12 Sally In Our Alley	68	63
14 Paying the Price	70	70	1

Reports	% P.P.	% B.O.	Repeat
12 Miss Petticoats	59	61
14 Woman's Way	75	74	4
13 The Summer Girl	56	57
12 Rail Rider	68	60
10 Husband and Wife	75	63	2
8 Almighty Dollar	76	72	1
13 The Velvet Paw	74	69	1
8 Friday, the Thirteenth	72	70
11 Dark Silence	77	79	2
7 The Gilded Cage	75	70
6 Hidden Scar	77	67
6 The Scarlet Oath	60	62
7 Man Who Stood Still	71	63
8 The Heart of a Hero	59	49
15 Bought and Paid For	91	91	10
10 The Madness of Helen	57	54
6 Men She Married	58	55
11 All Man	59	63	2
7 Broken Chains	50	43
12 The Rise of Susan	79	83	6
6 The World Against Him	52	43
10 Woman Alone	67	65	1
7 On Dangerous Ground	65	71
7 The Man Who Forgot	65	71	1
5 The Bondage of Fear	65	63
8 Tillie Wakes Up	79	78	1
8 The Hungry Heart	87	83	2
9 The Square Deal	66	69
3 A Girl's Folly	65	75
5 The Red Woman	49	48
5 The Family Honor	66	61
8 The Dancer's Peril	77	71	1
5 The Social Leper	65	65
5 The Page Mystery	55	57

METRO

6 Soul of a Woman	93	80	1
5 The Yellow Streak	85	64
5 Rosemary for Remembrance	68	69
5 What'll People Say?	80	84
9 The Lure of Heart's Desire	55	58
5 Her Debt of Honor	49	50
6 A Man and His Soul	83	83	2
5 A Corner In Cotton	57	56
5 The Price of Malice	66	65
6 The Soul Market	83	75	2
6 Her Great Price	80	68	1
8 The Wall Between	78	82	1
6 The Kiss of Hate	62	74
6 Half Million Bribe	69	49
8 Playing With Fire	78	75
11 The Come-Back	75	74	1
8 Snow Birds	80	77
8 A Million a Minute	72	84	1
6 His Great Triumph	49	43
10 The Scarlet Woman	73	84	1
10 Dorian's Divorce	74	68
8 Masked Rider	69	68
6 Flower of No Man's Land	58	75
8 The Purple Lady	82	63
10 The Eternal Question	76	83	1
11 The Quitter	69	73
15 The River of Romance	87	76	7
9 A Child of Destiny	53	56
13 The Devil at His Elbow	64	61	1
14 God's Half Acre	71	62	1
14 The Weakness and Strength	68	54
11 The Pretender	80	72	1
7 The Upheaval	57	63
10 The Light of Happiness	67	66	1
10 Mister 44	88	93	4
8 The Wheel of the Law	77	66	1
10 The Dawn of Love	66	60
8 The Iron Woman	44	57
5 Life's Shadows	66	60
13 In the Diplomatic Service	69	83	4
9 The Brand of Cowardice	65	54
8 The Gates of Eden	68	54
11 Extravagance	69	82	3
10 The Wager	78	64
8 The Sunbeam	53	51
11 Big Tremaine	74	82	5
9 The Black Butterfly	70	80	4
8 The Stolen Triumph	56	48
8 Awakening of Helena Ritchie	60	61
11 Pigin Island	68	74	3
12 Vanity	61	53
12 The White Raven	85	81	4
9 A Wife by Proxy	46	41
9 Threads of Fate	41	34
12 Bridges Burned	47	62
9 The End of the Tour	45	44
10 One of Many	66	61	1
8 The Secret of Eve	37	66	1
14 The Promise	82	84	3
6 The Barricade	58	57
7 The Hidden Children	43	62
9 The Mortal Sin	53	58
8 The Waiting Soul	49	61	1
6 The Father's Son	67	62
5 The Power of Decision	51	53
8 A Magdalene of the Hills	53	51
7 God's Law and Man's	53	53
6 Sowers and Reapers	57	50
6 The Duchess of Doubt	67	64
6 The Haunted Pajamas	83	74
5 The Greatest Power	42	52
5 Aladdin's Other Lamp	51	50
7 The Slacker	98	94	2
5 The Soul of Magdalene	44	48

FOX

5 A Fool There Was	84	97	2
5 The Gilded Fool	68	70
5 Should a Mother Tell?	85	75
9 Two Orphans	85	87	4
7 Regeneration	77	72	4
6 The Wonderful Adventure	75	76
5 Sin	62	82
6 The Soul of Broadway	85	80	2
9 Broken Law	82	65	1
8 Galley Slave	76	75	1
6 Destruction	76	90	1
6 Serpent	92	93	1
5 Ruling Passion	53	59
5 Merely Mary Ann	52	45
7 Fools Revenge	45	49
10 Fighting Blood	74	70
10 Gold and the Woman	65	86	1
11 The Bondman	76	64	1
5 A Wife's Sacrifice	55	56
12 Blue Blood and Red	84	70	1
6 Slander	80	70
10 A Modern Thelma	59	49	1
9 Man of Sorrow	63	64	1
9 Blazing Love	70	68
11 The Eternal Sapho	84	87	4
13 Sins of Men	75	60	1
15 The Battle of Hearts	63	59
10 The Spider and the Fly	67	72	1
12 Hypocrisy	73	65
10 A Woman's Honor	69	71
22 East Lynne	86	85	9
15 Ambition	71	67
18 Man From Bitter Roots	82	81	2
21 Caprice of the Mountains	69	63	1
16 A Tortured Heart	68	66
22 The Beast	86	68	6
27 Under Two Flags	95	92	17
20 The End of the Trail	66	76
19 Sporting Blood	62	57	1
19 Little Miss Happiness	75	68	3
21 Dare Devil Kate	74	76	1
15 The Unwelcome Mother	63	66
19 Her Double Life	84	84	6
10 Where Love Leads	69	63	1
14 The Fires of Conscience	65	71	1
12 The Straight Way	67	72
12 The Ragged Princess	77	70	1
15 The War Bride's Secret	76	71	3
12 Romeo and Juliet	86	86	5
5 Love and Hate	66	60
7 The Mischief Maker	69	69	2
7 Jealousy	63	81
8 The Mediator	76	69	1
5 Sins of the Parents	86	72	3
6 The Battle of Life	67	62
8 The Vixen	62	71
6 The Love Thief	82	80	1
5 The Island of Desire	74	67	1
6 The Price of Silence	82	77	1
10 The Darling of Paris	66	73
5 One Touch of Sin	65	73
7 The New York Peacock	83	79
6 The Tiger Woman	73	83	2
6 Sister Against Sister	82	58	1
6 A Tale of Two Cities	93	83	4
5 The Blue Streak	58	60

MUTUAL

5 Whispering Smith	64	66
6 Soul Mates	69	63
6 Doorsteps	61	62	6
7 Youth's Endearing Charms	77	71	1
7 Judith of the Cumberlands	68	68
10 The Pearl of Paradise	70	74
8 Dulcie's Adventure	87	83	2
10 Faith	76	71
6 Miss Jackie of the Navy	87	82	1
5 A Dream or Two Ago	81	87
8 The Innocence of Lizette	85	84
6 The Gentle Intruder	77	78

PATHE

6 Excuse Me!	90	73	2
6 Madame X	71	91	3
6 New York	80	74	1
6 Woman's Law	68	65
10 Big Jim Garrity	69	55	1
6 Girl with the Green Eyes	65	72
7 Shadow of Her Past	34	81
3 Little Mary Sunshine	90	78	1
7 The Shine Girl	73	64
8 Shadows and Sunshine	63	78	3
7 Joy and the Dragon	78	71	1
5 Her New York	82	62	2
6 Kick In	78	71	1

BLUEBIRD

8 Undine	79	86	3
5 Crippled Hand	58	69	1
5 Eye of God	64	80	1
9 Three Godfathers	68	74	1
15 Shoes	71	77	3
11 Broken Fetters	64	56	1
3 The Love Girl	63	64	1
6 The Grasp of Greed	71	76	1
8 The Silent Battle	78	84
8 Secret of the Swamp	5	56	2
7 Love's Lariat	65	64	1
7 Bettina Loved a Soldier	65	72
10 Wanted—A Home	74	75
7 Little Eve Edgarton	58	61	1
8 The Girl of Lost Lake	65	60
6 The Unattainable	51	48
13 Saving a Family Name	81	68	1
9 Behind the Lines	62	65
6 A Stranger from Somewhere	69	67
5 The Price of Silence	87	85
6 The Honor of Mary Blake	58	58
5 Black Orchids	72	80	1
5 The Bugler of Algiers	80	69	1
6 Mutiny	60	57
9 Mysterious Mrs. M	78	60	1
8 Polly Red Head	61	68
5 Hell Morgan's Girl	90	88	1

RED FEATHER

5 Fighting for Love	69	65

GREATER VITAGRAPH

14 Battle Cry of Peace	96	83	5
7 The Juggernaut	73	73	2
9 The Island of Regeneration	84	83	5
5 Dust of Egypt	67	6	2
8 The Great Divide	78	74	2
6 Green Stockings	88	88	2
5 Gods of Fate	62	62
9 The Night Out	81	75	1
5 Kennedy Square	85	68	1
5 Hunted Woman	74	54	1
5 Dollars and the Woman	75	56	1
5 Two-Edged Sword	76	53
11 God's Country and Woman	81	86	4
9 Salvation Joan	75	60
9 The Law Decides	80	70	4
10 The Ne'er Do Well	91	93	7
5 The Ordeal of Elizabeth	61	59
10 The Suspect	80	76	2
7 The Destroyers	68	57	1
9 The Shop Girl	78	79	1
7 Fathers of Men	71	67
12 The Tarantula	78	72	8
15 The Daring of Dianna	61	75
11 The Light at Dusk	85	72	4
8 The Alibi	69	69
18 The Combat	79	81	1
5 The Kid	60	57
5 His Wife's Good Name	64	76
13 Through the Wall	79	64	1
14 The Chattel	72	83	8
8 Prince in a Pawnshop	64	67	1
8 The Blue Envelope Mystery	55	59
11 The Last Man	82	81	1
6 The Devil's Prize	49	62
6 The Price of Fame	40	46

DIRECTORY OF DIRECTORS and

GEORGE D. BAKER
PRODUCING FEATURES
METRO

REGINALD BARKER
DIRECTING
PARALTA PLAYS
Paralta Studio, Los Angeles, Calif.

ALBERT CAPELLANI
PRODUCER

AL. E. CHRISTIE
DIRECTOR GENERAL
CHRISTIE COMEDIES

WILLIAM C. DOWLAN
PRODUCING METRO FEATURES
Current Release—"THE OUTSIDER"
With Emmy Wehlen.

J. GORDON EDWARDS
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
FOX FILM CORPORATION

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

GEORGE FITZMAURICE
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING
PATHE FEATURES

CHARLES GIBLYN
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
Constance Talmadge Film Corp.

JACK HARVEY
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE PRODUCER
Address Screen Club, 117 W. 45th, N. Y.

HOBART HENLEY
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING PATHE PLAYS

ALLEN J. HOLUBAR
M. P. D. A.
Producing Universal Features.

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCING FEATURES
GOLDWYN

LLOYD INGRAHAM
PRODUCER

REX INGRAM
FEATURE PRODUCER
UNIVERSAL FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE IRVING
M. P. D. A.
GENERAL PRODUCING DIRECTOR

JOSEPH KAUFMAN
M. P. D. A.
DIRECTOR
FAMOUS PLAYERS

R. H. KELLY
STUDIO MANAGER
Empire All-Star Corp. & Mutual Corp.
Glendale, L. I.

HARLEY KNOLES
M. P. D. A.
FEATURES DIRECTOR
WORLD FILM CORPORATION

FRANK KUGLER
DIRECTOR
Address Screen Club, 117 D. 45th, N. Y.

ROBERT LEONARD
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER
FEATURE FILMS

JOSEPH LEVERING
DIRECTOR

O. A. C. LUND

ASHLEY MILLER
M. P. D. A.
Director—Vitagraph Studios
Brooklyn

MARSHALL NEILAN
Directing for
LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JOHN W. NOBLE
FEATURE DIRECTOR
FROHMAN AMUSEMENT CORP.

WEDGWOOD NOWELL
TRIANGLE
Friars Club, N. Y. C.

HENRY OTTO
FEATURE DIRECTOR

STUART PATON
FEATURE DIRECTOR

PAUL SCARDON
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
VITAGRAPH

RICHARD STANTON
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

WM. DESMOND TAYLOR
DIRECTOR
Morosco and Pallas-Paramount.

TOM TERRISS
PRODUCER
VITAGRAPH

OTIS TURNER
DIRECTOR
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

PERRY N. VEKROFF
M. P. D. A.
FEATURE DIRECTOR
511 W. 143rd St. Audubon 1941.

JAMES VINCENT
M. P. D. A.
PRODUCER

LOIS WEBER
Lois Weber Productions

THE WHARTONS
FEATURE PRODUCERS
Ithaca New York.

BEN WILSON
DIRECTING AND STARRING
UNIVERSAL

CHESTER WITHEY
DIRECTOR

JAMES YOUNG
M. P. D. A.

WID'S IS READ NOT SKIMMED

AUTHORS

MONTE M. KATTERJOHN
Staff Author
PARALTA PLAYS

WID'S
THE PRODUCERS' BIBLE.

EVE UNSELL
Famous Players—Lasky Corp.

ANTHONY KELLY

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER
Adaptor of "THE WHIP" and
"THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN"
Adress—Broadway Central Hotel.

DIRECTORS
BANK ON WID'S.

CAMERAMEN

DAL CLAWSON
MOTION PHOTOGRAPHER
FOX

CHARLES KAUFMAN
CAMERAMAN
FOX PACIFIC COAST STUDIOS

ROY H. KLAFFKI
CINEMATOGRAPHER
UNIVERSAL FEATURES